Manning, James. b. at Elizabethtown, N.J., Oct. 22, 1738; d. at Providence, R.I., July 29, 1791. American Baptist clergyman, first president (1765–90) of Brown University at Providence.

Manning, Thomas. b. at Broome, Norfolk, England, Nov. 8, 1772; d. at Bath, England, May 2, 1840. English traveler and physician, friend of Charles Lamb. He was the first Englishman to enter (December, 1811) Lhasa, the "Forbidden City" and capital of Tibet. After traveling in India, China, Italy, and elsewhere, Manning returned to England in 1829. He figures in Lamb's Essays of Elia as "my friend M." from whom Lamb purports to have gotten the manuscript of the story contained in the Dissertation on Roast Pig.

Manning, William Thomas. b. at Northampton, England, May 12, 1866; d. at New York, Nov. 18, 1949. American Protestant Episcopal clergyman. He was rector of Christ Church at Nashville, Tenn. (1898–1903) and of Trinity Parish, New York (1908–21). He served (1921–46) as bishop of New York. Manning, often involved in controversy, as for example with Judge Ben Lindsey over companionate marriage, devoted his principal energies to bringing the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine nearer to completion.

Mannington (man'ing.tọn). City in N West Virginia, in Marion County, at the confluence of Pyles Creek and Buffalo Creek, in a petroleum and natural gas area: manufactures of glass, pottery, and manufacturing tools. 3,241 (1950).

Mannipur (män'i.pör). See Manipur.

Mannlicher (män'li.chėr), Ferdinand. b. at Mainz, Germany, 1848; d. 1904. Austrian engineer and inventor, noted for his many inventions in the field of small arms. He conducted experiments (1866 et seq.) which led to the production of a magazine rifle adopted (1885) by the Austrian army.

Mannucci (män.nöt'chē), Aldo. See Manutius, Aldus.

Mannus (man'us). Mythological ancestor of the ancient Germanic peoples. He is mentioned by Tacitus as being the father of three sons from whom the various Germanic tribes sprang.

Manny (man'i) or Mauny, Sir Walter de. [Title, Baron de Manny.] d. at London, Jan. 15, 1372. Soldier in the English service, founder of the Charterhouse, London. He was a native of Manny, near Valenciennes, in Hainaut (now in France), and a fellow-townsman of Froissart. He probably came to England with Queen Philippa in 1327, and was knighted in 1331. He was one of the ablest of the commanders of Edward III. In 1371 he was licensed to found a house of Carthusian monks to be called La Salutation Mère Dieu. This "Chartreuse" became the London Charterhouse.

Mannyng (man'ing), Robert. [Also, Robert of Brunne.] fl. in the latter part of the 13th and the beginning of the 14th century. English chronicler and poet. He was a native of Brunne (now Bourne), in Lincolnshire, and in 1288 joined the Gilbertine canons at Sempringham. He wrote Handlyng Sunne (1303), a translation of the Manuel des Pechiez of William of Wadington, who wrote in the time of Edward I; The Chronicle of England (finished in 1338); and Medytacyuns of the Soper of our Lorde Ihesus. His importance is principally literary, rather than historical, but the information about pre-Chaucerian England inherent in his stories and homilies is important, as is the author's use of the Midland dialect, which makes his work a milestone in the history of the development of modern English.

Mano (mä'nō). [Also, Manon (män'ọn).] Mande-speaking people of W Africa, inhabiting the interior of C Liberia. Culturally they resemble the Kpelle.

Manoa (mä.nō'ä). See El Dorado.

Manoa (mạ.nō'ạ). Unincorporated community in SE Pennsylvania, in Delaware County. Pop. ab. 5,000 (1950).

Manoah (mạ.nō'ạ). In the Bible, the father of Samson. Judges, xiii. 2, etc.

Manoel I (of Portugal) (mạ.nwel'). See Emanuel I (of Portugal).

Manoel II (of Portugal). [Also, Manuel.] b. at Lisbon, Portugal, Nov. 15, 1889; d. at Twickenham, England, July 2, 1932. King of Portugal from Feb. 1, 1908, when his father, Carlos I, and his elder brother were assassinated. He was deposed by the republican party in October, 1910, and spent the rest of his life in exile in England.

Man of Business, The. Comedy by George Colman the elder, produced in 1774.

Man of Destiny. Play by George Bernard Shaw, included in his Plays: Pleasant and Unpleasant (1898).

Man of Feeling, The. Novel by Henry Mackenzie, published in 1771.

Man of Law's Tale, The. One of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales. John Gower tells the same story in his Confessio Amantis. It was taken from the Anglo-Norman chronicle of Nicolas Trivet. The prologue contains a list of Chaucer's works.

Man of Mode, or Sir Fopling Flutter (fop'ling flut'ėr), The. Comedy (1676) by Sir George Etherege.

Man of Property, The. Novel by John Galsworthy, published in 1906, and later included in The Forsyte Saga (1922).

Man of the World, The. Novel by Henry Mackenzie, published in 1773.

Man of the World, The. Comedy by Charles Macklin, first played in 1781.

Manoilescue (mä"nō.ē.les'kō), Mihail. b. in Rumania, 1891—. Rumanian economist and political leader. He was minister of transport, industry, and commerce (1930–31), governor of the Rumanian National Bank (1931), and minister of foreign affairs (1940).

Manon (mȧ.nôṅ). Opera in five acts by Jules Massenet, with a libretto by Meilhac and Gille, first produced at Paris on Jan. 19, 1884. The story is based on the romance Manon Lescaut by the Abbé Prévost.

"Man on Horseback." See Boulanger, Georges Ernest Jean Marie.

Manon Lescaut (mȧ.nôñ les.kō). Romance written by the Abbé Prévost, published in 1733, appended to Memoirs of a Man of Quality.

Manon Lescaut. Opera in four acts by Puccini, with a libretto by Ricordi, Giacosa, Oliva, Praga, and Illica adapted from the novel by Abbé Prévost, first performed at Turin on Feb. 1, 1893.

Manosque (mȧ.nosk). Town in SE France, in the department of Basses-Alpes, near the Durance River, ab. 40 mi. NE of Marseilles. It is a town of medieval character, with old ramparts dating from the 14th century and various churches in Romanesque and Gothic style. It has a petroleum refinery. 6,734 (1946).

Manouvrier (mȧ.nō.vrē.ā), Léonce Pierre. b. at Guéret, France, June 20, 1850; d. at Paris, June 18, 1927. French anthropologist, notable for his studies on brain functions.

Man o' War. b. near Lexington, Ky., March 29, 1917; d. at Faraway Farm, near the same city, Nov. 1, 1947. American race horse, usually considered to have been the greatest in American racing history. The only defeat of his career occurred when, as a two-year-old, he finished second (to a horse appropriately named Upset) in the Sanford Memorial Stakes at Saratoga on Aug. 13, 1919. As a three-year-old he started, and won, 11 times. His time of two minutes, 14⅕ seconds, at Belmont Park on June 12, 1920, is the world record for one and three-eighths miles. Purses won by Man o' War totaled more than 249,000 dollars, but his earnings for Samuel D. Riddle, who bought him as a yearling for 5,000 dollars, were raised, by fees for his services at stud and by the sale of his foals, to something like a million dollars. He sired many noted and successful racers, the most famous of them being War Admiral.

Manresa (mȧn.rā'sȧ). City in NE Spain, in the province of Barcelona, on the Cardoner River ab. 30 mi. NW of Barcelona: manufacturing center, with textile and machinery industries and distilleries. Notable structures include ancient fortifications, a Roman bridge, a Jesuit convent, and the collegiate church, built in the 14th and 15th centuries. 36,381 (1940).

Manru (mȧn'rō). Opera in three acts by Paderewski with a libretto by Nossig, first performed at the Dresden court theater on May 29, 1901.

Mans (mȧñ), Le. See Le Mans.

Mansart or Mansard (mȧñ.sȧr), François. b. at Paris, Jan. 23, 1598; d. there, Sept. 23, 1666. French architect. He revived the use of "Mansard" roofs c1650; they had been employed about 100 years before by Lescot, but Mansart's name was now given to them. He built the churches of Sainte-Marie de Chaillot, the Minimes de la Place Royale, the Visitation de Sainte-Marie in the Rue Saint-Antoine, and others, and numerous chateaus; that known as the Château de Maisons-sur-Seine is the most famous.

Mansart, Jules Hardouin. b. at Paris, April 16,1645; d. at Versailles, France, May 11, 1708. French architect; nephew of François Mansart. He built the Château de Clagny for the residence of Madame de Montespan, and was so much of the courtier as to gain not only an enormous fortune but the notice of the king, who heaped honors upon him. He directed all the principal architectural works of Louis XIV, including the building of the palace of Versailles, the Maison de Saint-Cyr, the Grand Trianon, the dome of the Hôtel des Invalides (perhaps his greatest work), the Place Vendôme, and the Place des Victoires.

Man's Bewitched, or The Devil to Do About Her, The. Comedy by Susannah Centlivre, produced in 1709.

Mansel (man'sęl), Henry Longueville. b. at Cosgrove, Northamptonshire, England, Oct. 6, 1820; d. July 30, 1871. English metaphysician. He was a follower of Sir William Hamilton, and developed the latter's theory of "the conditioned" as limiting knowledge. He maintained the duality of consciousness, including the external world and the inner self. Among his works are Phrontisterion, or Oxford in the Nineteenth Century, an imitation of Aristophanes (1850), The Limits of Demonstrative Science Considered (1853), On the Philosophy of Kant (1856), the article on metaphysics in the eighth edition of the Encyclopædia Britannica (1857), Bampton Lectures (1858), and others.

Mansel or Maunsell (môn'sęl), John. d. at Florence, Italy, in January, 1265. English ecclesiastic and soldier, keeper of the seal and counselor of Henry III. In the struggle with the barons in 1262 he fled to France, and his holdings were taken from him.

Mansergh (man'sėr), Southcote. See Manners, Charles (1857–1935).

Mansfeld (mäns'felt). Town in E central Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony-Anhalt, Russian Zone, formerly in the province of Saxony, Prussia, ab. 38 mi. S of Magdeburg. An old copper-mining town, it was formerly the capital of the county of Mansfeld. Martin Luther lived here in his youth. 3,294 (1946).

Mansfeld, Count Ernst von. b. 1580; d. near Zadar, in Dalmatia, Nov. 29, 1626. German general; illegitimate son of Count Peter Ernst von Mansfeld (1517–1604). He was educated by his godfather Ernest, Archduke of Austria, and distinguished himself as a soldier in the Spanish and in the imperial service. In 1610 he embraced the Reformed faith, and entered the service of the Protestant Union. In 1618, when the head of the union, the elector palatine Frederick V, was elevated to the throne by the Protestant estates in Bohemia, he became commander in chief in that country. After the disastrous battle on the White Hill (1620), at which he was not present, he maintained a brilliant but unequal contest against the Imperialists in Germany. He was defeated by Wallenstein at Dessau, April 25, 1626.

Mansfeld, Count Peter Ernst von. b. July 10, 1517; d. May 22, 1604. German general. He served under the emperor Charles V and under his son Philip II of Spain, was for a time governor of Luxembourg, and in 1592 succeeded the Duke of Parma as governor general of the Netherlands, a post which he held two years.

Mansfield (manz'fēld). Town (in Connecticut the equivalent of township in many other states) in N Connecticut, in Tolland County. It includes the village of Storrs, seat of the University of Connecticut. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses the town's population more than doubled. 4,559 (1940), 10,008 (1950).

Mansfield. Municipal borough, market town, and manufacturing center in C England, in Nottinghamshire, ab. 15 mi. N of Nottingham, ab. 141 mi. N of London by rail. It is also an important coal-mining center, being situated on the Nottinghamshire coal field. Red molding sands (for the iron industry) are dug here. Manufactures include silk and cotton hosiery, cotton sewing thread, machinery, and boots and shoes. The textile industry here is declining. 51,343 (1951).

Mansfield. Town in C Louisiana, parish seat of De Soto Parish: shipping point for petroleum. In pre-Civil War days, it was a residential community for planters. The Confederates defeated Union troops in a battle fought nearby on April 8, 1864. Pop. 4,440 (1950).

Mansfield. Town (in Massachusetts the equivalent of township in many other states) and unincorporated village in SE Massachusetts, in Bristol County, ab. 25 mi. SW of Boston: manufactures tools, tacks, and chocolates. Pop. of town, 7,184 (1950), of village, 4,808 (1950).

Mansfield. City in N central Ohio, county seat of Richland County, ab. 64 mi. NE of Columbus: manufactures include electric refrigerators and ranges, and bathroom equipment. It was platted in 1808, and named for Jared Mansfield (1759–1830), U.S. surveyor in Ohio. It was the birthplace of Louis Bromfield. 43,564 (1950).

Mansfield. Borough in N Pennsylvania, in Tioga County, on the Tioga River ab. 80 mi. NW of Scranton: seat of a state teachers college. 2,657 (1950).

Mansfield, Earl of. Title held by various members of the Murray family.

Mansfield, Charles Blachford. b. at Royner, Hampshire, England, May 8, 1819; d. at London, Feb. 26, 1855. English chemist and traveler. He discovered the method of extracting benzol from coal tar, and thus laid the foundation for the aniline industry.

Mansfield, Katherine. [Maiden name, Beauchamp; married name, Murry.] b. at Wellington, New Zealand, Oct. 14, 1888; d. near Fontainebleau, France, Jan. 9, 1923. English short-story writer, also known as a letter-writer and diarist. Her first story was published when she was nine, and her first collection of stories in 1911 under the title In a German Pension. She compiled and edited (1915) with John Middleton Murry (whom she later married, 1918) and D. H. Lawrence a magazine called The Signature. During World War I she wrote stories of her childhood, which were published under the titles Prelude (1918) and Je ne parle pas français (1919). After 1918, when it was definitely established that she was suffering from tuberculosis, she lived chiefly in France, Italy, and Switzerland. Her delicate and penetrating short stories, which show the influence of Chekhov, rank among the finest written in the 20th century. Her reviews of current novels were published (1919–30) in the Athenaeum, under the title Novels and Novelists (1930). Bliss (1920) established her reputation. Other collections of stories include The Garden Party (1922), The Doves' Nest (1923), Something Childish (1924). She also wrote Poems (1923), Journal (1927), Letters (1928), Scrapbook (1940).

Mansfield, Mount. Summit of the Green Mountains, Vermont, ab. 20 mi. E of Burlington. It is the highest of the range. Elevation, 4,393 ft.

Mansfield, Richard. b. in Helgoland, May 24, 1854; d. at New London, Conn., Aug. 30, 1907. American actor. He obtained success both as tragedian and comedian, playing in Ibsen and Shaw in addition to the then more accepted plays. Among his principal plays were Beau Brummell and Cyrano de Bergerac.

Mansfield Park. Novel by Jane Austen, written in 1796 and published in 1814.

Mansfield Woodhouse (wůd'hous). Urban district in C England, in Nottinghamshire, a suburban area ab. 2 mi. N of Mansfield, 142 mi. N of London by rail. Roman remains have been discovered in the vicinity. 17,819 (1951).

Manship (man'ship), Paul. b. at St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 25, 1885—. American sculptor, who has executed numerous figure groups and reliefs for public buildings. He was president of the National Sculpture Society (1939–42) and of the American Academy of Arts and Letters (1948 et seq.). His principal works include Centaur and Nymph (Metropolitan Museum, New York), The Duck Girl (Fairmount Park, Philadelphia), and Prometheus (Rockefeller Center, New York).

Man's Hope. English title of Espoir, L'.

Manso (män'sō), Llanos de. [Also, Llanos de Manzo.] Part of the Chaco region of South America, in the extreme SE part of Bolivia and NW Paraguay, between the Pilcomayo and Paraguay rivers.

Manso de Velasco (män'sō dā bā.läs'kō), José Antonio. [Title, Count of Superunda.] b. in Vizcaya, Spain, c1695; d. after 1762. Spanish soldier and administrator. He was captain general of Chile (1735–45) and viceroy of Peru (July 12, 1745–Oct. 12, 1761). His administration in the latter country was longer than that of any other viceroy.

Manson (man'sọn), George. b. at Edinburgh, Dec. 3, 1850; d. in Devonshire, England, Feb. 27, 1876. Scottish painter in water colors.

Mansur (män.sör'), al-. [Also: Almansor or Almansur or Almanzor, meaning "the Victorious"; original name, Abu Jaffar Abdallah.] b. c712; d. near Mecca, Arabia, Oct. 18, 775. Second Abbasside caliph (754–775). His reign was marked by numerous revolts which were suppressed with great severity. He transferred the seat of government to Baghdad, which he built with great splendor. He was a patron of learning, and under his inspiration many Greek and Latin works, including those of Plato, Herodotus, Homer, and Xenophon, were translated into Arabic and other Oriental languages.

Mansur, al-. [Also: Almansor or Almansur or Almanzor, meaning "the Victorious."] b. near Algeciras, in Andalusia, Spain, 939; d. 1002. Regent of Córdoba under the sultan Hisham II. He reconquered from the Christians the territory south of the Douro and Ebro, extended his sway over a considerable portion of western Africa, and restored the waning power of the caliphate of Córdoba. He is said to have starved himself to death, broken-hearted over the defeat, after 50 actions, of Calatanazar by the kings of León and Navarre and the Count of Castile.

Mansura (män.sö'rạ). [Also: El Mansura, Mansurah.] City in NE Africa, in Lower Egypt, the capital of Daqahliya province, on the Damietta branch of the Nile ab. 70 mi. N of Cairo. It has cotton-processing, rice-milling, textile, and metal industries. Louis IX (Saint Louis) of France and his crusaders were defeated near here by the Egyptians in 1250. The city has a considerable European population, 102,519 (1947).

Mansy (män'si). See Voguls.

Mant (mant), Richard. b. at Southampton, England, Feb. 12, 1776; d. at Ballymoney, Ireland, Nov. 2, 1848. English author and ecclesiastic in Ireland.

Manta (män'tä). City in W Ecuador, in Manabí province, on the Pacific: export port for cacao, coffee, and nuts. 14,248 (est. 1944).

Mantalini (man.tạ.lē'nē). Husband of Madame Mantalini in Charles Dickens's Nicholas Nickleby: a feeble-minded, elegant person.

Mantaro (män.tä'rō). River in C Peru, flowing SE, NW, and NE to the Apurímac River. Length, ab. 280 mi.

Manteca (man.tē'kạ). City in C California, in San Joaquin County, in the San Joaquin Valley ab. 60 mi. E of San Francisco: vegetables and fruits are produced in the vicinity. 3,804 (1950).

Mantegazza (män.tä.gät'tsä), Paolo. b. at Monza, Italy, Oct. 31, 1831; d. at San Terenzo, Italy, Aug. 28, 1910. Italian physiologist and anthropologist. He was professor of pathology (1860 et seq.) at Pavia and professor of anthropology (1870 et seq.) at Florence, where he founded the Anthropological and Ethnographical Museum. Best known for his popular works on medicine, he also wrote on physiognomy, spontaneous generation, and the physiology of pleasure, pain, and love.

Mantegna (män.tä'nyä), Andrea. b. near Padua, Italy, 1431; d. at Mantua, Italy, Sept. 13, 1506. Italian historical and religious painter and engraver, known for his powerful, sculpturesque handling of the human figure. His work, though not lacking in serious emotional content, often includod the solving of difficult problems in foreshortening and linear perspective; many of his paintings, with no "atmosphere" or aerial perspective and executed almost in monochrome, have the visual effect of sculpture. Among his works are The Triumph of Caesar (Hampton Court), Madonna della Vittoria (Louvre), The Dead Christ (Brera, Milan), Parnassus (Louvre), The Man of Sorrows (Copenhagen), Saint Sebastian (Vienna Museum; another in the Louvre), and Triumph of Scipio (National Gallery, London).

Mantell (man'tẹl), Gideon Algernon. b. at Lewes, Sussex, England, 1790; d. at London, Nov. 10, 1852. English geologist. He was apprenticed to James Moore, a surgeon, at Lewes, with whom he later entered into partnership. He was the first to describe the iguanodon and other dinosaur genera he discovered. His collection of fossils was sold to the British Museum. Among his works are Fossils of the South Downs (1822), The Geology of the Southeast of England (1833), and Geological Excursions round the Isle of Wight and along the Adjacent Coast of Dorsetshire (1847).

Mantell (man.tel'), Robert Bruce. [Pseudonym, Robert Hudson.] b. at Irvine, Ayrshire, Scotland, Feb. 7, 1854; d. at Atlantic Highlands, N.J., June 27, 1928. American actor. He made his American debut (1878) as Tybalt to Mme. Modjeska's Juliet at Albany, N.Y. He established (1886) his own company, playing mainly melodramatic and romantic leads, and specializing (1887 et seq.) in the Shakespearian characters Romeo, Othello, Hamlet, Richard III, Macbeth, Iago, Brutus, Shylock, and Lear.

Mantes-Gassicourt (mänt.gȧ.sē.kör). [Former names, Mantes-la-Jolie (-lȧ.zho.lē), Mantes-sur-Seine; ancient name, Medunta.] Town in N France, in the department of Seine-et-Oise, on the Seine River NW of Paris. It is a river port and has breweries, metalworking plants, and other industries. The Church of Notre Dame, dating from the 12th century with later additions, a beautiful example of the primitive Gothic style, as well as a number of other buildings, were seriously damaged in World War II. With the adjoining towns of Limay and Mantes-la-Ville, Mantes-Gassicourt forms an urban center with a population of 25,382 (1946). Pop. of Mantes-Gassicourt, 13,181 (1946).

Mantes-la-Ville (mänt.lȧ.vēl). Town in N France, in the department of Seine-et-Oise, near the Seine River, adjacent to Mantes-Gassicourt, between Paris and Rouen.

It produces musical instruments, paperware, and other articles. A large part of the town was destroyed in World War II. 9,011 (1946).

Mantes-sur-Seine (mänt.sür.sen). A former name of Mantes-Gassicourt.

Manteuffel (män'toi.fęl), Baron Edwin Hans Karl von. b. at Dresden, Germany, Feb. 24, 1809; d. at Karlsbad (now Karlovy Vary), in Bohemia, June 17, 1885. Prussian field marshal. He became chief of the military cabinet in 1857, served in the Danish war (1864), was governor of Schleswig (1865–66), and as commander of the Main army defeated the South Germans at Hochhausen and elsewhere in 1866. As commander in the north, he defeated the French at Amiens (1870). He commanded the army of the south in 1871, and the army of occupation in France (1871–73). He was appointed governor of Alsace-Lorraine in 1879.

Manteuffel, Baron Otto Theodor von. b. at Lübben, Germany, Feb. 3, 1805; d. near Golssen, Germany, Nov. 26, 1882. Prussian politician. He was minister of the interior (1848–50) and prime minister (1850–58).

Man That Corrupted Hadleyburg (had'li.bėrg), The. Story (1900) by Samuel Langhorne Clemens under the pseudonym Mark Twain.

Mantianus (man.ti.ā'nus), Lacus. An ancient name of Urmia, Lake.

Mantinea (man.ti.nē'ą). [Also, Mantineia.] In ancient geography, a city in Arcadia, Greece, ab. 43 mi. SW of Corinth. Here the Spartans defeated (418 B.C.) the Athenians and Argives, the Thebans under Epaminondas defeated (362 B.C.) the Spartans and allies, and Philopoemen, general of the Achaean League, defeated (207 or 206 B.C.) the Spartans.

Mantinino (män.tē.nē'nō). Island reported (1492–93) to Columbus by the Indians of Hispaniola. He understood them to say that it was inhabited by Amazon women. The name was a corruption of the Carib Madinina, corresponding to the modern Martinique.

Mantle (man'tl) (Robert) Burns. b. at Watertown, N.Y., Dec. 23, 1873; d. at Forest Hills, N.Y., Feb. 9, 1948. American journalist, editor, and drama critic. He was drama critic for the Chicago Inter-Ocean (1901–07), Chicago Tribune (1907–08), New York Evening Mail (1911–22), and New York Daily News (1922–43). He edited (1919–47) the annuals Best Plays and Year Book of the Drama. His books include American Playwrights of Today (1929) and Contemporary American Playwrights (1938), and he was collaborating editor of A Treasury of the Theatre (1935).

Mantle of Elijah (ē.lī'ją), The. Political novel by Israel Zangwill, published in 1900.

Manton (man'ton), Joseph. b. c1766; d. at Maida Hill, England, June 29, 1835. English gunsmith. He patented many improvements in large and small arms, and was a principal mover in the introduction of the percussion system.

Mantoux (mäⁿ.tö), Charles. b. at Paris, May 14, 1877; d. 1947. French physician. He introduced (1908) intradermal injections of tuberculin as a test for hypersensitivity (the test has been named after him and Felix Mendel, who described the same method in 1908). The test is effected by injecting diluted old tuberculin into the superficial layers of the skin. Mantoux revived the artificial pneumothorax for the treatment of pulmonary tuberculosis and recommended the radiological examination of the lungs.

Mantova (män'tō.vä). Province in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Lombardy. Capital, Mantua; area, ab. 903 sq. mi.; pop. 407,077 (1936).

Mantua (man'ţū.ą). [Italian, Mantova.] City and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Lombardy, the capital of the province of Mantova, situated on a lake formed by the Mincio River. The city has potteries, dairies, and paper and chemical industries. Among its many architectural monuments are the cathedral (1545; façade, 1756), the basilica of Sant' Andrea, in Renaissance style (started in 1472, finished in 1782, with a tower dating from 1414), the Castello Gonzaga, the Palazzo Ducale, with beautiful interior decorations and Egyptian, Greek, and Roman collections, and such notable Renaissance palaces as the Palazzo del Capitano, the Palazzo Colloredo, and the Palazzo del Te. It was originally an Etruscan town, and was further developed by the Romans. It has long been known as the birthplace of the poet Vergil. Occupied by Lombards and Franks in the early Middle Ages, it was later incorporated into the margraviate of Tuscany; after the death of Matilda of Tuscany (1115) the town became a member of the federation of Lombard towns. In 1708 Austria occupied the city and duchy. In Napoleon's Italian campaign (1796–97), Mantua capitulated on Feb. 2, 1797. It thereafter belonged to the Cisalpine Republic and the Napoleonic Kingdom of Italy (1797–1805), and to Austria from 1814 to 1866 (during which period it formed one of the strong points of the so-called Quadrilateral, by which Austria controlled northern Italy). In 1866 it was united with Italy and the fortifications were razed. Considerable damage was suffered during World War II by some buildings of tourist interest, but all possible repairs have been completed or are being carried out. Pop. of commune 40,467 (1936); of city 34,642 (1936).

Manua (mä.nö'ä). District of American Samoa, SW Pacific Ocean, consisting of the islands of Ofu, Olosega, and Tau. Area, ab. 22 sq. mi.; pop. 2,819 (1950).

Manuel (man'ū.ęl). Tragedy by Charles Robert Maturin, produced at Drury Lane Theatre, London, on March 8, 1817, with Edmund Kean in the title role.

Manuel I (of the Byzantine Empire). [Also, Manuel I Comnenus (kom.nē'nus).] b. c1120; d. Sept. 24, 1180. Byzantine emperor (1143–80); son of the emperor John II (Kalojoannes). He inherited an empire that was beset on all sides, but conceived the idea of reuniting the eastern and western empires and healing the schism between the eastern and western churches. He subdued (1144) Raymond of Antioch, forcing him to do homage, and expelled (1145) the Seljuk Turks from Isauria in Asia Minor. He permitted the crusaders under Conrad III of Germany and Louis VII of France to cross his territory in the second Crusade and by diplomacy avoided serious trouble when the crusaders clashed with the Greeks. In the year 1147–54 he fought against Sicily, fighting off attacks and eventually securing an advantageous peace that left him with territory in Ancona, but William I of Sicily forced him to relinquish (1158) his gains. Further attempts to gain a foothold in Italian politics and to achieve his goal of uniting the east and west by conquest or diplomacy, by siding with the enemies of Venice and of the emperor Frederick I, failed, and he was forced to turn his attention to the neglected eastern domains. He fought, with marked success, against the Serbs, Hungarians, Turks, and Arabs, winning a number of victories and widening his holdings. In 1176 he was disastrously defeated by the Turks in Phrygia and, though he recouped his defeat the following year, the long series of wars had sapped his strength and he died in 1180. He married (1146) Irene, sister-in-law of Conrad III of Germany, and after her death (1161) Maria, daughter of Raymond of Antioch. Manuel's reign was the peak of the power of the Comneni and in his time Constantinople was recognized as the center of the civilized world. But despite his many victories and the brilliance of his reign, his wars wrecked the Byzantine Empire, which, soon after the end of his reign, began to fall apart.

Manuel II (of the Byzantine Empire). [Also, Manuel II Palaeologus (pā.lē.ol'ō.gus).] b. 1350; d. 1425. Byzantine emperor (1391–1425); son of John V. He inherited an empire consisting of Constantinople, Thessalonica, and the Morea (Peloponnesus); the surrounding area was held by the Turks. Besieged in Constantinople by the sultan Bajazet I, he implored the aid of W Europe, and an army composed of soldiers from France, Germany, and Hungary came to his assistance, but was totally defeated (1396) by the sultan at Nicopolis. Manuel then traveled (1399–1402) in person to several countries in the West to seek aid, but with small success. From 1398 to 1412 he was coemperor with his nephew John VII. Bajazet was, however, compelled to raise the siege of Constantinople in 1402 in order to meet the Tartar conqueror Tamerlane, by whom he was defeated and captured at Angora. Manuel passed the subsequent years of his reign in peace, though in a state of semidependence on Mohammed I, the son of Bajazet. In 1422 Constantinople was again besieged by the Turks, and Manuel was forced to pay tribute to Murad II. The city of Thessalonica, one of the last remnants of the empire, was sold (1423) to Venice.

Manuel I (of Portugal). See Emanuel I (of Portugal).

Manuel II (of Portugal). See Manoel II (of Portugal).

Manuel (mȧ.nwel), Eugène. b. at Paris, July 13, 1823; d. there, 1901. French poet, dramatist, and essayist. Author of such plays as Les Ouvriers (1870) and L'Absent (1873). An edition of his complete poetic works was published in 1898.

Manuel (mä.nwel'), Don Juan. b. 1282; d. 1347. Spanish statesman and writer, of the royal house of Castile and León. He was coregent during the minority of Alfonso XI and commanded the army against the Moors. His best-known work is El Conde Lucanor, a collection of 50 tales in the Oriental style.

Manuel (mä'nö.el), Nikolaus. b. at Bern, Switzerland, c1484; d. there, 1530. Swiss painter and poet.

Manuela (mä.nwā'lä). Pseudonym of Uzès, Anne, Duchesse d'.

Manukosi (mä.nö.kō'sē). See Shoshagane.

Manus (mä'nös). See under Admiralty Islands.

Manuscript Found in a Bottle. See MS. Found in a Bottle.

Manutius (mą.nū'shi.us, -shus), Aldus. [Italian, Aldo (or Teobaldo) Mannucci or Manucci (mä.nöt'chē) or Manuzio (mä.nö'tsyō).] b. at Bassiano, near Velletri, Italy, c1450; d. at Venice, Feb. 3, 1515. Italian classical scholar and celebrated printer, the founder (c1490) of the Aldine Press at Venice. He published editions of Aristotle, Aristophanes, Herodotus, Demosthenes, Plato, and other Greek classics, and Latin and Italian works. His professed aim was to produce good editions of good books at a low price. For the Latin and Italian books, he invented a type face, modeled after the Italian manuscript hand, that has since been called "italic." The Aldine firm, which lasted through three generations, used as its colophon the famous dolphin and anchor with the motto Festina lente.

Manutius, Aldus. [Italian, Aldo Manucci (or Manuzio).] b. at Venice, Feb. 13, 1547; d. at Rome, Oct. 28, 1597. Italian printer and classical scholar; son of Paulus Manutius.

Manutius, Paulus. [Italian, Paolo Manucci (or Manuzio).] b. at Venice, June 12, 1512; d. there, April 6, 1574. Italian classical scholar, author, and noted printer; son of Aldus Manutius (c1450–1515). An excellent Latin scholar, he concentrated on publishing Latin classics when he succeeded to his father's business.

Manville (man'vil). Borough in N central New Jersey, in Somerset County. 8,597 (1950).

Manville. Unincorporated community in NE Rhode Island, in Providence County, in Lincoln town: manufactures of cotton and rayon textiles, and hollow ware. 3,429 (1950).

Man Who Died Twice, The. Narrative in blank verse by Edwin Arlington Robinson, published in 1924.

Man Who Laughs, The. English title of Homme qui Rit, L'.

Man Who Lost Himself, The. Novel by Sir Osbert Sitwell, published in 1929.

Man Who Pays the Piper, The. Play (1931) in a prologue and three acts by G. B. Stern.

Man Who Saw and Other Poems Arising Out of the War, The. Work by Sir William Watson (1858–1935), published in 1917.

Man with a Hammer, The. Volume of poetry by Anna Wickham, published in 1921.

Man with a Heart, A. Four-act play (1924) by Alfred Sutro.

Man Without a Country, The. Story by Edward Everett Hale, first published in the Atlantic Monthly (December, 1863). Originally designed to increase popular patriotic feeling during the Civil War, it was included in the volume If, Yes, and Perhaps (1868). Its hero, Philip Nolan, is sentenced to exile at sea after exclaiming before a court, "Damn the United States. I wish I may never hear of the United States again." He aids the U.S., however, in the War of 1812, and long afterward dies, secure in the knowledge that his country has prospered and become great.

Man Without a Country, The. Opera in two acts by Walter Damrosch, first performed at the New York Metropolitan Opera House on May 12, 1937. The text, taken from the story by Edward Everett Hale, was versified by Arthur Guiterman.

Man with Pinks. Painting by Jan van Eyck, in the Berlin Gallery. It is a bust portrait of a man wearing a fur-lined cloak and a high fur cap.

Man with the Hoe, The. Poem by Edwin Markham, title piece of a volume published in 1899. A word-picture paralleling Millet's painting of the same subject, it caught the imagination of many Americans who felt the social unrest then widespread in the U.S. The description of the brutish peasant was a reaction against the glorifying pictures of a romanticized noble peasantry, happy in its simple joys.

Man with the Iron Mask. See Man in the Iron Mask.

Man with the Muck-rake. See Muck-rake, Man with the.

Manx (mangks). Native language of the inhabitants of the Isle of Man. It belongs to the Goidelic group of the Celtic subfamily of Indo-European languages, and is thus closely allied to Irish and Scottish Gaelic.

Manych (mä.nich'), Eastern. River in SW U.S.S.R., in the Manych Depression, flowing E to the salt desert W of the Caspian Sea. In time of flood, its waters may reach the Kuma. Length, ab. 125 mi.

Manych, Western. [Also, Manych.] River in SW U.S.S.R., in the Manych Depression, flowing W to the Don ab. 25 mi. E of Rostov. It has been canalized in its lower course. Length, ab. 136 mi.

Manych Depression. Semiarid valley in SW U.S.S.R., extending from the lower Don River to the Caspian Sea. In post-glacial times, when the level of the Caspian Sea was above sea level, it was the outlet of the Caspian. The depression is now occupied by two rivers, the Eastern Manych and the Western Manych. The E part of the depression is quite dry, and is a salt-desert area. A canal has been projected through the depression to link the Caspian and Black seas, but only a part of the Western Manych had been canalized in 1950. Length, ab. 420 mi.

Manyika (mä.nyē'kä). [Also: Manika, Nika, Nyika.] Subgroup of the Shona, a Bantu-speaking people of SE Africa. They inhabit NE Southern Rhodesia and neighboring portions of Mozambique.

Many Marriages. Novel by Sherwood Anderson, published in 1923.

Manzala (man.zä'lą), Lake. [Also, Menzaleh.] Lagoon in NE Egypt, linked to the Mediterranean Sea, in the Nile delta, just W of the Suez Canal. Area, ab. 1,000 sq. mi.

Manzanares (män.thä.nä'rās). Town in C Spain, in the province of Ciudad Real, ab. 30 mi. E of Ciudad Real: wheat and wine markets; soap and pottery industries. One of the chief towns of La Mancha, it is the center of the district described by Cervantes in Don Quixote. The citadel was founded as a Christian fortress after the defeat (1212) of the Moors at Las Navas de Tolosa. 18,451 (1940).

Manzanares River. Small river in C Spain. Madrid is situated on it. Length, ab. 50 mi.

Manzanillo (män.sä.nē'yō). City and seaport on the SE coast of Cuba, in Oriente province: trade in coffee, sugar, fruit, hardwoods, and molasses. 36,295 (1943).

Manzanillo. City and seaport in W central Mexico, in the state of Colima, on the Pacific: the chief commercial port of the Pacific coast of C Mexico. It is connected by rail and highway with the populous plateau region. It has a good natural harbor. 6,831 (1940).

Manzanillo Bay. Arm of the Atlantic Ocean between NE Haiti and NW Dominican Republic.

Manzikert (man'zi.kėrt). See Malâzkirt.

Manzo (män'sō), Llanos de. See Manso, Llanos de.

Manzoni (män.dzō'nē), Alessandro Francesco Tommaso Antonio. b. at Milan, Italy, March 7, 1785; d. there, May 22, 1873. Italian novelist and poet, the chief of the Italian romantic school. He went in his early youth to Paris with his mother, who was a daughter of the Marquis Beccaria, and who introduced him to literary society. He became acquainted with Count de Volney, Madame Condorcet, Claude Fauriel, and others, and became imbued with many of their deistical and other opinions. In 1807 he returned to Italy. He wrote the historical novel I Promessi Sposi (1825–27; Eng. trans., The Betrothed), considered not only a magnificent example of Italian prose style but also one of the chief novels of 19th-century European romanticism. Among his other works are the tragedies Il Conte di Carmagnola (1820) and Adelchi (1823), the lyric poem Il Cinque Maggio (The 5th of May, an ode on Napoleon's death, 1821), Inni sacri (1810; sacred lyrics), Osservazioni sulla morale cattolica (a vindication of Catholic morality), and Storia della Colonna infame (a historical treatise, 1842). Verdi's Requiem, first performed a year after Manzoni's death, was dedicated to his memory.

Maori (mou'ri, mä'ō.ri). Aboriginal inhabitant of New Zealand. The name is a Polynesian word meaning "genuine" or "native to the soil." The Maori is Polynesian in race, language, and culture, but with unique adaptations to a cooler climate than that of tropical Polynesia, as well as to different raw materials. These adaptations include use of the starchy young fronds of tree fern for food, of hewn planks for house walls, and of "New Zealand flax" or hemp for mantles made by a twined-weaving technique. Maori wooden dwellings are famous for being beautifully carved, sometimes with elaborate symbolic ancestral designs. The Maori are famous also as warriors.

Maori Wars. Engagements which took place (1860–70) in the North Island of New Zealand, and were in the nature of a prolonged frontier dispute throughout the country. An earlier, similar struggle (1843–48) was fought principally on North Island, though it broke out in the northern part of South Island. They resulted in extinction of Maori armed power and the opening of North Island to European settlement.

Mao Tse-tung (mou' dzu'dŭng'). [Also, Mao Tze-tung.] b. at Hsiangtan, Hunan, China, 1893—. Chinese Communist leader, also known, in China, as a poet and scholar. Born into a peasant family, he served (1910) with Sun Yat-sen, acquired a classical Chinese education, later read widely in Western literature, and became (1920) a Marxist, helping to found (1921) the Chinese Communist Party. In 1927, following the open break between the Kuomintang and the Communists, he led uprisings in Hunan province. Opposing the policies of Ch'en Tu-hsiu and later Li Li-san, he became (1931) chairman of the Chinese Central Soviet Government in Kiangsi. After leading the Communist forces on the Long March (1934–35) to Shansi, he advocated Kuomintang-Communist cooperation for united resistance to Japan, to which end he formulated a theory of protracted war, depending for its success upon cumulative attrition produced by constant harassing attacks, as the basis for eventual Chinese victory and directed the remarkable growth (1937–45) of Communist power behind Japanese lines. After the Japanese defeat he negotiated personally (1945) and through intermediaries (1946) with Chiang Kai-shek for Kuomintang-Communist coöperation, but became convinced that a joint government was impossible and turned (1947) to his armies as a means of obtaining a decision. Following the defeat of the Kuomintang forces he was elected (Oct. 1, 1949) chairman of the new Communist regime, the central government of the People's Republic of China. He also provided the political philosophy of the new regime by elaborating his concept of New Democracy as a Communist-led alliance of several revolutionary classes aiming toward socialism. His translated works include China's New Democracy (1944) and The Fight for a New China (1945).

Map (map), Walter. [Also, Mapes (mā'pēz).] b. probably c1140; d. c1209. English author and satirist. He was of a Welsh family in Herefordshire, and studied (c1154–60) at Paris. He was present at the court of Henry II, while Thomas à Becket was still chancellor, as one of the clerks of the royal household, and was employed as an itinerant justice. In 1197 he was made archdeacon of Oxford. The only extant work known to be his is the De nugis curialium (Courtiers' Trifles), composed between 1182 and 1192, a gossipy collection of tales, legends, anecdotes, and the like, told wittily and often sharply. He has also been credited with a large share in the composition of the Arthurian romances, and it is barely possible that the prose Lancelot is based on an Anglo-French poem by him. A great part of the Goliardic or satirical verse of the 12th and 13th centuries has also been credited to Map, and he probably wrote verse of this genre, but certainly not nearly everything attributed to him.

Mapai Party (mä.pī'). Israeli political party following a program of moderate socialism. Its leader is David Ben-Gurion.

Mapam Party (mä.päm'). Israeli political party following a definitely left-wing socialist program.

Mapimí (mä.pē.mē'), Bolsón de. Dry elevated mountain basin in N Mexico, in the states of Chihuahua and Coahuila, bordering on Texas. Most of it is arid and flat, but the irrigated W margin along the Río Conchos is fertile and produces cotton, grain, and vegetables.

Maping (mä'ping'). Former name of Liuchow.

Maple. Narrative poem in blank verse by Robert Frost, published in his collection New Hampshire (1923).

Maple Heights. City in NE Ohio, in Cuyahoga County, a southeastern residential suburb of Cleveland. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population more than doubled. 6,728 (1940), 15,586 (1950).

Maple Shade. Unincorporated suburban community in C New Jersey, in Burlington County, included in the urbanized area of Philadelphia. 5,985 (1950).

Maplewood (mā'pl.wŭd). Unincorporated community in SW Louisiana, in Calcasieu Parish, near Lake Charles. 2,671 (1950).

Maplewood. City in E Missouri, in St. Louis County, a western residential suburb of St. Louis. 13,416 (1950).

Maplewood. Suburban township in NE New Jersey, in Essex County, W of Newark. 25,201 (1950).

Mapocho (mä.pō'chō). River in C Chile, flowing SW through Santiago to join the Maipo. Length, ab. 75 mi.

Map of Virginia with a Description of the Country, the Commodities, People, Government and Religion, A. Narrative by Captain John Smith (1580–1631) dealing with colonial settlement, published in 1612.

Mappa (mä'pä, map'ą), Adam Gerard. b. at Delft, Netherlands, Nov. 25, 1754; d. April 15, 1828. Dutch type founder. Exiled (1787) for his revolutionary activities, he arrived (1789) in America, where he established the first type foundry at New York.

Mappa Mundi (map'ą mun'dī). See under Hereford, England.

Mapple (map'l), Father. Character in Moby Dick (1851), novel by Herman Melville.

Mapuche (mä.pō'chā). Tribe of Araucanian Indians in S middle Chile between the Bío-Bío and Tolten rivers, the most important of the Araucanian tribes and languages. Their economy was based on the cultivation of such crops as maize, potatoes, and beans. Gathering of pine nuts and fishing were of secondary importance, and hunting played a negligible part in the economy. At present cattle and sheep have superseded the llama as important herding animals. The horse was taken over early and cavalry was being used in warfare as early as 1568. Today they are still excellent horsemen. The Araucanian language (a separate linguistic stock comprising several languages) is sometimes called Mapuche. Modern Chilean Araucanians prefer to use the term Mapuche for themselves. It can also be extended to signify all Araucanians in Chile and Argentina.

Ma Pu-fang (mä' bō'fäng'). b. at Hochow, Kansu, China, 1903—. Chinese Moslem warlord who controlled (1936–49) Chinghai province. He ruled the Tibetan and other provincial elements with an iron hand, coöperated with the Kuomintang when necessary, competed with his coreligionist Ma Hung-k'uei, and actively opposed the Communists, who drove him from power in 1949.

Maqrizi (mä.krē'zē), al-. See Makrisi, Al-.

Maquet (ma.ke), Auguste. b. at Paris, Sept. 13, 1813; d. at St.-Mdon, France, Jan. 8, 1888. French novelist and dramatist, collaborator with (and historical researcher for) the elder Alexandre Dumas in some of his chief works.

Maquiling (mä.kē'ling). Volcano in La Laguna province, S Luzon, Philippine Islands, S of Laguna de Bay. There are signs of activity in pools of boiling mud at a height of ab. 900 ft. on the E side and in thermal medicinal springs on the slopes and at the foot of the volcano. Elevation, ab. 3,752 ft.

Maquiritari (ma.kē.rē.ta.rē). Tribe of South American Indians ranging the region of the upper Orinoco River.

especially along the Ventuari River, a branch of the Orinoco. They belong to the Cariban linguistic stock. Their language (usually spelled Makiritari) embraces five dialects and is classified as belonging to the Ventuari subgroup of the Roraima group of the North Central Cariban family of languages.

Maquoketa (mą.kō'kę.tą). City in E Iowa, county seat of Jackson County. 4,307 (1950).

Mar (mär). Ancient district in E central Scotland, now in Aberdeenshire, forming the S part of the county, between the rivers Dee and Don. It was subdivided into Braemar, Midmar, and Cromar. The Earls of Mar derived their title from it.

Mar. Italian and Spanish word for "sea": for entries not found immediately below see the distinguishing element of the name.

Mar, 1st Earl of. A title of Douglas, William.

Mar, Earls of (of the Erskine line). Titles held by various members of the Erskine family.

Mar, Serra do. [Also: Coast Range, Coast Mountains.] Mountains of SE Brazil, bordering on the Atlantic.

Mara (mä'rą). In Hindu and Buddhist belief, a personification of evil and death. In Hinduism, Mara is a parallel concept of Kama, god of desire, life, death, and rebirth; hence in Buddhism Mara is an enemy and tempter of Buddha, for Buddha saves mankind from worldly desire and rebirth.

Mara. In Germanic and Slavic folklore, female spirits or demons who cause nightmare. They sit on the chest of the sleeper, causing labored breathing and terrifying dreams. Mare, the Old English word for "incubus," is cognate, as are also German Mahr, meaning "nightmare," and mora, "nightmare," in several Slavic languages.

Mara (mä'rä), Madame Gertrud Elisabeth. [Maiden name, Schmeling.] b. at Kassel, Germany, Feb. 23, 1749; d. at Revel, Russia (now Tallin, Estonia), Jan. 20, 1833. German soprano singer.

Marabouts (mar'ą.bōts). [Also, Maraboots.] Members of a Moorish priestly order of N Africa, successors of the Morabits or Almoravides, a Mohammedan sect or tribe who ruled Morocco and part of Spain in the 11th and 12th centuries.

Maracaibo (mä.rä.kī'bō; Anglicized, mar.ą.kī'bō). [Also, Maracaybo.] City in NW Venezuela, capital of Zulia state, on the W shore of the outlet of Lake Maracaibo: chief petroleum export center of South America; also exports coffee, hides, and cacao. It is the seat of a university. The city was founded in 1571. Pop., with suburbs, 112,519 (1941), 232,488 (1950).

Maracaibo, Gulf of. See Venezuela, Gulf of.

Maracaibo, Lake. [Spanish, Lago de Maracaibo; formerly also Sack of Venezuela, Spanish, Saco de Venezuela.] Shallow tidewater lake in NW Venezuela connecting with the Gulf of Venezuela and the Caribbean Sea. Along the E shore are the most important oil fields of South America. Length, ab. 137 mi.; width, ab. 75 mi.; area, ab. 4,969 sq. mi.

Maracaibo Lowland. See under Venezuela.

Maracanda (mar.ą.kan'dą). Ancient name of Samarkand.

Maracay (mä.rä.kī'). City in N Venezuela, capital of Aragua state: trade in cacao, cattle products, sugar, coffee, and paper. It has textile, meat-packing, and paper industries. The development of Maracay in recent years was stimulated by Juan Gómez, who resided here. The city is connected by paved roads with Caracas, Valencia, and its Caribbean port of Turiamo. Pop., with suburbs, 65,761 (1950).

Marach (mä.räch'). Small Bantu subgroup of the Kavirondo peoples of Kenya, in E Africa.

Maragheh (mä.rä.ge'). [Also, Maragha (-gä').] Town in NW Iran, in Azerbaijan, ab. 50 mi. S of Tabriz. 45,372 (1933).

Maragoli (mä.rä.gō'lē). See Logoli.

Marah (mā'rą, mär'ą). In Old Testament history, a place in the peninsula of Sinai, SE of Suez, containing a spring noted for its bitterness. Ex. xv. 23.

Márai (mä'rô.yē), Sándor. b. at Kassa, Hungary (now Košice, Czechoslovakia), 1900—. Hungarian novelist and publicist. His novels are concerned with the problems and values of the Hungarian middle class. Author of Egy polgár vallomása (Confessions of a Citizen, 1934) and Idegen emberek (Strange People, 1930).

Marais (mą.re), Le. [Also: Marais; full name, Le Marais-Poitevin (-pwät.vaṅ).] Swampy region in W France, near La Rochelle. In ancient times it was a shallow arm of the sea. Some of the areah as been reclaimed, and makes excellent wet pasture or vegetable land. Area, ab. 150 sq. mi.

Marais, Le. [Also, Marais.] Old quarter of Paris, located E of the Rue St.-Denis, N of the Seine, and W of the Grands Boulevards, within the fortifications of Charles V. It was subject to inundation. A large part of it was held in the Middle Ages by the Knights of the Temple, and it contains the royal residences of Charles V and Charles VII to Henry II.

Marais des Cygnes (mär''ą dę sēn'). See Osage River.

Marajó (mä.rą.zhō'). Island in N Brazil, in the state of Pará, in the delta of the Amazon. The NE part of the island is a natural grassland, and is used for grazing cattle and horses. The W part is densely forested and subject to inundation at flood seasons. Area, ab. 16,000 sq. mi.

Marama (mä.rä'mä). Bantu subgroup of the Kavirondo peoples of Kenya, in E Africa. Their population is estimated at ab. 20,000 (by G. Wagner, The Bantu of North Kavirondo, 1949) Under British rule they have been split into two independent chieftaincies.

Máramarossziget (mä'rô.mô.rōs.sē'get). Hungarian name of Sighet.

Marampa (mą.räm'pą). Commercial town in the iron-ore mining region of Sierra Leone, W Africa, ab. 60 mi. E of Freetown. Pop. ab. 3,000.

Maran (mą.räṅ), René. b. 1887—. French novelist, author of novels about Negro life in the French colonies. The best known is Batouala (1921). His work is frequently cited by advocates of colonial autonomy.

Maranhão or Maranham (mä.rą.nyouṅ'). See also São Luís, Brazil.

Maranhão. [Also, Maranham.] State in NE Brazil, bounded on the N by the Atlantic Ocean. Capital, São Luis; area, ab. 128,278 sq. mi.; pop. 1,235,169 (1940), 1,600,396 (1950).

Maranhão, Jeronymo de Albuquerque. See Albuquerque Maranhão, Jeronymo de.

Marano di Napoli (mä.rä'nō dē nä'pō.lē). Town and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Campania, in the province of Napoli, NW of Naples. Fruit and vegetables are shipped from here to the Neapolitan markets. Pop. of commune, 17,368 (1936); of town, 10,001 (1936).

Marañón (mä.rä.nyōn'). Principal headstream of the Amazon, the upper or Peruvian portion of the river above its confluence with the Ucayali, where it forms the Amazon River. Length, ab. 800 mi.

Marañones (mä.rä.nyō'näs). Name adopted by the followers of Lope de Aguirre. It has been erroneously supposed that the word Marañon was derived from it.

Maraş (mä.räsh'). [Also, Marash.] Il (province or vilayet) in S central Turkey, ab. 50 mi. N of the Syrian border: a rugged mountainous country where subsistence farming and herding are the chief occupations. Woolen goods, silk, and opium are the chief exports. Capital, Maraş; area, ab. 4,327 sq. mi.; pop. 288,631 (1950).

Maraş. [Also, Marash.] City in S central Turkey, capital of the il (province or vilayet) of Maraş, situated on the S slopes of the Taurus Mountains. It is an ancient town, probably dating from the time of the Hittites. The chief industry is carpet weaving. Elevation, ab. 2,150 ft.; pop. 35,071 (1950).

Marat (mą.rä), Jean Paul. b. at Boudry, Switzerland, May 24, 1744; assassinated at Paris, July 13, 1793. French politician, one of the foremost figures of the French Revolution. He studied medicine at Bordeaux, practiced his profession with conspicuous success at London and at Paris, and wrote a number of meritorious scientific works, chiefly on electricity and optics. At the beginning of the Revolution in 1789 he began to publish a paper entitled L'Ami du Peuple, in which he boldly advocated a republican form of government and incited the populace to violence. His agitation caused him to be hunted and, as a result of hiding in cellars and in the sewers of Paris, he contracted a skin disease which scarred him for the rest of his life. He was elected (1792) to the National Convention, in which, as the most ultra-revolutionary of the Jacobin party, he was attacked by the Girondists, who were in a majority. He was tried before the Revolutionary tribunal, but was acquitted (April 24, 1793) and with Danton and Robespierre overthrew the Girondists on June 2, 1793. While in his bath, seeking relief from the skin disease, he was stabbed to death by Charlotte Corday. Marat never hesitated to attack anyone for what he considered treason, and the excesses of the Reign of Terror, heightened after his death, may to a great extent be laid to his powerful agitation.

Marathas (mą.rä'tąz). See Mahrattas.

Marathi (mą.rä'tē). Language spoken by ab. 21 million people, the Mahrattas (or Marathas or Marhattas), in W and C India, mainly in the states of Bombay and Madhya Pradesh. It is closely related to Lahnda and Sindhi, and belongs to the Indic group of the Indo-Iranian subfamily of Indo-European languages.

Marathon (mar'ą.thon). Plain in Attica, Greece, ab. 18 mi. NE of Athens, between Mount Pentelicus and the sea. It is celebrated as the site of the battle of September, 490 B.C., between the Greeks (10,000 Athenians and 1,000 Plataeans), under Miltiades, and more than 100,000 Persians, under Datis and Artaphernes. The result was a Greek victory, owing to the tactics of Miltiades. The Greek loss was 192; the Persian, 6,400. The victory ended Darius's attempt against Greece, and is classed among the decisive battles of the world. The conical mound, 40 ft. high and 200 in diameter, which covers the Athenian dead, marks the central point of the famous battle. All doubt as to its identification was set at rest by an excavation made by the Archaeological Society of Athens, which disclosed ashes, charred remnants of the funeral pyre, and fragments of pottery dating from the beginning of the 5th century B.C. The modern marathon race is run over a distance approximating that run by the messenger carrying news of the victory in battle to Athens. At first (1896) 25 miles, the distance has been standardized since 1908 at 26 miles 385 yards.

Marathonians (mar.ą.thō'ni.ąnz). See Macedonians, followers of Macedonius.

Marâtre (mȧ.rätr), La. Play by Honoré de Balzac, produced at the Théâtre Historique, Paris, in June, 1848.

Maratti (mä.rät'tē) or Maratta (-tä), Carlo. b. near Ancona, Italy, 1625; d. at Rome, Dec. 15, 1713. Italian painter of madonnas and other religious subjects.

Maravi (mä.rä'vē). See Chipeta.

Marbach (mär'bȧch). Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Württemberg-Baden, American Zone, formerly in the Neckar Kreis (district) of the free state of Württemberg, situated on the Neckar River, ab. 12 mi. N of Stuttgart: agricultural industries; knit-goods and leather-goods factories. It was the birthplace of the poet Schiller. 5,463 (1946).

Marbe (mär'bę), Karl. b. at Paris, Aug. 31, 1869—. German philosopher and psychologist.

Marbeck (mär'bek), John. See Merbecke or Merbeck or Marbeck, John.

Marble (mär'bl), Manton Malone. b. at Worcester, Mass., Nov. 15, 1835; d. in England, July 24, 1917. American journalist. Editor (1862–76) of the New York World, he was accused (1864) by President Lincoln of fraudulently printing a forged call for soldiers. Claiming victimization, he called Lincoln's action interference with freedom of the press.

Marble Canyon. Canyon of the Colorado River, in Arizona, NE of the Grand Canyon, with sheer walls ab. 750 ft. high towering above the river. A highway bridge crosses the upper part of the canyon, ab. 465 ft. above the river.

Marble Faun, The. Romance by Nathaniel Hawthorne, published in 1860. The English edition, published in the same year, was brought out under the title Transformation, or the Romance of Monte Beni.

Marblehead (mär'bl.hed). Town in NE Massachusetts, in Essex County, on Massachusetts Bay ab. 15 mi. NE of Boston: yachting center and summer resort. It has shoe and boatbuilding industries, and was formerly an important fishing port. The original settlers were largely from the Channel Islands. 13,765 (1950).

Marburg (mär'bėrg; German, mär'bůrk). [Also, Marburg an der Lahn (än dėr län).] City in W Germany, in the Land (state) of Hessen, American Zone, formerly in the province of Hesse-Nassau, Prussia, on the Lahn River ab. 49 mi. N of Frankfort on the Main: livestock markets, and tobacco, precision instrument, chemical, textile, furniture, and machinery industries. The university, founded in 1527 by Landgrave Philip of Hesse as the first Protestant university in Germany, was in 1529 the scene of the Marburg Conference between Luther and Zwingli; in the 19th and early 20th century it was the seat of the philosophical "School of Marburg," represented primarily by the Neo-Kantians Hermann Cohen, Paul Natorp, Ernst Cassirer, Walther Kinkel, and others. The population increased in the period 1939–46 by 33.9 percent. 37,382 (1946), 39,530 (1950).

Marburg. German name of Maribor, Yugoslavia.

Marburg, Otto. b. at Roemerstadt, in Moravia, May 25, 1874; d. at New York, June 13, 1948. Austrian neuropathologist. During World War I he made intensive studies of injuries to the nervous system occurring in combat. Author of more than 200 books and papers on neurology, among them the classic Mikroskopisch-topographischer Atlas des menschlichen Zentralnervensystems mit begleitendem Text (1904), Die sogenannte akute Sklerose (1906), Der Schlaf, seine Störungen und deren Behandlung (1928), Symptomatologie der Erkrankungen des Kleinhirns (1936), Multiple Sklerose (1936), Die traumatischen Erkrankungen des Gehirns und Rückenmarks (1936), Hydrocephalus; its Symptomatology, Pathology, Pathologenesis and Treatment (1940), and Injuries of the Nervous System, Including Poisonings (1939).

Marburg Conference. Conference held at Marburg, Germany, in October, 1529, between Luther and others on one side and Zwingli and other Swiss reformers on the other. It failed to reconcile the basic conflicts between the two groups.

Marburgo (mär.bör'gō). Italian name of Maribor, Yugoslavia.

Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch 137 (1803) (mär'ber.i; mad'i.sǫn). U.S. Supreme Court decision, handed down by Chief Justice John Marshall in an opinion (Feb. 24, 1803) for a unanimous court, in which for the first time an act of the U.S. Congress was declared by the high court to be unconstitutional and of no effect. Although it is erroneous to suppose that the principle of judicial review in American history dates from Marshall's buttressing of it in this case, there is no doubt that his opinion exerted a pervasive influence upon the ensuing course of American constitutional development. The purely constitutional aspects of the case did not engage the interest of contemporaries; indeed, they were obscured by the political differences between the Federalists and the Jeffersonian Republicans bearing on the issue. Shortly before leaving office, President John Adams appointed (as one of the "midnight judges") one William Marbury, justice of the peace for the District of Columbia. The commission was not delivered, however, and subsequently President Thomas Jefferson instructed Secretary of State James Madison not to deliver it. Marbury sued for a writ of mandamus compelling Madison to deliver the commission, prosecuting his claim under Section 13 of the federal Judiciary Act of 1789. Marshall declared that the president was not empowered to withhold Marbury's commission, and decided that the provision of the Judiciary Act in question was contrary to the Constitution and therefore void. The high court, he held, had no constitutional authority to issue a writ of mandamus and had no jurisdiction over a case of this kind; a legislative act could not expand the original jurisdiction of the Supreme Court beyond the limits specified in the Constitution. It has been pointed out that Marshall, in leaving to the last the consideration of the court's jurisdiction, shrewdly availed himself on questionable grounds of an opportunity to deliver obiter dicta comprising a strong political attack upon his Jeffersonian opponents. The significant portions of his opinion referred to the distinction between limited and unlimited government. "The constitution," said Marshall, "is either a superior paramount law, unchangeable by ordinary means, or it is on a level with ordinary legislative acts, and, like other acts, is alterable when the legislature shall please to alter it. . . .

Certainly all those who have framed written constitutions contemplate them as forming the fundamental and paramount law of the nation, and, consequently, the theory of every such government must be, that an act of the legislature, repugnant to the constitution, is void." He also stated: "It is emphatically the province and the duty of the judicial department to say what the law is. . . . If two laws conflict with each other, the courts must decide on the operation of each."

Marbut (mär'but), Curtis Fletcher. b. at Verona, Mo., July 19, 1863; d. at Harbin, Manchuria, Aug. 25, 1935. American geologist who served (1910–35) as chief of the Soil Survey of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. He studied soils in Central America (1919) as a member of an expedition sent by President Wilson, investigated rubber development in the Amazon River valley (1923) as a member of a party sent by Secretary of Commerce Hoover, and undertook a study of Chinese soils (1935) at the request of the Chinese government.

Marc (märk), Franz. b. at Munich, Feb. 8, 1880; d. at Verdun, France, March 4, 1916. German expressionist painter. He studied at the Munich Academy, then went to Paris and Brittany. He became associated with August Macke and Vasily Kandinsky, and in 1909 was a member of the New Artists' Federation at Munich, which was joined by Paul Klee and Heinrich Campendonk. His early works were influenced by impressionism, then fauvism and cubism, but his own lyrically abstract style was well developed by 1910. His work was exhibited in France, Russia, Germany, and the U.S. He was killed in World War I. Among his best-known works are Red Horses, Tower of Blue Horses, Apes, Cats, Resting Animals, Mandrill, and Waterfall.

Marcantonio (mär.kan.tō'ni.ō), Vito. b. at New York, Dec. 10, 1902—. American politician and lawyer. He graduated from the law school of New York University in 1926, having already been chosen by Fiorello H. LaGuardia to manage his campaigns for Congress in 1922 and 1924 (a role which he continued to fill until LaGuardia was elected mayor of New York City in 1934, meanwhile serving also as LaGuardia's secretary). In 1934, as a candidate of the Republican and City Fusion parties, he was elected LaGuardia's successor in Congress. He failed to win reëlection in 1936, but was returned to Congress in 1938. In 1940 he was read out of the American Labor Party by the state executive committee, but the action was ignored by the party's New York County committee, of which Marcantonio was chairman, and he was again reëlected as the Republican and American Labor candidate (he had also been read out of the Republican Party, in 1938, but continued to win in the Republican primaries in his district). In 1942 and 1944 he was elected without opposition, having carried the Democratic as well as the Republican and American Labor primaries; in 1946 he was defeated in the Republican primaries, but won as the Democratic and American Labor candidate. In 1947 the New York State legislature enacted legislation barring a candidate from entering the primary election of any party but his own, except by permission of the other party; in 1948, therefore, he ran on the Labor Party ticket only, and again was successful. By this time he was state chairman of the American Labor Party, which was affiliated with the nation-wide Progressive Party, and in this capacity he was one of the principal backers of the presidential candidacy of Henry A. Wallace. In 1949 he ran for the mayoralty of New York City, polling a relatively small vote. In the 1950 Congressional election the Democrats and Republicans put up a joint nominee, and Marcantonio was defeated.

Marcaria (mär.kä.rē'ä). Village and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Lombardy, in the province of Mantova, on the Oglio River W of Mantua: an agricultural commune. Pop. of commune, 11,050 (1936); of village, 1,065 (1936).

Marceau (mär.sō), François Séverin des Graviers. [Original surname, Marceau-Desgraviers.] b. at Chartres, France, March 1, 1769; d. at Altenkirchen, Germany, Sept. 23, 1796. French general. He captured Koblenz in 1794, and served (1795–96) along the Rhine.

Marcel (mär.sel). Central and at times autobiographical character in À la recherche du temps perdu (1913–27; Eng. trans., Remembrance of Things Past) by Marcel Proust. The evolution of the other characters in the novel is observed through the eyes of Marcel, the narrator.

Marcel, Gabriel. b. 1887—. French philosopher and dramatist. Author of plays including La Grâce (1911), Le Quatuor en fa dièse (1925), La Chapelle ardente (1925), and Le Dard (1938); and of works of idealistic philosophy, such as Journal métaphysique (1927), Être et avoir (1935), and Du refus à l'invocation (1940). His work is considered representative of the recent "spiritualist" (antimaterialistic) movement in France.

Marceline (mär.sẹ.lēn'). City in N central Missouri, in Linn County: shipping point for coal. 3,172 (1950).

Marcellians (mär.sel'i.ạnz). Followers of Marcellus of Ancyra in the 4th century A.D. The Marcellians held the doctrine, nearly agreeing with that of the Sabellians, that the Holy Spirit and the Word, or Logos, are merely impersonal agencies and qualities of God, and that the incarnation of the Logos is temporary only.

Marcellinus (mär.sẹ.lī'nus), Saint. b. probably at Rome; d. 304. Pope from June 30, 296, to Oct. 25, 304. Little is known for certain of his reign; he reputedly died a martyr during Diocletian's persecution.

Marcellinus or Marcellianus (mär.sel.i.ā'nus). fl. 5th century A.D. Roman military officer.

Marcellinus. fl. in the first half of the 6th century A.D. Minister of Justinian, author of a chronicle of the events from the accession of Theodosius to the year 534 (continued by a later hand to 566). It is much fuller for the affairs of the East than for those of the West.

Marcellinus, Ammianus. See Ammianus Marcellinus.

Marcello (mär.chel'lō), Benedetto. b. at Venice, July 31 or Aug. 1, 1686; d. at Brescia, Italy, July 24, 1739. Italian composer. His most important work is the musical setting of 50 of the psalms (1724–27) paraphrased by Girolamo Giustiniani.

Marcellus (mär.sel'us). Roman plebeian family of the Claudia gens.

Marcellus. Officer of the guard in Shakespeare's Hamlet.

Marcellus I, Saint. b. at Rome; d. Jan. 6, 309. Pope from 308 to 309. Elected in May, 308, after the papal throne had been vacant several years under the persecution of Diocletian, he began reorganizing the Roman church and resisted the strenuous efforts of those who had lapsed during persecution (lapsi) to be reinstated before doing penance. He himself was exiled by Maxentius at the end of 308 or beginning of 309, and died shortly after.

Marcellus II. [Original name, Marcello Cervini degli Spannochi (mär.chel'lō cher.vē'nē de'lyē spän.nō'kē).] b. at Montepulciano, Tuscany, Italy, May 6, 1501; d. at Rome, May 1, 1555. Pope in 1555. One of the three presidents of the Council of Trent, and a reformer, he reigned only 22 days.

Marcellus, Marcus Claudius. b. before 268 B.C.; slain near Venusia, Apulia, Italy, 208 B.C. Roman general and statesman. He was five times consul (first in 222), defeated the Gauls, during his first consulship, at Clastidium, slaying with his own hand their leader, Britomartus, defended Nola against Hannibal in 216, captured Syracuse in 212, and, taking the command in Apulia, contended against Hannibal in southern Italy until his death in a skirmish near Venusia.

Marcellus, Marcus Claudius. Killed c46 B.C. Roman consul (51 B.C.), an adherent of Pompey and an opponent of Caesar. He exiled himself to Mytilene after the battle of Pharsala (48 B.C.). An appeal by the senate in his favor caused Caesar to pardon him (Cicero's speech Pro Marcello thanks Caesar for this). Marcellus was killed on his way back to Rome.

Marcellus, Marcus Claudius. b. 43 B.C.; d. at Baiae, Italy, 23 B.C. Son of Octavia, sister of Augustus, and the adopted son and favorite of the latter, whose daughter Julia he married. His death was noted by Vergil (Aeneid, vi. 860) and other writers; Augustus read the funeral oration.

Marcellus, Nonius. fl. about the beginning of the 4th century. Roman grammarian, author of an extant treatise, De compendiosa doctrina per litteras ad filium, valuable for its inclusion of quotations from otherwise unknown early works.

Marcellus of Ancyra (an.sī'rą). fl. 350; d. c374. Galatian churchman. A strong opponent of Arianism, he wrote against the Arian Asterius, but himself fell into Sabellianism, holding the trinity of divine persons to be but a passing manifestation. Deposed at Constantinople in 336, he was reinstated (340) by Pope Julius I, but was again deposed by the Macedonian faction of Constantinople in 353, and condemned by Pope Damasus in 380.

March (märch). Urban district and market town in C England, in the Isle of Ely, Cambridgeshire, ab. 24 mi. N of Cambridge, ab. 86 mi. N of London by rail. 12,993 (1951).

March. Third month of our year, consisting of 31 days. It was the first month of the ancient Roman year till the adoption of the Julian Calendar, whose order was followed by the Gregorian. Previous to the adoption of the latter it was reckoned the first month in many European countries, and so continued in England until 1752, the legal year there before that date beginning on the 25th of March.

March, Earl of. Title held by various members of the Mortimer family.

March, 3rd Earl of. A title of Douglas, William.

March (märch). German name of the Morava, Czechoslovakia.

March (märch), Ausías (or Auzias). [Called the Petrarch of Catalonia.] b. at Valencia, Spain, toward the end of the 14th century; d. c1460. Spanish poet, of noble rank, seignior of Beniarjo and a member of the Cortes of Valencia in 1446. His verses are said to have been equal to those of Petrarch himself in brilliance of language and perfection of form, and perhaps to have surpassed Petrarch in honesty of emotion.

March, Basil. Character in Their Wedding Journey (1872) and A Hazard of New Fortunes (1890), An Open Eyed Conspiracy (1897), and Their Silver Wedding Journey (1899), novels by William Dean Howells. Basil's wife, Isabel, also figures in these works.

March, Francis Andrew. b. at Millbury, Mass., Oct. 25, 1825; d. at Easton, Pa., Sept. 9, 1911. American philologist. Among his works are Method of Philological Study of the English Language (1865), A Comparative Grammar of the Anglo-Saxon Language (1870), An Anglo-Saxon Reader (1871), and others. He was a pioneer in the philological study of the English classics and the historical study of the English language.

March, Francis Andrew. b. at Easton, Pa., March 2, 1863; d. Feb. 28, 1928. American lexicographer and etymologist; son of Francis Andrew March (1825–1911). He served on the etymological staff of The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia (1889–91), was editor of etymology for the Standard Dictionary (1893–95), and edited, with his father, A Thesaurus Dictionary of the English Language (1903). Author, with R. J. Beamish, of History of the World War (1918) and America's Part in the World War (1919).

March, Fredric. [Original name, Frederic McIntyre Bickel.] b. at Racine, Wisc., Aug. 31, 1897—. American actor; husband (married 1927) of Florence Eldridge. He made his stage debut in Deburau (1920), and has starred in The Law Breaker, The Melody Man, Shavings, The Royal Family, A Bell for Adano, The Skin of Our Teeth, Years Ago, and other plays. His film appearances include The Dummy, Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, Sign of the Cross, Design for Living, Death Takes a Holiday, The Barretts of Wimpole Street, The Buccaneer, Les Miserables, Anna Karenina, and The Best Years of Our Lives. He received Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences awards in 1932 and 1947.

March, Janet. See Janet March.

March, John. See John March, Southerner.

March, Peyton Conway. b. at Easton, Pa., Dec. 27, 1864—. American artillery officer who served (1918–21) as U.S. army chief of staff; son of Francis Andrew March (1825-1911). He was U.S. military attaché (1904) with the Japanese army during the Russo-Japanese War, and was artillery commander (1917) with the American Expeditionary Forces in France before returning to the U.S. as chief of staff. Author of The Nation at War (1932).

Marchand (mär.shäṅ'), Jean Baptiste. b. at Thoissey, Ain, France, Nov. 22, 1863; d. 1934. French officer and explorer. In 1889 he went to Africa and took part in expeditions to the sources of the Niger and elsewhere. He returned to France in 1892, with the rank of captain, and went again to Africa in 1893 and explored from the Ivory Coast to Tengrela (at what is now the border of French Sudan). In 1897 he was placed in command of an expedition which was to start from the coast of French Congo (now French Equatorial Africa), cross the continent, and gain the reaches of the upper Nile. He left Brazzaville (March 21, 1897) and reached Fashoda (July 10, 1898), after establishing a chain of posts in the Bahr-el-Ghazal province. His occupation of Fashoda was disputed by General Kitchener, who arrived (Sept. 19, 1898) at the head of an Anglo-Egyptian force and demanded its evacuation. The affair was referred to the respective governments for settlement, and a declaration was signed by which France agreed to withdraw from the Nile valley, and the frontiers of French and British possessions in Central Africa were defined. He took part in the campaign against the Boxer movement in China, was military observer (1904) at Russian headquarters during the Russo-Japanese War, and rose to command of a division on the Western Front during World War I.

Marchand, Jean Hippolyte. b. at Paris, Nov. 22, 1883; d. 1941. French painter, lithographer, and illustrator. Among his works, which are included in many important collections, are Still Life with Quinces, Notre-Dame de Paris, Nude, L'Île St. Louis, and illustrations for P. Claudel's The Way of the Cross, P. Valéry's The Graveyard by the Sea, and F. Jammes's Overture of Spring.

March and Ulster (märch; ul'stėr), 4th Earl of. See Mortimer, Roger de (1374–98).

Marchant (mär'chant), Sir James. b. Dec. 18, 1867—. English clergyman and reformer.

Marchant, Sir John Gaspard Le. See Le Marchant, Sir John Gaspard.

Marche (märsh). Region and former province of France. It was bounded by Berry on the N, Bourbonnais on the NE, Auvergne on the E, Limousin on the S, and Poitou on the W, and corresponds generally to the modern department of Creuse and part of Haute-Vienne. It became a county in the 10th century, and was united permanently to France in the middle of the 16th century. Capital, Guéret.

Marchena (mär.chā'nā). Town in S Spain, in the province of Sevilla, ab. 32 mi. E of Seville: center of stock-raising, particularly for the bull ring; woolen and pottery manufactures. The old town walls are preserved. There is a castle and the palace of the dukes of Arcos; the Gothic Church of San Juan dates from the 13th century. 19,859 (1940).

Marches (mär'chez). [Italian, Marche (mär'kā).] Compartimento (region) in C Italy, containing the provinces of Ancona, Ascoli Piceno, Macerata, and Pesaro e Urbino. It stretches between the Apennines in the W and the Adriatic Sea in the E and between Emilia-Romagna in the N and Abruzzi e Molise in the S. It is largely mountainous or hilly, produces grain, wine, and tobacco, and has small industries, fisheries, and seaside resorts. It consisted of a number of independent principalities in the Middle Ages but was finally incorporated into the Papal State. The population voted in favor of union with Italy in 1860. Area, ab. 3,744 sq. mi.; pop. 1,361,661 (1951).

Marchesi (mär.kā'zē), Pompeo. b. at Saltrio, near Milan, Italy, Aug. 7, 1789; d. at Milan, Feb. 7, 1858. Italian sculptor. His best-known work is The Good Mother (at Milan).

Marchesi, Salvatore. [Titles: Cavaliere de Castrone, Marchese della Rajata.] b. at Palermo, Sicily, Jan. 15, 1822; d. at Paris, Feb. 20, 1908. Italian composer and baritone; husband of Mathilde Marchesi de Castrone. He toured Europe with his wife. His works consist of songs. He and his wife maintained a famous school for voice at Paris. He was a translator into Italian of opera librettos.

Marchesi de Castrone (mär.kā'zē dā kās.trō'nā), Madame Mathilde. [Maiden name, Graumann; title, by marriage, Marquesa della Rajata.] b. at Frankfort on the Main, Germany, March 26, 1823; d. Nov. 18, 1913. German singer and teacher, wife of Salvatore Marchesi. She became well known as a concert singer, taught singing at the Vienna Conservatory (1854–61) and then at Paris, was professor at the Cologne Conservatorium (1865– and again at Vienna (1869–81), and finally settled at Paris, where she established the École Marchesi. Among her pupils were Melba, Calvé, Emma Eames, and others. She was the author of L'Art du chant and Marchesi and Music, and published a large number of vocal exercises.

Marchetti (mär.kät'tē), Filippo. b. at Bolognola, Italy, Feb. 26, 1831; d. Jan. 18, 1902. Italian operatic composer. His stage works include Gentile da Verano (1856), Ruy Blas (1869), Gustavo Wasa (1875), and Don Giovanni D'Austria (1880). He was the composer also of chamber, orchestral, vocal, and religious music.

Marchfeld (märch'felt). Low plain in NE Austria, in the provinces of Lower Austria and Vienna, extending E from Vienna to the Morava (March) River, N of the Danube. It is a fertile agricultural area, producing rye, potatoes, dairy products, vegetables, and sugar beets. Because of its strategic location the Marchfeld has been the scene of several historic battles, notably in 1278, when Ottocar II was defeated and slain by an army of Hungarians and Germans, and in 1809 when Napoleon won his great victory over the Austrians at Wagram. Area, ab. 350 sq. mi.

Marchi (mär'kē), Giuseppe Filippo Liberati. b. at Rome, c1735; d. at London, April 2, 1808. Italian painter and engraver. He went to England in 1752, and was later Sir Joshua Reynolds's chief assistant.

Marchiafava (mär.kyä.fä'vä), Ettore. b. at Rome. Jan. 3, 1847; d. in Italy, Oct. 22, 1935. Italian pathologist. He was the foremost Italian pathologist of his time, and was noted for his studies of the malarial parasite. He accurately described (with A. Celli, 1883) the causative agent of malaria, a protozoal plasmodium, and described (1911) a paroxysmal nocturnal hemoglobinuria (called Marchiafava-Micheli syndrome). He worked, with A. Celli, on meningitis cerebrospinalis and pneumonia.

Marchienne-au-Pont (mär.shyen.ō.pôn). Town in S central Belgium, in the province of Hainaut, on the Sambre River near Charleroi, ab. 30 mi. S of Brussels: industrial town with coal mines, blast furnaces, iron foundries, machine shops, and glass industries. 21,351 (1947).

Marching Men. Novel by Sherwood Anderson, published in 1917.

Marching On. Historical novel by James Boyd, published in 1927.

Marchioness, The. Little servant in the Old Curiosity Shop, by Charles Dickens; so nicknamed by Dick Swiveller.

Marchmont (märch'mənt), 1st Earl of. A title of Hume or Home, Sir Patrick.

Marchmont, 2nd Earl of. Title of Campbell, Alexander.

March of Treviso (trā.vē'zō), Count of the. See Bernard of Treviso.

March Ordinas (märch ôr.dē'näs), Juan. b. at Palma, Balearic Islands—. Spanish financier, industrialist, and banker, one of the richest men in modern Spain. The exact date, or even the year, of his birth is not available. He is known to have obtained wealth through the smuggling trade, and to have increased it through control of the Spanish tobacco monopoly. His fortunes made tremendous strides during World War I, when he allegedly supplied oil to German submarines. In 1932 he entered politics and was elected deputy in the republican chamber, but was soon accused of many crimes. He served 17 months in prison (from which he continued to run his business) before he escaped (allegedly through bribery). He worked against Azaña at Paris in 1934, but returned to Spain under parliamentary immunity. His money supported the monarchists as well as Generals Sanjurjo, Goded, and Franco. In 1939 his interests throughout the British Empire were so immense that he founded a special bank at London to handle them.

Marcianise (mär.chä.nē'zā). Town and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Campania, in the province of Caserta, N of Naples. It is an agriculutral commune. Pop. of commune, 21,571 (1936); of town, 17,757 (1936).

Marcianus (mär.shi.ā'nus, mär.si-) or Marcian (mär'shən). b. c391; d. 457. Emperor of the East (450–457). He was raised to the throne by Pulcheria, widow of the emperor Theodosius II, whom he married at her own request, and is represented as a wise and firm ruler. He refused to continue the tribute paid by his predecessor to Attila, saying to the Hun ambassador, "I have iron for Attila, but no gold." He resisted invasions of Syria and Egypt and quieted border troubles in Armenia. The Council of Chalcedon (451) was held during his reign.

Marcillac (mär.sē.yak), Prince of. Additional title of La Rochefoucauld, François, Duc de.

Marcinelle (mär.sē.nel). Town in S central Belgium, in the province of Hainaut, a suburb of Charleroi: coal mines, blast furnaces, iron foundries, and metalworking industries. 23,091 (1947).

Marcion (mär'shən, -si.ən). b. c110 A.D.; d. c165. Christian heretic of the 2nd century; son of a bishop of Sinope in Pontus. He founded an important sect (the Marcionites) in 144, and was the author of a recension of the Gospel of Luke and of the Epistles of Paul.

Marcionites (mär'shən.īts). Heretical Christian sect comprising the followers of Marcion, in existence until the 7th century or later. They held that there were three primal forces: the good God, first revealed by Jesus Christ; the evil matter, ruled by the Devil; and the Demiurge, the finite and imperfect God of the Jews. They rejected the Old Testament, denied the incarnation and resurrection, and admitted only a gospel akin to or altered from that of Saint Luke and ten of Saint Paul's epistles as inspired and authoritative. They repeated baptism thrice, excluded wine from the Eucharist, inculcated an extreme asceticism, and allowed women to minister.

Marcius (mär'shus), Ancus. See Ancus Marcius.

Marcius, Gnaeus (or Cnaeus) or Gaius (or Caius). See Coriolanus.

Marck (märk), Robert III de la. Original name of Fleuranges, Seigneur de.

Marck (märk), William de la. d. 1485. Historical character in Sir Walter Scott's novel Quentin Durward, nicknamed the "Wild Boar of Ardennes" on account of his resemblance to the animal both in looks and in disposition.

Marcke (märk), Émile van. b. at Sèvres, France, Aug. 20, 1827; d. at Hyères, France, 1891. French landscape and animal painter. Many of his works are in America.

Marcodurum (mär.kō.dū'rum). Ancient name of Düren.

Marcomanni (mär.kō.man'ī). Group of ancient Germanic tribes, a branch of the Suevi, first mentioned by Caesar as in the army of Ariovistus. They were in frequent conflict with the Romans down to the 4th century, when the name disappeared.

Marcomanni. Ancient Germanic people occupying the region north of the Danube in the 1st and 2nd centuries. Tacitus mentions them as being a threat to Rome, but they were finally defeated by Marcus Aurelius. They then moved into the territory of the Boii (a Celtic people), now Bohemia, and later into what is now Bavaria.

"Marco Millions" (mär'kō). Drama by Eugene O'Neill, published in 1927 and produced in 1928. The plot concerns the adventures of Marco Polo.

Marconi (mär.kō'nē), Marchese Guglielmo. b. at Bologna, Italy, April 25, 1874; d. at Rome, July 20, 1937. Italian electrician, noted as the perfector of a system of wireless telegraphy. He studied at Bologna, Florence, and Leghorn, and for short periods at Bedford and Rugby, England. His experiments, designed to investigate the propagation of telegraphic waves (which had been hypothesized by Maxwell and Crookes and experimented with by Heinrich Hertz, Oliver Lodge, Alexander Popov, and others), were begun in 1895. Before the end of the year he had, at Pontecchio, near Bologna, transmitted signals more than a mile. In England, he patented (1896) a system of telegraphy and gave demonstrations of its efficiency, reaching a distance of nine miles. In 1897, at La Spezia, Italy, he communicated with ships 12 miles off shore. In that year also he obtained backing from a company (later known as Marconi's Wireless Telegraph Company, Limited) formed to support his experiments. In 1898 he reported a regatta by wireless, and soon commercial telegraphy on a limited scale was being used in England. In 1898 also he bridged the English Channel by wireless. On Dec. 12, 1901, at St. John's, Newfoundland, Marconi succeeded in receiving the signal "S" (three dots) sent from Poldhu, Cornwall. The success of Marconi's experiments were in large part due to his refinements in transmitting methods: elevation of the aerial antenna, grounding of the circuit, and insulation of the vertical transmitting wire. He invented (1905) a directional antenna and developed (1912) the timed-spark system of generation of continuous waves. From 1916 to 1926 he worked on a system of beamed transmission of radio waves and in 1927 demonstrated multiplex (simultaneous) transmission of voice and code. His later experiments were conducted with short waves and with ultra-short waves as a method of transmitting over greater distances and with greater reliability than was possible in the area of the electromagnetic spectrum first used for radio. He was awarded (1909) the Nobel prize for physics with Karl Ferdinand Braun.

Marco Polo (mär'kō pō'lō). See Polo, Marco.

Marco Polo Bridge Incident. See Loukouchiao Incident.

Marcos (mär'kōs), Fray. See Niza, Marcos de.

Marcos Juárez (mär'kōs нwä'res). City in C Argentina, in Córdoba province. 9,556 (1947).

Marcosson (mär'kọ.sọn), Isaac Frederick. b. at Louisville, Ky., Sept. 13, 1877—. American journalist and author. He was a staff member of the Louisville Times (1894–1903), World's Work (1903–07), Saturday Evening Post (1907–10, 1913–36), and Munsey's Magazine (1910–13). Author of How to Invest Your Savings (1908), The Business of War (1917), Peace and Business (1919), Caravans of Commerce (1927), Turbulent Years (1938), Colonel Deeds, Industrial Builder (1947), and other books.

Marcou (mär.kö'), Jules. b. at Salins, France, April 20, 1824; d. at Cambridge, Mass., April 17, 1898. French geologist. He explored various points on Lake Superior with Louis Agassiz in 1848, and afterward many other parts of the U.S., both alone and with government expeditions. Among his works are Geological Map of the United States (1853) and Geology of North America (1858).

Marcoussis (mär.kö.sē), Louis Casimir Ladislas. [Original surname, Markus.] b. at Warsaw, Poland, Nov. 14, 1883; d. Oct. 24, 1941. Polish painter, engraver, and illustrator, one of the leading exponents of cubism. He studied (1901–03) at the Warsaw Academy, then went to Paris, where he was a pupil of J. Lefebvre. A list of his works includes Panel, People around a Table, Table in an Interior, Interior, 1928, Guitar and Bottle, Drop of Blood, Voyagers, The Balcony, and The Terrace.

Marcoux (mär.kö), Vanni. b. at Turin, Italy, June 12, 1879—. Operatic baritone. He was a member (1912 et seq.) of the Chicago Opera Company.

Marcq-en-Barœul (mär.käṅ.bä.rël). Town in N France, in the department of Nord, NE of Lille. It is in the metropolitan region of Lille and has textile industries. 22,271 (1946).

Marculf (mär'kulf), Saint. b. at Bayeux, France; d. c558. Frankish monk. He became known as a preacher, but later retired as a hermit and founded the monastery of Nanteuil, of which he was first abbot. His relics were transferred to Corbigny, where the French kings were accustomed to go on pilgrimage after their coronation at Reims. Having touched the relics of Marculf, they supposedly could cure scrofula (the "king's evil").

Marcus (mär'kus), Saint. See Saint Mark.

Marcus Andronicus (an.drọ.nī'kus). See Andronicus, Marcus.

Marcus Annaeus Lucanus (ạ.nē'us lö.kā'nus). Full Latin name of Lucan.

Marcus Annaeus Novatus (nọ.vā'tus). Original name of Gallio.

Marcus Antonius Gordianus (an.tō'ni.us gôr.di.ā'nus). Full name of Gordianus I, and of Gordianus II.

Marcus Antonius Pius Gordianus (pī'us gôr.di.ā'nus). Full name of Gordianus III.

Marcus Aurelius (mär'kus ô.rē'li.us, ô.rēl'yus). [Surnamed Antoninus; original name, Marcus Annius Verus.] b. at Rome, April 20, 121 A.D.; d. in Pannonia, March 17, 180. Roman emperor (161–180) and Stoic philosopher. He was the son of Annius Verus, and was a nephew of Antoninus Pius, by whom he was adopted in 138, and whom he succeeded as emperor in 161, with Lucius Verus, also an adopted son of Antoninus Pius, as his associate in the government. He was a pupil of the Stoic Cornelius Fronto, and is frequently called "the philosopher" on account of his devotion to philosophy and literature. In 162 Verus undertook an expedition against the Parthians, but soon abandoned himself to dissipation at Antiochia. His generals, however, stormed Artaxata, burned Seleucia and Ctesiphon, reconquered Mesopotamia, and enabled him to dictate terms of peace in 165. In 166 a war broke out with the Marcomanni and Quadi, which was continued with various fortunes during the rest of the reign of Aurelius. Verus died in 169, leaving his colleague sole emperor. In 175 the general Avidius Cassius organized a revolt in Syria, but was killed by his own officers in the same year. In 177, after Marcus Aurelius's return from the East, he instituted a persecution of the Christians, whom he consistently opposed. Aurelius died in Pannonia, either at Vindobona (Vienna) or at Sirmium, March 17, 180. He wrote a work in Greek, entitled The Meditations of Marcus Antoninus, one of the finest works of antiquity, expressing through moral precepts based on experience the philosophy of life that seeks moderation and tranquillity in all things. There is a bronze equestrian statue of Marcus Aurelius in the Piazza del Campidoglio, Rome, considered by many to be the finest extant piece of ancient bronze-work.

Marcus Aurelius, Column of. See Column of Marcus Aurelius.

Marcus Aurelius Antoninus (an.tō.nī'nus). See Marcus Aurelius; see also Caracalla; also Elagabalus.

Marcus Aurelius Claudius (klô'di.us). Full name of Claudius II.

Marcus Baker (bā'kėr), Mount. See under Chugach Mountains.

Marcus Cornelius Fronto (kôr.nēl'yus fron'tō). See Fronto, Marcus Cornelius.

Marcus Hook. [Former name, Marretie's Hoeck.] Industrial borough in SE Pennsylvania, in Delaware County, on the Delaware River: petroleum refineries, rayon and rayon-yarn factories, and manufactures of linoleum, bricks, and concrete. It was settled in the 1640's by Swedes. 3,843 (1950).

Marcus Island. [Japanese, Minami-tori Shima.] Low coral island in W North Pacific Ocean, ab. 1,180 mi. SE of Tokyo. It was discovered in 1896, and annexed by Japan in 1899. The island was fortified by the Japanese as a naval and air base, and was surrendered to the U.S. at the end of World War II. Length, ab. 1.6 mi.; area, ab. 1.2 sq. mi.

Marcy (mär'si), Mount. [Also, Tahawus.] Highest summit in New York, in Essex County, in the Adirondack Mountains ab. 45 mi. SW of Plattsburg. 5,344 ft.

Marcy, Randolph Barnes. b. at Greenwich, Mass., April 9, 1812; d. at Orange, N. J., Nov. 22, 1887. American general; father-in-law of General George B. McClellan. He was appointed chief of staff to General McClellan at the beginning of the Civil War in 1861, was commissioned a brigadier general of volunteers in the same year, and in 1868 was made inspector general of the U.S. army. He wrote Explorations of the Red River in 1852 (1853), The Prairie Traveller (1859), Thirty Years of Army Life on the Border (1866), and Border Reminiscences (1872).

Marcy, William Learned. b. at Sturbridge (now Southbridge), Mass., Dec. 12, 1786; d. at Ballston Spa, N.Y., July 4, 1857. American politician, jurist, and public official, author of the phrase "to the victor belong the spoils." He was graduated (1808) from Brown University and settled at Troy, N.Y., where he studied law and was admitted to the bar. He entered politics as a supporter of Thomas Jefferson and served in the army during the War of 1812. He was appointed (1816) as the first recorder of the city of Troy and was its vice-mayor during the periods 1816–18 and 1821–23. An associate of Martin Van Buren, he became a member of the political group known as the "Albany Regency." In 1821 he became adjutant general of New York state. He became (1823) state comptroller of New York, holding that post until 1829, when he was appointed associate justice of the state supreme court. He resigned (1831) from the bench and served (1831–32) in the U.S. Senate. It was during a Senate discussion of patronage that Marcy said he saw "nothing wrong in the rule that to the victor belong the spoils of the enemy." Elected (1832) Democratic governor of New York, he resigned from the Senate and served in the gubernatorial post until 1838. He was a member (1840–42) of the Mexican Claims Commission and became (1845) secretary of war in James K. Polk's cabinet. In 1853 he became secretary of state under President Franklin Pierce. Among the treaties negotiated during Marcy's administration of the department were the Gadsden Treaty with Mexico (1853), which added a large area to the southwestern U.S., the Reciprocity Treaty with Great Britain (1854), and 22 other treaties including those with the Netherlands, Denmark, Persia, Russia, Siam, Peru, and the Argentine Confederation. He bears a share of the responsibility for the notorious Ostend Manifesto (1854), issued by three of his ministers (Buchanan, Mason, and Soulé), outlining reasons why the U.S. should seize Cuba. He avoided (1854) trouble with Spain over Cuba in the affair of the U.S. cargo vessel Black Warrior. Marcy's most able document is the so-called Hülsemann letter, written to the Austrian representative in the U.S. over the Austrian arrest of Martin Koszta, a refugee of 1848 to the U.S., whose declaration of intention to become a citizen was held by Marcy to entitle him to the protection of the U.S. government.

Marczali (môr'tsô.lē), Henrik. [Original surname, Morgenstern.] b. at Marcali, Hungary, April 3, 1856; d. at Budapest, Hungary, 1940. Hungarian historian.

Mar del Plata (mär del plä'tä). City in E Argentina, in Buenos Aires province, on the Atlantic coast ab. 240 mi. S of the city of Buenos Aires. It is the chief seashore resort of Argentina, and also has a fishing port and numerous industries. 114,729 (1947).

Marden (mär'dẹn), Charles Carroll. b. at Baltimore, Dec. 21, 1867; d. May 11, 1932. American philologist, specialist in medieval Spanish literature. He was the first American professor (1905–17) of Spanish at the University of Michigan, and was named (1916) to the Emery L. Ford chair of Spanish at Princeton.

Marden, Orison Swett. [Called "Lucky" Marden.] b. near Thornton, N.H., 1850; d. March 10, 1924. American editor and author of inspirational essays. He was the founder (1897) and editor (1897–1912, 1918–24) of Success.

Mardian (mär'di.an). Attendant of Cleopatra, a character in Shakespeare's Antony and Cleopatra.

Mardi: and a Voyage Thither (mär'di). Allegorical romance by Herman Melville, published in 1849.

Mardi Gras (mär'di grä, French, mar.dē grä). Shrove Tuesday in New Orleans; the day before Ash Wednesday (the first day of Lent), celebrated with masquerading, revelry, floats, processions, and rowdy merrymaking.

Mardin (mär.dēn'). Il (province or vilayet) in SE Turkey, bordering on Syria, ab. 80 mi. W of the border with Iraq. Subsistence agriculture and herding are the chief occupations. The area is crossed by three important caravan trails and the railroad to Baghdad. Capital, Mardin; area, ab. 4,568 sq. mi.; pop. 269,080 (1950).

Mardin. Town in SE Turkey, capital of the il (province or vilayet) of Mardin, ab. 55 mi. SE of Diyarbakir, near the border of Syria; small trading center and important stopping place for caravans to Syria and Iraq. Pop. ab. 22,000.

Mardochai (mär.dō.kī, mär.dō.kā'ī). See Mordecai.

Mardonius (mär.dō'ni.us). Killed at the battle of Plataea, 479 B.C. Persian general; son of Gobryas and a sister of Darius. He married the daughter of Darius and sister of Xerxes. He commanded an unsuccessful expedition against Greece in 492, and was commander in Greece after the battle of Salamis (480). He was defeated and probably slain at the battle of Plataea. According to Ctesias he was wounded at Plataea, and, being afterward sent by Xerxes to plunder Delphi, was killed there by hailstones.

Marduk (mär'dŏk). [Also, Merodach.] In Babylonian mythology, chief god of the pantheon. During the supremacy of Babylonia his temple, Esagila ("the exalted house"), restored with great splendor by Nebuchadnezzar, became the national sanctuary of the empire. He also had an old and famous sanctuary at Sippar. Marduk is hero of the Akkadian Enuma Elish (Creation Epic). He was originally an agricultural god, and possibly a sun god, but in the Enuma Elish he is definitely a wind god. Marduk separated heaven and earth, and overcame the primeval dragon Tiamat, when she plotted the destruction of the gods (he did this by forcing a violent wind down her throat until she burst). The New Year's festival in Babylon yearly reënacted Marduk's victory over darkness and evil and the Enuma Elish was recited.

Marduk, Amel or Avel. See Evil Merodach.

Mare. Italian (mä'rā) and Latin (mā'rē) word for "sea": for entries not found immediately below see the distinguishing element of the name.

Mare (mār), Walter de la. See De la Mare, Walter (John).

Mare au Diable (mâr ō dyâbl), La. [Eng. trans., "The Devil's Pool."] Prose idyl by George Sand, published in 1846.

Maree (mą.rē'), Loch. Lake in NW Scotland, in the county of Ross and Cromarty. It drains NW to Loch Ewe. Length, ab. 13 mi.; greatest width, ab. 2 mi.

Mare Island (mār). Island in San Pablo Bay, W California, near San Francisco. It contains a U.S. navy yard.

Marek (mä'rek). [Former name, Dupnica, Dupnitsa.] Town in SW Bulgaria, in the department of Sofia, on the Struma River ab. 31 mi. SW of Sofia. It has hot springs, and is a marketing center for a fruit and tobacco growing district. 19,239 (1946).

Maremma (mä.rem'mä). Swampy region on the coast of Tuscany, Italy, extending from Orbetello to the mouth of the Cecina. Part of the area has now been reclaimed for agricultural development.

Marenco (mä.reng'kō), Carlo. b. at Cassolo, Piedmont, Italy, May 1, 1800; d. at Savona, Italy, Sept. 20, 1843. Italian tragic poet. Among his tragedies are Pia de' Tolomei, Corso Donati, and Arnaldo da Brescia.

Marengo (mą.reng'gō). City in N Illinois, in McHenry County, ab. 55 mi. NW of the center of Chicago. 2,726 (1950).

Marengo (mä.reng'gō). Village in Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Piedmont, in the province of Alessandria, ab. 3 mi. SE of Alessandria. It is celebrated for the battle of June 14, 1800, which completed Napoleon's campaign in northern Italy. There were really two battles: in the first the Austrian general Michael von Melas defeated Napoleon after seven hours' fighting; Desaix arrived with French reinforcements, and the battle was resumed at three in the afternoon, and was decided in favor of the French by Kellermann's cavalry. Besides Desaix (killed in the battle), Lannes was especially distinguished. The French numbered ab. 28,000; the Austrians, ab. 33,000. The result was the gaining of upper Italy.

Marennes (mą.ren). Town in W France, in the department of Charente-Maritime, on the Bay of Biscay opposite the Île d'Oléron, ab. 23 mi. S of La Rochelle. It is famous for its oysters. The Church of Saint-Pierre, built in the 14th century, has a beautiful Gothic bell tower, which was damaged in 1944 but has been restored. 3,806 (1946).

Marenzio (mä.ren'tsyō), Luca. b. at Coccaglia, between Brescia and Bergamo, Italy, c1560; d. at Rome, Aug. 22, 1599. Italian musician, best known for his books of madrigals.

Mareotis (mar.ē.ō'tis), Lake. [Modern Arabic name, Birket el Mariut (or Maryut).] In ancient geography, a lake in Lower Egypt, bordering the city of Alexandria on the SE. Area, ab. 100 sq. mi.

Maret (mą.re), Hugues Bernard. [Title, Duke of Bassano.] b. at Dijon, France, March 1, 1763; d. at Paris, May 13, 1839. French publicist, diplomat, and statesman. After the outbreak of the Revolution he established the Bulletin de l'Assemblée, which was united with the Moniteur. He was ambassador to England in 1792, and was sent as ambassador to Naples in 1793, but was arrested by the Austrians and imprisoned for nearly three years at Brünn (now Brno). He was a confidential agent of Napoleon, and conducted his official correspondence. In 1811 he became minister of foreign affairs. Exiled at the restoration, he returned and became a peer in 1831.

Mareth Line (mar'eth). Name given in World War II to the chief German line of defense in Tunisia. It was the scene of heavy fighting in February, 1943. Stretching for several miles below the city of Gabès at the base of the Tunisian peninsula, it withstood frontal attacks by the British Eighth Army, but wide flanking movements by New Zealand and Free French troops to the east made the German positions indefensible and the line was broken.

Maretzek (mä're.tsek), Max. b. at Brünn (now Brno), in Moravia, June 28, 1821; d. on Staten Island, N.Y., May 14, 1897. Operatic manager, conductor, and composer. He produced (1849–78) opera in North America. Author of Crotchets and Quavers and Sharps and Flats (1890).

Marey (mȧ.rā), Étienne Jules. b. 1830; d. 1904. French physiologist. He invented (1863) the sphygmograph and made notable studies in the action of poisons, motion in animals, animal heat, and the physiology of circulation and the heart.

Marfa (mär'fạ). City in W Texas, county seat of Presidio County, SE of El Paso: shipping point for cattle and mohair. It was established in 1884. Pop. 3,603 (1950).

Marfak (mär'fak). Name given to the two stars θ and μ Cassiopeiae, of the fourth and fifth magnitudes respectively, situated in the right elbow of Cassiopeia's reclining figure.

Marfik (mär'fik). Fourth-magnitude binary star λ Ophiuchi.

Margarelon (mär.ga.rel'ọn). Character in William Shakespeare's Troilus and Cressida; a bastard son of Priam, king of Troy. He appears also in John Lydgate's Book of Troy.

Margaret (mär'ga.rẹt), Saint. [Also, Saint Marina.] b. c255 A.D.; d. c275. Christian martyr. Daughter of a pagan priest, she was disowned by him on embracing Christianity and adopted by a pious woman near Antioch, whose flocks she tended. She had taken a vow of virginity, and resisted the approaches of the Roman prefect Olybrius, even after torture. He finally had her beheaded. She is patroness of pregnant women.

Margaret (of Denmark, Norway, and Sweden). b. 1353; d. aboard ship in Flensburg harbor, Oct. 28, 1412. Queen of Denmark (1387), Sweden (1388), and Norway (1388); daughter of Waldemar IV of Denmark. At the age of ten she married Haakon VI of Norway. Their son Olaf was proclaimed (1376) king of Denmark and, after Haakon's death (1380), of Norway, Margaret being regent for both kingdoms. Olaf died in 1387 and Margaret became queen of Denmark and Norway. With the aid of the disaffected nobles of Sweden, she became (1388) queen of that country, dethroning Albert of Mecklenburg, taking him prisoner in 1389, and causing his renunciation of the throne (1395). She resigned the three thrones in 1397 in favor of her grandnephew Eric VII of Denmark but retained real control. Through her efforts the Union of Kalmar, a union of the three nations, was concluded in 1397.

Margaret (of England). b. c1282; d. Feb. 14, 1318. Queen of England; second wife of Edward I, youngest daughter of Philip III and sister of Philip IV of France. At the peace of Monteuil in 1299 she was betrothed to Edward I of England, then a widower, and they were married at Canterbury Sept. 9, 1299. She was never crowned queen.

Margaret (of Scotland), Saint. b. between 1038 and 1057; d. at Edinburgh, Nov. 16, 1093. Queen of Scotland; daughter of Edward, son of Edmund Ironside. She married Malcolm III of Scotland about 1067, and used her influence as queen for ecclesiastical reform. She is held responsible for the heightened influence of English customs, as opposed to Celtic, that eventually led to Scottish orientation towards England and to union of the two kingdoms. Her influence was especially felt during the reigns of her sons, Edgar, Alexander I, and David I.

Margaret (of Scotland). b. at Windsor, Oct. 5, 1240; d. at Cupar Castle, Feb. 27, 1275. Queen of Scotland; eldest daughter and second child of Henry III of England and his queen, Eleanor of Provence. At the age of two she was betrothed to Alexander, son of Alexander II of Scotland, and afterward Alexander III. After the death of Alexander II they were married at York (Dec. 26, 1251).

Margaret (of Scotland). [Called the Maid of Norway.] b. in Norway, 1283; d. at sea, 1290. Queen of Scotland, daughter of Eric II of Norway, and granddaughter of Alexander III of Scotland whom she succeeded in 1286. Edward I of England arranged the betrothal of his son (afterward Edward II) to the Scottish queen, and she died, somewhat mysteriously, while on her way to meet him. Her death was followed by the contests of the families of Bruce and Baliol for the throne.

Margaret. In Shakespeare's comedy Much Ado About Nothing, a gentlewoman attending Hero.

Margaret. Novel by Sylvester Judd, published in 1845. It has been called "the New England classic."

Margaret Elmore (el'mōr). See Elmore, Margaret.

Margaret Flaherty (flä'ẹr.ti). See Flaherty, Margaret.

Margaret Fleming (flem'ing). Play (1890) by James A. Herne.

Margaret Goodenough Glacier (gůd'ẹn.ō). See Goodenough Glacier.

Margaret of Anjou (an'jö). b. probably at Pont-à-Mousson or Nancy, France, Mar. 23, 1430; d. at Dampierre, near Saumur, France, Aug. 25, 1482. Queen consort of Henry VI of England. She was the daughter of René I of Anjou and Isabella of Lorraine, and was married to Henry VI at Titchfield Abbey, April 22, 1445. The marriage was brought about by William de la Pole, Earl (afterward Duke) of Suffolk, in confirmation of a truce with France, and was extremely unpopular with the nation, which desired a continuance of the war (the Hundred Years' War). Margaret, after her marriage, supported the peace policy of Suffolk and afterward of the Duke of Somerset (Edmund Beaufort). In August, 1453, Henry was seized with his first attack of insanity, and in the following October the queen gave birth to her only son, Edward. A contest for the regency ensued between her and Richard, Duke of York (until the birth of Edward heir presumptive to the throne), who represented the popular party, and who was appointed protector of the realm in March, 1454. The protectorate came to an end with the king's recovery in January, 1455; but the birth of an heir apparent and the hostile attitude of the queen induced the Duke of York to take up arms in 1455, thereby inaugurating the series of wars between the houses of Lancaster and York known as the Wars of the Roses, which ended in the defeat and capture of Margaret and the death of her son at Tewkesbury, May 4, 1471, and in the death of her husband in the Tower of London, May 21, 1471. Margaret was liberated in 1475 on the renunciation of her claim to the throne and on the payment of a ransom by Louis XI of France, and returned to the Continent.

Margaret of Austria (ós'tri.ạ). b. at Ghent, Belgium, Jan. 10, 1480; d. at Mechlin, Belgium, Dec. 1, 1530. Regent of the Netherlands (1507–30); daughter of the emperor Maximilian I. She married the infante John of Spain in 1497, and Philibert II of Savoy in 1501. She was guardian (1507–15) of the future emperor Charles V. She negotiated the peace of Cambrai in 1529 with Louise of Savoy, mother of Francis I of France; the treaty is therefore sometimes called La Paix des Dames.

Margaret of Burgundy (bėr'gun.di). [Title, Duchess of Burgundy.] b. at Fotheringay Castle, Nottinghamshire, May 3, 1446; d. at Mechlin, 1503. Third daughter of Richard, duke of York, and sister of Edward IV. On July 3, 1468, she married the young Duke Charles the Bold of Burgundy at Damme. Caxton learned the new art of printing in her household.

Margaret of Navarre (nạ.vär'). [Also, Margaret or Marguerite of Valois (val'wä) or of Angoulême (ängg̈ō.lem') or of Alençon (ạ.len'sọn).] b. at Angoulême, France, April 11, 1492; d. in Bigorre, France, Sept. 21, 1549. Queen of Navarre; daughter of Charles d' Orléans, Duc d'Angoulême, and sister of Francis I of France. She married (1509) Charles d'Orléans, Duc d'Alençon, and later (1527) Henri d'Albret, King of Navarre. Through the second marriage she was grandmother of Henry IV of France (Henry of Navarre). After the death of the king in 1544, she assumed the direction of the government. For a time she was favorably disposed to Protestantism, but subsequently abandoned it. She is especially famous as a patroness of literature and as the author of the Heptameron, a collection of tales modeled on the Decameron and believed actually to have been written by members of the literary circle she gathered about her at her courts at Pau and Nérac. A number of her poems were published (1547) by Sylvius de la Haye under the title Marguerites des de la marguerite des princesses. Her letters were published in 1841–42.

Margaret of Parma (pär'mạ). [Also, Margaret of Austria.] b. 1522; d. at Ortona, Italy, 1586. Duchess of Parma; illegitimate daughter of the emperor Charles V.

She married in 1533 Alessandro de' Medici, Duke of Florence, who died in 1537. In 1542 she married Ottavio Farnese, Duke of Parma. She was regent of the Netherlands (1559-67) for Philip II of Spain. At first sympathetic to the nationalists, she turned against them when they resorted to violence. She resigned, however, when Alva, a harsh administrator, came to the Netherlands to suppress the movement.

Margaret of Savoy (sȧ.voi'). [Italian, Margherita di Savoia.] b. at Turin, Italy, Nov. 20, 1851; d. at Bordighera, Italy, Jan. 4, 1926. Queen of Italy; daughter of Ferdinand Savoia, Duke of Genoa. She married (April 22, 1868) her cousin, Prince Humbert, and became (Jan. 9, 1878) queen of Italy upon his ascent to the throne as Humbert I. In the first year of her marriage she foiled an attempt on her husband's life by throwing flowers in the assassin's face. Humbert's death (July 29, 1900) and their son's subsequent ascent to the throne as Victor Emmanuel III made her dowager queen.

Margaret of Scotland (skot'lạnd). b. c1425; d. at Châlons, France, Aug. 16, 1445. Scottish poet; eldest child of James I of Scotland, and wife of the Dauphin Louis (Louis XI), whom she married at Tours, June 25, 1436. She wrote rondeaux and considered herself a pupil of Alain Chartier.

Margaret of Valois (val'wä). [Also: Margaret of France; called Queen Margot, French, Reine Margot.] b. at St.-Germain-en-Laye, May 14, 1553; d. at Paris, March 27, 1615. Queen of France; daughter of Henry II and Catherine de Médicis. She married Henry of Navarre (later Henry IV of France) on Aug. 18, 1572. The marriage was the precursor of the massacre of St. Bartholomew, the number of prominent Protestant guests at the wedding serving as a signal. Henry fled from the court, and Margaret did not rejoin him until 1578. In 1582 she abandoned him, later rejoined him, and was divorced in 1599. In her last years she became a patroness of science and literature. Before, during, and after her marriage, the beautiful "Margot" was noted for her loose morals, but she remained always a friend of her husband, even after the dissolution of their marriage. Her Mémoires were published in 1628.

Margaret Tudor (tū'dọr). b. at Westminster, Nov. 29, 1489; d. at Methven Castle, Scotland, Oct. 18, 1541. Queen of James IV of Scotland; eldest daughter of Henry VII of England. She was married at Holyrood, Aug. 8, 1503. William Dunbar wrote a poem on the occasion, and was her constant attendant. Her fourth child (later James V) was born April 10, 1512. James IV was killed at Flodden, 1513. On Aug. 6, 1514, she married Archibald Douglas, 6th Earl of Angus, and on Oct. 8, 1515, gave birth to Margaret Douglas, later Countess of Lennox and mother of Henry Stewart, Lord Darnley. She was divorced March 11, 1527, and in March, 1528, acknowledged her marriage with Henry Stewart, created Lord Methven by James V. She shifted continually between the French and English parties, and back again, was in power and in disgrace several times, and to the end of her life continued her intrigues at her brother's court.

Margarita (mär.gä.rē'tä). Island in the Caribbean Sea, NE of Venezuela, to which it belongs. Pearl fishing is an important industry. It was discovered (1498) by Columbus. Chief city, Asunción; area, ab. 444 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 69,000.

Margate (mär'gạt). Municipal borough, fishing port, and seaside resort in SE England, in Kent, situated on the Isle of Thanet ab. 72 mi. SE of London by rail. It is a popular resort serving London. 42,487 (1951).

Margate City. City in S New Jersey, in Atlantic County; seashore resort, included in the urbanized area of Atlantic City. 4,715 (1950).

Margaux (mȧr.gō). Village in SW France, in the department of Gironde, on the Gironde River ab. 16 mi. NW of Bordeaux. The vicinity is noted for the production of a type of Bordeaux wine known as Margaux. 1,078 (1946).

Margelan (mär.gi.län'). [Also: Marghilan, Margilan; former name, Stary Margelan.] City in the U.S.S.R., in the Uzbek Soviet Socialist Republic, C Asia, ab. 6 mi. NW of Fergana. It is an important center of the silk textile industry, and also has cotton-textile and food-processing industries. 48,400 (1936).

Margerie (mär'jẹ.ri), Cape de. See de Margerie, Cape.

Marggrav (märk'gräf), Georg. [Latinized, Georgius Margravius.] b. at Liebstadt, Saxony, Germany, 1610; d. on the coast of Guinea, West Africa, 1644. German naturalist in Brazil.

Margherita di Savoia (mär.gā.rē'tä dē sä.vô'yä). Former name, Saline di Barletta.] Town and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Foggia, situated on the Gulf of Manfredonia, E of the Laguna di Salpi. It is a great center of sea-salt extraction. The district also exports vegetables to foreign markets. Pop. of commune, 10,644 (1936); of town, 10,406 (1936).

Marghilan or Margilan (mär.gi.län'). See Margelan.

Marghiloman (mär''gē.lō.män'), Alexandru. b. July 4, 1854; d. May 10, 1925. Rumanian politician, noted as an advocate of Rumanian neutrality during World War I. As prime minister (1918), he negotiated a separate peace (which was never ratified) with the Central Powers.

Margiana (mär.ji.ā'nạ). In ancient geography, a region in C Asia, corresponding to the S part of the present Turkmen Soviet Socialist Republic, just N of the NW border of Afghanistan.

Margites (mär.jī'tēz). [Eng. trans., "The Booby."] Greek comic poem with a fool and dandy for hero, probably written c700 B.C. Aristotle considered it the beginning of true comedy.

Margolies (mär.gō'lēz), M. S. b. at Kroza, Russia, in April, 1851; d. at Belmar, N.J., Aug. 25, 1936. American rabbi, long the dean of Orthodox Jewish rabbis in North America. He was the founder of the Central Relief Committee (merged into the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee), and president of Yeshiva College, New York.

Margolis (mär.gō'lis), Max Leopold. b. at Meretz, Vilna, Lithuania, 1866; d. at Philadelphia, 1932. Jewish philologist and historian. He was editor in chief (1908–17) of the English translation of the Hebrew Bible prepared by the Jewish Publication Society of America. Author of The Story of Bible Translations (1917), A History of the Jewish People (with Alexander Marx, 1927), and The Book of Joshua in Greek (5 parts, 1931 et seq.).

Marguerite Gautier (mȧr.gẹ.rēt gō.tyā). See Gautier, Marguerite.

Margueritte (mȧr.gẹ.rēt), Paul. b. at Laghout, Algeria, Feb. 1, 1860; d. Dec. 30, 1918. French novelist. Author of La Confession posthume (1886), La Tourmente (1893), Simple histoire (1895), and other works. He also collaborated with his brother Victor in La Parićtaire (1896), Poum (1897), and others. The reputation of his works, at one time high, did not survive him.

Margueritte, Victor. b. at Blidah, Algeria, 1866; d. at Monestier, France, March 23, 1942. French novelist; brother of and collaborator with Paul Margueritte. Author of Brins de Lilas (1883), Au fil de l'heure (1884), and best known for his sensational drama La Garçonne (1926).

Marguetel de Saint-Denis (mȧr.gẹ.tel dẹ saṅ.dẹ.nē), Charles de. See Saint-Evremond, Seigneur de.

Margulies (mär.gö'lēz), Joseph. b. at Vienna, July 7, 1896—. American portrait and landscape painter, lithographer, and etcher. Among his works are Portrait of Herbert Hoover, Rabbi Jonah Wise, Jo Davidson, Henrietta Szold, Luxembourg Gardens in Autumn, A Couple of the Slums, Indian Fish Peddler, Riviera Old Houses, Toward the Notre-Dame, and Peon of Taxco.

Margum (mär'gum). Ancient city in Moesia, situated at the junction of the Morava (ancient Margus) with the Danube. A battle was fought here in 285, in which the emperor Carinus, after gaining an advantage over Diocletian, was killed by a private enemy.

Margus (mär'gus). Latin name of the Morava River, Yugoslavia.

Marhattas (mạ.rä'tạz). See Mahrattas.

Marhaus (mär'hôs), Sir. See Morhault, Sir.

Marheineke (mär.hī'nẹ.kẹ), Philipp Konrad. b. at Hildesheim, Germany, May 1, 1780; d. at Berlin, May 31, 1846. German Protestant theologian and church historian. He was the author of Geschichte der deutschen Reformation (1816–34) and others.

Mar-heshvan (mär'hesh'van). See Heshvan.

Mari (mä'rē). [Also, Cheremiss.] A people of C Russia, living chiefly in the Mari Autonomous Republic of the U.S.S.R. Their language belongs to the Finno-Ugric family (Finnic branch).

Mari. [Also: Vamire, Wamari.] Subgroup of the Shona, a Bantu-speaking people of SE Africa. They inhabit SE Rhodesia.

Maria (mä.rē′ä), Princess. Said to be an illegitimate daughter of Robert of Anjou, King of Naples, beloved by Boccaccio and portrayed by him under the name Fiammetta.

Maria (mą.rī′ą, mą.rē′ą). In Shakespeare's comedy Love's Labour's Lost, a lady attending the Princess of France.

Maria. In Shakespeare's comedy Twelfth Night, Olivia's witty waiting-woman.

Maria. In Francis Beaumont and John Fletcher's comedy The Woman's Prize, or the Tamer Tamed, a sequel to Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew, the daughter of Petrovius and second wife of Petruchio, whom she subjugates by a series of witty and well-planned attacks, as completely as his first wife Katharina was tamed by him.

Maria. In Philip Massinger's Bashful Lover, the daughter of Octavio.

Maria. In Richard Brinsley Sheridan's The School for Scandal, a witty young girl who marries Charles Surface.

Maria (mä.rē′ä), Santa. See Santa Maria.

Maria Carolina (mä.rē′ä kä.rō.lē′nä). b. at Vienna, Aug. 13, 1752; d. at Schönbrunn, near Vienna, Sept. 8, 1814. Queen of Naples; daughter of Francis I of Germany and Maria Theresa, and wife of Ferdinand I of the Two Sicilies (Ferdinand IV of Naples). She caused John Acton's appointment as prime minister in 1784.

Maria Chapdelaine (mȧ.rē.ȧ shȧp.dę.len). Novel (1914; Eng. trans., 1921) by Louis Hémon (1880–1913), set against the background of the life of French Canadian woodsmen and farmers.

Maria Christina (mą.rē′ą kris.tē′ną). [Spanish, María Cristina (mä.rē′ä krēs.tē′nä).] b. at Naples, April 27, 1806; d. at Havre, France, Aug. 22, 1878. Queen of Spain; wife of Ferdinand VII. After persuading Ferdinand to set aside the Salic law, which action permitted Isabella to succeed him, she was regent for her daughter Isabella II (1833–40). She was forced to give up the regency at the end of the Carlist war. In 1843 she returned to Spain, but remained unpopular and had to relinquish control to Espartero in 1854.

Maria Christina. [Spanish, María Cristina.] b. at Gross-Seelowitz, Austria, July 21, 1858; d. at Paris, 1929. Queen of Spain (1879 et seq.). The daughter of Archduke Charles Ferdinand of Austria, she was married to Alfonso XII of Spain on Nov. 29, 1879, in a political union arranged by Antonio Cánovas del Castillo. Widowed on Nov. 25, 1885, she bore a son, the future Alfonso XIII, on May 17, 1886, and was made his regent. Her regency covered a period of severe political, social, and economic stress and change, following the disaster of the Spanish-American War. As a stranger in the land, she sought advice from monarchist and clerical advisors, rejecting liberals and democrats alike, and setting her son on the path of clericalism and conservatism. He took over the throne on May 17, 1902, at the age of 16.

Maria da Gloria (mą.rē′ą dą glô′ryą). [Also, Maria II (of Portugal).] b. at Rio de Janeiro, April 4, 1819; d. at Lisbon, Nov. 15, 1853. Queen of Portugal; daughter of Pedro I of Brazil. On the death of her paternal grandfather, John VI of Portugal, in 1826, her father resigned the Portuguese crown in her favor. Before she could assume the throne it was seized by her uncle, Don Miguel, in 1828, and a civil war ensued which resulted in her restoration in 1833. She was declared of age in 1834, and married Augustus, Duke of Leuchtenberg, in 1835, who died the same year, and in 1836 Duke Ferdinand of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha (Ferdinand II of Portugal).

Maria de Rohan (mä.rē′ä dä rō.än′). Opera by Gaetano Donizetti, first performed at Vienna on June 5, 1843.

Mariage de Figaro (mȧ.ryȧzh dę fē.gȧ.rō), Le. [Full title, Le Mariage de Figaro, ou La Folle Journée à la Mode.] Comedy by Beaumarchais, produced in 1784. It is the continuation of the Barbier de Séville. In 1793 it was arranged to Mozart's music.

Mariage de Loti (mȧ.ryȧzh dę lo.tē), Le. Novel by Pierre Loti (L. M. J. Viaud), published in 1880.

Mariage Forcé (mȧ.ryȧzh fôr.sā), Le. Comedy ballet by Molière, acted (1664) at the Louvre. Louis XIV appeared in it as a gypsy, and the play was hence called the Ballet du roi.

Maria gens (mā′ri.ą). Roman plebeian gens. Its most celebrated member was Gaius Marius.

Mariage secret (mȧ.ryȧzh sę.kre), Le. French title of Matrimonio segreto, Il.

Maria Isabella Louisa (mą.rē′ą iz.ą.bel′ą lö.ē′zą). Full name of Isabella II (of Spain).

Mariamma (mār.i.am′ą). [Also, Mariamman (-am′ąn).] In Hindu folklore, a disease goddess, regarded especially as a bringer of smallpox and cholera to villages. She is propitiated with sacrifices of animals and human effigies. Her name is different in different villages, usually some variation of the original, such as Maramma, Mari Mata, and others.

Mariamne (mār.i.am′nē). Sister of Herod Agrippa II.

Mariamne. fl. c40 B.C.–c30 B.C. In Jewish history, granddaughter of Hyrcanus II, daughter of Alexandra, and wife of Herod I, executed by Herod in a savage fit of jealousy. She became famous in history by her beauty, noble character, and tragic fate.

Mariamne. fl. c20 B.C. Daughter of the priest Simon, and one of the wives of Herod I, who raised her father to the high-priesthood.

Mariamne. Tragedy by Alexandre Hardy, produced in 1610.

Mariamne. Tragedy (1637) by Tristan l'Hermite.

Mariamne. Tragedy (1723) by Elijah Fenton.

Mariamne. Tragedy (1724) by Voltaire.

Mariana (mār.i.an′ą). In American colonial history, the name given by John Mason to the territory granted to him between the Salem River and the Merrimack.

Mariana (mą.ryu′ną). [Also: Marianna; former name, Ribeirão do Carmo.] City in SE Brazil, in the state of Minas Gerais: gold and diamond mines; seat of an archbishop. 4,444 (1950).

Mariana (mār.i.an′ą). In Shakespeare's All's Well that Ends Well, a Florentine girl.

Mariana. In Shakespeare's Measure for Measure, a lady betrothed to Angelo. It was in allusion to her that Tennyson wrote his Mariana in the Moated Grange and Mariana in the South.

Mariana. Principal character in J. Sheridan Knowles's play The Wife, a faithful and constant wife entangled in a mesh of circumstantial evidence.

Mariana (mä.ryä′nä), Juan de. b. at Talavera, Spain, 1536; d. 1623. Spanish historian. His chief work is a History of Spain (published in Latin, 1592–1605; in Spanish, 1601).

Marianao (mä.ryä.nä′ō). City in NW Cuba, in Habana province: SW suburb of the city of Havana. 120,163 (1943).

Marianas (mār.i.an′ąz, mä.rē.ä′näz). [Also, Marianas Islands, Mariana Islands; former name, Ladrones or Ladrone Islands.] Island group of W Pacific Ocean, ab. 1,600 mi. E of the Philippine Islands. The volcanic island chain extends in a N-S direction ab. 600 mi., with Guam at the S end. The principal islands from N to S are Agrihan, Pagan, Antahan, Saipan, Tinian, Rota, and Guam. The last four are the chief inhabited islands of the group. Most of the islands are mountainous, especially in the N where recent volcanic activity has occurred. The S islands are of older volcanic materials, and are fertile and humid; the climate is tropical with an annual rainfall of ab. 80 inches, and a short dry season in winter. Sugar cane, vegetables, and coconuts are the chief crops. The islands were discovered by Magellan in 1521 and belonged to Spain until 1899, when Guam was ceded to the U.S. and the remaining islands were sold to Germany. In 1919 the German islands passed to Japan as a mandated territory, and active colonization and development followed. By 1939 there were 43,555 Japanese in the Marianas. In December, 1941, Guam was taken by Japanese forces, and the islands remained in Japanese possession until invaded by U.S. forces in June, 1944. The islands of Guam, Saipan, and Tinian were occupied; the others were by-passed. In 1945 these islands had been developed into major military bases for the assault on Japan. After the end of World War II Guam reverted to its status as a U.S. possession, and the other islands passed under the administration of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands. The large Japanese population was repatriated.

The population of the islands is mixed, consisting largely of Micronesians (the Chamorros), intermixed with various European and Asiatic strains. Originally called the Ladrones ("islands of thieves"), the Marianas were renamed in 1668 by the Spanish in honor of Maria Anna of Hapsburg, the widow of King Philip IV of Spain. The numbers of the native population were drastically reduced during the 18th century by warfare with the Spanish, emigration, and epidemics. Area, ab. 370 sq. mi.; pop. of N Marianas, 5,636 (1948); of Guam, 59,498 (1950); total, 65,134 (1948/50).

Marianna (mär.i.an'ą). City in E Arkansas, county seat of Lee County. 4,530 (1950).

Marianna. City in NW Florida, county seat of Jackson County. Florida Caverns State Park is nearby. 5,845 (1950).

Marianne (mȧr.yȧn), La. French republican secret society which was formed to overturn the government instituted by the coup d'état of 1851. It received orders from the society in London of which Ledru-Rollin and Mazzini, in exile there, were members. One of its passwords was "Connaissez-vous Marianne?" and the answer was "De la montagne." In 1854 the government arrested many members of the society.

Marianne Dashwood (mär.i.an' dash'wůd). See Dashwood, Elinor and Marianne.

Marianne, ou les Aventures de la Comtesse de Marianne (mȧ.ryȧn ö lȧ.zȧ.vän.tür dę lȧ kôn.tes dę mȧ.ryȧn). Novel by Pierre de Marivaux, published (1731–41) in 11 volumes. It has been said by some to be the origin of Richardson's Pamela.

Mariánské Lázně (mä'ryän.ske läz'nye). [German, Marienbad.] Town and spa in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Karlovy Vary, in NW Bohemia, ab. 75 mi. W of Prague. It is a famous resort, situated in forested hills. It was founded in 1808 and granted a municipal charter in 1868. Among its famed guests were the German poet Goethe, who stayed here in 1824, and Edward VII of England, who visited the spa each autumn for ten years. 8,417 (1947).

Marias (mą.rī'ąs). River in N Montana, flowing generally E and S from headstreams in the Rocky Mountains to join the Missouri ab. 10 mi. NE of Fort Benton. Length, to headwaters, ab. 250 mi.

Marías (mä.rē'äs), Tres (or Las Tres). See Tres Marías.

Maria Sophia Amalia (mä.rē'ä zō.fē'ä ä.mä'lē.ä). b. in Bavaria, April 10, 1841; d. at Munich, Jan. 18, 1925 Bavarian duchess; wife (1859 et seq.) of Francis II, last king of the Two Sicilies. Upon the ascent to the throne of Francis in the year of their marriage, she shared his cause and favored (1860–61) defending the kingdom against Garibaldi. Upon the uniting of Italy she and her husband retired to Rome and later Paris. After being widowed (1894) she still hoped to influence socialists and anarchists to reclaim her throne.

Maria Stuarda (mä.rē'ä stö.är'dä). Opera by Saverio Mercadante, first produced at Bologna in 1821.

Maria Stuart (mä.rē'ä stö'ärt). Tragedy by Schiller, based on the story of Mary, Queen of Scots, published in 1801.

Maria Theresa (mą.rē'ą, -rī'-, tę.rē'są, -zą). [German, Maria Theresia (mä.rē'ä tä.rä'zyä).] b. at Vienna, May 13, 1717; d. at Vienna, Nov. 29, 1780. Archduchess of Austria and queen of Hungary and Bohemia; daughter of the emperor Charles VI. She married Francis of Lorraine (later Francis I of the Holy Roman Empire) in 1736, and on the death of her father in 1740 succeeded to the hereditary possessions of the house of Austria by virtue of the pragmatic sanction. Her title being disputed, she became involved (1740–48) in the War of the Austrian Succession, which, with the exception of some unimportant cessions, including that of Silesia to Prussia, left her in the possession of her inheritance. Her husband was elected emperor in 1745. Her desire to recover Silesia led to the Seven Years' War (1756–63), which, however, ended in a confirmation of the cession. She made her son Joseph II coregent in 1765; her other children included Leopold II of the Holy Roman Empire and Marie Antoinette of France.

Maria Theresa. See also Marie Thérèse.

Maria-Theresiopel (mä.rē'ä.tä.rä.zē.ō'pęl). German name of Subotica, Yugoslavia.

Mari Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic (mä'rē). Republic of the U.S.S.R., in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, centered ab. 400 mi. E of Moscow, N of the Volga River. The area is flat to gently rolling and crops of flax, barley, rye, potatoes, and oats are raised. Much of the land is covered with forests, and wood products play a major part in the economy. The republic was founded on Dec. 5, 1936. Capital, Ioshkar-Ola; area, ab. 8,994 sq. mi.; pop. 579,466 (1939).

Mariazell (mä.rē.ä.tsel'). Market village in E Austria, in Styria province, situated in a valley ab. 57 mi. SW of Vienna. It is the most famous pilgrimage shrine in Austria because of the reputedly miraculous image of the Holy Virgin contained in the Gnadenkirche (Grace Church). The church dates partly from the 14th, partly from the 17th century. 2,533 (1946).

Marib (mar'ib). Town in SW Arabia, in Yemen, ab. 60 mi. E of Sana. It was the capital of the ancient kingdom of Sheba. Its noted irrigation dam was destroyed by marauding Arabs in the 6th century A.D.

Maribio (mą.rib'i.ō). Collective term for several tribes or groups of Indians which migrated southward from the Mexican area some time before the Spanish conquest, and were located in W Nicaragua in historic times. Their language, Subtiaba, shows affiliation with the languages of NE Mexico and Baja California, and especially with Tlapanec on the Pacific coast of Guerrero, Mexico.

Maribo (mä'rē.bō). Amt (county) of Denmark, S of Zealand and comprising Lolland and Falster islands. Capital, Maribo; are, ab. 693 sq. mi.; pop. 132,110 (1945).

Maribor (mä'rē.bôr). [German, Marburg; Italian, Marburgo.] City in NW Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Slovenia, formerly in the banovina (province) of Dravska, situated on the Drava River on a fertile plain NE of Ljubljana. It has a Gothic cathedral dating from the 12th century, with additions dating from the 15th and 17th centuries. The city is surrounded by vineyards and is a center of the wine and lumber trades. It has food industries (canning and flour milling), and leather and machine industries. It is a traffic junction connecting Austria, Italy, Croatia, and Hungary. From 1148 to 1918 the city belonged to Styria (the Austrian crownland of Steiermark), and was an outpost of German speech and culture on the linguistic frontier between the Germans and the southern Slavs in Austria. The German population declined sharply after 1918; a renewal of German influence took place during World War II but waned after the conclusion of the war. 33,131 (1931), 66,498 (1948).

Marica (mä.rē'tsä). See Maritsa.

Maricourt (mȧ.rē.kör), Sieur de. See Le Moyne, Paul.

Maridunum (mar.i.dū'num). Latin name of Carmarthen.

Marie (of Rumania) (mą.rē'). [Full title, Princess Marie Alexandra Victoria of Saxe-Coburg.] b. in Kent, England, Oct. 29, 1875; d. at Sinaia, Rumania, July 18, 1938. Queen of Rumania (1914–27) and dowager queen after 1927; granddaughter of Queen Victoria of England and of Czar Alexander III of Russia. She married (1893) Prince Ferdinand (later king of Rumania). She was widely known abroad for her interest in public affairs, especially in her relief activities during World War I. She visited the U.S. in 1926. After the death of her husband and the accession of her grandson Michael, she lived in retirement. Author of My Country (1916), The Story of My Life (1934–35), and other books in English.

Marie (mȧ.rē), André. b. at Honfleur, Calvados, France, Dec. 3, 1897—. French political leader and lawyer. A leader of the Radical-Socialist Party, he was a deputy (1928–40). He introduced (1936) the law establishing vacations with pay. He was active (1941–43) in the Resistance before being deported (1943) to Germany. After the liberation of France, he was a deputy (1945 et seq.) to both Constituent Assemblies and to the National Assembly, minister of justice (January, 1947–July, 1948; September, 1948–February, 1949), minister of education (1951 et seq.), and premier (July–August, 1948).

Marie, Jean. b. at Honfleur, Calvados, France, 1891—. French merchant-marine executive and naval engineer. He served (1939–40) as president of the Compagnie Générale Transatlantique (French Line), returning to this post (December, 1944) after the liberation of France.

Marie, Pierre. b. at Paris, Sept. 9, 1853; d. at Pradet, on the Côte d'Azur, France, April 13, 1940. French neurologist. He described the symptoms of exophthalmic goiter and, together with J. M. Charcot in 1886, the peroneal type of progressive muscular atrophy (the so-called Charcot-Marie-Tooth disease). He wrote on acromegaly (1886), recognized (1890) hypertrophic pulmonary osteoarthropathy and the hereditary cerebellar ataxia (1893), and recognized (1898) a type of spinal arthritis deformans, named after Marie and A. von Strümpell. In his studies on aphasia he stated that Broca's area in the third frontal lobe apparently played no role in speech defects.

Marie Adélaïde Thérèse Hilda Antoinette Wilhelmina (mȧ.rē' ȧ.dā.lȧ.ēd' tā.rez' hil'dȧ äṅ.twȧ.net' vil.helmē'nȧ). b. 1894; d. 1924. Grand duchess of Luxembourg. Her grandfather, Adolphus of Nassau, became grand duke in 1890 when King William III of the Netherlands, ruler of the duchy, died without a male heir. Marie Adélaïde succeeded her father, second of this line, in 1912, having been declared her father's successor in 1907. She was on the throne when the grand duchy was invaded by the Germans in 1914 and protested the violation of her country. Because of ill health she abdicated (1919) in favor of her sister, the Grand Duchess Charlotte.

Marie Amélie de Bourbon (mȧ.rē ȧ.mā.lē dẹ bör.bôṅ). b. at Caserta, Italy, April 26, 1782; d. at Claremont, near Windsor, England, March 24, 1866. Queen consort of Louis Philippe of France. She was the daughter of Ferdinand I, King of the Two Sicilies, and married Louis Philippe, Duke of Orléans, who was chosen king of the French in 1830. She retired with her husband to England on his deposition in 1848.

Marie Antoinette (mą.rē' an.tọ.net', -twọ-; French, mȧ.rē äṅ.twȧ.net). [Full name, Josèphe Jeanne Marie Antoinette; derogatory name, l'Autrichienne.] b. at Vienna, Nov. 2, 1755; d. at Paris, Oct. 16, 1793. Queen of France; daughter of the emperor Francis I and Maria Theresa. She married the Dauphin of France (afterward Louis XVI) in 1770. The marriage made her the center of intrigue revolving about the Austrian alliance and brought her many enemies, especially Madame Du Barry. The young princess did little to smooth over these rough spots, and actually made matters worse after Louis ascended (1774) the throne by mixing in politics. In addition, she was extravagant in her tastes and one of a dissolute group at court who continued their ostentatious roistering even during the period of mourning for Louis XV. The result was a series of attacks on her, beginning as early as six months after she became queen. Her favoritism to friends, her wasteful spending, her gratuitous mixing in politics, and her scandalous conduct at public affairs helped drag down still further her reputation; these activities, contrasted with the growing misery of the poorer classes throughout the country, brought her to the low esteem reflected by the famous apocryphal anecdote: Hearing that the people were crying for bread, and that there was none, or none that they could afford, the flighty queen is reputed to have said, "Then, let them eat cake." She became the focus of all discontent with the régime, the more so since her interference in affairs of state was completely arbitrary and dictated by her personal interests rather than by the needs of the actual situation. She strongly opposed the calling of the States General in 1789, foreseeing the trouble that lay ahead. After the fall of the Bastille in July, 1789, and the storming of Versailles in October, she lived with the royal family at the Tuileries. She intrigued with friends outside the country and helped plan the flight of the family from Paris (June 21, 1791). The fugitives were captured at Varennes and returned to Paris, but despite the close surveillance they now were subject to, the queen was able to correspond regularly with her brother, Leopold II, in Austria. A result of this was the declaration of war between France and Austria (April 20, 1792). Marie Antoinette now began actively to intrigue for the fall of the French revolutionary government, disclosing plans to the enemies of the French and carrying on attempts to rouse the French royalists to action. The Paris mob stormed the Tuileries (June and August, 1792) and the royal family was removed for protection to the Temple. After the execution of Louis XVI (January, 1793), frantic efforts were made to save the queen: attempts at rescue, negotiations for her ransom or exchange, and the like. But she was brought to trial (Oct. 14, 1793) for treason, on the ground of aiding the enemy and attempting to foment civil war. The evidence was clear and she was found guilty in a unanimous verdict; on Oct. 16, 1793, the "Widow Capet" was guillotined.

Marie Antoinette and her Children. Portrait by Madame Vigée-Lebrun, in the palace of Versailles.

Marie-Bernard (mȧ.rē.ber.nȧr), Sister. See Saint Bernadette.

Marie Byrd Land (mą.rē' bėrd). Part of the continent of Antarctica E of the Ross Sea and Ross Shelf Ice and S of the Pacific Ocean. It was named in 1929 by Admiral Richard E. Byrd in honor of his wife.

Marie-Claire (mȧ.rē.kler). Semiautobiographical story, written by Marguerite Audoux, a Paris seamstress. In it she describes life in a convent school and on a farm. It was published, through the efforts of Octave Mirbeau, at first serially and later in book form in 1910.

Marie de Bourgogne (mȧ.rē dẹ bör.gôny'). French name of Mary of Burgundy.

Marie de France (mȧ.rē dẹ fräṅs). fl. probably in the latter part of the 12th century. French poetess. She was born in France, but lived in England. Her works include narrative poems (Lais), drawn to a great extent from Celtic tales, a collection of fables (Ysopet), and a poem on the purgatory of Saint Patrick.

Marie de l'Incarnation (dẹ lȧṅ.kȧr.nȧ.syôṅ). [Secular name, Marie Guyard.] b. at Tours, France, Oct. 28, 1599; d. at Quebec, Canada, April 30, 1672. French missionary. Married to a silk manufacturer, she bore a son and was widowed after two years. When her son was 12 she entered the Ursuline convent at Tours, became novice mistress, and in 1639 sailed for New France (Canada), where she founded an Ursuline monastery and taught young Indians.

Marie de Médicis (mȧ.rē dẹ mā.dē.sēs). [Italian, Maria de' Medici (mā.rē'ȧ dā mā'dē.chē).] b. at Florence, April 26, 1573; d. at Cologne, July 3, 1642. Queen consort of Henry IV of France. She was the daughter of Francis of Tuscany, and married Henry IV in 1600 after his divorce from Margaret of Valois. She was regent of France (1610–17) for her son Louis XIII, but her rule by favoritism led to civil conflict, and after a period when she was out of power (1617–22) and then in (1622–30), she was exiled by Richelieu in 1631. She spent the last eleven years of her life intriguing against Richelieu.

Marie de Médicis, Life of. Series of 21 large paintings by Rubens, executed for the Luxembourg Palace, and now in the Louvre, Paris. The first painting shows the Fates spinning out the destiny of the future queen, and the series proceeds with her birth, her youth, her marriage to Henry IV, the king's death and the queen's regency, the assumption of power by Louis XIII, and his quarrel and reconciliation with his mother. The subjects are treated allegorically, with plentiful introduction of mythology.

Marie Galante (mȧ.rē gȧ.lȧṅt). Island of the Lesser Antilles, a part of the French overseas department of Guadeloupe, situated ab. 16 mi. SE of the island of Guadeloupe. It is a limestone island. Sugar cane is the principal commercial crop. The island was discovered by Columbus in 1493. Area, ab. 58 sq. mi.; pop. 29,349 (1946).

Marie Louis (mȧ.rē lwē), Baron and Comte de Ferrand. See Ferrand, Marie Louis, Baron and Comte de.

Marie Louise (mą.rē' lō.ēz'; French, mȧ.rē lwēz). [German, Maria Luisa (mȧ.rē'ȧ lo.ē'zȧ').] b. at Vienna, Dec. 12, 1791; d. there, Dec. 18, 1847. Empress of the French. She was the daughter of Francis I of Austria, and became the second wife of Napoleon in 1810. She left France on the overthrow of her husband in 1814, and was appointed by the Congress of Vienna ruler of the duchies of Parma, Piacenza, and Guastalla. She freed herself completely from all ties with Napoleon but one, their son Napoleon II. She contracted a morganatic marriage with Count Neipperg, her chamberlain, in 1821, and after his death in 1829, married (1833) Count Bombelles.

Mariemont (mą'rē.mont). Town in SW Ohio, in Hamilton County; suburb of Cincinnati. 3,514 (1950).

Marien (mä.rē.en′). Region on the N coast of the island of Hispaniola: so named when Columbus first visited the island. It was governed by Guacanagari.

Marienbad (mä.rē′ən.bät). German name of Mariánské Lázně.

Marienberg (mä.rē′ən.berk). Town in E Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony, Russian Zone, ab. 38 mi. SW of Dresden. It has metalworking, lumber, and textile manufactures. Pop. 8,281 (1946).

Marienburg (mä.rē′ən.bůrk). German name of Malbork.

Marienthal (mä.rē′ən.täl). Former name of Mergentheim.

Marienwerder (mä.rē′ən.ver.dėr). German name of Kwidzyń.

Marie Thérèse (mȧ.rē tā.rez). [Also, Maria Theresa (mą.rē′ą tę.rē′są).] b. at Madrid, Sept. 10, 1638; d. at Versailles, France, July 30, 1683. Queen consort of Louis XIV of France. She was the daughter of Philip IV of Spain, and married Louis XIV in 1660 after giving up all claim to the Spanish throne. The marriage was not happy; the king neglected her for his mistresses, one of whom, Madame de Maintenon, became the queen's good friend. Her only surviving child was the Dauphin Louis (d.1711). She is frequently called Maria Theresa of Austria (i.e., of the house of Austria or Hapsburg.)

Mariéton (mȧ.ryā.tôṅ), Paul. b. at Lyons, France, Oct. 14, 1862; d. at Nice, France, Dec. 25, 1911. French writer, associated with the Provençal regionalist movement. Author of collections of poems including Viole d'Amour (1886), Hellas (1888), and Le Livre de mélancholie (1896), as well as of studies of his fellow regionalists.

Marietta (măr.i.et′ą). City in NW Georgia, county seat of Cobb County, ab. 16 mi. NW of Atlanta. It has aircraft, furniture, hosiery, and woodworking industries. It is the site of a national cemetery. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses the city's population more than doubled. 8,667 (1940), 20,687 (1950).

Marietta. City in SE Ohio, county seat of Washington County, at the confluence of the Muskingum and Ohio rivers, ab. 94 mi. SE of Columbus, in a petroleum and natural-gas producing area. Manufactures include furniture, paints, steel safes, gasoline, lubricating oils, and concrete products. Founded in 1788 (on the site of prehistoric mounds), it is the oldest town in Ohio. It was formerly a very important river port. It is the seat of Marietta College. 16,006 (1950).

Mariette (mȧ.ryet), Auguste Édouard. b. at Boulogne, France, Feb. 11, 1821; d. at Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 18, 1881. French Egyptologist, noted for his discoveries in Egypt, beginning with the excavation of the Serapeum and the Apis bulls in 1850. Among his excavations were those at Sakkara, Memphis, Abydos, Thebes, Dendera, Edfu, Karnak, and Deir-el-Bahri. He cleared the sand from around the base of the Great Sphinx. He founded the Egyptian Museum (now at Cairo), the French school of Egyptology, and the Egyptian Institute.

Marigliano (mä.rē.lyä′nō). Town and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Campania, in the province of Napoli, situated N of Mount Vesuvius, between Naples and Nola Pop. of commune, 15,444 (1936); of town, 6,997 (1936).

Marignac (mȧ.rē.nyȧk), Jean Charles Gallissard de. b. at Geneva, Switzerland, April 24, 1817; d. there, April 16, 1894. Swiss chemist. He was particularly notable for his determination of atomic weights and for his study of the rare-earth elements.

Marignano (mä.rē.nyä′nō). Former name of Melegnano.

Marignolli (mä.rē.nyōl′lē), Giovanni de'. fl. c1338–c1357. Italian traveler in China. He was sent by Pope Benedict XII on a mission to the khan of Cathay (or China) in 1338, resided several years at Peiping, and returned to the papal court at Avignon in 1353. He became chaplain to the emperor Charles IV in 1354, and was afterward appointed bishop of Bisignano. He incorporated notes of his travels in a chronicle of Bohemia which he compiled by order of the emperor.

Marigold (mar′i.gōld), Doctor. See Doctor Marigold.

Mariguana (mar.i.gwä′ną). See Mayaguana.

Marihueno (mä.rē.wä′nō) or Marigueno (-gä′nō). Rocky hill on the coast of Chile, just N of Arauco. The coast road passes along its side. This hill was a favorite stronghold of the Araucanian Indians, and on or near it many of the bloodiest battles of the Araucanian war were fought, especially in 1554, 1563, and 1568.

Mariinsk (mä.rē′insk). [Also, Marinsk.] Town in the U.S.S.R., in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, on the Trans-Siberian Railroad, ab. 120 mi. E of Tomsk. It has sawmills and food-processing industries Pop. 21,000 (1936).

Mariinsk System. Waterway system in NW U.S.S.R., linking Leningrad with the Volga by a series of canals, canalized rivers, and rivers. It was originally built in 1808, but has been improved and modernized in recent years. Over 10 million tons of river freight moved on the waterway in 1936, chiefly in the direction of Leningrad; the principal item was construction materials for the city, but petroleum, grain, and other products were also important. Total length, ab. 706 mi., including ab. 192 mi. of canals.

Marília (mą.rē′lyą). City in S Brazil, in the state of São Paulo. 36,306 (1950).

Marília de Dirceu (dę dēr.sā′ō). Book of lyric poems by Tomaz Antônio Gonzaga (1744–1807), a Portuguese-born poet who lived in Brazil until 1791, when he was sent into exile in Africa. First published in 1792, it has had over 35 editions both in Portugal and Brazil.

Marín (mä.rēn′), Francisco Rodríguez. See Rodríguez Marín, Francisco.

Marin (mä′rin), John. b. at Rutherford, N.J., Dec. 23, 1872; d. at Cape Split, Me., Oct. 1, 1953. American painter. In 1909 Alfred Stieglitz gave him the first of a long series of one-man shows at New York; in 1936 the Museum of Modern Art in that city held a retrospective exhibition of his work, which is mostly in water colors, though he also painted in oils. He is represented in the permanent collections of the Museum of Modern Art, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and the Brooklyn Museum at New York, the Fogg Museum of Harvard University, the Phillips Memorial Gallery at Washington, D.C., the Chicago Art Institute, and the San Francisco Museum, as well as in many of the most important American private collections. Marin's art was influenced by impressionism and post-impressionism, by cubism, by Cézanne especially, and by the Chinese and Japanese landscapists, but no painter was less imitative or, in the opinion of critics most acquainted with his work, more American.

Marin (mȧ.raṅ), Louis. b. at Faulx, Meurthe-et-Moselle, France, Feb. 7, 1871—. French political leader and educator, head (1925 et seq.) of the Fédération Républicaine, a conservative political movement. A deputy (1905–40, 1945 et seq.), he held the ministries of liberated regions (1924), pensions (1926–28), public health (1934), and state (1935). He was founder of the newspaper La Nation. During World War II he was an agent of the Allied espionage services, and escaped (1944) to Great Britain.

Marín (mä.rēn′), Luis Muñoz-. See Muñoz-Marín, Luis.

Marina (mä.rē′nä). See also Espiritu Santo, New Hebrides.

Marina, Saint. See Saint Margaret (c255–c275).

Marina. [Also: Malinche; Indian name, Malintzin.] b. in Mexico, c1501; d. in Mexico after 1550. Spanish name given to the Aztec Indian woman who became the mistress of Hernando Cortés and was a prominent character in the conquest of Mexico. She was sold as a slave to the Tabascan Indians, and was one of the girls given by them (1519) to the Spaniards, whose conquest of Mexico she assisted (especially through her knowledge of the language). She bore several children to Cortés. In 1524 she was married to a Spanish captain named Juan Jaramillo. Either her original Indian name was Malina, or the name Marina was changed by the Indians to Malina, to which, out of respect, they added the titular suffix tzin ("chief" or "lady") making Malintzin.

Marina (mą.rī′ną). In Shakespeare's Pericles, the daughter of Pericles and Thaisa.

Marina di Gioiosa Ionica (mä.rē′nä dē jō.yō′sä yô′nē.kä). See under Gioiosa Ionica.

Marina di Ostia (ôs′tyä). See under Ostia, Italy.

Marina di Tauro (tou′rō). See under Gioia Tauro.

Marina Falls (mą.rē′ną). Waterfall in W central British Guiana. Height, ab. 500 ft.

Marinduque (mä.rēn.dö'kā). Province in N central Philippine Islands, consisting of Marinduque island, directly S of Luzon, and smaller adjacent islands. It has two good ports, Santa Cruz on the NE and Banacalan on the NW coast. Both are safe harbors in all weather, Santa Cruz for large vessels, Banacalan for those of not more than 15 ft. draft. The hills are well wooded. Over 17 percent of the land is agricultural and produces hemp in large quantities, and an abundance of rice and of fruit. The inhabitants are Tagalogs. Capital, Boac; area, ab. 356 sq. mi.; pop. 85,828 (1948).

Marinduque. Hilly island of the Philippines, S of Luzon and W of northern Mindoro, with small adjacent islands forming the province of Marinduque. Area, ab. 345 sq. mi.; pop. 79,781 (1939).

Marine Biological Laboratory. Organization founded in 1888 for the purpose of conducting biological research and instruction. It is situated at Woods Hole, Mass., has a library (together with the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution) of 55,000 volumes and 142,000 reprints, and publishes Biological Bulletin (bimonthly).

Marine City. City in SE Michigan, in St. Clair County, on the St. Clair River: formerly important for its lumber mills, now a minor port on the Great Lakes system. It has boatbuilding yards. 4,270 (1950).

Marine Corps, U.S. Regular branch of the armed forces of the U.S., organized by act of the Continental Congress (Nov. 10, 1775), but existing in its present form from the act of the U.S. Congress passed (July 11, 1798) to cope with the naval war with France. The Marines, who since c1941 have developed more intensively than ever their capacity as an amphibious force, comprise that portion of the U.S. Navy charged with taking and securing beachheads and conducting combat operations on land. The unit is commanded by a general under the authority of the Navy Department. Popularly called "Leathernecks," the Marines serve as special detachments aboard large U.S. war craft, man the Fleet Marine Force, guard naval and harbor establishments in the continental U.S. and outlying possessions, and carry out special missions involving the protection of U.S. lives and property endangered by war or other disturbances in various quarters of the globe. The motto of the Marine Corps is Semper Fidelis; its hymn is From the Halls of Montezuma to the Shores of Tripoli, a title reflecting the Corps's service in the Barbary War and the Mexican War. Marines have taken part in every war of the U.S., and between major wars have participated in landings and expeditions in both hemispheres. In World War I, Marines (fighting as part of the 2nd Infantry Division) distinguished themselves at Belleau Wood, the St.-Mihiel salient, and the Argonne offensive. In World War II they fought in virtually every major engagement in the South Pacific, including actions at Guadalcanal, the Marshall Islands, Iwo Jima, and Okinawa.

Marinette (mar.i.net'). City in E Wisconsin, county seat of Marinette County, on Green Bay at the mouth of the Menominee River, twin city of Menominee, Mich.: manufactures of paper, knit goods, chemicals, boxes, gloves, and granite products. 14,178 (1950).

Marinha Grande (mą.rē'nyą grun'dẹ). Town and concelho (commune) in W Portugal, in the province of Estremadura, in the district of Leiria, situated near the Atlantic Ocean W of Leiria: important for glass manufacture. It was founded by the Marquis de Pombal, then minister of the king of Portugal, in the 18th century, and has a seaside resort, and fisheries. Pop. of concelho, 14,512 (1940); of town, 8,601 (1940).

Marini (mä.rē'nē) or Marino (mä.rē'nō), Giovanni Battista or Giambattista. [Called il Cavalier Marino.] b. at Naples, Oct. 18, 1569; d. there, March 25, 1625. Italian poet. He came under the protection of Pietro, Cardinal Aldobrandini, with whom he went to Ravenna and Turin. In 1615 he was forced to flee from Turin to Paris, where Marie de Médicis became his patron. His work is written in a style known from him as Marinism, the Italian counterpart of Gongorism and Euphuism, full of affected vocabulary, word-play, and extended metaphor (conceits). His works include Adone (1623), La Strage degli innocenti (The Massacre of the Innocents, 1633), sonnets, and others.

Marino (mä.rē'nō). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Latium, in the province of Roma, situated in the Alban Hills ab. 13 mi. SE of Rome. It is an agricultural commune. Pop. of commune, 13,248 (1936); of town, 8,062 (1936).

Mariño (mä.rē'nyō), Santiago. b. on the island of Margarita, Venezuela, c1788; d. at La Victoria, Venezuela, Sept. 4, 1854. Venezuelan general, prominent in the war for independence.

Marino Faliero (mą.rē'nō fäl.yār'ō). Tragedy by Byron, published in 1820.

Marinsk (mä.rēnsk'). See Mariinsk.

Marinus I (mą.rī'nus). [Also known as Martin II.] d. May 15, 884. Pope from 882 to 884. Probably elected on the very day of the death of John VIII, Marinus was consecrated without consent of the incompetent Charles the Fat. He upheld the condemnation of Photius by John VIII. Early chroniclers incorrectly cited as identical the names Marinus and Martinus (Martin), with the result that Marinus I has often erroneously been listed as Martin II. In actual fact, the name Martin II was never held by a pope; Martin IV, depending upon the records of his day, assumed himself to be the fourth occupant of the papal chair to adopt this name, an error which later scholars have corrected.

Marinus II. [Also known as Martin III.] b. at Rome; d. in May, 946. Cardinal of Saint Ciriacus. He was placed on the throne by the influence of Alberic, Prince of the Romans. Marinus favored the monastic reform of Cluny. With Pope Marinus I, he was incorrectly identified by early chroniclers with the popes named Martinus (Martin), and has therefore been listed in some sources as Martin III.

Mario (mä'rē.ō), Giovanni Matteo. [Title, Marchese di Candia.] b. at Cagliari, Italy, Oct. 18, 1810; d. at Rome, Dec. 11, 1883. Italian operatic tenor. It was not till 1846 that he took the high rank in his profession which he afterward held. He sang with the soprano Giulia Grisi for 25 years at London, Paris, and St. Petersburg, and married her (1856) on the dissolution of her previous marriage.

Marion (mar'i.ọn). City in W central Alabama, county seat of Perry County, ab. 60 mi. NW of Montgomery, in a farming region: seat of Judson College. A federal fish hatchery is nearby. 2,822 (1950).

Marion. City in S Illinois, county seat of Williamson County, ab. 52 mi. N of Cairo, in a coal-mining region. 10,459 (1950).

Marion. City in E central Indiana, county seat of Grant County, ab. 65 mi. NE of Indianapolis: manufactures of electrical appliances, paper, radios, glass, furniture, and food products. It is the seat of Marion College. The area was settled in 1826 and the settlement was named in honor of General Francis Marion. The city experienced a boom after the discovery of natural gas in the area in the 1880's. 30,081 (1950).

Marion. [Called "Grove City."] City in E Iowa, in Linn County, on Indian Creek. Formerly the county seat, it was named for General Francis Marion. It is a northeastern suburb of Cedar Rapids. 5,916 (1950).

Marion. Town in W North Carolina, county seat of McDowell County: textile manufactures. It was named for General Francis Marion. 2,740 (1950).

Marion. [Former name, Jacob's Well.] City in C Ohio, county seat of Marion County: manufactures of tractors, threshers, rollers, steam shovels, silk textiles, cigars, automobile parts, dairy products, and glass products. It was settled c1820 and was made county seat in 1824, and renamed for General Francis Marion. It was the home of Warren G. Harding. 33,817 (1950).

Marion. [Former name, Gilesboro.] Town in NE South Carolina, county seat of Marion County: manufactures of lumber products, textiles, veneer woods, bricks, oil, and iron. It was settled in 1800, and renamed some 30 years later for General Francis Marion. 6,834 (1950).

Marion. Town in SW Virginia, county seat of Smyth County: manufactures of furniture, flour, leather, and bricks. It was named for General Francis Marion. 6,982 (1950).

Marion, Fort. See under Castillo de San Marcos National Monument.

Marion, Francis. [Called "the Swamp Fox."] b. at Winyaw, near Georgetown, S.C., c1732; d. near Eutaw, S.C., Feb. 26, 1795. American Revolutionary general, distinguished as a partisan leader in South Carolina (1780–82). An experienced Indian fighter, he took a commission under William Moultrie at the outbreak of the Revolutionary War and fought at Charleston and Savannah. The fall of Charleston (1780) left Marion in charge of a small cavalry troop that was almost the only force resisting the British in South Carolina. His tactics for the next years were to harry the British and he fought a successful guerrilla war against them. He cut communications and supply lines, rescued prisoners, descended suddenly on parties of soldiers, terrorized Loyalists, and disappeared with his men in the swamps when pursued. He joined with Nathanael Greene and fought under him at Eutaw Springs (1781); then he returned to his guerrilla tactics. He served three times as state senator toward the end of and immediately following the war.

Marion Delorme (mȧ.ryôn dẹ.lôrm). Play by Victor Hugo, produced in 1831. Marion Delorme also appears in Bulwer-Lytton's play Richelieu.

Mariotte (mȧ.ryot), Edmé. b. in Burgundy, France, c1620; d. at Paris, May 12, 1684. French physicist. He made many discoveries in hydrodynamics. He also did research on the nature of color and discovered the so-called blind spot of the eye. His Traité du mouvement des eaux was published in 1786. The name "Mariotte's law" has been given to the principle (earlier discovered by Boyle) that at any given temperature the volume of a given mass of gas varies inversely as the pressure which it bears.

Mariposan (mar.i.pō'sạn). Obsolete artificial name for the Yokuts Indians of California and their language.

Marischal (mär'shạl), Earls. Titles held by various members of the Keith family.

Marischal College. See under Aberdeen University.

Marisco (mạ.ris'kō), Adam de. See Adam de Marisco.

Marisco or Marsh, Richard de. d. at Peterborough, England, May 1, 1226. Bishop of Durham (1217–26) and chancellor. In 1209 he was appointed rector of Bampton, Oxfordshire, and in 1210 was King John's adviser in the persecutions of the Cistercians. In 1212 he was sheriff of Dorsetshire and Somersetshire, and in 1214 chancellor (an office which he retained after John's death).

Marisus (mạ.rī'sus). Latin name of the Mureş.

Maritain (mȧ.rē.tañ), Jacques. b. at Paris, Nov. 18, 1882—. French philosopher, leader of the Neo-Thomist school. He served as French ambassador (1945) to the Vatican. Among his French written works the following have been translated into English: The Angelic Doctor, St. Thomas Aquinas (1931), Art and Scholasticism (1932), Introduction to Philosophy (1937), Introduction to Logic (1937), Degrees of Knowledge (1938), True Humanism (1938), The Living Thoughts of Saint Paul (1940), Art and Poetry (1943), The Rights of Man and Natural Law (1943), Christianity and Democracy (1944), Existence and the Existent (1948), and an exchange of letters with Jean Cocteau entitled Art and Faith (1948).

Maritain, Raïssa. [Maiden name, Oumancoff.] b. at Rostov, Russia —. French writer and poet; wife (married 1904) of Jacques Maritain. Author of Le Prince de ce monde (trans. into English), L'Ange de l'École, Vie de Saint Thomas d'Aquin (trans. into English), La Vie d'oraison (with Jacques Maritain; Eng. trans., Prayer and Intelligence, 1928), Situation de la poésie (with Jacques Maritain, 1938), La Conscience morale et l'état de nature (1942), and Marc Chagall (1943).

Maritana (Spanish, mä.rē.tä'nä; French, mȧ.rē.tȧ.nȧ). Tambourine dancer in Dumanoir and Dennery's Don César de Bazan. Don César marries her to save his life.

Maritana (mar.i.tā'nạ). Opera in three acts by William Vincent Wallace, first produced at London in 1845. The libretto, by Edward Fitzball, was adapted from the drama Don César de Bazan.

Maritima Avaticorum (mạ.rit'i.mạ ạ.vat.i.kō'rum). Ancient name of Martigues.

Maritime Alps (alps). [French, Alpes Maritimes; Italian, Alpi Marittime.] Division of the Alps which lies on the border of France and Italy, between the Ligurian Apennines and the Cottian Alps. Peak elevation, ab. 10,817 ft.; length, ab. 120 mi.

Maritime Province. See also Küstenland.

Maritime Province. [Russian, Primorskaya Oblast.] Former oblast (region) of the Russian Empire, in E Siberia, extending along the Pacific. The extreme S part of this area, bordering on the Sea of Japan, now constitutes the Maritime Territory. Capital, Khabarovsk; chief port, Vladivostok.

Maritime Provinces. Name applied to the three Atlantic coast provinces of SE Canada: New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward Island. Area, 50,400 sq. mi. (including 837 sq. mi. of inland water); pop. 1,256,710 (1951).

Maritime Territory. [Russian, Primorski Krai.] Territory of SE U.S.S.R., in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, bordering on the Sea of Japan, E Manchuria, and NE Korea. The coastal region is mountainous and forested; in the Sikhote-Alin mountains lead, zinc, tin, and gold are produced. A lowland extends N from Vladivostok through the Ussuri valley; this is a settled agricultural area producing wheat, flax, rice, soybeans, sugar beets, and dairy products. Coal is mined at Suchan, E of Vladivostok. There are important coastal fisheries. The Maritime Territory contains Vladivostok, the chief Pacific port of the U.S.S.R. and terminus of the Trans-Siberian railroad. There is a naval base at Posiet Bay. After the Russian Revolution the old Maritime Province was included in the Far Eastern Territory. The Maritime Territory was organized in 1938 and subsequently had its boundaries changed. Area, ab. 80,000 sq. mi. (1939), ab. 62,950 sq. mi. (1951); pop. 907,200 (1939).

Maritsa (mä.rē'tsä). [Also: Marica, Maritza, Meriç; Greek, Evros; Latin, Hebrus.] River flowing through S central Bulgaria, and then forming the border between Greece and Turkey. It flows past Plovdiv and Edirne, and empties into the Aegean Sea. Length, ab. 300 mi. It is navigable in its lower course. In 1371 the Turks defeated a coalition of Serbian nobles here and occupied western Bulgaria and southern Serbia.

Maritzburg (mar'its.bėrg). See Pietermaritzburg.

Mariupol (mä.ryō'pôl). Former name of Zhdanov, U.S.S.R.

Marius (mȧ.ryūs). Character in the novel Les Misérables, by Victor Hugo.

Marius (mār'i.us), Gaius (or Caius). b. near Arpinum, Italy, c155 B.C.; d. Jan. 13, 86 B.C. Roman general. He served in the Numantine War in 134, was tribune in 119 and praetor in 115, was legate under Metellus in the Jugurthine War (109–108), and was consul in 107, 104, 103, 102, 101, 100, and 86. He commanded against Jugurtha (107–106), and against the Cimbri and Teutones (104–101), defeated the Teutones at Aix in 102 and the Cimbri at the Raudian Fields, near Vercellae, in 101, and defeated the Marsi in the Social War in 90. His rivalry with Sulla over the command against Mithridates VI of Pontus caused the first civil war in 88. He was driven from Rome in that year, but returned after Sulla left for the East, and with Cinna captured Rome in 87, and massacred many of the aristocrats.

Mariut (mär.yöt'), Birket el. See Mareotis, Lake.

Marivaux (mȧ.rē.vō), Pierre Carlet de Chamblain de. b. at Paris, Feb. 4, 1688; d. Feb. 12, 1763. French dramatist and novelist. His best work was done between 1722 and 1746; in that time he wrote some 25 plays, foremost among which are Le Jeu de l'amour et du hasard (1730), L'École des mœurs (1732), Les Fausses Confidences (1736), Le Legs (1736), and L'Épreuve (1740). All Marivaux's plays are more or less alike in their subject matter; the various situations are effected not through outside events, but by the expression of inner feelings on the part of the different characters; difficulties arise entirely through the fault of the lovers themselves, either in their curiosity, their timidity, their ignorance, their pride, or their pique. As a novelist Marivaux wrote La Vie de Marianne (1731–41), his masterpiece; also Le Paysan parvenu (1735) and Pharamond, ou les folies romanesques (1737). Marivaux's peculiar style has been named for him marivaudage.

Mariveles (mä.rē.vā'lās), Mount. Former name of Bataan, Mount.

Mariveles Bay. See under Bataan.

Marjoribanks (märch'bangks), Edward. [Title, 2nd Baron Tweedmouth.] b. July 8, 1849; d. Sept. 15, 1909. English Liberal statesman. He sat for Berwick in the House of Commons 1880–94), and was second Liberal whip (1886–92), parliamentary secretary to the treasury and chief Liberal whip (1892–94), lord privy seal and chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1894–95), first lord of the admiralty (1905–08), and lord president of the council (1908).

Marjorie Daw (mär'jō.ri). Story by Thomas Bailey Aldrich, published in 1873 in the collection Marjorie Daw and Other People.

Mark (märk), Saint. Author of the second gospel. He has been generally supposed to be identical with the "John whose surname was Mark," mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles (particularly as a companion of Paul and Barnabas, and after their separation of Barnabas alone), and with the Mark whose name occurs in other passages in the New Testament (Pauline Epistles and 1 Peter).

Mark, Saint. [Also, Marcus.] d. Oct. 7, 336. Pope from January to October, 336.

Mark. Former countship of Germany, later comprised in the province of Westphalia, Prussia, in the government district of Arnsberg. The countship arose in the Middle Ages, and became united with Cleve c1400. In 1666, in consequence of the contest of the Jülich succession, it passed to Brandenburg. It passed to France in 1807 and formed part of the duchy of Berg. In 1813 it was restored to Prussia.

Mark. In Arthurian romance, king of Cornwall; uncle of Tristram, for whom Tristram went to Ireland to bring Isolde home as Mark's bride.

Mark, Basilica of Saint. Venetian basilica, founded in 830, rebuilt in 976, and given its definitive form in 1052. It is the most famed Byzantine structure of western Europe, cruciform in plan, with five great domes on pendentives, and many smaller domes in subordinate positions. The outer aisle or atrium was added later; with its five deep, many-columned arches, repeated and fantastically canopied above, its rich mosaics, and the wonderful color of its encrusted marbles, it gives, with the domes and many pinnacles, to the exterior its picturesque and unique character. The four celebrated bronze horses in front of the upper middle arch came from Constantinople, and probably adorned originally a Roman triumphal arch. The interior, though it measures only 205 by 164 ft., is one of the most impressive in the world. Almost the whole surface of walls, domes, and arches is covered with magnificent mosaics, representing Old and New Testament scenes on a gold ground.

Mark, Column of Saint. See Columns of Saint Mark and Saint Theodore.

Mark, Edward Laurens. b. at Hamlet, N.Y., May 30, 1847; d. at Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 16, 1946. American biologist and anatomist, famous for his training of biologists at Harvard. He was professor of anatomy (1885–1921) at Harvard and was instrumental in developing the Harvard Zoölogical Laboratory. He was a founder (1903) and director (1903–31) of the Bermuda Biological Station.

Mark, Gospel of. Second gospel, the authorship of which is traditionally assigned to Saint Mark. It is the most original of the synoptic gospels. It has been regarded as reflecting especially the influence of Peter.

Mark, Julius. b. at Haljala, Estonia, 1890—. Estonian linguist. A leading authority on the accidence of Finno-Ugrian languages, he was professor at the University of Tartu (1919–44). Author of Die Possessivsuffixe in den uralischen Sprachen (1923) and numerous other studies.

Marka (mär'kä). See Sarakole.

Marked Tree. City in NE Arkansas, in Poinsett County: marketing center of a cotton tenant-farming area. The Southern Tenant Farmers' Union was formed (1934) near here, and the town was used (1927) experimentally for the elimination of pellagra. 2,878 (1950).

Marken (mär'kẹn). Island in NW Netherlands, belonging to the province of North Holland, situated in the SW part of the Ijsselmeer ab. 10 mi. NE of Amsterdam. It is fertile, has seven small villages, and is a tourist center. Area, ab. 1 sq. mi.; pop. 1,397 (1939).

Markens gröde (mär'kẹns grė'dẹ). Norwegian title of Growth of the Soil.

Market Bosworth (boz'wėrth). [Also, Bosworth.] Rural district and market town in C England, in Leicestershire, ab. 12 mi. W of Leicester, ab. 100 mi. N of London. It has associations with Samuel Johnson. Bosworth Field is in the rural district. Pop. of town, 864 (1931); area of rural district, ab. 100 sq. mi.; pop. 26,359 (1951).

Market Drayton (drā'tọn). Urban district and market town in W England, in Shropshire, on the river Tern ab. 17 mi. NE of Shrewsbury, ab. 160 mi. NW of London by rail. It is an agricultural trade center, and has manufactures of agricultural machinery. 5,638 (1951).

Market Harborough (här'bur.ō). Urban district and market town in C England, in Leicestershire, situated on the river Welland and on the Grand Union Canal, ab. 12 mi. S of Leicester. It is in the center of a fertile pasture area and specializes in the fattening of cattle and sheep for market. It is also known as a fox-hunting center. 10,401 (1951).

Markham (mär'kạm). Village in NE Illinois, in Cook County: a southern suburb of Chicago. 2,753 (1950).

Markham, Sir Clements Robert. b. at Stillingfleet, Yorkshire, England, July 20, 1830; d. at London, Jan. 30, 1916. English biographer, geographer, travel writer, and historian. He entered (1844) the navy, resigning in 1852, after having visited several South American ports and having been a member of the Arctic expedition (1850–51) in search of Sir John Franklin. He was responsible (c1861) for the introduction of cinchona, from which quinine is produced, into India. He was a member (1867–77) of the geographical department of the India Office, and secretary (1863–88) and president (1893–1905) of the Royal Geographical Society. Author of Franklin's Footsteps (1852), History of Peru (1853), Travels in Peru and India (1862), Richard Hakluyt (1896), Life of Richard III (1906), The Incas of Peru (1910), and The Lands of Silence (1921), a history of Arctic and Antarctic exploration. He also wrote The War Between Chile and Peru (1879–81), and biographies of Admiral Fairfax, Admiral John Markham, Columbus, and Major James Rennell.

Markham, Edwin (Charles). b. at Oregon City, Ore., April 23, 1852; d. on Staten Island, N.Y., March 7, 1940. American poet and lecturer. He is best known as the author of The Man with the Hoe (title piece of a volume of poems published in 1899), referring to a celebrated picture by Jean François Millet and voicing his protest against the exploited "Hoeman" as contrasted with the landowning "Yeoman." His other works include Lincoln, and Other Poems (1901) and Field Folk: Interpretations of Millet (1906). Among his chief single poems contributed to various magazines are The End of the Century (1899), The Muse of Brotherhood (1899), The Mighty Hundred Years (1900), The Chant of the Vultures (1905), Virgilia (1905), and The Homing Heart (1906).

Markham, Frederick. b. near Lewes, Sussex, England, Aug. 16, 1805; d. at London, Dec. 21, 1855. English military officer.

Markham, Gervase or Jervis. b. c1568; d. at London, February, 1637. English author. He fought in the Low Countries and in Ireland, and later wrote on military matters. He wrote also on agriculture, forestry, horsemanship, and farriery. He wrote a number of plays in collaboration and was the author of The Most Honorable Tragedy of Sir Richard Grinville Knight (1595), a long poem on the hero of the Revenge. Attributed to Markham are The Teares of the Beloved, or the Lamentations of St. John (1600), Mary Magdalen's Lamentations for the Loss of her Master Jesus (1601), and The New Metamorphosis, the latter a long poetical romance.

Markham, John. b. at Westminster (now part of London), June 13, 1761; d. at Naples, Italy, Feb. 13, 1827. English admiral; second son of William Markham (1719–1807), archbishop of York.

Markham, Mount. Massive mountain peak in Antarctica, W of the Ross Shelf Ice, in ab. 82°59' S., 160°30' E. Elevation, ab. 15,100 ft.

Markham, William. b. in England, c1635; d. at Philadelphia, June 12, 1704. English colonial administrator, secretary to William Penn. Commissioned (1681) deputy governor of Pennsylvania by Penn, his cousin, he was presiding officer (1681) of the first provincial council. He served as provincial secretary (1685–91), deputy governor (1691–93) of the lower counties (now Delaware), and lieutenant governor or governor (1693–99) of the province.

Markham, William. b. at Kinsale, Ireland, in April, 1719; d. at London, Nov. 3, 1807. Archbishop of York (1777–1807).

Markirch (mär'kirĉh). German name of Ste.-Marie-aux-Mines.

Markkleeberg (märk'klā'berk). [Former name, Oetzsch-Mark-Kleeberg.] Town in E Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony, Russian Zone, ab. 4 mi. S of the center of Leipzig. It belongs to the metropolitan area of Leipzig. Stone Age finds were excavated here. A concentration camp was maintained here during World War II. 20,517 (1946).

Markle (mär'kl), John. b. at Hazelton, Pa., Dec. 15, 1858; d. July 10, 1933. American coal industrialist.

Markneukirchen (märk'noi'kir.ĉhęn). Town in E Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony, Russian Zone, ab. 45 mi. SW of Chemnitz. It is a center of the German musical instrument industry; most of the products are manufactured by home industries, and have been widely exported. 8,903 (1946).

Markoe (mär'kō), Thomas Masters. b. at Philadelphia, Sept. 13, 1819; d. 1901. American surgeon. He was adjunct professor (1860–70) and professor (1870–79) of surgery, and professor (1879–90) of the principles of surgery in the medical department of Columbia College.

Marko Kralyevich (mär'kō krä'lye.vich). [Eng. trans., "Marko the King's Son."] Hero of Yugoslavian (especially Serbian) national legend, folk song, and ballad. His legend is based on the career of a real Marko, son of a 14th-century Serbian king. He was of great size, a great drinker, lover, and fighter for Slavic freedom.

Markranstädt (märk'rän'shtet). Town in E Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony, Russian Zone, ab. 7 mi. SW of Leipzig. It has electrical machinery industries, and sugar refineries. 10,857 (1946).

Marks (märks), Lionel Simeon. b. at Birmingham, England, Sept. 8, 1871—. American mechanical engineer. Author of Mechanical Engineer's Handbook (1916, 1922, 1930, 1941), The Airplane Engine (1922), and Axial-Flow Fans (with C. Keller, 1937).

Marks, Nora. Pseudonym of Atkinson, Eleanor.

Marks, Percy. b. at Covelo, Calif., Sept. 9, 1891—. American writer. Author of The Plastic Age (1924), Martha (1925), Which Way Parnassus? (1926), The Unwilling God (1929), Craft of Writing (1932), And Points Beyond (1937), Full Flood (1942), Knave of Diamonds (1943), Shade of Sycamore (1944), and other books.

Marksville (märks'vil). Town in C Louisiana, parish seat of Avoyelles Parish, ab. 75 mi. NW of Baton Rouge. The Marksville archaeological site is nearby. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses the town's population more than doubled. 1,811 (1940), 3,635 (1950).

Marksville. Archaeological site in C Louisiana: the type site for the Marksville culture of the Burial Mound II period (c900–1100) in the lower Mississippi Valley. This culture is a southern variety of the Moundbuilder culture typified by the Hopewell culture.

Mark Tapley (märk tap'li). See Tapley, Mark.

Marktredwitz (märk'trāt'vits). Town in E central Germany, in the Land (state) of Bavaria, American Zone, ab. 29 mi. NE of Bayreuth: important glass, pottery, and porcelain industries; also metal, lumber, cotton textile, and other manufactures. Notable buildings include a Protestant church, in the Gothic style of the 14th century, and a Catholic church, in the baroque style of the 18th century. 15,953 (1950).

Markt Sankt Florian (märkt zängkt flō'rę̄.än). Market town in C Austria, in the province of Upper Austria, SE of Linz. The town is famous for the abbey of Saint Florian, built over the tomb of the saint, who was drowned in the Enns River during the reign of Diocletian. The abbey, founded by an Augustinian order in the 11th century, was rebuilt in the period 1686–1751 from plans of Carlantonio Carlone and Jakob Prandauer. It is one of the foremost examples of the Austrian baroque style. From 1848 to 1856 the composer Anton Bruckner was organist here. 4,180 (1946).

Mark Twain (märk twān). Pseudonym of Clemens, Samuel Langhorne.

Marl (märl). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the province of Westphalia, Prussia, ab. 7 mi. NW of Recklinghausen: coal mines; metallurgical, machine, chemical, lumber, tobacco, and foodstuff industries. The population increased in the period 1939–46 by 25.5 percent. 44,043 (1946), 51,192 (1950).

Marlatt (mär'lat), Charles Lester. b. at Atchison, Kan., Sept. 26, 1863—. American entomologist. He headed (1927–33) the Bureau of Entomology, U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Marlborough (märl'bur.ō, -bėr.ō; môl'-), 1st Duke of. [Title of John Churchill.] b. in Devonshire, May or June, 1650; d. near Windsor, June 16, 1722. English general and statesman, renowned as commander (1702–11) of the allied armies at war with Louis XIV of France. He was educated at St. Paul's School and became (c1665) a page to the Duke of York (later James II). He entered the military service and served under the Duke at Nijmegen (1672) and Maestricht (1673), where he saved the Duke's life. His rise to prominence was further assured by his sister Arabella, maid of honor to the Duchess of York, who became the Duke's mistress. His marriage (1678) to Sarah Jennings, favorite of the future Queen Anne, likewise helped his fortunes, which received great impetus at the accession (1685) of James II. As a military commander under James, he contributed greatly to the suppression of the Monmouth rebellion (1685), he being responsible for the victory at Sedgemoor. When sent to France, however, on a diplomatic mission to Louis XIV, he was already known to have declared against the king if the latter should attempt to change the religion of the nation to Roman Catholicism. Meanwhile he was also in communication with William of Orange, to whom he pledged support. Thus, when William landed (1688) in England, and Churchill was sent at the head of 5,000 men to oppose him, James discovered that his general had gone over into the enemy camp. This flexibility in Churchill's personal loyalties probably prevented him from being employed by William (now William III) for important duties, aside from service in the Netherlands (1689) and in Ireland (1690). Marlborough undoubtedly was in constant communication with the exiled James and actually spent some time (1692) in the Tower, but such was the political atmosphere that William could not afford to alienate him. Upon the accession of Anne in March, 1702, Marlborough (whose wife Sarah was the queen's favorite) attained the height of his power. Having been made Baron Churchill of Sandridge (1685) and Earl of Marlborough (1689), he was made (1702) Duke of Marlborough and captain general of English troops. The almost immediate opening (May, 1702) of the War of the Spanish Succession put Marlborough at the head of the combined English and Dutch armies. During this decade of war, the domestic political scene moved gradually against Marlborough, who first lost the support of the Tories, opponents of the war, and was later opposed by strong elements in Parliament, which advocated peace with France. For the time being, however, Marlborough was virtual ruler of England, his close friend Sidney Godolphin being prime minister and his wife controlling the queen. In the field he swept the French from Gelderland by his victories at Kaiserswerth, Venlo, and Liége, but in 1703, despite the capture of Bonn, failed in his campaign against Antwerp through disagreement with his Dutch allies. With Prince Eugene, Marlborough inflicted (1704) a crushing defeat on the French at Blenheim, thus occupying Bavaria. The disputes between the Allies continued and the French forces regained their strength, but at Ramillies (1706) Marlborough again routed the French, taking Brabant and Flanders. Again in 1708, at Oudenarde, the French were defeated; Lille fell in December and France attempted to arrange a truce, but Marlborough refused. In 1709 Tournai and Mons fell and at the murderous battle of Malplaquet the French, though defeated, retired in order; Malplaquet was the last great battle of the war, which ended with the Treaty of Utrecht in 1712. But Marlborough had meanwhile lost valuable ground at court. Sarah, his wife, who had been the queen's favorite, had now become the object of her hatred and was succeeded in the queen's favor by her cousin Abigail Hill Masham. Every opportunity was used to bring about the fall of the Duke. Godolphin was removed (1710); the Duchess was dismissed (1711); and, in December, 1711, charged with embezzlement of moneys, Marlborough was himself relieved of his offices. Though cleared of the charges, he left for the Continent in 1712. Marlborough returned after the queen's death (1714) and regained his military posts under George I, but his last years were spent quietly.

Marlborough, Duchess of. [Maiden name, Sarah Jennings.] b. near St. Albans, England, May 29, 1660; d. (probably) at Marlborough House, London, Oct. 18, 1744. Favorite of Queen Anne of England. She married John Churchill, afterward 1st Duke of Marlborough, in 1678. In 1683 she was appointed one of the ladies of the bedchamber to Anne, then the princess Anne, with whom she was very intimate. Under the name of Mrs. Freeman she carried on a correspondence with Queen Anne (as Mrs. Morley). Her imperious nature and strong intellect for a while entirely dominated Anne, but her rule became unbearable, and she was superseded in the queen's affection by Abigail Masham, her own cousin and protégée. In 1711, shortly before the dismissal of Marlborough from office, she retired from the queen's service, and passed the rest of her life in a series of bitter quarrels.

Marlborough. Municipal borough and market town in S England, in Wiltshire, ab. 10 mi. S of Swindon, ab. 75 mi. W of London by rail. It contains a famous public school (Marlborough College) near the site of an ancient castle. 4,556 (1951).

Marlborough (märl'bur.ō). [Also, Marlboro.] City in E central Massachusetts, in Middlesex County, ab. 26 mi. W of Boston: manufactures of footwear, metal products, paper boxes, textiles, oil burners, and shoe machinery. 15,756 (1950).

Marlborough, 1st Earl of. Title of Ley, James.

Marlborough Downs. Range of limestone hills in S England, in Wiltshire, N of Marlborough. They are noted for the many neolithic remains found there.

Marlborough House. London residence belonging to the British government. It is a large building of brick trimmed with stone, with extensive gardens fronting on the Mall. It was built (1710) for John Churchill, 1st Duke of Marlborough, by Christopher Wren.

Marles-les-Mines (märl.lā.mēn). Town in N France, in the department of Pas-de-Calais, SW of Béthune. It is a coal-mining town. 12,820 (1946).

Marlin (mär'lin). City in E central Texas, county seat of Falls County, SE of Waco: health resort noted for its hot springs. 7,099 (1950).

"Marlinsky (mär.lēn'ski), Cossack." Pseudonym of Bestuzhev, Aleksandr Aleksandrovich.

Marlio (mär.lyō; Anglicized, mär'li.ō), Louis. b. 1878— French businessman, railway executive, and economist, head of the international aluminum cartel before World War II. He was also vice-president of the National Railways of France. In 1941 he came to the U.S., where he became a member of the staff of the Brookings Institution.

Marlitt (mär'lit), E. P. [Pseudonym of Eugenie John.] b. at Arnstadt, Thuringia, Germany, Dec. 5, 1825; d. there, June 22, 1887. German writer of light fiction for the family weekly Die Gartenlaube. She wrote a vast number of stories (Goldelse, Blaubart, Das Geheimnis der alten Mamsell, Die zweite Frau, Im Hause des Kommerziensrats, and others).

Marlow (mär'lō). Urban district and market town in S England, in Buckinghamshire, situated on the river Thames ab. 5 mi. NW of Maidenhead, ab. 32 mi. W of London by rail. It is primarily a residential town. 6,480 (1951).

Marlow. City in S Oklahoma, in Stephens County, in an agricultural area producing corn and watermelons. 3,399 (1950).

Marlow, Young. Son of Sir Charles Marlow in Oliver Goldsmith's She Stoops to Conquer. He is extremely shy with women of high station and reputation, but bold enough among women of lesser position; hence Miss Hardcastle "stoops" to the disguise of a barmaid "to conquer" him.

Marlowe (mär'lō), Christopher. b. at Canterbury, England, Feb. 6, 1564; d. at Deptford, England, May 30, 1593. English poet and dramatist. Son of a shoemaker, he secured a good education at Cambridge University, after which he may have seen some military service; it appears, in any case, that by 1587 if not earlier he was at London, attached to the Lord Admiral's Company as a playwright, enjoying the familiar acquaintance of Sir Walter Raleigh and other writers, adventurers, and men about town, living a gay, roistering life, freely avowing the heretical and even atheistic views for which eventually, in 1593, he was called to account. An information against him was lodged with the authorities, but before he could be brought to trial, he was fatally stabbed with his own dagger in a quarrel over paying for the drinks at a tavern. It has been said that if Shakespeare, born in the same year with Marlowe, had like the latter died at the age of 29, Marlowe's name would have come down in literary history as the greatest of the Elizabethan dramatic poets. Tamburlane, probably first acted about 1587 and licensed for printing in 1590, is universally ascribed to him on internal evidence alone. The Tragedy of Dr. Faustus appears to have been first acted in 1588, but it was not entered on the Stationers' Register for publication until 1601. It is known to have been produced by Henslowe 23 times between 1594 and 1597, and subsequently it was performed frequently by English companies in several of the chief German cities. The Jew of Malta, another tragedy, was written and first produced probably in 1589, was frequently acted in England between 1591 and 1596, and was also given by English companies on the Continent. In 1818 Edmund Kean revived it at the Drury Lane Theatre in a modernized version. Marlowe's historical play Edward II was entered on the Stationers' Register in 1593. About the same time he collaborated with Thomas Nashe in writing The Tragedy of Dido, Queen of Carthage, and either alone or in collaboration he also wrote The Massacre at Paris. It is generally thought that he had a hand in fashioning some of the earlier plays of the Shakespeare canon. The greatest of his nondramatic works was an unfinished paraphrase of the Hero and Leander of Musaeus, which was completed by George Chapman; but he is now most often remembered for one of the most famous of English lyrics, The Passionate Shepherd to His Love, which begins with the much-quoted line, "Come live with me and be my love." His advent in the London theater marked the beginning of great drama in England, and there are few who will deny that he was surely a dramatist of authentic genius (there are many readers who will insist, indeed, that no list of the greatest Elizabethan plays is complete which fails to include at least The Tragedy of Dr. Faustus and The Jew of Malta from among Marlowe's works).

Marlowe, Julia. [Original name, Sarah Frances Frost.] b. at Caldbeck, England, Aug. 17, 1866; d. Nov. 12, 1950. American actress. She played in romantic plays and was especially successful in Shakespearian roles. In 1911 she married E. H. Sothern.

Marlowe, Owen. b. in England, Aug. 1, 1830; d. at Boston, Mass., May 19, 1876. American actor.

Marly-la-Machine (mär.lē.lä.mä.shēn). See under Marly-le-Roi.

Marly-le-Roi (mär.lē.lə.rwä). Village in N France, in the department of Seine-et-Oise, situated on the Seine River ab. 10 mi. W of Paris. It was formerly noted for its chateau of Louis XIV (destroyed c1800); only the park remains. Nearby is Marly-la-Machine, a hamlet noted for its hydraulic works, which formerly supplied the fountains of Versailles with water. 2,992 (1946).

Marmaduke (mär'mə.dūk), John Sappington. b. near Arrow Rock, Mo., March 14, 1833; d. at Jefferson City, Mo., Dec. 28, 1887. American soldier and politician, with the Confederate army in the Civil War. He was commissioned (1863) brigadier general for his services at the battle of Shiloh, invaded (1863) southeast Missouri, and was in charge (1864) of cavalry in Price's raid into Missouri, during which he was captured, spending the rest of the war as a prisoner of war (1864-65). He was governor (1884-87) of Missouri.

Marmagão (mär.mə.goun'). See Mormugão.

Marmande (mar.mänd'). [Ancient name, Marmonda.] Town in SW France, in the department of Lot-et-Garonne, on the Garonne River ab. 42 mi. SE of Bordeaux. It is a river port, and a commercial center for trade in grain, liquors, and tobacco. 12,401 (1946).

Marmara (mär'mą.rą). [Also: Marmora; ancient name, Proconnesus.] Island in NW Turkey, in the W part of the Sea of Marmara. It has marble quarries, for which it has been noted since ancient times, and which have supplied building materials to Istanbul. Area, ab. 50 sq. mi.

Marmara, Sea of. [Also: Sea of Marmora; ancient name, Propontis.] Sea between European and Asiatic Turkey, communicating with the Black Sea on the NE by the Strait of Bosporus, and with the Aegean Sea on the SW by the Dardanelles. Length, ab. 170 mi.; greatest width, ab. 50 mi.

Marmet (mär'mĕt). Town in W central West Virginia, in Kanawha County, on the Kanawha River ab. 8 mi. S of Charleston. 2,515 (1950).

Marmier (mär.myā), Xavier. b. at Pontarlier, France, June 24, 1809; d. at Paris, Oct. 11, 1892. French man of letters, author of travels, and translator. He made a journey to Scandinavia and Lapland in 1836–38, was appointed professor of foreign literature at Rennes in 1839, became librarian of the ministry of public instruction at Paris in 1841, and in 1846 was named custodian of the library of Sainte-Geneviève. He published histories of German, Danish, and Swedish literatures, a history of Iceland, and translations from the German and Scandinavian.

Marmion (mär'mi.ŏn). Narrative poem by Sir Walter Scott, published in 1808.

Marmion, Shackerley or Shakerley. b. near Brackley, Northamptonshire, England, in January, 1603; d. at London, in January, 1639. English dramatist and poet. He wrote Holland's Leaguer (licensed and printed 1632), A Fine Companion (1633), and The Antiquary (his best-known play; acted in 1633, printed 1641). He also wrote Cupid and Psyche, and other poems.

Mármol (mär'mōl), José. b. at Buenos Aires, 1818; d. there, Aug. 12, 1871. Argentine novelist and poet, whose best-known works reflect the strong anti-Rosas sentiments for which he spent many years in prison or in exile. After Rosas's fall, he served as senator and as director (1858–71) of the national library. Author of Rosas: El 25 de mayo de 1850 (1850), Amalia (1851 and 1855; the first Argentine novel), and El Cruzado (1851).

Marmolada (mär.mō.lä'dä). [German, Marmolata (-tä).] Highest summit of the Dolomites, in N Italy. Elevation, ab. 10,965 ft.

Marmolejo (mär.mō.le'ʜō). Mountain in the Andes, on the Chilean-Argentine border E of Santiago. Elevation, ab. 20,009 ft.

Marmolejo, Alonso de Góngora. See Góngora Marmolejo, Alonso de.

Marmonda (mär.mon'dą). Ancient name of Marmande.

Marmont (mär.môn), Auguste Frédéric Louis Viesse de. [Title, Duc de Raguse.] b. at Châtillon-sur-Seine, France, July 20, 1774; d. at Venice, March 2, 1852. French marshal. He served with distinction in the Napoleonic campaigns, particularly at Marengo (1800) and Ulm (1805), and in the campaigns of 1809 and 1813–14, and was governor general of the Illyrian Provinces (1809–11). He was defeated by Wellington at Salamanca (July 22, 1812), and surrendered his army to the provisional government in April, 1814, an act often criticized as being treasonable to Napoleon. He unsuccessfully attempted to suppress the revolution of 1830. Author of Mémoires (1856–57).

Marmontel (mär.môn.tel), Jean François. b. at Bort, Limousin, France, July 11, 1723; d. at Abbeville, Eure, France, Dec. 31, 1799. French writer. His first piece of literary work, an ode (1743), proved a failure. Encouraged by Voltaire's sympathy, however, he went to Paris, and took several prizes in literary competition (1745–47). He wrote several tragedies, Denys le tyran (1748), Aristomène (1749), Cléopâtre (1750), Les Héraclides (1752), and Egyptus (1753), but his success was not great as a poet. Then he turned his attention to prose, and contributed largely to the Encyclopédie. He recast several of his articles and published them subsequently in book form, such as his Poétique française (1763) and Éléments de littérature (1787). He had already acquired renown by his Contes moraux (1761), his philosophical novel Bélisaire (1767), and his historical novel Les Incas (1777). He published further La Pharsale, translated from Lucan (1761), and wrote the words for several comic operas, as Le Huron (1768), Zémire et Azor (1771), Didon (1783), and Pénélope (1785). Between 1789 and 1792 he published in Le Mercure a second series of Contes moraux. His Mémoires d'un père à ses enfants (1804) and Leçons d'un père à ses enfants sur la langue française (1806) were published posthumously.

Marmora (mär.mō'rą). See Marmara.

Marmora (mär.mō'rä), Alfonso Ferrero, Marchese di La. See La Marmora or Lamarmora, Alfonso Ferrero, Marchese di.

Marmore (mär'mō.rā), Cascate delle. [English, Falls of Terni.] Series of cascades in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Umbria, in the province of Terni, SE of Terni, in the Velino River near its mouth. The spot is celebrated for its beauty. Height of the falls, ab. 65 ft., 330 ft., and 190 ft., respectively.

Marne (märn; French, mȧrn). Department in N France, bounded by Aisne and Ardennes on the N, Meuse on the E, Haute-Marne and Aube on the S, and Aisne and Seine-et-Marne on the W. The department is traversed by the Marne River and the Rhine-Seine Canal. It was part of the former province of Champagne. In the Middle Ages it was a commercial center as a result of the Champagne fairs, at which the products of Mediterranean and Northern Europe were exchanged. Many historical events took place here. Reims was the place where the kings of France were crowned. Châlons-sur-Marne was the starting point for the second Crusade. The region suffered from the invasion of Charles V, the religious wars, and the war of the Fronde. During the French Revolution, the invasion armies were repulsed here. The department was occupied by the Germans in 1870. In 1914 the German armies were stopped in the first battle of the Marne; a decisive action was again fought here in 1918. Grains, excellent wines of the champagne type, as well as fruits and sugar beets, are the main agricultural products. The wines are widely exported. The main firms in the champagne wine trade are located at Reims, Châlons, Épernay, Avize, and Ay. There are metal, textile, and various food industries. Capital, Châlons-sur-Marne; area, ab. 3,167 sq. mi.; pop. 386,926 (1946).

Marne, Battles of the. Name applied to two battles, nearly four years apart, on the Western Front, in World War I. Both represented successful Allied counteractions to German attempts to get to Paris and the broad plains of France. The first battle (Sept. 5–12, 1914) was fought over a wide front from the north of Paris to the west of Verdun. It was initially of uneven outcome, but the Germans, worried about the position of their right wing, ordered the retreat of their five armies to the Aisne on September 9. Thereby they accepted the failure of their attempt to win the war in the west by an offensive in the first six weeks. It was during this battle (September 7–8) that Gen. Galliéni moved the 7th division into battle from Paris in taxicabs. Almost four years later, in the final spring and summer offensives of 1918, German troops crossed the Aisne and Marne again, but a French counterattack forced their retreat. As a consequence the Allies gained the initiative and the offensives begun soon thereafter eventually culminated in Germany's request for an armistice.

Marne River. [Latin, Matrona.] River in N France which joins the Seine ab. 2 mi. SE of Paris. Length, ab. 325 mi., of which ab. 230 mi. are navigable.

Marnix Sainte-Aldegonde (mär'niks saṅt'äl.dę.gôn'dę), Philipp van. See Sainte-Aldegonde, Philipp van Marnix.

Marno (mär'nō), Ernst. b. at Vienna, 1844; d. at Khartoum, in what is now Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, 1883. Austrian traveler in Africa.

Maro (mā'rō). Family name of the Roman poet Vergil (Publius Vergilius Maro).

Maroc (mȧ.rok). French name of Morocco.

Marocco (mą.rok'ō). See Morocco.

Marochetti (mä.rō.kāt'tē), Carlo. b. at Turin, Italy, 1805; d. at Paris, Jan. 4, 1868. Italian sculptor. His chief works are equestrian statues of the Duc d'Orléans, the equestrian statue of Richard I (Richard Cœur de Lion) at Westminster, the equestrian statues of Queen Victoria and the Duke of Wellington at Glasgow, and the Inkerman monument at Saint Paul's, London.

Maroni (mą.rō'ni). [Dutch, Marowijne.] River in NE South America, which forms part of the boundary between French Guiana and Surinam. It flows N to the Atlantic Ocean. Length, ab. 420 mi.

Maronites (mar'ọ.nīts). Most numerous single religious element in the population of Lebanon, and a minority element in Syria; they are also found today in the U.S. and elsewhere in the New World.

Maros (mô'rōsh). Hungarian name of the Mureş.

Marostica (mä.rôs'tē.kä). Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Vicenza, situated at the foot of the Alpine foothills, NE of Vicenza. It has manufactures of straw hats, and two medieval castles with well-preserved walls and towers. Pop. of commune, 13,248 (1936); of town, 4,021 (1936).

Marosvásárhely (mô'rōsh.vä'shär.hey'). Hungarian name of Târgu-Mureş.

Marot (mȧ.rō), Clément. b. at Cahors, France, 1497; d. at Turin, Italy, 1544. French poet. His father had been court poet to the Queen of France, Anne de Bretagne, and through him the son obtained access to the court circles, where he won the good will of Margaret of Navarre, sister of Francis I. When Francis I came to the throne of France in 1515, Clément Marot attracted the king's attention by his poem Le Temple de Cupidon, and was retained by him at court. The poet followed his royal patron on his expeditions, and led on the whole an eventful life. His tendency was towards humanism and, to some extent, the Reformation, and he was after 1526 always under suspicion of heresy. He was arrested in 1526 but freed the same year, and in 1535 had to flee to Ferrara and later to Rome, where he obtained the aid of Pope Paul III to enable him to return (1539) to France. There he got into a literary quarrel with Sagon, an adherent of the Sorbonne, with the result that he again fled (1543), this time to Geneva and Calvin. But Calvinism was not palatable to the liberal mind of Marot and he left Geneva for Turin, where he died. Besides a great deal of original poetry, light, graceful, satirical, and including Enfer (written in prison, 1526), Adolescence Clémentine (a collection published 1532), and Blasons (c1536), Marot also translated portions of Vergil, Ovid, and Petrarch, and 52 psalms of David. His complete works have been variously edited; the last edition from the author's lifetime is dated 1544.

Mârouf, the Cobbler of Cairo (mä.röf'; kī'rō). [French title, Mârouf, Salvetier du Caire.] Opera in five acts by Henri Rabaud with a libretto by Lucien Nepoty based on one of the tales from The Arabian Nights' Entertainments, first performed at Paris on May 15, 1914.

Marovoay (mä.rō.vō'ī). Port in NW Madagascar, off SE Africa, at the SE end of Bombetoka Bay. It is connected by road with Majunga on the coast and with the capital, Tananarive, in the interior. 11,874 (1948).

Marowijne (mä.rō.wī'nę). Dutch name of the Maroni.

Marozia (mą.rō'zhi.ą, -zhą). d. c945. Roman woman notorious for her profligacy and for the influence she exercised over the papal court. She was the daughter of Theodora and Theophylactus, became the mistress of Pope Sergius III, and married successively Alberic I, Prince of Rome, her stepson Guido of Tuscany, and Hugo (or Hugh), king of Italy. She was instrumental in raising three popes to the throne, among whom was her son by Sergius, John XI. She was eventually imprisoned by her son Alberic II.

Marple (mär'pl). Urban district in W England, in Cheshire, ab. 9 mi. SE of Manchester, ab. 177 mi. NW of London by rail. 13,068 (1951).

Marplot, or the Second Part of The Busy Body (mär'plot). Comedy by Susannah Centlivre, produced in 1710. Henry Woodward altered it, and called it Marplot in Lisbon. Martin Marplot is a silly, cowardly fellow, who spoils everything he undertakes.

Marprelate Controversy (mär'prel''ą̄t). See Martin Marprelate.

Marpriest (mär'prēst''), Martin. Pseudonym of Overton, Richard.

Marquand (mär.kwond'), Allan. b. at New York, Dec. 10, 1853; d. there, Sept. 24, 1924. American art historian; son of Henry Gurdon Marquand. He was professor (1890 et seq.) of archaeology and the history of art at Princeton. Editorial contributor (1885–1924) to the American Journal of Archeology; founded the Princeton monographs in art and archaeology; edited, with Arthur L. Frothingham, the third volume (1887) of the Iconographic Encyclopaedia and A Textbook of the History of Sculpture (1896); author of Della Robbias in America (1912), Robbia Heraldry (1919), Giovanni della Robbia (1920), Benedetto and Santi Buglioni (1921), Andrea Della Robbia and His Atelier (1922), and The Brothers of Giovanni della Robbia (1928), a series of catalogues.

Marquand, Henry Gurdon. b. at New York, April 11, 1819; d. there, Feb. 26, 1902. American philanthropist and financier. He was an owner (1874 et seq.), vice-president (1875–81), president (1881–), and trustee of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railroad. He was an organizer (1869) of the Metropolitan Museum of Art at New York, and its president (1889–1902).

Marquand, John Phillips. b. at Wilmington, Del., Nov. 10, 1893—. American novelist. He was a staff member of the Boston Transcript (1915–17) and of the Sunday department of the New York Tribune (1919–20). Author of The Unspeakable Gentleman (1922), Four of a Kind (1923), The Black Cargo (1925), Haven's End (1933), Wickford Point (1939), H. M. Pulham Esq. (1941), So Little Time (1943), B. F.'s Daughter (1946), Point of No Return (1949; dramatized in 1951), Melville Goodwin, U.S.A. (1951), and other novels. Author also of detective novels featuring the character Mr. Moto, such as Thank You, Mr. Moto (1936). He received a Pulitzer prize for his novel The Late George Apley (1937), which he later dramatized (1944) with George S. Kaufman.

Marquesans (mär.kā'sąnz). Indigenous Polynesian people of the Marquesas Islands. Their language, Marquesan, belongs to the Eastern Polynesian group of the Malayo-Polynesian family of languages. The attainment in art of these people was of a high level long before their discovery by the Spanish in 1595. It is characterized by delicate openwork carvings of turtle shell and highly stylized designs in relief, of which the outstanding motif is based on the human skull.

Marquesas Islands (mär.kā'sąs). [French, Îles Marquises.] Group of islands in the South Pacific, N of the Tuamotu Archipelago and ab. 740 mi. NE of Tahiti: part of the colony of French Oceania. Nukahiva and Hivaoa are the largest. The surface is mountainous. They were discovered by Mendaña in 1595 and again by Cook in 1774, and were named for García Hurtado de Mendoza, Marquis of Cañete. In 1842 they became a French protectorate. Area, ab. 480 sq. mi.; pop. 2,988 (1946).

Marquet (mär.ke), Albert. b. at Bordeaux, France, March 27, 1875; d. 1947. French painter. He worked in France, the Netherlands, Germany, and Algiers. His sketches, considered among the best produced by any contemporary French artist, are extremely plastic, despite their economy of line. Among his better-known works are After the Rain, Notre-Dame, L'Île de St. Louis, Pont Neuf, Nude, Quay at Paris, At Rouen, Arabian Women, Portrait of Mme. Lani, illustrations for several books, and many lithographs, watercolors, drawings, and etchings.

Marquette (mär.ket'). City in the C part of the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, county seat of Marquette County, on Lake Superior: shipping point for iron ore; manufactures wood by-products, machine parts, and mining equipment. It is the seat of Northern State Teachers College. 17,202 (1950).

Marquette, Jacques. [Called Père Marquette.] b. at Laon, France, 1637; d. near Lake Michigan, May 18, 1675. French Jesuit missionary and explorer. He came to the New World in 1666 and was sent 1668 on a mission to the Ottawa Indians. He remained among them, at Sault Ste. Marie, St. Esprit, and St. Ignace, which he founded (1671), until 1673. He accompanied Louis Jolliet in his voyage down the Wisconsin and Mississippi rivers and up the Illinois River in 1673. He died while attempting to establish a mission among the Illinois Indians. He wrote a description of the expedition of 1673, entitled Voyage et découverte de quelques pays et nations de l'Amérique Septentrionale.

Marquette-lez-Lille (mär.ket lā lēl). Town in N France, in the department of Nord, on the Deule River ab. 3 mi. N of Lille. It is an industrial suburb of Lille and a river port. 6,548 (1946).

Márquez (mär'kes), José Arnaldo. b. c1825; killed in the defense of Lima, Peru, Jan. 15, 1881. Peruvian poet. He took part in the early civil wars, was several times banished, and traveled in Chile, Cuba, and the U.S. In later life he occupied various consular and diplomatic positions. Márquez was regarded as the best Peruvian poet of his time, especially in the lyric style.

Márquez, José Ignacio. Colombian politician, president of New Granada for a short time in 1832, and again in the years 1837–41.

Márquez Rodríguez (mär'keth rō.ᴛʜrē'geth), Manuel. b. at Villaseca de la Sacra, Toledo, Spain, March 14, 1872—. Spanish ophthalmologist, known for his work on biastigmatism.

Marquina (mär.kē'nä), Eduardo. b. in Catalonia, Spain, 1879; d. 1947. Spanish poet and dramatist. He revived the poetical historical drama, which he endowed with great lyric charm and dramatic suspense. His masterpiece, En Flandes se ha puesto el sol (1910), continues to be a favorite with Spanish audiences. Of the same type are Las Hijas del Cid and Doña María la Brava. Love is the principal theme of his poetry, which is written with great mastery of form. His most important poetical works were Odas, Églogas, Las Vendimias, and Canciones del momento. In his later works he turned to social and political themes.

Marquis (mär'kwis), Don. [Full name, Donald Robert Perry Marquis.] b. at Walnut, Ill., July 29, 1878; d. at New York, Dec. 29, 1937. 'American humorist and journalist. He was coeditor (1907–09) with Joel Chandler Harris of the Uncle Remus Magazine, and on the staff of the New York Sun (1912–22) and of the New York Tribune (1922–25). While writing the column "The Sun Dial" for the New York Sun he introduced the characters of Hermione and the Little Group of Serious Thinkers, The Old Soak, archy the cockroach, and mehitabel the cat. His columns were collected in book form in Hermione (1916), The Old Soak (1921), archy and mehitabel (1927), Off the Arm (1930), and archy does his part (1935). He was the author also of Danny's Own Story (1912), Revolt of the Oyster (1922), The Almost Perfect State (1927), Love Sonnets of a Cave Man (1928), and the successful play The Old Soak (1922).

Marquis, Frederick James. See Woolton, 1st Baron.

Marquis, the. In early Peruvian history, Francisco Pizarro, who was created a marquis by Charles V in 1535. There is no record of a special designation for the marquisate.

Marquise (mär.kēz). Town in N France, in the department of Pas-de-Calais, ab. 14 mi. SW of Calais. It has marble quarries. 3,975 (1946).

Marquises (mär.kēz), Îles. French name of the Marquesas Islands.

Marr (mär), Carl. b. at Milwaukee, Wis., 1859; d. July 10, 1936. American figure painter. Among his works are The Mystery of Life (at the Metropolitan Museum, New York), The Flagellants (1889), and 1806 in Germany (1890). From 1893 he was professor at the Academy of Fine Arts at Munich, and served (until 1925) as its director.

Marr, John. See John Marr and Other Sailors.

Marracci (mär.rät'chē), Lodovico. b. at Lucca, Italy, 1612; d. at Rome, Feb. 5, 1700. Italian Orientalist.

Marrakech (mą.rä'kesh). [Also: Marrakesh; sometimes incorrectly called Morocco.] City in NW Africa, in W central French Morocco, ab. 150 mi. S of Casablanca, with which it is connected by rail. It is situated in a large oasis at the foot of the High Atlas Mountains. It has manufactures of morocco leather. The imperial palace consists of an irregular mass of buildings covering ab. 180 acres in the S part of the city. The city was founded in 1063, and reached its greatest size and prosperity in the 13th and 14th centuries. It was one of the two capitals of the sultanate of Morocco. It was captured by the French in 1912. Pop. 238,237 (1947).

Marrast (mą.rą), Armand. b. at St.-Gaudens, France, June 5, 1801; d. at Paris, March 10, 1852. French politician and journalist. He was secretary and member of the provisional government and mayor of Paris in 1848 after the fall of Louis Philippe, and president (1848–49) of the Constituent Assembly.

Marrero (mą.rār'ō). Unincorporated community in SE Louisiana, in Jefferson Parish, included in the urbanized area of New Orleans. It has several large manufacturing plants along the Mississippi, and truck farming. Under the new urban definition established for use in the 1950 census it was counted with adjoining urban communities; the last official enumeration was 4,094 (1940).

Marretie's Hoeck (mä.rā'tēs hök). Former name of Marcus Hook.

Marri (mur'ē). See Murree, Pakistan.

Marriage. Novel by Susan E. Ferrier, published anonymously in 1818.

Marriage. Novel by H. G. Wells, published in 1912.

Marriage à la Mode. Play by John Dryden, acted in 1673, and considered his best comedy.

Marriage à la Mode. Series of six paintings by Hogarth (1745), in the National Gallery, London. The subject is the disastrous consequences of marriage, without love, in high life, and is illustrated through scenes of hollow festivity, profligacy, dueling, the execution of the victor for murder, and the suicide of the guilty wife.

Marriage à la Mode, or the Comical Lovers. Comedy by Colley Cibber, a combination of the comic scenes of John Dryden's Marriage à la Mode and The Maiden Queen, produced in 1707.

Marriage at Cana (kā'nạ). Subject of various religious paintings, of which some of the best known are: 1. A painting by Paolo Veronese. The table is in an open court with monumental architecture. Christ is seated with a brilliant company, most of whom wear Venetian dress. 2. Another painting (1563) by Paolo Veronese, in the Louvre at Paris. The picture measures 32 by 21 ft., and is throughout a triumph of coloring. The subject is treated as a sumptuous banquet, in a rich architectural setting. Many of the personages are portraits of sovereigns and other distinguished people of the 16th century. The musicians represent the chief Venetian painters. 3. A picture by Tintoretto, in the sacristy of Santa Maria della Salute, Venice.

Marriage of Figaro (fig'ạ.rō), The. English title of Nozze di Figaro, Le.

Marriage of Heaven and Hell, The. Prose work by William Blake, published in 1790, in which the author denies eternal punishment for sin and rejects the code of authority.

Marriage of the Virgin. Subject of various paintings, two of the best known being: 1. One of the most important paintings of Perugino, in the museum at Caen, France. 2. A painting by Raphael, in the Brera at Milan. Mary and her attendant maidens stand at the spectator's left; Joseph, bearing the flowering staff, and behind him the suitors with the barren staves, face them at the right, while the venerable high priest in the middle performs his function, and a youth in the foreground breaks his dry staff across his knee. The temple occupies the background.

Married Man, The. Play by Elizabeth Inchbald, produced in 1789. It is taken from Le Philosophe marié of Philippe Destouches.

Marriott (mar'i.ọt), Sir John Arthur Ransome. b. 1859; d. in Wales, June 6, 1945. English historian. Known for his writings on historical, political, and other subjects of current interest, he was the author of Makers of Modern Italy (1889), George Canning and his Times (1903), Second Chambers (1910), England Since Waterloo (1913), The English Land System (1914), The Right to Work (1919), Economics and Ethics (1923), The Crisis of English Liberty (1930), 25 Years of the Reign of King George V (1935), Dictatorship and Democracy (1935), The Tragedy of Europe (1941), Federalism and the Problem of the Small State (1943), and others.

Marroquín (mär.rō.kēn'), José Manuel. b. 1827; d. 1908. Colombian politician and philologist, president (1900–04) of Colombia. Vice-president under Miguel Sanclemente, he seized (1900) control of the government, imprisoned Sanclemente, and was recognized as president later in the year. During his administration Panama revolted (1903) and became a separate republic. Author of books on the Castilian language.

Marrow Controversy. Controversy (c1719–22) in the Church of Scotland, relating to the doctrines which were of the type more recently called "evangelical," set forth in the book entitled The Marrow of Modern Divinity by Edward Fisher (1644). Ebenezer and Ralph Erskine and Thomas Boston were among the "Marrow men."

Marrucini (mar.ö.sī'nī). Ancient Italian people dwelling near the Adriatic, north of Samnium, allied to the Marsi, an Italic people east of Rome. Their principal cities were Alternum (today Pescara) and Teate (today Chieti). They were subjugated by the Romans in 305 B.C. Their language is classified as a Sabellian dialect of the ancient Italic languages.

Marruecos (mär.rwā'kōs). Spanish name of Morocco.

Marryat (mar'i.at), Florence. b. at Brighton, England, 1837; d. at London, Oct. 27, 1899. English novelist; daughter of Frederick Marryat. She was also known as a dramatic reader. She was editor (1872–76) of London Society, published many novels, and wrote a life of her father (1872).

Marryat, Frederick. [Called Captain Marryat.] b. at London, July 10, 1792; d. at Langham, Norfolk, England, Aug. 9, 1848. British naval officer and novelist. In 1806 he entered the navy, and in 1815 was made commander. He was serving on the St. Helena station when Napoleon died (1821). He served (1824–25) in Burma during the Burmese War, and led an expedition to Bassein to seize Burmese stores. He resigned (1830), and devoted himself to literature, using his naval background as the basis of a series of adventure novels. He published Frank Mildmay, or Adventures of a Naval Officer (1829), The King's Own (1830), Peter Simple (1834), Jacob Faithful (1834), Mr. Midshipman Easy (1836), Japhet in Search of a Father (1836), Snarleyyow, or the Dog Fiend (1837), The Phantom Ship (1839), Masterman Ready (1841), The Children of the New Forest (1847), and The Little Savage (1848). He edited the Metropolitan Magazine from 1832 to 1835.

Mars (märs), Mademoiselle. [Original name, Anne Françoise Hippolyte Boutet.] b. at Paris, Feb. 9, 1779; d. there, March 20, 1847. French actress, distinguished in comedy. She made her first great success in 1803, and later effected a great improvement in stage costume, playing her parts in dress of a proper date. She excelled in high comedy, and she was unequaled in the précieuses and coquettes of Molière and Marivaux. She left the stage in 1841 with a large fortune.

Mars (märz). In Roman mythology, the god of war. Mars was the father of Romulus and Remus, and thus ancestor of the Roman state. Jupiter, Mars, and Quirinus (who was identified with Romulus) comprised an early triad. Mars was an ancient Italian god of fertility and vegetation before he was a Roman god, and the first month of the year (March) was named for him. His transition from spring and fertility god to war god is not satisfactorily explained, but it has been suggested that wars usually start in the spring. His priests (the Salii) danced in the great March festival dressed in armor. Bellona (Roman war goddess) was his charioteer, and wife, sister, or daughter. In later mythology, Mars became identified with the Greek Ares.

Mars. Planet revolving between the Earth and Jupiter at a mean distance from the Sun of 141,700,000 mi. (1.52 times Earth's distance) in an orbit with marked eccentricity (0.093) in a period of 686.98 days. It is overtaken by the Earth and comes to opposition at intervals which average about 780 days (the orbits of the two planets are such that the interval in a given instance may range from 766 upwards to about 800 days), at which times it can approach to 34,500,000 mi., but the distance between the two planets may be as great as 62,900,000 mi. at opposition. Of the planets only Venus comes closer to the Earth (and is then unfavorably placed for observation, near the Sun). The brightness of Mars can be as great as magnitude −2.8, exceeded only by Venus. Its diameter is 4,250 mi., and its mass of 6.1 times 10^{20} tons is only one ninth that of the Earth. Its mean density is 3.84 times that of water; the surface gravity is 0.37 and the velocity of escape 3.1 millimeters per second. The rotation period is 24 hours, 37 minutes, 22.58 seconds. It receives only 43 percent as much solar radiation as the Earth, but only 15 percent of the light is reflected. The resulting surface conditions are extremely severe by terrestrial standards; the temperature rises to 50 degrees Fahrenheit at noon, but, because of the thin atmosphere, it is below the freezing point of water most of the time all over the planet. The red color of Mars, thought to be due to the presence of iron oxide on the surface, caused its identification by the ancients with the god of war. There is little or no oxygen in the atmosphere, but definite seasonal changes are observed, with polar caps of ice forming and dissipating, and dark regions exhibiting a cycle consistent with vegetable growth. The wealth of surface detail, some of which is best delineated as canal-like features, has been a subject of scientific controversy since they were first observed by Giovanni Schiaparelli in 1877. The view now most usually favored is that there is life of a low order only. The planet is accompanied by two satellites, Phobos and Deimos, discovered by Asaph Hall in 1877, and named for the horses that drew the war chariot of Mars

Marsa Ali (mär'sa ä.lē'). Arabic name of Marsala.

Mar Saba (mär' sä'ba). Monastery of the Greek Church, situated in the Kidron valley ab. 8 mi. SE of Jerusalem, in W Jordan. It derives its name from the founder, Saint Sabas, who was born in Cappadocia c439 and died in 532.

Marsal (mär.sal), Frédéric François. See François-Marsal, Frédéric.

Marsala (mär.sä'lä). [Arabic, Marsa Ali; ancient name, Lilybaeum.] City and commune in SW Italy, in W Sicily, in the province of Trapani, situated on the Mediterranean Sea S of Trapani. It is a port city, communicating chiefly with Africa, and has large wine cellars whence the wine known as Marsala is exported. It has macaroni and cheese industries, and fisheries. The cathedral is in the baroque style. In ancient times the town of Lilybaeum, founded by the Phoenicians, was the chief stronghold of the Carthaginians in Sicily; resisted Dionysius and Pyrrhus (368 B.C. and 276 B.C.) and the Romans during the first Punic War (264–241 B.C.), who occupied it only at the end of the war; it was used as the place of Scipio's embarkation for Africa in the second Punic War (218–201 B.C.). The Arabs reconstructed the port in the early Middle Ages; it was later occupied by the Normans. Garibaldi landed here, March 11, 1860. Considerable damage was suffered during World War II by some buildings of tourist interest, but repairs have been completed or are being carried out. Pop. of commune, 62,171 (1936); of city, 24,650 (1936).

Marsa Susa (mär'sa sö'za). Modern name of Apollonia, N Africa.

Marschall von Bieberstein (mär'shäl fon bē'bėr.shtīn), Baron Adolf Hermann von. b. at Karlsruhe, Germany, Oct. 12, 1842; d. at Badenweiler, Germany, Sept. 24, 1912. German statesman and diplomat. After serving as ambassador from Baden to Berlin, he succeeded (1890) Herbert Bismarck as foreign secretary, and served in this capacity under Caprivi and Hohenlohe. An imperialist, he drafted the telegram (1896) sent by the German emperor to Paul Krüger expressing hope for the successful defense of the Transvaal against the English. He was also an advocate of a strong navy. He resigned (1897) to become ambassador to Turkey, where he promoted the Berlin-to-Baghdad Railway and did much to keep Turkey within the German orbit. He represented (1907) Germany at the second Hague conference, where he opposed the reduction of armaments. In 1912 he was made ambassador to England but died shortly after the appointment.

Marschner (märsh'nėr), Heinrich August. b. at Zittau, Germany, Aug. 16, 1795; d. at Hanover, Germany, Dec. 14, 1861. German composer. He was joint Kapellmeister (choirmaster) with Weber and Morlacchi of the opera at Dresden (1823–26), Kapellmeister of the Leipzig theater (1827–31), and court Kapellmeister at Hanover after 1831. He was the author of the operas Der Vampyr (1828), Der Templer und die Jüdin (1829), Hans Heiling (1833), and others.

Marsden (marz'den). See under Colne Valley.

Marsden, Charles. Character in Strange Interlude (1928), drama by Eugene O'Neill.

Marsden, Samuel. b. at Farseley, Yorkshire, England, c1764; d. at Parramatta, New South Wales, Australia, May 12, 1838. Australian clergyman and pioneer missionary to the New Zealand Maoris. He opened (1794) a vigorous clerical career at Sydney, participated in farming and grazing, served as civil magistrate dealing out lashes to discipline convicts, and resisted Governor Macquarie's effort to complete ex-convicts' rehabilitation by appointing them to the magistracy. In 1814 he established a mission to the New Zealand Maoris which he carried on until his death, making seven visits to New Zealand, the last in 1837. He is considered one of the greatest and best South Seas missionaries.

Marsden, William. b. at Verval, Ireland, Nov. 16, 1754; d. near London, Oct. 6, 1836. English Orientalist and numismatist. His chief works are History of Sumatra (1783), Dictionary and Grammar of the Malayan Language (1812), and Numismata illustrata orientalia (1823–25).

Marsdiep or Mars Diep (märs'dēp'). Strait in the Netherlands, separating the island of Texel from the mainland.

Marse Henry (märs hen'ri). See Watterson, Henry.

Marseillaise (mär.se.lāz'; French, mȧr.se.yez), La. French national anthem. The words and music are by Claude Joseph Rouget de Lisle, a captain of engineers, and were composed at Strasbourg on the night of April 24, 1792. It was first called Chant de guerre de l'armée du Rhin; sung by a group of soldiers from Marseilles who entered Paris late in July and marched on the Tuileries on Aug. 10, it became known as the Chant des Marseillais. The tune has often been utilized by composers.

Marseilles (mär.sā', mär.sālz'). [French, Marseille (mȧr-sey'); ancient Greek, Massalia; Latin, Massilia.] City in SE France, capital of the department of Bouches-du-Rhône, situated on the Mediterranean, E of the mouth of the Rhone River. It is the second largest city in France, and its largest seaport. Its commerce is mainly with Italy, Africa, the Middle East, India, and South America. Grain, coffee, oil seeds, and raw materials for the textile and leather industries are among the chief imports. It has repair docks, shipyards, and a number of industries, among which the chemical, soap, clothing, and food industries are notable. The city is a center for excursions, holds annual fairs, and has a number of interesting old buildings. The old cathedral dates from the 12th and 16th centuries; the new cathedral from the middle of the 19th century. The churches of Notre-Dame-de-la-Garde and Saint-Victor date mainly from the 12th century; the Hôtel de Ville (town hall) dates from the 17th century. Marseilles has a university, a stock exchange, and a number of museums and institutes, including the art museum and the colonial institute. Founded by the Greeks, the town became one of the most important cities of Roman Gaul. Later, the city was destroyed by the Saracens, and subsequently battled often against feudal and royal supremacy. It went to France in 1481, but was deprived of its privileges by Louis XIV in 1660. During the French Revolution its sympathies were on the royalist side. In the 19th century the French occupation of Algeria, the opening of the Suez Canal, the development of French Africa, and the creation of the canal from Marseilles to the Rhone opened for Marseilles a new period of commercial and industrial development. In World War II the city suffered severely; the harbor installations and the picturesque quarters around the old harbor (once a great attraction for sightseers) were almost completely destroyed. Reconstruction was initiated after the war. 914,232 (1936), 636,264 (1946).

Marseilles (mär.sālz'). City in NE Illinois, in La Salle County: paper mill and chemical industries. 4,514 (1950).

Marsh (märsh), Adam. See Adam de Marisco.

Marsh, Anne. [Maiden name, Caldwell.] b. in Staffordshire, England, c1798; d. there, in October, 1874. English novelist.

Marsh, Charles Wesley. b. near Trenton, Ontario, Canada, March 22, 1834; d. Nov. 9, 1918. American inventor and editor. He patented (1858) with his brother, William Marsh, an improved Mann reaping machine with a self-binder, and established (1863) a factory at Plano, Ill. He founded (1869) the Sycamore Marsh Harvester Manufacturing Company at Sycamore, Ill. He was the first editor (1885–1904) of Farm Implement News.

Marsh, Sir Edward Howard. b. Nov. 18, 1872—. English public official and writer. He served as private secretary to Winston Churchill (1905, 1917–22, 1924–29), to V. C. W. Cavendish, 9th Duke of Devonshire (1922–24), to J. H. Thomas (1924, 1929–36), and to Malcolm MacDonald (1936–37). Author of Memoir of Rupert Brooke (1915), A Number of People (1939), and Minima (1947).

Marsh, George Perkins. b. at Woodstock, Vt., March 15, 1801; d. at Vallombrosa, Italy, July 23, 1882. American philologist, diplomat, and politician. He was member of Congress from Vermont (1842–49), and U.S. minister to Turkey (1849–53) and to Italy (1861–82). He published A Compendious Grammar of the Old Northern or Icelandic Language (1838), The Camel (1856), Lectures on the English Language (1860), The Origin and History of the English Language (1862), Man and Nature (1864; revised as The Earth as Modified by Human Action, 1874).

Marsh, Herbert. b. at Faversham, Kent, England, Dec. 10, 1757; d. at Peterborough, England, May 1, 1839. Bishop of Peterborough (1819–39).

Marsh, Ngaio. b. at Christchurch, New Zealand, April 23, 1899—. New Zealand detective fiction writer. She is the author of A Man Lay Dead (1934), Death in Ecstasy (1937), Vintage Murder (1937), Overture to Death (1939), Colour Scheme (1943), Died in the Wool (1945), Final Curtain (1947), Night at the Vulcan (1951), and others.

Marsh, Othniel Charles. b. at Lockport, N.Y., Oct. 29, 1831; d. at New Haven, Conn., March 18, 1899. American paleontologist, professor (1866–99) at Yale University. He was a nephew of George Peabody, who established the Peabody Museum of Natural History at Yale at Marsh's urging. His special study was the extinct vertebrates of the U.S., of which he discovered several new orders. His works include Odontornithes: a Monograph on the Extinct Toothed Birds of North America (1880), Dinocerata: a Monograph on an Extinct Order of Gigantic Mammals (1884), and others.

Marsh, Reginald. b. at Paris, March 14, 1898—. American painter, etcher, and engraver. He has probably been best known for lively compositions of many figures, set in New York streets, burlesque houses, and dance halls, and on the Coney Island beach. His works include the fresco panels Sorting Mail and Transfer of Mail from Liner to Tugboat (1936) for the U.S. Post Office Building at Washington, D.C., and murals for the U.S. Customs House at New York; examples of his early work include High Yaller and Tattoo and Haircut (a shop under the "El"). In later drawings such as Crowded Day at Coney and New Gardens (dance-hall hostesses), massing of groups of figures becomes a primary concern. He is represented in the Metropolitan Museum of Art and Whitney Museum of American Art at New York, Art Institute of Chicago, Boston Museum of Fine Arts, Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, Addison Gallery of American Art, and others.

Marsh, Richard de. See Marisco or Marsh, Richard de.

Marsh, Sylvester. b. at Campton, N.H., Sept. 30, 1803; d. Dec. 30, 1884. American inventor. As a grain dealer (c1837–c1862) and exporter, he invented "Marsh's Caloric Dry Meal," a kiln-dried meal, mainly for export. He conceived and executed (1866–69) the inclined railway on Mount Washington, N.H., patented an improved locomotive engine (1861) for steep grades, devices for inclined ascents (1864), cog rails (1867), and a type of air brake (1870) for railway cars.

Marshal (mär'shąl), John. [Title, 1st Baron Marshal of Hingham.] b. c1170; d. 1235. English nobleman and soldier; nephew of William Marshal (c1146–1219). He served (1197–98) on an expedition into Flanders with his uncle, and was rewarded with large grants of land. He was marshal (1207) of Ireland, supported King John in his struggle with the barons, fought (1217) against the French at Lincoln, and was sent (1221–32) on numerous missions to Ireland and abroad.

Marshal, Richard. [Title, 3rd Earl of Pembroke and Strigul.] d. April 16, 1234. English nobleman; son of William Marshal (c1146–1219). As a leader of the English barons, he urged (1233) Henry III to dismiss his foreign advisers, and made (1233) an alliance with Llewelyn ab Iorwerth, captured several castles, and defeated the foreign mercenaries. He defeated (1234) the royal army, and insisted on the dismissal of Peter des Roches and other Poitevin advisers of the king. He went (1234) to Ireland, where Peter des Roches had stirred up an enemy faction. Betrayed (1234) by traitorous friends and a faithless army at Kildare, he was wounded and taken prisoner.

Marshal, William. [Title, 1st Earl of Pembroke and Strigul.] b. c1146; d. at Caversham, near Reading, England, May 14, 1219. Regent of England. In 1170 he was placed by Henry II in charge of his oldest son, Henry. He went on crusade (1185–87) and in the struggle of Henry II with his sons he sided with the king. At the death (1189) of Henry II, he served Richard I. On Richard's death (1199) Marshal declared for John. He was present at Runnymede, June 15, 1215. John died Oct. 19, 1216, and on Nov. 11, 1216, Marshal was chosen regent. He was a stabilizing influence in the kingdom, pacifying the barons and fighting off the French attempt under Prince Louis (later Louis VIII of France) to conquer the kingdom, especially by the victory at Lincoln (1217). He favored the protection of the Pope for the young king over the protection of the ambitious Peter des Roches, and had Pandulph, the papal legate, recognized as one of the king's guardians.

Marshal, William. [Title, 2nd Earl of Pembroke and Strigul.] d. April 6, 1231. English nobleman and soldier; son of William Marshal (c1146–1219). He joined (1215) the baronial party and was one of the 25 executors of Magna Charta. He fought (1217) beside his father at Lincoln, and served (1224–26) as justiciar of Ireland, where he forced (1224) Hugh de Lacy, 1st Earl of Ulster, to make terms and surrender. Married (1224) to Henry III's sister Eleanor, he accompanied (1230) Henry III to Brittany, and fought in Normandy and Anjou.

Marshalese (mär'shạl.ēz). See Marshall, language.

Marshall (mär'shạl). City in E Illinois, county seat of Clarke County: named for John Marshall, chief justice of the U.S. Supreme Court. 2,960 (1950).

Marshall. City in S Michigan, county seat of Calhoun County, on the Kalamazoo River ab. 100 mi. W of Detroit. It has manufactures of air-conditioning equipment, furnaces, automotive parts, medical supplies, and drugs. 5,777 (1950).

Marshall. City in SW Minnesota, county seat of Lyon County: fish hatcheries; shipping point for grain, poultry, livestock, and dairy products. 5,923 (1950).

Marshall. City in W central Missouri, county seat of Saline County: trading and processing point for wheat, corn, and milk; manufactures include shoes and propellers. It is the seat of Missouri Valley College. 8,850 (1950).

Marshall. City in E Texas, county seat of Harrison County, ab. 245 mi. NE of Austin: processing center for cotton and dairy products; manufactures of brick, clothing, boxes, baskets, railroad equipment, and lumber. It is the seat of three colleges. Founded in 1841, it was named for the U.S. chief justice John Marshall. 22,327 (1950).

Marshall. [Also, Marshalese.] Language of the indigenous Micronesian people of the Marshall Islands. It belongs to the Micronesian group of the Malayo-Polynesian family of languages.

Marshall, Alfred. b. at London, July 26, 1842; d. at Cambridge, England, July 13, 1924. English economist, professor of political economy (1885–1908) in the University of Cambridge. He published The Economics of Industry (1879, with Mary Paley), Principles of Economics (1890), Industry and Trade (1919), Money, Credit and Commerce (1923), and others. Through his teaching and his Principles, long an authoritative text, he influenced economic thought in its approach to such problems as money and value for many years.

Marshall, Archibald. b. at London, Sept. 6, 1886; d. at Cambridge, England, Sept. 29, 1934. English journalist, editor, and novelist. He was a correspondent for the London Daily Mail and Daily News, editor of the Cambridge Review, and contributor to Punch. Author of Peter Binney, Undergraduate (1899), The House of Merrilees (1905), which he brought out after every English publisher had rejected it, Richard Baldock (1906), Exton Manor (1907), Many Junes (1908), The Squire's Daughter (1909), The Eldest Son (1911), The Mystery of Redmarsh Farm (1912), The Honor of the Clintons (1913), Roding Rectory (1914; American title, The Greatest of These), Rank and Riches (1915; American title, The Old Order Changeth), Sir Harry—A Love Story (1920), Pippin (1923), Anthony Dare (1923), The Education of Anthony Dare (1924), Anthony Dare's Progress (1925), The Allbright Family (1926), Simple People (1928), Two Families (1931), and The Birdikin Family (1932), novels. He also wrote The Terrors (1913), The Clintons and Others (1919), Peggy in Toyland (1920), Audacious Anne (1924), Jean and Nancy (1925), Angel Face (1933), collected short stories; and Out and About (1933), autobiography.

Marshall, Bruce. b. at Edinburgh, June 24, 1899—. Scottish novelist. Author of Father Malachy's Miracle (1931), Prayer for the Living (1934), The Uncertain Glory (1935), Luckypenny (1937), Yellow Tapers for Paris (1943), All Glorious Within (1944), George Brown's Schooldays (1946), The Red Danube (1947), and To Every Man a Penny (1949).

Marshall, Charles Fitz. See Jingle, Alfred.

Marshall, Christopher. b. probably at Dublin, Nov. 6, 1709; d. at Philadelphia, May 4, 1797. American Revolutionary leader, remembered for his diary, Remembrancer, covering events from 1774 to 1781, first authoritatively published (1877) by William Duane. He came to Philadelphia in 1727, was appointed (1776) to assist in procuring housing for returned soldiers at Philadelphia, and served (1777) on the Council of Safety.

Marshall, Edison. b. at Rensselaer, Ind., Aug. 28, 1894—. American writer of Western stories. Author of The Voice of the Pack (1920), The Snowshoe Trail (1921), The Land of Forgotten Men (1923), Benjamin Blake (1941), Great Smith (1943), The Upstart (1945), Shikar and Safari (1946), The Infinite Woman (1950), The Viking (1951), and other books. He was winner of the O. Henry memorial prize for his short story The Heart of Little Shikara (1921).

Marshall, Francis Hugh Adam. b. at High Wycombe, England, July 11, 1878—. English physiologist. Author of The Physiology of Reproduction (1910) and Introduction to Sexual Physiology (1925).

Marshall, Frank James. b. at New York, Aug. 10, 1877; d. there, Nov. 9, 1944. American chess champion (1909–36) and leading American representative in European and international chess tournaments (1900–30). His principal tournament successes were first prize at Cambridge Springs (1904), Nuremberg (1906), and Düsseldorf (1908). Through the medium of his own club at New York, he exercised a profound influence on American chess, and on the development of expert players in the U.S.

Marshall, George Catlett. b. at Uniontown, Pa., Dec. 31, 1880—. American soldier and diplomat, U.S. secretary of state (1947–49), and U.S. secretary of defense (1950–51). He studied at Virginia Military Institute (1897–1901), U.S. Infantry-Cavalry School (1907), and the Army Staff College (1908). Commissioned a 2nd lieutenant of infantry (Feb. 2, 1901), he served (1902–03, 1913–16) in the Philippines, and with the American Expeditionary Forces in France during World War I, participating in the battle of Cantigny and in the Aisne-Marne, St.-Mihiel, and Meuse-Argonne operations. He was aide-de-camp (1919–24) to General John J. Pershing and on duty (1924–27) in China. He was appointed (1938) to the general staff as chief of the war plans division, and became deputy chief (1938–39), acting chief (July–September, 1939), and chief of staff (September, 1939–November, 1945) of the U.S. army. As holder of this position throughout World War II, he attended all the major wartime conferences on policy, from the Atlantic Charter and Casablanca meetings through Yalta and Potsdam (Berlin). In December, 1944, he was appointed general of the army (five-star general). He retired in 1945 and was appointed by President Truman to be special representative to China with the rank of ambassador in an attempt to avert or mitigate the civil war between the Nationalists and the Communists. He was recalled in 1947 to become secretary of state and that year enunciated the principles of the European Recovery Program (known as the Marshall Plan) for U.S. aid to war-torn European countries, a program implemented (1948) by the Economic Coöperation Administration. He retired (1949) because of ill health, but was called upon in 1950 to fill the office of secretary of defense, his appointment requiring a special act of Congress since the National Security Act (1947) establishing the department provided for a civilian head only. He resigned the post in 1951 after serving a year.

Marshall, Henry Rutgers. b. at New York, July 22, 1852; d. May 3, 1927. American architect and philosophical writer. His publications include Pain, Pleasure, and Esthetics (1894), Esthetic Principles (1895), Instinct and Reason (1898), and Mind and Conduct (1919).

Marshall, Humphrey. b. in Fauquier County, Va., 1760; d. at Lexington, Ky., June 26, 1841. American politician, remembered for his History of Kentucky (1812), the first formal work about the state. Elected (1795) to the Senate, he was an exposer (1806) of Aaron Burr's conspiracy. He was founder (1810) and editor (until 1825) of the American Republic, changed to Harbinger, the only Kentucky Federalist newspaper at the time.

Marshall, Humphrey. b. in Kentucky, Jan. 13, 1812; d. at Louisville, Ky., March 28, 1872. American politician and soldier.

Marshall, Humphry. b. in Chester County, Pa., Oct. 10, 1722; d. Nov. 5, 1801. American botanist; cousin of John Bartram. He established (1774 et seq.) a botanic garden of foreign and native plant specimens. Author of Arbustrum Americanum, the American Grove (1785), a list of native trees and shrubs according to Linnean principles.

Marshall, James Wilson. b. in Hunterdon County, N.J., Oct. 8, 1810; d. Aug. 10, 1885. American pioneer to California whose accidental discovery of gold on Jan. 24, 1848, while working with John A. Sutter on an excavation for a sawmill, started the 1849 gold rush. He had arrived (1845) at what is now Sacramento, and had been a member (1846) of Frémont's California Battalion.

Marshall, John. b. near Germantown, Va., Sept. 24, 1755; d. at Philadelphia, July 6, 1835. American Revolutionary soldier, lawyer, politician, diplomat, and jurist, chief justice of the U.S. (1801–35). He was the founder of judicial review and the American system of constitutional law. He was educated privately and entered the military service of the Revolutionary cause in 1775. He took part in the fighting at Brandywine, Germantown, Monmouth, and Stony Point, and was at Valley Forge. He left the army (1781) a captain and after a brief course of study at the College of William and Mary was admitted to the bar (Aug. 28, 1780) in Fauquier County, Va. He was elected (1782) to the state assembly and early in 1783 established his law practice at Richmond. He was also a member (1782–84) of the executive council. In 1785 he became city recorder of Richmond and returned to the state assembly in 1787; his efforts in that body helped expedite the ratification of the Constitution by the Virginia convention, of which he was a member. Marshall was a firm, but by no means uncritical, supporter of Federalist policies and early became a leader of the Federalist Party in his state. In 1797 he was appointed by President Adams a member of the X.Y.Z. mission to France, and later (May 12, 1800) became Adams's secretary of state. He was nominated by the latter to the chief justiceship on Jan. 20, 1801. The nomination was confirmed (Jan. 27, 1801) by the Senate and Marshall took his seat on Feb. 4, 1801. He continued, however, to retain his post as secretary of state until the end of Adams's administration a month later. In August, 1801, in the case of Talbot v. Seeman, Marshall introduced a significant innovation, in making a single justice, usually himself, the spokesman of the Supreme Court's majority opinions. Prior to that time seriatim opinions, after the English practice, had been the rule. In Marbury v. Madison (1803) he put forward the principle that the Supreme Court was vested with the power and duty of passing upon the constitutionality of acts of Congress and of refusing to enforce such acts as it found to conflict with its own interpretation of the Constitution. Marshall's antagonism toward Jefferson's administration and Republican doctrines was dramatically reflected in his conduct of the treason trial of Aaron Burr at Richmond, Va. (March 30–Sept. 15, 1807), which became a virtual battle between him and the President, who was bent on obtaining Burr's conviction. Marshall's rulings brought about Burr's acquittal. During his first years on the bench Marshall wrote The Life of George Washington (5 vols., 1804–07), which is colored by his Federalist prepossessions but is still of value for its account of events producing the Philadelphia Convention. In the years that followed he handed down important decisions in the cases of Fletcher v. Peck, McCulloch v. Maryland, Sturges v. Crowninshield, Dartmouth College v. Woodward, Cohens v. Virginia, Gibbons v. Ogden, Osborn v. U.S. Bank, and Brown v. Maryland. In sum, these opinions articulated Marshall's doctrine of a strong central government within the realm of its "enumerated" powers and his conception of the Supreme Court as the final arbiter of the Constitution. His stand brought him into frequent conflict with the proponents of states' rights and helped launch a movement in Congress to weaken the court at least or to lessen his influence on the bench. Although in the main this movement failed, in Ogden v. Saunders (1827) Marshall found himself, for the first and only time, in the minority on a question of Constitutional interpretation. Marshall has long since become a symbol of the Constitution and the spirit of national consolidation. See The Life of John Marshall, by A. J. Beveridge (4 vols., 1916–19), John Marshall and the Constitution, by Edward S. Corwin (1919), and John Marshall, Life, Character and Judicial Services, by J. F. Dillon (3 vols., 1903).

Marshall, John. b. at Ely, Cambridgeshire, England, Sept. 11, 1818; d. Jan. 1, 1891. English anatomist and surgeon.

Marshall, Louis. b. at Syracuse, N.Y., 1856; d. at Zürich, Switzerland, 1929. American Jewish lawyer and civic leader. He attended the Columbia University law school, practiced law at Syracuse (1878 et seq.), and subsequently attained eminence as a constitutional and corporation lawyer. He was a member (1890, 1894, 1915) of three New York State constitutional conventions. He became (1902) a member of the mayor's commission for the investigation of slum life in New York's East Side, and was appointed (1909) chairman of the New York State commission of immigration. As mediator (1910) of the New York clothing industry strike, he settled the dispute with marked success; he was chief counsel for Governor William Sulzer during the impeachment proceedings (1913) against the latter, and was a member (1919) of the arbitration committee which settled the New York clothing strike. Active in Jewish affairs, he was instrumental in effecting the abrogation (1912) of the 1832 commercial treaty with Russia in retaliation for the Russian government's denial of travel visas to Roman Catholic and Protestant missionaries and American Jews. He served as president (1912–19) of the American Jewish Committee, and during World War I was chairman of the American Jewish Relief Committee. As delegate (1919) of the American Jewish Congress to the Versailles Peace Conference he was successful in securing incorporation in the peace treaties of the clause for protection of minority rights. Toward the close of his career he was a leader in the Zionist movement.

Marshall, Stephen. b. at Godmanchester, Huntingdonshire, England, c1594; d. 1655. English Presbyterian divine, noted for his influence on the election of the Short Parliament (1640) and for a series of sermons he delivered to the Long Parliament (1640). He was one of the authors of the pamphlet (1641) signed Smectymnuus (of which name his initials make the first two letters) that called forth in its defense one of John Milton's most famous prose tracts. He waited (1645) on Archbishop Laud before the latter's execution, served (1647) as chaplain to the king at Holmby House and in the Isle of Wight, prepared (1647) with others the "shorter catechism," and was (1653) a commissioner to draw up the "fundamentals of religion."

Marshall, Thomas. b. April 2, 1730; d. June 22, 1802. American Revolutionary soldier and politician; father of John Marshall (1755–1835). He fought in the first battle of the Revolutionary War in Virginia with the Culpeper minute men, and was promoted (1777) to colonel for distinguished service at Trenton and Brandywine. He was appointed (1780) surveyor of part of Kentucky, and established (1783) a surveyor's office there.

Marshall, Thomas Riley. b. at North Manchester, Ind., March 14, 1854; d. at Washington, D.C., June 1, 1925. American lawyer, Vice-President of the United States (1913–21). He was elected governor of Indiana in 1908 by the Democratic Party. Marshall is credited with originating, during a Senate debate on national needs, the much-quoted saying: "What this country really needs is a good five-cent cigar."

Marshall, William. fl. 1630–50. English engraver. He engraved portraits of Donne, Milton, Shakespeare, and Bacon, and of Charles I on horseback.

Marshall, William Calder. b. at Edinburgh, 1813; d. June 16, 1894. Scottish sculptor. Among his works are Sabrina, a statue of Sir Robert Peel (at Manchester), and decorations in the Houses of Parliament and Saint Paul's, London.

Marshall, William Louis. b. at Washington, Ky., June 11, 1846; d. at Washington, D.C., July 2, 1920. American military engineer. As assistant (1872–76) to Lieutenant G. M. Wheeler in the Rocky Mountain exploration, he discovered what is now the Marshall Pass. He was assistant engineer (1876–84) on river projects in the South, and in charge (1884–99) of river and harbor improvements in Wisconsin and Illinois. He constructed (1890–99) the Hennepin Canal, connecting the Illinois and Mississippi rivers. In charge (1899–1908) of river work and fortifications at New York, he completed the Ambrose Channel and the extension of Governors Island.

Marshall-Cornwall (-kôrn'wąl, -wôl), Sir James Handyside. b. in India, May 27, 1887—. British soldier. He participated (1937–38) in the reorganization of the Egyptian army, and was commander (1941) of the British troops in Egypt. He was chief editor of the German archives captured by the British in World War II.

Marshall Islands. Archipelago of ab. 32 coral atolls in the Pacific Ocean, N of the Gilbert and E of the Caroline islands. It comprises two main groups, called the Ralik and Radak chains. They were discovered by Saavedra in 1529 and explored by Marshall and Gilbert in 1788. They were annexed by Germany in 1886 and at the close of World War I were awarded to Japan as a mandate under the League of Nations. They were occupied by American forces toward the close of World War II and are now administered by the U.S. as a trust territory of the United Nations. Area, ab. 65 sq. mi.; pop. 10,684 (1939).

Marshall Pass. Mountain pass in the Sawatch Mountains of Colorado, SE of Gunnison. It is traversed by a railway. Elevation, 10,846 ft.

Marshall Plan. [Official name, European Recovery Program; also called ERP.] Plan for furnishing U.S. financial aid to Western European nations with the object of reconstructing their economic systems and stabilizing their political structures in the post-World War II period. The broad principles of the scheme were first publicly announced by U.S. Secretary of State George C. Marshall in an address at Harvard University on June 5, 1947. Following a conference of European nations, the U.S. Congress passed the Foreign Assistance Act of 1948 which created the Economic Coöperation Administration (ECA) for carrying out the plan. The functions of the ECA were taken over (1951) by the Mutual Security Agency.

Marshallton. Unincorporated community in E central Pennsylvania, in Northumberland County, near Shamokin. 3,390 (1950).

Marshalltown (mär'shąl.toun). City in C Iowa, county seat of Marshall County, on the Iowa River ab. 48 mi. NE of Des Moines: manufactures of automobile gaskets, air-conditioning equipment, and steam specialties. It was founded in 1851, and named for Marshall, Mich. 19,821 (1950).

"Marshalsea (mär'shąl.sē), the Father of the." See under Dorrit, William.

Marshalsea Prison. Prison in Southwark, London, used for debtors, and abolished in 1849. Charles Dickens's father was held here.

Marsh Creek Settlement. Former name of Gettysburg.

Marshes of Glynn (glin), The. Poem by Sidney Lanier, published anonymously (1878) in the anthology Masque of Poets.

Marshfield (märsh'fēld). City in C Wisconsin, in Wood County, ab. 25 mi. NW of Wisconsin Rapids: trading and processing center for a dairying area; manufactures of dairy products, veneer, beer, shoes, and gloves. It was settled in 1868. Pop. 12,394 (1950).

Marshfield. Former name of Coos Bay, Ore.

Marshman (märsh'mąn), John Clark. b. in August, 1794; d. at London, July 8, 1877. English historian; son of Joshua Marshman. He went to Serampore with his father in 1800. He started the first paper mill in India, and established the Serampore College for the education of the natives. His chief works are Dictionary of the Bengalee Language, abridged from Carey's dictionary (1827), History of India from Remote Antiquity to the Accession of the Mogul Dynasty (1842), and Memoirs of Major-General Sir Henry Havelock (1860).

Marshman, Joshua. b. at Westbury Leigh, Wiltshire, England, April 20, 1768; d. at Serampore, Bengal, India, Dec. 5, 1837. English Baptist missionary and Orientalist, originally a weaver by trade. He was missionary at Serampore (1799–1837), and published The Works of Confucius, Elements of Chinese Grammar, and others.

Marsh v. Alabama, 326 U.S. 501 (1946) (märsh; al.a-bam'ą). U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding the right of a member of a religious minority (Jehovah's Witnesses) to distribute religious literature on private property in a community where solicitation was forbidden without a permit. The criminal action against the appellant (Grace Marsh) was invalidated on the ground that it deprived her of the liberties guaranteed by the First and Fourteenth amendments. In delivering the majority opinion, Justice Hugo Black declared: "When we balance the Constitutional rights of owners of property against those of the people to enjoy freedom of press and religion . . . we remain mindful of the fact that the latter occupy a preferred position."

Marsi (mär'sī). Ancient Germanic tribe first mentioned by Strabo, and also listed by Tacitus in his Germania as among the tribes descended from Mannus. The Marsi took part in the uprising under Arminius, but disappeared after the campaigns of Germanicus. They were probably a part of the Sygambri, whom they adjoined on the southeast, west of the Cherusci and Chatti.

Marsi. Ancient Italian people, inhabiting the area east of Rome. Their language is classified as a Sabellian dialect of the ancient Italic languages.

Marsic (mär'sik). Fifth-magnitude double star κ Herculis, situated in the right elbow of the hero as usually drawn.

Marsic War. See Social War.

Marsigli (mär.sē'lyē), Count Luigi Ferdinando. b. at Bologna, Italy, June 10, 1658; d. there, Nov. 1, 1730. Italian soldier, naturalist, and geographer. He was in the Austrian military service, and for the surrender (1703) of the fortress of Alt Breisach in the War of the Spanish Succession was degraded by a court-martial. He thereafter engaged in scientific study, being especially interested in oceanography. He wrote Physical History of the Sea (1711), Danubius Pannonico-Mysicus, cum observationibus geographicis (1726), and Stato militare dell' imperio Ottomano (1732).

Marsiglio (mär.sē'lyō). [Also: Marsilius (mär.sil'i.us); Marsirio (mär.sir'i.ō).] Saracen king in the Carolingian cycle of romance.

Marsilius of Padua (mär.sil'i.us; pad'ū.ą). [Italian, Marsiglio.] b. at Padua, Italy, 1270; d. c1342. Medieval Italian scholar and political theorist. Of his early life nothing is known; he is first noted (c1312) as rector of the University of Paris. When in 1324 Pope John XXII intervened in a dispute over the succession to the imperial crown by excommunicating Louis of Bavaria, Marsilius, either alone or with a collaborator, wrote the tract Defensor Pacis, one of the crucial political documents of the Middle Ages, a thoroughgoing statement not only of the case for the imperial as against the papal authority, but of the theory of the sovereignty of the people. This theory was a commonplace of scholasticism, but the antiecclesiastical turn given it by Marsilius caused even Louis of Bavaria to consider prosecuting him for heresy. Upon second thought, perceiving the tract's utility in his cause, Louis, to whom the work was dedicated, extended his patronage to Marsilius, who accompanied him to Rome, where Louis was crowned emperor not by the Pope, but by adherents who claimed to be delegates of the people. The coronation occurred in January, 1328, and in April Louis pronounced the deposition of John XXII and caused Pietro Rainalducci, also known as Pietro de Corbara, a mendicant friar, to be proclaimed Pope under the title of Nicholas V. Nicholas was stigmatized by the Church as an antipope. Named imperial vicar by Louis, Marsilius harshly persecuted clerics who remained faithful to Pope John. Marsilius contended that the power exercised by the Church over civil affairs was, in fact, usurped power, and that the Church should confine itself to the conduct of worship. He denied to popes and bishops any power of excommunication or interdiction. The church should be governed by councils, to be summoned only by the emperor; the bishop of Rome, to whom primacy was conceded, should be only a sort of honorary head of the church, without authority to define dogmas. Moreover, the distribution of benefices should lie with the emperor only; tithes should be abolished, and church property should be seized, so that the clergy would be constrained to observe the rule of poverty. The Defensor Pacis, translated from the Latin into several of the vulgar languages including English, had repercussions for centuries after its publication, and influenced the thought of Wycliffe and of Luther.

Marsivan (mär.sē.vän'). See Merzifon.

Marske-by-the-Sea (märsk). See Saltburn and Marske-by-the-Sea.

Mars-la-Tour (mârs.là.tör). Village in the department of Meurthe-et-Moselle, France, ab. 14 mi. W of Metz. The battle fought near here on Aug. 16, 1870, is better known as the battle of Vionville.

Marsman (märs'män), Hendrik. b. 1899; d. 1940. Dutch poet, essayist, and lawyer. Fear of death and punishment hereafter (as a residue of Calvinism) clashes in his poetry with his adoration of universal life and eternal earth (inspired by classical culture). Expressionistic influences were evident in his early work, such as Paradise Regained (1927). A simpler yet strongly rhythmic and excited expression is apparent in Port Nigra (1934) and in the verses published in Verzameld Werk (Collected Works, 3 vols., 1938; reprinted after World War II in 4 vols.). The same conflict dominates his later work, being present in Tempel en Kruis (Temple and Cross, 1939; a portion of this work, The Zodiac, was translated into English by A. J. Barnouw in Coming After).

Marston (mär'stǫn), 1st Baron. A title of Boyle, Charles.

Marston, John. [Pseudonym, W. Kinsayder.] b. c1575; d. at London, June 25, 1634. English dramatist, satirist, and divine. He studied at Brasenose College, Oxford, taking his B.A. in 1594. Under his pseudonym, he published The Metamorphosis of Pigmalions Image, and certaine Satyres (1598) and The Scourge of Villanie (1598), poems so coarsely erotic that they were burned (1599) by order of John Whitgift, Archbishop of Canterbury. Marston's reputation among writers was not harmed by this episode and he soon began writing for the stage. The History of Antonio and Mellida (1599) and its sequel, Antonio's Revenge (1600), were both published in 1602. Their overdone melodrama, in addition to an attack on the comedy of humors contained in the induction to the first play, caused Ben Jonson to attack Marston in The Poetaster (1601), with the result that Marston, collaborating with Thomas Dekker, caricatured Jonson in Satiromastix (1602). Jonson and Marston soon became friends, however, and Marston dedicated The Malcontent (1604) to Jonson. They collaborated (1605) with George Chapman in Eastward Ho, and all three were imprisoned for a time for certain scenes in the play ridiculing the Scots, who had become numerous in London after the accession (1603) of James I. Among Marston's other plays are What You Will (1601), The Dutch Courtezan (1604), Parasitaster, or the Fawn (c1605), The Wonder of Women, or the Tragedy of Sophonisba (c1605), and parts of Histriomastix (c1599) and Jack Drum's Entertainment (c1600). He gave up writing for the stage in 1616 to become rector of Christchurch, Hampshire.

Marston, John Westland. b. at Boston, Lincolnshire, England, Jan. 30, 1819; d. at London, Jan. 5, 1890. English dramatist. In 1834 he entered the office of his uncle, a London solicitor. He was closely associated with a group of mystics corresponding somewhat to the Transcendentalists of New England. He wrote a number of dramas in verse, including The Patrician's Daughter (performed, 1842), Strathmore (1849), Marie de Méranie (1850), A Life's Ransom (1857), A Hard Struggle (1858), Donna Diana, his best play (1863), and The Favourite of Fortune (1866). He contributed much poetical criticism to the Athenæum, including a review of A. C. Swinburne's Atalanta in Calydon. In 1888 appeared Our Recent Actors and Recollections of Late Distinguished Performers of both Sexes. Some of his smaller poems were very successful, especially one on the charge at Balaklava.

Marston, Philip Bourke. b. at London, Aug. 13, 1850; d. Feb. 13, 1887. English poet; son of John Westland Marston. From his youth he was almost totally blind. He published Songtide, and Other Poems (1871), All in All (1875), and Wind Voices (1883). After his death appeared For a Song's Sake, and Other Stories (1887), Garden Secrets (1887), and A Last Harvest (1891).

Marston Moor. Plain in Yorkshire, England, ab. 8 mi. NW of York. Here, in the greatest battle of the English Civil War, the Parliamentary forces and Scots (ab. 24,000) under the Fairfaxes, Leven, Cromwell, and Manchester defeated (July 2, 1644) the Royalists (ab. 22,000) under Prince Rupert.

Marstrand (mär'strän), Vilhelm. b. at Copenhagen, Dec. 24, 1810; d. there, March 25, 1873. Danish painter of historical and genre subjects. He was professor at the Academy of Copenhagen from 1848, and its director (1853–59).

Marsus (mär'sus), Domitius. b. c54 B.C.; d. c4 B.C. Roman poet of the Augustan age, author of a collection of epigrams (Cicuta) and comic tales, a work on oratory, an epic (Amazonis), and erotic elegies.

Marsyas (mär'si.ąs). In Greek mythology, a Phrygian (in some accounts a peasant, and in others a satyr) defeated by Apollo in a musical contest. Marsyas picked up the aulos (a flutelike instrument) which the goddess Athene, who had invented it, had thrown away on seeing, from the reflection of her face in water, how playing distorted her features. Marsyas found that when he blew it beautiful strains came forth from it. He challenged Apollo to a combat, aulos against lyre. Marsyas played well, but Apollo turned his lyre upside down and continued to play. This Marsyas could not match with the aulos, and Apollo was declared victor. Nevertheless, for his presumption Apollo flayed Marsyas alive. Chaucer, in his House of Fame, makes Marsyas a woman, Marcia.

Martaban (mär.tą.bän'). Small town and former fortress in Burma, opposite Moulmein: the medieval capital of Pegu. It was stormed and taken by the British Oct. 29, 1825, and April 15, 1852.

Martaban, Gulf of. Arm of the Bay of Bengal, enclosed on three sides by Burma. The Salween, Sittang, and Rangoon rivers empty into it. Length, ab. 130 mi.

Martano (mär.tä'nō). Character in Ariosto's Orlando Furioso, evidently the original of Spenser's Braggadocchio.

Marteau (mär.tō), Henri. b. at Reims, France, March 31, 1874; d. 1934. French violinist.

Martel (mär.tel'), Charles. See Charles Martel.

Martel, Sir Giffard Le Quesne. b. at Southampton, England, Oct. 10, 1889—. English army officer, notable for his contributions to tank design. He was assistant director (1936–38) and deputy director (1938–39) of mechanization at the war office, and headed (1940) the Royal Armoured Corps. He was head (1943) of the British military mission to Moscow. Author of The Russian Outlook (1947).

Martel (mär.tel), Louis Joseph. b. at St.-Omer, France, Sept. 15, 1813; d. at Évreux, France, March 4, 1892. French politician. He was a member (1849) of the Legislative Assembly, and was a member and vice-president of the National Assembly (1871), in which he belonged to the left center. He was minister of justice (December, 1876–May, 1877), and was president of the senate in 1879.

Martel de Janville (mär.tel dę zhän.vēl), Comtesse de. [Married name of Sibylle Gabrielle Marie Antoinette de Riquetti de Mirabeau; pseudonym, Gyp.] b. at the Château de Koëtsal, Morbihan, France, Aug. 15, 1849; d. June 29, 1932. French writer. She wrote for La Vie Parisienne, and later for La Revue des Deux Mondes. She created several well-known types (notably Paulette, Loulou, and le petit Bob), which appear in her sketches and have given titles to several of her books. Among the latter are Autour du mariage (1833; dramatized in the same year with M. Crémieux), Ce que femme veut! (1883), Sans voiles (1885), Autour du divorce (1886), Bob au salon (1888–90), C'est nous qui sommes l'histoire (1890), and Passionette (1891).

Marten (mär'tęn), Henry (or Harry). b. at Oxford, England, 1602; d. at Chepstow, England, Sept. 9, 1680. English regicide. A member of Parliament (1640), he supported Strafford's attainder and maintained the validity of parliamentary ordinances without the king's assent. He raised a regiment of horse in support of the Parliamentary cause, seized the king's property, and advocated destruction of the king's family. He was expelled (1643–46) from Parliament. A leader (1646) of the extreme party, he supported (1647) the army in its quarrel with Parliament, and raised (1648) a regiment of horse to prevent restoration of Charles I. Active in bringing the king to trial, he was one of the most rigorous judges and signed (1649) the death warrant. At the Restoration he surrendered, conducted his own defense at his trial, and was condemned to life imprisonment.

Martens (mär'tẹns), Frédéric Frommhold de. [Russian, Fyodor Fyodorovich Martens.] b. at Parnu, Russia, Aug. 27, 1845; d. at St. Petersburg, June 20, 1909. Russian diplomat and authority on international law. He was educated at the University of St. Petersburg, in which he was professor of international law (1873–1907). In 1868 he entered the office of the ministry of foreign affairs and later became legal adviser of the Russian foreign office. He represented his government at many international conferences, was arbitrator between England and France in the Newfoundland dispute in 1891, was a delegate to the peace conference held at The Hague in 1899, and was legal adviser of the Russian negotiators of the treaty of Portsmouth in 1905. In 1902 he was awarded a Nobel prize for his services in the cause of peace.

Martens (mär'tẹnz), Frederick Herman. b. at New York, July 6, 1874; d. 1932. American writer of librettos and books on music.

Martens (mär'tẹns), Georg Friedrich von. b. at Hamburg, Germany, Feb. 22, 1756; d. at Frankfort on the Main, Germany, Feb. 21, 1821. German jurist and diplomat. He became professor of law at Göttingen in 1783. His chief work is Recueil des traités (2nd ed., 1817–35).

Martens, Baron Karl von. b. at Frankfort on the Main, Germany, 1790; d. at Dresden, Germany, March 28, 1863. German diplomat; nephew of G. F. von Martens. He wrote Guide diplomatique (1832) and others.

Martens (mär'tẹnz), Paul. A pseudonym of Southwold, Stephen.

Martensen (mär'tẹn.sẹn), Hans Lassen. b. Aug. 19, 1808; d. at Copenhagen, Feb. 4, 1884. Danish theologian.

Martext (mär'tekst), Sir Oliver. In Shakespeare's comedy As You Like It, a country curate.

Martha (mär'thạ). In the Bible, one of the adherents of Jesus; sister of Mary and Lazarus, whose house in Bethany Jesus often visited. A later tradition makes her come with her brother Lazarus to the South of France. She is the patron saint of good housewives and has been taken as the symbol of the active life as contrasted with the contemplative life symbolized by Mary. Luke, x. 38–42; John, xi. 1–44.

Martha. Opera in five acts by Flotow, with a libretto by Friedrich, first produced at Vienna on Nov. 25, 1847.

Martha Bardell (bär.del'), Mrs. See Bardell, Mrs. Martha.

Martha's Vineyard. Island in the Atlantic Ocean, SE of Massachusetts, to which it belongs, forming the chief part of Dukes County. It is separated from the mainland by Vineyard Sound (ab. 5 mi. wide) and is a summer resort. It was discovered by Bartholomew Gosnold in 1602, and was named by him. Chief town, Edgartown; length, ab. 21 mi.; land area, ab. 91 sq. mi.; pop. 5,577 (1950).

Martí (mär.tē'), José Julian. b. at Havana, Cuba, 1853; killed at Dos Ríos, Cuba, May 22, 1895. Cuban scholar, writer, and patriot. He studied law in Spain, was professor of literature and philosophy in the University of Guatemala for several years, and represented the Argentine Republic, Uruguay, and Paraguay as consul at New York, where he also published La Patria, a journal devoted to Cuban interests. In 1894 he attempted the transport of three armed vessels from the U.S. to Cuba, but was captured at Fernandina, Fla. In 1895 he succeeded in landing at Cabonico, Cuba, and marched inland. He was shot during an attack by the Spanish at Dos Ríos.

Martial (mär'shạl). [Full Latin name, Marcus Valerius Martialis.] b. at Bilbilis, Spain, 43 A.D.; d. in Spain, c104. Latin poet. In Rome (64 A.D. et seq.) he was a friend of Juvenal and Quintilian and worked under the patronage of Titus, Domitian, and other influential persons. He returned to Spain in 98 A.D. His fourteen books of epigrams (84–99 A.D.) contain many sharp pictures of Roman life of his time and formed the model for later epigrammatists.

Martianus Capella (mär.shi.ā'nus kạ.pel'ạ). [Full name, Martianus Minneus Felix Capella.] Lived in the 5th century A.D. Latin writer of northern Africa (Carthage). His chief work is an allegorical encyclopedia of the liberal arts, De Nuptiis Philologiae et Mercurii et de septem Artibus liberalibus, in nine books. This work, sometimes also called Satyricon, comprises a discussion of contemporary knowledge and was highly regarded in the Middle Ages.

Martigny (mär.tē.nyē). [Full name, Martigny-Ville (-vēl); German, Martinach; Latin, Octodurum.] Town in W Switzerland, in the canton of Valais, near the Rhône River. There is a Roman amphitheater. It is the marketing center of a vineyard district, and has an aluminum factory. 3,221 (1941).

Martigues (mär.tēg). [Also, Les Martigues; ancient name, Maritima Avaticorum.] Town in SE France, in the department of Bouches-du-Rhône, situated on the Étang de Berre, ab. 18 mi. NW of Marseilles and connected with the Mediterranean Sea by a canal. It has a fishing port. Part of the town and the harbor installations suffered damage in World War II. 11,295 (1946).

Martin (mär'tin), Saint. [Called Saint Martin of Tours.] b. at Sabaria, Pannonia (in what is now Hungary), c316; d. in Touraine, France, c397. Ecclesiastic of the Church in France. He became (c371) bishop of Tours. He founded the famous monastery of Marmoutier. His festival in the Roman and Anglican churches is November 11. Martinmas is the name given to the day in England: it is the time when cattle are killed for winter use, and new wine is drawn from the lees and tasted. The celebration was common over most of Christendom, and, it being a somewhat jovial occasion, Saint Martin became a very popular saint, the patron saint of publicans and tavern keepers. The beggars, whose patron Martin had at first been by virtue of a famous story in which he divided his cloak with a beggar, were taken from him and given to Saint Giles.

Martin. City in NW Tennessee, in Weakley County. It is the seat of a junior college. 4,082 (1950).

Martin. In John Dryden's The Hind and The Panther, the Lutheran party.

Martin I, Saint. b. at Todi, on the Tiber River, Italy; d. in the Crimea, Sept. 16, 655. Pope from 649 to 655. He condemned the Monothelite heretics at the Lateran Synod of 649, in consequence of which he was deposed by the emperor Constans II and exiled (653) to the Crimea.

Martin II. Name incorrectly ascribed by early chroniclers to Pope Marinus I.

Martin III. Name incorrectly ascribed by early chroniclers to Pope Marinus II.

Martin IV. [Original name, Simon de Brie.] b. in Touraine, France, c1210; d. at Perugia, Italy, in March, 1285. Pope from 1281 to 1285. He had been chancellor of France under Louis IX. He took the name Martin IV in the belief that two popes named Marinus had been named Martin (Martinus); actually, therefore, he should have been Martin II. Under the influence of Charles of Anjou (Charles I of Naples), who had assured his election, Martin IV excommunicated the emperor Michael Palaeologus, thus terminating the reunion of the Greek and Roman churches effected in 1274 at the Council of Lyons. After the anti-French revolt (1282) known as the Sicilian Vespers, he used the power of his office to foster and protect French interests against those of Aragon and was eventually driven out of Rome by an uprising.

Martin V. [Original name, Oddone Colonna.] b. in the Campagna di Roma, Italy, 1368; d. at Rome, Feb. 20, 1431. Pope from 1417 to 1431. He was elected by the Council of Constance after the deposition of John XXIII, Gregory XII, and Benedict XIII. Despite some resistance to his choice in Aragon and southern France, he made concordats with the principal rulers of Europe and ended the Western Schism. He attempted also to heal the schism with the Eastern (Orthodox) Church, to reestablish papal authority in Italy, and to suppress the growing Bohemian Hussite heresy, but with little or no success.

Martin, Abe. See Abe Martin.

Martin, Alexander. b. in New Jersey, 1740; d. at Danbury, N.C., Nov. 2, 1807. American politician and Revolutionary officer. He was elected governor of North Carolina in 1782, was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1787, and served (1793–99) in the U.S. Senate.

Martin (mȧr.taṅ), Alexandre. Original name of Albert (1815–95).

Martin (mär'tin), Archer John Porter. b. c1910—. English biochemist. For his work in chromatographic methods of chemical analysis (the analysis of chemical compounds by staining and separating them in solution) he was awarded the 1952 Nobel prize in chemistry.

Martin, Mrs. Bell. See Martin, Mary Letitia.

Martin, Benjamin. b. at Worplesdon, Surrey, England, 1704; d. at London, Feb. 9, 1782. English mathematician and instrument maker.

Martin (mȧr.taṅ), Bon Louis Henri. b. at St.-Quentin, Aisne, France, Feb. 20, 1810; d. at Paris, Dec. 14, 1883. French historian. He compiled Histoire de France par les principaux historiens (1834–36), a sequence of excerpts from the works of leading chroniclers and historians. Next he undertook an Histoire de France on his own account, and the results of his arduous and patient investigations were published in 19 volumes (1837–54). Immediately on completion of this task, Martin revised and enlarged his work, and replaced the original publication by a new edition in 16 volumes (1855–60). Besides his early writings and his numerous contributions to periodicals, he published Minuit et Midi (1832), Histoire de Soissons (1837), De la France, de son génie et de ses destinées (1847), Daniel Manin (1859), L'Unité italienne et la France (1861), Jean Reynaud (1863), Pologne et Moscovie (1863), the heroic drama Vercingétorix (1865), La Russie d'Europe (1866), Histoire de France populaire (1867–75), Études d'archéologie celtique (1871), and Napoléon et les frontières de la France (1874).

Martin (mär'tin), Edward Sandford. b. at Willowbrook, N.Y., Jan. 2, 1856; d. at New York, June 13, 1939. American editor and writer. One of the organizers (1876) of the Harvard Lampoon, he was founder (1883), editorial writer (1887–1933), and editor of Life magazine. He was assistant editor (1893–1913) of Harper's Weekly, and conducted (1920–35) the "Easy Chair" department of Harper's Magazine. Author of A Little Brother of the Rich (1890), Poems and Verses (1902), and the prose works Cousin Anthony and I (1895), Lucid Intervals (1900), The Luxury of Children and Other Luxuries (1904), Reflections of a Beginning Husband (1913), Unrest of Women (1913), Abroad with Jane (1918), and What's Ahead, and Meanwhile (1927).

Martin, Everett Dean. b. at Jacksonville, Ill., July 5, 1880; d. May 10, 1941. American Congregational clergyman and lecturer. He lectured (1916–36) on social philosophy, was assistant director (1917–22) and director (1922–38) at the Peoples Institute at New York, and was in charge (1918–38) of the department of social philosophy at the Cooper Union Forum. Author of The Behavior of Crowds, Psychology and Its Uses, The Meaning of a Liberal Education, Liberty, Civilizing Ourselves, Farewell to Revolution, and The Nature of the State.

Martin (mär'tin; French, mȧr.taṅ), François Xavier. b. at Marseilles, France, March 17, 1762; d. at New Orleans, La., Dec. 10, 1846. American jurist. He was judge of the supreme court of Louisiana (1815–45). He published histories of Louisiana (1827) and of North Carolina (1829).

Martin (mär'tin), Franklin Henry. b. at Ixonia, Wis., July 13, 1857; d. March 7, 1935. American surgeon, gynecologist at Chicago Women's Hospital. He was a cofounder (1888) of the Post-Graduate Medical School at Chicago, and the organizer (1905) and first editor of the journal Surgery, Gynecology, and Obstetrics, adding (1913) to it the International Abstract of Surgery.

Martin, Frederick Townsend. b. at Albany, N.Y., Dec. 6, 1849; d. at London, March 8, 1914. American writer. Author of The Passing of the Idle Rich (1911), a work expounding the decadence of wealth, and of Things I Remember (1913).

Martin, Glenn L. b. at Macksburg, Iowa, Jan. 17, 1886—. American airplane manufacturer. He established (1909) one of the first airplane factories in the U.S., and held several speed, altitude, and endurance flying records (1909–16). He received (1913) the first government order for training models. He merged (1917) his company with the Wright Company to form the Wright-Martin Aircraft Corporation, but withdrew later in the year to organize the Glenn L. Martin Company at Cleveland, Ohio; he relocated the plant (1929) in the vicinity of Baltimore. The company has chiefly manufactured bombers, transoceanic flying boats, and commercial air transports. He founded (1945) the Glenn L. Martin College of Engineering and Aeronautical Sciences at the University of Maryland.

Martin, Helen. [Maiden name, Reimensnyder.] b. at Lancaster, Pa., Oct. 18, 1868; d. at New Canaan, Conn., June 29, 1939. American novelist. Author of Tillie, A Mennonite Maid (1904), Sabina, A Story of the Amish (1905), The Crossways (1910), Barnabetta (1914), The Snob (1924), Sylvia of the Minute (1927), Wings of Healing (1929), Tender Talons (1930), From Pillar to Post (1933), Deliverance (1935), House on the Marsh (1936), and Emmy Untamed (1937). Her first book was dramatized under its original title, and Minnie Maddern Fiske played in Erstwhile Susan, the stage adaptation of Barnabetta.

Martin (mȧr.taṅ), Henri Jean Guillaume. b. at Toulouse, France, Aug. 5, 1860—. French impressionist painter. He was a student of J. P. Laurens, and exhibited in the Paris Salon of 1880. Among his works are Les Titans escaladant le ciel (1885), Apollon et les Muses (1895; decorations for the Hôtel de Ville, Paris), Sérénité (1899; in the Luxembourg Museum), and Scène champêtre (1907).

Martin (mär'tin), Henry Austin. b. at London, July 23, 1824; d. at Boston, Dec. 7, 1884. American surgeon, noted for establishing vaccination procedure in America.

Martin, Henry Newell. b. at Newry, County Down, Ireland, July 1, 1848; d. at Burley-in-Wharfedale, Yorkshire, England, Oct. 27, 1896. English physiologist. He arrived (1876) at Baltimore to occupy the first chair of biology at the Johns Hopkins University. Author of A Course of Practical Instruction in Elementary Biology (1875, with Huxley), The Human Body (1881), and Physiological Papers (1895).

Martin, Homer D. b. at Albany, N.Y., in October, 1836; d. at St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 12, 1897. American landscape painter. He was elected national academician in 1875.

Martin, Hugh. Original name of Martin, Riccardo.

Martin, John. b. at Haydon Bridge, near Hexham, Northumberland, England, July 19, 1789; d. on the Isle of Man, Feb. 17, 1854. English historical painter and engraver. His chief works are Belshazzar's Feast (1821), The Fall of Nineveh (1833), The Deluge (1837), The Last Man (1839), and The Eve of the Deluge (1840).

Martin, Joseph William, Jr. b. at North Attleboro, Mass., Nov. 3, 1884—. American politician. Publisher (1908 et seq.) of the North Attleboro Evening Chronicle, he served as congressman (1925 et seq.) from Massachusetts and was Republican Party leader (1939 et seq.) in the House of Representatives. He served (1947–49, 1953 et seq.) as Speaker of the House.

Martin, Josiah. b. 1737; d. at London, 1786. English colonial administrator. He was governor (1771–75) of North Carolina, and opposed (1771) the discontinuance of the sinking-fund tax. He fought (until 1781) under Cornwallis against the Carolinas, and returned (1781) to England.

Martin, Karlheinz. b. at Freiburg im Breisgau, Germany, May 6, 1888—. German stage director.

Martin, Lillien Jane. b. at Olean, N.Y., July 7, 1851; d. at San Francisco, March 26, 1943. American psychologist. She was professor (1911–16) at Stanford, consulting psychologist (1916–43) at San Francisco, and founder of the first child guidance clinic in the U.S. Author of Personality as Revealed by the Content of Images (1917), Salvaging Old Age (1930), and other books.

Martin (mȧr.taṅ), Louis. b. at Puy, Haute-Loire, France, Sept. 20, 1864; d. at Paris, June 13, 1946. French physician and bacteriologist. He worked on diphtheria, described (1919) the bacillus of pseudo-diphtheria and the differentiation between diphtheria and pseudo-diphtheria, and introduced a culture media for the isolation of the diphtheria bacillus (1916), for the cultivation of typhoid bacilli (1915), and for the spirochaeta icterohemorrhagiae (1917).

Martin (mär'tin), Luther. b. near New Brunswick, N.J., in February, 1748; d. at New York, July 10, 1826. American lawyer. He was graduated from Princeton in 1766, and admitted to the Virginia bar in 1771. He served as attorney general of Maryland (1778–1805, 1817–21). At the U.S. Constitutional Convention in 1787, Martin's vehement, stubborn spearheading of the small states' opposition to the "Virginia Plan" led to the eventual adoption of the "Connecticut Compromise." Although he refused to sign the Constitution, he later became a staunch Federalist and opponent of Thomas Jefferson. Over a period of 25 years, he argued about half the reported cases before the Maryland Court of Appeals, as well as many important cases (including Rose v. Himely, Fletcher v. Peck, and McCulloch v. Maryland) before the U.S. Supreme Court. He successfully defended Justice Samuel Chase upon his impeachment (1805), and Aaron Burr, charged with treason (1807). In 1822, the Maryland legislature imposed an annual license fee of five dollars upon every lawyer for the support of Luther Martin, reduced to want by alcoholism and apoplexy. His prodigious legal knowledge, resourcefulness, and exhaustive treatment of every conceivable argument for either side (often lightened by trenchant wit and rollicking humor) made him, in his prime, the most formidable advocate at the American bar.

Martin (mär.tañ), Marie Françoise Thérèse. Original name of Saint Thérèse de Lisieux.

Martin (mär'tin), Mary Letitia. [Known as Mrs. Bell Martin; called the "Princess of Connemara."] b. at Ballinahinch Castle, County Galway, Ireland, Aug. 28, 1815; d. at New York, Nov. 7, 1850. British novelist. Her chief work was Julia Howard: a Romance (1850).

Martin (mär.tañ), Pierre Émile. b. at Bourges, France, Aug. 18, 1824; d. at Fourchambault, France, May 24, 1915. French engineer and industrialist. He was co-inventor (1865) of a smelting method (Martin process) for making steel from pig iron; a modification of the Siemens method, it has caused the open-hearth process of steel-making to be called the Siemens-Martin process.

Martín (mär.tēn'), Ramón Grau San. See Grau San Martín, Ramón.

Martin (mär'tin), Riccardo. [Original name, Hugh Martin.] b. at Hopkinsville, Ky., Nov. 18, c1879; d. at New York, Aug. 11, 1952. American tenor singer, the first American-born tenor to sing with the Metropolitan Opera Company. His repertoire included many of the tenor roles in the Italian and French operas.

Martin, Sir Theodore. b. at Edinburgh, Scotland, Sept. 16, 1816; d. at Llangollen, Wales, Aug. 18, 1909. Scottish poet, dramatist, biographer, and translator. He practiced law (1846–1907) at Edinburgh and London, and wrote humorous poetry and prose sketches for various periodicals. He married (1851) Helen Faucit, distinguished Shakespearean actress, whose biography he wrote in 1900. He translated Horace, Catullus, and Vergil, Heine's poems, Goethe's Faust, and Dante, and contributed dramatic articles to Fraser's Magazine, the Quarterly Review, and Blackwood's Magazine. He was knighted for writing, at Queen Victoria's request, a five-volume Life of His Royal Highness, The Prince Consort (1875–80).

Martin, Sir Thomas Byam. b. July 25, 1773; d. at Portsmouth, England, Oct. 21, 1854. English admiral.

Martin, Thomas Commerford. b. at London, July 22, 1856; d. at Pittsfield, Mass., May 17, 1924. American scientific editor and writer. He assisted (1877–79) Thomas Edison at Menlo Park. He was editor (1880–82) of the Kingston (Jamaica) Daily Gleaner, editor (1883–90) of Electrical World, and coeditor (1890–1909) of Electrical Engineer, which was merged (1899) with the preceding. Author (or coauthor) of The Electric Motor and Its Applications (1887), The Inventions, Researches and Writings of Nikola Tesla (1894), Edison, His Life and Inventions (1910), The Story of Electricity (1919–22), and Forty Years of Edison Service, 1882–1922 (1922).

Martin, Thomas Staples. b. at Scottsville, Va., July 29, 1847; d. Nov. 12, 1919. American legislator, Democratic senator (1895–1919) from Virginia. He was majority floor leader (1917–19) and chairman of the committee on appropriations during World War I.

Martin, Victoria Claflin Woodhull. See Woodhull, Victoria Claflin.

Martin, Violet Florence. See under Somerville, Edith Anna Œnone.

Martin, William Alexander Parsons. b. at Livonia, Ind., April 10, 1827; d. Dec. 17, 1916. American clergyman, missionary, and educator. In 1850 he went to China as a missionary. He founded the Presbyterian mission at Peiping in 1863, was appointed professor of international law at Tung Wen College in Peiping in 1868, and became its president in 1869, resigning in 1898. In 1900 he became head of the New Imperial University of China, which was broken up during the Boxer uprising, and later president of the University of Wu-chang (1902–05). Among his publications are The Chinese (1881), A Cycle of Cathay (1896), The Siege in Peking (1900), The Lore of Cathay (1901), and works in Chinese on Christianity, science, and international law.

Martin, William McChesney. b. at St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 17, 1906—. American stock broker. He was president (1938–41) of the New York Stock Exchange, and chairman and president of the Export-Import Bank (1946 et seq.). He served (1949–51) as assistant secretary of the treasury and was appointed (1951) chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

Martinach (mär'tē.näch). German name of Martigny.

Martina Franca (mär.tē'nä fräng'kä). Town and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Taranto, situated on the Salentina peninsula, NE of Taranto. It has wine cellars, and produces cheeses and woolen textiles. Pop. of commune, 32,629 (1936); of town, 20,622 (1936).

Martin Chuzzlewit (mär'tin chuz'l.wit). Novel by Charles Dickens, originally produced in 20 monthly parts, the first coming out in 1843. It was published in one volume in 1844, and in Dickens's own words was intended "to show how selfishness propagates itself, and to what a grim giant it may grow from small beginnings." Martin's trip to America gave Dickens an opportunity to parody many crude and "spread-eagle" types which he associated with the U.S. at that time, and these caricatures offended many American readers of that day.

Martin Decoud (mär.tañ dę.kō). See Decoud, Martin.

Martin de Moussy (mär.tañ dę mö.sē), Jean Antoine Victor. b. at Moussy-le-Vieux, France, June 26, 1810; d. near Paris, March 26, 1869. French physician and traveler. Author of Description géographique et statistique de la Confédraétion Argentine (Paris, 3 vols. and atlas, 1860–64) and various scientific papers.

Martin du Gard (mär.tañ dü gär), Roger. b. at Neuilly-sur-Seine, France, 1881—. French novelist and dramatist, winner of the Nobel prize for literature (1937). Author of Devenir (1909), Jean Barois (1913), and of the cyclical novel Les Thibault (8 vols., 1922–40; Eng. trans., The World of the Thibaults, 1939–41). His dramas include La Gonfle (1928) and Un Taciturne (1931). A graduate in archaeology of the École des Chartes, and a veteran of World War I, he attained celebrity with Jean Barois. Les Thibault, the story of the efforts of sons of a traditional bourgeois family to adjust to the 20th-century world, is considered his masterpiece.

Martine (mär.tēn). Wife of Sganarelle in Molière's Le Médecin malgré lui.

Martine (mär'tin), James Edgar. b. at New York, Aug. 25, 1850; d. Feb. 26, 1926. American senator (1911–17) from New Jersey.

Martineau (mär'ti.nō), Harriet. b. at Norwich, England, June 12, 1802; d. at Clappersgate, near Ambleside, Westmorland, England, June 27, 1876. English author; sister of James Martineau. At the age of 16 she became very deaf, and she never possessed the senses of taste and smell. In 1820 she became interested in the writings of David Hartley and Joseph Priestley, who exerted a strong influence upon her philosophical and religious beliefs. Her first literary success was with a series of stories illustrating the political economy of Thomas Malthus, David Ricardo, and James Mill (1832). In 1834 she visited America and assisted the abolitionists. Among her works are The Essential Faith of the Universal Church, The Faith as Unfolded by Many Prophets, Providence Manifested through Israel (these were prize essays published by the Unitarian Society); Society in America (1836), Retrospect of Western Travel (1838), Deerbrook, a novel (1839), Forest and Game-Law Tales (1845), History of England during the Thirty Years' Peace, 1816–1846 (written for Charles Knight, 1848), The Philosophy of Comte, freely translated and condensed (1853), British Rule in India (1857), The Endowed Schools of Ireland (1859), and Health, Husbandry, and Handicraft (1861). Her autobiography was edited by Maria Weston Chapman in 1877.

Martineau, James. b. at Norwich, England, April 21, 1805; d. at London, Jan. 11, 1900. English Unitarian clergyman; brother of Harriet Martineau. He was principal of Manchester New College (1868–85). He was the author of Endeavours after the Christian Life (1843–47), Miscellanies (1852), Studies of Christianity (1858), Essays (1866), A Word for Scientific Theology (1868), Religion as Affected by Modern Materialism (1874), Modern Materialism (1876), The Relation between Ethics and Religion (1881), A Study of Spinoza (1882), Types of Ethical Theory (1885), The Study of Religion (1888), The Seat of Authority in Religion (1890), and others.

Martin Eden (mär'tin ē'dęn). Novel by Jack London, published in 1909.

Martinelli (mär.tin.el'ī; Italian, mär.tē.nel'lē), Giovanni. b. at Montagnana, Italy, Oct. 22, 1885—. Italian operatic tenor. Among his more than 35 roles are Rodolfo in La Bohème, Radames in Aïda, the Duke of Mantua in Rigoletto, the title role in Don Carlos, and Arnold in William Tell. A special concert (1938) celebrated his 25th season with the Metropolitan Opera House.

Martinet (mär.tē.ne), Achille Louis. b. at Paris, Jan. 21, 1806; d. there, Dec. 11, 1877. French engraver.

Martinet, Jean. d. 1672. French soldier. He was one of the officers who, under Louvois, helped in the reorganization of the army of Louis XIV. He is perhaps best known for the introduction of a system of uniform drill (whence his name has come to be applied in English to one who is a stickler for detail and strict adherence to rule, though this use of the word is not known in French).

Martinez (mär.tē'nęs). City in W California, county seat of Contra Costa County, on Suisun Bay NE of San Francisco: oil-refining, copper-smelting, fish-processing, and canning center. 8,268 (1950).

Martínez (mär.tē'nes), Enrique González. See González Martínez, Enrique.

Martínez, Maximiliano Hernández. b. at San Salvador, El Salvador, Oct. 29, 1882—. Salvadorian soldier and politician, president (1931–44) of El Salvador. Vice-president (1931) of the republic, he was appointed president (December, 1931) by a military junta to succeed the deposed Arturo Araújo. He was not recognized by the U.S. until 1934. He served (1935–44) as president by regular election.

Martínez, Rafael Arévalo. See Arévalo Martínez, Rafael.

Martínez, Tomás. b. at León, Nicaragua, c1812; d. at Managua, Nicaragua, March 12, 1873. Nicaraguan general and statesman, president (1857–67) of Nicaragua. He fought (1856–57) against the American filibuster William Walter, governed Nicaragua conjointly with Jerez (June-October, 1857), commanded the army against Costa Rica, and was president (Nov. 15, 1857–March 1, 1867) during a period of great national prosperity. During his incumbency Nicaragua and Guatemala lost a brief war to Honduras and El Salvador.

Martínez Barrio (mär.tē'neth bär'ryō), Diego. See Barrio, Diego Martínez.

Martínez de Campos (mär.tē'neth dā käm'pōs), Arsenio. [Sometimes incorrectly called Martínez Arsenio Campos.] b. at Segovia, Spain, 1834; d. at Zarauz, Guipúzcoa, Spain, 1900. Spanish soldier and statesman. He began his military career as a lieutenant in 1852. He fought in Morocco in 1859, and in Mexico under General Prim in 1864–70. From there he went to Cuba, returning to Spain with the rank of general. He participated in the plot which unseated (Feb. 11, 1873) Amadeus of Savoy and brought on a resurgence of the Carlist wars, and reached great heights of prestige under Alfonso XII and his wife Queen Maria Christina. In 1877 he commanded in Cuba as generalissimo; he became premier of the Spanish government in 1879, although his conduct in Cuba was censured in the Cortes. He served as minister of war (1881–84) and as president of the senate (1886, 1891). He returned to the Cuban command to cope (1895–96) with an insurrection, but failed in his mission and upon his return to Spain retired to private life.

Martínez de la Rosa (mär.tē'neth dā lä rō'sä), Francisco. b. at Granada, Spain, March 10, 1789; d. at Madrid, Feb. 7, 1862. Spanish statesman and man of letters. He was premier (1820–23, 1833–34), and was minister of foreign affairs (1844–46). He was ambassador (1839–41), 1847–51) at Paris. Among his works are Edipo (1833), La Conjuración de Venecia (1834), and La hija en casa y la madre en la mascára. His plays are among the first of the romantic school in Spain, and his novels, among them Doña Isabel de Solís (1837–46), are in the romantic vein of Sir Walter Scott's historical novels.

Martínez de Rozas (mär.tē'nes dā rō'säs), Juan. b. at Mendoza (then in Chile, now in Argentina), 1759; d. there, March 3, 1813. Chilean patriot.

Martínez Sierra (mär.tē'neth syer'rä), Gregorio. b. in Spain, 1881; d. at Madrid, Oct. 1, 1947. Spanish dramatist, poet, theater director, and essayist. He translated plays by Shakespeare, Barrie, Maeterlinck, Brieux, Dumas, Bjørnson, and Ibsen. A number of his plays were presented in the U.S., among them El Reino de Dios (The Kingdom of God) and his masterpiece, Canción de cuna (Cradle Song), which met with considerable success both as a play produced by the repertory theater of Eva Le Gallienne and as a motion picture.

Martínez Trueba (mär.tē'nes trö.ā'bä), Andrés. b. c1884—. Uruguayan statesman. A banker, he was elected (1950) president of Uruguay as the candidate of the Colorados. In 1952, when the presidency was abolished and replaced by a nine-member council, he became presiding officer of the council.

Martínez Zuviría (mär.tē'nes sö.bē.rē'ä), Gustavo. Original name of Wast, Hugo.

Martin Faber (mär'tin fā'bėr). Novel by William Gilmore Simms, published in 1833.

Martin Hyde (hīd). Historical novel by John Masefield, published in 1910.

Martini (mär.tē'nē), Giovanni Battista. [Called Padre Martini.] b. at Bologna, Italy, April 24, 1706; d. there, Aug. 4, c1784. Italian Franciscan monk, noted as a writer on music. His principal works are Storia della musica (3 vols., 1757–81) and Saggio di contrapunto (Essay on Counterpoint, 1774–75).

Martini (mär.tē.nē), Jean Paul Égide. [Surnamed in Italian il Tedesco, meaning "the German"; original name (German), Johann Paul Ägidius Schwarzendorf.] b. at Freistadt, Germany, Sept. 1, 1741; d. at Paris, Feb. 10, 1816. French organist and composer of the operas L'Amoureux de quinze ans (1771) and Sapho (1794), cantatas, chamber music, religious works, and songs. Author of the treatise on singing Mélopée moderne.

Martini (mär.tē'nē) or di Martino (dē mär.tē'nō), Simone. [Also, Simone Memmi.] b. at Siena, Italy, 1283; d. at Avignon, France, 1344. Italian painter of the Sienese school.

Martinique (mär.ti.nēk'). Island in the Caribbean Sea, N of Venezuela, and S of Dominica: a French colony. It is important for the production of sugar and rum. It was discovered (c1493 or c1502) by Columbus, who knew it as Mantinino, and in 1635 was colonized by the French. At the end of the Seven Years' War, and at two periods in the Napoleonic wars, it was held by the British (1793–1801 and 1809–14). It was regained (1816) by the French. The empress Josephine, first wife of Napoleon I, was born (1763) here. On May 8, 1902, an eruption of Mount Pelée, in the N part of the island, destroyed St. Pierre and the surrounding district, with the loss of nearly 40,000 lives. Capital, Fort-de-France; area, ab. 385 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 255,000.

Martinists (mär'tin.ists). Members of the school of religionists formed originally by the Chevalier Louis Claude de Saint Martin (1743–1803), a few years before the French Revolution broke out; a kind of pietistic imitation of freemasonry. The Martinists were transplanted to Russia during the reign of Catherine II.

Martin Marplot (mär'tin mär'plot). See under Marplot, or the Second Part of The Busy Body.

Martin Marprelate (mär'tin mär'prel''ąt). Name used by the author of vigorous and vituperative pamphlets in a war of letters waged during the late 1580's and early 1590's by the Puritans against the defenders of discipline as considered necessary by the official group within the Church of England. The pamphlets were written by a number of persons, but were published under the name of Martin Marprelate. The origin of the controversy lay in one of the regular pamphlet arguments between the Anglicans and the Puritans, the first of the pamphlets being issued from the secret press of Robert Waldegrave. The press which printed the tracts was moved from place to place to avoid government suppression, and was once seized, near Manchester, but the publications were continued. John Penry, Henry Barrow, Job Throckmorton, John Field, and others have all been supposed to be the authors of the tracts, but some think Martin Marprelate to have been a layman about the court. The Marprelate tracts were answered by pamphlets by Thomas Nashe, John Lyly, Robert Greene, and other professional writers hired to defend the authorities in the same ranting style as the pamphlets. The controversy was suppressed by the death of John Udall in prison, and the execution of Penry and Barrow in 1593, but the identity of the original Martin Marprelate remains a mystery.

Martinmas (mär'tin.mas). Church festival honoring Saint Martin, falling on November 11, formerly designated in England as one of the quarter days on which rents were due. It is a post-harvest feast of thanksgiving and cheer. Meat or fowl is always served, and new wine is opened. Weather predictions are associated with Martinmas in rural England: whatever the weather on Saint Martin's Eve, it will last for two months.

Martin of Tours (mär'tin; tör), Saint. See Saint Martin.

Martin of Troppau (trop'ou). [Also: Martin the Pole, Latinized, Martinus Polonus; family name, Strebski.] b. at Troppau (now Opava, Czechoslovakia), in Silesia; d. at Bologna, Italy, 1278. Silesian monk and chronicler. A native of Troppau, he joined the Dominicans of the Polish province at Prague. He became papal chaplain, and in 1278 was appointed archbishop of Gniezno (Gnesen) by Pope Nicholas III, but died at Bologna while on his way to Poland. He wrote an uncritical epitome of world history (Chronica Pontificum et Imperatorum), which appeared (c1265–77) in several editions.

Martins (mär.tēńs'), Joaquim Pedro de Oliveira. b. at Lisbon, Portugal, April 30, 1845; d. there, 1894. Portuguese historian who first presented a synthetic view of Iberian civilization as a cultural unit, in his História da civilização ibérica (1879). He was a distinguished member of the Coimbra group which introduced realism in Portuguese literature. Among his other well-known works were História de Portugal (1879), Portugal contemporâneo (1881), and História da República Romana (1885).

Martinsburg (mär'tinz.bėrg). City in E West Virginia, county seat of Berkeley County, ab. 60 mi. NW of Washington, D.C.: manufactures of hosiery, wool textiles, ladies' garments, apple products, vinegar, cement, paper boxes, bricks, tile, and furniture. It is a shipping point for apples, dairy products, and limestone. Martinsburg was incorporated in 1778. Pop. 15,621 (1950).

Martin Schüler (mär'tin shü'lėr). Novel by Romer Wilson (Mrs. Edward J. O'Brien), published in 1918.

Martins Ferry (mär'tinz). [Names of early settlements in the present city area: Jefferson, Norristown, Martinsville.] City in E Ohio, in Belmont County, on the Ohio River ab. 2 mi. above Wheeling, W.Va.: manufactures of steel, coal products, tin plate, stoves, boxes, and beer. Jefferson was platted in 1795, and was an important livestock shipping point in the 1830's. The present town was platted in 1835 and originally named Martinsville. 13,220 (1950).

Martinson (mär'tin.sôn), Harry Edmund. b. at Jämshög, Blekinge, Sweden, 1904—. Swedish novelist and poet. His election to the Swedish Academy (1948) marked the acceptance by official Sweden of the "proletarian" trend in literature. Among his prose works are Resor utan mål (Aimless Journeys, 1932), Kap Farväl (Cape Farewell, 1933), Nässlorna blomma (Flowering Nettles, 1935), and Vägen till Klockerike (The Road to Klockerike, 1947). His well-known poetry includes Nomad (1931) and Passad (Trade Winds, 1945).

Martinsville (mär'tinz.vil). [Called "the Artesian City."] City in C Indiana, county seat of Morgan County: therapeutic artesian waters. Its industries include grain mills, sawmills, and brick plants. 5,991 (1950).

Martinsville. Independent city in S Virginia, formerly county seat of Henry County, on the Smith River: manufactures of furniture, wood products, nylon, textiles, knit goods, mirrors, paint, and varnish. 17,251 (1950).

Martinsville. See also under Greensboro.

Martinsville. Former name of Martins Ferry.

Martin the Pole. See Martin of Troppau.

Martinů (mär'ti.nö), Bohuslav. b. at Policka, in what is now Czechoslovakia, Dec. 8, 1890—. Czech composer. Influenced by both native and French sources, he is the composer of chamber music, concertos, and symphonic works.

Martinus Gosia (mär.tī'nus gō'sha). Italian jurist, at Bologna, notable as one of the "Four Doctors." See under Bulgarus.

Martinus Polonus (pō.lō'nus). Latinized form of Martin the Pole; see Martin of Troppau.

Martinus Scriblerus (skrib.lē'rus), Memoirs of. Satire written principally by John Arbuthnot, published in 1741. Pope and Swift were also among the contributors and members of the Scriblerus Club.

Martin Valliant (mär'tin val'yant). Historical novel by Warwick Deeping, published in 1917.

Martin Vas or Martin Vaz (mär'tin väz). Group of islets belonging to Brazil, in the South Atlantic ab. 930 mi. E of Rio de Janeiro and ab. 30 mi. E of the Brazilian island of Trinidad. Area, ab. 0.1 sq. mi.

Martin v. Hunter's Lessee, 1 Wheaton 304 (1816) (hun'tėrz). U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding the high court's right to review the decisions of state courts. The opinion, delivered by Justice Joseph Story, maintained the Supreme Court's appellate jurisdiction in all cases related to the laws, treaties, and Constitution of the U.S. The case arose over the refusal of the Virginia court of appeals to be bound by an earlier federal decision, and its pronouncement of the 25th section of the federal Judiciary Act of 1789 as unconstitutional. The case provoked a long and bitter discussion of states' rights, with Justice Spencer Roane and John Taylor of Caroline leading the vigorous attack upon what they conceived to be the arrogation of national powers.

Martin v. Mott, 12 Wheaton 19 (1827) (mot). U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding the right of the president, under congressional authority, to be the exclusive judge of constitutionally specified exigencies requiring the calling out of the militia. The opinion was written by Justice Joseph Story. The background of the case was the violent opposition in New England and parts of New York to the War of 1812. In some instances this opposition took the form of denying the right of the president to call out the militia of a state. In Massachusetts, for example, the chief justice of the Supreme Judicial Court advised the governor that he, and not the president, had the right to decide when the constitutional exigency existed which required the calling of the state militia. It was this question that Justice Story dealt with in his opinion.

Martiny (mär.tē'ni), Philip. b. at Strasbourg, in Alsace, May 10, 1858; d. at New York, June 26, 1927. American sculptor. He came to the U.S. as a child and became a pupil of Augustus Saint-Gaudens at New York. In a traditional academic style he executed the decorative sculpture for the Chicago Art Institute, the Chamber of Commerce at New York, and the bronze doors for Saint Bartholomew's Church at New York. Among his statues are the McKinley Monument at Springfield, Mass., and the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument at Jersey City, N.J.

Martín y Solar (mär.tēn' ē sō.lär'), Vicente. [Called in Italy Lo Spagnuolo, meaning "the Spaniard."] b. at Valencia, Spain, c1754; d. 1810. Spanish composer. He became 1788 director of the Italian Opera at St. Petersburg. His 12 operas include Una Cosa rara (1786).

Martius (mär'shus). Character in Shakespeare's Titus Andronicus: a son of Titus Andronicus.

Martius (mär'tsē.ůs), Karl Friedrich Philipp von. b. at Erlangen, Bavaria, Germany, April 17, 1794; d. at Munich, Dec. 13, 1868. Bavarian naturalist. From 1817 to 1820 he traveled in Brazil, under the auspices of the Bavarian government. In 1826 he was appointed professor of botany in the University of Munich, and in 1832 conservator of the botanical garden, but resigned both positions in 1864. The results of the Brazilian expedition were published at the expense of the Bavarian government as Reise in Brasilien (3 vols. and atlas, 1823–31), and in a series of richly illustrated works on animals and plants, the latter by Martius. His work on palms was published from 1823 to 1850 in three folio volumes. He planned and edited the first volumes of the Flora Brasiliensis (begun in 1840), one of the greatest botanical works ever undertaken.

Martos (mär'tōs). [Former name, Tucci; Latin, Colonia Augusta Gemella.] Town in S Spain, in the province of Jaén, ab. 14 mi. SW of Jaén: iron mines, sulfur springs, and textile and pottery manufactures. It is the marketing center of a stock-raising district. It was a Roman fortress town in ancient times. 27,127 (1940).

Martucci (mär.tōt'chē), Giuseppe. b. at Capua, Italy, Jan. 6, 1856; d. at Naples, Italy, June 1, 1909. Italian pianist, conductor, and composer. His works include two symphonies, two piano concertos (on one of which, in B flat minor, his fame as a composer principally rests), two trios, an oratorio, and many compositions for the piano.

Marty (mär.tē), André. b. at Perpignan, Pyrénées-Orientales, France, Nov. 5, 1886—. French Communist leader, known as an organizer of the International Brigades (1936–39) in the Spanish Civil War and also of the French naval mutiny in the Black Sea (1919). He was imprisoned (1919–23) for the Black Sea episode, was a member of the Chamber of Deputies (1924–32, 1936–40), and later of both Constituent Assemblies (1945–46) and the National Assembly (1946). He was thereafter again a member of the Chamber of Deputies, retaining his seat as an independent even after his formal expulsion from the Communist Party in early 1953.

Martyn (mär'tin), Henry. b. at Truro, England, Feb. 18, 1781; d. at Tokat, in Armenia, Oct. 16, 1812. English missionary. He arrived at Calcutta as chaplain of the East India Company in 1806, and began to preach to the natives at Cawnpore. In 1811 he visited Persia, and in 1812 started on his return to England by way of Constantinople. His Journals and Letters appeared in 1837. His works include The New Testament translated into the Hindoostanee Language from the Original Greek (1814) and The New Testament translated into Persian (1827).

Martyn, John. b. at London, Sept. 12, 1699; d. at Chelsea, London, Jan. 29, 1768. English botanist. In 1725 he contributed the technical botanical terms to Bailey's dictionary, and in 1732 was elected professor of botany at Cambridge.

Martyn, William Carlos. b. at New York, Dec. 15, 1841; d. Aug. 4, 1917. American historian and Presbyterian clergyman.

Martyn, Wyndham. b. in England, July 6, 1875—. American author of detective fiction, creator of the fictional character Anthony Trent. Author of The Man Outside (1910), All the World to Nothing (1912), Anthony Trent, Master Criminal (1918), Secret of the Silver Car (1920), The Bathurst Complex (1924), The Return of Anthony Trent (1925), Anthony Trent, Avenger (1927), Murder Island (1928), The Death Fear (1929), The Recluse of Fifth Avenue (1929), Murder in Beacon Street (1930), The Trent Trail (1930), The House of Secrets (1936), Murder Walks the Deck (1938), and Shadow Agent (1941).

Martyr (mär'tėr), Peter. See Peter Martyr.

Martyr, The. Novel by Liam O'Flaherty, published in 1933.

Martyrdom of Saint George (jôrj). Picture by Paolo Veronese, over the high altar of the Church of San Giorgio in Braida, at Verona.

Martyrs (mär.tėr), Les. [Eng. trans., "The Martyrs."] Prose epic on the triumph of Christianity, by François René Châteaubriand, published in 1809. Laid in the time of Diocletian, the story deals with the struggles and martyrdom of the early Christians, shifting its scene from classical countries to Gaul, where the half-mythical heroes of the Franks appear, and then back to Greece and Rome.

Martyrs, Les. Opera by Gaetano Donizetti, produced at Paris in 1840, and at London as I Martiri in 1852. It is an adaptation of Donizetti's Poliuto, which was banned by the censor at Milan.

Martyrs, Order of the. See Order of Saints Cosmo and Damian.

Marucchi (mä.rök'kē), Orazio. b. at Rome, Feb. 1, 1852; d. there, Jan. 21, 1931. Italian archaeologist, professor at Rome and director of the Egyptian museum of the Vatican and of the Lateran Museum. He was a pupil of G. B. Rossi, whose work Roma Sotterranea (Subterranean Rome) he continued.

Maruku (mä.rö'kö). Subgroup of the Haya, a Bantu-speaking people of NW Tanganyika, in E Africa.

Marure (mä.rö'rā), Alejandro. b. near Quezaltenango, Guatemala, 1803; d. at Guatemala City, 1866. Guatemalan politician and historian.

Marus (mā'rus). Latin name of the Morava, in Czechoslovakia.

Maruts (ma.röts'). In Hindu mythology, storm gods and aids to Indra, in some versions his brothers, in some versions his sons. They ride the winds and strike trees and men with lightning. Their number is variously given as 21, 27, and 180.

Marvejols (mârv.zhol). Town in S France, in the department of Lozère, ab. 11 mi. NW of Mende. 3,700 (1946).

Marvel (mär'vęl), Ik. Pseudonym of Mitchell, Donald Grant.

Marvell (mär'vęl), Andrew. b. in Holderness, Yorkshire, March 31, 1621; d. at London, Aug. 18, 1678. English poet and satirist. He graduated at Cambridge in 1638. In 1653 he became tutor of Cromwell's ward, William Dutton, and in 1657 was appointed Milton's assistant in the Latin secretaryship. A Parliamentary adherent, he wrote a number of satires on Charles II and the Stuarts, originally circulated in manuscript and collected in Poems on Affairs of State (1689). For a time toward the end of his life, Marvell was in danger from the Stuarts and their adherents for his writings. His most notable poem is the Horatian Ode to Cromwell (printed 1776). He also wrote The Rehearsal Transposed (1672–73), a successful attack on Samuel Parker for his assaults on the nonconformists. Perhaps the most noted of his minor poems is To His Coy Mistress.

Marvin (mar'vin), Charles Frederick. b. at Putnam, Ohio, Oct. 7, 1858; d. at Washington, D.C., June 5, 1943. American meteorologist who served (1913–34) as chief of the U.S. Weather Bureau. He instituted the practice of supplying special reports to aviators, devised methods for the automatic recording of rainfall, snowfall, sunshine, and atmospheric pressure, and invented the clinometer for determining the height of clouds over airports.

Marvin, Charles Thomas. b. at Plumstead, Kent, England, 1854; d. there, Dec. 4, 1890. English government employee and author of books on Russia. He lived (1870–76, 1882–84) in Russia. While employed (1877–78) as a copyist at the British Foreign Office he gave the terms of a secret Anglo-Russian treaty to the London Globe, of which he was a correspondent. He was arrested, tried, and discharged (1878).

Marvin, Enoch Mather. b. in Warren County, Mo., June 12, 1823; d. Nov. 26, 1877. American Methodist Episcopal clergyman.

Marvin, Frederic Rowland. b. at Troy, N.Y., Sept. 23, 1847; d. July 22, 1918. American Congregational clergyman and writer.

Marwar (mär'wär). See Jodhpur, former state.

Marwitz (mär'vits), Georg von der. b. at Klein-Nossin, Germany, July 7, 1856; d. at Wundichow, Germany, Oct. 27, 1929. Prussian general who in World War I fought at the Marne (1914) and at the Masurian lakes (1915). He withstood the attack of the Russian general Brusilov (1916–17) and threw back the British attack at Cambrai (1917), but was decisively beaten by Pershing at the Meuse.

Marwood (mär'wůd), Mrs. One of the principal characters in Congreve's comedy The Way of the World.

Marx (märks), Adolf Bernhard. b. at Halle, Germany, May 15, 1795; d. at Berlin, May 17, 1866. German composer and writer on music, author of Lehre von der musikalischen Komposition (4 vols., 1837–47), Gluck und die Oper (2 vols., 1863), Erinnerungen (1865), and others.

Marx, Karl. [Full name, Karl Heinrich Marx.] b. at Trier, in Rhenish Prussia, May 5, 1818; d. at London, March 14, 1883. German philosopher, economist, and socialist leader. His father was a lawyer, and originally a Jew, who in 1824 professed Christianity and caused his whole family to be baptized as Protestants. The young

Karl Marx studied jurisprudence, history, and philosophy at the Universities of Bonn and Berlin, and took a Ph.D. degree at the University of Jena in 1842. In the same year he became editor of the Rheinische Zeitung, published at Cologne; upon the suppression of this liberal newspaper he went to Paris, where he devoted himself to the study of sociology and political economy. At this time he became definitely a socialist. With others he undertook to establish a new periodical, the Deutsch-französische Jahrbücher (of which, however, only one number was issued). In Paris he met Friedrich Engels, who became his lifelong friend and collaborator. Together they wrote at this time Die heilige Familie oder Kritik der kritischen Kritik (generally referred to in English simply as The Holy Family), which deflated the pretentious "critical criticism" of certain Berlin Hegelians. During his Paris days Marx also formed a warm friendship with Heinrich Heine. But he was soon expelled from France at the instance of the Prussian government, and took refuge at Brussels, where in 1847 he published La Misère de la philosophie (The Poverty of Philosophy), a destructive and sarcastic analysis of the economic proposals put forward by the French socialist Pierre Joseph Proudhon in his Philosophie de la misère (The Philosophy of Poverty). In Brussels Marx and Engels for a time published a weekly paper in German, the Brüsseler deutsche Zeitung, and joined an international secret organization, the League of the Just, which presently changed its name to League of the Communists; for this organization they wrote Das Kommunistische Manifest (The Communist Manifesto), published in 1848. This work formulated its authors' concept of the revolutionary role of the working class with such force and clarity that more than a century later it remains one of the basic handbooks of Marxism-Leninism. The revolutionary ferment in Germany in 1848 called Marx back to Cologne, where he set up the Neue Rheinische Zeitung and, in the face of increasingly severe repressive measures by the Prussian government, called for a refusal to pay taxes and for armed resistance. He was arrested for high treason, acquitted (not without irony, in the light of later history, by a jury composed of members of the bourgeoisie), but again expelled from his native land, whereupon he went to London and there remained the rest of his days. His earlier London years were a time of painful poverty: later his situation was somewhat eased by fees from the New York Tribune for a series of letters written for that paper by request, and by Engels's generosity. An attempted revival in London of the Neue Rheinische Zeitung ran to only six numbers. He wrote and in 1859 published Zur Kritik der politischen Ökonomie (Critique of Political Economy); but dissatisfied with this as an approach to a full formulation of his theories, he made another start, which led to the publication in 1867 of the first volume of Das Kapital. Marx was not to live to see the rest of this vast work in print (volumes two and three were edited and published by Engels between 1885 and 1894). In 1864 Marx had been a founder of the International Working Men's Association (known as the First International), and in fact dominated its short career; the clash of ideologies among radicals led to the removal of the Association's general council to New York in 1872, and to dissolution in 1875. In his polemics, Marx was not only hard-hitting and relentless, but often sarcastic and abusive. In Das Kapital there are passages of lucid illustration and flashes of deep humanitarian feeling, but it is unquestionably a difficult book, often tortuous and obscure in its logic. Nevertheless, by force of his economic and political analyses, and by his use of the dialectical method borrowed from Hegel, Marx became one of the handful of men who have most profoundly influenced human thought and the evolution of human society; it has been argued that among his 19th-century contemporaries only Charles Darwin played an equally revolutionary role.

Marx, Wilhelm. b. at Cologne, Germany, Jan. 15, 1863; d. at Bonn, Germany, Aug. 5, 1946. German statesman. He was a Centrist Party member (1910–14) of the Reichstag, chairman (1921–28) of the Center Party, succeeded Stresemann as chancellor, and served from 1923 to 1925. He was a candidate for reichspresident after Friedrich Ebert's death in 1925; running on a Center, Democratic, and Social Democratic ticket, he collected 45.3 percent of the votes against Hindenburg's 48.3 percent. In 1926 he became minister of justice and succeeded Hans Luther as chancellor in the same year. He resigned in 1928.

Mary (mâr'i). [Also: Our Lady, Saint Mary, the Virgin, the Virgin Mary.] Mother of Jesus. According to the Gospel narrative, the angel Gabriel, sent from God to Mary, "a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David," told her that she was to bring forth a son, adding the explanation that the holy thing to be born of her was to be conceived of the Holy Ghost. This "Annunciation" is commemorated as a church festival on March 25, known as Lady Day. In due time she gave birth to the child Jesus in a stable at Bethlehem. Very little is told in the New Testament of Mary's personal history. The doctrine of her immaculate conception and consequent sinlessness is an article of faith in the Roman Catholic Church, promulgated Dec. 8, 1854, by a bull of Pope Pius IX which declares that from the first instant of her conception the Blessed Virgin Mary was kept free from all taint of original sin. In recent years it has been made a matter of dogma. In that church, and in the Greek Church, she is regarded as the most exalted of created beings; while angels and saints have that secondary veneration or worship paid to them which is called "dulia," she alone is entitled to "hyperdulia," and her intercession is invoked more than that of all others. In art, she is often called "The Madonna."

Mary. In the Bible, the sister of Martha and Lazarus, resident at Bethany.

Mary (mä.rē'). [Former name, Merv.] Oasis city in the U.S.S.R., in the Turkmen Soviet Socialist Republic, in C Asia, on the Murgab River. It is a rail and caravan junction, with textile and food-processing industries. Because of its strategic position between Iran, Bukhara, and Herat the oasis has been important from remote times. It was conquered by Alexander the Great, and belonged successively to the Parthians, Saracens, and Seljuks. It was ravaged by the Mongols in 1221. Later it belonged in turn to Uzbeks, Persians, and Bukharans. The Russians annexed it in 1883–84. It is now traversed by the Trans-Caspian Railway. The present city of Mary is ab. 20 mi. W of the old city. 37,100 (1939).

Mary (of England). [Originally Princess Victoria Mary of Teck.] b. at Kensington Palace, London, May 26, 1867; d. at London, March 24, 1953. Queen of England; daughter of Francis, Duke of Teck (1837–1900), and queen of George V of England, whom she married in 1893. She had previously been affianced to Albert Victor, Duke of Clarence (1864–92), the eldest son of Edward VII, and was popularly known as "Princess May." Her mother was Princess Mary, daughter of the first Duke of Cambridge, and granddaughter of George III. She was the mother of Edward VIII and George VI of England.

Mary I or Mary Tudor (of England). [Called Bloody Mary.] b. at Greenwich Palace, Feb. 18, 1516; d. Nov. 17, 1558. Queen of England and Ireland (1553–58); only surviving child of Henry VIII and his first wife, Catherine of Aragon. She was affianced first to the Dauphin Francis in 1518, and later to the emperor Charles V in 1522. An attempt was also made to marry her to Francis I in 1526. At the divorce of Catherine in 1533, Mary was adjudged illegitimate, but on Feb. 7, 1544, the crown was entailed upon her after Edward, son of Henry VIII and Jane Seymour, and later Edward VI, or any lawful child of the king. This period of her life was made hideous for her because of her refusal to give up her Roman Catholicism and because of her loyalty to her mother. She was separated from Catherine, and could not visit her even on her deathbed; she was forced to repudiate her religion and acknowledge her illegitimacy; she served as Elizabeth's lady in waiting. Edward VI died July 6, 1553, and on July 13, 1553, Mary was proclaimed queen at Norwich, and crowned at Westminster Oct. 1, 1553. The council proclaimed Lady Jane Grey queen, but Mary quickly overcame opposition. An insurrection headed by Henry Grey, Duke of Suffolk, in favor of his daughter, Lady Jane Grey, and one of Kentishmen led by Sir Thomas Wyatt were suppressed early in 1554. She married Philip of Spain (later Philip II) at Winchester, July 25, 1554. In 1555 Parliament restored the papal power, and revived the penal laws against heresy. The first martyr was burned at Smithfield, Feb. 4, 1555. After 1556 her principal adviser was Reginald, Cardinal Pole. On Nov. 10, 1558, the last heretics were burned at Canterbury, the total number of martyrs during her reign being 300, the most famous being Ridley, Latimer, and Cranmer. In 1557 England joined Spain in the war against France, with the result that Calais, the last remainder of the once extensive English holdings on the Continent, was lost.

Mary II (of England). b. at St. James's Palace, April 30, 1662; d. at Kensington Palace, Dec. 28, 1694. Queen of England, Scotland, and Ireland (1689–94); eldest child of James II. By the death of her younger brother, Edgar, in 1671, she became heiress presumptive to the crown, and on Nov. 4, 1677, married William, prince of Orange. In the struggle with James II she identified herself with her husband. On Dec. 22, 1688, James II, expelled by the English who feared that he would attempt to reëstablish Roman Catholicism in England, fled to France, and on Feb. 13, 1689, William and Mary assented to the Declaration of Right, and were crowned (April 11, 1689) joint sovereigns. She took little interest in public business, and in the king's absence ruled through the council.

Mary Ambree (am'brē). See Ambree, Mary.

Mary Ashburton (ash'bėr.tọn). See Ashburton, Mary.

Mary Avenel (av'ẹ.nęl). See Avenel, Mary.

Mary Barton (bär'tọn). Novel by Mrs. Gaskell, published in 1848.

Mary Beatrice (bē'ạ.tris) (of England). [Called Mary of Modena.] b. at Modena, Oct. 5, 1658; d. at Saint-Germain, France, May 7, 1718. Queen of James II of England; only daughter of Alfonso IV (Alfonso d'Este) of Modena. Her marriage with the Duke of York (later James II) was concluded at Dover, Nov. 21, 1673. The Prince of Wales, James Francis Edward Stuart, afterward known as the Old Pretender, was born June 10, 1688. Her previous children had died in infancy, and rumors of substitution were immediately credited. On the invasion of England by William of Orange (William III), she joined James II at Saint-Germain.

Maryborough (mär'i.bur.ō, -bėr.ō). Seaport city in E Australia, in SE Queensland, on the Mary River ab. 140 mi. N of Brisbane. 14,395 (1947).

Maryborough, 1st Viscount. Title of Molyneux, Richard (1593–1636).

Mary Island (mär'i). See under Canton and Enderbury.

Maryland (mer'i.lạnd). [Called the "Free State"; also the "Old Line State," the "Cockade State."] State of the E United States, bounded by Pennsylvania on the N, Delaware and the Atlantic Ocean on the E, Virginia and West Virginia (separated by the Potomac) on the S and W, and West Virginia on the W: one of the 13 original states, and often classed as a Southern State.

Population, Area, and Political Divisions. Maryland is divided for administrative purposes into 23 counties and Baltimore City. It sends six representatives to Congress, and has eight electoral votes. The state still continues, as do some others, the use of the whipping post in connection with certain crimes. Leading cities are Baltimore, Cumberland, and Hagerstown. Capital, Annapolis; area, 98,887 sq. mi. (10,577 sq. mi., including water); pop. 2,343,001 (1950). The state ranks 41st in area, and 24th (on the basis of the 1950 census) in population.

Terrain and Climate. Divided into two parts by Chesapeake Bay, the state has a very irregular S boundary formed by the Potomac River. The part E of Chesapeake Bay is known as the Eastern Shore. The N boundary with Pennsylvania is known as the Mason-Dixon Line. Most of the state is low and flat except for the W part, which contains ranges of the Blue Ridge and Allegheny Mountains, the highest point being Backbone Mountain in the extreme W (3,360 ft.). Chesapeake Bay, with many excellent harbors, provides an important commercial waterway. It is connected with Delaware Bay (between Delaware and New Jersey) by the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal (ab. 14 mi.), extending from Delaware City, Del., to Chesapeake City, Md. Among the rivers flowing into Chesapeake Bay on the W shore are the Susquehanna, which comes into the state's NE corner from Pennsylvania; the Patapsco, which starts in the N part of the state and has the city of Baltimore on one of its estuaries; and the Patuxent in the SE. Some of the rivers flowing into the bay on the E shore are the Chester, the Choptank, and the Nanticoke. Like the bay the Potomac is an important commercial waterway, and large vessels find it navigable to Washington, D.C. The W portion of the state is colder than the E in winter, although snow falls in all parts, but the climate as a whole is mild.

Industry, Agriculture, and Trade. Farming is Maryland's leading industry. Dairy products, poultry, corn, tobacco, fruits, and vegetables, and wheat take high place among its farm products. Cattle are raised for meat as well as for dairy products. Fishing is also a major occupation, the waters of Chesapeake Bay being noted for their excellent oysters. Maryland is also famed for its terrapin and crabs. Manufacturing produces iron and steel, textiles, clothing, whiskey, refined copper, processed foods, aircraft, ships, electrical apparatus, and chemicals. Meat packing and the canning of tomatoes and seafood are the important aspects of food processing. The state's mineral resources are coal, iron, clay, copper, asbestos, stone, and gravel. Annual income in the state from agriculture ranges as high as 300 million dollars, and from manufacturing as high as two billion.

History. Maryland was granted (1632) by Charles I of England to George Calvert, Lord Baltimore, who was to be the proprietor and absolute lord, but Calvert died before the charter passed the great seal, and the grant was given to his son Cecilius. The first permanent settlement was made (1634) at St. Mary's by Leonard Calvert, a brother of Cecilius. William Claiborne, a Virginian, who had set up a trading post on an island in Chesapeake Bay, and his followers refused to accept the new government and offered considerable armed resistance. Maryland was the first colony to pass (1649) a religious toleration act. Maryland's boundary dispute with Pennyslvania was settled (1763–67) by the drawing of the Mason-Dixon Line. Maryland became (1689) a royal colony; a proprietary government again in 1715; adopted its first constitution in 1776; ratified the Articles of Confederation in 1781, the federal Constitution on April 28, 1788, becoming the seventh state of the Union. The state was heavily attacked by the British during the War of 1812; their failure to capture (1814) Fort McHenry at Baltimore inspired Francis Scott Key to write The Star-Spangled Banner, and the fort is now a national monument and historic shrine. The first U.S. railroad, the Baltimore and Ohio, was chartered at Baltimore in 1827 with the object of gaining Western trade. The world's first telegraph message was received here in 1844 by Samuel Morse. In the Civil War Maryland, although a slave state, did not secede, but the S part was generally favorable to the Confederacy while the rest of the state remained loyal to the Union. The major battle fought in the state was that of Antietam (Sept. 17, 1862), fought at Sharpsburg, ab. 3 mi. N of Antietam; in this battle forces under the Union general McClellan repulsed troops under Lee, who was attempting his first real push into the North. The battle is commemorated by the 183-acre Antietam Battlefield site (established 1890) and by Antietam National Cemetery. The state abolished slavery in 1864, and ratified its present constitution in 1867.

Culture. Maryland's population is somewhat more urban than rural, close to half its population being concentrated in the city of Baltimore. The population includes a foreign group comprised chiefly of Russians, Poles, and Germans. There is a sizable proportion of Negroes. The streets and houses of Baltimore in many places still retain much of their 18th and 19th century charm. The city is famed for its social events, its fine cooking, its Preakness Race (one of the nation's major sports events) run annually at Pimlico Racecourse, and as an educational center. Frederick in the N was the home of Barbara Frietchie. At Aberdeen, not far from Baltimore, is Aberdeen Proving Ground, a 35,000-acre reservation used by the U.S. as a testing ground for military weapons and other materials of war. Among the state's notable institutions of higher learning are the U.S. Naval Academy, at Annapolis; the state-supported University of Maryland, at College Park, with a branch at Baltimore; Goucher College, at Baltimore; the internationally known Johns Hopkins University, at Baltimore; Peabody Institute of the City of Baltimore, containing a noted conservatory of music; St. John's College, at Annapolis. The state motto is Fatti Maschi, Parole Femine, meaning "Deeds are Manly, Words Womanish." The state flower is the black-eyed susan.

Maryland! My Maryland! Song still widely sung in Maryland, and originally popular among the Confederates in the years 1861–65, written by J. R. Randall in 1861. It was sung to the college tune of Lauriger Horatius (or Tannenbaum O Tannenbaum, which has the same tune).

Marylebone (mār″i.lē.bōn′, mār′lē.bən), St. See St. Marylebone.

Marylebone Gardens. Formerly celebrated place of entertainment in London. It consisted principally of a garden at the back of "The Rose" tavern on High Street, in what is now St. Marylebone. It was in existence in the middle of the 17th century. Its popularity gradually died out, and c1778 the site was built over.

Mary Magdalene (mag′dą.lēn, mag.dą.lē′nē). [Also: Mary Magdalen (mag′dą.lən), Mary of Magdala (mag′dą.lą).] In the Bible, a woman described by Luke, and mentioned elsewhere in the gospels as a demoniac from whom seven devils had been cast out, and who was closely associated with Jesus, especially at the Resurrection. She has commonly been identified, erroneously, with the woman who was "a sinner" mentioned in Luke (vii. 37–50), and also, with even less ground, with Mary of Bethany.

Mary of Burgundy (bėr′gun.di). [French, Marie de Bourgogne.] b. at Brussels, Feb. 13, 1457; d. there, March 27, 1482. Duchess of Burgundy; daughter of Charles the Bold. On her father's death (1477) the duchy was seized by Louis XI of France who attempted to marry her to the Dauphin (later Charles VIII) but she refused and turned to her possessions in the Netherlands. Before the Netherlanders would accept her, she had to sign the Great Privilege, reëstablishing local rights and limiting Mary's powers. She married (1477) Maximilian of Austria, who later became (1493) Maximilian I of the Holy Roman Empire.

Mary of Egypt (ē′jipt), Saint. b. c344; d. c421. Christian saint. According to her biographer, the monk Zosimus, she retired to the desert beyond the Jordan after her conversion from a life of prostitution. She left her home at the age of 12 and went to Alexandria, where she spent 17 years before going to Jerusalem with a pilgrimage, not out of devotion but to entice the lustful. There she is said to have been miraculously converted. After 47 years in the desert, subsisting on herbs, she was found by Zosimus, who brought her communion and buried her when she had expired. The life of Saint Mary, which contains some legendary elements, was written sometime before 500, according to the Bollandists. She has been portrayed by Tintoretto, Ribera, and others.

Mary of France (frans). [Originally called Mary Tudor.] b. cMarch, 1496; d. at Westhorpe, Dec. 24, 1533. Third daughter of Henry VII of England. In 1507 she was betrothed to the future emperor Charles V; in 1508 they were married by proxy; and in 1513, her brother, now Henry VIII, set the date for the marriage in 1514. But a better match was made for Charles and, rather than suffer a diplomatic defeat by having Charles withdraw from the betrothal, on Oct. 9, 1514, she married Louis XII of France. Louis died Jan. 1, 1515. She soon after married Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk; their daughter Frances was the mother of Lady Jane Grey.

Mary of Guise (gēz, gwēz). [Also, Mary of Lorraine.] b. at Bar-le-Duc, Nov. 22, 1515; d. at Edinburgh, June 10, 1560. Queen of James V of Scotland, and mother of Mary, Queen of Scots; the eldest daughter of Claude, Duke of Guise. On Aug. 4, 1534, she married Louis of Orléans, who died June 9, 1537. She married James V of Scotland in June, 1538, and Mary Stuart was born Dec. 7 or 8, 1542. James having died the week his daughter was born, Mary was made regent of Scotland after a long period when James Hamilton, 2nd Earl of Arran, held the regency. Arran was pro-English; Mary was pro-French. In March, 1559, Henry II of France sent her instructions to suppress heresy in Scotland. A conflict with John Knox and the Reformers resulted in her suspension from the regency Oct. 21, 1559.

Mary of Scotland (skot′land). Drama in blank verse by Maxwell Anderson, produced in 1933 and published in 1934.

Mary Olivier, A Life (ō.liv′i.ā). Psychological novel by May Sinclair, published in 1919. The novel is an early example of the stream-of-consciousness technique.

Maryport (mār′i.pōrt). Urban district, seaport, and coal-mining center in NW England, in Cumberland, situated on the Irish Sea at the mouth of the river Ellen, ab. 327 mi. NW of London by rail. Maryport is located on the Cumberland coal field, and exports coal, mainly to Ireland. 12,237 (1951).

Mary, Queen of Scots (mār′i). [Also, Mary Stuart.] b. in Linlithgow Palace, Dec. 7 or 8, 1542; beheaded at Fotheringay, Feb. 8, 1587. Queen of Scotland; third child and only daughter of James V of Scotland and Mary of Guise. She was thus the granddaughter of Margaret Tudor, wife of James IV and sister of Henry VII, and next in succession to the English throne after Henry VIII and his children. But Henry's complex series of marriages resulted in only one child that the Roman Catholics recognized as legitimate, Mary Tudor (later Mary I of England), the daughter of Catherine of Aragon. The divorce from Catherine and Henry's subsequent marriages and children, Elizabeth and the future Edward VI, were not recognized as legitimate. The death of Mary Tudor could therefore be seen as creating a situation which might precipitate a religious civil war in England over the rights of Mary Stuart and Elizabeth to the throne. Mary's father, James V, died Dec. 14, 1542, and she became queen of Scotland in her first week of life. She was crowned at Stirling Castle Sept. 9, 1543, the regency of the kingdom being exercised by James Hamilton, 2nd Earl of Arran. A projected marriage with Edward VI was frowned upon by the Scots, suspicious of Henry VIII's ambitions, and on July 7, 1548, a marriage with the Dauphin (later Francis II of France) was agreed upon. Mary was sent to Saint Germain in October of that year and was educated with the royal children of France. She was as a consequence brought up in the Roman Catholic faith. The marriage with the French prince took place at Notre Dame on April 24, 1558. At the death of Mary I of England (Mary Tudor) on Nov. 17, 1588, Mary Stuart therefore became a principal claimant to the English throne; the death of Henry II of France and the accession of her husband, Francis II, to the throne of France on July 10, 1559, seemed to make probable the union of the three kingdoms. But Francis died Dec. 5, 1560, and Mary's advisers, her uncles the Guises, duke and cardinal, fell from power. At the same time open fighting broke out between the adherents of John Knox and those of Mary of Guise, who had become regent in Scotland. The Protestants were defeated by the French troops of the royal house, but Mary of Guise died June 10, 1560, leaving Scotland without a government. Mary therefore decided to return to Scotland. She landed in August, 1561, and set about trying to pacify the country. She recognized the rights of the Protestants, while reserving her own right to observe her own religion, a decision that went against the grain of the rigid reformer Knox. A northern rebellion was suppressed with ease. In 1563 Mary pressed her claim to the English succession by an embassy to Elizabeth headed by her principal adviser, William Maitland of Lethington, but Elizabeth gave no reply. Her scheme for a marriage with Don Carlos of Spain having fallen through, she married (July 29, 1565) her cousin Henry Stewart, Lord Darnley, son of Lady Margaret Douglas, daughter of Mary's grandmother Margaret Tudor and thus next heir after Mary to the English throne. This marriage to a Roman Catholic aroused resentment in Scotland and Mary was forced to suppress a rebellion led by James Stewart, Earl of Moray, Mary's half-brother and until then one of her principal supporters. Mary labored assiduously to restore the Roman Catholic faith in her kingdom and to establish an absolute royal authority. She was a completely charming person and well schooled in diplomacy; the only man to resist her successfully was Knox. Her refusal to grant Darnley the crown matrimonial, which would secure to him during his life and to his heirs after him the crown of Scotland, and her growing reliance on her French secretary, David Rizzio, caused her husband to join with other dissidents among the nobles in a plot to murder Rizzio. Convinced that the queen had been unfaithful to him during her private conferences with Rizzio, Darnley influenced others to join the conspiracy, and on March 9, 1566, Rizzio was seized in the queen's presence and dragged into another room at Holyrood Castle, where he was murdered without even the pretense of a trial. For the moment Darnley acted as if he were king in fact, but within a short time Mary had convinced him that his safety lay with her and she escaped with him to Edinburgh, guarded by troops under the command of James Hepburn, 4th Earl of Bothwell. The murderers of Rizzio were outlawed and fled to England and Mary once again ruled alone. On June 19, Mary bore a son, acknowledged as his own by Darnley, who was to be James VI of Scotland and James I of England. But Darnley's conduct grew worse and he alienated most of the nobles loyal to the queen. A divorce was proposed; the baptism of the infant prince took place without the presence of the father; all signs indicated a final break between the royal couple. Suddenly Darnley fell ill, so suddenly that poison was suspected. It proved to be smallpox and the queen accompanied him (Jan. 31, 1567) to Kirk o' Field, near Edinburgh. On the night of Feb. 9–10, the house was blown up with a roar heard in Edinburgh, and in the morning Darnley's body was found in the garden. He had been strangled, and suspicion pointed directly at Bothwell as the murderer. The queen, known to be close to Bothwell, if not his mistress, was also implicated and the subsequent trial of Bothwell in April was farcical. Whether Mary actually was privy to the assassination remains an unsolved question; some evidence (principally the so-called Casket Letters written later by Mary to Bothwell) exists connecting her with the plot, but its genuineness is not agreed upon. Almost immediately after Bothwell's trial, he intercepted (April 24, 1567) Mary on her way to Edinburgh, probably by arrangement, and carried her off to Dunbar Castle. On May 7, Bothwell's wife secured a divorce, and on May 15, Bothwell and Mary were married. The queen's questionable conduct caused a revolt of the Scottish lords, who, at Carberry Hill, outside Edinburgh, routed (June 15, 1567) a force led by Mary and Bothwell. Bothwell fled from Scotland and Mary was taken prisoner and confined to Lochleven Castle. She was compelled to abdicate (July, 1567) in favor of her son, who became James VI. On May 2, 1568, Mary escaped from Lochleven to the safety of her adherents and sent to Elizabeth for aid. A promise of forthcoming assistance was sent by Elizabeth, but it arrived after Mary's force had been defeated (May 13, 1568) by Moray at Langside, near Glasgow. Mary escaped to England, where she expected asylum from Elizabeth. But Elizabeth recognized the threat that Mary represented to the peace of her kingdom and kept the Scottish queen confined, first at Carlisle, and finally at Sheffield, where she remained from 1569 to 1583. The fourteen-year period was a difficult one for both queens. Mary wanted her freedom, and Elizabeth did not want to have Mary killed; but a long succession of plots, engineered principally by the Roman Catholics, who looked upon Mary as the rightful queen of England and Elizabeth as a usurper, disturbed the peace of the country. A projected divorce from Bothwell and marriage to Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk, who had strong claim to the throne by birth, the Ridolfi plot, was discovered, and Norfolk was executed (1572). Communication between Mary, the Pope, and Philip II of Spain (a possible husband for Mary) was constant, and culminated in the Throckmorton plot (1582) for a Spanish invasion of England. Elizabeth's secret service, headed by the able Walsinghams, had full knowledge of the progress of these intrigues; letters were intercepted, decoded, and then forwarded; spies were placed within Mary's own household and some of her own secret agents and messengers were in Elizabeth's pay. The climax was the Babington plot (1586) which envisaged the murder of Elizabeth and the liberation of Mary, though it is difficult to believe that Mary would be party to a conspiracy headed by anyone as inept and foolish as Babington and his friends. Mary was removed to Fotheringay Sept. 25, 1586, and on Oct. 14 and 15 she was tried on the charge of conspiring against the life of Elizabeth. She conducted her own defense and constantly demanded written proof in her own writing of her complicity. She answered every charge brought against her, but evidence was produced that linked her with the already executed conspirators, the open court was adjourned to the Star Chamber, and Mary, in her absence from the court, was found guilty. She was beheaded at Fotheringay on Feb. 8, 1587.

Marysville (mār'iz.vil). City in N central California, county seat of Yuba County, at the confluence of the Yuba and Feather rivers, ab. 40 mi. N of Sacramento; trade center for a mining and fruit-growing region and shipping point for grapes and peaches. A trading post was established on the site in 1842, and the city was platted in 1849, in the gold rush period. Situated at the head of river navigation, Marysville became a transportation and supply center for the gold-mining camps. The rivers that were of prime importance in the town's early development have been silted and choked by hydraulic mining operations, and are raised above the town behind levees. 7,826 (1950).

Marysville. City in NE Kansas, county seat of Marshall County. 3,866 (1950).

Marysville. City in SE Michigan, in St. Clair County, on the St. Clair River ab. 50 mi. NE of Detroit: boat-building and auto-parts industries. 2,534 (1950).

Marysville. Village in C Ohio, county seat of Union County: shipping point for livestock and dairy products, cabinets, and grass seed. 4,256 (1950).

Marysville. Former name of Corvallis, Ore.

Maryut (mär.yöt'), Birket el. See Mareotis, Lake.

Maryville (mār'i.vil). City in NW Missouri, county seat of Nodaway County: seat of a state teachers college. 6,834 (1950).

Maryville. City in E Tennessee, county seat of Blount County. It is the seat of Maryville College. 7,742 (1950).

Masaba Range (mą.sä'bą). See Mesabi Range.

Masaccio (mä.sät'chō). [Original name, Tommaso Guidi; called Tommaso Masaccio, meaning "Careless Thomas."] b. at Castello San Giovanni di Valdarno, Tuscany, Italy, Dec. 21, 1401; d. at Rome, c1429. Italian painter of the Florentine school, called the father of modern art (from the fact that he eschewed certain of the techniques of medievalism). His most celebrated works are frescoes in the Brancacci chapel in the Carmine, and in Santa Maria Novella, at Florence, and several pictures now in the Berlin Museum. The frescoes were, in effect, a school of instruction for many succeeding painters (even Michelangelo and Raphael were indebted to him).

Masada (mä.sä'dą). [Also: Massada; modern name, Sebbeh.] In Biblical geography, a stronghold on a hill in the desert of Judah, on the W bank of the Dead Sea, founded by the Maccabees and made virtually impregnable by Herod. It played a great part during the war with Rome, holding out for some time after the fall of Jerusalem. When it had to surrender, its garrison, consisting of 1,000 Zealots under the command of Eleazar, first killed their wives and children, and then themselves. There are still ruins of a castle on the hill.

Más Afuera (mäs ä.fwā'rä). Small island in the Pacific Ocean, W of Valparaíso, Chile, belonging to Chile: one of the Juan Fernández group.

Masai (mä.sī'). [Also: Elmoran, Ilmaasai, Kwafi, Massai.] Nilo-Hamitic-speaking people of E Africa, in S Kenya and N Tanganyika, occupying an area W of Nairobi and extending from Mount Kilimanjaro to Mount Kenya. Their population is estimated at ab. 135,000 (by M. A. Bryan, Distribution of Nilotic and Nilo-Hamitic Languages in Africa, 1948), excluding the closely related Samburu and Njamus. The principal medicine man exercises some political authority over all Masai. They have exogamous patrilineal clans and military age grades. Originally all Masai were nomadic pastoralists, with the cattle complex, living on milk, meat, and blood from their cattle, and on beer received in trade. However, some Masai, known as Lumbwa or Oikop, have adopted agriculture.

Masan (mä.sän). [Former name, Masampo (mä.säm-pō).] Seaport city in SE Korea, on an inlet of Korea Strait, ab. 27 mi. W of Pusan. It is a commercial center, and has fisheries. In August, 1950, the city was held by United Nations forces against the North Korean advance, and marked the SE limit achieved by the initial North Korean assault. 82,175 (1946).

Masani (mä.sä'nē), Minocheter Rustom. b. 1905—. Indian author and politician. A founder (1934) of the Congress Socialist Party, he was ambassador (1948–49) to Brazil and mayor (1943–44) of Bombay.

Masaniello (mä.sä.nyel'lō). [Original name, Tommaso Aniello.] b. c1622; d. at Naples, Italy, July 16, 1647. Italian insurrectionist, at various times a fisherman and a fruit vender. Provoked by the loss of his scanty possessions, which were sold to pay a fine imposed on his wife for attempting to smuggle a bag of flour into the city, he headed a revolt of the populace in July, 1647, against the Spanish viceroy of Naples, who was thereby compelled to abolish certain taxes on the necessaries of life and to restore the charter of exemption granted by the emperor Charles V. Either because of the sudden realization of his power or because of a poison given him by the Spaniards, Masaniello now became demented and was assassinated by the adherents of the viceroy (or, according to some authorities, by disillusioned members of the very populace he had led).

Masaryk (mä'sä.rik), Jan Garrigue. b. at Prague, Sept. 14, 1886; d. there, March 10, 1948. Czechoslovak statesman; son of T. G. Masaryk. He was educated at Prague and resided in the U.S. between 1907 and 1913. In 1918 he entered the ministry of foreign affairs and became successively Czechoslovak chargé d'affaires at Washington (1919–20), counselor of the London legation (1921–22), secretary to Eduard Beneš, the foreign minister (1923–24), and Czechoslovak minister to Great Britain (1925–38). After a brief retirement from public life, he served as foreign minister of the government in exile at London, and retained the post after World War II when the government returned to Prague. His popularity in Czechoslovakia and in world diplomatic circles was rivaled only by that of his father and Beneš. He is alleged to have died through suicide soon after the Communists' accession (Feb. 25, 1948) to power.

Masaryk, Tomáš Garrigue. b. at Hodonín, in Moravia (in what is now Czechoslovakia), March 7, 1850; d. near Prague, Sept. 14, 1937. Czechoslovak patriot, statesman, sociologist, and philosopher. He was educated at Brno and Vienna, becoming a lecturer in philosophy in 1879. In 1878 he married, at Brooklyn, N.Y., Charlotte Garrigue, and adopted her surname as his middle name. In 1882 he became professor at Charles University, where he soon became prominent as a writer, as editor of the Athenaeum, and as a leader in the Czech national movement. He was elected to the Austrian parliament by the Young Czech Party in 1891, but returned to his university post in 1893. In 1900 the Progressive (or Realist) Party was founded with Masaryk as a guiding spirit, and he became its parliamentary representative after 1907. In 1893 he became editor of the periodical Naše Doba (Our Epoch) and also took part in the so-called Manuscript Controversy (1886), the Hilsner ritual murder case (1899), and the Agram treason trial of 1909. In 1914 Masaryk went abroad, there to become the leader of the Czech independence movement, which he organized in England, France, and the U.S. Between 1915 and 1917 he was resident in England, serving as professor at Kings College and as coeditor with R. W. Seton Watson of the periodical The New Europe. In 1917 he went to Russia, there to organize a Czech legion, and thence to the U.S., where he received official diplomatic recognition of his cause and where word reached him of his election as first president of Czechoslovakia in November, 1918. To this office he was reëlected on four successive occasions, resigning because of ill health in 1935. He was succeeded by his constant coworker in the cause of Czech independence, Eduard Beneš, who had been foreign minister of Czechoslovakia since 1918. He was not only a statesman of wide renown and of exceptional integrity, but a philosopher, critic, and journalist who championed adroitly and successfully the cause of his nation, of truth, and of democracy. He was the author of many books and articles, including Česká Otázka (1895), Karel Havlíček (1896), Otázka Sociální (1898), Jan Hus (1908), Rusland und Europa (1913), Válka a Kultura (1915), The New Europe (1918), Světová Revoluce (1925, Eng. trans., The Making of a State, 1927). See Tomáš Garrigue Masaryk, edited by Avrahm Yarmolinsky (New York, 1941).

Más a Tierra (mäs ä tyer'rä). [Also, Juan Fernández.] Island in the Pacific Ocean, W of Valparaíso, Chile, belonging to Chile: one of the Juan Fernández group. The surface is rocky and mountainous. It was discovered by a Spaniard, Juan Fernández, c1583, was a resort of buccaneers in the 17th and 18th centuries, and is famous for the solitary residence (1704–09) on it of Alexander Selkirk, who was the original of Defoe's character Robinson Crusoe. Area, ab. 70 sq. mi.

Masaya (mä.sä'yä). Department in SW Nicaragua. Capital, Masaya; area, ab. 232 sq. mi.; pop. 69,152 (1950).

Masaya. Town in SE Nicaragua, capital of Masaya department, ab. 20 mi. SE of Managua: center for trade in gold, grains, tobacco, coffee, and sugar. 16,765 (1950).

Masbate (mäz.bä'tā). Province in N central Philippine Islands, consisting of Masbate, Burias, Ticao, and adjacent islands in the Visayan and Sibuyan seas, S of Luzon. Coal, copper, and gold are found in various parts of the province. The inhabitants are chiefly Tagalogs. Capital, Masbate; area, ab. 1,571 sq. mi.; pop. 211,113 (1948).

Masbate. Mountainous island of the Philippines, in the Sibuyan Sea W of Samar. With nearby islands, it forms Masbate province. Area, ab. 1,255 sq. mi.; pop. 145,065 (1939).

Masbate. Municipality and town in the Philippine Islands, the capital of Masbate province, situated on Masbate island, on the NE coast opposite the island of Ticao. Pop. of municipality, 24,999 (1948); of town, 5,817 (1948).

Mascagni (mäs.kä'nyē), Paolo. b. at Castelleto, near Siena, Italy, Feb. 5, 1752; d. at Florence, Oct. 19, 1815. Italian anatomist.

Mascagni, Pietro. b. at Leghorn, Italy, Dec. 7, 1863; d. at Rome, Aug. 2, 1945. Italian composer. Besides various orchestral works and songs, he wrote the operas Cavalleria Rusticana (1890), L'Amico Fritz (1891), I Rantzau (1892), Guglielmo Ratcliff (1895), Zanetto (1896), Iris (1898), Le Maschere (1901), Amica (1905), Ysobel (1910), and Il Nerone (1935). None of his later work matched his first success with the short and melodic Cavalleria Rusticana.

Mascara (mas'kạ.rạ, mäs'-). [Also, Maskara.] Fortified town in the department of Oran, Algeria, in NW Africa, ab. 50 mi. SE of Oran. It became the residence of Abd-el-Kader in 1832, was burned by the French in 1835, and was taken by them in 1841. It is now the center of an extensive vineyard area. 26,086 (1948).

Mascarene Islands (mas'kạ.rēn). [Portuguese, Ilhas Mascarenhas (mäsh.kạ.rā'nyạsh); French, Îles Mascaréignes (más.kà.rā.ēn).] Name given to the island group in the W Indian Ocean including Mauritius, Réunion, and Rodriguez.

Mascarenhas (mäsh.kạ.rā'nyạsh), José. See Aveiro, Duke of.

Mascari (mäs.kā'rē). Antonino. b. Dec. 4, 1862; d. Oct. 18, 1906. Italian astronomer, best known for his work in solar physics.

Mascarille (más.kà.rēy'). Adroit, ingenious, unscrupulous valet who appears in three of Molière's plays, L'Étourdi, Le Dépit amoureux, and Les Précieuses ridicules. In the last he is at his best, and assumes the role of a marquis to oblige his master. His name has passed into the French language, and has become a synonym for skillful impudence, effrontery, lying, and intrigue.

Mascaron (más.kà.rôñ), Jules. b. at Aix, France, in March, 1634; d. at Agen, France, Nov. 20, 1703. French ecclesiastic, bishop of Tulle (1671), celebrated as a pulpit orator. His most famous work was his funeral oration for Marshal Turenne.

Mascart (más.kàr), Éleuthère Élie Nicolas. b. at Quarouble, Nord, France, Feb. 20, 1837; d. at Paris, Aug. 26, 1908. French scientist, best known for his work in electricity, magnetism, and radioactivity. Among his publications are Traité d'électricité statique (1876), La Météorologie appliquée à la prévision du temps (1881), Leçons sur l'électricité et le magnétisme (1882–86; with Joubert), Traité d'optique (1889–93), and Traité du magnétisme terrestre (1900).

Mascheroni (mas.ke.rō'nē), Lorenzo. b. at Castagnetto, near Bergamo, Italy, May 14, 1750; d. at Paris, July 30, 1800. Italian classicist and mathematician. He is best known for his demonstration that the points of a construction in elementary geometry can be located by the use of compasses alone, without recourse to the straightedge. He taught Greek and poetry at Pavia, took holy orders, and fought for the Cisalpine Republic. Late in life he studied geometry and became professor of mathematics at Pavia. His greatest work was Geometria del compasso (1797).

Masci d'Ascoli (mä'shē däs'kō.lē), Girolamo. Original name of Pope Nicholas IV.

Mascoi (mäs'koi). [Also, Maskoi.] Six tribes of South American Indians of Bolivia and Paraguay. The linguistic family, called Mascoi or Mascoian, is a small independent family, comprising one language embracing the six scarcely differentiated dialects of the six tribes.

Mascoutah (mas.kō'tą). City in SW Illinois, in St. Clair County, ab. 20 mi. E of St. Louis, in a farming region. 3,009 (1950).

Masefield (māsʹfeld), John. b. at Ledbury, Herefordshire, England, 1878—. English poet, dramatist, and novelist, poet laureate (1930 et seq.) succeeding Robert Bridges. He received his education in the common schools and at the age of fourteen ran away to sea. He spent three years at sea and two years working at odd jobs in the vicinity of New York City before returning to London in 1897. Among his publications are Salt Water Ballads (1902), A Mainsail Haul (stories, 1905), Captain Margaret (novel, 1908), Multitude and Solitude (novel, 1909), The Tragedy of Nan and Other Plays (1909), The Tragedy of Pompey the Great (1909), William Shakespeare (criticism, 1911), The Everlasting Mercy (narrative poem, 1911), The Widow in the Bye Street (narrative poem, 1912), The Daffodil Fields (narrative poem, 1913), Dauber (narrative poem, 1913), The Story of the Roundhouse and Other Poems (1913), Philip the King (drama, 1914), Gallipoli (war sketches, 1916), Reynard the Fox (narrative poem, 1919), The Dream (narrative poem, 1922), Sard Harker (novel, 1924), Odtaa (novel, 1926), The Coming of Christ (play, 1928), The Wanderer of Liverpool (narrative poem, 1930), The Bird of Dawning (novel, 1933), The Conway (biographical study of a ship, 1933), The Taking of the Gry (novel, 1934), Dead Ned (novel, 1938), Live and Kicking Ned (novel, 1939), Basilissa (fictional biography of the empress Theodora, 1940), Gautama the Enlightened (narrative poetry, 1941), The Nine Days Wonder (story of the Dunkirk retreat, 1941), In the Mill (autobiography, 1941), Generation Risen (poetry, 1942), So Long To Learn (autobiography, 1952), and others. Best known among his single poems are those dealing with the sea, such as "Sea Fever" and "Cargoes."

Masereel (mä'zę.rāl), Frans. b. at Blankenberghe, Belgium, 1889—. Belgian painter and wood engraver. He studied at the academy at Ghent, lived in Brittany, Germany, England, Morocco, and Switzerland, settled (1920) at Paris, and has become world-renowned for his woodcuts. He paints in both water color and oils.

Masères (mā.zār'), Francis. b. at London, Dec. 15, 1731; d. at Reigate, England, May 19, 1824. English mathematician, historian, and reformer. From 1766 to 1769 he was attorney general of Quebec, and he was cursitor baron of the exchequer from 1773 to 1824. Among his works are A View of the English Constitution (1781), Dissertation on the Use of the Negative Sign in Algebra (1795), and Scriptores optici (1823).

Maserfeld (mä'sėr.feld). In English history, a locality, apparently in W England, in Shropshire, where in 642 Oswald, king of Northumbria, was defeated and slain by King Penda of Mercia.

Maseru (maz'ę.rö). Town in S Africa, the capital and chief commercial center of Basutoland territory. It has native hospitals and schools. Elevation, ab. 4,940 ft.; pop. 3,383 (1946).

Masevaux (mȧs.vō). [German, Masmünster, Massemünster.] Small town in E France, in the department of Haut-Rhin, ab. 17 mi. W of Mulhouse. 2,933 (1946).

Masham (mash'ąm), Lady Abigail. [Maiden name, Hill.] d. Dec. 6, 1734. Intimate friend of Queen Anne; daughter of Francis Hill, a merchant of London. She entered the service of her cousin Sarah Churchill, Duchess of Marlborough, at St. Albans, and later became lady of the bedchamber to Queen Anne, in whose favor she at length supplanted the duchess. In 1707 she married Samuel Masham, who was created Baron Masham in 1712. In 1711 she was given charge of the privy purse of Queen Anne. She was a woman of plain appearance, but intelligent, and was able eventually to exert considerable influence on the queen (securing finally the dismissal of both the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough and of Robert Harley, Earl of Oxford).

Masham, Samuel. [Title, 1st Baron Masham.] b. c1679; d. Oct. 16, 1758. English nobleman; husband of Abigail Masham. He served successively as page, equerry, and groom of the bedchamber to Prince George of Denmark, consort of Queen Anne. He was appointed (1711) cofferer of the household to Queen Anne, and remembrancer of the exchequer (1716).

Mashhad (mäsh.hädʹ). See Meshed.

Mashita (mą.shēʹtą). Locality in Moab, in what is now SW Jordan, notable for a palace built by Khosrau II in 620 B.C.

Mashona (ma.shōʹna). See Shona.

Mashonaland (mą.shōʹną.land). Region and former native province of E Southern Rhodesia, SE Africa, named after the Shona (or Mashona) tribe. Formerly considered Portuguese, it was annexed by England in 1888 and placed under the British South Africa Company in 1889. A pioneer expedition reached the region in 1890. The region is now subdivided into districts. Mashonaland is the highest and least arid part of Southern Rhodesia. It has been extensively colonized by white farmers; the chief crops are maize and tobacco. There is also some gold mining. Area, ab. 80,344 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 1,165,000.

Mashtotz (mäsh.tōtsʹ), Saint. See Saint Mesrob.

Mashukulumbwe (mä.shö.kö.löm'bwe). See Ila.

Masinissa or Massinissa (mas.i.nisʹą). b. c238 B.C.; d. 148 B.C. King of Numidia. He was at war with Syphax, king in W Numidia. He fought as ally of the Carthaginians in Spain, but went over to the Romans. As an ally of Rome he served (204–203) with Scipio against Syphax. Syphax was defeated and his capital fell, one of the prisoners being his queen Sophonisba, who had once been betrothed to Masinissa. Scipio refused to sanction their marriage and, rather than see Sophonisba paraded in triumph through Rome, Masinissa sent her a bowl of poison, which she drank. He later served (202) at Zama, the decisive battle of the second Punic War. He became (201) ruler of all Numidia and ruled in peace for 50 years.

Masjid-i-Sulaiman (mäs.jid'ē.sö.lī.mänʹ). [Also, Mesjid-i-Sulaiman.] Important oil field in W Iran, ab. 150 mi. NE of the city of Abadan: one of the most productive fields in the Near East.

Mask (mȧsk), Lough. Lake in W Irish Republic, on the County Galway-County Mayo boundary, but chiefly in County Mayo. Length, ab. 12 mi.; width, ab. 4 mi.

Maskara (masʹką.rą, mäsʹ-). See Mascara.

Maskat (musʹkat, mäsʹkät). See Muscat.

Maskelyne (masʹkę.līn, -lin), Nevil. b. at London, Oct. 6, 1732; d. at Greenwich, Feb. 9, 1811. English astronomer. He graduated at Cambridge in 1754 and became curate of Barnet in Hertfordshire in 1755. In 1761 he went to St. Helena to observe the transit of Venus and during the voyage experimented on the lunar method of determination of longitude, eventually adopted as a navigation aid. He succeeded Nathaniel Bliss as astronomer royal Feb. 26, 1765, and established the Nautical Almanac in 1767. He is best known from his experiments upon the attraction of mountains as shown by the deviations of the plumb-line. These experiments, carried out (1774–76) at Mount Schehallion, Scotland, were remarkably accurate in their results.

Mask of Augurs, The. See Augurs, The Mask of.

Maskoi (mäsʹkoi). See Mascoi.

Masks and Faces. Dramatic version (1854) of Charles Reade's novel Peg Woffington, by Reade and Tom Taylor.

Maskwell (mȧskʹwel). "Double dealer" in Congreve's play of that name. He is the epitome of an unmitigated scoundrel.

Masmünster (mäsʹmün.stėr). German name of Masevaux.

Masnadieri (mäz.nä.dye'rē), I. [Eng. trans., "The Brigands."] Opera in four acts by Giuseppe Verdi, produced at London on July 22, 1847, with Jenny Lind in the cast. The libretto is by Maffei from Schiller's Die Räuber.

Masolino da Panicale (mä.sō.lē'nō dä pä.nē.kä'lā) [Original name, Tommaso di Cristofano di Fino.]

b. at Panicale di Valdese, near Florence, 1383; d. in October, 1440. Florentine painter, a teacher of Masaccio. He established himself at Florence, where he was received in 1423 into the guild of druggists or physicians, which included the painters. From 1423 to 1426 he worked on the Chapel of the Carmine. In 1427 he was in Hungary in the service of the Florentine adventurer Filippo Scolari (Pippo Spano). From 1428 to 1435 he painted the frescoes of the baptistery at Castiglione d'Olona. His compositions are especially notable for the improvement of perspective. His picture of the Baptism of Christ at Castiglione contains a group of nude figures putting on their garments, which suggested to Michelangelo the composition of his famous cartoon.

Mason (mā'sŏn). City in S central Lower Michigan, county seat of Ingham County. 3,514 (1950).

Mason, A. E. W. [Full name, Alfred Edward Woodley Mason.] b. at Dulwich, London, May 7, 1865; d. at London, Nov. 22, 1948. English novelist. He served in Parliament (1906–10) as a memper of the Liberal Party. Among his works are The Courtship of Morrice Buckler (1896), The Philanderers (1897), Parson Kelly (1899, with Andrew Lang), Miranda of the Balcony (1899), The Four Feathers (1902), Running Water (1907), The Broken Road (1907), At the Villa Rose (1910), The Witness for the Defense (1911), The Turnstile (1912), The Winding Stair (1923), Fire Over England (1936), Königsmark (1938), and The Life of Francis Drake (1941).

Mason, Charles. b. c1730; d. at Philadelphia, in February, 1787. English astronomer. An assistant of James Bradley at Greenwich (1756–60), he was sent by the Royal Society with Jeremiah Dixon to observe the transit of Venus (June 6, 1761) in Sumatra, but succeeded only in reaching the Cape of Good Hope. He is now best remembered, however, from the fact that he was employed with Dixon by Lord Baltimore and William Penn to establish the boundary between Maryland and Pennsylvania. The line fixed (1763–67, and since known as the Mason-Dixon Line) ran to a point 244 miles west from the Delaware River, in lat. 39°43′ 26.3″ N. It became famous as constituting (in part) the boundary between the free and the slave states and is still traditionally the dividing line between North and South in the U.S. It was resurveyed in 1900.

Mason, Daniel Gregory. b. at Brookline, Mass., Nov. 2, 1873—. American composer. Among his compositions are three symphonies, several works for piano, a number of vocal compositions, and various chamber works. Author of From Grieg to Brahms (1902), The Romantic Composers (1906), and Music in My Time (1938).

Mason, Edith. [Maiden name, Barnes.] b. at St. Louis, Mo., March 22, 1893—. American operatic soprano. She was a member (1921–35) of the Chicago Opera.

Mason, George. b. c1629; d. c1686. English colonist in Virginia, now remembered as an Indian fighter and for activity in precipitating (1676) Bacon's Rebellion. He was granted (1655, 1664, 1669) tracts of land in Westmoreland County and on Potomac Creek, and was a member (1667) of the Northern Neck committee to defend the region.

Mason, George. b. in Virginia, 1725; d. at "Gunston Hall," Fairfax County, Va., Oct. 7, 1792. American colonial planter, Revolutionary statesman, and constitutionalist, author of the Virginia Declaration of Rights. The owner of a large plantation at Dogue's Neck, on the Potomac below Alexandria, he was a trustee (1754–79) of the town of Alexandria and until 1789 served as a gentleman justice of the Fairfax County court. Interested in Western development, he became (1752) a member of the Ohio Company and was its treasurer until 1773. He served (1759) in the Virginia House of Burgesses and was active in the cause of the colonies against imperial interference, playing an influential role as a private citizen. He was a member of the Virginia convention of July, 1775, and as a member of the convention held in May, 1776, drafted the Virginia Declaration of Rights and most of the constitution of Virginia. The influence of the Declaration was later apparent in the Declaration of Independence and in the Bill of Rights. He was active (1776–80) in Virginia legislative affairs and took a hand in revising the laws and in organizing military matters. He was a Virginia delegate to the Mount Vernon meeting (1785) and returned to the assembly in 1786. He was a prominent member of the Federal Convention (1787), at which his objections during the debates on the Constitution were largely based on his opposition to slavery and his demand for certain provisions which were, in substance, later included as the Bill of Rights.

Mason, George Heming. b. at Stoke-upon-Trent, Staffordshire, England, March 11, 1818; d. Oct. 22, 1872. English painter. He established his studio at Rome in 1845, and delighted in subjects from the Campagna.

Mason, Gregory. b. at New York, July 3, 1889—. American journalist, anthropologist, and archaeologist. He was associated (1914–20) with Outlook as a correspondent in Mexico, Russia, and the Far East, and as a war correspondent in Europe. He led (1926–36) archaeological and anthropological expeditions to Central and South America. He was professor of journalism (1942 et seq.) at New York University.

Mason, James Murray. b. in Fairfax County, Va., Nov. 3, 1798; d. near Alexandria, Va., April 28, 1871. American politician; grandson of George Mason (1725–92). He became U.S. senator from Virginia in 1847, drafted the fugitive-slave law in 1850, and was expelled from the Senate in 1861. He was sent as a Confederate commissioner with John Slidell to England and France in 1861, and was captured by Charles Wilkes on the British ship Trent Nov. 8, 1861. The Trent Affair for a time seemed likely to cause war between Great Britain and the U.S., but Lincoln ordered the Confederate commissioners released (Jan. 2, 1862) from imprisonment at Boston.

Mason, Jeremiah. b. at Lebanon, Conn., April 27, 1768; d. at Boston, Oct. 14, 1848. American lawyer and politician, U.S. senator from New Hampshire (1813–17).

Mason, Sir John. b. at Abingdon, Berkshire, England, 1503; d. April 20 or 21, 1566. English diplomat under Henry VIII, Edward VI, Mary, and Elizabeth. His career included service (1550–51) as ambassador to France, chancellorship (1552–56, 1559–64) of Oxford University, and an embassy (1553–56) to Emperor Charles V at Brussels. He influenced foreign policy under Elizabeth.

Mason, John. b. at King's Lynn, England, in December, 1586; d. at London, in December, 1635. Founder of New Hampshire. He entered the service of a commercial house at London, and in 1610 was sent in command of several warships to the Hebrides to assist Andrew Knox. In 1615 he was appointed governor of Newfoundland, and in 1622 a patent for all land between the Nahumheik and Merrimack rivers in New England was granted to him. In 1623 he established himself as deputy governor at New Plymouth, but in 1624 returned to England. In 1629 he returned to New England and joined Ferdinando Gorges and others in forming the Laconia Company, the purpose of which was the founding of an agricultural settlement; this was effected on a new grant on the Piscataqua River. His rights in New Hampshire were sold to Governor Samuel Allen in 1691.

Mason, John. b. in England, c1600; d. at Norwich, Conn., 1672. English colonist in New England. He was in Massachusetts as early as 1633, and in 1635 assisted in the migration of Dorchester settlers to Windsor, Conn. He commanded (1637) the colonial troops in the Pequot War.

Mason, John (Hill Belcher). b. at Orange, N.J., Oct. 28, 1858; d. at Stamford, Conn., Jan. 12, 1919. American actor; grandson of Lowell Mason.

Mason, John Young. b. in Greensville County, Va., April 18, 1799; d. at Paris, Oct. 3, 1859. American politician. He was a representative from Virginia (1831–37), secretary of the navy (1844–45) under Tyler, attorney general (1845–46) and secretary of the navy (1846–49) under Polk, and U.S. minister to France (1853–59). With James Buchanan, minister to Great Britain, and Pierre Soulé, minister to Spain, he drew up (1854) the Ostend Manifesto, suggesting that the U.S. seize Cuba.

Mason, Lowell. b. at Medfield, Mass., in January, 1792; d. at Orange, N.J., Aug. 11, 1872. American composer, especially noted as a teacher of music in the Boston public schools. He published many collections, principally of church and Sunday school music. He composed the music for many hymns and songs, such as Nearer, My God, to Thee and From Greenland's Icy Mountains.

Mason, Max. b. at Madison, Wis., Oct. 26, 1877—. American mathematician and educator. He was a professor (1908–25) at the University of Wisconsin, and president of the University of Chicago (1925–28) and of the Rockefeller Foundation at New York (1929–36). He has been associated (1936 et seq.) with the California Institute of Technology. He is the inventor of devices for submarine detection.

Mason, Otis Tufton. b. at Eastport, Me., April 10, 1838; d. at Washington, D.C., Nov. 5, 1908. American ethnologist, head curator of the department of anthropology of the United States National Museum from 1903. He was curator of the division of ethnology in the museum (1884–1903). He published Woman's Share in Primitive Culture (1894), Origin of Inventions (1895), and many scientific papers.

Mason, Stevens Thomson. b. Dec. 29, 1760; d. at Philadelphia, May 10, 1803. American politician; son of Thomson Mason. He was an aide on Washington's staff during the Yorktown campaign. He was a delegate (1783) to the Virginia Assembly, and was a member (1788) of the Virginia ratification convention, siding against the adoption of the federal Constitution. He was elected (1794) to the U.S. Senate, where he served until 1803.

Mason, Stevens Thomson. b. in Loudoun County, Va., Oct. 27, 1811; d. Jan. 4, 1843. American politician; grandson of Stevens Thomson Mason (1760–1803). Appointed (1831) secretary of the Michigan Territory, he was named (1836) first governor of Michigan and served until 1840.

Mason, Thomson. b. in Prince William County, Va., 1733; d. Feb. 26, 1785. American Revolutionary leader and legislator. He was a member (1758–61, 1765–72, 1772–74, 1777–78, 1779) of the Virginia Assembly. He headed the effort to keep the territory gained by George Rogers Clark in the Northwest campaign by composing a bill to organize the territory into the County of Illinois. He was the author (1774) of nine letters of a "British American" upholding colonial government against England.

Mason, Van Wyck. [Original full name, Francis van Wyck Mason.] b. at Boston, Nov. 11, 1897—. American novelist. Author of historical and detective novels which include Yellow Arrow Murders (1930), Budapest Parade Murders (1932), Saigon Singer (1946), Eagle in the Sky (1948), and Proud New Flags (1951).

Mason, Walt. b. at Columbus, Ontario, Canada, May 4, 1862; d. at La Jolla, Calif., June 22, 1939. American humorist and journalist. He was on the staff (1885–87) of the Atchison (Kan.) Globe, and was associated (1907 et seq.) with William Allen White on the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette. His daily prose poems were syndicated in over 200 newspapers in the U.S. and Canada. Author of Uncle Walt (1910), Rippling Rhymes (1913), Horse Sense (1915), Terse Verse (1917), and Walt Mason, His Book (1918).

Mason, William. b. Feb. 12, 1724; d. at Aston, England, April 7, 1797. English poet, a friend of the poet Thomas Gray. He was rector (1754 et seq.) of Aston, Yorkshire. He published Life and Letters of Gray (1774), the dramas Elfrida (1752) and Caractacus (1759), and a blank verse poem, The English Garden (1772–82).

Mason, William. b. at Boston, Jan. 24, 1829; d. July 14, 1908. American musician and composer; son of Lowell Mason. He published a pianoforte method and many studies. Author of Memories of a Musical Life (1901).

Mason City. City in N Iowa, county seat of Cerro Gordo County: meat-packing, sugar-refining, cement, and brick and tile industries. It was platted in 1854. Pop. 27,980 (1950).

Mason City. Unincorporated community in NE Washington, in Okanogan County, on the Columbia River near Grand Coulee Dam. 2,606 (1950).

Mason-Dixon Line (mā'sən.dik'sən). [Also, Mason and Dixon's Line.] Boundary line between Maryland and Pennsylvania, originally surveyed in 1763–67 by Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon. It later achieved widespread renown as the line (in part) between the free and slave states, and is still the traditional line between North and South in the U.S. Although the actual line extended only to the W limit of Pennsylvania, the free-slave border was marked by this line extended to the Ohio River, and following the Ohio to the Mississippi. Latitude, 39°43′ 26.3″ N.

Masongo (mä.sōng'gō). See Songo.

Masontown (mā'sən.toun). Borough in SW Pennsylvania, in Fayette County. 4,550 (1950).

Masora or Massorah (ma.sō'ra). [Eng. trans., "Tradition."] Name given to the results of the work of Jewish scholars in establishing the proper pronunciation of the Old Testament writings, which were in the Hebrew alphabet, consisting only of consonants. The vowel sounds had to be supplied, and to this end the Masoretes or Massoretes, as the scholars engaged in this study were called, relied mainly on tradition. Their work went on for centuries, beginning soon after the return from the Babylonian captivity, when the study of the law became the center of Jewish religious life. The Masora as it now survives was mainly written down in the 8th, 9th, and 10th centuries A.D. During that period the principal Masoretes were the family ben Asher and the family ben Naftali. These held respectively to different systems of indicating the vowel sounds. The system of ben Asher in the end prevailed, and the last of that family, Aaron ben Moses ben Asher, brought the Masora to a close.

Masovia (ma.sō'vi.a). [Also, Mazovia.] Medieval duchy in Poland, along the middle Vistula, in the neighborhood of and including Warsaw. It became a vassal of the Polish crown in 1351 and was united with it in 1526.

Masó y Márquez (mä.sō' ē mär'kes), Bartolomé. b. near Manzanillo, Cuba, 1834; d. 1907. Cuban patriot, president (1897) of Cuba. A planter in Cuba, he served as a colonel in the Ten Years' War (1868–78), was vice-president (September, 1895) of the insurrectionary regime, and became president in 1897.

Maspero (mäs'pe.rō; French, mȧs.pe.rō), Sir Gaston Camille Charles. b. at Paris, June 24, 1846; d. there, June 30, 1916. French Egyptologist. In 1874 he became professor of archaeology and Egyptian philology at the Collège de France, and continued the work of Auguste Édouard Mariette as director of the museum at Bulak (now at Cairo). Maspero's great achievement was the discovery (1881) at Deir el-Bahri of the hiding-place of a large number of mummies of the Egyptian kings. He became director general of the Egyptian department of antiquities in 1899. His works include Histoire des peuples de l'Orient (1875) and Art in Egypt (1912).

Masqat (mus'kat, mäs'kät). See Muscat.

Masque of Judgment, The. Verse drama by William Vaughn Moody, published in 1900.

Masque of Kings, The. Verse play by Maxwell Anderson, produced in 1936.

Masque of the Red Death, The. Story by Edgar Allan Poe, published (1842) in Graham's Magazine.

Masqueray (mas'kę.rā), Emmanuel Louis. b. at Dieppe, France, Sept. 10, 1861; d. at St. Paul, Minn., May 26, 1917. American architect who, as chief of design, was responsible for most of the buildings at the St. Louis Exposition of 1904. His other works include various cathedrals and the Long Island College Hospital, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Massa (mäs'sä). [Former commune name (1938–45), Apuania.] Town and commune in N central Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, capital of the province of Massa e Carrara, situated near the W coast ab. 28 mi. NW of Pisa. The chief industry is marble quarrying (the area produces the noted Carrara marble). From the 15th century, Massa was the capital of a small independent state which finally passed to Modena in the 19th century. Massa suffered damage in World War II. In 1938 the commune was expanded by the incorporation of Carrara and Montignoso, and renamed Apuania, but after World War II the old name was restored. Pop. of commune, 41,819 (1936); of town, 12,508 (1936); of enlarged commune, 106,378 (1936).

Massachuset (mas.a.chö'sęt). Group of North American Indian tribes, now extinct, in the 17th century inhabiting the area around Massachusetts Bay and northward, and after whom the bay and colony were named. The language was of the Algonquian family. After their conversion to Christianity they became dispersed and lost their tribal and cultural identity.

Massachusetts (mas.a.chö'sęts). [Called the "Bay State"; also the "Old Bay State," the "Old Colony

State"; official name, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.] State of the NE United States, bounded by Vermont and New Hampshire on the N, the Atlantic Ocean on the E, the Atlantic Ocean, Rhode Island, and Connecticut on the S, and New York on the W: one of the 13 original states, and a New England State.

Population, Area, and Political Divisions. Massachusetts is divided for administrative purposes into 14 counties. It sends 14 representatives to Congress, and has 16 electoral votes. Traces of Colonial times persist in the institution of the governor's council, an advisory body, and in the use of the town meeting as a local governing device. Leading cities are Boston, Cambridge, Fall River, Haverhill, Holyoke, Lawrence, Lowell, New Bedford, Springfield, and Worcester. Capital, Boston; area, 7,907 sq. mi. (8,257 sq. mi., including water); pop. 4,690,514 (1950). The state ranks 44th in area, and ninth (on the basis of the 1950 census) in population.

Terrain and Climate. The surface of Massachusetts is generally hilly in the W, the E consisting of low plain. The Berkshires and the Taconic Mountains lie in the W, the highest point in the state being Mount Greylock (3,505 ft.) in the Berkshires. Rivers include the Connecticut, which bisects the state from N to S in the W and C part of the state; the Housatonic in the W, flowing S from Pittsfield into Connecticut; the Hoosic in the N and C part of the state, flowing into New York; the Merrimack in the NE corner, discharging into the Atlantic; the Taunton in the SE, draining into Narragansett Bay. The coast is characterized by two projections, Cape Ann, a small arm of land in the N; and in the S, Cape Cod, a large curving peninsula (ab. 60 mi. long; varying in width from 1 to 20 mi.) bounded by Cape Cod Bay on the N, the Atlantic on the E, Nantucket Sound on the S, and Buzzards Bay on the W. The 8-mi. Cape Cod Canal from Buzzards Bay to Cape Cod Bay separates Cape Cod from the mainland. Off the coast of the state and below Cape Cod lie several islands, the largest being Martha's Vineyard (ab. 20 mi. long) and Nantucket (ab. 14 mi. long). The climate is variable; winters are fairly severe in the W with heavy snows, and summer temperatures occasionally reach 100°.

Industry, Agriculture, and Trade. Manufacturing is the leading industry, and the state ranks high in this field. Cotton and woolen goods and worsteds, and boots and shoes are high on the list of manufactured goods. Beverly, Lowell, New Bedford, Fall River, and Lawrence are textile centers. Lynn, Brockton, and Haverhill are shoe centers. Electrical machinery, foundry and machine-shop products, paper and pulp, and clothing are also noteworthy, particularly at Boston. Tanning is a major occupation. Massachusetts is the leading fishery state of New England, and Boston is the leading fishing port (having exported fish since the 17th century). Gloucester, on Cape Ann, is another great fishing port, specializing in cod and mackerel. The state also is known for halibut, herring, tuna, and shellfish. Fish canneries employ many persons. Hay, dairy products, eggs, corn, potatoes, truck crops, cranberries, poultry, apples, cattle, rye, and wheat are grown, principally in the valleys. The state is rich in building and monument granite and limestone. Clay and marble are also found. Annual income in the state from agriculture ranges as high as 200 million dollars; from manufacturing, as high as five billion; from mineral output, six million.

History. It is believed that the Northmen visited Massachusetts. Verrazano sailed about the coast in the 16th century. The first white man known to have explored the land region was Bartholomew Gosnold, who landed (1602) at Cape Cod. John Smith was the first to make extensive explorations but the permanent settlement of the area did not occur until 1620, when about 100 men, women, and children sailed from Plymouth, England, on the Mayflower, landing finally at what is now Plymouth, Mass. These religious refugees, who had left England because of their disagreement with the Anglican Church, had drawn up a sort of constitution (the Mayflower Compact) in Provincetown Harbor at the tip of Cape Cod before landing at Plymouth. They called their settlement the Colony of New Plymouth. Later Puritan settlements were made at Salem (1628) and at Boston (1630), these later settlements being known as the Massachusetts Bay Colony (chartered 1629; with Boston as the capital, 1632 et seq.). After war with the Pequot Indians the Massachusetts, Plymouth, New Haven, and Connecticut colonies formed a confederate union (1643–84), combining (1675–76) their force in the war against King Philip. Massachusetts annexed (1652) Maine as a province; governed (1686–89) as a part of the Dominion of New England; acquired (1691) the Plymouth colony receiving a second royal charter that same year. In 1692, the colony was shaken by the Salem "witchcraft" trials. Having increasingly taken the lead in opposing many royal powers, Massachusetts was a center of pre-Revolutionary incidents such as the massacre at Boston (1770), in which royal troops shot at the citizenry, and the Boston Tea Party (1773), in which citizens dumped tea into Boston harbor in protest against the tax placed on such imports by the British. The first battle of the American Revolution occurred (April, 1775) at Lexington when British troops attempted to destroy military supplies which had been stored by the colonials at Lexington and Concord. The Battle of Bunker Hill occurred in June, 1775, and was followed by the evacuation of British troops from Massachusetts by George Washington. Massachusetts saw no other fighting during the war but sent more soldiers to the Continental army than any other colony and contributed much to the financing of the war. Shays's Rebellion, a protest against the imprisonment of debtors, occured (1786–87) in the W part of Massachusetts. Massachusetts ratified the federal Constitution on Feb. 6, 1788, becoming the sixth state of the Union. Maine became a separate state in 1820. In the Civil War Massachusetts supported the Union cause, residents such as William Lloyd Garrison taking the lead in the abolition movement, and the state contributing much in men, money, and vessels.

Culture. Because the state's early history and development were so closely identified with that of the U.S., Massachusetts exerted a powerful influence on the life and thought of the nation. The town form of government (the New England town being equivalent to a township in many other states), so closely allied to the will of the people, set an ideal for popular government. Gradually, the early property qualifications for voting were abolished. As Boston became a prosperous commercial city in the 19th century, it developed as a cultural center. Transcendentalism, a philosophical movement of German origin emphasizing spiritual and intuitive values, bloomed under Emerson's leadership. An outgrowth of this movement was the experiment in communal living at Brook Farm, West Roxbury, led by George Ripley, with Emerson, Hawthorne, Bronson Alcott, Margaret Fuller, and others as members; Hawthorne used Brook Farm as the background for his novel The Blithedale Romance. Among the other great writers and thinkers who lived and worked in the state were Jonathan Edwards, Richard Henry Dana, Wendell Phillips, William Ellery Channing, Oliver Wendell Holmes, William Cullen Bryant, John Greenleaf Whittier, Herman Melville, James Russell Lowell, Amy Lowell, and Louisa May Alcott. The state has long been known as an educational center. Harvard College, founded in 1636 at Cambridge, is the nation's oldest university. The colony was the first to introduce free elementary education, and in the 19th century the reorganization of the public schools by Horace Mann had a nation-wide influence. The state's many historic spots have made it a mecca for thousands of visitors annually, as have its numerous seashore vacation spots. Among the places of interest are Faneuil Hall, at Boston, called the "cradle of liberty" because many anti-British meetings were held there in colonial days; the Pilgrim Monument, at Provincetown, commemorating the Mayflower visit there; Plymouth Rock, at Plymouth, marking the spot where the Pilgrims reputedly landed. The state has many colleges and universities; among the most notable are the state-supported University of Massachusetts, at Amherst, which after World War II set up a branch for veterans at Fort Devens, in Ayer; Amherst College, at Amherst; Boston College, at Chestnut Hill, with a branch at Boston; Boston University, at Boston; Clark University, at Worcester; College of the Holy Cross, at Worcester; Harvard University, at Cambridge; Massachusetts Institute of Technology, at Cambridge; Mount Holyoke College, at South Hadley; New England Conservatory of Music, at Brookline; Radcliffe College, at Cambridge; Smith College, at Northampton; Tufts College, at Medford; Wellesley College, at Wellesley; Wheaton College, at Norton; Williams College, at Williamstown; Worcester Polytechnic Institute, at Worcester. The state motto is Ense Petit Placidam Sub Libertate Quietam, meaning "With the Sword She Seeks Calm Repose Under Liberty." The state flower is the mayflower.

Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society. See New England Anti-Slavery Society.

Massachusetts Bay. Embayment of the Atlantic Ocean, in the E coast of Massachusetts, SW of Cape Ann. Boston is situated at its W end. Length, ab. 30 mi.

Massachusetts Bay. Colony founded at Salem, Mass., in 1628, under John Endecott, and greatly increased in 1630 by the arrival of a large force under John Winthrop. Its capital was removed to Boston. The Plymouth Colony was incorporated with it in 1691.

Massachusetts Bay Company. Colonizing company chartered in 1629, which grew out of the Dorchester Company. Its immediate cause was the danger to political and religious freedom in England under Charles I. John Endecott was the first local governor. In 1630 John Winthrop, as the new governor, conducted a large expedition, which founded Boston. The company's charter was withdrawn in 1684.

Massachusetts Government Act. See under Coercive Acts.

Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Technical educational institution of university grade, situated at Cambridge, Mass. Chartered in 1861 and opened in 1865, it was until 1916 situated at Boston. It includes schools of architecture, engineering, and science; courses in the humanities and, in coöperation with other colleges, in the arts; a noted technical library; laboratories in connection with physics, chemistry, biology, electricity, electronics, internal-combustion engines, and aeronautics, among other studies; a wind tunnel, and a cyclotron. It includes also a graduate school. It is nonsectarian, enjoys some land-grant support, and is attended mostly by men, though there is a small enrollment of women.

Massachusetts to Virginia (vėr.jin'yą). Abolitionist poem by John Greenleaf Whittier, published in The Liberator in 1843 and reprinted in Voices of Freedom (1846).

Massacre of Amboina (am.boi'ną). See Amboina, Massacre of.

Massacre of Saint Bartholomew (bär.thol'ọ.mū). See Saint Bartholomew, Massacre of.

Massacre of the Innocents, The. 1. Painting by Tintoretto, in the Scuola di San Rocco at Venice. 2. A painting by Rubens, in the Old Pinakothek at Munich.

Massacres, September. See September Massacres.

Massada (mä.sä'dą). See Masada.

Massa e Carrara (mäs'sä ā kär.rä'rä). [Former name, Apuania.] Province in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany. Area, ab. 446 sq. mi.; pop. 196,716 (1936).

Massafra (mäs.sä'frä). Town and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Lecce, ab. 10 mi. NW of Taranto. It is an agricultural commune, producing much wine, fruit, olive oil, and tobacco. It has a medieval castle. Pop. of commune, 13,388 (1936); of town, 12,506 (1936).

Massai (mä.sī'). See Masai.

Massalia (ma.sā'li.ą). Asteroid (No. 20) discovered by De Gasparis at Naples, Sept. 19, 1852.

Massalia. Ancient Greek name of Marseilles, France.

Massalians (ma.sā'li.ąnz). See Palamites.

Massalsky (mä.säl'ski), Helene Ghica, Princess Koltzoff. See Dora d'Istria.

Massa Marittima (mäs'sä mä.rēt'tē.mä). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Grosseto, ab. 30 mi. SW of Siena. It is the marketing center of a mining region producing copper, lead, iron, and silver. It is the seat of a bishopric, and has a library, an art and a mining museum, and a mining academy. The cathedral of Sant' Agostino (Saint Augustine) and the palazzo communale (commune hall) date from the 13th century. Except for slight damage to Sant' Agostino, buildings of interest to tourists were undamaged during World War II. Pop. of commune, 14,999 (1936); of town, 4,847 (1936).

Massapequa (mas.ą.pē'kwą). Unincorporated suburban community in SE New York, in Nassau County, on Long Island. Under the new urban definition established for use in the 1950 census it was counted with adjoining urban communities; the last official enumeration was 2,676 (1940).

Massarik (mäs'ä.rik), Friedericke. See Massary, Fritzi.

Massarosa (mäs.sä.rō'zä). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Lucca, W of Lucca. It is an agricultural commune. Pop. of commune, 13,233 (1936); of town, 1,353 (1936).

Massart (mą.sär), Jean. b. at Etterbeek, near Brussels, Belgium, March 7, 1865; d. at Brussels, Aug. 16, 1925. Belgian botanist. He became director of the Errera Botanical Institute in 1906, and made scientific trips to Brazil and to parts of North America. Author of Esquisse de la géographie botanique de la Belgique (2 vols., 1910), Éléments de biologie générale et de botanique (1921–33), and numerous papers in the transactions and journals of scientific societies.

Massary (mäs'ä.rē), Fritzi. [Stage name of Friedericke Massarik.] b. at Vienna, March 21, 1882—. Austrian actress and operatic singer. Her outstanding successes were The Merry Widow (1914) and The Last Waltz (1931).

Massasoit (mas.ą.soit'). b. probably c1580; d. 1661. Chief of the Wampanoag Indians during the early colonial period in southeastern Massachusetts and Rhode Island. His treaty of friendship signed in 1621 with the Plymouth colonists was never broken by him despite the colonists' occasional serious mistreatment of his people. King Philip (Metacomet) was his son.

Massawa (mą.sä'wą, mą.sou'ą). [Also: Massowah; Italian, Massaua.] Chief seaport of Ethiopia, in the former Italian colony of Eritrea, in NE Africa, situated on the Red Sea. Massawa has an average annual temperature of ab. 86.5° F., which makes it one of the hottest places in the world. It was successively under Arab, Turkish, and Egyptian rule. The Italians took military possession in 1885. By the decision of the United Nations (May, 1949) Massawa was part of the territory given to Ethiopia. With Asmara, Massawa was given special status in order to provide for the protection of the Italian population. It is connected by rail with Asmara, ab. 75 mi. inland. Pop. 17,169, including 6,111 Europeans (1939).

Massawa Channel. [Italian, Canale di Massaua.] Sea passage in the Red Sea, NE Africa, separating the mainland of Eritrea from the offshore Dahlak archipelago. The port of Massawa is situated at the N end of the strait.

Massé (mą.sā), Victor. [Original name, Félix Marie Massé.] b. at Lorient, France, March 7, 1822; d. at Paris, July 5, 1884. French operatic composer. Among his works are Galatée (1852), Les Noces de Jeannette (1853), Les Saisons (1855), La Reine Topaze (1856), Fior d'Aliza (1866), and Paul et Virginie (1876).

Massemünster (mäs'ę.mün.stėr). German name of Masevaux.

Massena (ma.sē'ną). Village in N New York, in St. Lawrence County, ab. 3 mi. S of the St. Lawrence River; marketing center for a dairying area. There is a large aluminum plant. 13,137 (1950).

Masséna (mą.sā.nä), André. [Titles: Duc de Rivoli, Prince d'Essling.] b. at Nice, France, c1758; d. at Paris, April 4, 1817. French marshal. He won the victory of Loano in 1795, served with distinction under Napoleon in Italy, and as commander in chief in Switzerland defeated Korsakov at Zurich (Sept. 26, 1799). He defended Genoa in 1800 while Napoleon was preparing for the battle of Marengo, won the victory of Caldiero (Oct. 30, 1805), and captured Gaeta in 1806. He served at Landshut, Eckmühl, Essling, and Wagram in 1809, and commanded in the Peninsula (1810–11), where he was defeated (probably through the disobedience of his subordinates Ney, Junot, and Reynier) by Arthur Wellesley (later Duke of Wellington). He was put in charge of Marseilles by Napoleon, but did not support the emperor during the Hundred Days.

Massenet (mas.ẹ.nā'; French, más.ne), Jules Émile Frédéric. b. at Montaud, France, May 12, 1842; d. at Paris, Aug. 13, 1912. French composer. He won the Grand Prix de Rome in 1863 with the cantata David Rizzio, and in 1878 was elected to the chair of advanced composition at the Paris Conservatory, holding it until 1896. In addition to orchestral and piano music (Scènes hongroises and others), he wrote many operas, among which are Don César de Bazan (1872), Les Érinnyes (1873), Le Roi de Lahore (1877), Hérodiade (1881), Manon (1884), Le Cid (1885), Esclarmonde (1889), Le Mage (1891), Werther (1892), Le Carillon (1892), Thaïs (1894), Le Portrait de Manon (1894), La Navarraise (1894), Sapho (1897), Cendrillon (1899), Grisélidis (1901), music to Phèdre (1901), Le Jongleur de Notre Dame (1902), Chérubin (1905), Ariane (1906), and Bacchus (1909). He also wrote several oratorios, including Marie Madeleine (1873), Ève (1875), and La Vierge (1879).

Masses, The. Weekly magazine founded at New York in 1911 as an organ for liberal Socialist views. Its editors included Thomas Seltzer and Max Eastman. Shortly after the U.S. government suppressed the publication in 1918, its editors established The Liberator (1919–24), which became (1922) an affiliate of the Communist Party. The Liberator was succeeded by The New Masses (1926–47), a weekly which reflected Communist policy.

Massey (mas'i), Bartle. Schoolmaster in the novel Adam Bede by George Eliot.

Massey, Sir Edward. b. c1619; d. in Ireland, c1674. English general. At the outbreak (1642) of the English Civil War he was in the service of the king, but later became lieutenant colonel in the Parliamentary army, serving near Gloucester. Later, in the struggle between Parliament and the army, he served Parliament, and was made lieutenant general of the horse April 2, 1647. He was impeached by the army, and fled to the Netherlands. Entering the service of Charles II, he assisted during the invasion, and was captured and confined in the Tower of London in November, 1651. He escaped to the Netherlands, and was active in the Restoration.

Massey, Gerald. b. near Tring, Hertfordshire, England, May 29, 1828; d. Oct. 29, 1907. English poet, Christian Socialist, and mystic. The self-educated son of a canal boatman, he began to work in a mill at eight and was a London errand boy at 15. He became a freethinker, a Chartist, a Christian Socialist, and, finally, a spiritualist. Author of Poems and Chansons (1848), Voices of Freedom and Lyrics of Love (1850), Ballad of Babe Christabel (1854), A Tale of Eternity (1869), and My Lyrical Life (1899), poetry; Concerning Spiritualism (1871), The Book of the Beginnings (1881), Natural Genesis (1883), Ancient Egypt: Light of the World (1907), and other books on the spirit world and Egyptology; and The Secret Drama of Shakespeare's Sonnets (1866, 1888). His career inspired George Eliot to write her political novel Felix Holt the Radical (1866).

Massey, Hart Almerin. b. at Haldimand, Northumberland, Ontario, Canada, April 29, 1823; d. at Toronto, Feb. 20, 1896. Canadian manufacturer of agricultural machinery, and philanthropist. Of the different machines which he manufactured and made well-known in Canada, he sold from 5,000 to 30,000 each. He was the founder of Massey Music Hall, Toronto, and of Hart House in the University of Toronto.

Massey, Raymond. b. at Toronto, Canada, Aug. 30, 1896—. American actor and producer; brother of Vincent Massey. He has appeared in such plays as An American Tragedy, The Constant Nymph, Ethan Frome, Idiot's Delight, Abe Lincoln in Illinois, The Doctor's Dilemma, and Candida; and he has starred in The Scarlet Pimpernel, The Prisoner of Zenda, The Hurricane, Things to Come, Abe Lincoln in Illinois, Hotel Berlin, Mourning Becomes Electra, and other motion pictures.

Massey, Vincent. b. at Toronto, Canada, Feb. 20, 1887—. Canadian diplomat; brother of Raymond Massey. He was secretary and subsequently director (1918–19) of the government repatriation committee and was named (1925) minister without portfolio in the Dominion cabinet. He was Canadian minister (1926–30) in the U.S., high commissioner (1935–46) for Canada in the United Kingdom, and chancellor (1947 et seq.) of the University of Toronto. In January, 1952 (he took office formally in February), he was appointed governor general of Canada.

Massey, William Ferguson. b. at Limavady, County Londonderry, Ireland, March 26, 1856; d. at Wellington, New Zealand, May 10, 1925. New Zealand political leader and prime minister (1912–25). In 1870 he went to New Zealand, where he became a farmer. He entered parliament (1894), and was elected leader of the Conservative opposition (1903). He served as prime minister from 1912 to 1925 (heading the wartime coalition government, 1915–19).

Massicus (mas'i.kus), Mons. [Modern Italian name, Monte Massico (más'sē.kō).] In ancient geography, a range of hills on the border of Campania and Latium, Italy. It was famous for its wines.

Massif Central (má.sēf säñ.trál). [Also, Central Massif.] Elevated mountain and plateau region of S central France. The area is formed of numerous groups of old granitic mountains, of which the highest are the Cévennes, in the SE, and several recent volcanic ranges in the C part, culminating in the Monts Dore (6,188 ft.), the highest summit of the region. The higher parts of the Massif Central have severe winters and cool summers, and are chiefly forest or summer pasture lands. The lower regions, especially in the W and NW, are warmer, and there is considerable agriculture, especially in the valleys. Area, ab. 32,800 sq. mi.

Massif de la Vanoise (má.sēf dẹ lá vá.nwáz). See Vanoise.

Massif du Pelvoux (dü pel.vö). See Pelvoux.

Massigli (má.sē.lyē), René. b. March 22, 1888—. French diplomat, commissioner for foreign affairs (1943–44) in the Free French regime during World War II and first ambassador to Great Britain of the Fourth Republic. After a career (1919–38) as an official of the French foreign ministry, he was ambassador (1939–40) to Turkey. He escaped (1943) from France to join General de Gaulle, and was head (1943–44) of the foreign commissariat, until named (1944) ambassador to London.

Massilia (mạ.sil'i.ạ). Latin name of Marseilles, France.

Massilians (mạ.sil'i.ạnz). [Also, Semi-Pelagians.] Members of a Christian sect, most numerous at Marseilles, France, later called Semi-Pelagians.

Massiliensis (mạ.sil.i.en'sis), Johannes. See Cassianus, Johannes.

Massillon (mas'i.lon, -lọn). City in E Ohio, in Stark County, on the Tuscarawas River ab. 50 mi. S of Cleveland, in an agricultural area: manufactures of steel, furnaces, aluminum cooking utensils, metal stampings, refractory products, roller bearings, turbine pumps, drillers' supplies, rubber goods, and clothing. It was established in 1826, and was named for Jean Baptiste Massillon. 29,594 (1950).

Massillon (má.sē.yôñ), Jean Baptiste. b. at Hyères, France, June 24, 1663; d. at Clermont, France, Sept. 18, 1742. French pulpit orator, a member of the Congregation of the Oratory. He lived for many years in a monastery (Sept-Fonts), and in 1696 was called to Paris, where he became director of the seminary of St.-Magloire and in 1704 court preacher, attaining fame as a pulpit orator. In 1717 he was made bishop of Clermont. His works (including sermons and funeral orations) were published in 15 volumes (1745–48).

Massine (má.sēn'), Léonide. b. at Moscow, Aug. 9, 1896—. Russian ballet dancer and choreographer. He was principal dancer with the Diaghilev ballet company (1914–20). He was producer and dancer with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo (1932–42 in Europe and America and later with the New York City Ballet Theatre. He is the choreographer for such ballets as Soleil de Nuit, Le Sacre du Printemps, Le Roi David, and Boutique Fantasque. He appeared in his own dances in the motion pictures The Red Shoes and Tales of Hoffmann.

Massinger (mas'in.jẽr), Philip. Baptized at Salisbury, England, Nov. 24, 1583; buried at Southwark, London, England, March 18, 1640. English dramatist; son of Arthur Massinger, a "servant" to the Herbert family. He entered St. Alban Hall, Oxford, on May 14, 1602, but left without a degree. Thereafter he spent an apparently impoverished period at London, where he collaborated with the playwrights Thomas Dekker, Nathaniel Field, Robert Daborne, Cyril Tourneur, and John Fletcher.

The dominant influence was that of Fletcher, whom he succeeded as chief dramatist for the King's Men when the elder dramatist died in 1625. In 1621 or 1622 he wrote unaided The Duke of Milan, a tragedy based on the Herod-Mariamne theme; and in 1623–24 for Princess Elizabeth's Men he composed The Bondman, The Renegado, and The Parliament of Love. He continued to write, both independently and in collaboration, throughout the 1630's. Of the 18 plays in which Massinger's hand has been established as having a total or major part, the most popular has been A New Way to Pay Old Debts (c1625–26), the main character of which is Sir Giles Overreach, an avaricious entrepreneur, created in the Jonsonian "humor" pattern. In the same vein, critical of current social decadence and ostentation in London, is The City Madam (licensed 1632). Massinger's censure of the soft pacifism, political corruption, and mercenary spirit of Jacobean England was frequently conveyed, however, through plays with ancient and foreign settings, such as The Bondman (1623) and Believe As You List (1631). His own favorite among his plays was The Roman Actor (1626), a tragedy in which he voices his own theory of the didactic potentialities of the stage. Though much of Massinger's vogue may be attributed to the elevated moralistic vein of his tragedies and to the forthright social satire of his comedies, he also proved himself adept at a lighter touch in the "comical histories," The Great Duke of Florence (c1624) and The Guardian (licensed 1633), and in such tragicomedies as The Bashful Lover (licensed 1636), The Maid of Honor (c1623–25), and The Picture (licensed 1629). He also tried his hand at horror-tragedy in The Unnatural Combat (c1624–26). Among his more successful collaborations are The Virgin Martyr (licensed 1620) with Dekker, The Fatal Dowry (c1618–19) with Field, and Sir John Van Olden Barnavelt (1619) with Fletcher. What part he may have had in Henry VIII and The Two Noble Kinsmen has not been definitely established.

Massingham (mas'ing.ạm), Henry William. b. at Norwich, Norfolk, England, May 25, 1860; d. at Tintagel, Cornwall, England, Aug. 28, 1924. English journalist of advanced Liberal opinion. He was editor of the Daily Chronicle (1895–99), a frequent contributor (1899–1905) to the Manchester Guardian and the Daily News, and editor (1907–23) of the Nation. He joined the Labour Party in 1923 and transferred his "Wayfarer's Diary" to the New Statesman.

Massingham, H. J. [Full name, Harold John Massingham.] b. at London, March 25, 1888; d. Aug. 22, 1952. English journalist and critic, and writer on ornithology and animal life. Author of Letters to X (1919), People and Things (1919), Some Birds of the Countryside (1921), Pre-Roman Britain (1927), The Heritage of Man (1929), The Friend of Shelley (1930), Country (1934), Genius of England (1937), This Plot of Earth (1944), The Wisdom of the Fields (1945), Where Man Belongs (1946), and the autobiographical Remembrance (1942).

Massinissa (mas.i.nis'ạ). See Masinissa.

Massis (mȧ.sē), Henri. b. at Paris, 1886—. French critic, editor (with Jacques Bainville) of the Revue universelle (1920–37). He was the author of violently conservative, critical works of which the best known is Jugements (2 vols., 1923–24). Under the joint pseudonym of "Agathon" he had earlier (1912–13) collaborated with Alfred de Tarde in a scathing attack on the French educational system. His other books have been studies of French literary figures. After World War II his position became obscure.

Massive, Mount (mas'iv). Peak of the Sawatch Range, in C Colorado. 14,418 ft.

Masson (mȧ.sôṅ), André. b. 1896—. French painter and illustrator, who allied himself with the surrealist group in 1924 and became one of its outstanding spokesmen. He was first influenced by André Derain and Juan Gris, and much later by surrealism. Among his principal works are Birth of Birds, Battle of Fishes, Animals Devouring Themselves, Furious Suns, Metamorphoses, Card Players, Storm, The Pursuit, and illustrations for Gertrude Stein's Old and Old.

Masson (mas'ọn), David. b. at Aberdeen, Scotland, Dec. 2, 1822; d. at Edinburgh, Oct. 6, 1907. Scottish professor, editor, essayist, and biographer. He edited The Banner, an Aberdeen weekly, and then went to London, where he wrote for Fraser's Magazine. He wrote (1844–47) for the Edinburgh publishing firm of W. and R. Chambers. He served as professor of English (1853–65) at London University College and held a similar post (1865–95) at Edinburgh University. He was the first editor (1859–67) of Macmillan's Magazine. He wrote Life of Milton, Narrated in Connection with the Political, Ecclesiastical, and Literary History of His Own Time (6 vols., 1858–80), which remains the standard biography.

Masson (mȧ.sôṅ), Frédéric. b. at Paris, March 8, 1847; d. there, Feb. 19, 1923. French historian and writer. He was best known as the author of a series of works dealing intimately with the life of Napoleon and his family, based on papers given to him by Prince Napoleon (Napoléon Joseph Charles Paul Bonaparte), whose secretary and friend he was. They include: Napoléon et les femmes (1894), Napoléon chez lui (1894), Napoléon inconnu (1895), Napoléon et sa famille (1897–1906), Marie Valewska (1898), Joséphine, impératrice et reine (1899), Joséphine de Beauharnais (1899), Joséphine répudiée (1901), L'Impératrice Marie Louise (1902), Napoléon et son fils (1904), and Le Sacre et le couronnement de Napoléon (1908). He wrote also Le Marquis de Grignan (1881; crowned by the French Academy), Les Diplomates de la révolution (1883), Le Cardinal de Bernis depuis son ministère (1884), and others.

Masson (mas'ọn), George Joseph Gustave. b. at London, March 9, 1819; d. at Ewhurst, Surrey, England, Aug. 29, 1888. English writer, principally of educational compilations and translations.

Masson, Thomas Lansing. b. at Essex, Conn., July 21, 1866; d. at Glen Ridge, N.J., June 18, 1934. American humorist and editor. He was literary and managing editor (1893–1922) of Life magazine and associate editor (1922–30) of the Saturday Evening Post. Author of Yankee Navy (1899), The Von Blumers (1906), A Bachelor's Baby, and Some Grown-ups (1907), That Silver Lining (1923), In Tune with the Finite (1928), Ascensions (1929), and Within (1931).

Massorah (mạ.sō'rạ). See Masora.

Massowah (mạ.sou'ạ). See Massawa.

Massys (mä.sīs') or Matsys (mät.sīs') or Metsys (met-sīs'), Quentin (or Quintin). b. at Louvain, Belgium, c1466; d. at Antwerp, 1530. Flemish painter.

Mast (mȧst), Charles Emmanuel. b. at Paris, Jan. 7, 1889—. French army commander and colonial administrator, resident general (1944–47) of Tunisia. He was named (1947) a member of the Superior Council of National Defense and director of the Institute for Higher Military Studies.

Mastai-Ferretti (mäs.tä'ē.fer.rät'tē), Giovanni Maria. Original name of Pope Pius IX.

Master Brook (brůk). See Brook, Master.

Master Builder, The. Play by Henrik Ibsen, produced in 1892.

Master Ford (fōrd). See Ford, Master.

Master Humphrey's Clock (hum'friz). Collection of tales by Charles Dickens, published in 1840–41. They included The Old Curiosity Shop and Barnaby Rudge. When these stories were expanded to their full length, as novels, the machinery of the miscellany here defined was largely scrapped.

Masterman Ready (mȧs'tėr.mạn red'ī). Sea story by Frederick Marryat, published in 1841.

Master Matthew (math'ū). See Matthew, Master.

Master of Gray, The. Historical novel by Henry Christopher Bailey, published in 1903.

Master of the Death of Mary. See Cleve or Cleef, Joos van.

Master of the Inn, The. Novel by Robert Herrick, published in 1908.

Masters (mȧs'tėrz), Edgar Lee. b. at Garnett, Kan., Aug. 23, 1869; d. at Melrose Park, Pa., March 5, 1950. American writer. Author of A Book of Verses (1898), Blood of the Prophets (1905), Starved Rock (verse; 1919), Mitch Miller (1920), Domesday Book (1920), The New Spoon River (1924), Lincoln—the Man (1931), Vachel Lindsay, a Biography (1935), Whitman (1937), The New World (poem; 1937), Mark Twain (1938), More People (verse; 1939), Illinois Poems (1941), Along the Illinois (1942), and other books. His volume of verse biographies, Spoon River Anthology (1915), has been translated into many languages; it is one of the more powerful of the works of its period attacking (and eulogizing) American small-town life.

Master Skylark (skī'lärk). Novel by John Bennett, published in 1897.

Mastriani (mäs.trē.ä'nē), Francesco. b. at Naples, Italy, Nov. 13, 1819; d. there, Jan. 15, 1891. Italian dramatist and novelist.

Mastricht (mäs.triċht'). German form of Maastricht.

Masuccio da Salerno (mä.zōt'chō dä sä.ler'nō). b. at Salerno, Italy, c1420; d. after 1476. Italian novelist. He was a man of some rank, and passed most of his life in the service of the Duke of Milan. Fifty of his novels, in the Neapolitan dialect, were published in 1476 under the title Il Novellino con le largomenti e morali conclusion d'alcuni esempli. One of these tells the same story as Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet.

Masudi (mä.sö'dē), al-. d. 957. Arab historian. He is called "the Herodotus of Arabian history." Of his numerous works Meadows of Gold and Mines of Gems is an abridgment of his large Annals (30 vols. and supplementary chronological table). He traveled widely, perhaps as far as China, to collect his material.

Masulipatam (mą.sö''li.pą.täm'). [Also, Bandar.] Seaport in Madras, Union of India, capital of the Kistna district, on the Coromandel coast on a mouth of the Kistna River. It has never regained prosperity since a tidal wave inundated it with the loss of ab. 30,000 lives in 1864. The harbor is poor and ships have to anchor ab. 5 mi. at sea. The chief exports are peanuts, castor seed, and oil cake. It has cotton and rice processing industries. 59,146 (1941).

Masurian Lakes (mą.zůr'i.ąn, -sůr'-), Battle of the. Series of engagements (Sept. 6–15, 1914) between the Russians and the Germans on the Eastern Front, in World War I. The battle took place on the swampy terrain of southern East Prussia shortly after the German victory of Tannenberg, and ended as a second notable success for the German troops under General von Hindenburg, though actually Ludendorff and von Mackensen fought the battle. The Russian losses included many thousands of men killed, over 45,000 prisoners taken, and great quantities of equipment. At its end the Russian units were disorganized and in full retreat. The German territory in East Prussia, which the Russians had taken less than two weeks before in the battle of Gumbinnen, was by this battle fully restored to German hands.

Masym (mā'sim). Rarely used name for the fifth-magnitude star χ Herculis, in the left hand of the hero.

Matabei (mä.tä.bā) or Matahei (-hā). See Iwasa Matabei.

Matabele (mat.ą.bē'lē). See Ndebele.

Matabeleland (mat.ą.bē'lē.land). Region and former province in SW Southern Rhodesia, S Africa. It was proclaimed (1888) to be within the British sphere of influence, and was forcibly occupied (1893–94) by the British South Africa Company. It was constituted as part of Southern Rhodesia in 1923. Gold mining was the chief attraction in the early period of settlement, but livestock ranching and farming have now become the chief industries of the European settlers. Area, ab. 69,989 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 588,100.

Matacos (mä.tä'kōz). Group of South American Indians of the Chaco region. Their language, Matacoan or Mataco-Mataguayo, has always been regarded as an independent linguistic family. It is now, however, classified as belonging to a newly proposed phylum called Macro-Guaicuru.

Matadi (mą.tä'di). Chief port of the Belgian Congo, in W central Africa, situated on the S bank of the Congo River at the head of ocean navigation of the estuary, ab. 90 mi. from its mouth. It is connected by rail with Léopoldville, ab. 230 mi. distant, and serves as the principal outlet for the colony. The chief exports are palm oil, tropical woods, cotton, coffee, and minerals. Pop. 32,865 including 887 Europeans (1949).

Matagalpa (mä.tä.gäl'pä). Department in C Nicaragua: coffee plantations. Capital, Matagalpa; area, ab. 3,378 sq. mi.; pop. 135,475 (1950).

Matagalpa. Town in C Nicaragua, capital of Matagalpa department: cattle and high-grade coffee. 10,362 (1950).

Matagalpa. Tribe and group of tribes of South American Indians in NW Nicaragua, SW Honduras, and NE El Salvador.

Matagalpan (mat.ą.gal'pąn). Language of the Matagalpa Indians of Nicaragua and S Honduras, classified as comprising the third group of the Misumalpan linguistic stock.

Matagorda Bay (mat.ą.gôr'dą). Inlet of the Gulf of Mexico, in S Texas, at the mouth of the Colorado River. Area, ab. 350 sq. mi.

Matagorda Island. Island on the coast of Texas, SE of Matagorda Bay. Length, ab. 35 mi.

Mata Hari (mä'tą hä'rē). [Original name, Gertrud Margarete Zelle.] d. 1917. Dutch dancer in France popular in Paris as an exponent of Indonesian dancing. She used her popularity to become acquainted with a number of persons entrusted with military secrets and acted as a spy for the Germans during World War I. She was found out and executed. Her name has become synonymous with seduction for purposes of espionage.

Mataincourt (mä.taṅ.kör), Pierre de. See Fourier, Pierre.

Matamoros (mä.tä.mō'rōs; Anglicized, mat.ą.mō'rōs). City in NE Mexico, in Tamaulipas state, on the Rio Grande, opposite Brownsville, Tex. It was taken by Zachary Taylor on May 18, 1846. Pop. 118,215 (1950).

Matamoros (mä.tä.mō'rōs), Mariano. b. c1770; executed at Valladolid, Mexico, Feb. 3, 1814. Mexican priest and patriot in whose honor the town of Matamoros (on the Rio Grande) is named. The principal lieutenant of José María Morelos y Pavón (December, 1811–January, 1814), he won the victory of San Agustín del Palmar (Oct. 14, 1813), and shared in the repulse at Valladolid and the defeat at Puruarán (Jan. 5, 1814), where he was captured.

Matane (mą.tan'). Town in SE Quebec, Canada, the county seat of Matane County, situated on the S bank of the St. Lawrence River ab. 80 mi. E of Rivière du Loup, at the end of the railroad. 6,345 (1951).

Matanuska Valley (mat.ą.nös'ką). Valley in S Alaska, ab. 50 mi. by road NE of Anchorage: the largest agricultural community of Alaska. Settlement began c1930, but the valley attracted wide attention in 1935 when the U.S. government established a colony of some 200 families from Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Michigan in the area. Dairy products, vegetables, and potatoes are produced and marketed in Alaska. Winters are cold, and summers cool. Cultivated area, ab. 15 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 3,000.

Matanzas (mä.tän'säs). Province in NW Cuba, bounded on the N by the Florida Strait, on the S and E by the province of Las Villas, and on the W by the province of Habana. Capital, Matanzas; area, ab. 3,260 sq. mi.; pop. 361,079 (1943).

Matanzas. City on the N coast of Cuba, capital of Matanzas province: exports sugar, molasses, coffee, fruit, and sisal; industries include sugar mills, tanneries, and fertilizer plants. Formerly a pirate haven, it is now a favorite excursion city. 54,844 (1943).

Matanzas (mą.tan'ząs), Fort. See under Fort Matanzas National Monument.

Matapan (mat'ą.pan), Battle of Cape. Naval engagement in the Mediterranean Sea, in World War II. It took place off the S tip of Greece in the waters between Greece and Crete on March 30, 1941. It was a major defeat for the Italian navy, which lost three cruisers and two destroyers. The opposing British force, which derived considerable aid from aircraft, was initially of about the same size as the Italian force.

Matapan, Cape. [Greek, Tainaron; Latin, Taenarum.] Promontory at the extremity of Laconia, Greece. It is the southernmost point of the Balkan Peninsula.

Matape (mä.tä pā'). Pueblo in C Sonora, Mexico, known to the Spaniards in 1540 under the name Vacapa. It was later a considerable mission of the Jesuits.

Matapedia (mat.ą.pē'di.ą), Lake. [French, Lac Matapédia (mä.tä.pā.dyä').] Lake in SE Quebec, Canada, ab. 15 mi. S of the St. Lawrence River, and N of New Brunswick. Length, ab. 15 mi.

Mataram (mä.tä'ram). Javanese sultanate in S Java which under the Amangkurat dynasty in the 17th century extended its rule over most of S and E Java. Claiming succession to the Majapahit kingdom, it conquered Madura and the coastal states of South Borneo. It contested Bantam's sovereignty over Batavia in 1618 but in the following years was decisively beaten by the armed forces of the Netherlands East India Company, which expanded its rule eastward from that city. Attempts to reunite all of Java under Mataram rule failed, and the densely populated original inland territory forced the sultanate both to achieve a high degree of self-sufficiency and to seek power over surrounding states with access to the coast and coastal trade. To compensate for the loss of the rich western part of Java, Mataram also tried unsuccessfully to conquer the independent Hindu state of Bali; it retained only a shadow of its former power when, under a treaty in 1705, it actually became a vassal state of the Netherlands East India Company.

Matarieh or Matariya (mä.tä.rē'ẹ). Modern name of Heliopolis.

Mataró (mä.tä.rō'). [Ancient name, Iluro.] Town and seaport in NE Spain, in the province of Barcelona, on the Mediterranean ab. 15 mi. NE of Barcelona: produces cotton and linen goods (canvas and tarpaulin), soap, paper, and chemicals. Flowers and strawberries are sent to the Barcelona markets. The excellent wines are exported. 29,920 (1940).

Matawan (mat'ạ.won). Borough in E New Jersey, in Monmouth County: manufactures of electroplating equipment, tiles, and barrels; principally a residential community. 3,739 (1950).

"Matchless Orinda" (ǭ.rin'dạ). See Philips, Katharine.

Matehuala (mä.tā.wä'lä). City in N central Mexico, in San Luis Potosí state: mining. 16,548 (1940).

Matejko (mä.tā'kô), Jan. b. at Kraków, Poland, July 30, 1838; d. Nov. 1, 1893. Polish historical painter. His subjects were taken from Polish history.

Matembe (mä.tem'bā). See Thembu.

Matera (mä.te'rä). Province in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Basilicata. Area, ab. 1,464 sq. mi.; pop. 166,776 (1936).

Matera. Town in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Basilicata, in the province of Matera, situated above a steep ravine ab. 37 mi. W of Taranto. It produces ceramics and building materials, and is the seat of a bishop. It has a medieval castle, a 13th-century cathedral, and a museum of antiquities. In the vicinity are found numerous prehistoric remains, caves, and old churches of the Byzantine epoch. Because of its strategic importance, the town was contested frequently; occupied by Hannibal, the Romans, later Lombards, Saracens, Normans, Byzantines, Germans, and Spaniards. Except for the duomo (cathedral), which was slightly damaged, buildings of interest to tourists were undamaged in World War II. Pop. of commune, 22,060 (1936); of town, 21,762 (1936).

Mater Dolorosa (mā'tėr dol.ǭ.rō'sạ). [Also, Virgin of Sorrows.] Painting by Titian (1554), in the Prado at Madrid. It is a bust of the Virgin, in violet robe, with blue mantle drawn over the white cap on her head, mourning her son with upraised hands. It is a companion piece to the master's Ecce Homo in the same museum.

Mater Matuta (mạ.tū'tạ). See Matuta.

Materna (mä.ter'nä), Amalie. b. at St. Georgen, Styria, Austria, July 10, 1845; d. Jan. 18, 1918. German opera singer. In 1876 she created her great reputation as a Wagnerian singer by her rendition of Brünhilde at the Wagner festival at Bayreuth. She retired in 1897.

Maternus (mạ.tėr'nus), Julius (or Villius) Firmicus. See Firmicus Maternus, Julius (or Villius).

Mathematical Association of America. Organization founded in 1915 (incorporated 1920) for the purpose of promoting collegiate mathematics. It maintains headquarters at the University of Buffalo, Buffalo, N.Y., and publishes the American Mathematical Monthly.

Mather (maтн'ėr, math'ėr), Cotton. b. at Boston, Feb. 12, 1662 or 1663; d. there, Feb. 13, 1727 or 1728. American Congregational clergyman, author, and scholar; son of Increase Mather. He graduated from Harvard College at 15, and took his master's degree three years later. His professional training included theology and medicine. He became the colleague of his father in the Second (or North) Church at Boston in 1681, and served in that pulpit until his death. He sought to deal with the epidemic of witchcraft trials and executions of 1692 by humane and, for the time, scientific methods. Inoculation against smallpox was introduced into Massachusetts largely through his efforts. Of his over 400 works, most important are Magnalia Christi Americana, or, The Ecclesiastical History of New England (1702; new edition, 1950), Wonders of the Invisible World (1692), The Christian Philosopher (1721), Manuductio ad Ministerium (1726), and Biblia Americana, an extensive Biblical commentary still in manuscript. There is a critical bibliography by Thomas J. Holmes (1940).

Mather, Frank Jewett, Jr. b. at Deep River, Conn., July 6, 1868—. American educator and museum director. He served as professor of art and archaeology (1910–33) and director of the Museum of Historic Art (1922–46) at Princeton University. He is the author of Venetian Painters (1936) and Western European Painting of the Renaissance (1939), among others.

Mather, Increase. b. at Dorchester, Mass., June 21, 1639; d. at Boston, Aug. 23, 1723. American Congregational minister, president (1685–1701) of Harvard College; youngest son of Richard Mather. He graduated at Harvard in 1656, visited England in 1657, and graduated (M.A.) at Trinity College, Dublin, in 1658. He preached at Great Torrington, Devonshire, until May, 1659, and afterward in Guernsey. At the Restoration he refused to conform, and returned to Boston, where he was ordained minister of the new North Church on May 27, 1664. In 1680 he presided at the Synod of Boston. In 1685 he was elected president of Harvard College. In 1687 Mather was charged by the New England ministers to convey a vote of thanks to James II, for his declaration of liberty of conscience, and visited England in 1688. He remained there to secure (1689) restoration of the charters and a change in the governorship, he being an opponent of Sir Edmund Andros. He returned to Boston in 1692 with the new governor, Sir William Phips. In 1701 he resigned the presidency of Harvard College, but retained his Boston pastorate until his death. Mather was a voluminous writer on religious and political matters. Cases of Conscience Concerning Evil Spirits (1693) indicates that he was not as gullible as his son, Cotton Mather, in the matter of the witchcraft delusion, but he was sufficiently convinced that witches existed and became an object of the turn of feeling against the trials. His A Brief History of the War with the Indians (1676) is a primary source book on King Philip's War.

Mather, Kirtley Fletcher. b. at Chicago, Feb. 13, 1888—. American geologist, educator, and author. Author of Fauna of the Morrow Formation (1915), Old Mother Earth (1928), Science in Search of God (1928), Sons of Earth (1930), Enough and to Spare (1944), and other books; coauthor with Dorothy Hewitt of Adult Education, a Dynamic for Democracy (1937) and with S. L. Mason of A Source Book in Geology (1939).

Mather, Nathaniel. b. at Much Woolton, Lancashire, England, March 20, 1631; d. at London, July 26, 1697. English clergyman; second son of Richard Mather. He went with his father to America, and graduated (M.A.) at Harvard College in 1647. He returned to England c1650. In 1656 he received from Oliver Cromwell the vicarage of Barnstaple, Devonshire; at the Restoration he became pastor of the English church at Rotterdam. In 1671 he succeeded his brother Samuel at the church in New Row, Dublin, and in 1688 took charge of the Independent church in Paved Alley, Lime Street, London. He wrote The Righteousness of God through Faith (1694) and others.

Mather, Richard. b. at Lowton, Lancashire, England, 1596; d. at Dorchester, Mass., April 22, 1669. Congregational divine. He entered Brasenose College, Oxford, May 9, 1618, but soon went to Toxteth Park, Liverpool, preaching his first sermon on Nov. 30. In 1634 he was suspended for nonconformity, and went to New England, arriving at Boston Aug. 16, 1635. He was settled at Dorchester, Aug. 23, 1636, and remained there until his death. Among his sons were Nathaniel and Increase Mather.

Mather, Robert. b. at Salt Lake City, July 1, 1859; d. 1911. American railroad executive and lawyer.

Mather, Samuel. b. at Boston, Oct. 30, 1706; d. June 27, 1785. American Congregational clergyman; son of Cotton Mather. He graduated (1723) from Harvard, and was assistant (1731) to Joshua Gee and pastor (1732–41) at the Second Church at Boston. Dismissed from that church, he served (1741–85) a new congregation which he established in North Bennett Street. Author of Life of the Very Reverend and Learned Cotton Mather (1729), Attempt to Show That America Must Be Known to the Ancients (1773), and a poem, The Sacred Minister (1773).

Mather, Samuel. b. at Cleveland, Ohio, July 13, 1851; d. Oct. 18, 1931. American iron and coal merchant, and philanthropist; son of Samuel Livingston Mather. He was a founder (1883) and senior partner (1896 et seq.) of Pickands, Mather and Company, dealers in iron and coal, and a director of the U.S. Steel Corporation. The founder (1920) of the Cleveland Community Fund, he was also a benefactor of Kenyon College and Western Reserve University.

Mather, Samuel Livingston. b. at Middletown, Conn., July 1, 1817; d. Oct. 8, 1890. American mining industrialist. He was an organizer (c1850), secretary-treasurer (1853 et seq.), and president and treasurer (1869–90) of the Cleveland Iron Mining Company for the mining and transportation of iron ore from the Lake Superior area.

Mather, Stephen Tyng. b. at San Francisco, July 4, 1867; d. at Brookline, Mass., Jan. 22, 1930. American public official; a descendant of Richard Mather. As first director (1917–29) of the National Park Service, he coordinated the already existing national parks and established the Rocky Mountain, Hawaii, Lassen Volcanic, Mount McKinley, Grand Canyon, Zion, Bryce Canyon, Grand Teton, and Great Smoky Mountains parks.

Mather, William Williams. b. at Brooklyn, Conn., May 24, 1804; d. at Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 26, 1859. American geologist. Author of Elements of Geology for the Use of Schools (1833).

Mathers (maтн'ẽrz), Helen Buckingham. Maiden name of Reeves, Helen Buckingham.

Matheson (math'ẹ.sọn), Samuel Pritchard. b. Sept. 20, 1852; d. at Winnipeg, Canada, May 19, 1942. Canadian prelate of the Anglican Church and primate (1909–31) of Canada. He was chancellor (1900–34) of the University of Manitoba, and archbishop (1905–31) of Rupert's Land.

Mathew (math'ū), Theobald. [Called the "Apostle of Temperance."] b. at Thomastown Castle, near Cashel, Ireland, Oct. 10, 1790; d. at Queenstown (now Cóbh), Ireland, Dec. 8, 1856. Irish priest and temperance advocate. He was ordained in the Franciscan order (Capuchins) in 1841. On April 10, 1838, he signed the total abstinence pledge, and began a temperance crusade. As a result nearly one half of the adult population of Ireland, it is said, joined him. The results of his work were largely destroyed by the Irish famine, which he did much to relieve. Father Mathew visited America during the years 1849–51.

Mathews (math'ūz), Albert. [Pseudonym, Paul Siegvolk.] b. at New York, Sept. 8, 1820; d. at Lake Mohonk, N.Y., Sept. 9, 1903. American author and lawyer. Author of Walter Ashwood, A Love Story (1860), A Bundle of Papers (1879), Thoughts on Codification of the Common Law (1881), Memorial of Bernard Roelker (1889), Ruminations (1893), and A Few Verses (1896).

Mathews, Albert Prescott. b. at Chicago, Nov. 26, 1871—. American physiological chemist; son of William Smith Babcock Mathews. He was professor of physiology and chairman of the department (1909–16) at the University of Chicago, and served (1918–40) as professor of biochemistry at the University of Cincinnati. He conducted researches in pharmacology, nerve impulses, and parthenogenesis.

Mathews, Arthur Frank. b. in Wisconsin, Oct. 1, 1860—. American painter, known for his decorations in California public buildings. Among his principal works are decorations for the Oakland, Calif., library, the California state capitol buildings, and the library of Stanford University; his painting California Landscape is in the Metropolitan Museum, New York.

Mathews, Charles. b. at London, June 28, 1776; d. at Plymouth, England, June 28, 1835. English comedian. He was especially successful as a mimic, and was in his way inimitable. His series of "At Homes" were his most memorable performances. They consisted of songs, recitations, ventriloquial imitations, and similar entertainment.

Mathews, Charles James. b. at Liverpool, England, Dec. 26, 1803; d. at Manchester, England, June 24, 1878. English actor and dramatist; son of Charles Mathews. On May 4, 1819, he entered the atelier of Augustus Pugin the architect, and he continued to practice architecture for several years. On April 26, 1822, he appeared for the first time as an amateur, at the Lyceum, London. On July 18, 1838, he married Madame Vestris (Lucia Elizabeth Mathews), his manager. Madame Vestris died Aug. 8, 1856; a year later he visited New York, where he married Mrs. A. H. Davenport, an actress at Burton's Theater. Among his own compositions are The Black Domino, Dead for a Ducat, Married for Money, The Court Jester, My Awful Dad, Little Toddlekins, and Mathews and Co.

Mathews, Edward Bennett. b. at Portland, Me., Aug. 16, 1869; d. at Baltimore, Feb. 4, 1944. American geologist. He taught (1894–1939) in the department of geology at Johns Hopkins, where he was appointed (1917) head of the department.

Mathews, Joseph Howard. b. Auroraville, Wis., Oct. 15, 1881—. American chemist. He was an authority (1917 et seq.) on problems of gas warfare with the U.S. army, and is an expert on criminal identification.

Mathews, Lucia Elizabeth (or Elizabetta). [Known as Madame Vestris; maiden name, Bartolozzi.] b. at London, in January, 1797; d. there, Aug. 8, 1856. English actress. On Jan. 28, 1813, she married Auguste Armand Vestris, ballet-master at the King's Theatre. She had a fine contralto voice, and first appeared as Proserpina in Peter Winter's opera Il Ratto di Proserpina (July 20, 1815). She appeared first in English at Drury Lane Theatre on Feb. 19, 1820, and continued to play until Jan. 3, 1831, when she undertook the management of the Olympic. On Dec. 7, 1835, Charles James Mathews made his debut under her management, and they were married July 18, 1838. She undertook the management of the Lyceum in 1847, and appeared there for the last time July 26, 1854.

Mathews, Samuel. b. in England, c1600; d. in January, 1660. English colonial administrator. He was a commissioner (1624) to investigate colonial conditions, and became a leader of the revolt to depose Governor Harvey. He tried (1642 et seq.) to annex Maryland to Virginia, but signed (1657) a treaty with Cecilius Calvert, Baron Baltimore. He was the last governor (1658–60) of the Virginia colony under the Commonwealth.

Mathews, Shailer. b. at Portland, Me., May 26, 1863; d. at Chicago, Oct. 23, 1941. American theologian. He was professor of New Testament history and interpretation at the University of Chicago (1897–1905), later of systematic theology (1905–06), becoming dean of the Divinity School in 1908. He was editor of The World To-day (1903–11). His published works include The Social Teaching of Jesus (1897), The Messianic Hope in the New Testament (1905), The Church and the Changing Order (1907), The Social Gospel (1909), and The Gospel and the Modern Man (1910).

Mathews, Thomas. b. at Llandaff Court, Wales, in October, 1676; d. at London, Oct. 2, 1751. English admiral. On March 13, 1742, he was named commander in chief in the Mediterranean and minister to Sardinia. He resigned in August, 1744, as the result of a farcical battle against the Spaniards in February, in which his orders were disobeyed and he himself attacked out of line while flying orders to stay in line at his masthead.

Mathews, William. b. at Waterville, Me., July 28, 1818; d. at Forest Hills, N.Y., Feb. 14, 1909. American writer and editor. Author of Getting on in the World (1873), The Great Conversers and Other Essays (1874), Words: Their Use and Abuse (1876), Hours with Men and Books (1877), Literary Style and Other Essays (1881), Men, Places, and Things (1887), Wit and Humor: Their Use and Abuse (1888), Nugae Litterariae (1896), and Conquering Success (1903).

Mathews, William Smith Babcock. b. at New London, N.H., May 8, 1837; d. at Denver, Colo., April 1, 1912. American teacher, organist, and writer on music. He was editor of The Musical Independent (1868–72) and Music (1891–1902). His books include Outlines of Music-Form (1867), Dictionary of Musical Terms (1896), and The Great in Music (1900–03).

Mathewson (math'ū.sŏn), Christopher. [Called "Christy," "Matty," and "Big Six."] b. at Factoryville, Pa., Aug. 12, 1880; d. at Saranac, N.Y., Oct. 7, 1925. American baseball pitcher and executive. He entered professional baseball in 1899 and joined the New York Giants in 1900. His entire active major league career was spent with the Giants, for whom he won 372 games while losing 189, until 1916, when he became manager of the Cincinnati Reds. He was non-playing manager of the Reds in 1917 and 1918, returned (1920) to the Giants as a coach, and was president (1923–25) of the Boston Braves. From 1903 to 1914 he won at least 20 games a season, his best mark being in 1908 when he won 37, the modern National League record. He struck out 2,499 batters in his career, 267 of them in 1903, both records being best in National League history. In the 1905 World Series he shut out the Philadelphia Athletics three times; he pitched no-hit games in 1901 and 1905. He died of tuberculosis, probably a direct result of his being gassed in France during World War I. Mathewson, considered by many the greatest right-handed pitcher in baseball history, was elected to Baseball's Hall of Fame in 1937.

Mathias (mą.thī'ąs), Thomas James. b. c1754; d. at Naples, Italy, in August, 1835. English satirist and Italian scholar. His Pursuits of Literature was begun in 1794. Other satires are The Political Dramatist (1795) and An Equestrian Epistle in Verse to the Earl of Jersey (1796). His Works of Gray were published in 1814.

Mathieu (mȧ.tyė), Émile Louis Victor. b. at Lille, France, Oct. 16, 1844; d. at Ghent, Belgium, Aug. 22, 1932. Belgian composer. Among his operas and comic operas are Georges Dandin (1876), La Bernoise (1880), Richilde (1888), and L'Enfance de Roland (1895). His compositions also include the ballet Les Fumeurs de Kiff (1876), music to Victor Séjour's Cromwell (1874), the symphonic poem Le Lac, choruses, cantatas, concertos for piano and violin, and French and Flemish songs.

Mathiez (mȧ.tyā), Albert. b. at La Bruyère, Haute-Saône, France, Jan. 10, 1874; d. at Paris, Feb. 26, 1932. French historian. A pupil of F. A. Aulard, with whom he later had a violent disagreement over historical interpretation, he was in his day considered the foremost student of the French Revolution. He taught at the universities of Nancy, Besançon, and Dijon, and at the time of his death held a post at the Sorbonne. He was the founder and editor (1924 et seq.) of the Annales de la Révolution française. In his writings he identified himself with the Jacobin point of view and regarded Robespierre as the leading statesman of the French Revolution. Among his works are La Théophilanthropie et le culte décadaire 1796–1801 (1904), La Révolution et les étrangers (1918), La Révolution française (3 vols., 1922–27; Eng. trans., 1928), and La Réaction thermidorienne (1929; Eng. trans., After Robespierre: the Thermidorian Reaction, 1931).

Mathilde di Shabran (mä.tēl'dā dē shä.brän'). Opera by Gioacchino Rossini, first performed at the Apollo Theater, Rome, in 1821.

Mathis (math'is). City in S Texas, in San Patricio County, near the Nueces River, ab. 35 mi. NW of Corpus Christi. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population more than doubled. 1,950 (1940), 4,050 (1950).

Mathura (mu'tū.rą). Official name of Muttra.

Matianus (mat.i.ā'nus), Lacus. An ancient name of Urmia, Lake.

Matilda (mą.til'dą). [Also: Matilda of Tuscany; called "the Great Countess."] b. c1046; d. near Modena, July 24, 1115. Countess of Tuscany, and ruler also of a large part of northern Italy. She inherited, at the age of nine, Tuscany, Spoleto, Parma, Brescia, Modena, Reggio, Mantua, Ferrara, and Cremona; her estate was thus by far the greatest in Italy and for many years she wielded comparable power. The emperors of the Holy Roman Empire incurred her enmity and thereafter she supported the papal power against the emperors, especially in the then vital dispute over investiture. It was at her estate at Canossa that Henry IV did penance (January, 1077) in the snow for his presumption in declaring Pope Gregory VII deposed, and she later incited Henry's son Conrad to revolt against him. Her will (1077, renewed 1102) left her lands to the Holy See, and though evidence exists that she changed her will in favor of the emperor Henry V, eventually, and after a long struggle, most of the lands, excepting the cities which became independent, accrued to the papal state. Matilda married twice, both times for political reasons: first to Godfrey V of Lorraine, who died in 1076, and then (1089) to Welf V of Bavaria, son of Henry IV's chief enemy. She was noted for her patronage of letters and collected a large library.

Matilda or Maud. b. 1080; d. at Westminster, May 1, 1118. Queen of England; first wife of Henry I of England, and daughter of Malcolm III, King of Scotland, and St. Margaret. She was baptized Eadgyth (Edith), but was always known as Matilda or Maud. Malcolm III and Margaret died in 1093, and Matilda was sheltered in England by her uncle Edgar Aetheling. On Nov. 11, 1100, she was married to Henry I at Westminster Abbey by Anselm, Archbishop of Canterbury. She founded the first Austin priory in England in 1108.

Matilda or Maud or Mold, Empress. [Also: Æthelic, Aaliz; known as "the Lady of England."] b. at London, 1102; d. at Notre Dame des Prés, near Rouen, Sept. 10, 1167. Queen of England and Holy Roman empress; daughter of Henry I of England and his first wife Matilda. She married the German king Henry V at Mainz Jan. 7, 1114, and may have been with him when he was crowned at Rome in 1111. When Henry V died (1125) she returned to Normandy, and in 1126 to England. On June 17, 1128, she married Geoffrey Plantagenet, son of Fulk V, Count of Anjou. Their first child (later Henry II of England) was born March 5, 1133. On the death of Henry I (Dec. 1, 1135) her cousin Stephen assumed the crown. On Sept. 30, 1139, with Robert, Earl of Gloucester, her half-brother, she invaded England, captured Stephen (February, 1141), was acknowledged Lady (or Queen) of England and Normandy (April 8, 1141), and established herself at Westminster. She misused her power, was driven from the city, and fled to Oxford. She returned to Normandy in 1148, ceding her claims in England and Normandy to her son. After the accession of her son Henry Plantagenet, she settled at Notre Dame des Prés, near Rouen, where she died. Her most noted exploit was her escape from Oxford with three of her knights at Christmas time. They clothed themselves in white and fled over the frozen river and through Stephen's camp.

Matilda. [Title, Duchess of Saxony.] b. 1156; d. at Brunswick, Germany, June 28, 1189. Third child and eldest daughter of Henry II of England and Eleanor of Aquitaine. On Feb. 1, 1168, she married Henry the Lion, Duke of Saxony and cousin of Frederick Barbarossa.

Matilda of Boulogne (bö.loin', -lōn'). b. c1103; d. at Hedingham Castle, May 3, 1152. Queen of Stephen, King of England. She was the only child of Eustace III, count of Boulogne, and Mary, daughter of Malcolm III of Scotland and St. Margaret. Before 1125 she married Stephen de Blois, nephew of Henry I of England, who seized the English crown in 1135. In the civil war which followed the Empress Matilda's invasion, she took the field in person, and, after Stephen's imprisonment, with her general William of Ypres and the aid of the citizens, drove the empress from London.

Matilda of Flanders (flan'dėrz). d. in Normandy, Nov. 3, 1083. Queen of William the Conqueror and daughter of Baldwin V, count of Flanders. She married (c1053) William, and was crowned at Westminster May 11, 1067.

Matilda Price (prīs). See Price, Matilda.

Matin (mȧ.tañ), Le. Paris daily newspaper, founded in 1884. It was owned by Maurice and Philippe Bunau-Varilla. It was considered the semiofficial organ of the government, particularly of the war ministry. Its circulation (c1937) was ab. 500,000. It was published under the German occupation (1940–44) and ceased publication after the liberation (1944) of France.

Matisco (mą.tis'kō). A Latin name of Mâcon.

Matisse (mȧ.tēs), Henri. b. at Cateau-Cambrésis, France, Dec. 31, 1869—. French figure and landscape painter, founder of the fauve movement, and one of the most influential artists in France of this century. He went to Paris in 1890 to complete his law studies, but in 1893 went to the École des Beaux-Arts, where he studied under Bouguereau, Ferrier, and G. Moreau. He was a fellow student of G. Rouault, A. Marquet, and C. Camoin; later he studied at the Carrière Studio, where he met A.

Derain and, through Derain, M. de Vlaminck. In 1905, at the Salon d'Automne, the fauve works created a sensation. Matisse was influenced by Seurat, Gauguin, Van Gogh, and Cézanne, but by 1906, with the Joie de Vivre, he had developed his own style, utterly simple, brilliantly colored, and stressing the importance of rhythm and decorative design. Later Matisse was influenced by cubism, but for a short period only. He traveled to Morocco (1911–12) then returned to Paris. In 1917 he settled at Nice, and has lived in the south of France since then. His work has been exhibited all over the world and is included in most of the important collections of modern art. Among his best-known works are Joie de Vivre, The Dance, Music, Dessert, Zorra on the Terrace, Piano Lesson, Red Fish and People, Bathing Girls, Young Sailor with a Cap, Still Life with Oranges, Still Life with Pineapple, The Three Sisters, Window at Nice, Yellow Corsage, Odalisque, Cap d'Antibes Road, Recumbent Nude from Back, Decorative Figure on Flowery Background, Anemones and Woman, Harmony in Blue, Conversation, Red Studio, Spanish Girl with White Dress, illustrations for many books, and the essay A Painter's Notes.

Matlatzinca (mät.lät.sēng'kä). Indian tribe in W central Mexico which was conquered and incorporated into the Aztec state in the 16th century, shortly before the Spanish conquest.

Matlatzinca. Language of the Matlatzinca tribe, and a member of the Otomian language family.

Matlock (mat'lok). [Also, The Matlocks.] Urban district and spa in C England, in Derbyshire, on the river Derwent ab. 15 mi. N of Derby, ab. 146 mi. NW of London by rail. Within the district are the towns of Matlock and Matlock Bath (noted for hot springs), and the village of Cromford. There is a textile industry. 17,770 (1951).

Mato Grosso (mat'o͝o grō'sō; Portuguese, mä'tö grō'sō). [Also, Matto Grosso.] State in W Brazil, bordering Bolivia. Capital, Cuiabá; area, ab. 487,481 sq. mi.; pop. 528,451 (1950).

Matos (mä'tös), Gregório de. [Full name, Gregório de Matos Guerra.] b. at Cidade do Salvador, Brazil, April 7, 1623; d. in Pernambuco, Brazil, Oct. 19, 1696. Brazilian lyric and satirical poet, whose wicked tongue earned him the nickname of "Boca do Inferno" (Devil's Mouthpiece). He was a nationalist, and has been a subject of much controversy among literary critics. His poems did not appear in book form until 1882. The publication of his complete works was undertaken (1923–33) by the Brazilian Academy of Letters.

Matos, José Veríssimo Dias de. See Veríssimo, José.

Matozinhos (mä.tö.zē'nyösh). [Also, Matosinhos.] Town and concelho (commune) in NW Portugal, in the province of Douro Litoral, district of Pôrto, situated on the Atlantic Ocean N of the mouth of the Douro River. A suburb of Oporto, it has a number of industries, and is a fishing port, and a seaside resort. Pop. of concelho, 63,234 (1940); of town, 21,024 (1940).

Matralia (mą.trā'li.ą). See under Matuta.

Matriarch, The. Novel by G. B. Stern, published in 1925. It was issued in England under the title Tents of Israel (1924). The work is the first volume of her trilogy on Jewish life, The Rokonitz Chronicles (1932). The Matriarch was dramatized in 1931.

Matrimonio segreto (mä.trē.mô'nyō sā.grā'tō), Il. [English title, The Secret Marriage; French title, Le Mariage secret.] Opera buffa in two acts by Domenico Cimarosa, first produced at Vienna on Feb. 7, 1792. The libretto, by Giovanni Bertati, was adapted from The Clandestine Marriage (1766), a play by George Colman the elder.

Matris (mä'tris). In Hindu theology, the mother goddesses or female counterparts of the chief gods of the Hindu pantheon. These female counterparts are also called shaktis. They represent the consort of each god, and his creative, activating energy.

Matrona (mat'rō.nạ). Latin name of the Marne.

Matsang (mä'tsäng'). A name of the Brahmaputra in Tibet.

Matshangana (mät.shäng.gä'nä). See Shangana.

Matsudaira (mą.tsō.di.ra). Tsuneo. b. at Tokyo, in April, 1877; d. there, Nov. 14, 1949. Japanese diplomat; father-in-law of Prince Chichibu (brother of Hirohito). He served as high commissioner in Siberia (1918–19), director of the bureau for European and American affairs at the foreign office (1920), chief secretary of the Japanese delegation to the Washington Conference (1922), and ambassador to Washington (1925–28) and London (1928–36).

Matsue (mä.tsö.ye). City in SW Honshu, Japan, near the N coast. It is a commercial town and has a fishing port. 74,018 (1950).

Matsui (mä.tsö.ē), Baron Keishiro. b. at Osaka, Japan, March 5, 1868; d. June 4, 1946. Japanese diplomat. He was vice-minister of foreign affairs (1913), ambassador to France (1915–22), foreign minister (1924), and ambassador to Britain and France. He served as unofficial envoy to Germany to present Japan's side of the war against China (1937).

Matsukata (mä.tsö.kä.tä), Prince Masayoshi. b. at Kagoshima, Japan, 1835; d. at Tokyo, July 2, 1924. Japanese statesman, remembered chiefly for his financial ability in combating inflation during the 1880's and in financing the Sino-Japanese War (1894–95) and its aftermath. He was also instrumental in the establishment of the Bank of Japan and the establishment of the gold standard in Japanese currency. He served as prime minister (1891–92 and 1896–98) and was concurrently finance minister; finance minister (1898–1900), and keeper of the privy seal (1917–22).

Matsumae (mä.tsö.mī). [Also: Matsumai, Matsumaye (mä.tsö.mä.ye); former name, Fukuyama.] Town in Japan, at the SW extremity of Hokkaido, ab. 40 mi. SW of Hakodate. 67,083 (1950).

Matsumoto (mä.tsö.mō.tō). City in W central Honshu, Japan, in a mountain valley ab. 95 mi. NE of Nagoya: silk production and tourist center for the mountains. 86,005 (1950).

Matsuoka (mä.tsö.ô.kä), Yosuke. b. in Yamaguchi prefecture, Japan, March 3, 1880; d. at Tokyo, June 27, 1946. Japanese diplomat who led the Japanese withdrawal (1933) from the League of Nations, where he had served as chief Japanese delegate from 1932. After a career of diplomatic service at different capitals of the world he served (1921–26) as director of the South Manchurian Railway Company, and later (1935–39) as its president. He was also known as the instigator of the movement (1933 et seq.) to abolish political parties and thus parliamentary government. As foreign minister (1940) he concluded the Tripartite (Axis) Pact with Germany and Italy. After World War II he was indicted (April 29, 1946) as a war criminal, but died before his trial.

Matsushima (mä.tsö.shē.mä). Town in NE Honshu, Japan, on the E coast NE of Sendai: tourist center for a scenic region of pine-covered islands in the adjacent bay.

Matsuyama (mä.tsö.yä.mä). City in NW Shikoku, Japan, near the Inland Sea: lumber, paper, and textile industries. 163,859 (1950).

Matsya Avatara (mät'syą ä.vä'tä.rą). First incarnation of Vishnu; the fish incarnation. He took the form of a fish to save primeval man from the universal deluge. The fish warned him of the deluge and commanded him to build a ship and go on board with the seeds of all existing things. When the flood came, Vishnu appeared as a vast fish with a horn on its head, to which the ship's rope was fastened. The ship was thus drawn along and secured to a tree above Mount Himalaya till the flood passed.

Matsys (mät.sīs'), Quentin (or Quintin). See Massys or Matsys or Metsys, Quentin (or Quintin).

Matta (mä'tä), Guillermo. b. at Copiapó, Chile, 1829; d. 1899. Chilean politician and author of popular lyrics.

Mattagami (mat.ą.gam'i). River in NE Ontario, Canada, flowing generally N to join the Missinaibi, forming the Moose River. Length, ab. 275 mi.

Mattagami, Lake. Lake in W Quebec, Canada, draining by the Nottaway River into James Bay. Area, ab. 88 sq. mi.

Mattaniah (mat.ą.nī'a). Original name of Zedekiah.

Mattathias (mat.a thī'as). [Called "the Hasmonean."] d. c160 B.C. Father of the Maccabees. A priest at Modin, near Lydda, he opposed the paganizing decrees of Antiochus IV of Syria. When one of his parishioners joined in a sacrifice offered by the pagans, Mattathias killed him and soon afterwards slew Bacchides, governor of the area. In open revolt, he and his sons fled to the mountains.

where they were joined by many other rebels against the rule of Antiochus.

Matteawan (mat'ą.won). See under Beacon.

Matteotti (mät.tā.ôt'tē), Giacomo. b. at Fratta Polesine, Italy, May 22, 1885; d. at Rome, June 10, 1924. Italian socialist and politician. He served in the legislature and became (1924) general secretary of the Socialist Party in Italy. After reading (May 30, 1924) an uncompromising denunciation of Fascism in the chamber of deputies, he was attacked and killed (June 10, 1924) by five men. Although it was widely believed that Mussolini had instigated the killing, only hired killers were brought to trial, and the sentences issued by the court were so light as actually to indicate a degree of government acquiescence in the crime; a retrial in 1947 succeeded in convicting some of the lesser accomplices of the crime to 30 years' imprisonment. The parliamentary crisis that ensued seemed to weaken the Fascists for a time but eventually resulted in a consolidation of Mussolini's position.

Matter (mȧ.ter), Jacques. b. in Alsace, May 31, 1791; d. at Strasbourg, June 23, 1864. French historian and philosopher. His works include Histoire critique du gnosticisme (1828), Histoire universelle de l'église chrétienne (1828–35), and Histoire de la philosophie dans ses rapports avec la religion (1854).

Matterhorn (mat'ėr.hôrn). [French, Mont Cervin; Italian, Monte Cervino.] Peak of the Pennine Alps, situated on the border between Valais, Switzerland, and Piedmont, Italy, W of Monte Rosa. It is a lofty jagged peak noted for its steepness, and has been the goal of many mountain climbers. It was first ascended in 1865 by Edward Whymper's party, four of whom died in the descent. Elevation, ab. 14,780 ft.

Matterjoch (mät'ėr.yoċh). [Also, Théodule Pass.] Pass over the Alps, leading from Zermatt in Switzerland to Val Tournanche in Italy. Elevation, ab. 10,900 ft.

Matteucci (mät.tā.öt'chē), Carlo. b. at Forlì, Italy, June 20, 1811; d. at Leghorn, Italy, June 25, 1868. Italian physicist and politician. In 1860 he became superintendent of the Italian telegraph system, and later also of the meteorological bureau. For a short time in 1862 he was minister of public instruction under Urbano Rattazzi. He is best known for his works on electricity.

Matteucci, Vittorio Raffaello. b. at Sinigaglia, Ancona, Italy, 1866; d. July 16, 1909. Italian geologist, instructor in geology at the University of Naples and physical and meteorological director of the Royal Observatory on Mount Vesuvius. He remained at his post in the observatory during the eruption of the volcano in April, 1906.

Matthes (mät'ęs), Joseph. b. at Würzburg, Germany, Feb. 10, 1886—. German separatist politician.

Mattheson (mät'ę.zōn), Johann. b. at Hamburg, Sept. 28, 1681; d. there, April 17, 1764. German composer and writer on music. His 88 published compositions include eight operas, 24 oratorios and cantatas, a mass, and works for clavichord, flute, and violin. He wrote a biography of Handel (1761) and numerous critical studies of orchestration, choral singing, and the like.

Matthew (math'ū), Saint. [Sometimes called Levi.] In the New Testament, one of the apostles and, according to tradition, the author of the gospel, the first in the canon, which bears his name. He is described as a tax collector. In Mark and Luke he is called Levi. According to the earlier legends he labored as a missionary on the shores of the Black Sea; according to others, in Ethiopia. In the latter country he was said to have suffered martyrdom, but he was also asserted to have died a natural death.

Matthew, Gospel of. First gospel, attributed by tradition to the apostle Matthew, and written some time before 100 A.D. It is one of the synoptic gospels.

Matthew, Master. In Ben Jonson's comedy Every Man in His Humour, "a town-bred gull," half fool, half coxcomb, vain of his own poetry, his affairs with women, and his association with those above him in rank.

Matthew, Sir Tobie (or Tobias). b. at Salisbury, England, Oct. 3, 1577; d. at the English College, Ghent, Belgium, Oct. 13, 1655. English diplomat and man of letters; son of Tobias Matthew, archbishop of York (1606–28). He became a member of Parliament in 1601. In 1604 he visited Italy, and he entered the Roman Catholic Church in March, 1606. He was imprisoned in the Fleet Prison for his religion until Feb. 7, 1608. He was ordained a priest at Rome in 1614, and remained in Italy until 1617. He was banished from January, 1619, to December, 1621. He joined the mission of Prince Charles (later Charles I) and the 1st Duke of Buckingham (George Villiers) at Madrid in 1623. Accused of being a Jesuit spy, he was exiled (1640) by Parliament and lived the rest of his life at Ghent. He was a friend of Sir Francis Bacon, who wrote the essay Of Friendship for him.

Matthew Bramble (bram'bl). See Bramble, Matthew.

Matthew Merrygreek or Merigreek (mer'i.grēk). See Merrygreek, Matthew.

Matthew Mite (mīt), Sir. See Mite, Sir Matthew.

Matthew Mug (mug). See Mug, Matthew.

Matthew Paris (par'is). See Paris, Matthew.

Matthews (math'ūz), Brander. [Full name, James Brander Matthews.] b. at New Orleans, La., Feb. 21, 1852; d. March 31, 1929. American writer. He served as professor of literature (1892–1900) and as professor of dramatic literature (1900–24) at Columbia University, the first to hold such a post at an American university. Author of French Dramatists of the 19th Century (1881), Pen and Ink (1888), Americanisms and Briticisms (1892), Studies of the Stage (1894), Vignettes of Manhattan (1894), Bookbindings Old and New (1895), Introduction to the Study of American Literature (1896), Aspects of Fiction (1896), Action and the Word (1900), Parts of Speech (1901), The Historical Novel and Other Essays (1901), Development of the Drama (1903), Recreations of an Anthologist (1904), Inquiries and Opinions (1907), The Short Story (1908), Molière (1910), Vistas of New York (1912), Shakespeare as a Playwright (1913), A Book about the Theater (1916), These Many Years (1917), Principles of Playmaking (1919), and Rip Van Winkle Goes to the Play (1926). He was coeditor (with Laurence Hutton) of Actors and Actresses of Great Britain and the United States (5 vols., 1886).

Matthews, Edmund Orville. b. at Baltimore, Oct. 24, 1836; d. Jan. 30, 1911. American naval officer.

Matthews, Francis Patrick. b. at Albion, Neb., March 15, 1887; d. at Omaha, Neb., Oct. 18, 1952. American administrator. He served (1933–49) as counsel for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in Nebraska and Wyoming. Matthews, one of the leading Roman Catholic laymen in the U.S., served with a number of philanthropic and social service organizations while acting as an executive for banking and securities interests; he was one of the incorporators of the United Service Organizations and served with the National War Fund during World War II. He became secretary of the navy in 1949 in the Department of Defense; the ouster (1950) of Admiral Louis Denfeld, then chief of naval operations, over Denfeld's criticism of procedures in the unification of the armed services, made Matthews a storm center of public opinion for a time, and he was criticized by the armed services committee of the House of Representatives for his part in the affair. In 1951 he became U.S. ambassador to Ireland; he served in that post until his death.

Matthews, Franklin. b. at St. Joseph, Mich., May 14, 1858; d. Nov. 26, 1917. American journalist.

Matthews, Henry. [Title, Viscount Llandaff.] b. in Ceylon, India, Jan. 13, 1826; d. at London, April 3, 1913. English politician and lawyer. He was a Conservative member of Parliament (1868–74, 1886, 1892–95). Appointed (1886) home secretary, he was the first Roman Catholic to become a cabinet minister since the passing of the Emancipation Act.

Matthews, James Brander. See Matthews, Brander.

Matthews, Paul. b. at Glendale, Ohio, Dec. 25, 1866—. American Protestant clergyman.

Matthews, (Thomas) Stanley. b. at Cincinnati, Ohio, July 21, 1824; d. at Washington, D.C., March 22, 1889. American jurist. He was elected (1863) a judge of the superior court of Cincinnati, was named (1877) to the Senate, and was appointed associate justice (1881–89) of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Matthews, Washington. b. at Killiney, County Dublin, Ireland, July 17, 1843; d. at Washington, D.C., April 29, 1905. American ethnologist. The results of his studies while serving as army physician in the West are published in Grammar and Dictionary of the Hidatsa (Minnetarees, Grosventres of the Missouri) (1873), Hidatsa (Minnetaree) English Dictionary (1874), Ethnography and Philology of the Hidatsa Indians (1877), articles on the Navaho Indians in the annual reports of the Bureau of American Ethnology, "The Night Chant," published in the Memoirs of the American Museum of Natural History (1902), "Human Bones of the Hemenway Collection in the United States Army Medical Museum," a paper on physical anthropology published in Memoirs of the National Academy of Science (1893), and Navaho Legends (1897).

Matthews, William. b. at Aberdeen, Scotland, March 29, 1822; d. at Brooklyn, N.Y., April 15, 1896. American bookbinder. He was connected (1854–90) with the bindery of D. Appleton and Company. He was the author of Modern Bookbinding Practically Considered (1889) and A Short Historical Sketch of the Art of Bookbinding (1895, with W. L. Andrews).

Matthew's Bible (math'ūz). Folio Bible, published in 1537, which professed to be translated into English by Thomas Matthew, a pseudonym of John Rogers.

Matthias (mą.thī'ąs). In the Bible, the apostle chosen to fill the place of Judas Iscariot. Acts, i. 26.

Matthias (mą.thī'ąs; German, mä.tē'äs). b. at Vienna, Feb. 24, 1557; d. there, March 20, 1619. Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire (1612–19); younger son of Maximilian II. He was recognized (1606) as head of the Hapsburgs and as heir to the empire, his brother the Emperor Rudolf II being recognized as an incompetent ruler. He intrigued against Rudolf, whom he displaced as ruler in Hungary, Moravia, Silesia, Lusatia, and Bohemia in the period 1608–11. He was elected emperor on the death of his brother in 1612. Being childless, he secured the succession in Bohemia and Hungary for his cousin Ferdinand, Duke of Styria (afterward Emperor Ferdinand II), in 1617 and 1618, respectively. The revolt beginning in 1618 in Bohemia (Prague), which he had done nothing to forestall, was the start of the Thirty Years' War.

Matthias at the Door (mą.thī'ąs). Narrative in blank verse by Edwin Arlington Robinson, published in 1931.

Matthias Corvinus (kôr.vī'nus). [Also, Matthias I (of Hungary), Matthias I Hunyadi (hün'yo.dē); Hungarian, Mátyás Hollós (mä'tyäsh hōl'lōsh).] b. at Cluj, Transylvania (now in Rumania), cFeb. 23, 1440; d. at Vienna, April 4, 1490. King of Hungary (1458–90); younger son of John Hunyadi. He was elected king on the death of Ladislas III of Poland, who had ruled in Hungary as Ladislas V. The opposition of some of the nobles to Matthias's election led to their crowning the Emperor Frederick III king of Hungary in March, 1459, but Matthias forced the emperor to give up his claim and recognize him as king (1462). He had married (1458) the daughter of the king of Bohemia, George of Poděbrad (the first of three marriages), and, after a successful campaign against the Turks (1462–68), joined the Catholic League against his father-in-law. He fought (1468–78) against the Bohemians, winning Moravia, Silesia, and Lusatia at the peace of Olomouc in return for giving up his claim, resulting from his coronation as king of Bohemia in 1469, to the Bohemian crown. The Bohemian war had brought in its train wars (1477, 1479) against the Emperor Frederick III, and in 1482 Matthias again declared war on the emperor. He captured (1485) Vienna, thenceforth his capital, and took Styria, Carinthia, and Carniola; the holdings he then had, combined with his alliances with Bavaria, Saxony, the Swiss, and the powerful Archbishop of Salzburg, made him the greatest ruler in central Europe. He established a strong central state with a powerful standing army, which was supported by a severe and well-administered tax program. He made his court a center of learning and established one of the great libraries of the times (Bibliotheca Corvina) at Buda.

Matthiesen (math'i.sęn), Augustus. b. at London, Jan. 2, 1831; committed suicide Oct. 6, 1870. English chemist and physicist. He was the first to isolate calcium and strontium in the pure state, and made valuable investigations on the physical properties of metals and alloys.

Matthiessen (math'i.sęn), Francis Otto. b. at Pasadena, Calif., Feb. 19, 1902; d. at Boston, April 1, 1950. American biographer and critic. He taught at Yale (1927–29) and at Harvard, where he was professor of history and literature from 1942. Author of Sarah Orne Jewett (1929), Translation: an Elizabethan Art (1931), The Achievement of T. S. Eliot (1935; revised 1947), American Renaissance: Art and Expression in the Age of Emerson and Whitman (1941), Henry James: The Major Phase (1944), The James Family (1947), and others.

Matthison (math'i.sọn), Edith Wynne. b. at Birmingham, England. English actress. In 1897 she joined Ben Greet's company. She appeared in many Shakespearian roles and old English comedy parts, and in the morality play Everyman in both England and America. She also appeared at New York in Charles Rann Kennedy's The Servant in the House and The Winterfeast, and (as a member of the New Theatre repertory company) in Maeterlinck's Sister Beatrice and The Blue Bird, Josephine Preston Peabody's The Piper, and others. She married (1898) Charles Rann Kennedy.

Matthisson (mät'i.sọn), Friedrich von. b. at Hohendodeleben, near Magdeburg, Germany, Jan. 23, 1761; d. at Wörlitz, near Dessau, Germany, March 12, 1831. German lyric poet with a tendency toward the melancholic, particularly in his nature descriptions (Gedichte, 1825). His poem Adelaide was set to music by Beethoven.

Mattiaci (ma.tī'ą.sī). Ancient Germanic tribe, a branch of the Chatti (first mentioned by Pliny), in the Taunus region, southward to the Main River, near the present Wiesbaden (called by the Romans Aquae Mattiacae). The Mattiaci are mentioned by Tacitus as being a people of keen spirit, but "dutiful to Rome."

Mattison (mat'i.sọn), Hiram. b. at Norway, Herkimer County, N.Y., Feb. 8, 1811; d. at Jersey City, N.J., Nov. 24, 1868. American Methodist Episcopal clergyman and abolitionist agitator. He established St. John's Independent Methodist Church at New York in protest against the proslavery sentiments of the General Conference, and was assigned (1865) to a pastorate at Jersey City after reconciliation with the church.

Mattocks (mat'ọks), Isabella. [Maiden name, Hallam.] b. 1746; d. at Kensington, London, June 25, 1826. English actress. She was the chief support of Covent Garden Theatre until her retirement in 1808.

Matto de Turner (mä'tō dā tör'ner), Clorinda. b. 1854; d. 1909. Peruvian novelist. Her Aves sin nido (1889) helped begin the regional trend in her country's literature.

Matto Grosso (mat'ọ grō'sō; Portuguese, mä'tö grō'sö). See Mato Grosso.

Mattoon (ma.tön'). City in E Illinois, in Coles County, ab. 73 mi. SE of Springfield: manufactures of shoes, furniture, and Diesel engines. 17,547 (1950).

Mattos (mät'tös), Raymundo José da Cunha. See Cunha Mattos, Raymundo José da.

Mattson (mat'sọn), Henry Elis. b. at Göteborg, Sweden, Aug. 7, 1887—. American painter. He studied at the Worcester Art Museum, then returned to Sweden to study for a short time. His paintings hang in permanent collections in the Metropolitan Museum, the Whitney Museum, and the Museum of Modern Art (New York). Some of his better-known paintings are Wild Flowers, Waterfall, Self-Portrait, Head of a Boy, Landscape, Flowers, and Wings of Morning.

Maturín (mä.tö.rēn'). City in NE Venezuela, capital of Monagas state, in a petroleum region. 25,350 (1950).

Maturin (mą.tū'rin), Charles Robert. b. at Dublin, 1782; d. there, Oct. 30, 1824. Irish author, especially of Gothic novels. He graduated at Trinity College, Dublin, in 1800, and became curate of Saint Peter's, Dublin. He published The Fatal Revenge, or the Family of Montorio (1807), The Wild Irish Boy (1808), and The Milesian Chief (1812), which attracted the attention of Sir Walter Scott. His tragedy Bertram was brought out by Kean at Drury Lane Theatre, London, May 9, 1816. He also wrote the tragedies Manuel (1817) and Fredolfo (1817). His best novel, Melmoth the Wanderer, appeared in 1820 and is said to have influenced the romantic school in France, especially Honoré de Balzac, who wrote a sequel to it.

Matuta (ma.tū'ta). [Also, Mater Matuta.] In Roman mythology, a goddess of birth, associated with Janus. She has been interpreted also as an old goddess of dawn, but no mythology supports this. She became identified with the Greek Leucothea, and all attributes apart from her birth-goddess function and cult are probably transfers from the Leucothea myths. Her festival, the Matralia, was celebrated on June 11 by Roman matrons.

Matz (mäts), Battle of. [Also, Battle of Lassigny.] Main battle of the fourth German drive in 1918 on the Western Front, in World War I. It was an effort by the German general Ludendorff to unite the two advances suddenly achieved beyond Soissons and Noyon in the German spring offensive of 1918. The goal of the offensive was the town of Compiègne and the railroad running to Cologne. Attacking on a 20-mile front with 13 divisions the Germans were, however, held to gains of less than six miles and failed of their objectives. The attack, lasting from June 9 to June 14, was halted by tank and gas counterattacks.

Matzenauer (mät'se.nou.ėr), Margarete. b. at Temesvár, Hungary (now Timişoara, Rumania), June 1, 1881—. Hungarian operatic mezzo-soprano. She joined (1911) the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, first appearing there as Amneris. Among her roles were Carmen, Brunnhilde, Isolde, Herodias, Donna Elvira, Mignon, Aïda, Ortrud, and La Gioconda.

Mätzner (mets'nėr), Eduard Adolf Ferdinand. b. at Rostock, Germany, May 25, 1805; d. at Berlin, July 14, 1892. German philologist. He published Altenglische Sprachproben (1867 et seq.), Altenglisches Wörterbuch (1872 et seq.), Englische Grammatik (3rd ed., 1880–85), and works on Romance philology.

Mau (mou), August. b. at Kiel, Germany, Oct. 15, 1840; d. at Rome, March 6, 1909. German archaeologist, who served (1873 et seq.) as assistant at the German archaeological institute at Rome. Author of Pompejanische Beiträge (Pompeian Contributions, 1879), and Pompeji in Leben und Kunst (Pompeii's Life and Art, 1900).

Maubeuge (mō.bėzh). [Latin, Malbodium.] Town in N France, in the department of Nord, situated on the Sambre River, near the Belgian frontier, ab. 22 mi. SE of Valenciennes. The town has ceramics manufactures; it was long known as a fortress, particularly after the imposing fortifications of 1685 were erected by Vauban. It was unsuccessfully besieged in 1793, but was taken in 1815 and in 1914. The town suffered considerable damage in World War II. 20,859 (1946).

Mauch Chunk (môk' chungk'). Borough in E Pennsylvania, county seat of Carbon County, on the Lehigh River ab. 74 mi. NW of Philadelphia: anthracite coal mining. It was settled in 1815. Pop. 2,959 (1950).

Mauclair (mō.klėr), Camille. [Original name, Camille Faust.] b. at Paris, 1872; d. 1945. French poet and critic, associated with the symbolist group. Author of numerous studies of writers and painters, including Charles Baudelaire, sa vie, son art, sa légende (1918).

Maud (môd). Poem by Alfred Tennyson, published in 1855.

Maud. See Matilda (1080–1118).

Maud. See Matilda (1102–1167).

Maude (môd), Aylmer. b. March 28, 1858; d. near Chelmsford, England, Aug. 25, 1938. English author. He was educated at Christ's Hospital, London, and at the Lyceum in Moscow, Russia, where he lived until 1897, being occupied chiefly with business interests. In 1898 he aided in arranging the Doukhobor emigration to Canada. He was a personal friend of Count Leo Tolstoy (1828–1910), several of whose works Maude and his wife Louise translated into English. He published Tolstoy and His Problems (1901), A Peculiar People: the Doukhobors (1905), Life of Tolstoy (1908–10), and others.

Maude, Cyril. b. at London, April 24, 1862; d. at Torquay, Devonshire, England, Feb. 20, 1951. English actor-manager. He was joint manager (1896–1905) of the Haymarket Theatre at London, and manager (until 1915) of The Playhouse, which he built. He made his stage debut in the U.S. in 1883 and appeared in many roles on the stage and, after 1913, in motion pictures.

Maudits (mō.dē), Monts-. French name of Maladetta.

Maud Muller (môd mul'ėr). Short poem by John Greenleaf Whittier, originally published in 1854 and included in The Panorama and Other Poems (1856).

Maudsley (môdz'li), Henry. b. at Rome, near Settle, Yorkshire, England, Feb. 5, 1835; d. Jan. 23, 1918. English physiologist. His chief works are The Physiology and Pathology of the Mind (1867), Body and Mind (1870), Responsibility in Mental Disease (1874), The Physiology of Mind (1876), The Pathology of Mind (1879), Body and Will (1883), Natural Causes and Supernatural Seemings (1886), Life in Mind and Conduct (1902), and Heredity, Variation and Genius (1908).

Mauer (mou'ėr). Town in E Austria, in the province of Vienna, SW of the center of Vienna, between that city and Mödling, on the Südbahn railroad line. It is a garden city and has a large sanitarium. 6,028 (1946).

Mauer. German name of Mamry.

Maues (mou'āz). [Also, Mauhes.] Group of South American Indians of the lower Tapajoz and Amazon region. Their language, Maue, belongs to the Tapajoz division of the Southern Amazon branch of the Tupí group of the Tupí-Guaraní family of languages. Maue contains a number of non-Tupí elements, which, however, are not identifiable within any other linguistic stock.

Maugham (môm), W. Somerset. [Full name, William Somerset Maugham.] b. Jan. 25, 1874—. English novelist, short-story writer, dramatist, and essayist. He was left an orphan at the age of ten and raised by a childless uncle, who was vicar of Whitstable, in Kent. He attended King's School, Canterbury, spent a year at Heidelberg University, and trained as a physician at St Thomas's Hospital, London, but did not practice medicine. During World War I he served in the Red Cross and later in British Intelligence. He has traveled extensively, particularly in the East. He is famous principally for his novel Of Human Bondage (1915), considered by many a classic of the 20th century. Among his other novels are The Making of a Saint (1898), The Merry-Go-Round (1904), The Moon and Sixpence (1919), Cakes and Ale (1930), and The Razor's Edge (1944). Representative volumes of his short stories (most of which were written after 1920) are The Trembling of a Leaf (1921), including "Miss Thompson," later dramatized as Rain (1922), The Casuarina Tree (1926), and First Person Singular (1931). His themes both in novels and short stories are the unpredictability of human behavior and the enslavement of man by his passions. Maugham's plays, entertaining and amusing, but sometimes bitter, are generally of lighter stuff than his narrative fiction. Among them are A Man of Honour (1903), Lady Frederick (1907), Penelope (1909), Smith (1909), Home and Beauty (1919), The Circle (1921), Our Betters (1923), The Letter (1927), originally a short story, The Sacred Flame (1929), and For Services Rendered (1932). His most important nonfiction works are probably The Gentleman in the Parlour (1930), a travel book, and The Summing Up (1938), an autobiography. A Writer's Notebook (1949) contains excerpts from his journals.

Mauhes (mou'āz). See Maues.

Maui (mou'ē). [Former spelling, Mowee.] Second in size of the Hawaiian Islands, ab. 25 mi. NW of Hawaii. It contains one of the largest (extinct) craters in the world, on Mount Haleakala. Chief town, Lahaina; length, ab. 48 mi.; width, ab. 26 mi.; area, ab. 728 sq. mi.; pop. 46,919 (1940).

Maui. Demigod, culture hero, and trickster in the richest cycle of Polynesian myths, traces of which extend into other areas. The brothers of Maui range in number from three in some versions to eight in others, but the commonest number is five. Mauri is always the youngest; he outwits his brothers and performs great exploits. Among these are raising the sky, snaring the sun, stealing fire for mankind, and fishing up various Polynesian islands out of the sea. New Zealand, for instance, is called the Fish of Maui. In some versions, Maui dies in attempting to win immortality for man.

Maul (môl). Giant in John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress.

Maulbronn (moul'bron). Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Württemberg-Baden, American Zone, formerly in the free state of Württemberg, ab. 23 mi. NW of Stuttgart: metal industry; stone quarries. It contains one of the best-preserved medieval monasteries of Germany, a former Cistercian abbey, founded in 1146 and transformed into a Protestant school in 1558. The abbey church is a Romanesque basilica of the 12th century. 2,311 (1946).

Mauldin (môl'din), William H. [Known as Bill Mauldin.] b. at Mountain Park, N.M., Oct. 29, 1921—. American cartoonist and writer. He served (1940–45) in the U.S. army in North Africa, Sicily, Italy, France, and Germany. In 1940 he began drawing cartoons for the 45th Division News and later (1943 et seq.) had his work published in the Mediterranean edition of Stars and Stripes. Mauldin's Willie and Joe, two very unglamorous, very critical, and very natural infantrymen, were the heroes of these cartoons, and in 1945 they won for their creator the Pulitzer prize for distinguished service as a cartoonist. Mauldin's work was later syndicated in the U.S. Author of Up Front (1945), Back Home (1947), A Sort of a Saga (autobiography, 1949), Bill Mauldin in Korea (1952), and others, including several books of cartoons published in Europe, such as This Damn Tree Leaks (1945).

Maule (mou'lā). Province in S central Chile. Capital, Cauquenes; area, ab. 2,172 sq. mi.; pop. 63,519 (est. 1950).

Maule (môl), Fox. Original name of Ramsay, Fox Maule.

Maule River (mou'lā). River in S central Chile, rising in the Andes and flowing W to the Pacific Ocean. It formed the S limit of the Inca conquests, and long separated the Spanish colonies from Araucania. Length, ab. 150 mi.; navigable for ab. 50 mi.

Mauley (môˊli), Sir Edward. See under Elshender.

Maulmain (môl.mān'). See Moulmein.

Mau-Mau (mou'mou'). Organization of Kikuyu tribesmen, constituted as a secret brotherhood, active (1952 et seq.) against European colonists and their native adherents in Kenya, Africa. Their raids on British settlements, in which they killed and burned, were an example of the unrest felt by native populations throughout the continent.

Maumbury Rings (môm'bẹ.ri). See under Dorchester, Dorsetshire, England.

Maumee (mô.mē'). Village in NW Ohio, in Lucas County, on the Maumee River: SW residential and industrial suburb of Toledo. It was settled in 1680 as a French-Canadian trading post. The name is derived from a corruption of the Indian word Miami. 5,548 (1950).

Maumee Rapids, Battle of. See Fallen Timbers, Battle of.

Maumee River. River in NE Indiana and NW Ohio. It is formed by the union of the St. Mary's and St. Joseph at Fort Wayne, and flows NE into Maumee Bay, Lake Erie, just NE of Toledo. Length (including the St. Mary's), over 200 mi.

Mauna Kea (mou'nä kā'ä). Extinct volcano on the island of Hawaii, in the Hawaiian Islands. It is the highest peak in the Pacific Ocean. Elevation, ab. 13,784 ft.

Mauna Loa (mou'nä lō'ä). Active volcano on the island of Hawaii, in the Hawaiian Islands, SW of Mauna Kea. There have been noted eruptions in 1843, 1859, 1868, 1877, 1899, and 1933. Elevation, ab. 13,680 ft.

Maunder (môn'dėr), Samuel. b. 1785; d. at Gibson Square, Islington, London, April 30, 1849. English publisher and compiler of Treasury of Knowledge (1830), Biographical Treasury (1838), Scientific and Literary Treasury (1841), and other works with similar titles for history (1844), natural history (1848), and geography (1849), all exceedingly popular in their day.

Maundevylle (man'dẹ.vil), John. See Mandeville, Sir John.

Maundrell (môn'drel), Henry. b. at Compton Bassett, near Calne, Wiltshire, England, 1665; d. at Aleppo, Syria, 1701. English Oriental traveler.

Maundy Thursday (môn'di). Christian religious holiday celebrated on the Thursday before Easter. It commemorates the anniversary of Christ's Last Supper with his disciples. In allusion to his washing of the disciples' feet at that time, a medieval custom was the ceremonial footwashing on Maundy Thursday of 12 poor parishioners. In England, James II was the last monarch to perform the washing; now specially coined pennies (Maundy Pennies) are given.

Maunoury (mō.nö.rē), Michel Joseph. b. at Maintenon, Eure-et-Loir, France, Dec. 17, 1847; d. at Arteuay, Loiret, France, March 28, 1923. French army commander, whose offensive (September, 1914) against the army of General von Kluck during the first Battle of the Marne marked the defeat of the German forces. He lost an eye at the front in March, 1915, and was assigned (1915–16) to the post of military governor of Paris, which he had held (1910–12) before the war.

Maunsell (man's-l), John. See Mansel, John.

Mauny (mō'ni), Sir Walter de. See Manny or Mauny, Sir Walter de.

Maupassant (mō.pa.sän), Guy de. [Full name, Henri René Albert Guy de Maupassant.] b. at the Château de Miromesnil, Seine-Inférieure, France, Aug. 5, 1850; d. at Passy, Paris, July 6, 1893. French novelist and short-story writer. He went to school at Yvetot, and graduated from the collège at Rouen, while Gustave Flaubert, his godfather, looked after his literary training. He spent about ten years in civil service in the navy department. In February, 1879, his one-act play Histoire du vieux temps was performed at Paris, without, however, attracting any special attention. The next year, however, the success of his short story Boule de suif stamped him at once as a writer of marked ability. Then he published in rapid succession La Maison Tellier (1881), Mademoiselle Fifi (1882), Contes de la bécasse (1883), Une Vie (1883), Miss Harriet (1884), Les Sœurs Rondoli (1884), Au soleil (1884), Clair de lune (1884), Yvette (1884), Bel-Ami (1885), Contes du jour et de la nuit (1885), Contes et nouvelles (1885), M. Parent (1886), La Petite Roque (1886), Toine (1886), Contes choisis (1887), Mont-Oriol (1887), Le Horla (1887), Pierre et Jean (1888), Sur l'eau (1888), Le Rosier de Mme. Husson (1888), Fort comme la mort (1889), La Main gauche (1889), Histoire d'une fille de ferme (1890), La Vie Errante (1890), L'Inutile Beauté (1890), and Notre cœur (1890). Among his other works are Trois contes, Enmer, L'Homme de lettres (1892), and two plays, Musotte (1891) and La Paix du ménage (1893). The insanity and death of a brother unbalanced him, and he attempted suicide during a fit of depression in December, 1891; general paresis set in, and he had to be confined in a private asylum.

Maupertuis (mō.per.twē), Pierre Louis Moreau de. b. at St.-Malo, France, July 17, 1698; d. at Basel, Switzerland, July 27, 1759. French mathematician, astronomer, and philosopher. His most important scientific performance was his work as head of the expedition sent by Louis XV to Lapland (1736–37) to measure a degree of longitude. The results of this expedition were published by him in La Figure de la terre déterminée par les observations (1738). He was a supporter of the Newtonian theory against the Cartesians. He took part in several other controversies, the most notable being one with Voltaire, who satirized him in the Diatribe du Docteur Akakia.

Mauprat (mō.prä). Novel by George Sand, published in 1836. It was dramatized in 1853.

Maura y Montaner (mou'rä ē mōn.tä.ner'), Antonio. b. at Palma, on the island of Majorca, 1853; d. at Madrid, 1925. Spanish statesman, orator, and lawyer. He rose from a career in the Balearic Islands to become the outstanding Spanish politician of the reign of Alfonso XIII. In 1881 he headed the Liberal Party and from 1892 on he held various portfolios in the government (justice, colonies, interior), serving as prime minister in 1903–04, 1907–09, 1918, 1919, and 1921. During his career his political orientation became increasingly conservative and he favored clerical and autocratic policies in the hope of ending liberal corruption. Highlights of his regime were the treaty of friendship with Morocco in 1904 and the suppression of an uprising at Barcelona in 1909. Called to form a government in 1921, Maura was able neither to get coöperation nor to provide clear leadership, and control of the Spanish government fell by coup d'état to Primo de Rivera, who established a dictatorship in 1923.

Maurel (mō.rel), Victor. b. at Marseilles, France, June 17, 1848; d. at New York, Oct. 22, 1923. French dramatic baritone. He made his debut at the Paris Opéra in 1868, rejoined it in 1879, and remained a member till 1894 (except for 1885–86, when he was at the Opera-Comique). He created Iago in Verdi's Otello in 1887, and Falstaff in 1893.

Maurepas (mōr.pä), Jean Frédéric Phélippeaux, Comte de. b. at Versailles, France, July 9, 1701; d. there, Nov. 21, 1781. French politician. He was minister under Louis XV, was banished from court in 1749 through the influence of Madame Pompadour, whom he had attacked in an epigram, and was made prime minister by Louis XVI in 1774. He restored the Parliament of Paris. His intrigues caused the dismissals of Turgot (1776) and Necker (1781).

Maurepas (mōr.ẹ.pä′), Lake. Lake in E Louisiana, W of Lake Pontchartrain, with which it communicates. Length, ab. 14 mi.; area, ab. 91 sq. mi.

Maurer (mou′rėr), Georg Ludwig von. b. at Erpolsheim, in the Rhine Palatinate, Germany, Nov. 2, 1790; d. at Munich, July 9, 1872. German jurist and politician, member of the regency in Greece (1832–34), and Bavarian minister of foreign affairs and justice in 1847. He published Das griechische Volk (1835–36), Geschichte der Dorfverfassung in Deutschland (1865–66), Geschichte der Städteverfassung in Deutschland (1869–71), and others.

Maurer, Konrad von. b. April 29, 1823; d. Sept. 16, 1902. German writer and professor; son of G. L. von Maurer. His works include Die Entstehung des isländischen Staats (1852), and other books on Scandinavian history, literature, and law.

Maurer, Louis. b. at Biebrich, Germany, Feb. 21, 1832; d. at New York, July 19, 1932. American lithographer and painter who did many of the color prints for Currier and Ives on American life between 1830 and 1880. He emigrated to the U.S. in 1850, and started to work for Currier and Ives in 1853. He worked there until the Civil War. At the age of 52 he started to study painting under William M. Chase, and he had his first one-man show when he was 99, at New York. The Fireman Series, Indian Fights, and Life on the Plains are among his most famous prints, and two of his best-known paintings are Preparing for Market and The Horse, Lexington.

Mauretania (mô.rẹ.tā′ni.ạ). [Also, Mauritania.] In ancient geography, the NW part of Africa, corresponding to the N parts of Morocco and of W and C Algeria. Juba II of Numidia was confirmed (25 B.C.) king of Mauretania by Augustus. It was annexed (42 A.D.) to the Roman Empire by Claudius, and was divided into the provinces Mauretania Tingitana in the W and Mauretania Caesariensis in the E. It was overrun by the Vandals in 429.

Mauriac (mō.ryȧk), François. b. at Bordeaux, France, Oct. 11, 1885—. French novelist, dramatist, and essayist. Author of Le Baiser au lépreux (1922), Génétrix (1923; Eng. trans., in 1 volume with Le Baiser au lépreux, as The Family, 1930), Le Désert de l'amour (1925; Eng. trans., The Desert of Love, 1929), Thérèse Desqueyroux (1927; Eng. trans., Therese, 1928), Le Nœud de Vipères (1932; Eng. trans., Vipers' Tangle, 1933), La Pharisienne (1941; Eng. trans., Woman of the Pharisees, 1947), and other novels; of plays, including Asmodée (1938) and Les mal aimés (1945), and of numerous books of essays. His novels are dramas of spiritual struggle (sin, temptation, and redemption) in a provincial setting. Born of Roman Catholic parents, brought up in a pious home, educated in part in Roman Catholic schools, Mauriac has been called the world's foremost Roman Catholic novelist. He was winner of the 1952 Nobel prize for literature.

Maurice (mô′ris, mor′is), Saint. Christian martyr. According to the legend, he was commander of the "Theban Legion," and was put to death by order of the Roman authorities in Valais, Switzerland, in 287 along with the other troops who refused to offer sacrifice to idols.

Maurice. [Also, Mauricius (mô.rish′us); full name, Flavius Tiberius Mauricius.] b. in Cappadocia, c539; killed near Chalcedon, Asia Minor, November, 602. Byzantine emperor (582–602). He served with distinction against the Persians, was appointed by Tiberius II as his successor, and married Tiberius' daughter Constantina. He proved himself a wise and vigorous ruler, ending the Persian war successfully and defeating the Avars. He was deposed and murdered by the general Phocas, commander in chief of an army operating against the Avars.

Maurice. [German, Moritz.] b. at Freiberg, Saxony, March 21, 1521; d. at Sievershausen, near Hanover, July 11, 1553. Duke of Saxony (1541–53); son of Henry the Pious. He assisted the emperor Charles V against the Turks and the French (1542–43) and, after making a secret agreement with Charles, withdrew from the Schmalkaldic League and joined Charles in an attack (1546) on the League, which was led by John Frederick, elector of Saxony. After the victory of Mühlberg (April, 1547), Maurice became the Saxon elector and also obtained some of John Frederick's lands. The emperor, however, persisted in keeping prisoner Maurice's father-in-law, Philip of Hesse, who was one of the members of the Schmalkaldic League, and Maurice secretly undertook to ally himself against the emperor with some of the German Protestant princes. Ostensibly preparing to enforce the imperial ban against Magdeburg, Maurice built up his forces, allied himself (January, 1552) with Henry II of France, and suddenly attacked (March, 1552) the emperor. The treaty of Passau (August, 1552) resulted, by which Philip of Hesse was freed. Maurice then went to Hungary to campaign against the Turks, but returned to discover that the Margrave of Brandenburg, Albert Alcibiades, backed by Charles V, was claiming certain territories and causing trouble in Germany. Maurice took the field against him, was victorious at Sievershausen, but was mortally wounded in the battle.

Maurice, Sir Frederick Barton. b. at Dublin, Jan. 19, 1871; d. May 9, 1951. British soldier. He served (1899–1900) in the Boer War, and took part (1914–18) in World War I, directing (1915–18) military operations for the Imperial General Staff.

Maurice, Frederick Denison. b. at Normanston, near Lowestoft, England, Aug. 29, 1805; d. at London, April 1, 1872. English divine. He entered Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1823, and Exeter College, Oxford, in 1830. He was appointed curate of Bubbenhall, near Leamington, in 1834, chaplain of Guy's Hospital in 1836, and in 1840 professor of English literature and history and, in 1846, professor of theology, at King's College, London. From 1839 to 1841 he edited the Educational Magazine. In 1848 he assisted in establishing Queen's College, London. During the revolutionary movement of 1848 he became the leader of the "Christian Socialists." His Theological Essays, published in 1853, excited so much criticism that he was obliged to resign his professorship at King's College. On Oct. 30, 1854, he became principal of St. Martin's Hall, Queen Square, a workingmen's college. On Oct. 25, 1866, he was elected professor of moral philosophy at Cambridge. He wrote Eustace Conway, or the Brother and Sister: a novel (1834), the article "Moral and Metaphysical Philosophy" for the Encyclopaedia Metropolitana (subsequently enlarged and published in 3 volumes: Ancient Philosophy, 1850, Philosophy of the First Six Centuries, 1853, and Mediaeval Philosophy, 1857), Modern Philosophy (1862), and numerous other works on religious, historical, theological, and philosophical topics.

Maurice, Thomas. b. at Hertford, England, 1754; d. at London, March 30, 1824. English clergyman, Orientalist, and poet.

Maurice Bourdin (mō.rēs bör.daṅ). Original name of the antipope Gregory VIII.

Maurice de Bracy (mô′ris, mor′is, dẹ brā′si). See Bracy, Maurice de.

Maurice Guest (gest). Novel by Henry Handel Richardson (Mrs. Henrietta Robertson), published in 1908.

Maurice of Nassau. b. at Dillenburg, Prussia, Nov. 14, 1567; d. at The Hague, April 23, 1625. Prince of Orange and Count of Nassau; a younger son of William the Silent and Anne, daughter of Maurice of Saxony. He was elected stadholder of the provinces of Holland and Zealand on the assassination of his father in 1584, and became stadholder of the Seven United Provinces in 1587. He expelled the Spaniards from the Seven United Provinces in a series of brilliant campaigns which entitle him to a place among the foremost generals of modern times. Groningen, the last stronghold of the Spaniards, fell in 1594. In 1609, a truce of 12 years was concluded with Spain at the instance of Johan van Oldenbarneveldt, the head of the aristocratic republican party, who feared that a continuance of the war might enable Maurice to usurp the sovereignty. A political contest ensued, which was further embittered by religious strife, inasmuch as Maurice, who was supported by the populace, favored the Gomarists (or strict Calvinists), while Oldenbarneveldt favored the Arminians or Remonstrants. This contest resulted in the execution of Oldenbarneveldt in 1619, and in the victory of Maurice, who renewed the war with Spain at the expiration of the truce in 1621. He failed, however, to meet with success in the campaigns.

Mauricius (mô.rish′us), Flavius Tiberius. Full Latin name of Maurice.

Maurienne (mō.ryen). Small region in the department of Savoie, France, in the upper valley of the Arc, from Mo-dane E to the Italian frontier. It was a medieval county, and developed into the county of Savoy.

Maurier (mô'ri.ā), Daphne Du. See Du Maurier, Daphne.

Maurier, George Louis Palmella Busson Du. See Du Maurier, George Louis Palmella Busson.

Maurier, Sir Gerald Du. See Du Maurier, Sir Gerald.

Mauritania (mô.ri.tā'ni.ą). See also Mauretania.

Mauritania. [French, Mauritanie (mō.rē.tá.nē).] Territory of French West Africa, formed into a protectorate in 1903 and into a "civilian territory" in 1904; it became a colony in 1920 and an overseas territory in 1946. It comprises an extensive region of the W Sahara, N of the Sénégal River, bordering on the Atlantic in the W and on the Spanish colony of Río de Oro in the NW. The climate is dry and hot, with a scanty summer rainfall The chief export products of the territory, which is mostly desert, are cattle, gum arabic, and salt. Government is administered by a governor assisted by a privy council. The administrative center is St.-Louis, directly across the border in Sénégal. One delegate is sent respectively to the French national assembly, the Council of the Republic, and the Assembly of the French Union. Area, ab. 450,000 sq. mi.; pop. 497,000 (1945).

Mauritius (mô.rish'us). [Former name, Île de France, English, Isle of France.] British island in the Indian Ocean, ab. 500 mi. E of Madagascar, belonging to the Mascarene group. The island is of volcanic origin, and its surface is largely hilly, rising to a peak elevation of 2,711 ft. The chief export is sugar. Mauritius, with its dependencies Rodrigues, Seychelles, and Diego Garcia (in the Oil Islands), and smaller islands, is a British colony. The inhabitants are Hindus, mixed peoples, and Europeans of French and British origin. Mauritius was discovered by the Portuguese in the early 16th century, and was noted for the discovery there of the dodo bird, which became extinct in the 17th century. From 1598 to 1710 it was held by the Dutch. In 1715 the French took possession. It was conquered by the British in 1810. The island was the scene of Paul and Virginia. It has been visited by severe epidemics and hurricanes. Capital, Port Louis; area of island, ab. 720 sq. mi.; pop. of island, 419,185 (1944); of colony, 432,648 (1944).

Mauritz van Nassau-Siegen (mou'rits van nä'sou.zē'gęn), Joan. See John Maurice of Nassau.

Maurocordatos or Mavrokordatos (mäv"rô.kôr.ᴛʜä'tôs), Alexander. b. 1639; d. 1709. Greek physician t the sultan of Turkey. He acted in diplomatic posts and negotiated (1699) the treaty of Karlowitz with Austria, Venice, and Poland.

Maurocordatos or Mavrokordatos, Alexander (or Alexandros). b. at Constantinople, Feb. 15, 1791; d. at Aegina, Greece, Aug. 18, 1865. Greek statesman, distinguished as a leader in the war of independence, and later as a minister and diplomat. He was premier in 1833, 1841, 1844, and 1854–55.

Maurois (mō.rwä), André. [Pseudonym of Émile Salomon Wilhelm Herzog.] b. at Elbeuf, France, 1885—. French novelist, biographer, and historian. Author of Les Silences du Colonel Bramble (1918), Les Discours du Colonel O'Grady (1922), Ariel ou la vie de Shelley (1923), Climats (1928), Le Cercle de famille (1933), and other works, including biographies of Disraeli, Byron, and Chateaubriand. His early, humorous books are regarded as his most permanent successes; in later life he has been an immensely popular lecturer in England and America.

Maurras (mō.rä), Charles. [Full name, Charles Marie Photius Maurras.] b. at Martigues, Bouches-du-Rhône, France, 1868; d. at Tours, France, Nov. 16, 1952. French poet, publicist, and critic. Author of poems collected in La Musique intérieure (1925), and of thousands of philosophical and political essays, largely polemical in nature, many of which have been collected in such volumes as L'Avenir de l'intelligence (1905), Kiel et Tanger (1910), and Enquête sur la monarchie (1909; definitive edition, 1924). Born in the remote provinces and educated in Roman Catholic schools, he began a journalistic career at Paris in the late 1880's, joined the Action Française at the time of the Dreyfus case, converted its leaders to royalism, and directed its destinies up to World War II. Although he advocated a "Catholic France," he and his group fell under papal interdict in 1926. In 1945 he was condemned to life imprisonment for collaboration with the enemy; but he was released because of illness in 1952 and died soon afterward.

Maurus (mô'rus), Saint. [French, Maur (mōr).] b. (probably) at Rome; d. 584. Traditional founder and first abbot of the Benedictine monastery of Glanfeuil or St.-Maur-sur-Loire, France; first disciple of Saint Benedict, with whom he lived at Subiaco and Monte Cassino. He was sent into Gaul by Saint Benedict about 543, and established his monastery by the favor of King Theodebert. His feast is observed on January 15.

Maury (mô'ri), Dabney Herndon. b. at Fredericksburg, Va., May 21, 1822; d. at Peoria, Ill., Jan. 11, 1900. American Confederate officer. He was chief of staff (1862 et seq.) to General Van Dorn, was brevetted brigadier general for action (1862) at Pea Ridge, Ark., and was commander (1863–65) of the district of the Gulf, where he conducted the defense of Mobile. He was U.S. minister (1885–89) to Colombia. Author of Recollections of a Virginian (1894) and A Young People's History of Virginia and Virginians (1896).

Maury (mō.rē), Jean Siffrein. b. at Valréas, France, June 26, 1746; d. at Rome, May 11, 1817. French cardinal and politician, distinguished as a royalist orator (1789–91) in the Constituent Assembly. The heightening of the French Revolution caused him to flee (1792) to Rome, and thence to Russia. He returned to France after Napoleon came to power. He was archbishop of Paris (1810–14). At the restoration of the Bourbons he again went to Rome, where he was imprisoned (1815) for six months by the papal authority for refusing to give up his archbishopric.

Maury, Louis Ferdinand Alfred. b. at Meaux, France, March 23, 1817; d. at Paris, Feb. 12, 1892. French archaeologist and librarian. He was appointed imperial librarian of the Tuileries in 1860, professor of history at the Collège de France in 1862, and general director of the national archives in 1868. His works include Essai sur les légendes pieuses du moyen âge (1843), Histoire des grandes forêts de la Gaule (1850), and Histoire des religions de la Grèce antique (1857–60).

Maury (mô'ri), Matthew Fontaine. b. in Spotsylvania County, Va., Jan. 14, 1806; d. at Lexington, Va., Feb. 1, 1873. American hydrographer and naval officer. He was appointed (1841) officer in charge of the Depot of Charts and Instruments, which he developed into the U.S. Naval Observatory and the Hydrographic Office. In this post, he collected information from many voyages and was able to chart winds and currents of the Atlantic, Pacific, and Indian oceans with sufficient accuracy to aid ships in reducing their sailing time. Maury recognized the importance of international exchange of information in increasing navigational efficiency and helped to organize the Brussels conference of 1853. His Physical Geography of the Sea (1855–56) is one of the basic works in oceanography. A storm of protest at his enforced retirement in 1855 resulted in his reinstatement in 1858. In 1861, he resigned to join the Confederacy. He established the Confederate naval submarine battery service at Richmond in 1862, in which year he went to England as a Confederate purchasing agent. At the close of the Civil War he retired to Mexico, where he accepted a post under the government of Maximilian. There he attempted to establish colonies of Confederate soldiers, but Maximilian's lack of interest in the scheme forced its abandonment. Maury later served (1868–73) as professor of meteorology at Virginia Military Institute. He was the first to give a complete description of the Gulf Stream, and to mark out specific routes to be followed in crossing the Atlantic. He was elected to the Hall of Fame in 1930.

Maurya (mōr'ya). In John Millington Synge's one-act tragedy Riders to the Sea (1904), an old woman who has lost her husband and four sons to the sea, and who loses her fifth son, Bartley.

Mauser (mou'zėr), Peter Paul. b. at Oberndorf, Württemberg, Germany, June 27, 1838; d. there, May 29, 1914. German inventor. With his brother, he invented (1865) a rifle which was adopted (1871) by the Prussian army. Also in collaboration he produced a pistol, a revolver, and a repeating rifle; he devised (1897) the Mauser magazine rifle independently.

Mausoleum (mô.sō.lē'um). See under Halicarnassus.

Mausolus (mô.sō'lus). d. c353 B.C. King or dynast of Caria, who first appears in history in the revolt of the satraps against Artaxerxes II (Artaxerxes Mnemon) in 362 B.C. He married his sister Artemisia, who after his death erected at Halicarnassus in his honor the celebrated monument named from him the Mausoleum. A Greek statue of Mausolus from the Mausoleum (352 B.C.) is in the British Museum.

Mauss (mōs), Marcel. b. 1872—. French sociologist, follower of Émile Durkheim, and editor of L'Année Sociologique. His study of the morphology of social groups, supported by research into patterns of Eskimo living, indicated that the whole social life of a group is affected by its changing morphology. His important works are Mélanges d'histoire des réligions (with H. Hubert, 1919) and Essai sur le Don (1925).

Mauston (môs'tọn). City in S Wisconsin, county seat of Juneau County, in a former lumbering region. 3,171 (1950).

Mauthausen (mout'hou.zen). Market village in N central Austria, in the province of Upper Austria, on the N bank of the Danube, opposite the mouth of the Enns River, E of Linz. During the Nazi occupation of Austria it was the site of a concentration camp. The camp site has been declared a memorial by the Austrian government. 3,178 (1946).

Mauvaises Terres (mō.vez ter). French name of the Bad Lands.

Mauve (mou'vẹ), Anton. b. at Zaandam, North Holland, Netherlands, Sept. 18, 1838; d. at Arnhem, Gelderland, Netherlands, Feb. 5, 1888. Dutch painter. He received medals at Vienna, Philadelphia, Antwerp, Amsterdam, and Paris. The color "mauve" derives its name from him. Among his principal works are Crepuscule, Cattle in the Haarlem Meadows, A Summer Day in Holland, The Departure of the Flock, Near Laren, On the Heath, and Returning to the Fold.

Mavia (mä.vē'ä). [Also: Mabiha, Wamavia.] Bantu-speaking people of E Africa, inhabiting the NE corner of Mozambique. They have exogamous matrilineal clans and age grades based on circumcision. They practice agriculture, and their principal crops are maize and millet.

Maviti (mä.vē'tē). See Ngoni.

Má Vlast (mä vläst). [Eng. trans., "My Fatherland."] Set of six orchestral tone poems (1874–79) by Bedřich Smetana; the work is an example of nationalistic music, and includes the popular Vltava (The Moldau).

Mavourneen (mą.vör'nēn), Kathleen. See Kathleen Mavourneen.

Mavrokordatos (mäv"ṛô.kôr.ŦHä'tôs). See Maurocordatos or Mavrokordatos.

Mavromati (mäv.rô.mä'tē). See under Messene.

Mawson (mô'sọn), Sir Douglas. b. at Bradford, Yorkshire, England, May 5, 1882—. English antarctic explorer and geologist, professor (1920 et seq.) of geology and mineralogy at the University of Adelaide. He took part in the New Hebrides Geological Exploration (1903) and the Mount Erebus ascent (1908). He was appointed (1907) to the scientific staff of Sir Ernest Shackleton's antarctic expedition, and led the Australasian Antarctic Expedition (1911–14) and the British, Australian, and New Zealand Antarctic Expedition (1929–31).

Max (mäks), Adolphe. b. at Brussels, Belgium, Dec. 31, 1869; d. there, Nov. 6, 1939. Belgian politician and civic official. Elected a provincial councillor for the Liberal Party at Brussels, he attracted the attention of Leopold II, who appointed him burgomaster of Brussels in 1909. He displayed great moral courage in defending the rights of the people of Brussels before the German invaders in 1914, was a German war captive for four years, and with King Albert I and Cardinal Mercier, emerged from World War I as one of the great Belgian patriots. He was made a minister of state and elected a deputy of Brussels in the chamber of representatives, and served as president of the Liberal Party.

Max (mäks), Cornelius Gabriel. b. at Prague, Aug. 23, 1840; d. 1915. German historical and genre painter. He was the son of Joseph Max, a sculptor, and was a pupil of Piloty at Munich. He was professor (1879–83) at the Munich Academy. Among his works are The Anatomist (1869), The Last Token (1874; now in the Metropolitan Museum, New York), Nydia (1874), and The Lion's Bride (1879).

Maxen (mäk'sẹn). Village in E Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony, Russian Zone, ab. 10 mi. S of Dresden. Here on Nov. 20, 1759, the Prussians (12,000–13,000) under F. A. von Finck surrendered to the Austrians under Leopold von Daun.

Maxentius (mak.sen'shus), Marcus Aurelius Valerius. Drowned in the Tiber, Italy, in October, 312 A.D. Roman emperor (306–312); son of Maximian. On the abdication of his father and Diocletian as Augusti and the promotion of the Caesars Constantius and Galerius in 305, he was passed over in the appointment of the new Caesars, the choice falling on Severus and Maximinus. In the following year, however, he had himself proclaimed Caesar by the praetorians at Rome, and with the assistance of his father, who resumed his former rank, he overthrew Severus, who had ruled in Italy and Africa. He next banished his father, and eventually declared war (312) against Constantine I (the Great), son of Constantius, who had assumed the administration of his father's provinces (Gaul, Spain, and Britain) on the latter's death in 306. He was totally defeated by Constantine at Saxa Rubra, Oct. 27, 312, and perished in the flight.

Maxey (mak'si), Samuel Bell. b. at Tompkinsville, Ky., March 30, 1825; d. at Eureka Springs, Ark., Aug. 16, 1895. American Confederate soldier. Named (December, 1863) commander in the Indian Territory, he organized the Creek, Cherokee, and Choctaw tribes on the side of the South. He was U.S. senator (1875–87) from Texas.

Maxglan (mäks'glän). W section of the city of Salzburg, Austria, situated between the Salzach and Saalach rivers. The airport for Salzburg is there.

Maxim (mak'sim), Hiram Percy. b. at Brooklyn, N.Y., Sept. 2, 1869; d. Feb. 17, 1936. American mechanical engineer and inventor; son of Sir Hiram Stevens Maxim. He is best known for devising the Maxim gun-silencer, and was the inventor also of electrical appliances and improvements in automobile machinery, including mufflers to eliminate motor noise. He wrote Life's Place in the Cosmos (1933) and the autobiography Horseless Carriage Days (1937).

Maxim, Sir Hiram Stevens. b. at Sangerville, Me., Feb. 5, 1840; d. at Streatham, England, Nov. 24, 1916. Engineer and inventor. He invented the automatic system of firearms, patenting (1883) the Maxim machine gun, and devoted much time to the study of explosives, especially in relation to his gun, which operated on recoil after firing, and of aerial navigation. In 1894 he had built a huge airship that actually left the ground but proved a failure because of its inefficient engines. His gun company merged (1896) with the Vickers interests.

Maxim, Hudson. b. at Orneville, Me., Feb. 3, 1853; d. May 6, 1927. American mechanical engineer, distinguished especially for his inventions in the field of ordnance and explosives; brother of H. S. Maxim. Among the more important of his inventions are several varieties of smokeless powder, maximite (a high explosive), a self-propelled torpedo, and a torpedo ram. His plant and patents were bought (1897) by the Du Pont interests. Besides various technical writings, he published The Science of Poetry (1910).

Maxima Caesariensis (mak'si.mą sē.zār.i.en'sis). See under Britannia.

Maximes (mäk.sēm). [Eng. trans., "Maxims."] Collection of moral maxims by La Rochefoucauld (1665). Written in a brilliantly polished style, they offer profound yet concise observations on human nature.

Maximian (mak.sim'i.ạn). [Full name, Marcus Aurelius Valerius Maximianus; surnamed Herculius.] d. in February, 310. Roman emperor (286–305 and 306–308). He was a Pannonian peasant by birth, rose to the highest offices in the army, and was made Caesar by Diocletian in 285 and Augustus in 286, ruling in the west. He resigned the imperial dignity simultaneously with Diocletian in 305, but reassumed it in 306 at the instance of his son Maxentius, who had caused himself to be proclaimed Caesar by the Praetorian Guard at Rome. He captured Severus (who commanded in Italy and Africa) in 307, but was himself expelled from Rome by Maxentius in 308, and eventually found refuge with his son-in-law

Constantine at Arles. Having been twice discovered in conspiracy against his son-in-law, he was ordered to choose the manner of his death, and strangled himself.

Maximilian (of Baden) (mak.si.mil'yan; German, mäk-sē.mē'lē.än). [Called Prince Max of Baden; full name, Maximilian Alexander Friedrich Wilhelm.] b. at Baden, July 10, 1867; d. at Salem, Germany, Nov. 6, 1929. German statesman who became the first German parliamentary chancellor, Oct. 3, 1918. As imperial chancellor, he began Germany's World War I armistice negotiations, and nominated Wilhelm Groener to replace Ludendorff. He attempted to secure the Kaiser's abdication, but the break-up of German morale, the mutiny of the sailors at Kiel, and the disruption of government forced him to make the decision for the Kaiser. In an effort to save the monarchy, he proclaimed (Nov. 9, 1918) without authorization the abdication of the Kaiser (his first cousin), and then handed the chancellorship to Friedrich Ebert. He later resided at Salem.

Maximilian I (of Bavaria). [Called Maximilian the Great.] b. at Landshut, Bavaria, April 17, 1573; d. at Ingolstadt, Bavaria, Sept. 27, 1651. Duke (1597–1651) and elector (1623–51) of Bavaria. He was chiefly instrumental in organizing the Catholic League in opposition to the Protestant Union in 1609. As the head of the Catholic League, he assisted the emperor Ferdinand II against the elector palatine Frederick V in the Thirty Years' War. Under Tilly, his troops won (1620) the battle of the White Mountain at Prague. Maximilian received (1623) the electoral vote forfeited by Frederick, and in 1628 was invested with the Upper Palatinate. He led the group that forced Ferdinand to discharge (1630) Wallenstein, but when attacked (1632) by the Swedes under Gustavus Adolphus he readily assented to Wallenstein's resumption of command of the imperial forces. He had to negotiate a separate peace with the French and Swedes at Ulm (1647) but, when he broke the truce, his territories were again invaded and ravaged. Under the treaty of Westphalia (1648) he and his descendants were confirmed as electors and Bavaria received the Upper Palatinate.

Maximilian I (of Bavaria). [Also Maximilian I Joseph.] b. at Schwetzingan, Baden, May 27, 1756; d. at the castle of Nymphenburg, near Munich, Oct. 13, 1825. King of Bavaria (1806–25). He became elector of Bavaria in 1799. In 1805 he sided with France against the allied powers, with the result that he acquired considerable territory at the peace of Pressburg (Dec. 26, 1805). In accordance with the same treaty, he assumed the title of king in 1806. At the Congress of Vienna (1814–15), he opposed strongly any attempt to consolidate Germany and fought for maintenance of Bavaria as an independent unit. He granted (1818) a liberal constitution.

Maximilian II (of Bavaria). [Also Maximilian II Maria Emanuel.] b. July 11, 1662; d. Feb. 26, 1726. Elector of Bavaria (1679–1726). In 1692 he became governor of the Spanish Netherlands, but resigned the position in 1699 when his son, Ferdinand Maria, one of the three claimants to the Spanish throne, died suddenly. He was allied with the French in the ensuing War of the Spanish Succession, but after his troops were defeated at Höchstädt by Marlborough he fled (1704) to the Netherlands. He was put under the imperial ban, but in 1714, by the Treaty of Rastadt, he was reinstated.

Maximilian II (of Bavaria). [Also Maximilian II Joseph.] b. Nov. 28, 1811; d. at Munich, March 10, 1864. King of Bavaria (1848–64); son of Louis I. He was a liberal patron of art and literature. His reign opened as a liberal regime, and, though it tended after a time towards absolutism, he maintained an independent attitude in a time when other German rulers were becoming tyrannical. He attempted to stem the growing power of Prussia by supporting Austria and by trying to make Bavaria the focus of the smaller German states, but he died soon after the outbreak of the war between Prussia and Denmark.

Maximilian I (of the Holy Roman Empire). b. at Wiener Neustadt, Austria, March 22, 1459; d. at Wels, Upper Austria, Jan. 12, 1519. Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire (1493–1519); son of Frederick III. He married Mary, daughter and heiress of Charles the Bold of Burgundy, in 1477, and was elected king of the Romans (that is, of Germany) in 1486. He became emperor in 1493. In order to suppress the system of private war and restore the imperial authority, he proclaimed a perpetual public peace in 1495, established the imperial chamber (Reichskammergericht) in 1495 and the imperial aulic council (Reichshofrat) in 1501, and divided Germany into six, and afterward (1512) into ten, circles (Landfriedenskreise), over each of which was placed a captain with a force of standing troops for the punishment of disturbers of the peace. In 1499 he carried on an unsuccessful war against the Swiss Confederacy, which resulted in the practical independence of the latter. Through the influence of his second wife, Bianca Sforza, daughter of the Duke of Milan, whom he married in 1494, he became involved in a contest with France for the sovereignty of Milan and Naples. In 1508 he joined the League of Cambrai against Venice. In 1513 he joined the Holy League against France, and in the same year assisted Henry VIII of England in gaining the brilliant victory over the French at Guinegate ("the Battle of the Spurs"). The French, however, defeated him in Italy and he was forced (1516) to cede Milan to them and to permit Venice to take over Verona. Through his son Philip, who married Juana, daughter of Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain, he was the grandfather of his successor as emperor, Charles V.

Maximilian II (of the Holy Roman Empire). b. at Vienna, Aug. 1, 1527; d. Oct. 12, 1576. Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire (1564–76); son of Ferdinand I. He succeeded his father in 1564 as emperor, archduke of Austria, and king of Hungary and Bohemia. At his accession to the imperial throne he found the empire at war with the Turks. He concluded a truce with Selim II in 1568, each party retaining its possessions and Maximilian continuing the payment of tribute to Turkey for his kingdom of Hungary. He was of a mild and tolerant disposition, and left the Protestants undisturbed in the exercise of their religion; it is probable that, despite his apparent adherence to the Roman Catholic Church, he really was a Protestant; he refused the sacraments on his deathbed.

Maximilian (of Mexico). [Full name, Ferdinand Maximilian Joseph; Spanish, Maximiliano (mäk"sē.mē-lyä'nō .] b. at Vienna, July 6, 1832; shot at Querétaro, Mexico, June 19, 1867. Archduke of Austria, and emperor of Mexico (1864–67). He was the second son of the Archduke Francis Charles, and brother of Francis Joseph, who became emperor of Austria in 1848. Trained for the navy, he was placed at its head in 1854. On July 27, 1857, he married Princess Carlota (or Charlotte) of Belgium, and during the succeeding two years was viceroy of the Lombard-Venetian kingdom. After the French had conquered Mexico in part, an assembly of notables, called under French influence, and formed almost entirely of opponents of Benito Juárez, adopted an imperial form of government for that country (July, 1863), and offered the throne to Maximilian. He formally accepted on April 10, 1864, reached Mexico on June 12, and was received with great apparent enthusiasm. Aided by the French, his forces drove Juárez over the northern frontier, and on Oct. 3, 1865, he decreed that those taken in arms against the empire should be treated as bandits and shot out of hand. This decree was loudly condemned, and did much to weaken the emperor's personal popularity. The U.S. government had refused to recognize the empire, and, once the Civil War in the U.S. was over, on its urgent demand (note of Feb. 12, 1866) the French troops were withdrawn, contrary to the express assurances which Napoleon III had given to Maximilian. The latter at first resolved to resign, but was induced to remain. He took personal command (February, 1867) of his army at Querétaro, was besieged by a republican army in March, and was forced to surrender (May 15, 1867). Condemned to death by a court-martial, he was refused mercy on the ground of his severe edict against the Juarists, and was shot with his generals Miguel Miramón and Tomás Mejía.

Maximilian Joseph (yō'zef) [Pseudonym, Phantasus.] b. at Bamberg, Bavaria, Dec. 4, 1808; d. at Munich, Nov. 15, 1888. Bavarian nobleman and writer. He wrote Wanderungen durch dem Orient (1839) and a number of novels and dramas.

Maximinus (mak.si.mī'nus) or Maximin (mak'si.min), Gaius Julius Verus. [Surnamed Thrax, meaning "the Thracian."] Killed near Aquileia, Italy, in May, 238. Roman emperor (235–238). He was a Thracian of extraordinary size and strength, who was proclaimed emperor by the soldiers on the Rhine on the murder of Alexander Severus. His cruelty and exactions caused a revolt under Gordianus in Africa. He was killed by his own soldiers.

Maximinus or Maximin, Galerius Valerius. b. in Illyria; d. at Tarsus, Asia Minor, c313. Roman emperor (308–313); nephew of Galerius. He became Caesar in 305 and Augustus in 308, was defeated by Licinius (c313) at Heraclea Pontica, Bithynia, on the S shore of the Black Sea, and perished in the flight.

Maximos (mäk'sē.mŏs), Demetrios. b. at Patras, Greece, 1873—. Greek statesman. He accompanied Constantine I and Sophia into exile (1917–20; 1922–28). He was governor of the National Bank of Greece from 1920 to 1922, retiring in the latter year from business. As minister of foreign affairs (1933–35) he signed the treaty with Turkey and the treaty forming the Balkan Union, and was active in the League of Nations Assembly, being president of the committee on sanctions against Italy during the Ethiopian War. In 1935 he retired from politics, but was called back to head the cabinet in 1947 at the time of the first U.S. financial aid.

Maximus (mak'si.mus), Saint. [Surnamed the Theologian and the Confessor.] b. at Constantinople, c580; d. Aug. 13, 662. Eastern theologian, noted as an opponent of the Monothelites. He was secretary (610–630) to the emperor Heraclius and entered (630) the monastery at Chrysopolis (Scutari), where he became abbot. In 649 he went to Rome, where he supported Pope Martin I at the first Lateran synod that anathematized Monothelitism. He was banished by the emperor Constans II for the part he had taken in the controversy and in 662, after examination by a synod at Constantinople, was scourged, had his tongue cut out and his right hand amputated, and was banished.

Maximus, Magnus. b. in Spain; executed at Aquileia, Italy, 388 A.D. Roman emperor (383–388). He headed an insurrection of the legions stationed in Britain in 383, and, crossing over into Gaul, defeated Gratian, who was killed in the flight. He was afterward recognized by Theodosius and Valentinian II as Augustus in Gaul, Spain, and Britain. He conquered Italy from Valentinian in 387, but was defeated and put to death by Theodosius in 388.

Maximus, Marcus Clodius Pupienus. See Pupienus Maximus, Marcus Clodius.

Maximus, Petronius. See Petronius Maximus.

Maximus, Quintus Fabius. See Fabius Maximus, Quintus.

Maximus Tyrannus (ti.ran'us). Killed at Ravenna, Italy, 422. Roman emperor (409–411). He was elevated by the rebel Gerontius (c409), but was defeated and deposed by Constantine, usurping emperor in Britain, Gaul, and Spain, in 411. He afterward raised an unsuccessful insurrection in Spain.

Max Müller (maks mil'ėr, mul'ėr; German, mäks mül'ėr), Friedrich. b. at Dessau, Germany, Dec. 6, 1823; d. at Oxford, England, Oct. 28, 1900. German-English Sanskrit scholar and comparative philologist; son of Wilhelm Müller. He was educated at Leipzig, Berlin, and Paris, went to England in 1846, and in 1850 settled at Oxford. He became professor of modern languages and literature there in 1854, and was professor of comparative philology (1868–1900). In 1856 he became connected with the Bodleian Library, and was curator (1865–67) of Oriental works. He edited and translated the Hitopadesa (1844), and edited the Rig-Veda (6 vols., 1849–74). His chief works are A History of Ancient Sanskrit Literature (1859), Lectures on the Science of Language (1861–64), Handbooks for the Study of Sanskrit (1865–70; comprising grammar, dictionary, texts), Chips from a German Workshop (1868–75), Lectures on the Science of Religion (1870), On the Origin and Growth of Religion as illustrated by the Religions of India (1878), and translations of various Oriental works. His major work is the monumental Sacred Books of the East (51 vols., 1875 et seq.). He was extremely influential in establishing comparative philology as a study, but his main interest lay in comparative mythology and religion. Here, however, his enthusiasms, exaggerated by his followers, led him into untenable hypotheses and resulted in his being the object of severe criticism from other mythologists and folklorists, among them Andrew Lang.

Maxton (maks'tọn), James. b. June 22, 1885; d. at Largs, Ayrshire, Scotland, July 23, 1946. English labor leader who served (1922–46) as Independent Labour Party member in the House of Commons and headed the three-man representation of the party. Imprisoned during World War I as a conscientious objector, he was an organizer (1919–22) in Scotland for the Glasgow Federation of the party and served (1926–31, 1934–39) as party chairman. Author of If I Were Dictator (1935) and other works.

Maxwell (maks'wĕl, -wẹl), Sir Herbert Eustace. [Title, 7th Baronet of Monreith.] b. at Edinburgh, Jan. 8, 1845; d. Oct. 30, 1937. Scottish man of letters.

Maxwell, James. b. 1581; d. c1640. Scottish man of letters.

Maxwell, James Clerk. b. at Edinburgh, Nov. 13, 1831; d. at Cambridge, England, Nov. 5, 1879. Scottish physicist. First professor (1871–79) of experimental physics at Cambridge and chiefly responsible for the building of the Cavendish laboratory there, he is noted for studies in electricity and magnetism which laid the groundwork for a tremendous number of modern developments in physics. His contributions lie mainly in his application of dynamic equations to the problems of electromagnetism and in his proposition that electromagnetic actions resemble waves of light (his successors later proved them to be identical). His other physical studies deal with the application of Faraday's ideas in mathematics, the theory of color in relation to color-blindness, and the kinetic theory of gases. His practical contributions include experiments which made possible a system of standardized electrical measurements and experiments on the velocity of propagation of electromagnetic waves. His first paper was presented to the Royal Society of Edinburgh when he was 15 years of age. He served as professor of natural philosophy (1860–65) at Marischal College, Aberdeen. His writings include the essay On the Stability of Saturn's Rings (1859), Electricity and Magnetism (1873), Matter and Motion (1876), and the textbook Theory of Heat (1871).

Maxwell, John. [Titles: 7th or 8th Baron Maxwell, Earl of Morton.] b. April 24, 1553; killed at Dryfe Sands, Scotland, Dec. 7, 1593. Scottish nobleman; grandson of Robert Maxwell. He was granted (1581) the earldom of Morton after the execution of James Douglas, 4th Earl of Morton, for his part in the Darnley murder. Maxwell incurred the resentment of James Stewart, Earl of Arran, favorite of James VI, and lost (1586) his title to the earldom and was denounced as a rebel. He aided other banished lords in the expulsion of the Earl of Arran, and gathered (1588) followers to aid the Spanish in their projected invasion of the British Isles.

Maxwell, John. [Title, 8th or 9th Baron Maxwell.] b. c1586; beheaded at Edinburgh, May 21, 1612. Scottish nobleman; son of John Maxwell (1553–93). He was constantly (1598–1603) at feud with the Douglases, whose right to the earldom of Morton Maxwell contested. Imprisoned (1607) in Edinburgh Castle, he escaped (1607) and was denounced as a rebel. He escaped to the Continent, was declared (1609) a traitor by Parliament, was imprisoned (1612) on his return to Scotland, and was executed in the market place at Edinburgh.

Maxwell, Mary Elizabeth. See Braddon, Mary Elizabeth.

Maxwell, Robert. [Title, 5th Baron Maxwell.] d. July 9, 1546. Scottish nobleman. He served (1536) as one of the regents during James V's trip abroad. He was taken prisoner (1542) by the English at the battle of Solway Moss, but was released after the death (1542) of James V. He was forced (1545) to make terms with Henry VIII.

Maxwell, Russell Lamonte. b. at Oakdale, Ill., Dec. 28, 1890—. American ordnance officer. He was appointed (1940) administrator of export control. He was major general (1942) in command of U.S. forces in North Africa, and served as assistant U.S. chief of staff (1943–46).

Maxwell, William. [Title, 5th Earl of Nithsdale.] b. 1676; d. at Rome, March 30, 1744. Scottish Jacobite. He joined (1715) the Jacobite army as commander of volunteers but was taken prisoner (1715) at Preston and confined to the Tower of London. He was condemned (1716) to death. His wife Winifred visited him the night before his excution was to take place, disguised him, and helped him escape from the Tower. He traveled to Calais, and joined James Edward Stuart, the Old Pretender, at Rome.

Maxwell, William. b. at Lincoln, Ill., Aug. 16, 1908—. American novelist. His novels include Bright Center of Heaven (1934), They Came Like Swallows (1937), The Folded Leaf (1945), and Time Will Darken It (1948).

Maxwell, William Babington. b. at Richmond, Surrey, England, 1866; d. at Kensington, London, Aug. 4, 1938. English novelist, short-story writer, and dramatist. Author of The Countess of Maybury (1901), The Ragged Messenger (1904), Vivien (1905), The Guarded Flame (1906), Seymour Charlton (1909), The Rest Cure (1910), Mrs. Thompson (1911), General Mallock's Shadow (1912), The Devil's Garden (1913), The Mirror and the Lamp (1918), A Man and His Lesson (1919), A Remedy Against Sin (1920), Spinster of This Parish (1922), The Day's Journey (1923), Elaine at the Gates (1924), Gabrielle (1926), The Case of Bevan Yorke (1927), We Forget Because We Must (1929), To What Green Altar? (1930), The Concave Mirror (1931), And Mr. Wyke Bond (1934), People of a House (1934), novels; Tales of the Thames (1892), Fabulous Fancies (1903), Odd Lengths (1907), Children of the Night (1925), and Jacob's Ladder (1937), collected short stories; The Last Man In (1910) and The Naked Truth (1921), plays; and Time Gathered (1937), autobiography.

Maxwell, William Hamilton. b. at Newry, County Down, Ireland, 1792; d. at Musselburgh, near Edinburgh, Dec. 29, 1850. Irish novelist. In 1812 he was made captain in an infantry regiment, and served in the Peninsular campaign and at Waterloo. He later took holy orders and was made rector of Ballagh in Connemara. His best-known works are O'Hara, or 1798, a novel (1825), Sports of the West (1832), Stories of Waterloo (1834), and Life of the Duke of Wellington (1839–41).

Maxwell, Sir William Stirling-. See Stirling-Maxwell, Sir William.

Maxwell, Winifred. [Title: Countess of Nithsdale; maiden name, Herbert.] d. at Rome, in May, 1749. English wife of William Maxwell (1676–1744). After an unsuccessful attempt (1716) to obtain George I's pardon for her husband, who had been condemned to death for his part in the Jacobite revolution of 1715, she contrived her husband's escape (1716) from the Tower of London. She wrote a narrative of the escape.

Maxwell of Terregles (tę.reg'lz), Sir John. [Titles: Master of Maxwell, 4th Baron Herries.] b. c1512; d. at Edinburgh, Jan. 20, 1583. Scottish partisan of Mary, Queen of Scots; son of Robert Maxwell. He fought (1568) for Mary at Langside, where he had command of her horse, joined (1569) in the attempted revolt against the regent James Stewart, Earl of Moray, and was active in the scheme (1578) to deprive James Douglas, 4th Earl of Morton, of the regency. After Morton's return to power, he was appointed (1579) warden of the west marches, and, after the execution (1581) of Morton, supported Esmé Stewart, Duke of Lennox.

Maxwelltown (maks'węl.toun). Former burgh of Kirkcudbrightshire, S Scotland, now a W portion of Dumfries, Dumfriesshire. The burgh was of modern origin, chartered in 1810, and had a woolen industry.

Maxyes (mak'si.ēz). Libyan tribe mentioned in ancient geography, situated in the eastern part of what is now Tunisia. As depicted on the Egyptian monuments and as described by Herodotus, its members let their hair grow long on the right side of their heads, shaved it close on the left, and painted their bodies red.

May (mā). Fifth month of the year, consisting of 31 days, reckoned on the continent of Europe and in America as the last month of spring, but in Great Britain commonly as the first of summer.

May, Andrew Jackson. b. at Beaver Creek, Ky., 1875—. American politician and mining executive who served (1930 et seq.) as a congressman from Kentucky. He served as chairman (1938 et seq.) of the House Military Affairs Committee. He was indicted (1947) and served (1949–1950) nine months of a jail sentence for accepting bribes in relation to war-matériel contracts during World War II when he headed the Military Affairs Committee.

May, Cape. Southernmost point of New Jersey, situated at the entrance of Delaware Bay.

May, Isle of. Island in SE Scotland, belonging to Fifeshire, situated in the entrance to the Firth of Forth, ab. .5 mi. SE of the Fifeshire coast. It has a lighthouse and ruins of a monastery. Length, ab. 1 mi.

May (mī), Karl. b. at Ernstthal, Germany, Feb. 25, 1842; d. at Radebeul (near Dresden), Germany, March 31, 1912. German author of adventure and travel stories. Their realistic touches are amazing inasmuch as May never left Germany (he is said to have begun his literary career in jail). His Arabian and American Indian cycles are perhaps best known to modern readers. He organized his own publishing house, and his collected works (1892 et seq.) in 55 volumes were for years in German-speaking lands second only to the Bible as best sellers. His autobiography appeared posthumously (1914) as Mein Leben und Streben.

May (mā), Sophie. Pseudonym of Clarke, Rebecca Sophia.

May, Thomas. b. in Sussex, 1595; d. Nov. 13, 1650. English author. In 1620 he produced The Heir, a comedy, and in the same period The Old Couple (printed 1658). He wrote several tragedies along classical lines and did some translation from the classics, including Lucan's Pharsalia (1627). In 1630 he wrote a continuation of Lucan and was soon afterward commissioned by Charles I to write metrical histories of Henry II and Edward III. May became the royal poet and expected to become laureate on Ben Jonson's death (1637). His disappointment was probably the reason for his siding with Parliament against the king, a shift of party that brought him many enemies. He was a secretary to the Long Parliament, and in 1647 published his most important work, The History of the Long Parliament of England which began Nov. 3, 1640.

May, Sir Thomas Erskine. [Title, 1st Baron Farnborough.] b. at London, Feb. 8, 1815; d. at Westminster Palace, London, May 17, 1886. English jurist. He was appointed (1831) assistant librarian of the House of Commons. He published A Practical Treatise on the Law, Privileges, Proceedings, and Usage of Parliament (1844). After 1871 he was clerk of the House of Commons. In 1854 his Rules, Orders, and Forms of Procedure of the House of Commons was printed by order of Parliament. His other works include The Constitutional History of England since the Accession of George III (1861) and Democracy in Europe (1877).

Maya (mä'yą). Collective term for a number of tribes, city-states, and Indian communities once found in Central America, on the peninsula of Yucatán and in adjacent areas, and in the Guatemalan highlands, at the time of the Spanish conquest. Their descendants, who now number at least 1,500,000, comprise the bulk of the contemporary rural population in these areas. All spoke languages and dialects of the Mayan linguistic stock. In a narrower sense, Maya refers to the Indians of the Yucatán peninsula and the adjoining lowland areas of S Mexico, N Guatemala, W Honduras, and British Honduras. Throughout this area are found numerous archaeological remains which are regarded by many as being testimony to the development by the Maya of the highest peak reached in American Indian civilization, at least insofar as architecture, stone sculpture, and complexity and refinement of calendrical systems were concerned. The Maya were settled agriculturalists, with corn and beans the principal crops. Their fields were cleared from the tropical forests and maintained until recaptured by the dense growth of underbrush, whereupon new fields would be cleared. Each community consisted of a ceremonial and religious center of stone buildings, surrounded by a number of smaller wooden houses in which lived the general farming populace. Each community was a social and political unit, governed by a theocracy supported by civil chieftains and war leaders, though in some instances confederations (such as the League of Mayapán) were formed between several of the city-states. Each community had local specialties and styles in its manufacture of pottery and cloth, and in its architecture and sculpture. Very likely they also differed in the minutiae of religious practices and ceremonies. Extensive trade was carried on between the various communities. Characteristically, the stone temples and official residences were placed on truncated pyramidal substructures of varying heights, and were grouped around plazas and courts. Though outwardly very impressive, even in their present ruined state, the architectural and engineering principles employed were limited and often faulty. The Maya religion consisted of a large pantheon of deities and was centered on astrological matters which guided the affairs of the people. The famed Maya calendrical system was apparently developed by the priesthood and was primarily concerned with the reckoning of ceremonially significant periods of time. It consisted of a solar calendar and a cycle of 260 days, as well as lunar and other notations. In actual operation it was more accurate than the Julian Calendar of Europe, and only slightly less accurate than the current Gregorian system. In addition, the Maya kept a record of elapsed time by counting the total number of days from the beginning of their mythological creation. For various periods of time, and to mark certain coincidences in several cycles, there were erected monolithic markers which have proved invaluable in the archaeological dating of various Maya ruins. The numerical and calendrical systems were written in hieroglyphs and often also with dots and bars of fixed value. Maya numeration employed positions and the value of a zero, thus making possible the manipulation of large numbers, though decimals and fractions were never developed. The hieroglyphic writing occurred both in stone and wood sculpture, and in books. From a correlation of the Maya and Christian calendars, and through the extensive excavation of numerous Maya ruins, the major periods of Maya history are generally regarded as: Old Empire (317–987 A.D.) and New Empire (987–1697). The former centered in the S part of the Maya area and included such cities as Tikal, Copán, Uaxactún, Quiriguá, and Piedras Negras. The latter period centered in N Yucatán and included Uxmal, Mayapán, and Chichén Itzá, but in addition there were many other communities of various sizes throughout the Maya area. The coming of the Spanish resulted in the disruption of the religion of the Maya and with it much else that distinguished them. Though various Maya groups resisted the Spanish colonists into the 17th century, the priesthood, and with it the architectural and calendrical activities, ceased functioning early in the conquest. Fortunately, some of the details of legendary Maya history were preserved in books, such as the Popol Vuh, the books of the Chilam Balam, and the Annals of the Cakchiquel.

Mayaguana Island (mā.ą.gwä'nạ). [Also, Mariguana.] Small island in the Atlantic Ocean, NE of Cuba, part of the Bahama Islands: a British colony. The major industries are fishing and vegetable gardening. Area, ab. 96 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 600.

Mayagüez (mä.yä.gwās'). City in W Puerto Rico, on the Caribbean Sea: export port for sugar, coffee, tobacco, and fruit. It has sugar-refining and food-processing industries. 58,944 (1950).

Mayakovsky (mä.yä.kôf'ski), Vladimir Vladimirovich. b. at Bagdadi, in Caucasia, July 19, 1893; suicide at Moscow, April 14, 1930. Russian poet. He began by writing futurist poems, but after the Russian Revolution embraced the cause of Bolshevism and produced a mass of propagandist verse intended to promote the cause of the new regime. After his death he became the object of a semiofficial cult. Stalin said of him, "Mayakovsky was and remains the most talented poet of our Soviet epoch, and an indifferent attitude toward his memory and his works is a crime."

Mayan (mä'yạn). One of the principal Indian linguistic stocks of Central America, comprised of a number of languages and dialects spoken, among others, by the Maya of Yucatán, the Quiché and Cakchiquel of Guatemala, and the Huaxtec of the Veracruz area in Mexico. Though the Maya possessed a form of hieroglyphic writing, about half of the glyphs depict numbers, and despite the likelihood that the remaining glyphs had a phonetic value or otherwise represent a direct rendition of the language into permanent symbols, their meaning is not yet understood. However, most scholars in the field consider that they probably refer to cult activities, rituals, and astronomical events. The structure of the Mayan languages indicates a distant relationship between this linguistic stock and the Lencan, Uto-Aztecan, and Piman stocks.

Mayapán (mä.yä.pän'). Ruined Maya city in NW Yucatán, already abandoned at the time of the Spanish conquest. It was founded c950 A.D., and was the seat of the League of Mayapán, a political union of Mayapán, Uxmal, and Chichén Itzá, which endured from the early 11th century to the middle of the 15th century.

Maybach (mī'baċh), Wilhelm. b. at Heilbronn, Germany, Feb. 9, 1846; d. at Cannstatt, Germany, Dec. 29, 1929. German engineer, a pioneer in automobile construction. He was technical director (1895 et seq.) for the Daimler Motor Company at Cannstatt, built the first Mercedes automobile, and invented the float-feed carbureter.

Maybole (mā.bōl'). Police burgh and market town in SW Scotland, in Ayrshire, ab. 8 mi. S of Ayr, ab. 415 mi. N of London by rail: shoe industry. 4,847 (est. 1948).

May Day. First day of May; the day on which spring, the season of flowers and fruit, is celebrated throughout Europe, the U.S., and Canada. The chief traditional features of the celebration in Great Britain (where it is considered the first day of summer) have been the gathering of Mayflowers (hawthorn blossoms) and green branches, the crowning of a May queen, and dancing round a Maypole. In 20th-century Europe, particularly in the case of groups with a socialist-or communist tradition or affiliation, the day has become the chief holiday of workers, and on this day parades are held in honor of labor.

May Day. Comedy by George Chapman, acted in 1601 and printed in 1611. It is thought to be founded on a play of the same name, acted in 1595.

May-Day. Title piece in a collection of poems by Ralph Waldo Emerson, published in 1867.

May Dedalus (ded'ạ.lus, dē'dạ-). See Dedalus, May.

Mayen (mī'ẹn). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of Rhineland-Palatinate, French Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, situated in the Eifel Mountains, ab. 17 mi. W of Koblenz: livestock market; manufactures include shoes, cement, felt hats, and other products. 14,370 (1950).

Mayence (mä.yäṅs). French name of Mainz, Germany.

Mayenfeld (mī'ẹn.felt). See Maienfeld.

Mayenne (mä.yen). Department in NW France, bounded by Manche and Orne on the N, Sarthe on the E, Maine-et-Loire on the S, and Ille-et-Vilaine on the W. It was formed from the N and W parts of the old provinces of Maine and Anjou. The department was ravaged in the insurrection of the Vendée during the French Revolution, and suffered also during the Allied invasion in the summer of 1944. It is an agricultural department, producing wheat, potatoes, apples, horses, cattle, and pigs. Food-processing and beverage industries are the most important. There are marble quarries and some coal is mined. Capital, Laval; area, ab. 1,986 sq. mi.; pop. 256,317 (1946).

Mayenne. Town in NW France, in the department of Mayenne, on the Mayenne River. It is in the heart of a fertile agricultural region and has important linen manufactures. The town suffered much damage in 1944. The Church of Notre-Dame, in the Gothic style of the 12th century, was heavily damaged. 8,816 (1946).

Mayenne River. [Latin, Meduana.] River in NW France which unites near Angers with the Sarthe to form the Maine. Length, ab. 127 mi.; navigable from Laval.

Mayer (mā'ẽr, mār), Alfred Goldsborough. Original name of Mayor, Alfred Goldsborough.

Mayer, Alfred Marshall. b. at Baltimore, Nov. 13, 1836; d. July 13, 1897. American physicist, associated (1871–97) with Stevens Institute of Technology, where he organized the department of physics; nephew of Brantz Mayer. He was considered the leading authority of his day on acoustics. Author of The Earth a Great Magnet (1872), Light (1877), and Sound (1878).

Mayer, Brantz. b. at Baltimore, Sept. 27, 1809; d. there, Feb. 23, 1879. American journalist. He was editor of the Baltimore American, and was secretary of the U.S. legation in Mexico (1841 et seq.). During the Civil War he was commissioned colonel in the Union army. He published Mexico: Aztec, Spanish, and Republican (2 vols., 1853) and Captain Canot, a novel (1854).

Mayer (mī'ėr), Charles. b. at Königsberg, in East Prussia, March 21, 1799; d. at Dresden, Germany, July 2, 1862. German pianist and composer.

Mayer (mā.yer), Daniel. b. at Paris, April 29, 1909—. French political leader and journalist, a leader in the underground movement in France during World War II. An editor (1933–39) of the newspaper Le Populaire, he was chosen (1943) secretary-general of the Socialist Party, was reëlected (1944) to that post after the liberation of France, and was minister of labor (1947–49).

Mayer (mā'ėr, mär), Henry. [Called Hy Mayer.] b. at Worms, Germany, July 18, 1868—. American caricaturist, editor in chief of Punch, and author and illustrator of many books.

Mayer (mī'ėr), Johann Tobias. b. at Marbach, Württemberg, Germany, Feb. 17, 1723; d. at Göttingen, Germany, Feb. 20, 1762. German astronomer. He wrote Theoria lunae (1767) and Tabulae motuum solis et lunae (revised ed., 1770). He also published (1775) an excellent map of the moon.

Mayer, Julius Robert von. b. at Heilbronn, Württemberg, Germany, Nov. 25, 1814; d. there, March 20, 1878. German physician. He is regarded by many as the originator of the mechanical theory of heat. A collective edition of his works appeared in 1867 under the title Die Mechanik der Wärme.

Mayer (mā'ėr, mär), Louis Burt. b. at Minsk, Russia, July 4, 1885—. American motion-picture executive. Associated with motion pictures since 1907 (originally as a theater operator), he was a founder (1915) and vice-president of Metro Pictures Corporation and founder of Louis B. Mayer Pictures Corporation, which merged (1924) into the former organization. This combination later merged with the Goldwyn Company as Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation, of which Mayer was (until 1952) first vice-president in charge of production.

Mayer (mā.yer), René. b. at Paris, May 4, 1895—. French political leader and railway executive, a leader of the Free French regime during World War II and a member of the cabinet under the Fourth Republic. He joined (1943) the Free French movement in Algiers holding various ministerial posts, was general commissioner for German affairs (1945–46), and served as minister of finance (1947–48) and as delegate (1948–49) to the United Nations. He was premier for a short time in October, 1949, and served as minister of justice (1949–51). After the resignation of the Queuille cabinet in July, 1951, he was one of those who failed to find support as premier, eventually becoming vice-premier and finance minister in the Pleven cabinet. The fall of Pleven's government was due to a vote on budgetary matters and Mayer thereafter refused a place in the succeeding cabinet.

Mayer (mī'ėr), Simone. Original name of Mayr, Johann Simon.

Mayerling (mī'ėr.ling). Village in E Austria, in the province of Lower Austria ab. 17 mi. SW of Vienna. In the former royal hunting lodge here Crown Prince Rudolf of Austria and his sweetheart, Baroness Vetsera, died under mysterious circumstances on Jan. 30, 1889.

Mayfair (mā'fār). Locality in London, E of Hyde Park. All streets N of Piccadilly now lead into the district of Mayfair, which takes its name from a fair which used to be held in Shepherd's Market and its surrounding streets.

Mayfield (mā'fēld). City in SW Kentucky, county seat of Graves County: manufactures of clothing, furniture, tobacco, and dairy products. 8,990 (1950).

Mayfield. Borough in NE Pennsylvania, in Lackawanna County, NE of Scranton: coal mining. 2,373 (1950).

Mayfield Heights. Village in NE Ohio, in Cuyahoga County: an eastern residential suburb of Cleveland. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population more than doubled: 2,696 (1940), 5,807 (1950).

May Fleming (mā flem'ing), Lady. See Fleming, Lady May.

Mayflower (mā'flou''ėr). Ship of about 180 tons burden, in which the English Pilgrims sailed from Southampton to Plymouth, Mass., in September, 1620. Some of them had left Leiden for Delfshaven, near Rotterdam, and embarked there in the Speedwell some weeks before, joining the others at Southampton. The Speedwell proved unfit for the voyage and the Mayflower sailed alone.

Mayflower Compact. Name given to the agreement concluded (Nov. 11, 1620) by the men aboard the Mayflower, as that vessel lay in what is now the harbor of Provincetown, Mass. By this compact the Pilgrims voluntarily agreed to form a local government based on the common will. According to William Bradford, some of the persons drawn from London were "undesirable" and boasted that after landing they would fend for themselves. The Compact was a measure to establish some form of jurisdiction. It was not intended as a constitution, but was an extension of the customary church covenant to civil circumstances. The Plymouth settlers were never able to secure a charter; thus, the Mayflower Compact remained the only form of constitution of the colony.

Mayhew (mā'hū), Augustus Septimus. b. at London, 1826; d. there, Dec. 25, 1875. English comic author and dramatist; brother of Horace Mayhew. Author of Paved with Gold, or Romance and Reality of London Streets (1857), The Finest Girl in Bloomsbury (1861), Faces for Fortunes (1865), and other stories of London life; and coauthor of six farces (1851–71). He was associated with the Comic Almanac as contributor (1845–53) and editor (1848–50).

Mayhew, Experience. b. in Martha's Vineyard, Mass., Feb. 5, 1673; d. there, Nov. 29, 1758. American missionary to the Indians in Martha's Vineyard; grandson of Thomas Mayhew (c1621–57).

Mayhew, Horace. b. at London, 1816; d. at Kensington, London, April 30, 1872. English comic author and journalist; brother of Augustus Septimus Mayhew. Author of Plum Pudding Pantomime (1847), Change for a Shilling (1848), Model Men (1848), Model Women (1848), A Plate of Heads (1849), The Toothache (1849), Guy Faux (1849), and Letters Left at the Pastry-Cook's (1853). He is best known for his contributions to Cruikshank's Table Book (1845), to Lloyd's Weekly News (1852), and to Punch.

Mayhew, Jonathan. b. in Martha's Vineyard, Mass., Oct. 8, 1720; d. at Boston, July 9, 1766. American clergyman, controversialist, and advocate of liberalism; son of Experience Mayhew.

Mayhew, Thomas. b. in England, 1593; d. March 25, 1682. English colonial settler, administrator, and missionary in America. He arrived (c1632) at Medford, Mass., and bought (1641) Martha's Vineyard, Nantucket, and the Elizabeth Islands, settling (1646) on Martha's Vineyard. He proceeded (1657 et seq.) with the conversion of the Indians begun by his son Thomas Mayhew. He was governor (1671–82) of Martha's Vineyard.

Mayhew, Thomas. b. in England, c1621; d. at sea, 1657. American Congregational clergyman and missionary; son of Thomas Mayhew (1593–1682). He led (1642) in the settlement of Martha's Vineyard, and founded (1652) a school for Indian children.

Ma Yin-ch'u (mä' yin'chö'). b. in Chekiang, China, 1882—. Chinese economist. He was arrested (1940) for criticizing Kuomintang wartime economic policies, and eventually sided with the Communists, receiving (1949) the posts of president of National Chekiang University and vice-chairman of the economic and financial committee of the People's Republic of China.

Maykop (mī.kôp'). See Maikop.

May Laws (mā). Series of Prussian laws passed 1873–74, and modified in 1887, regulating ecclesiastical matters. They restricted the power of the church over individuals and property, and are so named because first promulgated in May, 1873. The May Laws were the essential part of Bismarck's Kulturkampf.

Mayna (mī'nā). See Maina.

Maynard (mā'nard). Town (in Massachusetts the equivalent of township in many other states) and unincorporated village in E Massachusetts, in Middlesex County, ab. 21 mi. NW of downtown Boston: manufactures of woolen goods. Pop. of town, 6,978 (1950); of village, 6,690 (1950).

Maynard, Charles Johnson. b. at West Newton, Mass., May 6, 1845; d. there, Oct. 15, 1929. American ornithologist and naturalist.

Maynard, Edward. b. at Madison, N.Y., April 26, 1813; d. at Washington, D.C., May 4, 1891. American inventor of firearms, and dentist. He practiced (1836 et seq.) dentistry at Washington, D.C., introduced (1836) the concept of dental fevers, and used (1838) the first gold fillings. He patented (1845) a tape primer for firearms. His other patents include improvements in breech loading, a method of joining two barrels to permit expansion or contraction, and a device to indicate the number of cartridges in a barrel.

Maynard, Frances Evelyn. See Warwick, Countess of.

Maynard, George Willoughby. b. at Washington, D.C., March 5, 1843; d. April 5, 1923. American painter; son of Edward Maynard. He was elected a member of the National Academy in 1885.

Maynard, Horace. b. at Westboro, Mass., Aug. 30, 1814; d. at Knoxville, Tenn., May 3, 1882. American politician, U.S. postmaster general (1880–81) under Hayes. He was congressman (1857–63, 1866–75) from Tennessee, and U.S. minister to Turkey (1875–80).

Maynard Gilfil (gil'fil), Rev. See Gilfil, Rev. Maynard.

Maynas y Quijos (mī'näs ē kē'ʜōs). Colonial intendencia of Peru, subsequently a department. It corresponded to the present departments of Amazonas, Loreto, and San Martín.

Mayne (mān), Ethel Colburn. [Pseudonym, Frances E. Huntly.] d. at Torquay, Devonshire, England, April 30, 1941. English journalist, critic, novelist, and biographer. She began writing (1895) for the Yellow Book and Chapman's Magazine under the pseudonym Frances E. Huntly, a name she dropped in 1898. She contributed articles, essays, and literary criticism to the Nation, Daily News, Daily Chronicle, and Yorkshire Post, and translated works from Russian, French, and German. Author of Jessie Vandeleur (1902), The Fourth Ship (1908), Gold Lace—A Study of Girlhood (1913), and One of Our Grandmothers (1916), novels; The Clearer Vision (1898), Things That No One Tells (1910), Come In (1917), Blindman (1919), Nine of Hearts (1923), and Inner Circle (1925), collected short stories; Enchanters of Men (1909), The Romance of Monaco and Its Rulers (1910), Byron (1912), Browning's Heroines (1913), Life and Letters of Anne Isabella, Lady Noel Byron (1929), and Regency Chapter—Lady Bessborough and Her Friendships (1939), literary and social studies.

Maynooth (mā.nöth', mā'nöth). Town in E Irish Republic, in County Kildare, situated on the Royal Canal, ab. 13 mi. W of Dublin. It is the seat of the Royal College of St. Patrick, the principal Roman Catholic college in Ireland for the training of priests. 632 (1936).

Mayo (mā'ō). See also Niger River.

Mayo. [Irish, Muigheo (mwē'ō).] Maritime county, in W Irish Republic, in Connacht province. It is bounded on the W and N by the Atlantic Ocean, on the NE by County Sligo, on the E by County Roscommon, and on the S by County Galway. The coastline is very irregular and deeply indented. Numerous islands, the largest of which is Achill, are found offshore. The surface is mountainous in the W portion. Elsewhere it is level or hilly. Potatoes and oats, and cattle, sheep, and pigs are raised in the C lowland portion of the county. Large numbers of sheep are pastured on the uplands. Fisheries along the coast are locally important. The county has manufactures of linen textiles. County seat, Castlebar; area, ab. 2,084 sq. mi.; pop. 141,896 (1951).

Mayo (mā'yō). Indian tribe in S Sonora and W Sinaloa, Mexico. At the time of the Spanish conquest they were easily subjected and quickly Christianized. Their language is a dialect (with Yaqui) of the Cahitan language, which belongs to the Taracahitian group of the Uto-Aztecan family of languages.

Mayo (mā'ō), Charles Horace. b. at Rochester, Minn., July 19, 1865; d. at Chicago, May 26, 1939. American surgeon, a specialist in goiter operations; son of William Worrall Mayo. He was in practice (1888 et seq.) at Rochester, Minn., professor of surgery at the Medical School (1919–36) and the Graduate School (1915–36) of the University of Minnesota, and health officer (1912–37) of Rochester. He was cofounder (1915) with his brother William James Mayo of the Mayo Foundation for Medical Education and Research in conjunction with the University of Minnesota, the brothers donating together 2,800,000 dollars.

Mayo, Frank. b. at Boston, April 18, 1839; d. near Grand Island, Neb., June 8, 1896. American actor, remembered chiefly for character parts. His two greatest leads were in Davy Crockett, in which he acted (1872 et seq.) on both sides of the Atlantic, and Pudd'nhead Wilson, which he had adapted (1895) for the stage.

Mayo, Henry Thomas. b. at Burlington, Vt., Dec. 8, 1856; d. Feb. 23, 1937. American naval officer. With the rank of admiral, he was commander (1916–19) of the Atlantic fleet throughout the period of American participation in World War I.

Mayo, John. See Mayow or Mayouwe or Mayo, John.

Mayo, Katherine. b. at Ridgeway, Pa., 1867; d. at Bedford Hills, N.Y., Oct. 9, 1940. American writer. Author of Justice to All (1917), The Standard Bearers (1918), That Damn Y (1920), Mounted Justice (1922), Isles of Fear (1925), Mother India (1927), Slaves of the Gods (1929), Soldiers—What Next? (1934), The Face of Mother India (1935), and General Washington's Dilemma (1938).

Mayo, Robert. Character in Beyond the Horizon (1920), drama by Eugene O'Neill.

Mayo, William James. b. at Le Sueur, Minn., June 29, 1861; d. July 28, 1939. American surgeon, specialist in cancer and gallstone operations; son of William Worrall Mayo. He practiced (1883 et seq.) surgery at Rochester, Minn., and was surgeon (1889 et seq.) at what is now Saint Mary's Hospital. He was cofounder (1915) with his brother Charles Horace Mayo of the Mayo Foundation for Medical Education and Research at Rochester.

Mayo, William Starbuck. b. at Ogdensburg, N.Y., April 15, 1811; d. at New York, Nov. 22, 1895. American novelist. His first work, Kaloolah or Journeyings to the Djebel Kumri (1849), was compared to Herman Melville's Typee. The Berber; or, the Mountaineer of the Atlas (1850) set forth Moorish life in Barbary, and Never Again (1873) treated of New York society.

Mayo, William Worrall. b. at Manchester, England, May 31, 1819; d. at Rochester, Minn., March 6, 1911. American surgeon; father of Charles Horace and William James Mayo, founders of the Mayo Clinic. He settled (1863) at Rochester, Minn. He was surgeon (1862) with a force sent to Minnesota to settle a Sioux Indian uprising, and served as provost surgeon (1863 et seq.) for southern Minnesota. He was head (1883) of an emergency hospital aided by the order of Saint Francis, which erected (1885) what is now Saint Mary's Hospital.

Mayobanex or Maiobanex (mī''ō.bä.neks'). d. 1498 or 1499. Indian cacique of the eastern part of the island of Hispaniola. In 1498 he joined with Guarionex in war on the Spaniards, and was captured and executed.

Mayombe (mä.yôm'bā). See Yombe.

Mayon (mä.yōn'). Volcano in the S part of Luzon, Philippine Islands, in Albay province NW of the Albay Gulf. Elevation, ab. 7,943 ft.

Mayor (mā'ọr, mār), Alfred Goldsborough. [Name legally changed in 1918 from Mayer.] b. near Frederick, Md., April 16, 1868; d. at Dry Tortugas, Fla., June 24, 1922. American marine biologist; son of Alfred Marshall Mayer. He accompanied Alexander Agassiz's marine expeditions as an illustrator. He was assistant (1895–1900) in charge of radiates at the Museum of Comparative Zoölogy at Harvard, and first director (1904–22) of the Carnegie Institution's marine laboratory at Dry Tortugas, Fla., where he did research on coral reefs.

Mayorga (mä.yôr'gä), Martin de. b. in Catalonia, Spain, c1715; d. at sea, 1783. Spanish general and administrator.

Mayor of Casterbridge (kȧs'tėr.brij), The. Novel by Thomas Hardy, published in 1886. "Casterbridge" is Hardy's name for the old Roman Dorsetshire town of Dorchester, where Michael Henchard, hero of this story, rises to the position of mayor, only to have his own irascible temper, together with some unfortunate accidents, bring him to ruin. The novel opens with a striking incident in which Henchard sells his wife, and ends with his poignant and tragic death.

Mayor of Garratt (gar'ạt), The. Play by Samuel Foote, produced in 1763.

Mayor of Quinborough (kwin'bur.ō, -bėr.ō), The. Comedy by Thomas Middleton, printed in 1661. It was probably written or sketched before 1602.

Mayorunas (mā.yō.rō'nąz). Tribe of South American Indians, in Brazil and E Peru, in the marshes and swamps south of the Amazon and east of the lower Ucayali River. Their language, Mayoruna, is generally classified as a Panoan language, although some scholars can see no Panoan relation, and some regard it as an independent family in itself.

Mayo-Smith (mā'ō.smith'), Richmond. b. at Troy, Ohio, Feb. 9, 1854; d. at New York, Nov. 11, 1901. American economist. He was adjunct professor (1878–83) of political economy and social science, professor (1883 et seq.) and member of the council (1890–1901) of Columbia University at New York. Author of Emigration and Immigration (1890), Science of Statistics (Vol. I, Statistics and Sociology, 1895, and Vol. II, Statistics and Economics, 1899), and numerous papers.

Mayotte (mą.yot'). Southeasternmost of the Comoro Islands, a French dependency, in the Mozambique Channel between Madagascar and SE Africa. The chief products are sugar cane and vanilla. Area, ab. 140 sq. mi.; pop. 19,043 (est. 1950).

Mayow or Mayouwe or Mayo (mā'ō), John. b. at London, in May, 1643; d. there, Oct. 10, 1679. English physiologist and chemist, discoverer of laws in regard to respiration. He discovered the double articulation of the ribs with the spine. His views on the function of the internal intercostals were long a subject of considerable dispute. They were set forth in his Tractatus quinque Medico-Physici (1674). The book contained his earlier work, Tractatus duo, de Respiratione et de Rachitide (1668).

Maypole of Merrymount (mer'i.mount), The. Allegorical tale by Nathaniel Hawthorne, originally published in 1836 and collected in Twice-Told Tales (1837). It is the source of Howard Hanson's opera Merry Mount (1932).

Maypuré (mī.pö.rā'). See Maipuré.

May Queen, The. Poem by Alfred Tennyson, published in 1832.

May Queen, The. Cantata by W. Sterndale Bennett, produced in 1858. The words are by H. F. Chorley.

Mayr (mīr), George von. b. at Würzburg, Germany, Feb. 12, 1841; d. at Tutzing, Germany, Sept. 6, 1925. German economist and statistician.

Mayr, Johann. See Eck, Johann.

Mayr, Johann Simon. [Original name, Simone Mayer.] b. at Mendorf, Bavaria, Germany, June 14, 1763; d. at Bergamo, Italy, Dec. 2, 1845. German operatic composer. Gaetano Donizetti was one of his pupils at the musical institute at Bergamo, and he is said to have been the first to introduce the crescendo of the orchestra to which Gioacchino Rossini owes so much of his fame. Among his operas are Saffo, Lodoiska, Ginevra di Scozia, Lauso e Lidia, Medea, and Rosa blanca e Rosa rossa.

Mayr, Richard. b. Nov. 18, 1877; d. at Vienna, Dec. 1, 1935. Austrian operatic baritone. He was a member (1902–35) of the Vienna Opera.

Maysville (māz'vil). [Former name, Limestone.] City in NE Kentucky, county seat of Mason County, a river port on the Ohio River ab. 52 mi. SE of Cincinnati. It was formerly an important shipbuilding center, and has machinery, distilling, and other industries. It was established in 1787. Pop. 8,632 (1950).

Mayta Ccapac (mī'tä kä'päk). d. c1300 (according to Acosta in 1255, and by other accounts c1211). Fourth Inca war chief of Peru.

Mayumba (mä.yüm'bä). See Yombe.

Mayville (mā'vil). City in SE Wisconsin, in Dodge County: manufactures include cheese and other dairy products. 3,010 (1950).

Maywood (mā'wůd). City in S California, in Los Angeles County: a southeastern residential and industrial suburb of Los Angeles. 13,292 (1950).

Maywood. Village in NE Illinois, in Cook County: a western suburb of Chicago. 27,473 (1950).

Maywood. Borough in NE New Jersey, in Bergen County, near Paterson. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population more than doubled. 4,052 (1940), 8,667 (1950).

Mazade (mä.zäd), Louis Charles Jean Robert de. b. at Castel-Sarrazin, Tarn-et-Garonne, France, 1820; d. at Paris, April 27, 1893. French author, editor, and critic.

Mazagan (maz.ą.gan'). [Arabic, El Jedida.] Seaport in NW Africa, in French Morocco, situated on the Atlantic coast ab. 60 mi. SW of Casablanca. It ships vegetables, eggs, fruits, and almonds. The town was founded in 1502 by the Portuguese, who held it until 1769. It was occupied by the French in 1907. Pop. 40,318 (1946).

Mazama (mą.zä'mą), Mount. See under Crater Lake National Park.

Mazamet (mä.zä.me). Town in S France, in the department of Tarn, ab. 50 mi. SE of Toulouse. It is one of the most important woolen textile towns in S France. It is also the leading French center for the separation of lambskin and wool, and is known for its wool auctions. 15,083 (1946).

Mazanderan (mä''zän.de.rän'). [Also, Mazandaran (-dä-).] Region and former province in N Iran, S of the Caspian Sea: mostly low coastland, ab. 200 mi. long and 50 broad. Cotton, opium, barley, and rye are grown. Capital, Babul; area, ab. 7,518 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 300,000.

Mazanderani (mä''zän.de.rä'nē). [Also, Mazandarani (-dä-).] People of Mazanderan, on the coast of the Caspian Sea, N Iran. Their language, Mazanderani, is one of the Caspian dialects, belonging to the Western branch of the Iranian group of the Indo-Iranian subfamily of Indo-European languages.

Mazar (mä.zär'). [Also, Mazar-i-Sharif.] Major province of Afghanistan, a mountainous region in the N central part of the country. It is well watered but much of the area is mountainous, and population is concentrated in the valley oases. Capital, Mazar-i-Sharif; pop. ab. 950,000.

Mazara del Vallo (mä.tsä'rä del väl'lō). [Also: Mazara; formerly spelled Mazzara, or Mazzara del Vallo.] Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Trapani, situated on the Mediterranean Sea ab. 53 mi. SW of Palermo. Wines of the Marsala type are grown here; it is a fishing port. Some damage was suffered during World War II by buildings of tourist interest, but repairs have been completed or are being carried out. Pop. of commune, 26,028 (1936); of town, 24,276 (1936).

Mazarin (mä.zä.raṅ), Collège. See Collège Mazarin.

Mazarin (maz'ą.rin; French, mä.zä.raṅ), Duchesse de. See Mancini, Hortense.

Mazarin, Jules. [Italian, Giulio Mazarini (mä.tsä.rē'-nē).] b. at Pescina, Abruzzi e Molise, Italy, July 14, 1602; d. at Vincennes, Seine, France, March 9, 1661. French statesman. He was descended from a Sicilian family, studied at a Jesuit college at Rome and at the University of Alcalá, Spain, and in 1622 entered the papal military service. He was afterward employed in various diplomatic missions, and attracted the attention of Richelieu, at whose instance he entered the French service. He became a naturalized Frenchman in 1639, and in 1641 was made a cardinal on the presentation of Louis XIII, although he had never taken anything but minor orders. He was appointed prime minister on the death of Richelieu in 1642, and was retained in office by the queen regent, Anne of Austria, after the death of Louis XIII in 1643. He continued the foreign policy of Richelieu, which looked to the abatement of the power of the house of Austria by interfering in favor of the Protestants in the Thirty Years' War, and which resulted in complete success at the peace of Westphalia in 1648. At home his policy of centralizing all administrative authority in the crown, also a legacy from Richelieu, was opposed by the nobles and the Parliament of Paris, and gave rise to the wars of the Fronde (1648–53), during which he was twice expelled by his opponents from the court (1651–52 and 1652–53). In 1659 he concluded the peace of the Pyrenees, putting an end to the hostilities with Spain which had sprung up during the Thirty Years' War, and securing an increase of French territory. Mazarin's policy of destroying the power of the nobility while strengthening that of the crown established the basis of the great power held by Louis XIV. Mazarin himself built a great fortune, which he used to create the famous Mazarin library and to patronize such figures as Descartes and Pierre Corneille.

Mazarin Bible. Edition of the Bible printed by Johann Gutenberg at Mainz in 1450–55, being the first book ever printed with movable types. It is so named because the first known copy of it was discovered in the Mazarin library at Paris in 1760.

Mazar-i-Sharif (mä.zär'ē sha.rēf'). City in N Afghanistan, the capital of Mazar province, ab. 200 mi. NW of Kabul. It is a trading center in an irrigated area producing grain, cotton, silk, fruits, and vegetables. Elevation, ab. 1,240 ft.; pop. 41,960 (1948).

Mazarrón (mä.thär.rōn'). Town in SE Spain, in the province of Murcia, situated near the Mediterranean, ab. 19 mi. W of Cartagena: soap and paper industries. The harbor, united with the town by a railroad line, has important lead works; lead, copper, and iron mines are in the neighboring Sierra de Almenara. 11,569 (1940).

Mazaruni (maz.ą.rō'ni). River in W and N central British Guiana, flowing generally E in a winding course to join the Essequibo at Bartica, ab. 45 mi. SW of Georgetown. Length, ab. 350 mi.

Mazas (mä.zä), Jacques Féréol. b. at Beziers, France, Sept. 23, 1782; d. there, 1849. French violinist and composer. His works include operas, chamber music, and violin compositions and studies.

Mazatenango (mä"sä.tä.näng'gō). Town in SW Guatemala, capital of Suchitepéquez department. It was originally an Indian stronghold, taken by the Spaniards in 1525. Pop. 10,735 (1950).

Mazatlán (mä.sä.tlän'). Town in W Mexico, in Sinaloa state, on the Pacific Ocean: principal port of W Mexico. It has sugar-refining, tobacco, and textile industries. The chief exports are bananas, tobacco, hides, and metals. During the Mexican War, in 1847, it was captured by U.S. forces. On Nov. 13, 1864, a French fleet captured the town after a short bombardment; it was recaptured on Nov. 13, 1866, by the Mexicans. 32,117 (1940).

Maze (māz), Hippolyte. b. at Arras, France, Nov. 5, 1839; d. at Paris, Oct. 25, 1891. French statesman and historian.

Mazedonien (mä.tsę.dō'nyęn). German name of Macedonia.

Mazeline (māz.lēn), Guy. b. 1900—. French novelist and journalist, known chiefly for the novel Les Loups (1933).

Mazeppa (mą.zep'ą). Orchestral tone poem by Franz Liszt, composed in 1858. The work is based on a story of the same title by Victor Hugo.

Mazeppa. Opera in three acts by P. I. Tschaikovsky, with a libretto by Bourenin, first performed at Moscow in 1883. The work is based on a poem by Pushkin entitled Poltava.

Mazeppa, Ivan. b. 1644; d. at Bendery, in Moldavia, Russia, Aug. 22, 1709. Cossack chief. He was descended from a poor but noble family in Podolia, and was educated as a page at the court of John II (John Casimir), king of Poland. Having been detected in an intrigue with a Polish lady of high rank, he was by order of the injured husband bound naked on the back of an untamed horse from the Ukraine. The horse on being let loose galloped off to its native haunts, where it was caught by some Cossack peasants. Mazeppa remained among the Cossacks, whose hetman or chief he became in 1687. He enjoyed the favor of Peter the Great, who gave him the title of Prince of the Ukraine. With a view to making himself independent of Russia, he conspired first with Stanislas Leszczyński of Poland, and afterward with Charles XII of Sweden. Besieged by the Russians in his capital Baturin, he escaped to the camp of Charles XII, whom he accompanied to Bendery after the battle of Poltava. He committed suicide by taking poison. Byron made him the subject of a poem in 1819.

Mazillier (mä.zē.yā). b. at Marseilles, France, 1797; d. at Paris, 1868. French dancer and composer of ballets.

Mazitu (mä.zē'tö). See Ngoni.

Mazlum Pasha (mäz'lům pä'shą), Ahmed. d. May 8, 1928. Egyptian statesman.

Mazovia (mą.zō'vi.ą). See Masovia.

Mažuranić (mä.zhö'rä.nēch), Ivan. b. c1814; d. 1890. Croatian poet, governor (ban) of Croatia (1873–80). His chief work is an epic national poem.

Mazzara (mät.tsä'rä) or Mazzara del Vallo (del väl'lō). See Mazara del Vallo.

Mazzarino (mät.tsä.rē'nō). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Caltanissetta, ab. 47 mi. SW of Catania. It is in a wine-making and citrus-fruit district. Pop. of commune, 17,715 (1936); of town, 16,926 (1936).

Mazzinghi (mät.sing'gi), Joseph. b. at London, Dec. 25, 1765; d. at Bath, England, Jan. 15, 1844. English organist and operatic composer.

Mazzini (mät.tsē'nē, mäd.dzē'nē), Giuseppe. b. at Genoa, Italy, c1805; d. at Pisa, Italy, March 10, 1872. Italian patriot and revolutionist. He graduated at the University of Genoa in 1826, became a member of the bar of that city, and joined (1830) the Carbonari, the Italian republican underground. In 1830 he was arrested by the authorities of Piedmont on the charge of conspiring against the government, but after an imprisonment of six months was released for want of sufficient evidence to procure a conviction. He thereupon left Italy and resided successively at Marseilles, Paris, and London, whence he conducted agitations for the liberation of Italy. Among his writings was a widely circulated letter to Charles Albert, King of Sardinia, so inflammatory that Mazzini was put under perpetual banishment. He founded (c1832) the secret revolutionary society of "Young Italy," whose object was the unification of Italy under a republican government. He returned to Italy at the outbreak of the revolutionary movements of 1848, and in 1849 became a member of the triumvirate in the short-lived republic at Rome, being again driven into exile on the restoration of the papal government (1849). He afterward organized insurrections at Mantua (1852), Milan (1853), and Genoa (1857), but played a subordinate part in the movement which resulted in the unification of Italy (except Venice and the Papal States) under Victor Emmanuel I in 1861. Unwilling to take the oath of allegiance to a monarchy, he remained abroad. In 1870 he took part in an insurrection at Palermo, during which he was captured. He was, however, released by the general amnesty published by the Italian government after the occupation of Rome.

Mazzola (mät.tsô'lä), Francesco Maria. See Parmigiano, Il.

Mazzolini (mät.tsō.lē'nē), Lodovico. b. c1481; d. c1530. Italian painter, of the school of Ferrara.

Mazzuola (mät.tswô'lä) or Mazzuoli (-lē), Francesco Maria. See Parmigiano Il.

Mbabane (ęm.bä.bän'). Town in NW Swaziland, S Africa, capital of the territory. Tin mining is carried on in the vicinity. European pop. 501 (1946).

Mbailundu (ęm.bī.lön'dö). [Also, Bailundo.] One of 13 independent kingdoms of the Mbundu, a Bantu-speaking people of SW Africa, in C Angola. Its tributaries include the Kasongi, Ngalanga, Chivanda, Namba, Sanga, Chenge, and Chipeyo.

Mbala (ęm.bä'lä). [Also: Ambala, Bambala.] Bantu-speaking people of C Africa, inhabiting an area S of the Kwilu River, in SW Belgian Congo. Among the Mbala the wealthiest individual in each village serves as the village chief. They have matrilineal descent. Cannibalism is commonly practiced among the Mbala, except by members of a special hereditary group known as Muri. The Mbala practice hoe agriculture, and their principal food is cassava. They are active in trade with neighboring tribes.

Mbalantu (ęm.bä.län'tö). [Also, Ombalantu.] Subgroup of the Bantu-speaking Mbo, inhabiting N South-West Africa and S Angola.

Mbalu (ęm.bä'lö). [Also, Amambalu.] Subgroup of the Bantu-speaking Xhosa people of S Africa.

Mbamba (ęm.bäm'bä). [Also, Bamba.] One of six former provinces of the African kingdom of Kongo.

Mbangala (ęm.bäng.gä'lä). [Also: Bangela, Imbangala, Quimbangala.] Bantu-speaking people of C Africa, inhabiting a region in N Angola, E of Luanda. Their language is known as Umbangala. They are also known as Kasanji, or Cassange, from the title of their head chief.

Mbanja (ęm.bän'jä). [Also, Ombandja.] Subgroup of the Bantu-speaking Mbo, inhabiting N South-West Africa.

Mbanjeru (ęm.bän.jā'rö). [Also, Ovambandieru.] Subgroup of the Herero, a Bantu-speaking people of South-West Africa. Their population is estimated at 3,000 (by H. Vedder, 1928).

Mbata (ęm.bä'tä). [Also: Bambata, Batta.] Bantu-speaking people of NW Angola, formerly one of the six provinces of the African kingdom of Kongo.

Mbaya (ęm.bä.yä'). Indian tribe, now greatly reduced in size, inhabiting the area in the vicinity of latitude 22° S. and longitude 57° W., in the Chaco, region of South America. The language is of the Guaicuruan family.

Mbo (ẹm.bō′) or Ovambo (ō.väm′bō). [Also, Ambo.] Bantu-speaking people of C Africa, inhabiting N South-West Africa and S Angola. They are divided into 13 independent subgroups, the Ehanda, Esinga, Eunda, Evale, Kashima, Kwaluthi, Kwambi, Kwanyama, Mbalantu, Mbanja, Ndonga, Nganjera, and Nkolonkathi. The Kwanyama and Ndonga constitute well over one half of their total population, which is estimated at ab. 200,000 (by C. H. L. Hahn, "The Ovambo," in The Native Tribes of South West Africa, by C. H. L. Hahn, L. Fourie, and H. Vedder, 1928). Hereditary kings, who also act as rain-makers, rule the Ndonga, Kwambi, Nganjera, and Kwaluthi, while in other groups this organization has disappeared and political affairs are administered by councils of local headmen under the supervision of the European administration. Each family keeps a sacred fire, lighted from that of the headman, which in turn is lighted from that of the king. These fires cannot be used for cooking or for warmth, and if the king's sacred fire were to go out it would be regarded as an evil omen for all his followers. The Mbo practice hoe agriculture and herding; their principal foods are millet and sorghum.

Mbo or Ambo (äm′bō). Bantu-speaking people of SE Africa, inhabiting an area in C Northern Rhodesia. Culturally and linguistically they resemble the Nyanja.

Mbo or Abambo (ä.bäm′bō). Bantu-speaking people of the N Nguni group in S Africa, inhabiting the province of Natal in the Union of South Africa, and largely assimilated by the surrounding Zulu.

Mbouti (ẹm.bö.tē). French form of Mbuti.

Mbuin (ẹm.bö′ēn). Subgroup of the Sudanic-speaking Senufo of W Africa, inhabiting N Ivory Coast. Their population is estimated at ab. 30,000 (by M. Delafosse, Haut-Sénégal-Niger, 1912).

Mbunda (ẹm.bön′dä). [Also, Bambunda.] Bantu-speaking people of C Africa, inhabiting W Northern Rhodesia and E Angola. Linguistically they are related to the Luba; culturally they resemble the Lozi, the rulers of the Rotse kingdom, of which the Mbunda formed a part. They number ab. 25,000.

Mbundu (ẹm.bön′dö). [Also: Umbundu, Ovinbundu.] Bantu-speaking people of C Africa, inhabiting the highlands of C Angola. Mbundu emigrants are scattered in neighboring colonies and in the Union of South Africa. Their population is estimated at ab. 1,350,000 (by G. M. Childs, Umbundu Kinship and Character, 1949, based on the 1940 census). The Mbundu are divided into 13 independent kingdoms, Chingolo, Chitata, Chivula, Chiyaka, Ekekete, Kakonda, Kalukembe, Mbailundu, Ngalangi, Ndulu, Sambu, Viye, Wambu, and nine other kingdoms which are tributaries of Mbailundu, Wambu, and Chiyaka. As among the Herero, the system of clans is dual. A set of patrilineal clans controls the sacred fire and political succession, and owns and inherits land. A set of matrilineal clans, whose members are scattered, controls the inheritance of cattle. Formerly an individual always married within his matrilineal or patrilineal clan, and marriage with a cross-cousin in the matrilineal clan was preferred. The Mbundu practice hoe agriculture and herding, and their principal food is maize.

Mbuti (ẹm.bö′tē). [Also: Bambuti; French, Bambouti, Mbouti, Wambouti.] Eastern Pygmies of C Africa, inhabiting a forest region of NE Belgian Congo. They number ab. 30,000, and comprise the Aka, the Lua (who are sometimes called Mbuti), and the Efe.

Mbwela (ẹm.bwā′lä). [Also, Amboella.] Bantu-speaking people of C Africa, inhabiting the headwaters of the Zambezi River in SE Angola.

McAdam (mą.kad′ąm), John Loudon. b. at Ayr, Scotland, Sept. 21, 1756; d. at Moffat, Scotland, Nov. 26, 1836. Scottish engineer, inventor of the technique of macadamizing roads. Soon after 1783 he began experimenting in methods of road-building and after several years decided that crushed stone was the best road material. He became surveyor general of roads for Bristol (1815) and, after an inquiry by Parliament into road-building, general surveyor of roads (1827).

McAdoo (mak′ą.dö). Borough in E central Pennsylvania, in Schuylkill County: coal mining; manufactures of boxes and textiles. It was established in 1880. Pop. 4,260 (1950).

McAdoo, William. b. at Rathmelton, County Donegal, Ireland, Oct. 25, 1853; d. June 7, 1930. American lawyer and politician. He was U.S. congressman (1883–91, from New Jersey, assistant secretary (1893–97) of the navy, and chief city magistrate (1910 et seq.) of New York.

McAdoo, William Gibbs. b. near Marietta, Ga., Oct. 31, 1863; d. Feb. 1, 1941. American lawyer and railway president, secretary of the treasury (1913–18). In 1903 he was elected president of the Hudson Manhattan Railroad Company, which completed the tunnels under the Hudson River (opened to traffic, 1908). He was acting chairman of the Democratic National Committee in 1912, and U.S. director general (1917–19) of railways. In 1920 McAdoo, A. Mitchell Palmer, and James A. Cox remained deadlocked at the Democratic National Convention until Cox was nominated on the 44th ballot. In 1924 the deadlock lasted even longer; this time McAdoo was opposed by Alfred E. Smith, and after nine days and 103 ballots, both candidates withdrew and the nomination went to John W. Davis. McAdoo sought the nomination again in 1928, but Smith won on the first ballot. In 1932 McAdoo swung his California delegation to Franklin Roosevelt on the fourth ballot and assured his nomination; McAdoo was elected that year to a term in the U.S. Senate. He married (1914) Eleanor Randolph Wilson, daughter of Woodrow Wilson.

McAfee (mak′ą.fē), Cleland Boyd. b. at Ashley, Mo., Sept. 25, 1866; d. at Asheville, N.C., Feb. 4, 1944. American Presbyterian clergyman.

McAfee, Mildred Helen. [Married name, Mrs. Douglas Horton.] b. at Parkville, Mo., May 12, 1900—. American college president. She served as dean of women and professor of sociology (1927–32) at Centre College, Danville, Ky., as dean of women (1934–36) at Oberlin College, and president (1936–48) of Wellesley College. She was director (1942–46) of the Women's Reserve of the U.S. Naval Reserve (Waves).

McAlester (mą.kal′ęs.tėr). City in SE Oklahoma, county seat of Pittsburg County, in a coal-mining region: meat-packing, cottonseed-oil, food-processing, and lumber industries. Petroleum and natural gas are produced in the area. 17,878 (1950).

McAlexander (mąk.al.eg.zan′dėr), Ulysses Grant. [Called the "Rock of the Marne."] b. at Dundas, Minn., Aug. 30, 1864; d. Sept. 18, 1936. American army officer. He served (1917–19) in France, taking part in the second battle of the Marne (1918) and in the offensives of Aisne-Marne, St.-Mihiel, and Meuse-Argonne, breaking (1918) the last German strongholds on the Marne.

McAllen (mą.kal′ęn). City in S Texas, in Hidalgo County: winter resort and canning and shipping point for citrus fruits and winter vegetables grown in the surrounding irrigated area. 20,067 (1950).

McAllister (mą.kal′is.tėr) or McAllister's Folly. Former names of Hanover, Pa.

McAllister, Fort. Fort on the Ogeechee River, opposite Genesis Point, in Georgia, built by the Confederates during the Civil War to guard the approach to Savannah. It was taken by assault by a division of General Sherman's army under General Hazen on Dec. 13, 1864.

McAllister, Samuel Ward. [Called Ward McAllister.] b. at Savannah, Ga., in December, 1827; d. Jan. 31, 1895. American society leader and lawyer. He developed Newport, R.I., as a social center, and organized (1872) the "Patriarchs" at New York, comprising the leaders of society. He coined (1892) the phrase "the Four Hundred" to describe the approximate number of persons at the top level of New York society.

McAlpine (mą.kal′pin), William Jarvis. b. at New York, April 30, 1812; d. at New Brighton, N.Y., Feb. 16, 1890. American civil engineer. He was state engineer and railway commissioner (1852–57) of New York. He reported and planned water-supply works for Chicago (1851–54), Brooklyn (1852), Buffalo (1868), Montreal (1869), Philadelphia (1874, 1884), San Francisco (1879), New York (1882), and Toronto (1886). He pioneered in the laying of caissons as chief engineer (1860–61) for the Third Avenue drawbridge at New York, built the Eads bridge (1865) at St. Louis, Mo., the Clifton suspension bridge (1868) at Niagara, N.Y., and the Washington bridge (1885–88, now called the Harlem bridge) at New York. He constructed Riverside Drive at New York.

McAneny (mak'ạ.nen.i), George. b. at Greenville, N.J., Dec. 24, 1869; d. at Princeton, N.J., July 29, 1935. American banker and municipal official. He became (1936) chairman of the board of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company. He served on many New York City commissions, was borough president of Manhattan (1910–13) and president of the board of aldermen (1914–16).

McArone (mak.ạ.rōn'). A pseudonym of Arnold, George.

McArthur (mạ.kär'thur), Duncan. b. in Dutchess County, N.Y., Jan. 14, 1772; d. near Chillicothe, Ohio, April 28, 1839. American pioneer in Ohio, general in the War of 1812, and governor of Ohio (1830–32).

McArthur, William Pope. b. at Ste. Genevieve, Mo., April 2, 1814; d. aboard ship, Dec. 23, 1850. American naval officer and hydrographer. Appointed (1840) to the U.S. coast survey, he led (1848) the first hydrographic survey of the Pacific Coast.

M'Carthy (mạ.kär'thi), Justin. b. at Cork, Ireland, Nov. 22, 1830; d. at Folkestone, England, April 24, 1912. Irish journalist, politician, historian, and novelist. He was a Home Rule member of Parliament (1879–1900), and on the fall (1890) of C. S. Parnell became the chairman of the Irish Parliamentary Party (Anti-Parnellites), resigning in January, 1896. His works include History of Our Own Times (5 vols., 1878–1905), History of the Four Georges (1884), Camiola (1885), Pope Leo XIII (1896), Story of Gladstone's Life (1897), Mononia (1901), Reign of Queen Anne (1902), Portraits of the Sixties (1903), and An Irishman's Story (1904). With Mrs. Campbell-Praed he wrote the novels The Right Honorable (1886), The Rebel Rose (1887), and others.

M'Carthy, Marie Cecilia. See Loftus, Cissie.

McAuley (mạ.kô'li), Catharine. b. at Stormaustown, near Dublin, Sept. 29, 1787; d. at Dublin, Nov. 11, 1841. Irish religious, founder (1827) of the House of Our Blessed Lady of Mercy at Dublin. She was left with immense wealth, with which she founded the order for the relief of the destitute poor. The institute spread to England (1839), Newfoundland (1842), the U.S. (1843), Australia (1845), Scotland and New Zealand (1849), and South America (1856). The title of the order was taken from that of Saint Peter of Nolasco, and its rule, with modifications, from that of the Presentation nuns.

McAuley, Jeremiah. [Called "Jerry" McAuley.] b. in Ireland, c1839; d. Sept. 18, 1884. American reformer. At one time a New York river thief, he served a prison term (c1857–64) at Sing Sing. He opened (1872) a mission which was incorporated (1876) as the McAuley Water Street Mission, and founded (1882) the Cremorne Mission in uptown New York. Author of Transformed, or the History of a River Thief (1876).

McAuley, Thomas. b. in Ireland, April 21, 1778; d. May 11, 1862. American Presbyterian clergyman of the "new-school" party. He was a founder (1835) and first president (1836–40) of the Union Theological Seminary at New York.

McAuliffe (mạ.kô'lif), Anthony C. b. at Washington, D.C., July 2, 1898—. American army officer, noted for his staunch defense of the U.S. positions at Bastogne, Belgium, during the Battle of the Bulge (1944–45) in World War II. He commanded the U.S. 101st Airborne Division and other elements during the siege of Bastogne (December, 1944), when American forces at that point were encircled after the German breakthrough in the Ardennes forest, and won popular fame with his brief and unequivocal reply to the enemy demand for surrender: "Nuts!" He was in command of the joint forces at the Bikini atom-bomb tests, chief of the army chemical corps (1949), and head of army personnel (1951).

McBain (mạk.bān'), Howard Lee. b. at Toronto, Canada, July 20, 1880; d. May 7, 1936. American political scientist. He was associate professor (1913–17) and professor (1917 et seq.) at Columbia University. Author of DeWitt Clinton and the Origin of the Spoils System (1907), The Living Constitution (1927), and Prohibition, Legal and Illegal (1928).

McBey (mạk.bā'), James. b. at Newburgh, Scotland, Dec. 23, 1883—. Scottish painter and etcher, noted particularly for his landscapes. Among his principal works are Camel Patrol Setting Out, The Matador, and Amsterdam from Runsdorf.

McBurney (mạk.bėr'ni), Charles. b. at Roxbury, Mass., Feb. 17, 1845; d. at Brookline, Mass., Nov. 7, 1913. American surgeon, contributor of the diagnostic "McBurney's point" (1889) and the operative "McBurney's incision" (1894) in the diagnosis and treatment of appendicitis.

McCabe (mạ.kāb'), Joseph Martin. b. in England, Nov. 11, 1867—. English rationalist philosopher. After entering (1883) the Franciscan order, he was ordained (1890) to the priesthood and was professor (1890–94) of scholastic philosophy, but withdrew (1896) from the church in order to lecture and write. Author of Twelve Years in a Monastery (1897), Modern Rationalism (1897), St. Augustine and His Age (1902), The Decay of the Church of Rome (1909), The Evolution of Mind (1910), The Story of Evolution (1912), Goethe (1912), The Principles of Evolution (1914), The Soul of Europe (1915), The Tyranny of Shams (1916), The Bankruptcy of Religion (1918), Ice Ages (1922), The Twilight of the Gods (1923), The Marvels of Modern Physics (1925), Key to Love and Sex (1929), The Hundred Men Who Moved the World (1931), The New Science (1931), The Riddle of the Universe Today (1934), A History of the Popes (1939), and A Rationalist Encyclopedia (1948).

McCabe, William Gordon. b. at Richmond, Va., Aug. 4, 1841; d. June 1, 1920. American schoolmaster and author. He was head (1865–1901) of the University School at Petersburg, Va. He contributed poems and essays to the Southern Literary Messenger and other periodicals.

McCain (mạ.kān'), Henry Pinckney. b. in Carroll County, Miss., Jan. 23, 1861; d. at Washington, D.C., July 24, 1941. American army officer. He served as adjutant general (1914–18) of the U.S. army.

McCall (mạ.kôl'), George Archibald. b. at Philadelphia, March 16, 1802; d. at West Chester, Pa., Feb. 25, 1868. American general. He commanded the Union forces at the battle of Mechanicsville (June 26, 1862), and was taken prisoner on June 30 and confined for several weeks in Libby prison.

McCall, John Augustin. b. at Albany, N.Y., March 2, 1849; d. Feb. 18, 1906. American insurance official. He was president (1892–1905) of the New York Life Insurance Company. The state investigation (1905) of insurance companies by the Armstrong committee disclosed the fact that insurance companies had used a portion of their funds for campaigning and lobbying. Incensed when the New York Life disclaimed responsibility, McCall resigned from the presidency and obligated himself to replace such funds.

McCall, Samuel Walker. b. at East Providence, Pa., Feb. 28, 1851; d. Nov. 4, 1923. American politician. He served ten terms (1893–1913) as a Republican member of Congress from Massachusetts. He was governor of Massachusetts (1916–18), during which time he was instrumental in obtaining the first state constitutional convention in over 60 years

McCamey (mạ.kā'mi) City in W Texas, in Upton County, S of Lubbock, in a petroleum area. 3,121 (1950).

McCammon (mạ.kam'ọn), Joseph Kay. b. at Philadelphia, Oct. 13, 1845; d. Jan. 2, 1907. American lawyer, assistant attorney general (1880–85) of the U.S.

McCann (mạ.kan'), Alfred Watterson. b. at Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 9, 1879; d. Jan. 19, 1931. American pure-food advocate. He wrote and lectured (1912 et seq.) against the use in foods of coal-tar dyes, bleaches, and injurious preservatives, and participated in the investigations into the food at Ellis Island (1913), the milk supply (1919), and the egg supply of New York (1921).

McCarran (mạ.kar'ạn), Patrick Anthony. b. at Reno, Nev., Aug. 8, 1876—. American politician. From 1907 to 1909 he was district attorney of Nye County, Nev., and from 1913 to 1917 was a justice of the Nevada supreme court, of which he was later chief justice (1917–18). He was elected to the U.S. Senate in 1933. McCarran was sponsor of the Internal Security Act of 1950 and of the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act of 1952, both passed over presidential vetoes.

McCarran Act. See Internal Security Act of 1950.

McCartan (mạ.kär'tạn), Edward. b. at Albany, N.Y., in August, 1879; d. Sept. 20, 1947. American sculptor.

He studied at the Art Students League of New York and elsewhere, and is represented in museums at Buffalo, New York, and St. Louis, among others.

McCarter (mą.kär'tėr), Margaret Hill. b. at Charlottesville, Ind., May 2, 1860; d. at Topeka, Kan., Aug. 31, 1938. American writer. Author of The Cottonwood's Story (1903), Cuddy's Baby (1907), Winning the Wilderness (1914), Vanguards of the Plains (1917), Paying Mother (1920), Homeland (1922), Widening Waters (1924), and The Candle in the Window (1925).

McCarthy (mą.kär'thi), Charles. b. at Brockton, Mass., June 29, 1873; d. at Prescott, Ariz., March 26, 1921. American political scientist. He organized and directed the first official reference library and bill-drafting bureau in the U.S. in the legislature at Madison, Wis., and was first director (1914–15) of the United States Commission on Industrial Relations. Author of The Anti-Masonic Party (1903), The Wisconsin Idea (1912), and, with Flora Swan and Jennie McMullin, An Elementary Civics (1916).

McCarthy, Charlie. Dummy manipulated by the ventriloquist Edgar Bergen (b. 1903). The vaudeville act was the first of its kind to appear (1936 et seq.) on radio successfully and led to a widespread fad of Charlie McCarthy dolls, toys, and the like.

McCarthy, Joseph R. b. at Grand Chute, Wis., Nov. 14, 1909—. American politician. He was elected (1946) to the U.S. Senate. During his freshman term he became nationally known through widely publicized charges that there were Communists in several government departments, especially in the State Department.

McCarthy, Leighton Goldie. b. at Walkerton, Ontario, Canada, Dec. 15, 1869; d. at Penetanguishene, Ontario, Canada, Oct. 4, 1952. Canadian lawyer and diplomat. He was Canadian minister (1941–43) and ambassador (1943–44) at Washington. He served as board chairman of the Canada Life Insurance Company and the National Trust Company Ltd., and as director of various other companies.

McCauley (mą.kô'li), Mary Ludwig Hays. [Called "Molly Pitcher"; maiden name, Mary Ludwig.] b. near Trenton, N.J., Oct. 13, 1754; d. Jan. 22, 1832. American Revolutionary heroine. Being on the field with her husband, John Caspar Hays, at the battle of Monmouth (June 28, 1778), she carried water to the soldiers, whence her nickname. After Hays was prostrated by the heat, she is reputed to have manned his cannon for the rest of the battle. In recognition, the general assembly of Pennsylvania passed (Feb. 21, 1822) "an act for the relief of Molly M'Kolly" granting her an annuity of 40 dollars. She married, after Hays's death in 1789, George McCauley.

McClellan (mą.klel'ąn), George. b. at Woodstock, Conn., Dec. 23, 1796; d. May 9, 1847. American surgeon and teacher, notable for the establishment of a clinic in connection with his medical school. He established (1821) a private medical school, specifically for diseases of the eye and ear, at Philadelphia, and founded (1825) Jefferson Medical College, despite the opposition of the University of Pennsylvania, acting as professor of surgery (1825–39) and also of anatomy (1827–30).

McClellan, George. b. at Philadelphia, Oct. 29, 1849; d. March 29, 1913. American physician and teacher; grandson of George McClellan (1796–1847). He was founder (1881) of and teacher (1881–98) at the Pennsylvania School of Anatomy and Surgery, and professor (1890–1913) of artistic anatomy at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. Author of Regional Anatomy (1891–92) and Anatomy in Relation to Art (1900).

McClellan, George Brinton. b. at Philadelphia, Dec. 3, 1826; d. at Orange, N.J., Oct. 29, 1885. American soldier and politician, Union general in the Civil War. He was graduated (1846) from West Point, served in the Mexican War, from which he emerged a brevet captain, and served (1848–51) as an assistant instructor in practical military engineering at West Point. He was later active in construction and survey work in various parts of the U.S. and in Santo Domingo, and in 1855 became a member of a board of officers assigned to the overseas study of European military organization. During this tour he had the opportunity to witness the siege of Sevastopol, on which he submitted a notable report. One of the results of the suggestions made in that document was the U.S. adoption of the McClellan saddle for military use. He resigned from the army in 1857 to become chief engineer of the Illinois Central Railroad, of which he was made a vice-president in 1858, and in 1860 became president of the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad. With the coming of the Civil War, he was appointed (April 3, 1861) major general of Ohio volunteers in command of all state forces. Appointed (May 3, 1861) a major general in the regular army, he was assigned to the command of the Department of the Ohio and led in the campaign of Rich Mountain, which cleared western Virginia of Confederate forces. In recognition of his achievement, he was appointed to command the Division of the Potomac. He organized the defenses in and around Washington, D.C., and in November, 1861, replaced General Winfield Scott as general in chief. McClellan was relieved of this post when he took the field with the Army of the Potomac early in 1862. McClellan led his forces up the Peninsula for an attack upon Richmond, but after suffering reverses at the hands of T. J. ("Stonewall") Jackson was ordered (Aug. 3, 1862) to withdraw his army from the Peninsular Campaign. In September, 1862, he returned to Washington to take charge of the capital's defenses. He failed to follow through his initiative at the battles of South Mountain and Antietam and was relieved (Nov. 7, 1862) of the command of the Army of the Potomac in favor of A. E. Burnside. This action came as the result of Lincoln's disapproval of McClellan's overcautious policy. Thereafter McClellan never had a field command. In 1864 he was the Democratic presidential candidate, and resigned his commission on election day. McClellan received only 21 electoral votes as against 212 for Lincoln. After spending three years abroad, he went into shipbuilding and served (1870–72) as chief engineer of the New York City department of docks. He was governor of New Jersey from 1878 to 1881. He wrote McClellan's Own Story (1887), a defense of his war career.

McClellan, George Brinton. b. at Dresden, Germany, Nov. 23, 1865; d. at Washington, D.C., Nov. 30, 1940. American politician and historian; son of George Brinton McClellan (1826–85). He was president of the New York City board of aldermen (1893–94), served as a Democratic representative in Congress (1895–1903), and as the regular Tammany candidate was elected mayor of New York in 1903, defeating the reform mayor Seth Low, and again in 1905, against W. M. Ivins and W. R. Hearst. He was Stafford Little lecturer in Princeton University (1908–11), and was appointed lecturer on public affairs there in 1911 and professor of economic history in 1912. He published The Oligarchy of Venice (1904) and others.

McClellan, Henry Brainerd. b. at Philadelphia, Oct. 17, 1840; d. Oct. 1, 1904. American army officer, with the Confederate forces in the Civil War; cousin of George Brinton McClellan (1826–85). He was chief of staff to General J. E. B. Stuart (1863–64) and to Wade Hampton (1864–65). Author of The Life and Campaigns of Major-General J. E. B. Stuart (1885).

McClelland (mą.klel'ąnd), Robert. b. at Greencastle, Pa., Aug. 1, 1807; d. Aug. 30, 1880. American politician and lawyer, U.S. secretary of the interior (1853–57) under Pierce. He was a U.S. congressman (1843–49) from Michigan, supporting for a time the Wilmot antislavery proviso. He was elected (1850, 1852) governor of Michigan.

McClernand (mą.klėr'nąnd), John Alexander. b. May 30, 1812; d. Sept. 20, 1900. American general and politician. He joined the Union army at the beginning of the Civil War, and was appointed a brigadier general of volunteers. He served at Belmont and at Fort Donelson (where he commanded the right of the line, and for his services was promoted major general), and led a division at Shiloh. He relieved Sherman in the command of the expedition against Vicksburg in 1863.

McClintic (mą.klin'tik), Guthrie. b. at Seattle, Wash., Aug. 6, 1893—. American theatrical producer and director; husband (married 1921) of Katharine Cornell. He directed plays starring his wife, starting with The Green Hat (1925) and including The Barretts of Wimpole Street (1930), The Three Sisters, and Romeo and Juliet. He has also produced and directed such plays as Brief Moment (1931), Jezebel (1933), Yellow Jack (1934), Wingless (1935), and Mamba's Daughters (1939).

McCloskey (mą.klos'ki), John. b. at Brooklyn, N.Y., March 10, 1810; d. at New York, Oct. 10, 1885. American Roman Catholic prelate. He was president of Saint John's College (now Fordham University), New York (1841–42), was bishop of Albany (1847–64), became archbishop of New York in 1864, and was created the first American cardinal in 1875. He saw to a conclusion the building of Saint Patrick's Cathedral, New York, which he dedicated in 1879.

McCloskey, William George. b. at Brooklyn, N.Y., Nov. 10, 1823; d. Sept. 17, 1909. American Roman Catholic prelate. He was first rector (1859–68) of the American College at Rome, and bishop (1868–1909) at Louisville, Ky.

McCloy (mą.kloi'), John Jay. b. at Philadelphia, March 31, 1895—. American administrator. A specialist in foreign law, he served (1940) as special expert assistant to the secretary of war. In 1941, he became assistant secretary of war, serving until 1945. He was appointed (1947) president of the World Bank. In 1949 he became the first civilian high commissioner for the U.S.-occupied zone of Germany. Author of The Challenge to American Foreign Policy (1953).

McCluer Gulf (mą.klör'). [Also, McCluer Inlet.] Arm of the Serang Sea on the NW coast of New Guinea. Length, ab. 125 mi.; average width, ab. 25 mi.

McClung (mą.klung'), Clarence Erwin. b. at Clayton, Calif., April 5, 1870; d. at Philadelphia, Jan. 17, 1946. American zoölogist and authority on cytology. He discovered (1902) in grasshopper germ cells a difference in the chromosomal constitution of the sexes.

McClure (mą.klör'), Alexander Kelly. b. at Sherman's Valley, Pa., Jan. 9, 1828; d. June 6, 1909. American editor and politician. He was publisher (1852 et seq.) and owner of the Franklin Repository, published at Chambersburg, Pa., and founded (1875) the Philadelphia Times. Author of Three Thousand Miles through the Rocky Mountains (1869), The South: Its Industrial, Financial and Political Condition (1886), Abraham Lincoln and Men of War Times (1892), Our Presidents and How We Make Them (1900), Col. Alexander K. McClure's Recollections of a Half Century (1902), and Old Time Notes of Pennsylvania (1905).

McClure, James Gore King. b. at Albany, N.Y., Nov. 24, 1848; d. Jan. 18, 1932. American theologian and Presbyterian clergyman. He was president (1897–1901) of Lake Forest University, and headed (1905–28) what is now Presbyterian Theological Seminary at Chicago. Author of Possibilities (1896), Environment (1899), and Living for the Best (1903).

McClure, S. S. [Full name, Samuel Sidney McClure.] b. at Frocess, County Antrim, Ireland, Feb. 17, 1857; d. at New York, March 21, 1949. American editor and publisher. He established (1884) the McClure Syndicate, the first of its kind in the U.S., to provide material for use by newspapers throughout the U.S. He founded (1893) McClure's Magazine, a leader in the field of low-priced news and literary journals, of which he was editor. Author of Obstacles to Peace (1917) and The Achievements of Liberty (1935).

McClure's Magazine (mą.klörz'). Popular monthly published from 1893 to 1929, founded by S. S. McClure. A low-priced magazine, it pioneered in the muckraking exposés early in the 20th century, publishing articles by Lincoln Steffens, Ray Stannard Baker, and others, and including Ida Tarbell's series on the Standard Oil Company.

McClure Strait (mą.klör'). [Also: M'Clure Strait; former name, Banks Strait.] Sea passage in the Arctic Ocean, N of Canada, separating Banks Island from Melville Island.

McClurg (mą.klėrg'), Alexander Caldwell. b. Sept. 9, 1832; d. at St. Augustine, Fla., April 15, 1901. American bookdealer. He was a clerk (1859 et seq.), partner (1866–86), and chief owner (1886 et seq.) of S. C. Griggs and Company (later A. C. McClurg and Company) at Chicago, booksellers and publishers of the Dial (1880 et seq.). Author of "The Last Chance of the Confederacy" in the Atlantic Monthly (1882), an account of the battle of Bentonville, N.C. (March 19, 1865), in which he had taken part as chief of staff under General J. C. Davis.

McColl (mą.kôl'). Town in NE South Carolina, in Marlboro County, near the North Carolina line, ab. 100 mi. NE of Columbia: cotton mills. 2,688 (1950).

McComas (mą.kō'mąs). Unincorporated community in S West Virginia, in Mercer County. 2,999 (1950).

McComb (mą.kōm'). City in SW Mississippi, in Pike County: cotton mills and railroad shops. 10,401 (1950).

McComb, Samuel. b. at Londonderry, Ireland, Jan. 28, 1864; d. at Cheltenham, England, Sept. 11, 1938. English clergyman. He was active with Elwood Worcester in the movement for moral treatment of nervous disorders at Emmanuel Church, Boston. He served as canon (1916–22) of the Cathedral of the Incarnation at Baltimore, professor of pastoral theology (1922 et seq.) at Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass., and rector of the American Episcopal Church at Nice, France.

McConnell (mą.kon'ęl), Francis John. b. at Trinway, Ohio, Aug. 18, 1871—. American Methodist Episcopal clergyman. He was president (1909–12) of De Pauw University. He was elected bishop in 1912, became president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in 1929, and retired in 1934.

McCook (mą.kůk'). City in S Nebraska, county seat of Red Willow County: trading center for corn and alfalfa. It is the seat of a junior college and has railroad shops. 7,678 (1950).

McCook, Alexander McDowell. b. April 22, 1831; d. June 12, 1903. American general. He commanded the 1st Ohio regiment at Bull Run, and served at Shiloh, Murfreesboro, Chickamauga, and elsewhere.

McCook, Anson George. b. at Steubenville, Ohio, Oct. 10, 1835; d. at New York, Dec. 30, 1917. American soldier and politician; brother of E. M. McCook, H. C. McCook, and J. J. McCook. An officer (1861 et seq.) of the 2nd Ohio volunteers, he participated in the battles of Bull Run, Perryville, Stone River, Chattanooga, Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge, Kenesaw Mountain, and Atlanta. He was elected (1876, 1878, 1880) to Congress from New York, was secretary (1884–93) of the Senate, and was chamberlain (1895–97) of New York under Mayor William L. Strong.

McCook, Edward Moody. b. at Steubenville, Ohio, June 15, 1833; d. at Chicago, Sept. 9, 1909. American Civil War general and statesman; brother of A. G. McCook, H. C. McCook, and J. J. McCook. A cavalry officer appointed (1864) brigadier general, he aided the Atlanta campaign by intercepting reinforcements for Confederate General J. B. Hood. He distinguished himself at Shiloh, Perryville, Chickamauga, and in east Tennessee. He served as U.S. minister (1866–69) to Hawaii, and as governor (1869–75) of the territory of Colorado.

McCook, Henry Christopher. b. at New Lisbon, Ohio, July 3, 1837; d. Oct. 31, 1911. American naturalist and Presbyterian clergyman; brother of A. G. McCook, E. M. McCook, and J. J. McCook. He was pastor (1870–1902) of the Tabernacle Presbyterian Church at Philadelphia.

McCook, John James. b. at New Lisbon, Ohio, Feb. 2, 1843; d. Jan. 9, 1927. American Protestant Episcopal clergyman and educator; brother of A. G. McCook, E. M. McCook, and H. C. McCook.

McCord (mą.kôrd'), Louisa Susanna Cheves. b. at Charleston, S.C., Dec. 3, 1810; d. there, Nov. 23, 1879. American author, president (1861 et seq.) of the Soldier's Relief Association and the Lady's Clothing Association in aid of Confederate soldiers. Her writings include a translation of Frédéric Bastiat's Sophismes Économiques (1848); a book of poems, My Dreams; and a closet-drama, Caius Gracchus.

McCormack (mą.kôr'mąk), John. b. at Athlone, Ireland, June 14, 1884; d. at Dublin, Sept. 16, 1945. American operatic and concert tenor. He made his Covent Garden debut (1907) as Turiddu in Cavalleria Rusticana, joined (1909) the Manhattan Opera House company, making his first appearance with it in Traviata, and was a member (1910–11) of the Boston Opera Company. He made guest appearances at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, performing (1910) in Traviata with Melba, sang (1939) at the San Carlo Opera, Naples, Italy, and was a member (1912–14) of the Chicago Opera Company. He included in his repertoire the roles of Rodolpho in La Bohême, Faust, Pinkerton in Madame Butterfly, Don Ottavio in Don Giovanni, and the leading tenor roles in Lakmé and Tosca. His principal work after 1914 was on the concert stage, and he made a great popular success with phonograph recordings of such ballads as When Irish Eyes Are Smiling and Kathleen Mavourneen.

McCormick (mą.kôr'mik), Anne O'Hare. b. in Yorkshire, England—. American journalist. She was awarded a Pulitzer prize in 1937. She is a member of the editorial board of the New York Times and is a commentator on foreign affairs for that newspaper. Author of The Hammer and Scythe (1928).

McCormick, Cyrus Hall. b. in Rockbridge County, Va., Feb. 15, 1809; d. at Chicago, May 13, 1884. American inventor and manufacturer of agricultural machinery, noted for developing the forerunners of the modern reaper. Although he devised a successful hillside plow in the early 1830's, his fame as an inventor rests upon his grain-reaping machine, first built and used in 1831, and patented in improved form in 1834. This was the earliest implement to combine effectively the seven basic mechanical elements of the modern reaper: main wheel, side draft, horizontal reciprocating knife, divider, fingers, platform, and revolving reel. Although a few machines were sold during the following eight years, it was 1843 before more than a local market was sought. Manufacturing through licensees during the next four years was generally unsatisfactory. Soon after McCormick moved to Chicago in 1848, he confined the rapidly increasing production of his machines solely to his own factory there, and thenceforward dispensed with all partners or important stockholders except members of his family. Although the federal government refused to extend his original patent, and competition much increased during the 185 /'s both in the harvest fields and before the courts in patent infringement suits, McCormick's steady improvement of his machines and astute business policies kept him in the forefront of his rivals. Among these, Obed Hussey, inventor of a reaper in 1833, was the earliest and until 1858 one of the most persistent and best known, although seldom seriously challenging. The McCormick factory shared importantly in perfecting the self-rake reaper, the hand-binding harvester, the automatic wire-binder and twine-binder, and mowers. As an inventor, McCormick was given flattering recognition both at home and abroad and his machines helped much to effect the agricultural "revolution" of the late 19th century. By 1884 he was selling nearly 55,000 implements a year and his personal fortune, in considerable part gained from investments in Chicago real estate, had grown to about ten million dollars. As a nationally prominent Democrat and "Old School" Presbyterian, he used his Daily Chicago Times and Presbyterian Expositor in 1860–61 to work for a peaceable compromise between North and South. As owner of The Interior after 1872 he sought to promote the welfare of the Presbyterian (now McCormick) Theological Seminary of Chicago, of which he was principal founder and benefactor (1859 et seq.), and to bring about a reunion of the northern and southern branches of that denomination. Among the other institutions which he substantially helped by gifts of money were the Young Men's Christian Association, and the Union Theological Seminary and Washington (and Lee) College, both in Virginia. See Cyrus Hall McCormick, by W. T. Hutchinson (2 vols., 1930, 1935) and The Century of the Reaper, by Cyrus McCormick (1931).

McCormick, Cyrus Hall. b. at Washington, D.C., May 16, 1859; d. June 2, 1936. American manufacturer of agricultural machinery; son of Cyrus Hall McCormick (1809–84). Associated (1879 et seq.) with and president (1884–1902) of the McCormick Harvesting Machine Company, he was first president (1902–19) and board chairman (1919–35) of the International Harvester Company.

McCormick, Joseph Medill. b. at Chicago, May 16, 1877; d. at Washington, D.C., Feb. 25, 1925. American journalist and politician; son of Robert Sanderson McCormick. He was a reporter (1900–08) and manager (1908 et seq.) of the Chicago Daily Tribune, and was co-owner (1911 et seq.) with Charles A. Otis of the Cleveland Leader and News. He was a congressman (1917–19) from Illinois, and as U.S. senator (1919–25) opposed the League of Nations and the Treaty of Versailles

McCormick, Leander James. b. in Rockbridge County, Va., Feb. 8, 1819; d. at Chicago, Feb. 20, 1900. American manufacturer; brother of Cyrus Hall McCormick (1809–84). He was in charge (1849 et seq.) of the manufacturing division of the McCormick firm and a partner (1859 et seq.) under its new name of C. H. McCormick and Brothers, changed (1874) to C. H. and L. J. McCormick.

McCormick, Lynde Dupuy. b. at Annapolis, Md., Aug. 12, 1895—. American naval officer, commander (1952) of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization fleet.

McCormick, Robert. b. in Rockbridge County, Va., June 8, 1780; d. there, July 4, 1846. American inventor; father of Cyrus Hall McCormick (1809–1884). He patented (1830–31) a gristmill and hydraulic machine, developed (1834) a threshing machine, and experimented (1809–31) unsuccessfully with the invention of a reaping machine.

McCormick, Robert Rutherford. b. at Chicago, Ill., July 30, 1880—. American editor and publisher; son of Robert Sanderson McCormick. He served as a field artillery officer in the U.S. army during World War I. He was editor with his cousin Joseph Medill Patterson (until 1925, when Patterson went to New York to edit the Daily News) and publisher (1920 et seq.) of the Chicago Tribune. Under McCormick's control, the Tribune became the most widely sold paper in the Midwest and, through its advocacy of isolation from Europe and opposition to the New Deal, one of the leading conservative journals of the U.S. Among his works are The Army of 1918 (1920) and The American Revolution and Its Effect on World Civilization (1945).

McCormick, Robert Sanderson. b. in Rockbridge County, Va., July 26, 1849; d. at Chicago, April 16, 1919. American diplomat; grandson of Robert McCormick (1780–1846); married (1876) Katherine Van Etta Medill, daughter of Joseph Medill. He was appointed (1901) U.S. minister to Austria, and was first U.S. ambassador (1902) to Austria-Hungary. As U.S. ambassador (1902–05 to Russia he looked after Japanese interests in Russia during the Russo-Japanese War. He served as U.S. ambassador (1905–07) to France.

McCormick, Ruth. [Maiden name, Hanna.] b. at Cleveland, Ohio, March 27, 1880; d. at Chicago, Dec. 31, 1944. American newspaper publisher; daughter of Mark Hanna, and wife (married 1903) of Joseph Medill McCormick (d. 1925) and later (married 1932) of Albert G. Simms, congressman from New Mexico. She was publisher of the Rockford (Ill.) Register-Republican and Morning Star, Republican national committeewoman (1924–28) from Illinois, and a member (1929–31) of the U.S. House of Representatives from Illinois.

McCormick, Samuel Black. b. in Westmoreland County, Pa., May 6, 1858; d. at Corappolis Heights, Pa., April 18, 1928. American educator and Presbyterian clergyman. As chancellor (1904–20) of the Western University of Pennsylvania, he modernized the institution and changed (1908) the name to the University of Pittsburgh.

McCormick, Stephen. b. at Auburn, Va., Aug. 26, 1784; d. Aug. 28, 1875. American inventor of a cast-iron plow (patented 1819, 1826, 1837), which anticipated a similar invention by Jethro Wood by about seven months.

McCormick, Vance Criswell. b. at Harrisburg, Pa., June 19, 1872; d. in Cumberland County, Pa., June 16, 1946. American newspaper proprietor, publisher of the Harrisburg (Pa.) Patriot and Evening News. He was mayor (1902–05) of Harrisburg, chairman (1916) of the Democratic national campaign committee, and head (1917–19) of the War Trade Board. A member of the Supreme Economic Council, he was a presidential adviser on the American commission to negotiate peace (1919) at Paris after World War I.

McCosh (mą.kosh'), Andrew James. b. at Belfast, Ireland, March 15, 1858; d. Dec. 2, 1908. American surgeon; son of James McCosh.

McCosh, James. b. at Carskeoch, Ayrshire, Scotland, April 1, 1811; d. at Princeton, N.J., Nov. 16, 1894. Scottish-American philosopher and educator. He was professor of logic and metaphysics at Queen's College, Belfast, Ireland (1851–68), and president of Princeton College, N.J. (1868–88). Among his works are Method of the Divine Government (1850), Intuitions of the Mind (1860), The Supernatural in Relation to the Natural (1862), An Examination of J. S. Mill's Philosophy (1866), Laws of Discursive Thought (1869), Christianity and Positivism (1871), The Scottish Philosophy (1874), The Development Theory (1876), Realistic Philosophy defended in a Philosophic Series (1887), Psychology (1887), and Religious Aspects of Evolution (1888).

McCoy (mą.koi'), Frank Ross. b. at Lewistown, Pa., Oct. 29, 1874—. American army officer. He served in the Spanish-American War and in the military government of Cuba (1898–1902), in the Philippines (1903–06), in Mexico (1915–17), and with the American Expeditionary Forces in France (1917–19). He was assistant (1921–25) to the governor general of the Philippines. He was director of elections (1928) in Nicaragua, served as chairman (1928–29) of the Bolivian-Paraguayan boundary commission, and was detailed (1932) to serve with the League of Nations commission of inquiry into the Manchurian situation. He served as chairman (1945–49) of the Far Eastern Commission, which determined Allied occupation policies in Japan.

McCoy, Isaac. b. near Uniontown, Pa., June 13, 1784; d. at Louisville, Ky., June 21, 1846. American missionary and Indian agent. He was a Baptist pastor (1805–17) in Clark County, Ind., engaging in short missionary expeditions. Named (1817) missionary to the Indians in the Wabash valley, he agitated for the creation of an Indian state. He was appointed (1880) surveyor and agent for the westward migration of Indians. Author of Remarks on the Practicability of Indian Reform (1827), History of Baptist Indian Missions (1840), and pamphlets on Indian affairs.

McCoy, Joseph Geating. b. in Illinois, Dec. 21, 1837; d. Oct. 19, 1915. American cattle-trader. He purchased (1867) the site of what is now Abilene, Kan., for the purpose of establishing a railroad shipping center.

McCrary (mą.krār'i), George Washington. b. near Evansville, Ind., Aug. 29, 1835; d. at St. Joseph, Mo., June 23, 1890. American legislator and jurist, U.S. secretary of war (1877–79) under Hayes. He was a congressman (1869–77) from Iowa, and federal judge (1879 et seq.) of the Eighth Judicial Circuit.

McCray v. United States, 195 U.S. 27 (1904) (mą.krā'). U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding a heavy federal excise tax on artificially colored oleomargarine, a levy which its opponents termed confiscatory. The court announced the principle of judicial noninterference with federal tax laws and refused to probe into the motive, intent, or result of the statute, which had been enacted to protect dairy interests from competition. The decision apparently sanctioned the use of the taxing power as an instrument of social control.

McCrea (mą.krā'), Jane. b. at Lamington (then Bedminster), N.J., c1754; killed near Fort Edward, N.Y., July 27, 1777. American woman, murdered (it is said) by Indian allies of the British general John Burgoyne.

McCrea, John Livingstone. b. at Marlette, Mich., May 29, 1891—. American naval officer. He was associated (1945 et seq.) with the office of the chief of naval operations, as head of civil administration of enemy territories taken over by the navy.

McCreary (mą.krir'i), James Bennett. b. in Madison County, Ky., July 8, 1838; d. at Richmond, Ky., Oct. 8, 1918. American politician, officer (1862 et seq.) in the Confederate army in the Civil War. He served as governor (1875, 1911) of Kentucky, six-time U.S. congressman (1884 et seq.), and U.S. senator (1902 et seq.).

McCullers (mą.kul'ėrz), Carson. [Maiden name, Smith.] b. at Columbus, Ga., Feb. 19, 1917—. American novelist. Her novels include The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter (1940), Reflections in a Golden Eye (1941), and The Member of the Wedding (1946; dramatized in 1950).

McCulloch (mą.kul'ọ), Ben. b. in Rutherford County, Tenn., Nov. 11, 1811; killed at the battle of Pea Ridge, Ark., March 7, 1862. American general in the Confederate service. He commanded at Wilson's Creek in 1861, and led a corps at the battle of Pea Ridge.

McCulloch, Hugh. b. at Kennebunk, Me., Dec. 7, 1808; d. near Washington, D.C., May 24, 1895. American politician, U.S. secretary of the treasury (1865–69 and 1884–85) under Lincoln, Johnson, and Arthur. He funded the national debt during his first term as secretary. He was a partner (1870–76) in the banking business with Jay Cooke.

McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheaton 316 (1819) (mer'i-land). Decision of the U.S. Supreme Court, in an opinion rendered (March 6, 1819) by Chief Justice John Marshall, holding unconstitutional a Maryland law taxing notes of all banks not chartered by the state. The case arose over the refusal of McCulloch, cashier of the branch bank of the Second Bank of the United States at Baltimore, to pay the tax. The case involved the consideration of the right of Congress to incorporate a bank, and the constitutionality of a state tax upon the bank. In one of his most notable opinions, and one of the most important in construing the powers of the national government, Marshall upheld the power of Congress to charter a bank and denied the power of a state to interfere with such an agency by taxation ("the power to tax involves the power to destroy"). The opinion was one of the most characteristic of Marshall's pronouncements on the nature of the Union and the position of the states. "Let the end be legitimate," said Marshall, "let it be within the scope of the constitution, and all means which are appropriate, which are plainly adapted to that end, which are not prohibited, but consist with the letter and spirit of the constitution, are constitutional." Marshall's broad construction of the Constitution owes much to Alexander Hamilton's argument on the constitutionality of the First Bank of the United States.

McCullough (mą.kul'ọ), John. b. near Coleraine, Ireland, Nov. 14, 1832; d. at Philadelphia, Nov. 8, 1885. American tragedian. He played much with Edwin Forrest, who left him his manuscript plays and regarded him as his histrionic successor. In 1884 he broke down both mentally and physically, and he died insane.

McCullough, John Griffith. b. at Newark, Del., Sept. 16, 1835; d. at New York, May 29, 1915. American politician. He was elected attorney general (1863) of California, and governor (1902) of Vermont.

McCullough, Myrtle Reed. b. at Chicago, Sept. 27, 1874; d. there, Aug. 17, 1911. American author.

McCumber (mą.kum'bėr), Porter James. b. at Crete, Ill., Feb. 3, 1858; d. May 18, 1933. American legislator and lawyer. He was a U.S. senator (1899–1923) from North Dakota. As chairman (1922–23) of the Senate finance committee, he cosponsored (1922) the Fordney-McCumber Tariff Act, which restored many of the rates of the protective Payne-Aldrich Tariff of 1909.

McCurdy (mą.kėr'di), Richard Aldrich. b. at New York, Jan. 29, 1835; d. at Morristown, N.J., March 6, 1916. American insurance official, president (1885–1906) of the Mutual Life Insurance Company at New York. He resigned when the Armstrong committee investigation (1905–06) found evidence that he had been involved in financial irregularities.

McCutchan (mą.kuch'ąn), Robert Guy. b. at Mount Ayr, Iowa, Sept. 13, 1877—. American musician and educator. He organized (1904) the music department of Baker University in Kansas, and was dean (1911 et seq.) of the School of Music at DePauw University, Greencastle, Ind.

McCutcheon (mą.kuch'ọn), George Barr. b. near Lafayette, in Tippecanoe County, Ind., July 26, 1866; d. at New York, Oct. 23, 1928. American novelist; brother of John T. McCutcheon. Among his works are Graustark (1901), Brewster's Millions (1902), Beverly of Graustark (1904), Jane Cable (1906), The Flyers (1907), The Man from Brodney's (1908), Truxton King (1909), The Rose in the Ring (1910), What's-His-Name (1911), Mary Midthorne (1911), The Hollow of Her Hand (1912), A Fool and His Money (1913), The Prince of Graustark (1914), West Wind Drift (1920), East of the Setting Sun (1924), and The Merivales (1929). The Graustark stories, set in an imaginary country in the Balkans, were among the most popular of the type. Brewster's Millions, dramatized (1906) by Winchell Smith, was made into a motion picture several times.

McCutcheon, John Tinney. b. near South Raub, Ind., May 6, 1870; d. at Lake Forest, Ill., June 10, 1949. American artist, known for his political cartoons; brother of George Barr McCutcheon. He was a cartoonist on the staff of the Chicago Record (1899–1901), Chicago Record-Herald (1901–03), and Chicago Tribune (1903–46). He was awarded (1931) the Pulitzer prize for cartoons. A collection of his work was published in John McCutcheon's Book (1947).

McDiarmid (mąk.dėr'mid), Hugh. [Pseudonym of Christopher Murray Grieve.] b. at Langholm, Dumfriesshire, Scotland, Aug. 11, 1892—. Scottish poet. His books of poetry include Sangschaw, Penny Wheep, A Drunk Man Looks at the Thistle, Stony Limits and Other Poems, First Hymn to Lenin and Other Poems, Cornish Heroic Song for Valda Trevlyn, and A Kist for Whistles. His prose works include Annals of the Five Senses, Albyn, or the Future of Scotland, Scottish Scene, What Lenin Has Meant to Scotland, The Scottish Islands, and the autobiographical Lucky Poet.

McDonald (mąk.don'ąld). Borough in SW Pennsylvania, in Allegheny and Washington counties. 3,543 (1950).

McDonald, Andrew Archibald. b. at Three Rivers, Prince Edward Island, Canada, Feb. 14, 1829; d. at Ottawa, March 21, 1912. Canadian statesman, lieutenant governor (1884–89) of Prince Edward Island. He was a delegate to the Quebec Conference of 1864, which laid the foundation for the federation of Canada.

McDonald, John Bartholomew. b. at Fermoy, County Cork, Ireland, Nov. 7, 1844; d. March 17, 1911. American railroad contractor, noted for the construction (1890–94) of the Baltimore belt-line railroad which consisted of an underground link at Baltimore between various of the Baltimore and Ohio lines. He was in charge (1900 et seq.) of New York subway construction and was a vice-president of the Interborough Rapid Transit Construction Company.

McDonald, Joseph Ewing. [Sometimes called "Old Saddle-Bags."] b. in Butler County, Ohio, Aug. 29, 1819; d. at Indianapolis, Ind., June 21, 1891. American politician. Elected (1848) to Congress, he joined with Henry Clay and Daniel Webster in supporting the compromise measures of 1850. As U.S. senator (1875–81) he served on a special committee for the investigation of the Hayes-Tilden election dispute.

McDonnell (mąk.don'ęl), Charles Edward. b. at New York, Feb. 1, 1854; d. Aug. 8, 1921. American Roman Catholic clergyman.

McDougall (mąk.dö'gąl), Alexander. b. on the island of Islay, Scotland, in July or August, 1732; d. at New York, June 9, 1786. American Revolutionary general. After serving (1756–63) as a privateer captain, he became an ardent patriot and a member of the Sons of Liberty. He was imprisoned (1770–71) for agitating against English rule. He was defeated at White Plains (1776), in 1777 was promoted to major general, and was sent as delegate to the Continental Congress in 1780 and 1784. He succeeded Benedict Arnold as commandant at West Point in 1780.

McDougall, Alexander. b. at Port Ellen, on the island of Islay, Scotland, March 16, 1845; d. at Duluth, Minn., May 23, 1923. American shipbuilder and inventor. He designed (c1881) and produced (1888 et seq.) the whaleback freighter, which revolutionized the building of Great Lakes freighters. He built (1892) at Everett, Wash., the first yard for steel ships in the Pacific Northwest.

McDougall, William. b. in Lancashire, England, June 22, 1871; d. at Durham, N.C., Nov. 28, 1938. American psychologist, professor of psychology at Harvard (1920–27) and Duke (1927 et seq.). A pioneer in the fields of social psychology and abnormal psychology, he developed the psychological concept that all behavior was purposive, i.e., was directed toward a goal. Author of Physiological Psychology (1905), Social Psychology (1908), Body and Mind (1911), Psychology, the Study of Behavior (1912), Group Mind (1920), Outline of Psychology (1923), Ethics and Some Modern World Problems (1924), Outline of Abnormal Psychology (1926), Janus (1927), Modern Materialism and Emergent Evolution (1929), World Chaos—the Responsibility of Science (1931), and Energies of Men (1933).

McDowell (mąk.dou'ęl), Ephraim. b. in Rockbridge County, Va., Nov. 11, 1771; d. June 25, 1830. American physician, a pioneer in abdominal surgery. At Danville, Ky., he performed (1809) the first recorded ovariotomy in the U.S.

McDowell, Irvin. b. at Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 15, 1818; d. at San Francisco, May 4, 1885. American general with the Union army in the Civil War. He graduated (1838) from West Point, served in the Mexican War, from which he emerged as a brevet captain, and was promoted (1856) to the rank of major. He became (May 14, 1861) brigadier general and received the command of the Department of Northeastern Virginia and of the forces which later were designated as the Army of the Potomac. After leading his troops in the defeat at the first battle of Bull Run, he was replaced by General G. B. McClellan but continued to serve with the army as a division commander. He became (March, 1862) major general of volunteers and was assigned to the command of the 1st corps of the Army of the Potomac. Subsequently McDowell's command was designated as the Army of the Rappahannock, but was later incorporated in the Army of Virginia as the 3rd corps. He was relieved of his command after the second battle of Bull Run (1862). This was the last occasion on which he held a field command. He was assigned (1864) to territorial command at San Francisco, was transferred (1868) to the Department of the East and to that of the South in 1872, becoming a major general in the regular army in that year. He retired in 1882 and until his death served as park commissioner of San Francisco.

McDowell, James. b. in Rockbridge County, Va., Oct. 13, 1795; d. near Lexington, Va., Aug. 24, 1851. American politician. He was a member (1832–38) of the Virginia state legislature, governor (1843–46) of Virginia, and a representative (1846–51) to Congress.

McDuffie (mąk.duf'i), George. b. in Columbia County (now Warren County), Ga., Aug. 10, 1790; d. in Sumter district, S.C., March 11, 1851. American statesman and orator, a prominent supporter of nullification. He was a member of Congress from South Carolina (1821–34), governor of South Carolina (1834–36), and U.S. senator (1843–46).

McElhenney (mak'ęl.hā.ni), Jane. See Clare, Ada.

McElroy (mak'ęl.roi), Robert. b. at Perryville, Ky., Dec. 28, 1872—. American historian. He was professor (1909–25) of history at Princeton, and professor of American history (1925–39) at Oxford. His books include Kentucky in the Nation's History (1909), The Winning of the Far West (1914), The Representative Idea in History (1917), Grover Cleveland (2 vols., 1924), Levi P. Morton, a Biography (1926), The Pathway of Peace (1927), and Jefferson Davis, the Unreal and the Real (1937).

McEntee (mak'ęn.tē), Jervis. b. at Rondout, N.Y., July 14, 1828; d. there, Jan. 27, 1891. American painter. He was elected a member of the National Academy of Design in 1861. He was particularly noted for his autumn and winter landscapes.

McEvoy (mak'ę.voi), Arthur Ambrose. b. in Wiltshire, England, 1878; d. at London, Jan. 4, 1927. English portrait and landscape painter, associated with Augustus John and William Orpen in the rebellion against the Royal Academy fomented by the New English Art Club. Later, however, he became an associate of the Academy and exhibited there frequently. He is represented in several museums in the British Isles and at Paris. Among his principal works are Autumn, In a Mirror (Tate Gallery), and The Ear-Ring (Tate Gallery).

McEvoy, Joseph Patrick. b. at New York, 1895—. American writer. Author of the book of verse Slams of Life (1919). His stage writings include the comedy The Potters (1924), the revue New Americana (1932), and the musical Stars in Your Eyes (1939). His novel Show Girl (1928) was dramatized, scenarized, and adapted into a comic strip under the name Dixie Dugan. In recent years he has been a roving editor of the Readers Digest.

McEwen (mą.kū'ęn), Sir John Blackwood. b. at Hawick, Scotland, April 13, 1868; d. at London, 1948. British composer and music theorist. Among his compositions are the symphony Solway and the orchestral rhapsody Grey Galloway. He also composed songs, sonatas, choral works, and 15 string quartets, considered his best work.

McFadden Banking Act of 1927 (mak fad'ęn). Measure passed by the U.S. Congress in 1927 which permitted a national bank to establish and operate a given number of branches in cities where state banks were allowed to practice branch banking. It discouraged out-of-town branch banking by stipulating that state banks holding membership in the Federal Reserve System could not set up such branches after the passage of the act.

McFall (mąk.fôl'), Frances Elizabeth. See Grand, Sarah.

McFarland (mąk.fär'land), John Horace. b. at McAlisterville, Pa., Sept. 24, 1859—. American master printer and horticulturist. He established (1889) the Mt. Pleasant Press (incorporated, 1891, as the J. Horace McFarland Company) and printed American Gardening, Country Life in America, and other periodicals. Active as a horticulturist, he contributed especially to the cultivation of roses. Among his works are My Growing Garden (1915), The Rose in America (1923), What Every Rose Grower Should Know (1931), and many others.

McFarland, John Thomas. b. at Mount Vernon, Ind., Jan. 2, 1851; d. at Maplewood, N.J., Dec. 22, 1913. American Methodist Episcopal clergyman, noted for introducing the first graded system of Sunday-school lessons.

McFaul (mąk.fôl'), James Augustine. b. at Larne, County Antrim, Ireland, June 6, 1850; d. June 16, 1917. American Roman Catholic prelate.

McFee (mąk.fē'), William. b. at London, June 15, 1881—. American novelist, short-story writer, and essayist. He took to the sea in 1905, and later entered the American merchant marine, receiving a chief engineer's license in 1913. At sea when World War I began, he returned (October, 1914) to England to serve as an engineer on a British transport and as a naval lieutenant. He settled (1922) at Westport, Conn. Author of Aliens (1914), Casuals of the Sea (1916), Captain Macedoine's Daughter (1920), Command (1922), Race (1924), Pilgrims of Adversity (1928), Sailors of Fortune (1929), North of Suez (1930), The Harbormaster (1932), No Castle in Spain (1933), The Beachcomber (1935), Derelicts (1938), Watch Below (1940), and Spenlove in Arcady (1941), novels and stories; Letters From an Ocean Tramp (1908), Harbors of Memory (1921), An Engineer's Notebook (1921), Studies in Patriotism (1922), Swallowing the Anchor (1925), Sunlight in New Granada (1925), and More Harbors of Memory (1934), autobiographical and descriptive essays. He also wrote Life of Sir Martin Frobisher (1928), Reflections of Marsyas (1933), poetry, and book reviews and a weekly column on ships for the New York Sun.

McFingal (mąk.fing'gąl). See M'Fingal.

McFlimsey (mak.flim'zi), Flora. Subject of the satirical poem Nothing to Wear: an Episode in City Life (1857), by William Allen Butler.

McGarrah (mą.gar'ą), Gates W. b. at Monroe, N.Y., 1863; d. at New York, Nov. 5, 1940. American banker. He was chairman of the board (1927–30) of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and president (1930–33) of the Bank for International Settlements at Basel, Switzerland.

McGee (mą.gē'), Thomas D'Arcy. b. at Carlingford, Ireland, April 13, 1825; killed at Ottawa, Canada, April 7, 1868. Irish journalist in Great Britain, the U.S. and Canada. At the age of 17 he came to Boston, where he became prominent as a writer and speaker. He returned (1845) to England, where he was a correspondent of the Freeman's Journal and the Nation. He joined (1846) the Young Ireland movement and fled (1848) to the U.S., where he founded the New York Nation and the American Celt. His views became more moderate and in 1857 he was forced to go to Canada because of the opposition of the more radical members of the Irish nationalist movement. He became (1858) a member of parliament and was appointed president of the council (1862) and minister of agriculture (1864). He supported confederation and was elected to the first Dominion parliament (1867). He was assassinated by a member of the Fenian brotherhood. He wrote A History of the Irish Settlers in North America (1851), A Popular History of Ireland (1862), and others.

McGee, William John. b. April 17, 1853; d. Sept. 4, 1912. American geologist and anthropologist. He was geologist of the U.S. Geological Survey (1883–93) and ethnologist in charge of the bureau of American Ethnology (1893–1903).

McGehee (mą.gē'). City in SE Arkansas, in Desha County: railroad shops and food-processing industries. 3,854 (1950).

McGiffert (mą.gif'ėrt), Arthur Cushman. b. at Saquoit, N.Y., March 4, 1861; d. at Dobbs Ferry, N.Y., Feb. 25, 1933. American theologian, professor of ecclesiastical history in Union Theological Seminary (New York) from 1893 and its president (1917–26). He was ordained (1888) a Presbyterian minister and became (1899) a Congregationalist. Author of A Dialogue between a Christian and a Jew (1889), The Church History of Eusebius (1890), A History of Christianity in the Apostolic Age (1897), The Apostles' Creed (1902), Martin Luther, the Man, and his Work (1911), and others.

McGiffin (mą.gif'in), Philo Norton. b. at Washington, Pa., Dec. 13, 1860; d. Feb. 11, 1897. American naval officer, included by Richard Harding Davis in Real Soldiers of Fortune (1906). A graduate (1882) of Annapolis, he resigned (1884) from the U.S. navy, and served as an officer (1885 et seq.) in the Chinese navy, and as professor of seamanship and gunnery for ten years at the Tientsin Naval College. He distinguished himself as executive officer of the Ting Yuen during an engagement (1894) in the Sino-Japanese War.

McGill (mą.gil'). Unincorporated community in E Nevada, in White Pine County: copper smelting. 2,297 (1950).

McGill, James. b. at Glasgow, Oct. 6, 1744; d. at Montreal, Canada, Dec. 12, 1813. Canadian fur trader, now remembered chiefly as the founder of McGill University. McGill was a member of the legislative assembly of Lower Canada (1800–04) and was appointed (1793) a member of the executive council of the same province.

McGill, John. b. at Philadelphia, Nov. 4, 1809; d. Jan. 14, 1872. American Roman Catholic bishop of Richmond, Va.

McGillicuddy (mą.gil'i.kud.i), Cornelius. Full name of Mack, Connie.

McGillivray (mą.gil'i.vrā), Alexander. b. in Alabama, c1759; d. at Pensacola, Fla., Feb. 17, 1793. Creek Indian chief. The son of a Scottish father and a French-Indian mother, he was well educated by his father's family and was for a time a merchant in Georgia and Florida. He joined with the Indians, however, and was elected chief. During the Revolutionary War, he was commissioned a colonel in the British army, worked to keep the Creeks on the side of the British, and after the war remained anti-American. He opposed colonization of the South by the whites, accepted a commission in the Spanish army, and in every way fought American expansion into the area, notably by diplomatic means, playing off the interests of the Americans, British, and Spaniards against one another, but also by direct attack on colonies established throughout the South. He came to New York in 1790 at the invitation of President Washington to sign a treaty of friendship with the U.S., but he repudiated this later by signing (1792) a treaty with the Spaniards.

McGill University (mą.gil'). Canadian institution of higher learning, situated at Montreal, Quebec. It was projected in 1811 by the fur trader James McGill, chartered in 1821, and opened in 1829. The original endowment, consisting of James McGill's estate and mansion near Montreal and his bequest of 10,000 pounds in money, has been greatly added to by later benefactors. McGill College, which the original donor stipulated must bear his name in perpetuity, is the core of an extensive nonsectarian and coeducational university comprising Faculties of Arts, Law, Applied Science, Medicine and Agriculture, a Department of Music, Schools of Commerce, Library Science, Nursing, and Physical Education, a Graduate School, and the Royal Victoria College for women. Affiliated, but not part of the university, are theological colleges of the Anglican, Presbyterian, and United churches. McGill has close scholarly relations with Cambridge, Oxford, and Dublin universities. The governor general of Canada and a board of governors guide the affairs of McGill University on behalf of the British crown, which has the final authority over it.

McGinty (mą.gin'ti), Gas-House. See Gas-House McGinty.

McGivney (mą.giv'ni), Michael Joseph. b. at Waterbury, Conn., Aug. 12, 1852; d. at Thomaston, Conn., Aug. 14, 1890. American Roman Catholic priest, a founder (1882) of the society of the Knights of Columbus at New Haven, Conn.

McGlynn (mą.glin'), Edward. b. at New York, Sept. 27, 1837; d. at Newburgh, N.Y., Jan. 7, 1900. American Roman Catholic clergyman, advocate of the single-tax doctrine. His public appearance (1886) in support of Henry George led to his removal (1887) from the pastorate and a summons to Rome which he refused to obey. He was excommunicated (1887) but upon subsequent investigation reinstated (1892).

McGovern (mą.guv'ėrn), John. b. at Troy, N.Y., Feb. 18, 1850; d. at Chicago, Dec. 17, 1917. American author and editor. As literary expert (1899) for Samuel Eberly Gross, author of The Merchant Prince of Cornville, he won (1902) a plagiarism case against Edmund Rostand, pointing out the similarities between Gross's work and Cyrano de Bergerac.

McGranery (mą.gran'ę.ri), James Patrick. b. at Philadelphia, July 8, 1895—. American jurist, U.S. attorney general (1952–53) under Truman. He was a member of Congress (1937–43) and resigned to serve as assistant to the attorney general (1943–46). In 1946 he was appointed a judge of the U.S. district court for eastern Pennsylvania. When, in 1952, J. H. McGrath resigned as attorney general following a public fight over the special investigatory powers of Newbold Morris, McGranery was named attorney general to succeed him.

McGrath (mą.grath'), James Howard. b. at Woonsocket, R.I., Nov. 28, 1903—. American politician. Appointed U.S. district attorney for Rhode Island in 1934, he held that office until elected governor of the state in 1940. Reëlected in 1942 and 1944, he resigned in 1945 to accept appointment by President Truman as solicitor general of the U.S. This office in turn he resigned when he was elected to the U.S. Senate in 1946. In the Senate he supported President Truman's policies in domestic and foreign affairs. In 1947 he became chairman of the Democratic national committee. In 1949 he left the Senate to accept appointment as attorney general of the U.S. In 1951 instances were disclosed of malfeasance and corruption in various government departments, and accusations were made that these conditions reached into the Department of Justice. Early in 1952 President Truman appointed Newbold Morris of New York to conduct a special investigation of corruption in government departments. The apparently cordial relations which prevailed between Morris and the attorney general at the beginning of this investigation were presently succeeded by disagreements and recriminations. Morris's resignation was accepted by McGrath, whose own resignation was almost simultaneously submitted to the President, and accepted.

McGraw (mą.grô'), John Joseph. b. at Truxton, N.Y., April 7, 1873; d. at New Rochelle, N.Y., Feb. 25, 1934. American baseball player and manager (1902–32) of New York Giants. He played his first professional game in 1890 with New York's Olean club and was third baseman (1891–99) with the Baltimore Orioles, a star player on one of the most famous teams in baseball history. When Edward (Ned) Hanlon, the team's manager, went to Brooklyn in 1899, McGraw became manager of the Orioles. When the American League was organized, McGraw became manager of the Baltimore team in the new league, but he returned to the National League in 1902 and played (1902–06) with the Giants, finally retiring (1906) with a lifetime batting average of .334. In his 31 seasons as manager of the Giants, McGraw led the team to ten league championships (1904–05, 1911–13, 1917, 1921–24), setting a record in the latter years of four consecutive pennants, and three world series championships (1905, 1921–22). He developed many outstanding players, among them Christy Mathewson and his successors as manager of the Giants, Bill Terry and Mel Ott, but no matter what stars played for the team the fiery McGraw was the popular center of interest. He reputedly controlled many of the policies usually in the hands of the business management. He returned from retirement in 1933 to manage the National League team in the first annual All Star Game at Chicago. McGraw was elected to Baseball's Hall of Fame in 1937.

McGready (mą.grā'di), James. [Sometimes called Boanerges.] b. c1758; d. in Henderson County, Ky., in February, 1817. American Presbyterian preacher, whose services (1797, 1798, 1799) in Logan County, Ky., occasioned revival movements culminating in the Great Revival of 1800 in the West and South. He founded (1811 et seq.) churches in southern Indiana.

McGregor (mą.greg'ėr). Town in E central Texas, in McLennan County, ab. 12 mi. S of Waco. 2,669 (1950).

McGregor, Robert. b. in Yorkshire, England, 1848; d. at Portobello, near Edinburgh, in November, 1922. English painter and illustrator, noted particularly for his scenes of fishermen in Scotland and Brittany. His paintings, represented in museums at Glasgow and Edinburgh, include The Smoker and Fishermen at the Edge of the Sea.

McGroarty (mą.grō'ąr.ti), John Steven. b. in Luzerne County, Pa., Aug. 20, 1862; d. at Los Angeles, Calif., Aug. 7, 1944. American lawyer and writer. He was elected (1933) poet laureate of California by the state legislature. Elected (1934) congressman from California, he was noted for his support of the Townsend pension plan.

McGuffey (mą.guf'i), William Holmes. b. near Claysville, Pa., Sept. 23, 1800; d. May 4, 1873. American educator, author of the Eclectic Readers (First and Second, 1835; Third and Fourth, 1837; Fifth, 1844; Sixth, 1857) for elementary schools. They were used in 37 states and sold, in the original and revised editions, some 122 million copies. He was head (1832–36) of the department of mental philosophy and philology at Miami University in Ohio, president (1836–39) of Cincinnati College, president (1839–43) of Ohio University at Athens, Ohio, and professor (1845–73) of moral philosophy at the University of Virginia.

McGuire (mą.gwīr'), William Anthony. b. at Chicago, July 9, 1887; d. at Beverly Hills, Calif., Sept. 16, 1940. American playwright and scenarist. His plays include The Devil, The Servant and the Man, The Divorce, Six Cylinder Love, Kid Boots, Three Musketeers, Rosalie, Twelve Miles Out, and If I Were Rich. Among his scenarios are She Wanted a Millionaire, Roman Scandals, Little Man, What Now, and The Great Ziegfeld.

McHenry (mąk.hen'ri), Fort. Fort at the entrance of Baltimore harbor, named for James McHenry (1753–1816). It was unsuccessfully bombarded by the British fleet in 1814. During the bombardment Francis Scott Key, an American citizen, was detained on board a British vessel, and was inspired by the spectacle to write The Star-Spangled Banner. A national monument and historic shrine were established here in 1939.

McHenry, James. b. at Ballymena, County Antrim, Ireland, Nov. 16, 1753; d. May 3, 1816. American Revolutionary soldier and statesman. He was assigned (1776) to the medical staff of the Cambridge military hospital, and was surgeon (1776–77) of the 5th Pennsylvania Battalion. He served as secretary (1778–80) to George Washington, and as secretary (1780–81) to Lafayette. He was a congressman (1783–86), and a delegate (1787) from Maryland to the Constitutional Convention. As secretary of war (1797–1800) under Adams, he was an adherent of Alexander Hamilton. This policy brought him into conflict with Adams and he resigned.

McHenry, James. [Pseudonym, Solomon Secondsight.] b. at Larne, County Antrim, Ireland, Dec. 20, 1785; d. there, July 21, 1845. Irish author and physician in America. He was the founder (1824) and editor of the American Monthly Magazine. As chief poetry reviewer for the American Quarterly Review, his conservative theories led him to attack the English romantics to such an extent as to provoke a reply in Blackwood's Magazine, at Edinburgh.

McIlhenney (mak'il.hā.ni), Charles Morgan. b. at Philadelphia, April 4, 1858; d. 1904. American landscape painter, named an associate of the National Academy of Design in 1892. Among his principal works are A Gray Summer Noon, The Old, Old Story, and The Passing Storm.

McIlwain (mak'il.wān), Charles Howard. b. at Saltsburg, Pa., March 15, 1871—. American political scientist and authority on English constitutional history, professor of the science of government (1926 et seq.) at Harvard. His works include The High Court of Parliament (1910), The Growth of Political Thought in the West, from the Greeks to the End of the Middle Ages (1932), Constitutionalism and the Changing World (1939), and Constitutionalism: Ancient and Modern (1940). He received the Pulitzer prize for history for The American Revolution (1923).

McIntosh (mak'in.tosh), Lachlan. b. in Scotland, March 17, 1725; d. at Savannah, Ga., Feb. 20, 1806. American Revolutionary soldier. He was a member (1775) at Savannah, Ga., of the provincial congress. After fatally wounding Button Gwinnett in a duel, he was transferred (1777) to Washington's headquarters at Valley Forge.

McIntosh, William. b. in Carroll County, Ga., c1775; killed May 1, 1825. Creek Indian chief who led a group of Creeks on the side of the Americans in the War of 1812. He was commissioned brigadier general in the U.S. army, and served (1817–18) under Andrew Jackson against the Seminoles.

McIntyre (mak'in.tīr), Mount. See under Adirondack Mountains.

McIntyre, O. O. [Full name, Oscar Odd McIntyre.] b. at Plattsburg, Mo., Feb. 18, 1884; d. at New York, Feb. 14, 1938. American journalist. He was a reporter (1902) for the Gallipolis (Ohio) Journal, and was on the staff (1907–11) of the Cincinnati Post. His daily column "New York Day by Day" (1912 et seq.) was syndicated in upwards of 550 newspapers. Author of White Light Nights (1924), Twenty Three Selected Stories (1929), Another Odd Book (1931), and The Big Town (1935).

McKay (mą.kā'), Claude. [Pseudonym, Eli Edwards.] b. at Sunny Ville, Jamaica, British West Indies, Sept. 15, 1890; d. at Chicago, May 22, 1948. American novelist, poet, and short-story writer, notable for his portrayals of Negro life in the U.S. He was associated (1919–22) with Floyd Dell and Max Eastman on the Liberator, and lived for ten years abroad, chiefly in France. Author of Songs of Jamaica (1911), Constab Ballads (1912), and Harlem Shadows (1922). His novels include Home to Harlem (1927), Banjo (1929), and Banana Bottom (1933). Harlem: Negro Metropolis (1940) is nonfiction.

McKay, Donald. b. in Shelburne County, Nova Scotia, Canada, Sept. 4, 1810; d. Sept. 20, 1880. American naval architect and master shipbuilder, noted for his design and construction of clipper ships during the early 1850's. In 1841, as a master shipbuilder, he entered into a partnership with William Currier at Newburyport, Mass. He devoted himself to building packet ships and moved (c1844) to Boston, where he set up his own shipyard. It was here that he built his famous clipper ships (which were, in their day, the fastest vessels afloat). His first clipper (launched Dec. 7, 1850) was the 1,534-ton Stag Hound. On April 15, 1851, he launched the Flying Cloud (1,783 tons), which made the New York-San Francisco voyage in a record time of under 90 days. Among his other clippers were the Sovereign of the Seas (1852), the Westward Ho! (1852), the Great Republic (1853), the Empress of the Seas (1853), and two ships (1854–55) which hold world records for speed under sail, the James Baines and the Lightning. During the Civil War he made proposals in the U.S. and Great Britain for ironclad steam-propelled vessels and in 1864–65 built for the government the monitor Nausett and three other naval ships. He sold his shipyard in 1869 and retired from shipbuilding in 1877.

McKay, Gordon. b. at Pittsfield, Mass., May 4, 1821; d. at Newport, R.I., Oct. 19, 1903. American manufacturer and inventor. He purchased (1859) from Lyman R. Blake the patent for a machine for sewing shoe soles to uppers. He improved (1862) the machine and established factories for its manufacture, leasing the product to shoe manufacturers on a royalty basis. After competing (1876–80) with Charles Goodyear's welt-shoe sewing machine, he consolidated (1880) with Goodyear, and then sold out (1895) to Goodyear.

McKean (mą.kēn'), Thomas. b. at New London, Chester County, Pa., March 19, 1734; d. at Philadelphia, June 24, 1817. American politician and jurist. He was a member (1774–83) of the Continental Congress from Delaware, signed the Declaration of Independence in 1776, was chief justice (1777–99) of Pennsylvania, and was governor (1799–1808) of Pennsylvania.

McKeesport (mą.kēz'pōrt). Industrial city and river port in SW Pennsylvania, in Allegheny County, at the confluence of the Monongahela and Youghiogheny rivers, ab. 10 mi. SE of Pittsburgh, in a coal-mining area. The chief industry is the manufacture of steel products; there are also food-processing industries. The site was settled in 1755. The city is in the urbanized area of Pittsburgh. 51,502 (1950).

McKees Rocks (mą.kēz'). Borough in SW Pennsylvania, in Allegheny County, ab. 4 mi. NW of downtown Pittsburgh: part of the urbanized area of Pittsburgh. It has manufactures of iron and steel, chewing gum, tin containers, wooden and steel kegs, car and locomotive springs, and automobile parts. It was settled c1764 and incorporated in 1892. Pop. 16,241 (1950).

McKellar (mą.kel'ąr), Kenneth Douglas. b. at Richmond, Ala., Jan. 29, 1869—. American politician. He served in the House of Representatives (1911–17) before being elected (1917) to the U.S. Senate, where he served six successive terms. McKellar, a bitter opponent of the Tennessee Valley Authority, became known as a leader of the conservative bloc of the Democratic senators and an opponent of the F. D. Roosevelt and Truman administrations; his seniority in the Senate nevertheless made him presiding officer of that body as president pro tem when in 1945 Roosevelt died and Truman became president. In 1952, despite the support of the principal Tennessee political machine, McKellar was defeated in the primary election and lost his seat in the Senate.

McKelway (mą.kel'wā), St. Clair. b. at Columbia, Mo., March 15, 1845; d. July 16, 1915. American journalist, a regent (1883–1915) of the University of the State of New York. In 1870 he became assistant editor of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, and in 1878 editor of the Albany Argus, which he left some six years later to become the editor in chief of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, a position which he held until his death.

McKendree (mą.ken'drē), William. b. in King William County, Va., July 6, 1757; d. near Nashville, Tenn., March 5, 1835. First American-born bishop (1808 et seq.) of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

McKenna (mą.ken'ą), Joseph. b. at Philadelphia, Aug. 10, 1843; d. Nov. 21, 1926. American jurist. He was a member of the California legislature (1875–76) and a member of Congress (1885–93). He served as a U.S. circuit judge (1893–97), U.S. attorney general (1897–98) under McKinley, and was an associate justice (1898–1925) of the U.S. Supreme Court.

McKenna, Reginald. b. July 6, 1863; d. at London, Sept. 6, 1943. British statesman, first lord of the admiralty (1908–11), home secretary (1911–15), and chancellor of the exchequer (1915–16). He was appointed financial secretary of the treasury in 1905, and was president of the board of education (1907–08).

McKenna, Stephen. b. Feb. 27, 1888—. English novelist. Author of The Reluctant Lover (1912), Sheila Intervenes (1913), The Sixth Sense (1915), Sonia (1917), The Education of Eric Lane (1921), Tales of Intrigue and Revenge (1924), Due Reckoning (1927), Happy Ending (1929), Magic Quest (1933), Breasted Amazon (1938), A Life for a Life (1939), Mean, Sensual Man (1943), and others.

McKennan (mą.ken'ąn), Thomas McKean Thompson. b. at Dragon Neck, Del., March 31, 1794; d. at Reading, Pa., July 9, 1852. American lawyer, secretary (Aug. 15–26, 1850) of the interior under Fillmore. He was a representative (1831–39, 1842–43) from Pennsylvania to Congress.

McKenney (mą.ken'i), Ruth. b. at Mishawaka, Ind., Nov. 18, 1911—. American journalist and author. She was a reporter for newspapers in Ohio and New York, and joined (1938) the editorial staff of New Masses. Her book My Sister Eileen (1938) was dramatized (1940) and scenarized (1942). Author also of Industrial Valley (1939), The McKenneys Carry On (1940), Love Story (1950), and others.

McKenzie (mą.ken'zi). City in W Tennessee, in Carroll and Weakley counties, ab. 100 mi. W of Nashville, in a farming region. 3,774 (1950).

McKenzie, John. Original name of Kinzie, John.

McKenzie, Robert Tait. b. at Almonte, Canada, May 26, 1867; d. April 29, 1938. Canadian sculptor, who was also research professor of physical education at the University of Pennsylvania. He served on the Pennsylvania State Art Commission, and was chairman of the American sculpture committee for the 1936 Olympiad. Among his principal works are College Athlete (Oxford, England), Competitor (Metropolitan Museum, New York), Captain Guy Drummond (Ottawa), and Flying Sphere (St. Louis).

McKerrow (mą.ker'ō), Ronald Brunlees. b. at Putney, London, Dec. 12, 1872; d. at Wendover, England, Jan. 20, 1940. English scholar, teacher, bibliographer, and publisher. He was professor of English (1897–1900) in the government school of foreign languages at Tokyo. After his return to England, he specialized in the Elizabethan period, becoming a bibliographer. He entered (1908) the publishing firm of Sidgwick and Jackson, Ltd., of which he became managing director in 1917. He was professor of English literature (1914–18) and, later, of bibliography, at King's College, London. He founded (1925) and was the first editor of the Review of English Studies. Author of Dictionary of Printers, 1558–1640 (1910), Introduction to Bibliography for Literary Students (1927), Printers' and Publishers' Devices in England and Scotland, 1485–1460 (1933), and The Treatment of Shakespeare's Text by His Earlier Editors, 1709–1768 (1933). His edition of the works of Thomas Nashe (5 vols., 1904–10) remains standard. At his death he was engaged in preparing a revision of the Oxford Shakespeare, for which he had written (1939) Prolegomena for the Oxford Shakespeare.

McKim (mą.kim'), Charles Follen. b. in Chester County, Pa., Aug. 24, 1847; d. at St. James, Long Island, N.Y., Sept. 14, 1909. American architect. From 1867 until 1870 he studied at Paris. Returning to America in 1870, he entered the office of H. H. Richardson at New York, and in 1872 commenced practice on his own account. He was joined by W. R. Mead in 1877, and by Stanford White in 1879, thus forming the firm of McKim, Mead, and White, of New York. In 1897 he organized the American Academy in Rome, of which he was chosen the first president. In 1901 he was appointed to the commission entrusted with the rearrangement of the city of Washington. Among the buildings erected by this firm are the Century Club, the old Madison Square Garden, and the Metropolitan Club at New York; Battle Monument, West Point; the Boston Public Library; the Agricultural Building, World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago, 1893; a group of buildings for Columbia University, New York, and for New York University; and a reconstruction of the White House at Washington. He became a member of the National Academy of Design in 1907.

McKim, James Miller. b. at Carlisle, Pa., Nov. 14, 1810; d. Llewellyn Park, West Orange, N.J., June 13, 1874. American abolitionist. He was publishing agent (c1840) of the Pennsylvania Anti-Slavery Society, and editor, after John Greenleaf Whittier, of the Pennsylvania Freeman. He was a founder (1865) of the Nation at New York.

McKinley (mą.kin'li), John. b. in Culpeper County, Va., May 1, 1780; d. at Louisville, Ky., July 19, 1852. American lawyer and politician. After serving as U.S. senator (1826–31) from Alabama, and representative (1833–35) in Congress, he was an associate justice (1837–52) of the U.S. Supreme Court.

McKinley, Mount. [Also: Denali; Russian, Bolshaya.] Mountain in S central Alaska, the highest summit in North America. In 1906 Frederick A. Cook reported that he had ascended the mountain on Sept. 15 of that year, but this report has been discredited; the first ascent was made in 1913 by the party of Hudson Stuck. 20,269 ft.

McKinley, William. b. at Niles, Ohio, Jan. 29, 1843; d. at Buffalo, N.Y., Sept. 14, 1901. American statesman, 25th President of the United States (1897–1901). He was the son of an iron-founder, and was deeply influenced by the teachings of his devout Methodist mother. At 17 he enlisted as a private in the Union Army, from which he was mustered out in 1865 with the rank of brevet major. After studying law, he established his practice at Canton, Ohio, where in 1871 he married Ida Saxton. Their two children died in infancy, and after the second birth Mrs. McKinley's health was permanently impaired. McKinley had become active in the Ohio Republican Party, and was elected to Congress in 1876. With the exception of a single term, he served in the House of Representatives for the next 14 years, rising into national prominence as an advocate of the protective tariff. As chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, he was in charge of the tariff bill of 1890, and he lost his seat in Congress in the Democratic landslide caused by a reaction against its high schedules. In 1891 and again in 1893 he was elected governor of Ohio. During the severe business depression which followed the panic of the latter year the Republicans blamed the Democratic tariff, but liberal elements looked for an economic remedy in the free coinage of silver. Through McKinley's alliance with the master political organizer Marcus A. Hanna, he won the Republican nomination for the presidency in 1896 as the apostle of "protection-and-prosperity." The silver agitation forced the Republicans, as the party of the moneyed interests, to declare for the gold standard, and the Democrats' nomination of William Jennings Bryan on a free-silver platform made currency the paramount issue in a bitter political contest. After a "front porch" campaign at Canton, McKinley was elected. Congress promptly followed his instructions in passing a high-tariff measure, the Dingley Act, but did not declare for the gold standard until 1900, when the policy had been favored by the "full dinner-pail" that McKinley had promised and by vast increases in world production of gold. McKinley literally accepted the duty of his office as that of "presiding." He tested public sentiment before formulating his major policies, and showed supreme tact and skill in dealing with Congress. On assuming office, he attempted to adjust the long-strained relations with Spain, whose mistreatment of Cuba had incensed the American people. From the sinking of the Maine (Feb. 15, 1898) until the outbreak of hostilities in April, he put forth strenuous efforts to avert war by diplomacy. The delay gave the navy time to prepare, and Spanish naval power (already in the second class among the nations of the world) was annihilated in the battles of Manila Bay (May 1, 1898) and Santiago (July 3, 1898). The war, which was won in three months, established the U.S. as a world power, and marked the beginning of close friendship with Great Britain and involvement in the affairs of China. McKinley himself believed that it signalized the end of the American spirit of isolation. Patriotic feeling was exalted by a new pride in the navy and a restored sense of national unity. The prestige of the president's leadership was so great that it was scarcely affected by the storm of criticisms of the War Department, under Russell A. Alger, and the accusations (exaggerated, but almost universally believed) that the soldiers had been fed on "embalmed beef." McKinley's mind had been opened to the concept of prosperity promoted by foreign trade. After Commodore George Dewey's victory at Manila Bay, commercial expansion in the Far East was a factor in forming administration policy. McKinley strongly supported the annexation of Hawaii, which Congress passed under the pressure of war. The peace terms demanded that Spain relinquish sovereignty over Cuba, and cede to the U.S. Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Philippines. The disposition of the Philippines had excited furious controversy among Americans, and the question was long debated by the president before he reached the decision that the acquisition of the entire group was an inescapable responsibility and that it was desired by a majority in the country. Before the Senate, by a narrow margin, ratified the peace treaty, a native insurrection broke out on Luzon under the Filipino leader Emilio Aguinaldo. The distant and stubbornly waged rebellion strained the resources of the War Department, but McKinley insisted on the firm assertion of American sovereignty, while laying plans for the benevolent administration of the islands and for the education and training in self-government of the inhabitants. In 1900 he sent William Howard Taft to the Philippines as the head of a civil commission, and Taft became the first civil governor the following year. McKinley showed an equal determination in maintaining a protectorate over Cuba, until political stability had been restored to that island, under the military governorship of Leonard Wood. In 1899 McKinley found a strong secretary of war in Elihu Root, who directed the armies and guided the bills for the government of the new possessions through Congress, while instituting needed reforms in the War Department. Plans for an isthmian canal were expedited by the acquisitions in the Pacific. Secretary of State John Hay, who took office soon after the war, devoted his efforts to making a treaty with Great Britain that would give the U.S. a free hand in this project, but, because of Senate opposition, the treaty was not concluded until 1901. Hay sponsored the "open door" in China, and successfully exerted American influence to prevent the partition of the empire when the U.S. joined the powers of Europe in intervention at the time (1900) of the Boxer rebellion. McKinley was renominated in 1900, with Governor Theodore Roosevelt of New York as his running mate. This strong ticket readily defeated Bryan, who was nominated by the Democrats on a platform that combined anti-imperialism with the old issue of free silver. Six months after his second inauguration, McKinley was shot by an anarchist, Leon F. Czolgosz, at the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo. He died eight days after receiving the wound. The senseless tragedy shocked and grieved the whole nation. McKinley was a Republican of the old school, too conservative to comprehend the social and economic ferment of his day, but his administration had established America in a position of influence and power and enlarged the horizons of the national destiny; while his earnest patriotism, his personal integrity and kindliness, and his devotion to his invalid wife had made him one of the most beloved of American chief executives.

McKinley Tariff. Act passed by the U.S. Congress in 1890 and intended as a protectionist measure for encouraging American "infant" industries. The schedule on wool and woolens was raised and a bounty of two cents a pound was offered to U.S. sugar-growers. The act authorized the president to enter into reciprocal trade agreements in instances where such bargaining would reduce or eliminate heavy tariff barriers placed upon the entry of American goods into foreign countries. The high average of its increased duties stands second only to the Hawley-Smoot Tariff of 1930. The act took its name from William McKinley, then chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. It was repealed in 1894 in favor of the slightly less protective Wilson-Gorman Tariff.

McKinney (mą.kin'i). City in NE Texas, county seat of Collin County, N of Dallas: manufactures cotton textiles, clothing, mattresses, and food products. 10,560 (1950).

McKnight (mąk.nīt'), George Harley. b. at Sterling Valley, N.Y., April 24, 1871—. American teacher, professor of English (1907–41) at Ohio State University. Among his works are English Words and Their Background (1923) and Modern English in the Making (1928).

McKready (mą.krē'di), Kelvin. Pseudonym of Murphy, Edgar Gardner.

McLane (mą.klān'), Allan. b. at Philadelphia, Aug. 8, 1746; d. May 22, 1829. American Revolutionary soldier. He was in charge (1777–78) of light troops during the Philadelphia fighting, and was the first to enter Philadelphia after the British evacuation. He tried, but failed (1778), to convince Washington of Benedict Arnold's doubtful loyalty. He commanded (1779) Henry Lee's dismounted dragoons, and later served under Friedrich von Steuben in Virginia.

McLane, Louis. b. at Smyrna, Del., May 28, 1786; d. at Baltimore, Oct. 7, 1857. American politician, U.S. secretary of the treasury (1831–33) and secretary of state (1833–34) under Jackson. He was U.S. senator from Delaware (1827–29), and U.S. minister to Great Britain (1829–31 and 1845–46).

McLane, Robert Milligan. b. at Wilmington, Del., June 23, 1815; d. at Paris, April 16, 1898. American diplomat; son of Louis McLane. He was member of Congress from Maryland (1847–51 and 1879–83), and U.S. minister to China (1853–55), to Mexico (1859–60), and to France (1885–88). He was governor (1883–85) of Maryland.

McLaughlin (mą.klâf'lin), Andrew Cunningham. b. at Beardstown, Ill., Feb. 14, 1861—. American educator, professor of history (1906–29) in the University of Chicago. He was assistant professor and professor of history (1888–1906) in the University of Michigan. His works include Lewis Cass (1891), A History of the American Nation (1899), The Confederation and the Constitution (1905), and others.

McLaughlin, Charles. Original name of Macklin, Charles.

McLaughlin, Mary Louise. b. at Cincinnati, Ohio, Sept. 29, 1847; d. Jan. 17, 1939. American painter and ceramist, noted for her manufacture and decoration of porcelain. In 1898 she began to make a porcelain called Losanti, exhibited decorative metalwork at the Paris Exposition of 1899, and exhibited later at Buffalo and Chicago. Examples of her pottery may be found in the Cincinnati Museum, of her porcelain in the Philadelphia Museum, and of her metalwork in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

McLaughlin, Robert. b. at Chicago, 1908—. American novelist and short-story writer. Among his novels and collections of short stories are The Axe Fell (1939), A Short Wait Between Trains (1945), and The Side of the Angels (1947).

McLaws (mą.klôz'), Lafayette. b. at Augusta, Ga., Jan. 15, 1821; d. at Savannah, Ga., July 24, 1897. American soldier in the Confederate service. He was promoted major general on May 23, 1862, and commanded a division at Gettysburg and in other important battles.

McLean (mą.klān'), George Payne. b. at Simsbury, Conn., Oct. 7, 1857; d. June 6, 1932. American legislator and lawyer. He was governor (1901–03) and three times senator (1911–29) from Connecticut.

McLean, John. b. in Morris County, N.J., March 11, 1785; d. at Cincinnati, Ohio, April 4, 1861. American jurist and politician, U.S. postmaster general (1823–29) under Monroe and John Quincy Adams. He was a member of Congress from Ohio (1813–16), associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court (1829–61), and an unsuccessful candidate for the Republican nomination for president in 1856 and 1860. His dissenting opinion in the Dred Scott case caused Chief Justice Roger B. Taney to write the famous majority opinion.

McLean, Robert. b. at Philadelphia, Oct. 1, 1891—. American newspaper publisher; son of William Lippard McLean. He succeeded (1931) his father as publisher of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin. He was president (1938 et seq.) of the Associated Press.

McLean, William Lippard. b. at Mount Pleasant, Pa., May 4, 1852; d. at Germantown, Pa., July 30, 1931. American newspaper publisher. He was the chief owner (1895–1931) of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin. He was a director (1896–1924) of the Associated Press.

McLeansboro (mą.klānz'bur.ō). City in SE Illinois, county seat of Hamilton County. 3,008 (1950).

McLennan (mą.klen'ąn), John Cunningham. b. 1867; d. aboard a Paris-Boulogne train, Oct. 9, 1935. Canadian physicist. He liquefied (1932) helium gas, and was known for his work on superconductivity in metals and alloys at low temperatures, and on resistance of metals to electricity. He experimented on an "approximation" of perpetual motion by inducing electric current in a lead ring cooled in a flask of liquid helium.

McLennan, John Ferguson. b. at Inverness, Scotland, Oct. 14, 1827; d. at Hayes Common, Kent, England, June 16, 1881. Scottish sociologist. He is known chiefly for his researches in connection with the history of the evolution of marriage, which led him to adopt the theory, in which he had to some extent been anticipated by the Swiss jurist Bachofen, that the primitive form of marriage was exogamy, of which polyandry and polygamous or monogamous monandry were successive developments. This theory is expounded in his principal work, An Inquiry into the Origin of the Form of Capture in Marriage Ceremonies (1865).

McLeod (mą.kloud'), Irene Rutherford. b. Aug. 21, 1891—. English poet; wife (married 1919) of Aubrey De Sélincourt. Author of Swords for Life and Songs to Save a Soul (both 1916), the latter a volume of poems previously published in the Nation, the Smart Set, Votes for Women, and the New Weekly. She also wrote Before Dawn (1918) and Towards Love (1923).

McLevy (mąk.lē'vi), Jasper. b. at Bridgeport, Conn., March 27, 1878—. American politician, noted as one of the few Socialists in the U.S. to hold office consistently (mayor of Bridgeport, Conn., 1933 et seq.).

M'Clintock (mą.klin'tǫk), Sir Francis Leopold. b. at Dundalk, Ireland, July, 8 1819; d. at London, Nov. 17, 1907. British admiral and arctic explorer. He took part in various of the Franklin relief expeditions (1848, 1850, 1854), commanding the final expedition (1857–59). In 1851 he made a sledge journey of about 760 miles along the north shore of Parry Sound. He published the findings of the last expedition, which found evidence of the fate of John Franklin and his men, in The Voyage of the Fox in the Arctic Seas (1859).

M'Clintock, John. b. at Philadelphia, Oct. 27, 1814; d. at Madison, N.J., March 4, 1870. American clergyman and theologian of the Methodist Episcopal Church, president (1867–70) of Drew Theological Seminary (Madison, N.J.). He was the chief editor of M'Clintock and Strong's Cyclopaedia of Biblical, Theological, and Ecclesiastical Literature (10 vols., 1867–81).

McLoughlin (mą.klok'lin), John. b. in La Rivière du Loup Parish, Canada, Oct. 19, 1784; d. at Oregon City, Ore., Sept. 3, 1857. American pioneer in what is now the state of Oregon. He went to the Oregon country as chief factor of the Hudson Bay Company in 1824, remaining there in its employ until 1846.

M'Clure (mą.klör'), Sir Robert John Le Mesurier. b. at Wexford, Ireland, Jan. 28, 1807; d. at London, in October, 1873. British naval officer and arctic explorer. He discovered the northwest passage from the Pacific to the Atlantic (1850–54) while commanding the Investigator in a search for Sir John Franklin's lost arctic expedition.

M'Clure Strait. See McClure Strait.

McMahon (mąk.mā'ən), Brien. b. at Norwalk, Conn., Oct. 6, 1903; d. at Washington, D.C., July 28, 1952. American politician. In 1933 he became a member of the U.S. department of justice as assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division, and handled such cases as the Harlan, Ky., coal-mine owners' conspiracy case and the McKesson and Robbins fraud case. He was in private practice (1939–44) before being elected (1944) to the U.S. Senate. In 1946 he sponsored a bill to establish the atomic energy commission, and was appointed (1947) a member of the joint congressional committee on atomic energy, of which he became chairman in 1949. He was reëlected to the Senate in 1950.

McManus (mąk.man'us), George. b. at St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 23, 1884—. American cartoonist who created (1913) the comic strip Bringing Up Father, featuring the characters Maggie and Jiggs. He joined the staff of the New York World (1905) and of the New York American (1912). He is the creator also of other comic strips, such as Let George Do It, The Newlyweds and Their Baby, Panhandle Pete, and Rosie's Beau.

McMaster (mąk.mās'tėr), John Bach. b. at Brooklyn, N.Y., June 29, 1852; d. at Darien, Conn., May 24, 1932. American historian. He became professor of history in the University of Pennsylvania in 1883. He published A History of the People of the United States (8 vols., 1883–1913). His later works include With the Fathers (1896), Origin, Meaning and Application of the Monroe Doctrine (1896), School History of the United States (1897), Daniel Webster (1902), The Acquisition of Political, Social, and Industrial Rights of Man in America (1903), and Brief History of the United States (1907).

McMechen (mąk.mek'ən). City in N West Virginia, in Marshall County: residential community between Wheeling and Moundsville. 3,518 (1950).

McMicken Heights (mąk.mik'ən). Unincorporated community in W Washington, in King County, near Seattle. 2,550 (1950).

McMillan (mąk.mil'ən), Edwin Mattison. b. at Redondo Beach, Calif., Sept. 18, 1907—. American physicist. He worked (1932 et seq.) at the University of California, after 1934 as a member of the staff at the radiation laboratory, and after 1946 as professor of physics. His work has been important in the development of artificial radioactivity; he was one of the developers of the cyclotron and he has investigated nuclear activity. In 1940 he was a codiscoverer of neptunium, element number 93, the first of the transuranium elements, and his research was important in the discovery of element 94, plutonium, later of great consequence in the development of the atomic bomb. McMillan did not work on the atomic project during World War II, his researches being directed towards the development of radar and sonar devices. In 1951, he and Glenn Seaborg, with whom he had worked in the plutonium research, were awarded the Nobel prize in chemistry.

McMillan, James Winning. b. in Clark County, Ky., April 28, 1825; d. March 9, 1903. American soldier. He was in charge (1862) of Union forces that captured Confederate stores and a blockade runner at Berwick Bay, and later distinguished himself at the battle of Winchester.

McMinnville (mąk.min'vil). City in NW Oregon, county seat of Yamhill County: trading center for an agricultural area; manufactures of condensed milk, lumber, bricks, and tiles. 6,635 (1950).

McMinnville. Town in C Tennessee, county seat of Warren County: manufactures hosiery, blankets, wood products, flour, and meal. 7,577 (1950).

McMurray (mąk.mur'i). [Former name, Fort McMurray.] Town in NE Alberta, Canada, at the confluence of the Athabaska and Clearwater rivers, just N of the railroad terminus at Waterways. It is an old fur-trading post and is now also a transportation center, with an airport. 621 (1951).

McMurry (mąk.mur'i), Charles Alexander. b. at Crawfordsville, Ind., Feb. 18, 1857; d. March 24, 1929. American educator; brother of Frank Morton McMurry. Author of Special Method in Reading (1898), Special Method in Geography (1898), Teaching by Projects (1919), and How to Organize the Curriculum (1923).

McMurry, Frank Morton. b. near Crawfordsville, Ind., July 2, 1862; d. Aug. 1, 1936. American educator; brother of Charles Alexander McMurry. He was professor (1898–1926) of elementary education at Teachers College, Columbia University. Author of How to Study and Teaching How to Study (1909).

McNab (mąk.nab'), Sir Alan Napier. b. at Niagara, Canada, Feb. 19, 1798; d. at Toronto, Aug. 8, 1862. Canadian statesman. He was elected to the legislature of Upper Canada in 1830, and as colonel of militia repressed the rebellion of 1837–38.

McNair (mąk.nār'), Lesley James. b. at Verndale, Minn., May 25, 1883; killed in Normandy, in July, 1944. American soldier, notable for the development of very realistic training methods while commanding general (March, 1942–43) of army ground forces; responsible for the training of millions of inductees during World War II.

McNairsville (mąk.nārz'vil). A former name of Wilkinsburg, Pa.

McNarney (mąk.nār'ni), Joseph Taggart. b. at Emporium, Pa., Aug. 28, 1893—. American soldier. He graduated (1915) from the U.S. Military Academy. He was chairman (1942) of the reorganization committee of the War Department, and was appointed (March, 1942) deputy chief of staff of the U.S. army. Appointed lieutenant general (May, 1942) and general (March, 1945), he served as deputy supreme Allied commander (October, 1944–November, 1945) in the Mediterranean area. He was commander (1945) of U.S. forces in Europe, succeeding Dwight D. Eisenhower, and heading the occupation army in Germany. He was appointed chief (1947) of the air materiel command, and served as senior member (1947–52) of the United Nations military staff committee.

McNary (mak.nār'i), Charles Linza. b. near Salem, Ore., June 12, 1874; d. at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Feb. 25, 1944. American lawyer and politician, U.S. senator (1917–44) from Oregon. He was a justice (1913–15) of the Oregon supreme court. As chairman of the Senate committee on agriculture and forestry, he was cosponsor of the McNary-Haugen bill for farm relief, twice (1927, 1928) vetoed by President Coolidge. He was Republican candidate (1940) for vice-president on the ticket headed by Wendell Willkie.

McNaughton (mąk.nô'tən), Andrew George Latta. b. at Moosomin, Canada, Feb. 25, 1887—. Canadian army officer and statesman. He was chief (1929–35) of the Canadian general staff, and led (1939–40) the first division of the Canadian Overseas Force, becoming general officer (1942–43) commanding the First (Canadian) Army in England. He was minister (1944–45) of national defense, chairman (1945 et seq.) of the Canadian section of the Canada-U.S. joint board of defense, and Canadian representative to the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission (1946) and Security Council (1948).

McNeil (mąk.nēl'), Hector. b. at Garelochead, Dumbartonshire, Scotland, March 10, 1910—. British statesman. He was a reporter and editor (1933–41) at Glasgow and London before turning to politics. In 1941 he was elected to Parliament as a member of the Labour Party and served (1942–45) in World War II as parliamentary private secretary to P. J. Noel-Baker in the ministry of war transport. He became (1945) undersecretary of state in the foreign office and was minister of state and privy councilor (1946–50). In 1946 he was named delegate of the United Kingdom to the United Nations, and he served as a vice-president of the General Assembly in 1947. He led the British delegation to the Economic Commission for Europe in 1948. He was secretary of state for Scotland (1950–51).

McNeile (mąk.nēl'), Cyril. [Pseudonym, Sapper; full name, Herman Cyril McNeile.] b. at Bodmin, Cornwall, England, Sept. 28, 1888; d. at Pulborough, Sussex, England, Aug. 14, 1937. English soldier and author, creator of the fictional character "Bulldog Drummond." He served (1907–19) with the royal engineers as lieutenant and lieutenant colonel. Under his pseudonym, the military term for a member of the engineers, he wrote Sergeant Michael Cassidy, The Fatal Second, and Men, Women, and Guns (1916), No Man's Land (1917), Bulldog Drummond: The Adventures of a Demobilized Officer Who Found Peace Dull (1920), The Dinner Club (1923), Jim Maitland (1923), Bulldog Drummond's Third Round (1924), The Final Count (1926), The Hidden Witness (1929), Tiny Carteret (1930), Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back (1933), and Challenge (1934).

McNeill (mąk.nēl'), James. b. at Glenarm, County Antrim, Ireland, March 27, 1869; d. at London, Dec. 12, 1938. Irish government administrator, high commissioner (1923–28) and governor general (1928–32) of the Irish Free State.

McNeill, Ronald John. See Cushendun, 1st Baron.

McNemar (mak'nę.mär), Richard. [Pseudonyms: Eleazar Wright, Philos Harmoniae.] b. Nov. 20, 1770; d. Sept. 15, 1839. American religious leader, important in, although not the originator of, the Kentucky Revival. A classical scholar and leader of western Shakerism, he was the author of The Kentucky Revival (1807), the standard work on this movement and the first bound volume by and about the Shakers.

McNutt (mąk.nut'), Paul Vories. b. at Franklin, Ind., July 19, 1891—. American administrator, educator, and diplomat. He became (1917) assistant professor of law at Indiana University, and was dean (1925–33) of the Indiana University School of Law. He was governor (1933–37) of Indiana, and U.S. high commissioner and U.S. ambassador (1946 et seq.) to the Philippines. He served as administrator (1939–45) of the Federal Security Agency, and also as chairman (1942–45) of the War Manpower Commission.

McPherson (mąk.fėr'sọn). City in C Kansas, county seat of McPherson County. It is in a petroleum region, and has oil-refining and flour-milling industries. 8,689 (1950).

McPherson, James Birdseye. b. near Clyde, Sandusky County, Ohio, Nov. 14, 1828; killed before Atlanta, Ga., July 22, 1864. American general in the Civil War. He graduated from West Point in 1853, was chief engineer on the staff of General Ulysses S. Grant in 1862, was appointed to the command of a corps of Grant's army in 1863, and in the same year routed part of Joseph E. Johnston's army at Raymond, and, with the aid of Sherman's corps, defeated Johnston at Jackson. He also served with distinction at Campion Hill and in the assaults on Vicksburg in 1863. In 1864 he took part in Sherman's campaign in Georgia as commander of the Army of the Tennessee.

McRae (mą.krā'), James Henry. b. at Lumber City, Ga., Dec. 24, 1863; d. at Berkeley, Calif., May 1, 1940. American army officer. He was a member (1905–08) of the general staff. With the rank of major general, he commanded (1918–19) the 78th division in France, taking part in the St.-Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives.

McRae, Milton Alexander. b. at Detroit, Mich., June 13, 1858; d. at La Jolla, Calif., Oct. 11, 1930. American newspaper publisher, cofounder (1897) with Edward W. Scripps of the Scripps-McRae Press Association, a forerunner of what is now the United Press. He was business manager (1883–87) of the Cincinnati Penny Post, and organized (1889 et seq.) with Scripps a chain of six newspapers which developed into the Scripps-Howard group. Author of Forty Years in Newspaperdom (1924).

McReynolds (mąk.ren'ọldz), James Clark. b. at Elkton, Ky., Feb. 3, 1862; d. at Washington, D.C., Aug. 24, 1946. American lawyer, U.S. attorney general (1913–14) under Wilson. He was assistant attorney general (1903–07), and was retained as counsel by the U.S. government in matters relating to the antitrust laws. He served as an associate justice (1914–41) of the U.S. Supreme Court and became known during the 1930's as a bitter foe of New Deal legislation. He is said to have written more opinions declaring legislation unconstitutional than any other justice in the history of the U.S. Supreme Court.

M'Crie (mą.krē'), Thomas. b. at Duns, Scotland, in November, 1772; d. at Edinburgh, Aug. 5, 1835. Scottish Presbyterian clergyman and author. His works include Life of John Knox (1812), Life of Andrew Melville (1819), and The Reformation in Italy (1827).

McSherrystown (mąk.sher'iz.toun). Borough in S Pennsylvania, in Adams County, ab. 35 mi. SW of Harrisburg. 2,510 (1950).

McTeague (mąk.tēg'). Novel by Frank Norris, published in 1899.

McTyeire (mąk.tir'), Holland Nimmons. b. in Barnwell County, S.C., July 28, 1824; d. at Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 15, 1889. American Methodist Episcopal (South) bishop. He obtained from Cornelius Vanderbilt a million dollars toward the founding of what is now Vanderbilt University, and served as first president of the board of trustees.

M'Culloch (mą.kul'ọch, -ọk), John Ramsay. b. at Whithorn, Wigtownshire, Scotland, March 1, 1789; d. at London, Nov. 11, 1864. Scottish statistician and political economist. He was editor (1818–20) of the Scotsman, professor of political economy (1828–32) at the University of London (now University College), and comptroller of the stationery office from 1838 until his death. Among his chief publications are The Principles of Political Economy (1825), and A Dictionary, Practical, Theoretical, and Historical, of Commerce and Commercial Navigation (1832).

Mdange (ęm.däng'gā). [Also, Imidange.] Subgroup of the Xhosa, a Bantu-speaking people of S Africa.

Mdina (mę.dē'na). See Città Vecchia.

Meacham (mē'chąm), Joseph. b. at Enfield, Conn., Feb. 22, 1742; d. probably at New Lebanon, N.Y., Aug. 16, 1796. American religious leader. "Father Joseph," as he was called by the Shakers, was a farmer and Baptist lay preacher. Converted to Shakerism, he became the head of the United Society of Believers (Shakers) after the death of "Father" James Whittaker. The period of Meacham's leadership (1787–96) was one of consolidation and organization, and "Father Joseph" was the one chiefly responsible for transforming a somewhat disordered movement into a carefully planned economic-religious institution which survived to become the most successful of all American experiments in religious communism. He was the author of A Concise Statement of the Principles of the Only True Church (1790), the first printed exposition of Shaker doctrines.

Mead (mēd), Edwin Doak. b. at Chesterfield, N.H., Sept. 29, 1849; d. at Boston, Aug. 17, 1937. American editor and author. As delegate of the American Peace Society he attended several European peace congresses.

Mead, George Herbert. b. at South Hadley, Mass., Feb. 27, 1863; d. April 26, 1931. American philosopher. He was assistant professor (1894–1902), associate professor (1902–07), and professor (1907 et seq.) at the University of Chicago. His books Mind, Self, and Society (1934) and The Philosophy of the Act (1938) were edited and published after his death.

Mead, Lake. Reservoir in NW Arizona and SE Nevada, in the Colorado and Virgin rivers, formed by Hoover Dam. It contains the largest volume of water of any reservoir in the world. Length, ab. 115 mi.; area, ab. 255 sq. mi.

Mead, Larkin Goldsmith. b. at Chesterfield, N.H., Jan. 3, 1835; d. at Florence, Oct. 15, 1910. American sculptor; brother of William Rutherford Mead. He went to Florence in 1862, and made his residence there. Among his works are a colossal statue of Vermont (1857), Ethan Allen (1861), at Montpelier, Vt., Lincoln (1874), at Springfield, Ill., and Ethan Allen (1874), at Washington, D.C.

Mead, Margaret. b. at Philadelphia, Dec. 16, 1901—. American anthropologist. She was assistant curator (1926–42) and associate curator (1942 et seq.) of ethnology, American Museum of Natural History. She was a research fellow (1928–29) in the Admiralty Islands, and a member of expeditions to New Guinea (1931–33) and to Bali and

New Guinea (1936–39). Author of Coming of Age in Samoa (1928), An Inquiry into the Question of Cultural Stability in Polynesia (1928), Growing Up in New Guinea (1930), Sex and Temperament in Three Primitive Societies (1935), Keep Your Powder Dry (1942), Male and Female: a Study of the Sexes in a Changing World (1949), and other books. She was coeditor, with Gregory Bateson, of Balinese Character: A Photographic Analysis (1942).

Mead, Richard. b. at Stepney, London, Aug. 11, 1673; d. at London, Feb. 16, 1754. English physician. In 1703 he was elected physician at St. Thomas's Hospital, London, and in the same year discovered the itch-mite. He became the most popular physician of the day, and a famous collector of books, coins, and the like. In 1727 he was made court physician to George II. He published De variolis et morbillis (1747), Monita et praecepta medica (1751), and others. He is also remembered as the friend of Pope, Johnson, and other famous literary figures.

Mead, William Rutherford. b. at Brattleboro, Vt., Aug. 20, 1846; d. June 20, 1925. American architect; brother of Larkin Goldsmith Mead. He was educated at Amherst College and studied two years abroad, receiving his early technical training under Russel Sturgis at New York. In 1879 he became a member of the firm of McKim, Mead, and White, which designed buildings for the Boston Public Library, Columbia University, the old Madison Square Garden at New York, Bellevue Hospital, the Tiffany Building, and the Washington War College.

Meade (mēd), George Gordon. b. at Cádiz, Spain, Dec. 31, 1815; d. at Philadelphia, Nov. 6, 1872. American Union general, the victor of the Battle of Gettysburg. He was graduated (1835) from West Point, served in the Seminole War, and resigned (1836) his commission to become assistant engineer of the Alabama, Florida, and Georgia Railroad. He became (1840) an assistant to the joint commission for setting up the boundary between the U.S. and Texas, and in 1842 reëntered the army as a 2nd lieutenant of topographical engineers. Until the latter part of 1843, he was active in the survey of the northeastern boundary. Serving in the Mexican War, he became (Sept. 23, 1846) a brevet 1st lieutenant, and from 1847 to 1861 was active on various tours of duty concerned with survey and engineering work. He became (Aug. 31, 1861), a brigadier general of volunteers and took part in establishing the defenses of Washington, D.C. He joined the Peninsular Campaign under McClellan in June, 1862, and was promoted (June 18, 1862) to the rank of major in the regular army. He led his brigade at the battles of Mechanicsville, Gaines's Mill, and Glendale, and was seriously wounded at the latter action. After his recovery he participated in the second battle of Bull Run, at South Mountain, where he was in temporary command of a division, and at Antietam, where he was in temporary command of the 1st corps. He became (Nov. 29, 1862) a major general of volunteers and was assigned (Dec. 25, 1862) to the command of the 5th corps, which he led at the battle of Chancellorsville (May 24, 1863). His outstanding military performance in 1862–63 led to his recommendation and appointment as commander of the Army of the Potomac in June, 1863. He received the notification on June 28, 1863, shortly before the battle of Gettysburg (July 1–3, 1863). Following his success in this encounter, he was promoted to the rank of brigadier general (dating from July 3, 1863) and received the thanks of Congress (Jan. 28, 1864). Meade was commander of the Army of the Potomac until the end of the war and was promoted (Aug. 18, 1864) to the rank of major general in the regular army. He held the command of the military Division of the Atlantic and the Department of the East after the war and in 1868 became commander of the third military district of the Department of the South. In 1869 he was again assigned to the command of the military Division of the Atlantic.

Meade, Richard Kidder. b. in Nansemond County, Va., July 14, 1746; d. in Frederick (now Clarke) County, Va., Feb. 9, 1805. American Revolutionary officer.

Meadows (med'ōz), Drinkwater. b. in Yorkshire or Wales, 1799; d. at Barnes, Surrey, England, June 12, 1869. English actor.

Meadows, Sir Philip. b. at Chattisham, Suffolk, England, 1626; d. Sept. 16, 1718. English diplomat. In October, 1653, he relieved John Milton as Latin secretary to Cromwell's council. In 1656 he represented Cromwell at Lisbon at the ratification of the Anglo-Portuguese treaty. At the Restoration he retired, but at the Revolution (1688) he was restored to favor.

Meadville (mēd'vil). City in NW Pennsylvania, county seat of Crawford County, on French Creek ab. 84 mi. N of Pittsburgh. It is situated in an old petroleum region, and has manufactures of rayon, visual-education equipment, tools, metal products, and zippers. It was settled in 1788. It is the seat of Allegheny College. 18,972 (1950).

Meaford (mē'ford). Town on Georgian Bay, Ontario, Canada, ab. 18 mi. E of Owen Sound: summer resort. 3,178 (1951).

Meagher (mä'hėr, mär), Thomas Francis. b. at Waterford, Ireland, Aug. 23, 1823; drowned near Fort Benton, Mont., July 1, 1867. Irish-American general. In 1844 he became an orator of the Irish repeal association, and for advocating insurrection was dubbed "Meagher of the Sword" by W. M. Thackeray. In July, 1848, he was appointed to the war directory of the Irish Confederation. He was arrested Aug. 13, 1848, and transported to Van Diemen's Land (now Tasmania) in July, 1849. He escaped to New York in 1852, where he was admitted to the bar in 1855. In 1861 he entered the Union army, organized the Irish Brigade, and was made brigadier general on Feb. 3, 1862. He fought in the first and second battles of Bull Run, in the Seven Days' Battles before Richmond, at Antietam, at Fredericksburg, and at Chancellorsville, resigning in May, 1863. At the close of the war he became secretary (1865) and governor (1866) of Montana, where he died.

Meanee (mē.ä'nē). See Miani, Pakistan.

Meaning of Art, The. Critical study by Herbert Read, published in 1931. It was issued in America under the title The Anatomy of Art (1932).

Meaning of Truth, The. Essays by William James, published in 1909. The author reaffirmed his position as a pragmatist and asserted his belief that true ideas are finally validated only by experience.

Meansville (mēnz'vil). Former name of Towanda, Pa.

Meany (mē'ni), George. b. at New York, Aug. 16, 1894—. American labor leader. A plumber, he served (1922–34) as business agent of his union and became (1934) president of the New York State Federation of Labor. In 1939 he was elected secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, and during World War II he was a member (1942 et seq.) of the National War Labor Board. On the death of William Green, Meany became (1952) the third president in the history of the American Federation of Labor.

Mearns (mėrnz), Howe of. Lowland district in E Scotland, in Kincardineshire. It is a fertile district, forming the NE extremity of Strathmore.

Mearns, Hughes. b. at Philadelphia, Sept. 28, 1875—. American educator and writer. He was a professor (1905–20) at the Philadelphia School of Pedagogy, staff member (1920–25) of the Rockefeller Foundation, and chairman (1926 et seq.) of the department of creative education at New York University. His books include Creative Youth (1925), Creative Power (1929), and The Creative Adult (1940).

Mearns, the. See Kincardineshire.

Mears (mirz), Helen Farnsworth. b. at Oshkosh, Wis., Dec. 21, 1876; d. at New York, Feb. 17, 1916. American sculptor, noted for her portrait busts. She studied at New York and Paris, and was a pupil of Augustus Saint-Gaudens. Among her principal works are Edward MacDowell (Metropolitan Museum, New York), Frances E. Willard (Capitol, Washington, D.C.), and The Fountain of Life.

Measure for Measure. Comedy by William Shakespeare, first acted c1604, printed in 1623. The play is founded on George Whetstone's Promos and Cassandra (1582); the story had previously appeared as the 8th novel in Cinthio's Hecatommithi.

Meath (mēth, mēth). [Irish, An Mhidhe.] Maritime county, in E Irish Republic, in Leinster province. It is bounded by the counties of Monaghan on the N, Louth on the NE, by the Irish Sea on the E, County Dublin on the SE, by County Kildare on the S, County Offaly on the SW, County Westmeath on the W, and County Cavan on the NW. The low and sandy coastline extends only ab. 7 mi. from the mouth of the river Boyne to the mouth of the river Delvin. The surface is level or rolling. Agriculture and cattle raising are the chief occupations of the population. The ancient Irish kingdom of Meath was much more extensive than the present county. County seat, Trim; area, ab. 903 sq. mi.; pop. 66,343 (1951).

Meath, 1st Lord of. A title of Lacy, Hugh de (d. 1186).

Meat Inspection Act. Law passed (1906) by the U.S. Congress empowering the secretary of agriculture, under the interstate commerce clause, to inspect all meat products and to condemn those found unfit for human consumption. The act climaxed the agitation resulting from the "embalmed beef" scandal of the Spanish-American War and the publication of Upton Sinclair's The Jungle.

Meaulnes (mōn). Hero of Le Grand Meaulnes (1913), novel by Henri Alain Fournier.

Meaulte (mōlt). See under Albert, France.

Meaux (mō). [Latin, Tatinum.] Town in N France, in the department of Seine-et-Marne, on the Marne River ab. 27 mi. NE of Paris. A river port, it has flour mills and factories producing a variety of products, and is a center for trade in grain and cheeses. The cathedral of Saint-Étienne, dating from the 12th-16th centuries, is a beautiful building in Gothic style. The German drive on Paris was stopped here in the battle of the Marne (1914). The town suffered some damage in World War II. Military cemeteries are located nearby. 14,223 (1946).

Mebe (mā'bā). See Dan.

Meboula (mę.bō'la). Third-magnitude star ϵ Geminorum. It is also written Mebsuta.

Mebsuta (meb.sō'ta). Third-magnitude star ϵ Geminorum. On some globes and maps it is written Meboula. Neither name is in common use.

Mecca (mek'a). [Also: Makka, Makkah, Mekka.] City in W Arabia, one of the two capitals of Saudi Arabia, and the capital of Hejaz viceroyalty: most sacred city of the Moslem world; the birthplace of Mohammed and the site of the Kaaba. It is situated in a sandy valley ab. 50 mi. from the Red Sea. Its principal building is the Great Mosque, in the center of which is the Kaaba. Every Moslem is bound to undertake once in his life a pilgrimage to Mecca, and in the rites performed on this occasion are included the circuit around the Kaaba and the kissing of the black stone. As many as 100,000 pilgrims come to the city in a year. Mecca was sacked by the Carmathians in 930, and passed to the Turks in 1517. In 1916 the Arabs revolted against Turkish rule, and the city was incorporated by Ibn-Saud into his domain in 1924. Pop. ab. 100,000.

Mecca. Former name of Medina, Ohio.

Meccherino (māk.ke.rē'nō), Il. See Beccafumi, Domenico di Pace.

Méchain (mā.shañ), Pierre François André. b. at Laon, France, Aug. 16, 1744; d. in Spain, Sept. 20, 1804. French astronomer, known as an observer of comets, of which he discovered a number. He also worked (1791) on measuring the arc of the meridian between Dunkerque and Barcelona.

Mechanicsburg (mę.kan'iks.bėrg). [Former name, Drytown.] Borough in S Pennsylvania, in Cumberland County, in an agricultural area: manufactures of textiles. 6,786 (1950).

Mechanicsville (mę.kan'iks.vil). [Also known, in connection with the battle, as Beaver Dam Creek.] Place in Virginia, ab. 7 mi. NE of Richmond. Here on June 26, 1862, a part of McClellan's army under Fitz-John Porter defeated a part of Lee's under James Longstreet and A. P. Hill. This is also called the battle of Beaver Dam Creek, and formed part of the Seven Days' Battles.

Mechanicville (mę.kan'ik.vil). City in E New York, in Saratoga County, on the Hudson River ab. 16 mi. N of Albany: manufactures of book paper; railroad repair shops. 7,385 (1950).

Méchant (mā.shäñ), Le. [Eng. trans., "The Scoundrel."] Comedy by Jean Baptiste Louis de Gresset, produced at Paris in 1745.

Mechelen (meċh'ę.lęn). [English, Mechlin; French, Malines; German, Mecheln (meċh'ęln).] City in N Belgium, in the province of Antwerp, on the Dyle River and the Louvain-Mechelen Canal, ab. 13 mi. N of Brussels: marketing center of a fertile vegetable-growing district (peas and asparagus are a specialty). It manufactures lace, linen, tapestries, woolen goods, and furniture, and has railroad repair shops. The archbishop of Mechelen is the primate of Belgium. The Cathedral of Saint Rombant, of the 13th-16th centuries, contains paintings by Van Dyck and other masters. The Gothic churches of Saint John and Our Lady contain paintings by Rubens. Mechelen came under the rule of the bishops of Liége in 915, and passed to Burgundy in 1384. Its greatest prosperity was reached when it served as the residence of Margaret of Austria (1507–30). The city suffered severe damage through bombings in World War II. 60,288 (1947).

Mechelin (mek.ę.lēn'), Leopold Henrik Stanislaus. [Also, Leo Mechelin; Leopold Henrick Stanislaus von Mechelin.] b. Nov. 24, 1839; d. at Helsinki, Finland, Jan. 26, 1914. Finnish statesman. As the leading figure in the Finnish government under Russian rule before World War I, he sought with some success to maintain a degree of Finnish autonomy. He served (1867–72) as director of the Finnish Union Bank, was elected (1872) to the Finnish legislature, where he became a leader of the Svecomanen (pro-Swedish party), and took (1874) the posts of professor at Helsinki University and of councilor of state. He introduced (1882–90) important reforms as head of the finance and trade departments of the government, and became (1882) a member of the senate. He was exiled (1903–04), became (1905) head of the Finnish administration, and again served (1910–13) in the legislature.

Mechitar (me.ċhē.tär'), Peter. See Mekhitar, Peter.

Mechitarists (mek.i.tär'ists). See Mekhitarists.

Mechlin (mek'lin). See Mechelen, Belgium.

Mechnikov (mech'ni.kof), Ilya Ilyich. See Metchnikoff, Élie.

Mechow (mā'ċhō), Karl Benno von. b. at Bonn, Germany, July 27, 1897—. German novelist, best known for Das ländliche Jahr (1929) and its portrayal of German farm life. Das Abenteuer (1930) deals with the German cavalry in Russia in 1915. A third novel is Vorsommer (1934).

Mechtilde von Magdeburg (meċh.til'dę fon mäg'dę.bůrk). b. c1212; d. c1280. German Beguine who wrote in Low German sometime after 1270 the apocalyptic Das fliessende Licht der Gottheit. The original is lost but the work is preserved in a High German translation by Heinrich von Nördlingen (c1344).

Mecklenburg (mek'lęn.bėrg; German, mek'lęn.bůrk). Land (state) in NE Germany, in the Russian Zone, bounded by the Baltic Sea, Poland, Brandenburg, Lower Saxony, and Schleswig-Holstein. It consists of the former free state of Mecklenburg and part of the former Prussian province of Pomerania, W of the Oder River. It is a largely agricultural region, with some of the most fertile soils in N Germany, producing grain, sugar beets, lumber, and livestock. The large estates, which characterized the region in former times, were partitioned after 1945; numerous farm laborers and refugees from the now Polish (formerly Prussian) parts of E Germany were resettled here. The population, almost entirely Protestant, increased by 52.2 percent in the period 1939-46. Capital, Schwerin; area, ab. 8,856 sq. mi.; pop. 2,139,640 (1946).

Mecklenburg, Duke of. See Wallenstein, Albrecht Wenzel Eusebius von.

Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence (mek'lęn.bėrg). Declaration of independence from England, said to have been made at Charlotte, N.C., by the citizens of Mecklenburg County, N.C., on May 20, 1775. Its authenticity is still a subject of dispute among historians.

Mecklenburg-Schwerin (mek'lęn.bůrk.shvā.rēn'). Former grand duchy and state of the German Empire. It was bounded by the Baltic Sea on the N, Pomerania and Mecklenburg-Strelitz on the E, Brandenburg and Hanover on the S, and Lübeck, Ratzeburg, and Schleswig-Holstein on the W, and comprised a few enclaves. The government was a constitutional hereditary monarchy (peasantry unrepresented), with two members in the Bundesrat and six members in the Reichstag. The prevailing religion was Protestant. Mecklenburg was early peopled by Slavs, was conquered by the Germans in 1160, and was made a duchy in 1348. The region was variously divided, finally into Mecklenburg-Schwerin and Mecklenburg-Strelitz in 1701. Mecklenburg-Schwerin joined the Confederation of the Rhine in 1808, became a grand duchy in 1815, joined the Germanic Confederation in 1815, abolished serfdom in 1820, was the scene of an unsuccessful agitation to change the feudal conditions in 1848, sided with Prussia in 1866, and joined the North German Confederation in 1867 and the German Empire in 1871. Capital, Schwerin; area, ab. 5,068 sq. mi.

Mecklenburg-Strelitz (-shtrā'lits). Former grand duchy and state of the German Empire. It comprised two divisions: Stargard, lying E of Mecklenburg-Schwerin and NW of Brandenburg; and Ratzeburg, lying NW of Mecklenburg-Schwerin. The government was a constitutional hereditary monarchy (general conditions as in Mecklenburg-Schwerin), with one member in the Bundesrat and one in the Reichstag. The prevailing religion was Protestant. It became a separate duchy in 1701, and adopted the constitution of Mecklenburg-Schwerin in 1755. Its later history is generally the same as that of Mecklenburg-Schwerin. Capital, Neustrelitz; area, ab. 1,131 sq. mi.

Medal, The. Satire by John Dryden, which appeared in 1682.

Medamothi (mẹ.dä.mo.tē). [Eng. trans., "Nowhere."] Island in François Rabelais's Life of Gargantua and Pantagruel.

Medan (me.dän'). City in Indonesia, near the NE coast of Sumatra. The many oil wells in the area were blown up as the Japanese advanced in 1942; now restored, they produce large amounts of petroleum. The city has modern refineries. 76,600 (1930).

Medardus (mẹ.där'dus), Saint. [French, Médard (mā-dàr).] b. at Salency, France, c500; d. c545 or c560. French ecclesiastic. Consecrated bishop of Veromandum in 530, he removed (531) to Noyon, and in 532 succeeded as bishop of Tournai. He labored to convert the pagans of his diocese, and on his deathbed was visited by King Clothair, who built a basilica at Soissons to be the burial place of Medardus.

Medary (mẹ.dār'i), Milton Bennett. b. at Philadelphia, Feb. 6, 1874; d. Aug. 7, 1929. American architect who designed the Washington Memorial Chapel at Valley Forge and the Edward A. Bok memorial carillon tower at Mountain Lake, Fla. He served also as chairman of the committee of the U.S. Housing Corporation of the Department of Labor, which was engaged in designing and constructing planned communities at Neville Island, Pittsburgh, and Bethlehem, Pa.

Medary, Samuel. b. in Montgomery County, Pa., Feb. 25, 1801; d. at Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 7, 1864. American journalist and politician. He was cofounder (1828) of the Ohio Sun at Bethel, Ohio, published (c1837–c1847) the Ohio Statesman, edited (1849) The New Constitution, and founded (1861) and edited The Crisis at Columbus, Ohio. He was supervisor (1837–47) of public printing in Ohio, governor (1857–58) of the Minnesota Territory, and governor (1858–60) of the Kansas Territory.

Medb (māv). In Old Irish legend, queen of Connacht; wife of Ailill. She was beautiful, clever, sly, and unprincipled. It was she who caused the War for the Brown Bull, and she who tricked Ferdiad into fighting against his dearest friend, Cuchulain. She is sometimes construed as being the original of the fairy Queen Mab of modern folklore.

Meddle (med'l). In Dion Boucicault's comedy London Assurance, a pettifogging lawyer.

Medea (mẹ.dē'ạ). In Greek legend, a sorceress; daughter of Aetes, king of Colchis, and wife of Jason. When Jason came with the Argonauts to obtain the Golden Fleece, Medea aided him by her magic arts, and escaped with him to Corinth, where, ten years later, she murdered Creusa or Glauce, daughter of King Creon, for whom Jason had determined to abandon her. From Corinth she fled to Athens, and married Aegeus (father of Theseus), by whom she had a son Medeus, regarded by the Greeks as the eponymous ancestor of the Medes. Medea plotted against the life of Theseus several times, but when Aegeus recognized his son, he drove her out of Athens. Hera gave Medea immortality for having repulsed the advances of Zeus. In Elysium she married Achilles.

Medea. Tragedy by Euripides, exhibited in 431 B.C. Although considered faulty and awarded third prize only, it later became highly esteemed.

Medea. Tragedy by Seneca, written in the 1st century. It was inspired by Euripides's Greek tragedy of the same name.

Medea. Tragedy by Richard Glover, published in 1761.

Medea. Opera by Johann Simon Mayr, produced in 1812.

Medeba (med'ẹ.bạ). [Modern name, Madeba, Madaba.] In Biblical geography, a town in Moab, situated ab. 12 mi. E of the Dead Sea. It is now in W Jordan.

Médecin malgré lui (mād.saṅ mål.grā lwē), Le. [Eng. trans., "The Doctor in Spite of Himself."] Farce-comedy by Molière, produced in 1666. The story is taken from a fabliau of the Middle Ages, Le Vilain mire.

Médecin volant (mād.saṅ vo.läṅ), Le. [Eng. trans., "The Flying Doctor."] Early comedy of Molière, in the Italian style, acted in 1659. Parts of it were afterward incorporated in Le Médecin malgré lui and L'Amour médecin.

Médée (mā.dā). Tragedy by La Péruse, played in 1553. It was the second classical tragedy played in France.

Médée. Tragedy by Pierre Corneille, produced in 1634 or 1635. It is sometimes called the best French tragedy before the Cid.

Médée. Lyric tragedy by Thomas Corneille, with music by M. A. Charpentier, produced in 1693.

Médée. Opera by Cherubini, produced in 1797. The words are by Hoffman.

Médée. Tragedy by Gabriel Jean Baptiste Ernest Wilfrid Legouvé, played in 1855.

Medeiros e Albuquerque (mẹ.dā'rösh ē äl.bö.ker'kẹ). See Albuquerque, José Joaquim de Campos da Costa de Medeiros e.

Medelicke (mā'dẹ.lik.ẹ). Name of Melk in the Nibelungenlied.

Medellín (mā.ŦHā.yēn'). City in W central Colombia, capital of Antioquia department, ab. 40 mi. SE of Antioquia: the chief industrial, coffee-shipping, and transportation center in the country, and Colombia's second largest city. Its manufactures include textiles, iron and steel products, clothing, leather goods, foodstuffs, soap, tobacco products, bottles, and enamelware. There are gold and silver mines in the region. Medellín is the seat of a university and a school of mines. 143,952 (1938), 329,965 (1951).

Médenine (mā.dẹ.nēn'). Town in N Africa, in SE Tunisia, ab. 40 mi. SE of the seaport of Gabès and connected with it by road. It is a road junction and starting point for desert caravans. Pop. ab. 4,000.

Medes (mēdz). Inhabitants of Media, ancient country in what is now NW Iran. They first appear in history as Amadai in 836 B.C., when Shalmaneser, the Assyrian conqueror, received tribute from them. In 715 and 713 B.C. Sargon subjected them. In the second half of the 7th century they won their independence and were united under a single dynasty. The Medes were eventually defeated by the Persians under Cyrus, and absorbed into the Persian Empire.

Medfield (med'fēld). Town in SE Massachusetts, in Norfolk County, SW of Boston. 4,549 (1950).

Medford (med'fọrd). City in E Massachusetts, in Middlesex County, on the Mystic River ab. 5 mi. NW of Boston: residential and industrial community, part of the urbanized area of Boston. It is the seat of Tufts College. At one time it was an important rum-distilling and shipbuilding center. 66,113 (1950).

Medford. City in SW Oregon, county seat of Jackson County: marketing center for a fruit and lumber district, with manufactures of wood products, and canned vegetables and meats. It has fruit-packing plants, and ships large quantities of fresh fruit, especially pears. Established in 1883, it was incorporated in 1905 as a city, and was made county seat in 1927. Pop. 17,305 (1950).

Medford. City in N central Wisconsin, county seat of Taylor County, on the Black River ab. 60 mi. NE of Eau Claire, in a farming region. 2,799 (1950).

Medgyes (med'dyesh). Hungarian name of Mediaş, Rumania.

Medhurst (med'hėrst), Charles Edward Hastings. b. at Smethwick, Staffordshire, England, Dec. 12, 1896 –. English air officer. He was air commander in chief, 1945–48 of the Royal Air Force in the Mediterranean.

Medhurst, George. b. at Shoreham, Kent, England, Feb. 11, 1759; d. in September, 1827. English clockmaker, who spent most of his life devising various methods and means by which compressed air might be used as motive power. He patented a windmill and pumps for compressed air (1799), the "Aeolian engine" (1800), which would drive carriages by compressed air, and a "compound crank" (1801). He was the inventor of the "equal balance weighing machine" now in general use, and the first one to suggest what is now known as "pneumatic dispatch." On similar principles he suggested the construction of an "atmospheric railway," to be driven by compressed air.

Medhurst, Walter Henry. b. at London, 1796; d. there, Jan. 24, 1857. English missionary in China and the East Indies. He translated the Bible into Chinese, and published A Chinese-English Dictionary (1842–43) and An English-Chinese Dictionary (1847–48).

Media (mē'di.ą). Ancient country comprising the NW part of the Iranian highland, extending from the Caspian Sea to the Araxes (modern Aras). It was bounded on the NE by Hyrcania, on the E by Parthia, on the S by Susiana and Persis, and on the W by Assyria. It nearly corresponded to the modern Iranian regions of Azerbaijan, Ardilan, and Iraq Ajemi. Later the SE part of the country was called Great Media, and the NW, or Atropatene, Little Media. The Medes (Hebrew and Assyrian Madai, Old Persian Mada) are enumerated in Gen. x. 2 as among the descendants of Japheth; and they, together with the Persians, constituted the most important and powerful Aryan population in W Asia. It is assumed that the country was originally settled by another (perhaps Turanian) tribe, and that the Medes gradually advanced from the NE to the W and SW. Media came into contact with Assyria at least as early as the end of the 9th century B.C., when it is mentioned as a conquered and tributary land. Tiglath-pileser III was the first Assyrian king who annexed Median territory; and Sargon II transplanted Israelitish war captives to Median cities, and claims in his annals of 713 B.C. to have received tribute from 45 Median chiefs. Sennacherib also received tribute from the Medes. Under Esarhaddon the Medes entered into alliance with the Mineans and the Cimmerians against Assyria, apparently without success. But from that time the Medes grew more united and more powerful against tyrannical Assyria. The Median kings of this period are, according to Herodotus, Deioces (c700–647), Phraortes (647–625), and Cyaxares (625–585). The first Median expedition against Assyria was undertaken by Phraortes, and, according to Herodotus, ended with the complete defeat of the Medes and the death of Phraortes. Cyaxares repeated the undertaking, and defeated the Assyrian army. The attack on the Assyrian capital, Nineveh, was delayed for a while in consequence of the invasion of the Scythians. After these were driven out, the Medes, in alliance with the Babylonians under Nabopolassar, advanced once more against Nineveh, and brought about its downfall (608 or 606 B.C.). In the division of the Assyrian Empire, Assyria proper and Mesopotamia as far as Haran fell to Media, which, however, could not develop into a world's empire on account of the rise of the new Babylonian Empire under Nabopolassar and Nebuchadnezzar. Even the independence of Media was of but short duration, for Astyages (585–549) lost his crown to Cyrus in 549. After that the fate of Media was bound up in that of Persia. Still it seemed to have preserved a kind of independence or particularism while united to Persia. Thus, the Old Testament writings speak of an empire of "the Persians and Medes." Only the Book of Daniel seems to assume the existence of a Median empire between the last Babylonian king, Nabonidus (Belshazzar), and Cyrus. After the destruction of the Persian Empire, Media fell, in the division of Alexander's empire, to Seleucus, the founder of the Syrian monarchy, and later to the Parthian Empire. The old Medes were, according to the classical writers, a warlike people; in Isa. xiii. they are described as hard and cruel. The religion of the Medes was, according to Strabo (XV. 7,32), the same as that of the Persians, i.e., dualism. They worshiped, besides the sun god Mithras, the Moon, Venus, fire, the earth, winds, and water. The oldest capital of Media was Rhagae, on the site of modern Tehran. Deioces moved the capital to Ecbatana (modern Hamadan), founded by himself, in the W part of the country, which remained the summer residence of the Persian and Parthian kings. To Media belonged also Behistun (ancient Baghistan), famous from the trilingual cuneiform inscription discovered there.

Media. Borough in SE Pennsylvania, county seat of Delaware County. It is a residential and manufacturing community in the urbanized area of Philadelphia. Platted in 1848, it was made county seat in the same year. 5,726 (1950).

Media Atropatene (at"rō.pą.tē'nē). See under Azerbaijan.

Median Wall (mē'di.ąn). In ancient history, a wall N of Babylon, extending from the Tigris to the Euphrates, built as a defense of Babylonia.

Mediaş (mā.dyäsh'). [Hungarian, Medgyes; German, Mediasch (mā'dē.äsh).] Town in NW Rumania, in the province of Transylvania, ab. 26 mi. NE of Sibiu: industrial center with leather, rayon, metal, glass, and enamelware industries. It also has a wine market. Here on Jan. 8, 1919, the Transylvanian Saxons declared their consolidation with the kingdom of Rumania. 23,247 (1948).

Medical Lake. Town in E Washington, in Spokane County, ab. 12 mi. SW of downtown Spokane. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population more than doubled. 2,114 (1940), 4,488 (1950).

Medicean Stars (med.i.sē'ąn). Name given by Galileo, in honor of the Medici, to the four satellites of Jupiter discovered by him.

Medici (med'ę.chē, mā'dę.chē; Italian, me'dē.chē). Italian family which formerly ruled in Florence and Tuscany, celebrated for the number of statesmen which it produced, and for its patronage of art and letters. Its origin is uncertain. The first member of the family to play a part in history was Salvestro de' Medici, who took part in the revolt of the Ciompi at Florence in 1378. Giovanni de' Medici (d. 1429) amassed a large fortune as a banker, and became the founder of the political greatness of the family. He ruled the city by means of his wealth, without holding office. He left two sons Cosimo (1389–1464) and Lorenzo (1395–1440), each of whom became the founder of a branch line of the family. The elder branch, descended from Cosimo, ruled in Florence until 1537, except during two periods when it was in exile (1494–1512 and 1527–30). Its rule was exercised under the forms of republican institutions down to c1531, when Alessandro de' Medici was made hereditary duke of Florence by the emperor. Among the notable members of this branch were Cosimo the Elder, Lorenzo the Magnificent, and the popes Leo X and Clement VII. The elder branch became extinct at the death of Alessandro in 1537. He was succeeded as Duke of Florence by Cosimo I, who represented the younger branch of the family, descended from Lorenzo. Cosimo I obtained possession of Siena and its territories, and in 1569 received the title of Grand Duke of Tuscany from the pope, although the imperial confirmation was first received by his successor Francesco I in 1575. The younger branch ruled as grand dukes of Tuscany until its extinction at the death of Giovan Gastone de'Medici in 1737.

Medici, Alessandro de'. b. c1510; assassinated Jan. 5, 1537. First duke of Florence; illegitimate son of Lorenzo de' Medici (1492–1519). In 1523 the head of the Medici at Florence, Cardinal Giulio, became pope under the title of Clement VII. He appointed his nephews Alessandro and Ippolito joint rulers of Florence in his place under the regency of Cardinal Silvio Passerini. In 1527 the populace expelled both Alessandro and Ippolito; but in 1531 the former, who had married Margaret of Parma, natural daughter of the Emperor Charles V, was restored by his father-in-law and made hereditary duke of Florence, the Medici having till that time exercised power under the forms of republican institutions. Alessandro's excesses caused bitter feeling in Florence and Ippolito was sent to the emperor to complain, but he died, apparently poisoned, on the way. Alessandro was murdered two years later by one of his cousins and companions in debauchery, Lorenzino de' Medici.

Medici, Alessandro de'. Original name of Pope Leo XI.

Medici, Caterina de'. See Catherine de Médicis.

Medici, Cosimo (or Cosmo) de'. [Called Cosimo the Elder.] b. 1389; d. Aug. 1, 1464. Florentine banker, statesman, and patron of literature; son of Giovanni de' Medici (d. 1429). He inherited his father's vast fortune and, like him, practically ruled the republic through his skill in securing the elevation of his own supporters to the chief offices in the commonwealth. He was expelled with his whole family by the rival family of the Albizzi in 1433, but returned in 1434. He was a magnificent patron of art and literature, and his palace became an asylum for Greek scholars exiled by the fall of Constantinople in 1453.

Medici, Cosimo (or Cosmo) I de'. [Called Cosimo the Great.] b. 1519; d. 1574. Grand Duke of Tuscany; son of Giovanni de' Medici (1498–1526). He represented the younger branch of the Medici, descended from Lorenzo de' Medici (1395–1440), and became duke of Florence on the extinction of the elder branch in 1537 when Lorenzino de' Medici murdered Alessandro. A ruthless, ambitious, capable ruler, he conquered Siena in 1555, and had the title of grand duke of Tuscany conferred on him by Pope Pius V in 1569, though the title was not given imperial sanction until 1575.

Medici, Cosimo (or Cosmo) II de'. b. 1590; d. 1620. Grand duke of Tuscany (1609–20); son of Ferdinand I de' Medici (1549–1609), and father of Ferdinand II de' Medici (1610–70). He succeeded his father as head of the Tuscan state, and was in turn succeeded by his son. A man of intellectual interests, he was one of Galileo's patrons.

Medici, Cosimo III de'. b. 1642; d. 1723. Grand duke of Tuscany (1670–1723); son of Ferdinand II de' Medici (1610–70); father of Gian Gastone de' Medici (1671–1737). Successor to his father, he was in turn succeeded as grand duke by his son.

Medici, Ferdinand I de'. b. c1549; d. 1609. Grand Duke of Tuscany (1587–1609); younger son of Cosimo the Great. He succeeded his brother Francesco, resigning a cardinal's hat to accept the dukedom.

Medici, Ferdinand II de'. b. 1610; d. 1670. Grand duke of Tuscany (1620–70); son of Cosimo II de' Medici (1590–1620) and father of Cosimo III de' Medici (1642–1723). A child when he succeeded to the title, he was a pupil of his father's protégé Galileo, and his interest in science led him in later years to establish the Accademia del Cimento, said to be the first academic institution devoted to the natural sciences in Europe. Ferdinand inherited the Medici flair for magnificence, without the usual Medici capacity for government, and by the end of his long rule the family fortunes had seriously declined. He was succeeded by his son Cosimo III de' Medici.

Medici, Francesco de'. b. 1541; d. 1587. Grand Duke of Tuscany (1574–87); son of Cosimo I, whom he succeeded. He became a subordinate of the Hapsburgs, who thereby became established in Tuscany. His daughter by his first wife was Marie de Médicis, wife of Henry IV of France.

Medici, Gian Gastone de'. b. 1671; d. 1737. Grand duke of Tuscany (1723–37); son of Cosimo III de' Medici. He was the last male member of the extraordinary Medici dynasty. Upon his death the major European powers implemented a decision made two years previously, in connection with the general settlement following the War of the Polish Succession, by which Tuscany, no longer rich and powerful, but poor and helpless, was allotted to Francis of Lorraine, the future Emperor Francis I.

Medici, Giovanni Angelo. Original name of Pope Pius IV.

Medici, Giovanni de'. d. 1429. Florentine merchant. He amassed an immense fortune, and by his adroitness in procuring the elevation of puppet officials to the chief state posts became virtual ruler of the republic. He left two sons Cosimo (1389–1464) and Lorenzo (1395–1440), who became the founders of the elder and younger branches of the Medici respectively.

Medici, Giovanni de'. [Called Giovanni delle Bande Nere, meaning "John of the Black Bands."] b. 1498; killed in battle at Mantua, 1526. Italian general; son of Giovanni de' Medici (1467–98) and Caterina Sforza. He was a descendant of Lorenzo de' Medici (1395–1440), founder of the younger branch of the Medici. In the struggle between Charles V of the Holy Roman Empire and Francis I of France for control of Italy, he fought on both sides, being wounded at Pavia (1625) while fighting for the French and dying in a raid on imperial troops.

Medici, Giovanni de'. Original name of Pope Leo X.

Medici, Giulio de'. Original name of Pope Clement VII.

Medici, Ippolito de'. b. 1511; d. 1535. Italian cardinal; grandson of Lorenzo the Magnificent. He and his cousin Alessandro were given charge of Florence by Pope Clement VII (Giulio de' Medici). Ippolito was kept more and more out of the Florentine government by the Pope, but in 1535 was sent by the Florentines to the emperor Charles V to complain about Alessandro's vicious rule. He died en route, apparently the victim of poison.

Medici, Lorenzino de'. b. 1515; d. 1547. Florentine nobleman. Belonging to a cadet branch of the Medici family, he became an intimate friend of Alessandro de' Medici, but when the latter, having by the favor of Pope Clement VII and of the emperor Charles V become head of the Florentine state, took on the character of a tyrant ruling by ruthless measures, Lorenzino, with a hired bravo, caused his assassination. It is supposed that he acted from patriotic motives, and it is known that he expected the Florentines to rise against the Medici dynasty, but his hopes were disappointed. With Alessandro's death, Lorenzino became heir to the ducal title, but let it go by default to his cousin Cosimo I de' Medici, while he remained in exile at Venice, where eventually he was assassinated by Cosimo's agents.

Medici, Lorenzo de'. [Called Lorenzo the Magnificent; Italian, Lorenzo il Magnifico.] b. c1449; d. April 8, 1492. Florentine statesman and patron of letters; grandson of Cosimo the Elder. On the death of his father Piero in 1469, he succeeded to the immense wealth and political power of his family conjointly with a younger brother Giuliano. The latter was assassinated by a rival family, the Pazzi, in 1478, leaving Lorenzo sole ruler of Florence. Like his predecessors, he governed the republic without any title, merely by a free use of his wealth and by his adroitness in procuring the elevation of puppet officials to the chief posts in the state. His great fame is as a patron of literature and the arts. Himself a poet of accomplishment, he gathered to his court the best writers of his time and helped establish the Tuscan dialect as the standard for Italian. He is often considered the typical Renaissance prince.

Medici, Lorenzo de'. b. 1492; d. 1519. Duke of Urbino; grandson of Lorenzo the Magnificent. He became the head of the republic of Florence on the elevation of his uncle to the papal chair under the title of Leo X in 1513, and in 1516 was appointed by the latter Duke of Urbino. He was the father of Catherine de Médicis. His tomb at Florence is one of the greatest works of Michelangelo.

Medici, Maria de'. Italian name of Marie de Médicis.

Medici, Piero de'. b. 1416; d. 1469. Florentine merchant and politician; son of Cosimo de' Medici (1389–1464), and father of Lorenzo de' Medici (Il Magnifico, 1449–92). Because of a physical affliction he was known as Il Gottoso ("the Gouty"), but like his father he maintained his position as acknowledged, if unofficial, ruler of the city-state, enhanced the family fortunes, and passed on his wealth and power to his able son.

Medici, Piero de'. b. 1471; d. 1503. Florentine merchant and politician; son of Lorenzo de' Medici (Il Magnifico, 1449–92), father of Lorenzo de' Medici (Duke of Urbino, 1492–1519), brother of Giuliano de' Medici (Duke of Nemours, 1479–1516) and of Giovanni de' Medici (Pope Leo X, 1475–1521). He inherited the family wealth and the rule of Florence, but not the administrative and military capacity of his forbears, and when he proved impotent to halt the invasion of Charles VIII of France, the Florentine democratic party, under Savonarola's leadership, drove the Medici from the city.

Medicina (mā.dē.chē'na). Town and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Emilia-Romagna, in the province of Bologna, between Bologna and Ravenna; agricultural commune. Pop. of commune, 14,903 (1936); of town, 3,299 (1936).

Medicine Bow Mountains. [Also, Medicine Bow Range.] Range of the Rocky Mountains, in N Colorado and S Wyoming. Length, ab. 100 mi.; peak elevation, ab. 12,005 ft.

Medicine Hat. City in SE Alberta, Canada, on the South Saskatchewan River. It is on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway and is a shipping point for livestock and wheat and a trade center for important large natural-gas fields located nearby. It has flour-milling, pottery, brick, and glass industries. 16,364 (1951).

Médicis (mā.dē.sēs), Catherine de. See Catherine de Médicis.

Médicis, Marie de. See Marie de Médicis.

Médicis-Jodoigne (-zho.dwäny'), Charles Eucharist de. See Sajous, Charles Eucharist de Médicis.

Medill (mẹ.dil'), Joseph. b. at St. John, New Brunswick, April 6, 1823; d. at San Antonio, Texas, March 16, 1899. American journalist. He was admitted to the bar in 1846, but abandoned law and took up journalism in Ohio about 1849. He founded (1852) the Cleveland Leader. In 1855 he became connected with the Chicago Tribune, of which he obtained control in 1874. Medill was interested in the antislavery movement and took part in the conferences that were preliminary to the founding of the Republican Party. The Tribune was noted for its thorough coverage of the Lincoln-Douglas debates and for Medill's editorials, especially those in favor of Lincoln, whose policies Medill supported during the presidential campaign of 1860 and afterward. In 1871 Medill was elected mayor of Chicago. Control of the Tribune passed at his death to his grandchildren, Joseph Medill McCormick and Robert Rutherford McCormick, sons of his daughter Katherine, and to Joseph Medill Patterson and Eleanor Medill Patterson, children of his daughter Elinor.

Medina (mẹ.dē'nạ). [Arabic: al-Medinat al-Munowarrat, meaning "the City of Light"; Medinat-Rasul-Allah, Medinat-el-Rabi (or -en-Nabi), meaning "the City of the Prophet"; ancient name, Yathrib; called (by Ptolemy) Lathrippa.] City in Hejaz, W Saudi Arabia, the second holy city of the Mohammedans, situated ab. 220 mi. N of Mecca and ab. 100 mi. from the Red Sea. It is celebrated as the place where Mohammed took refuge at the flight (622 A.D.) called the Hegira, and where he died and was buried. From this it is sometimes designated "the city of the Prophet." Medina was the capital of the Mohammedan empire down to the accession of the Ommiads (661). Pop. ab. 30,000 (est. 1940).

Mosque and Tomb of Mohammed. The Great Mosque contains Mohammed's tomb. The enclosure measures ab. 500 by 390 ft., and as usual is surrounded by arcaded galleries. The tomb is in an enclosure in the SE corner, beneath a conspicuous pointed dome; the pavement of this part of the mosque is formed of beautiful mosaics. The tomb consists of a structure of black stones, with two pillars; it is wholly concealed from the eyes of the profane by precious draperies.

Medina (mẹ.dī'nạ). Village in W New York, in Orleans County, ab. 40 mi. W of Rochester: manufactures include canned foods, pumps, textiles, furniture, and plumbing supplies. 6,179 (1950).

Medina. [Former name, Mecca.] Village in NE Ohio, county seat of Medina County: noted for its bee culture and honey products. Pop. 5,097 (1950).

Medina. In Edmund Spenser's Faerie Queene, the second of the three sisters Elissa, Medina, and Perissa. She far excelled the other two, representing the golden mean, for Elissa was froward and always discontented and Perissa was loose and extravagant and indulgent in all pleasures.

Medina (mẹ.dē'nạ), Harold R. b. at Brooklyn, N.Y., Feb. 16, 1888—. American jurist. He lectured at Columbia (1915–17) on law and subsequently was an associate in law (1917–25) and associate professor of law (1925 et seq.). Medina was a leader in the fight for many courtroom reforms, such as barring motion-picture cameras, microphones, and other devices calculated to distort the dignity of the courtroom; he was attorney in several important legal battles, as for example in the fight for the succession to the New York mayoralty after J. J. Walker's resignation (1932), when he represented Joseph V. McKee. He became (1947) a judge of the U.S. district court for the southern district of New York. Medina presided over the sensational trial (1949) of the leaders of the U.S. Communist Party, a trial which lasted for nine months and ended in the conviction of all 11 of the accused for conspiring to advocate the overthrow of the government by violence. In 1951 Medina became a circuit judge of the U.S. court of appeals.

Medina, Sir John Baptist. b. at Brussels, Belgium, 1659; d. at Edinburgh, Oct. 5, 1710. English portrait painter, pupil of François du Châtel of Brussels. He was knighted in 1707.

Medina (mā.ᴛʜē'nä), José Maria. b. c1815; executed Feb. 8, 1878. Central American politician, president of Honduras (Feb. 15, 1864–August, 1872).

Medina, José Toribio. b. at Santiago, Chile, Oct. 21, 1852; d. 1930. Chilean historian, bibliographer, publisher, and diplomat. He traveled extensively in the U.S., Europe, and South America, gathering material for his books. Author of numerous bibliographical works, the most important being Biblioteca hispano-americana, 1493–1810 (7 vols., 1898–1907); the biographies Juan Díaz de Solío (2 vols., 1897), El Portugués Estebán Gómez (1908), and El Veneciano Sebastian Caboto (2 vols., 1908); numerous histories, among them Los Aborígenes de Chile (1882) and Medallas coloniales hispano-americanas (1900), and books on printing in Spanish America.

Medina Angarita (äng.gä.rē'tä), Isaías. b. at San Cristóbal, Táchira, Venezuela, July 6, 1897; d. at La Florida, Venezuela, Sept. 15, 1953. Venezuelan general and politician, president (1941–45) of Venezuela.

Medina del Campo (del käm'pō). Town in N Spain, in the province of Valladolid, ab. 25 mi. SW of Valladolid: marketing center of a stock-raising district, with manufactures of leather. Among its famous churches and palaces is the mighty Castillo de la Mota, built in 1440, a favorite sojourning place of Queen Isabella of Castile, who died here in 1504. Pop. 13,249 (1940).

Medina Sidonia (sē.ᴛʜō'nyä). Town in S Spain, in the province of Cádiz, ab. 19 mi. E of Cádiz. It has a Gothic church, several convents, and the ancestral palace of the dukes of Medina Sidonia. 12,486 (1940).

Medina Sidonia, Alonso Pérez de Guzmán, Duke of. b. Sept. 10, 1550; d. 1615. Spanish nobleman and admiral. A man of great wealth and a favorite of Philip II, he was by that king placed in command of the Spanish Armada. Realizing his lack of skill and of experience, the duke tried to avoid sailing with the Armada (pleading among other things that he was always sick at sea), but the king was insistent. Despite the ensuing defeat he remained by Philip's favor head of the Spanish navy, and lost Cádiz to the English in 1596.

Medinat-el-Rabi (mẹ.dē'nạt.el.rä'bē). An Arabic name of Medina, Saudi Arabia.

Medinat Mursya (mẹ.dē'nạ mör'syạ). Arabic name of Murcia, Spain.

Medinat-Rasul-Allah (mẹ.dē'nạ.rä.söl'äl.lä'). An Arabic name of Medina, Saudi Arabia.

Medinet-el-Fayum (mẹ.dē'nẹt.el.fä.yöm'). See Fayum, city.

Meding (mā'ding), Johann Ferdinand Martin Oskar. [Pseudonym, Gregor Samarow.] b. at Königsberg, in East Prussia, April 11, 1829; d. at Charlottenburg, Germany, July 11, 1903. German statesman and historical novelist.

Mediolanum (mē''di.ọ.lā'num, med''i-). Latin name of Milan, Italy, and also of Saintes, France.

Mediomatrica (mē''di.ọ.mat'ri.kạ). An ancient name of Metz.

Mediomatrici (mē''di.ọ.mat'ri.sī). Tribe of eastern Gaul, whose capital was Metz (Divodurum or Mediomatrica).

Meditations. Name generally given to the philosophical work by the Roman emperor Marcus Aurelius.

Mediterranean Sea (med''i.tẹ.rā'nē.ạn). [French, Mer Méditerranée (mā.dē.te.rā.nā); German, Mittelmeer, Mittelländisches Meer; Spanish, Mar Mediterráneo (mā''ᴛʜē.ter.rä'nā.ō); Italian, Mar Mediterraneo (mā''-dē.ter.rä'nā.ō); Latin, Mare Internum, Mare Mediterraneum (med.i.tẹ.rā'nẹ.um).] Sea, the most important extension of the Atlantic, separating Europe on the N from Africa on the S, and communicating with the Atlantic Ocean by the Strait of Gibraltar, and with the Black Sea by the Dardanelles, Sea of Marmara, and Bosporus. It is divided into two major basins, the western reaching from Gibraltar to Sicily and Tunisia, and the eastern from there to Syria. Its chief branches are the Tyrrhenian Sea, Ionian Sea, Adriatic Sea, and Aegean Sea. The chief islands are the Balearic Islands, Corsica, Sardinia, Sicily, Malta, the Ionian Islands, Crete, Cyprus, and the Dodecanese Islands. The chief tributary rivers are the Ebro, Rhone, Po, and Nile. The Mediterranean has an important influence on the climate of the surrounding lands; it has given its name to a type of climate which characterizes these lands, with hot, sunny, dry summers and mild winters. Most of the rainfall occurs in autumn, winter, and early spring. The lands surrounding the Mediterranean basin are generally mountainous, and this enhances the scenery, already famous because of the brilliant blue of the skies and the water. The water of the Mediterranean is about 10 percent more saline than that of the oceans. Tides are small; the connection with the Atlantic at the Strait of Gibraltar is only ab. 9 mi. wide. Each of the two major basins has a deep zone; the greatest known depth of the E Mediterranean, W of Crete, is ab. 14,450 ft.; of the W Mediterranean (Tyrrhenian Sea), ab. 12,240 ft. Length, ab. 2,200 mi.; greatest width of sea proper, ab. 700 mi.; area, ab. 963,600 sq. mi.; average depth, ab. 4,890 ft.

Medjerda (mẹ.jer'dạ). [Also: Mejerda; ancient name, Bagradas.] River in N Africa, in E Algeria and Tunisia, which flows into the Gulf of Tunis ab. 24 mi. N of Tunis. It sometimes dries up almost completely. Length, ab. 230 mi.

Medley (med'li). In George Etherege's comedy The Man of Mode, the friend of Young Bellair; supposed by some to be a portrait of Sir Charles Sedley, by others a portrait of the author himself.

Medmenham (med'mẹn.ạm). Village in S England, in Buckinghamshire, NW of Maidenhead. The ruined abbey, formerly a Cistercian monastery, acquired notoriety as the scene of the orgies of a convivial association known as the Mad Monks of Saint Francis, including such notables as John Wilkes and George Bubb Dodington, in the latter part of the 18th century. 416 (1931).

Medoacus Major (mẹ.dō'ạ.kus mā'jọr). Latin name of the Brenta.

Medoacus Minor (mī'nọr). Latin name of the Bacchiglione.

Médoc (mā.dok). District in SW France, in the department of Gironde, extending along the SW bank of the Gironde River: noted for its wines. Length, ab. 48 mi.

Medtner (met'nėr), Nikolai. [Called the "Russian Brahms."] b. at Moscow, Dec. 24, 1879; d. at London, Nov. 13, 1951. Russian pianist and composer. Among his works are numerous piano works, songs, and selections for the violin.

Meduana (med.ụ.ā'nạ). Latin name of the Mayenne River.

Medum (mā.dōm'). [Also, Meidum.] Locality in Egypt, W of the Nile, S of Cairo. The pyramid here is important not only for its peculiar form, but as the oldest dated monument in Egypt. It was built by Sneferu, of the IIIrd dynasty, c3766 B.C. It stands on a small hill, and rises in three inclined and recessed stages of orange-colored masonry to the height of 115 ft. The entrance is on the N side; the simple descending and ascending passage leads to an empty chamber. On the E side a very perfect pyramid-temple lies before the pyramid, with which it is connected architecturally by a court containing an altar and two small obelisks.

Medunta (mẹ.dun'tạ). Ancient name of Mantes-Gassicourt.

Medusa (mẹ.dū'sạ, -zạ). In Greek mythology, one of the Gorgons, originally a beautiful maiden whose hair was transformed into serpents by Athena because with Poseidon (by whom she was the mother of Chrysaor and Pegasus) she had violated one of the temples of that goddess. Her face was so fearful to look upon that whoever saw it was changed into stone. Accordingly when Perseus sought her to cut off her head, he attacked her with averted face, seeing only her reflection in the shield of Athena, who also guided his hand. Perseus gave the head to Athena, who used it on her aegis.

Medveditsa (mid.vyā'dyi.tsạ). River in U.S.S.R., flowing SW parallel to the Volga, and joining the Don River ab. 100 mi. NW of Stalingrad. Length, ab. 430 mi.

Medvezhi Ostrova (mid.vyā'zhi os.tro.vā'). Russian name of Bear Islands.

Medway (med'wā). Town in E Massachusetts, in Norfolk County: manufactures of textiles, needles, and shoes. 3,744 (1950).

Medway River. River in SE England, rising in Surrey and Sussex and flowing NE to the mouth of the Thames at Sheerness, Kent. It is navigable to Maidstone. Length, ab. 70 mi.

Meehan (mē'ạn), Thomas. b. in England, March 21, 1826; d. Nov. 19, 1901. American botanist and editor. Author of The American Handbook of Ornamental Trees (1853) and The Native Flowers and Ferns of the United States (4 vols., 1878–80).

Meek (mēk), Alexander Beaufort. b. at Columbia, S.C., July 17, 1814; d. Nov. 1, 1865. American writer, poet, and legislator.

Meek, Fielding Bradford. b. at Madison, Indiana, Dec. 10, 1817; d. at Washington, D.C., Dec. 21, 1876. American geologist and paleontologist. From 1848 to 1858 he worked on geological surveys in Iowa, Wisconsin, and Minnesota, and on paleontological researches in Albany, N.Y., and in the Dakota Bad Lands. After 1858 he served at Washington in paleontological work for the U.S. geological and geographical surveys.

Meeker (mē'kėr), Ezra. b. near Huntsville, Ohio, Dec. 29, 1830; d. at Seattle, Wash., Dec. 3, 1928. American pioneer in Oregon and Washington, noted for his efforts (1906–28) to commemorate the Oregon Trail by setting markers along the route. He published his experiences in Washington Territory West of the Cascade Mountains (1870), Pioneer Reminiscences of Puget Sound (1905), The Ox-Team; or the Old Oregon Trail 1852–96 (1906), Ventures and Adventures of Ezra Meeker, or Sixty Years of Frontier Life (1909), Story of the Lost Trail to Oregon (1915), and Seventy Years of Progress in Washington (1921).

Meeker, Mount. Peak in N central Colorado, in the Front Range, situated in Rocky Mountain National Park. 13,911 ft.

Meekins (mē'kinz), Lynn Roby. b. at Salem, Md., Nov. 14, 1862; d. Nov. 8, 1933. American journalist. He was editor of the Baltimore American (to 1899), the Saturday Evening Post (1899–1901), the Baltimore Herald (1903–06), Baltimore Star (1908–11), and the Hershey (Pa.) Press (1914–17).

Meel (māl), Jan. See Miel or Meel, Jan.

Meenen (mā'nẹn). [French, Menin.] Town in NW Belgium, in the province of West Flanders, situated on the Lys River, near the French border, ab. 32 mi. SW of Ghent: textile, metal, tobacco, and foodstuff industries. The town suffered damage in World War II. 22,031 (1947).

Meer (mār), Jan van der. b. at Haarlem, Netherlands, c1632; d. there, in August, 1691. Dutch painter.

Meer, Jan van der. b. at Haarlem, Netherlands, 1656; d. May 28, 1705. Dutch painter; son of Jan van der Meer (c1632–91).

Meer, Jan van der. See also Vermeer, Jan.

Meerane (mā.rā'nẹ). Town in E Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony, Russian Zone, ab. 35 mi. S of Leipzig: manufacturing town, with textile and machinery industries. Lignite mines are in the vicinity. 26,804 (1946).

Meeraugspitze (mār'ouk'shpit.sẹ) or Meeraugen Spitze (mār'ou.gẹn shpit'sẹ). See Rysy.

Meercraft (mir'kraft). In Ben Jonson's comedy The Devil is an Ass, a clever rogue, a projector or speculator who carries about with him prospectuses to suit all tastes.

Meersch (mārs), Maxence van der. b. at Roubaix, Nord, France, 1907; d. at Le Touquet, Pas-de-Calais, France, Jan. 14, 1951. French writer. Author of Invasion 14 (1935), L'Empreinte du dieu (1936), L'Élu (1937), and Femmes à l'encan (1946). He was regarded by critics, just before World War II, as a novelist of unusual promise.

Meerut (mi'rut). [Also: Mirat, Mirath.] Division in Uttar Pradesh, Union of India, NE of Delhi: rice, wheat, sugar, millet, and barley. Area, ab. 9,230 sq. mi.; pop. 5,716,451 (1941).

Meerut. [Also: Mirat, Mirath.] District in the division of Meerut, Uttar Pradesh, Union of India, ab. 38 mi. NE of Delhi. Area, ab. 2,323 sq. mi.; pop. 2,281,217 (1951).

Meerut. [Also: Mirat, Mirath.] Capital of Meerut district, Uttar Pradesh, Union of India, on a tributary of the Ganges River, ab. 38 mi. NE of Delhi: cotton mills; trade center for a rich agricultural area. It was the scene of the outbreak of the Sepoy mutiny on May 10, 1857. Pop. 233,183 (1951).

Mees (mēz), Arthur. b. at Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 13, 1850; d. at New York, April 26, 1923. American organist and musical director. He directed many first performances in America, including the works Omar Khayyám by Granville Bantock and St. Francis by Gabriel Pierné.

Mees, Charles Edward Kenneth. b. at Wellingborough, England, May 26, 1882—. American photographic authority. He was director of the research laboratory (1912 et seq.) and vice-president in charge of research (1934 et seq.) for the Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N.Y. Author of Photography of Colored Objects (1909), An Atlas of Absorption Spectra (1909), The Fundamentals of Photography (1920), Photography (1937), The Theory of the Photographic Process (1942), The Path of Science (1947), and other books.

Mees (māz), Rudolf. b. at Rotterdam, Netherlands, Oct. 18, 1880—. Dutch banker and insurance broker.

Meester (mā'stėr), Johan de. b. 1860; d. 1931. Dutch novelist and journalist. His collections of short stories include Zeven vertellingen (Seven Stories, 1899), Deemoed (Humility, 1901), and Over het leed van den Hartstocht (On Grief of Passion, 1904). Deep compassion is shown in his novel Geertje (1905). Satirical novels on bourgeois life include De Zonde in het deftige dorp (Sin in the Exclusive Town, 1912), Carmen (1915), Walmende Lampen (Smoking Lamps, 1927), and Eva (1929).

Meewoc (mē'wok). See Miwok.

Mefistofele (mā.fēs.tô'fā.lā). Opera by Arrigo Boito, first produced at La Scala, Milan, on March 5, 1868. The libretto, written by the composer, is adapted from Goethe's Faust.

Megaera (mę.jir'ą). In late Greek mythology, one of the three Eumenides. Megaera was called the jealous one.

Megalesian Games (meg.ą.lē'zhąn). In Roman antiquity, a magnificent, orgiastic festival, with processions, feasting, and performances in the theaters, celebrated April 4–10 in honor of the "great mother" of the Mediterranean peoples, Cybele. The symbol (a black meteorite stone) of this goddess was brought to Rome from Asia Minor, c203 B.C., and the games were instituted then or shortly afterward, in consequence of a sibylline oracle promising continual victory to the Romans if honors were paid to her.

Megalokastron (me"gä.lô.käs'trôn). See Candia.

Megalopolis (meg.ą.lop'ǫ.lis). In ancient geography, a city in Arcadia, Greece, ab. 29 mi. NW of Sparta. It was built (370 B.C.) as an Arcadian outpost against Sparta. An ancient theater and other structures were excavated in the period 1890–93.

Meganthropus (me.gan'thrǫ.pus). See under Pithecanthropus.

Megantic (mę.gan'tik). [French, Mégantic (mā.gäṅ.tēk).] City in S Quebec, Canada, county seat of Frontenac County, near the Maine border. 6,164 (1951).

Megara (meg'ą.rą). [Also, Megaris (meg'ą.ris).] Town in C Greece, in the nomos (department) of Attica and Boeotia, situated between the Halcyon Sea, the Corinthian Bay, and the Saronic Gulf, ab. 21 mi. W of Athens. The ancient city, with its port Nisaea, was situated on the pass leading from central Greece to the Peloponnesus. Its early inhabitants were Carians. It colonized Byzantium, Chalcedon, Heracleia on the Pontus, and Hybla Minor (Megara Hyblaea) in Sicily. It fell later into the hands of the Macedonians, and afterward of the Romans. Megara was the birthplace of Euclid, the founder of the Megarics, or Megarian school of philosophers. 13,371 (1940).

Megara Hyblaea (meg'ą.rą hī.blē'ą). See Hybla Minor.

Megarics (mę.gar'iks). School of Greek philosophy, founded by Euclid of Megara, which combined the ethical doctrines of Socrates and the metaphysics of the Eleatics.

Megaris (meg'ą.ris). In ancient geography, a district in Greece which formed part of the isthmus connecting the Peloponnesus with C Greece and lay SW of Attica and NE of Corinthia. The surface is largely mountainous. Chief town, Megara.

Megasthenes (mę.gas'thę.nēz). fl. c300 B.C. Greek writer, a friend and companion of the Syrian ruler Seleucus (Seleucus Nicator), and his ambassador to Sandrocottus (Chandragupta), king of the Prasii in India, whose capital was probably near the modern Patna. He wrote a work on India which was the chief source of the later Greek information on the subject.

Meg Dods (meg dodz). See Dods, Meg.

Megerle (mā'gėr.lę), Hans Ulrich. See Abraham a Sancta Clara.

Meggott (meg'ọt), John. Original name of Elwes, John.

Meghna (meg'nạ). [Also, Megna.] Name given to the E branch of the Brahmaputra River in the lower part of its course, and to the principal mouth of the united Brahmaputra and Ganges: noted for its bore.

Megiddo (mę.gid'ō). [Modern Arabic site name, Tell el Mutesellim; Roman name, Legio.] Ancient town in the plain of Jezreel, Palestine, at the SE foot of Mount Carmel, since 1948 in Israel. It was one of the Canaanite capitals, and became one of the strongholds of the tribe of Manasseh, and the valley dominated by it became a celebrated battlefield in the history of Israel. Near it Deborah and Barak defeated the Canaanites under Sisera. Solomon made it a fortress and a district capital. Josiah succumbed (609 B.C.) here to Pharaoh-Necho (Necho II) of Egypt. In September, 1918, the Turks were defeated here by the British under General Allenby. In February, 1949, a modern Jewish agricultural settlement was founded at Megiddo.

Meg Merrilies (meg mer'i.lēz). See Merrilies, Meg.

Megna (meg'nạ). See Meghna.

Megnum (meg.nöm'), al-. See Bahalul.

Megreliya (mi.grā'li.yą). Russian name of Mingrelia.

Megrez (mē'grez). Third-magnitude star δ Ursae Majoris, the faintest of the seven stars which form the Big Dipper, the star at which the handle joins the pan.

Megrue (mę.grō'), Roi Cooper. b. at New York, June 12, 1883; d. Feb. 27, 1927. American playwright, author of Under Cover (1913). His first play to be produced was White Magic (1912), with Gertrude Elliott in the lead. Author also of It Pays to Advertise (1914), in collaboration with Walter Hackett, Under Fire (1915), Abe and Mawruss (1915), with Montague Glass, Seven Chances (1916), Under Sentence (1916), with Irvin Cobb, Where Poppies Bloom (1918), and Tea for Three (1918)

Mehadia (mā.hä'dē.ä). [Hungarian, Mehádia (me'hä.dē.ô); ancient name, Ad Mediam.] Town in S Rumania, in the province of Muntenia, NW of Turnu Severin, in a coal-mining region. Nearby are the sulfur "Hercules Baths," celebrated since Roman times. It was stormed by the Turks in 1716, 1738, and 1789. Pop. ab. 2,000.

Mehadpur (me.hąd.pör'). See Mehidpur.

Mehdee (me'dē). See Mahdi.

Mehemet (mę.hem'ęt, me.met'). See Mohammed.

Mehemet Aali (or Ali) Pasha (ä'lē pä.shä'). See Aali Pasha, Mehemet.

Mehemet Ali (ä' lē). [Also, Mohammed Ali.] b. at Kavala, Macedonia, c1769; d. at Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 2, 1849. Viceroy of Egypt (1805–49). The leader of a group of Balkan volunteers, he gained renown at the battle of Abukir in Egypt (1799) against Napoleon. He then entered the Egyptian political picture and by joining with one side and then the other made himself master of the confused situation at Cairo and was appointed (1805) governor of Egypt. He massacred (1811) the leaders of the Mamelukes, who had ruled Egypt, in fact if not by right, for almost 600 years, and then, aided by his son, Ibrahim Pasha, suppressed the Wahabis in Arabia. Now the most powerful governor in the Turkish Empire, Mehemet Ali introduced several internal improvements in Egypt and turned to extending his lands in Africa. He conquered (1820–22) the provinces of Nubia Sennaar and Kordofan, and in 1823 began the building of Khartoum. His position was now almost completely independent of his overlord, the Sultan of Turkey, but he went to the assistance of the Turks in attempting to suppress the Greek war of independence. He was successful until the combined fleets of Great Britain, France, and Russia wiped out his fleet at Navarino (1827). After the sultan had refused to make him governor of the province, his army, under Ibrahim Pasha, conquered (1831–32) Syria. He was now engaged in a protracted struggle with Turkey, complicated by the intervention of Russia and the slowly growing realization of the Western powers that Turkey had become "the sick man of Europe." Russia obtained control of the Dardanelles, but Mehemet Ali nevertheless defeated (1839) Turkey; he was compelled (1841) by the European powers, after a diplomatic conflict that at times threatened a general European war because of support of Mehemet Ali by France, to give up Syria in return for a hereditary grant to his family of the governorship of Egypt (the deposed King Faruk was descended from him). In 1848

Ibrahim Pasha was appointed regent for his senile father, who died the following year.

Mehemet Ali Pasha (ä'lē pä.shä'). [Original name, Karl Detroit.] b. at Brandenburg, Prussia, Nov. 18, 1827; assassinated in Diakova, Sept. 7, 1878. Turkish general. In 1877 in the Russo-Turkish War he commanded the main army in Bulgaria, and was successful against the Russians on the Lom, in August and September, but was superseded by Suleiman Pasha.

Mehemet Said Pasha (sä.ēd' pä.shä'). See Said Pasha, Mehemet.

Mehidpur (me.hid.pör'). [Also: Mahidpore, Mehadpur.] Town in Madhya Bharat, Union of India, ab. 56 mi. N of Indore. Here on Dec. 21, 1817, the British under Thomas Hislop defeated the forces of Holkar.

Mehring (mā'ring), Franz. b. at Schlawe, Germany, Feb. 27, 1846; d. at Berlin, Jan. 28, 1919. German socialist writer and politician, active in organizing workers' theaters at Berlin. An associate of Rosa Luxemburg, he wrote for the Neue Zeit. During World War I he was close to the Spartacus Party. Among his works were Geschichte der deutschen Sozialdemokratie (1898), Die Lessing-Legende (1893), and Karl Marx (1919).

Mehta (mā'tä), Hansa Manubhai. b. 1897—. Indian educational administrator and feminist leader, delegate (1949) to the Human Rights Commission of the United Nations, and vice-chancellor of Baroda University. She was a member (1937, 1940) of the legislative council, and held (1937–39) the post of parliamentary secretary of education and health. She was vice-president (1930) of the All-India Women's Congress. She is the author of Woman Under the Hindu Law of Marriage and Succession and Post-War Educational Reconstruction and Civil Liberties.

Mehta, Sir Pherozeshah Merwanji. b. 1845; d. 1915. Indian lawyer and statesman. He agitated for municipal and social reform, for the admission of Indians to the civil service, and for measures to ameliorate the conditions of Indians in South Africa. President (1890) of the Indian National Congress, he served as a member (1894–96, 1898–1901) of the imperial legislative council.

Méhul (mā.ül), Étienne Henri. [Original name, Étienne Nicolas Méhul.] b. at Givet, Ardennes, France, June 22, 1763; d. at Paris, Oct. 18, 1817. French composer. He wrote the operas Stratonice (1792), Le Jeune Henri (1797), Uthal (1806), Gabrielle d'Estrées (1806), Joseph (1807), La Journée aux aventures (1816), and many patriotic songs and cantatas, such as the Chant du départ and Chant du retour.

Mehun-sur-Yèvre (mę.ėn.sür.yevr). Town in C France, in the department of Cher, on the Yèvre River ab. 10 mi NW of Bourges. It has important porcelain manufactures. Charles VII was crowned in the (now ruined) castle and died there in 1461. Pop. 5,290 (1946).

Meiderich (mī'dę.riċh). Former town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia. It is now administratively part of Duisburg-Hamborn.

Meidum (mā.döm'). See Medum.

Meier Helmbrecht (mī'ėr helm'breċht). Middle High German poem of the middle of the 13th century, by Wernher der Gärtner. It is the earliest German literary work dealing with peasants.

Meierhold (mī'ėr.hōlt), Vsevolod Emilievich. b. in Russia, 1873—. Russian actor and director. In 1908 he became director of two imperial theaters at Moscow (the Marinsky, where opera was performed, and the Alexandrevsky, which produced plays). Convinced that the theater above all must be theatrical, he became an enemy of the naturalism and inward technique of the Moscow Art Theatre. Influenced by the Chinese theater, Greek classicism, the commedia dell' arte style, and the French symbolists, he abolished the "fourth-wall," picture-frame style of realistic production, and projected his stage into the audience. Meierhold favored bare settings, with ladders, steps, platforms on many levels, and machine-like stage settings (trapezes, bricklayers' scaffolds, machinists' catwalks) as expressive of industrial civilization. This "constructivist" approach enabled him to give new significance to old plays. But when the so-called Soviet Realism ("Socialist Realism") came to the fore in 1935, Meierhold fell out of favor. After his production of a new version of Ostrovsky's How the Steel Was Tempered (1938), he was removed from his directorial post, the new playhouse being built for him was abandoned, and his actors were assigned to other theaters. Soon after he was made head of the Stanislavski Opera Theatre (1938). This was his last known post.

Meierovics (mā'e.rô.vits), Zigfrids Anna. b. in Latvia, Feb. 6, 1887; d. Aug. 22, 1925. Latvian statesman. The first Latvian minister of foreign affairs, and later (1921–25) prime minister of Latvia, he was instrumental in securing the de facto and de jure recognition of Latvia by the great powers. He also helped effect his country's entry into the League of Nations, and concluded peace treaties with Germany (1920) and the U.S.S.R. (1920), and the treaty of alliance with Estonia (1923). Appointed first Latvian minister of foreign affairs under Karlis Ulmanis, he was also a member of the Latvian constituent assembly and the Latvian parliament.

Meiggs (megz), Henry. b. at Catskill, N.Y., July 7, 1811; d. at Lima, Peru, Sept. 29, 1877. American railroad builder. He was a lumber merchant at San Francisco, but failed in 1854, and left the country. He engaged in railway construction in Chile, and after 1867 in Peru, where he undertook and carried out extensive public works, the greatest being the Oroya railroad over the Andes.

Meighen (mē'ęn), Arthur. b. at Anderson, Ontario, Canada, June 16, 1874—. Canadian statesman. A member (1908–21, 1922–26) of the Canadian House of Commons, he served as solicitor general (1913), secretary of state for Canada and minister of mines (1917), minister of the interior and head of Indian affairs (1917), and member of the imperial war cabinet (1918). He was prime minister (1920–21, 1926) of Canada.

Meigs (megz), Cornelia Lynde. b. at Rock Island, Ill., Dec. 6, 1884—. American writer. Her books include many juveniles. Among her works are Kingdom of the Winding Road (1915), Master Simon's Garden (1916), Helga and the White Peacock (play; 1922), Rain on the Roof (1925), Railroad West (1937), The Scarlet Oak (1938), Call of the Mountain (1939), Mounted Messenger (1943), and others. Her play The Steadfast Princess (1916) received the Drama League prize. She was awarded a 2,000-dollar prize by Little, Brown and Company for Trade Wind (1927); she received (1934) the Newbery medal for Invincible Louisa (1933).

Meigs, Fort. Fort at the Maumee Rapids, NW Ohio, held by the Americans under William Henry Harrison against the British and Indians, in May and July, 1813.

Meigs, Montgomery. b. at Detroit, Mich., Feb. 27, 1847; d. Dec. 9, 1931. American civil engineer, inventor of a "canvas cofferdam" for foundation work.

Meigs, Montgomery Cunningham. b. at Augusta, Ga., May 3, 1816; d. at Washington, D.C., Jan. 2, 1892. American engineer and general. He became quartermaster general of the army in 1861. The plans of several government buildings at Washington were prepared by him.

Meigs, Return Jonathan. b. at Middletown, Conn., Dec. 17, 1740; d. at the Cherokee agency, Jan. 28, 1823. American Revolutionary officer. He was a member of Benedict Arnold's expedition against Quebec, and was captured (1776), but was exchanged. In 1777 he commanded a raid on Sag Harbor, and in 1779 fought with Anthony Wayne at Stony Point. After the war he became interested in the western settlements and became (1801) a commissioner to the Indians.

Meigs, Return Jonathan. b. at Middletown, Conn., Nov. 17, 1764; d. at Marietta, Ohio, March 29, 1824. American politician and jurist, U.S. postmaster general (1814–1823) under Madison and Monroe; son of R. J. Meigs. After graduating (1785) from Yale, he became prominent in politics in the Ohio territory, serving as judge and as a member of the legislature. He served as chief justice (1803–04) of the newly created state of Ohio. He was U.S. senator from Ohio (1809–10) and governor of Ohio (1810–14).

Meigs, William Montgomery. b. Aug. 12, 1852; d. Dec. 30, 1929. American biographer. Author of The Life of Charles Jared Ingersoll (1897), The Life of Thomas Hart Benton (1904), and The Life of John Caldwell Calhoun (2 vols., 1917), as well as the legal work The Growth of the Constitution in the Federal Convention of 1787 (1900).

Meije (mezh). Mountain in SE France, the chief summit of the Pelvoux range, Dauphiné Alps. Elevation, ab. 13,080 ft.

Meijer-Ranneft (mī'ėr.rän'ęft), Jan Willem. b. at Magelang, Java, Oct. 31, 1887—. Dutch colonial official. Employed in Java (1907–29) in various capacities, he became a member (1923) and chairman (1929) of the Volksraad of the Netherlands East Indies. He was vice-president (1933–36) of the council of the East Indies, and chairman (1934) of a delegation engaged in negotiations with Japan.

Meijers (mī'ėrs), E. M. b. at Den Helder, Netherlands, Jan. 10, 1880—. Dutch jurist and teacher. Author of Recueil de lois modernes concernant le droit international privé (1947).

Meiji (mā.jē). Reign style of Mutsuhito.

Meiklejohn (mik'l.jon), Alexander. b. at Rochdale, England, Feb. 3, 1872—. American educator, president of Amherst College from 1912 until 1924. At Brown University he was instructor in philosophy (1897), assistant professor, associate professor, and professor of logic and metaphysics (1890–1906), and dean (1901–12). He headed (1926–33) the experimental school at the University of Wisconsin, and was named (1933) to the staff of the San Francisco School for Social Studies.

Meikle Says Law (mik'ęl sās lô). See under Lammermuir Hills.

Meiktila (mēk'ti.lą). City in C Burma, ab. 75 mi. S of Mandalay. It is an important trading center in a rubber-producing area; new oil fields have been developed here in recent years. 9,195 (1931).

Meilhac (me.yak), Henri. b. at Paris, Feb. 23, 1832; d. there, July 6, 1897. French dramatist and author. Among the plays of which he is sole author are Péché caché (1858), Un Petit-fils de Mascarille (1859), Ce qui plait aux hommes (1860), La Vertu de Célimène (1861), Les Bourguignonnes (opéra comique, 1862), Fabienne (1865), Les Demoiselles Clochart (1886), Décoré (1888), Margot (1890), and Brevet supérieur (1892). He wrote (c1860 et seq.) in collaboration with Ludovic Halévy (Carmen) and also with Germain Delavigne (L'Echéance, L'Élixir du Docteur Cornélius), with Narrey (Vert-Vert), with Jules Massenet (Manon Lescaut), and with a number of others. He also wrote a dramatic poem, Les Païens, in the Revue de Paris, and a number of articles in La Vie Parisienne (signed Ivan Baskoff).

Meillet (mā.yā'; French, me.ye), Antoine. b. 1866; d. 1936. French philologist, professor of linguistics at Paris. He advanced the theory that the Germanic sound shifts were due to the racial heterogeneity of the Germanic peoples who spoke originally a non-Indo-European language. His published works include Les Dialectes indo-européens (1908), Linguistique historique et linguistique générale (1921), Caractères généraux des langues germaniques (revised ed., 1922), and many others.

Mein (mąn). French name of the Main.

Meinecke (mī'nę.kę), Friedrich. b. at Salzwedel, Germany, Oct. 30, 1862—. German historian. Author of Nach der Revolution (After the Revolution, 1918) and Geschichte des Deutsch-Englischen Bündnisproblems (History of the German-English Alliance Problem, 1927).

Meineke (mī'nę.kę), Johann Albert Friedrich August. b. at Soest, Germany, Dec. 8, 1790; d. at Berlin, Dec. 12, 1870. German philologist. He edited fragments of the Greek comic poets (1839–57), Horace (1834), Strabo (1852–53), Aristophanes (1860), and others.

Meiners (mī'nėrs), Christoph. b. near Otterndorf, Hanover, Germany, July 31, 1747; d. at Göttingen, Germany, May 1, 1810. German philosophical and historical writer.

Meingre (mąńgr), Jean le. Original name of Boucicaut, Jean.

Meinhold (mīn'holt), Johann Wilhelm. b. on the Baltic island of Usedom, Feb. 27, 1797; d. at Charlottenburg, Germany, Nov. 30, 1851. German pastor. Author of two novels, Marie Schweidler, die Bernsteinhexe (1843) and Sidonia von Bork, die Klosterhexe (1847). The former, which he published anonymously under the pretense that it was an old chronicle, attracted much attention. It was dramatized in 1847 by Laube and in 1911 by Max Geissler.

Meiningen (mī'ning.ęn). City in E central Germany, in the Land (state) of Thuringia, Russian Zone, on the Werra River, ab. 40 mi. SW of Erfurt; railroad repair shops. Meiningen came under the house of Wettin in 1583; in the reign of Duke George II of Saxe-Meiningen, in the second half of the 19th century, it became famous as the seat of the theater troupe called Die Meininger. 23,700 (1946).

Meininger (mī'ning.ėr), Die. Popular name for the German theater troupe instituted at Meiningen by Duke George II of Saxe-Meiningen and directed by him and Ludwig Chronegk (1837–91). The undertaking, which emphasized care in historical details of costume and scenery, and the subordination of individual roles to the interpretation of the whole play, amounted to a reform of the German theater. To this end the troupe gave between 1874 and 1890 no less than 2,500 performances in 18 German cities and in many cities abroad.

Meinong (mī'nong), Alexius. b. at Lemberg, Poland, July 17, 1853; d. at Graz, Austria, Nov. 27, 1920. Austrian philosopher and psychologist. A follower of Franz Brentano, he served (1882 et seq.) as professor at the University of Graz. He developed a theory of value based on his distinction between recognition of actual qualities (perception) and the mental action performed in perceiving (conception). Author of Über Annahmen (1902), Untersuchungen zur Gegenstandstheorie (1904), Über die Stellung der Gegenstandstheorie im System der Wissenschaften (1907), and Über Möglichkeit und Wahrscheinlichkeit (1915).

Meiringen or Meyringen (mī'ring.ęn). Town in Switzerland, in the canton of Bern, on the Aare River. It is a tourist resort, with wood-carving and weaving industries. 3,285 (1941).

Meisle (mīs'lē), Kathryn. b. at Philadelphia, Oct. 12, 1899—. American operatic contralto. She made her debut (1923) with the Chicago Opera, sang (1935) in the role of Amneris in Aïda on the occasion of her first appearance at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, and has appeared with the Los Angeles and San Francisco operas.

Meissen (mī'sęn). Medieval margraviate of Germany, which developed in the region around Dresden and Meissen, and was the nucleus of the kingdom of Saxony. It came under the house of Wettin (later the reigning house of Saxony) in 1089.

Meissen. [Latin, Misnia.] City in E Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony, Russian Zone, on the Elbe River ab. 13 mi. NW of Dresden. It has pottery, brick, textile, machinery, and chemical industries; kaolin is dug in the vicinity. It is famous for its porcelain manufacture, founded in 1710 and directed by Böttger, Höroldt, Kändler, and other famous artists of the baroque and rococo periods. The Gothic Dom (cathedral) is a building of the 13th and 14th centuries, containing tombs of princes of the house of Wettin. Above the town is the Albrechtsburg, erected (1471–85) by the dukes Ernst and Albrecht of Saxony. The castle, founded in 929, became the seat of a margraviate on the Slavic border and the core of the later electorate and kingdom of Saxony. 48,348 (1946).

Meissen, Heinrich von. See Heinrich von Meissen.

Meissner (mīs'nėr), Alfred. b. at Teplitz (now Teplice-Šanov), in Bohemia, Oct. 15, 1822; d. at Bregenz, Austria, May 29, 1885. German novelist, poet, and dramatist. His works include the epic Ziska (1846), the novels Zwischen Fürst und Volk (1855), Sansara (1858), and Schwarzgelb (1864), and others.

Meissner, Bruno. b. at Graudenz, Germany, April 25, 1868—. German Assyriologist. Author of Beiträge zum altbabylonischen Privatrecht (Contributions to Old Babylonian Private Law, 1893), Die babylonisch-assyrische Literatur (Babylonian-Assyrian Literature, 1927), and others.

Meissner, Otto. b. at Bischweiler (now Bischwiller), in Alsace, March 13, 1880; d. at Munich, May 27, 1953. German civil servant. He was a chancellory official (1919–45) under Ebert, Hindenburg, and Hitler.

Meissner Hochland (mīs'nėr hōch'länt). German name of the Saxon Switzerland.

Meissonier (mā.so.nyā), Jean Louis Ernest. b. at Lyons, France, Feb. 21, 1815; d. at Paris, Jan. 31, 1891. French genre and historical painter. He first made himself known as an illustrator of books (Les Français peints par eux-mêmes and others), but soon began to paint genre pictures on a small scale, with the microscopic detail and finish for which he became famous. He painted between 450 and 500 of these. His favorite subjects were military, and many of his pictures represent men at arms, guards, cavaliers, or soldiers playing cards, drinking, or the like. The most celebrated of his pictures are the four known as "Napoleon Cycle." One of these, 1807, was purchased in 1887 for 66,000 dollars and presented to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York. He presented to the state two of his most celebrated pictures, Le Graveur à l'eau forte and Le Cavalier à sa fenêtre. They are now in the Louvre.

Meister (mī'stėr), Aloys. b. at Frankfort on the Main, Germany, Dec. 7, 1866; d. at Münster, Germany, Jan. 27, 1925. German historian. Author of Deutsche Verfassungsgeschichte des Mittelalters (German Constitutional History during Medieval Times, 1907) and Geschichtswissenschaft und Geschichtsunterricht (Historiography and Historical Instruction, 1912).

Meistermann (mī'ster.män), Barnabas Francis Joseph. [Ecclesiastical name, Barnabé d'Alsace.] b. at Pfaffenheim, in Alsace, March 27, 1850; d. at Jerusalem, 1923. German archaeologist and missionary. A Franciscan, he served as a missionary in China and (1893 et seq.) in Palestine, where he dedicated himself to archaeological and topographical study of the Holy Land.

Meister Rumsland (mī'stėr rums'länt). See Rumsland.

Meistersinger von Nürnberg (mī'stėr.zing.ėr fon nürn'berk), Die. [Called Die Meistersinger.] Opera in three acts by Richard Wagner, first produced at Munich in 1868. Set in at Nurenberg in the 16th century, the work revolves around the attempt of Walther von Stolzing to win Eva, whose hand had been promised by her father to the victor in the annual song competition. The opera incorporates the historical character of Hans Sachs. The "prize-song" is the best-known air from this opera, and the overture is often performed at concerts.

Meitner (mīt'nėr), Lise. b. at Vienna, Nov. 7, 1878—. Austrian physicist and mathematician, noted for investigations in nuclear physics and radioactivity which aided in laying the foundation for the development of the atomic bomb. With Otto Hahn, she discovered the element protoactinium (1917; independently discovered also by Soddy and Cranston). She was a professor (1926 et seq.) at the University of Berlin. A refugee from Hitler Germany, she was a member (1938 et seq.) of the Nobel Institute at Stockholm, was a visiting professor (1946) at the Catholic University of America, and became (1946) a member of the atomic research staff at the University of Stockholm. In collaboration on various occasions with Fritz Strassman, Otto Hahn, and Otto Robert Frisch, she conducted experiments in the slow bombardment of uranium by neutrons; the resultant fission of uranium, and the new possibilities of releasing energy, were subsequently reported to the U.S. by Niels Bohr, and ultimately led to the creation of the atomic bomb project under the supervision of the U.S. government.

Meitzen (mīt'sėn), August. b. at Breslau, Dec. 16, 1822; d. at Berlin, Jan. 19, 1910. German statistician and political economist. Author of Geschichte, Theorie und Technik der Statistik (History, Theory and Technique of Statistics 1886).

Mejerda (mę.jer'dą). See Medjerda.

Mejía (me.нē'ä), Tomás. b. in Guanajuato, Mexico, c1812; executed at Querétaro, Mexico, June 19, 1867. Mexican general, of Indian descent. He was conspicuous in the civil wars as an adherent of the conservative or church party, was one of the most trusted lieutenants of the emperor Maximilian, and was executed with him after the fall of Querétaro.

Méjico (me'нē.kō). A Spanish form of Mexico.

Mejillones (me.нē.yō'näs). Port town in N Chile, in Antofagasta province, ab. 35 mi. N of Antofagasta; formerly an important nitrate-shipping port; now has Bolivian trade. Its importance has declined with the growth of the larger port of Antofagasta. 1,056 (1940).

Mekbuda (mek.bū'dą). Seldom-used name of the fourth-magnitude star ζ Geminorum.

Mekheir (me.ċhār'). El. See Berber, town.

Mekhitar (mek.i.tär'; Armenian, me.ċhē.tär'), Peter. [Also, Peter Mechitar.] b. at Sebaste, Armenia, Feb. 7, 1676; d. at San Lazzaro, near Venice, April, 1749. Armenian ecclesiastic, founder of a congregation of Armenian monks at Constantinople, and then at San Lazzaro, near Venice. The monks here became widely known for their work in printing the literature of Armenia.

Mekhitarists (mek.i.tär'ists). [Also, Mechitarists.] Order of Armenian monks in communion with the Roman Catholic Church, under a rule resembling the Benedictine, founded (1701) by Peter Mekhitar at Constantinople, confirmed (1712) by the Pope, and finally settled (1717) on the island of San Lazzaro, near Venice. This is still their chief seat, while they have an independent monastery at Vienna, and branches in Russia, France, Italy, Turkey, and elsewhere. The Mekhitarists are devoted to the religious and literary interests of the Armenian people wherever found, and have published many ancient Armenian manuscripts as well as original works; their society is also organized as a literary academy which confers honorary membership without regard to race or religion.

Mekhong (mā.kong'). See Mekong.

Mekka (mek'ą). See Mecca.

Meknès (mek.nes'). [Also: Meknez (mek.nez'); Spanish: Mequinez, Mekinez (mā.kē.neth').] City in NW Africa, in French Morocco, ab. 35 mi. SW of Fez, and ab. 75 mi. E of Rabat, with which it is connected by road. It is the seat of one of the residences of the sultan of Morocco. 159,811 (1947).

Mekong (mā.kong'). [Also: Cambodia, Mekhong; Chinese, Lintsang; Tibetan, Dza-chu.] River in SE Asia. It rises in the province of Chinghai, China, flows through Sikang and Yunnan (in China), Burma, Thailand (Siam), and Indochina, and empties by a delta into the South China Sea, S of Saigon. Length, ab. 2,500 mi.

Mekran (me.krän'). See Makran.

Mela (mē'lą), Pomponius. b. at Tingentera, Spain; fl. about the middle of the 1st century. Roman geographer, author of De situ orbis (in three books), a compendium of geography and of manners and customs. It is the earliest extant account of the ancient world written in Latin.

Melampus (me.lam'pus). In Greek legend, a famous prophet and soothsayer; brother of Bias, the sage, and eponymous ancestor of a family of seers. The legend has it that some serpents which he had saved from death cleansed his ears with their tongues while he was asleep, and on awakening he found that he could understand the speech of birds and beasts, and thus learned many secret things.

Melanchthon (mę.langk'thon; German, mā.längċh'ton), Philipp. [Also, Philipp Melanthon; original name, Philip Schwarzerd.] b. at Bretten, Baden, Feb. 16, 1497; d. at Wittenberg, Germany, April 19, 1560. German reformer, a collaborator of Martin Luther. He was educated at Tübingen, and became (1518) professor of Greek at Wittenberg. He helped Luther in his translation of the Bible and soon became one of his chief followers in the Reformation. Melanchthon in many ways acted as a balance in the movement; his was the calm moderation that curbed and stated in reasoned terms Luther's more drastic reforms, at the same time recognizing completely Luther's leadership. In his Loci communes rerum theologicarum (1521), he set forth in scholarly fashion the first systematic exposition of the theology of the reformers. During the next years he served often as a disputant in discussions and conferences with other reformers (for example, at Marburg in 1529, when he was Zwingli's opponent) and with Roman Catholic theologians. He drew up (1530) the Augsburg Confession, the basic 17 articles of the evangelical faith. He was looked upon as Luther's successor, but Melanchthon's genius lay not in leadership but in scholarly controversy. He was neither a fanatic nor a rousing preacher, and he was, moreover, willing to compromise or mitigate differences by carefully phrased statements. Though he consistently attempted to reach some sort of common ground with other religious leaders and to reestablish the church as a unity, there is no doubt that Melanchthon was the articulate spirit of the Lutheran Reformation.

Melander (me.lan'der), Axel Leonard. b. at Chicago, June 3, 1878—. American biologist and entomologist.

authority on the classification of the order Diptera. He was coauthor with C. T. Brues of Key to Families of North American Insects (1915) and Classification of Insects (1932). Author of Source Book of Biological Terms (1937).

Melanesia (mel.ạ.nē'zhạ, -shạ). Name given to a collection of island groups in the W Pacific Ocean, whose inhabitants are related. The principal islands and groups included are: New Guinea, Admiralty Islands, Louisiade Archipelago, Bismarck Archipelago, Solomon Islands, Santa Cruz Islands, Banks Islands, New Hebrides, New Caledonia, Loyalty Islands, and Fiji islands (which are placed in Polynesia by some authorities), and smaller neighboring groups. Area, ab. 370,000 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 2,500,000.

Melanesians (mel.ạ.nē'zhạnz). Indigenous peoples of Melanesia, inhabiting Pacific islands and archipelagoes S of the equator from New Guinea southward, thus including the peoples of the Bismarck Archipelago, the Solomon, Santa Cruz, and Banks Islands, the New Hebrides, Loyalties, New Caledonia, and the Fiji islands. The Melanesians fall by chronology and culture into three groups: the Negritos of the interior of New Guinea, the Papuans of New Guinea and the neighboring islands, and the Oceanic Negroids, often referred to as the "Melanesians proper." Some anthropologists classify the New Guinea culture as a separate culture. The Melanesian group of the Malayo-Polynesian family of languages includes numerous dialects subdivided under South and North Melanesian, Central Melanesian (including Fijian and the dialect of the Solomons), and Santa Cruz.

Melantha (mẹ.lan'thạ). In John Dryden's comedy Marriage à la Mode, an attractive and impertinent fashionable lady, said by Colley Cibber to exhibit the most complete system of female foppery that could possibly be crowded into the tortured form of a fine lady.

Melanthus of Sicyon (mẹ.lan'thus; sish'i.on). [Also, Melanthius (mẹ.lan'thi.us).] Greek painter, especially noted as a colorist, one of the great Sicyonian school founded by Eupompus. He was a pupil of Pamphilus. Like his teacher, he based his work on the scientific training which characterized the artistic activity of the Peloponnesian cities. He wrote a work much used by Pliny in the compilation of his 35th book.

Melantius (mẹ.lan'ti.us). In Francis Beaumont and John Fletcher's The Maid's Tragedy, a rough, honest soldier, the brother of Evadne.

Melartin (me'lär.tin), Erkki Gustaf. b. at Käkisalmi, Finland, Feb. 7, 1875; d. at Helsinki, Finland, Feb. 14, 1937. Finnish composer. Among his compositions are the opera Aino, the ballet Sininen helmi, seven symphonies, five orchestral suites, four string quartets, two violin sonatas, a concerto, and more than 300 songs.

Melas (mel'ạs). See Clitus.

Melas (mā'läs), Baron Michael von. b. at Schässburg (now Sighişoara), in Transylvania, 1729; d. at Elbe-Teinitz, in Bohemia, May 31, 1806. Austrian general. He commanded with Suvorov against the French at Cassano, the Trebbia, and Novi in 1799, and alone at Genola in 1799, and at Marengo in 1800.

Melas (mē'lạs), Sinus. Ancient name of Saros, Gulf of.

Melazzo (mā.lät'tsō). See Milazzo.

Melba (mel'bạ), Dame Nellie. [Stage name of Helen Porter Mitchell; married name, Armstrong.] b. at Melbourne, Australia, May 19, 1861; d. at Sydney, Australia, Feb. 23, 1931. Australian operatic soprano, a leading figure (c1887–c1928) in her field with a repertoire of 25 operas. She first used the name Madame Nellie Melba at a recital at Paris in December, 1886, and subsequently never used any other publicly. She first appeared in grand opera at the Théatre de la Monnaie, Brussels, on Oct. 13, 1887, in Rigoletto, and appeared at the Paris Opéra in May, 1889, as Ophelia in Hamlet. Her original success was on the Continent, but she later conquered London and New York, where she first appeared in 1893. After 1907 she divided her time between Australia and Europe.

Melbourne (mel'bọrn). City in SE Australia, capital of Victoria and the second largest city of Australia, situated on the Yarra River and on Port Phillip Bay. It comprises the city proper and numerous metropolitan suburbs (which are integral parts of the urban area), including Fitzroy, Footscray, Richmond, Emerald Hill, Brighton, St. Kilda, Collingwood, and Prahran. It has important commerce and general manufactures, and exports gold, wool, and hides. Its public buildings include the university, national museum, mint, exhibition building, parliament houses, treasury, government offices, and library. It was settled in 1835, and made the capital of Victoria in 1851. Pop. 99,861 (1947), with suburbs, 1,326,400 (est. 1950).

Melbourne. City in E Florida, in Brevard County, on the Indian River. 4,223 (1950).

Melbourne, Viscount. Title held by various members of the Lamb family.

Melbourne, Mount. Volcanic peak in Antarctica, in Victoria Land, in ab. 74°25′ S., 164°58′ E. Elevation, ab. 8,500 ft.

Melcarth (mel'kärth). See Melkarth.

Melchers (mel'chẻrz), Gari. b. at Detroit, Mich., 1860; d. Nov. 30, 1932. American painter. He painted the large frescoes The Arts of War and The Arts of Peace in the tower of the Liberal Arts Building at the World's Columbian Exposition (1893) at Chicago. Among his other works are Maternity (Musée du Luxembourg, Paris), The Family (National Gallery, Berlin), the mural decoration Peace and War (Congressional Library), portrait of Theodore Roosevelt (Freer Collection, Smithsonian Institution), and The Madonna (Metropolitan Museum, New York).

Melchett (mel'chẹt), 1st Baron. Title of Mond, Sir Alfred Moritz.

Melchiades (mel.kī'ạ.dēz), Saint. See Saint Miltiades.

Melchior (mel'ki.ôr). In medieval Christian legend, one of the three Magi who came from the East to welcome the infant Jesus.

Melchior (mel'ċhē.ôr), Carl Joseph. b. at Hamburg, Germany, Oct. 13, 1871; d. there, Dec. 29, 1933. German banker and economist who negotiated the grain delivery from Rumania to Germany during World War I. He acted as chairman (1918) of the financial section of the German armistice delegation, and was one of the six German delegates at Versailles (1919). He was also a representative at later conferences at Spa, Brussels, and Genoa. He represented Germany in the finance section of the League of Nations (1926 et seq.), and at the Paris reparations commission (1929 et seq.). He was a member of the board of the Bank for International Settlements at Basel (1931).

Melchior (mel.kyôr), Charles Jean. See Vogüé, Marquis de.

Melchior (mel'ċhē.ôr), Friedrich. See Grimm, Baron Friedrich Melchior von.

Melchior (mel'ki.ôr), Lauritz (Lebrecht Hommel). b. at Copenhagen, March 20, 1890—. Danish operatic tenor. He was a member (1926–50) of the Metropolitan Opera, New York, making his debut there as Tannhäuser. He is best known for his Wagnerian roles, among which are Siegmund, Siegfried, Tristan, Parsifal, Tannhäuser, and Lohengrin. He has made many appearances on radio and television, and has appeared in several motion pictures.

Melchites (mel'kīts). Orthodox Eastern Christians, as distinguished from the Monophysites or Nestorians. Although the term "Melchites" is older than the Council of Chalcedon (451), its wider use dates from after that council. The name "Melchites" is sometimes given also to members of communities of Christians in Syria and Egypt, formerly in communion with the Orthodox Greek Church, who have submitted to the Roman See.

Melchizedek (mel.kiz'ẹ.dek). [Also: Melchisedec, Melchisedech.] In Old Testament history, a king and priest of Salem, who entertained and blessed Abraham and received tithes from him. His relation to Christ as a type is discussed in Heb. v-vii.

Melchthal (melċh'täl), Arnold von. [Also, Arnold an der Halden.] fl., according to tradition, early in the 14th century. Swiss patriot, the youngest of the three Swiss liberators, representing Unterwalden. He is considered by some to be a legendary figure only. He is one of the principal characters in Schiller's Wilhelm Tell and in Rossini's opera Guillaume Tell.

Melcombe (mel'kọm), Baron. Title of Dodington, George Bubb.

Melcombe Regis (rē'jis). See Weymouth and Melcombe Regis.

Meldola (mel'dō.lä). Town and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Emilia-Romagna, in the province of Forlì, S of Forlì. It has a 13th-century castle. Minor damage was suffered during World War II by the Church of San Francesco. Pop. of commune, 10,961 (1936); of town, 3,774 (1936).

Meleager (mel.ē.ā'jēr). Killed c323 B.C. Macedonian general, distinguished under Alexander the Great.

Meleager. fl. about the middle of the 1st century B.C. Greek epigrammatist of Gadara, in Palestine. His collected epigrams, entitled Stephanos ("Wreath"), form the nucleus of the earliest anthology known in world literature.

Meleager. In Greek legend, a celebrated hero, son of Oeneus of Calydon and Althaea: one of the Argonauts and slayer of the Calydonian boar. At his birth it was prophesied that he would die when a certain brand in the fire was burned out. Althaea pulled it from the fire, quenched it, and hid it. When Meleager killed his uncles (brothers of Althaea) for attempting to rob Atalanta of the boar's hide, Althaea threw the brand back in the fire and let it be consumed. Meleager died, and Althaea in turn put an end to herself.

Meleda (mā'lā.dä). Italian name of Mljet.

Melegnano (mā.lā.nyä'nō). [Former name, Marignano.] Town in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Lombardy, in the province of Milano, ab. 9 mi. SE of Milan. It is noted for the victory gained there by the French under Francis I over the Duke of Milan and the Swiss on Sept. 13 and 14, 1515 (called the Battle of the Giants), and for the victory of the French over the Austrians on June 8, 1859. Pop. ab. 9,000.

Melema (me.lā'mą), Tito. Young Greek of great beauty and ability, but unprincipled and treacherous, husband of Romola, in George Eliot's novel Romola.

Meléndez Valdés (mā.len'deth bäl.dās'), Juan. b. at Ribera del Fresno, Spain, March 11, 1754; d. at Montpellier, France, May 24, 1817. Spanish poet. The popularity of his early work caused him to enter (c1789) politics, but his close association (1808 et seq.) with the Bonaparte faction in Spain made it necessary for him to flee (1813) when they were routed.

Mélesville (mā.les.vēl). Pseudonym of Duveyrier, Anne Honoré Joseph.

Meletians (mę.lē'shąnz). Followers of Saint Meletius. Among the orthodox some were adherents of Meletius, and therefore known as Meletians; others remained separate, and were known (after the last canonically ordained bishop, Eustathius, then dead) as Eustathians. Further difficulty was occasioned by the two orthodox parties using the word "hypostasis" in different senses. The schism between them continued until 413.

Meletius (mę.lē'shus), Saint. b. at Melitene, in Armenia; d. at Constantinople, Feb. 12, 381 A.D. Greek ecclesiastic. He became bishop of Sebaste c358, and patriarch of Antioch in 360. He was deposed by Constantius because he opposed the Arians, was twice banished by Valens, yet succeeded in maintaining his authority despite the division in his diocese (which lasted until 413, long after his death). He presided at the ecumenical council of Constantinople (381) and died during its sessions.

Melfi (mel'fē). Town and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Basilicata, in the province of Potenza, between Potenza and Foggia. The cathedral, built in the 12th century, underwent changes in the 18th and (as a result of damage suffered in the earthquake of 1851) in the 19th century. Old town walls are preserved, as is a medieval castle. An important commercial center in the 11th, 12th, and 13th centuries, it was long a preferred residence of the Hohenstaufen dynasty. Buildings of interest to tourists were undamaged in World War II. Pop. of commune, 15,384 (1936); of town, 14,190 (1936).

Melfi, Duke of. Additional title of Montecucculi or Montecuccoli, Count Raimondo.

Melfort (mel'fort). Town in E central Saskatchewan, Canada, ab. 53 mi. SE of Prince Albert, with which it is connected by rail and road. Wheat farming is the chief occupation in the surrounding area. 2,919 (1951).

Melgar (mel.gär'), Mariano. b. at Arequipa, Peru, 1791; executed at Cusco, Peru, March 11, 1815. Peruvian revolutionist and poet. He joined the patriots, and was taken prisoner at the battle of Umachiri and immediately shot. His songs have been very popular in Spanish America.

Melgarejo (mel.gä.re'hō), Mariano. b. in Cochabamba, Bolivia, 1818; assassinated at Lima, Peru, Nov. 23, 1871. Bolivian general and revolutionist, president (1864–71) of Bolivia. He abrogated the constitution and made territorial concessions to Brazil and Chile, virtually losing to the latter extensive nitrate resources in Atacama. He ruled amid constant disorders, and on Jan. 15, 1871, was overthrown by a revolt led by Agustín Morales, who succeeded him.

Meli (mā'lē), Giovanni. b. at Palermo, Italy, March 4, 1740; d. there, Dec. 20, 1815. Sicilian poet. His works, in dialect, and including odes, sonnets, and pastorals, were published in the period 1830–39.

Meliadus (mē.li'ą.dus). In Arthurian romance, the father of Tristram, and king of Lyonesse.

Melibocus (mę.lib'ọ.kus). In ancient geography, a mountain range in Germany, mentioned by Ptolemy; generally considered by modern scholars to have been the Harz Mountains.

Melibocus. Mountain in Germany, in the Odenwald, in the Land (state) of Hessen, ab. 10 mi. S of Darmstadt. Elevation, ab. 1,690 ft.

Meliboeus (mel.i.bē'us). Name of a shepherd in Vergil's first eclogue.

Meliboeus, The Tale of. One of Geoffrey Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, represented as being told by Chaucer. It is a prose translation of the Latin Liber consolationis et concilii of Albertano da Brescia, through a free French version of the latter, the Livre de Melibée et Dame Prudence, probably by Jean de Meung.

Mélicerte (mā.lē.sert). Pastoral by Molière, produced (1666) at St.-Germain-en-Laye, though unfinished.

Melicertes (mel.i.sėr'tēz). In Greek mythology, a son of Athamas and Ino, who was changed, after her death by drowning, into a sea divinity with the name of Palaemon. Melicertes is identified with the Phoenician Melkarth, and was worshiped on the coast, especially at Megara and the Isthmus of Corinth. The Isthmian Games were celebrated in honor of Melicertes, whose body was washed ashore there; whenever they were neglected, famine struck the locality. By the Romans he was identified with Portunus, god of harbors. Thus he and his mother both became sea deities.

Melikov (mā'lyi.kọf), Count Mikhail Taryelovich Tainov Loris-. See Loris-Melikov, Count Mikhail Taryelovich Tainov.

Melilla (mā.lē'lyä). [Ancient name, Rusaddir.] Seaport and garrison city in NW Africa, on the Mediterranean coast of Spanish Morocco. Melilla is primarily a military town, but it is connected by rail with mines 10 mi. away, from which it exports iron ore. The city was founded by the Phoenicians, and passed successively to Carthage and to Rome. It was occupied by Spanish forces in 1496, and has since withstood numerous attacks by Arabs, especially during the period of the Riff uprisings in the 1920's. In 1936 the revolt of army officers under General Franco, which led to the Spanish Civil War, began at Melilla. Pop. (almost entirely Spanish) 95,841 (1950).

Melinda (me.lin'dä) or Melinde (-de). See Malindi.

Méline (mā.lēn), Jules. [Full name, Félix Jules Méline.] b. at Remiremont, Vosges, France, May 20, 1838; d. at Paris, Dec. 20, 1925. French political leader, known for sponsoring the adoption (1892) of a high protectionist tariff usually known as the "Méline tariff." A deputy (1872–1903) and senator (1903 et seq.), he was a moderate republican in point of view. He was premier (1896–98) and agriculture minister (1883–85, 1915–16). After failing in his candidacy (1898) for the presidency, he withdrew from active politics except for the brief ministry held during World War I.

Melish (mel'ish), John. b. at Methven, Perthshire, Scotland, June 13, 1771; d. at Philadelphia, Dec. 30, 1822. American cartographer and geographic writer. He settled (1811) at Philadelphia, where he established (1816) a map-publishing firm. His maps include A Military and Topographical Atlas of the United States, Including the British Possessions and Florida (1813).

Melissa (mẹ.lis'ạ). In Greek legend, the wife of Periander, tyrant of Corinth, who murdered her in a fit of jealousy. Herodotus recounts that she sent Periander word from the land of the dead that she was unclad and cold because her clothes had not been burnt for her at the time of burial; whereupon Periander gathered together many costly garments and burned them in a pit for her.

Melissa (mẹ.lis'ạ; Italian, mā.lēs'sä). Enchantress in Ariosto's Orlando Furioso. She assists Ruggiero and Bradamante, and restores the lovers of Alcina to their natural shapes.

Melissus (mẹ.lis'us). fl. c440 B.C. Greek philosopher of Samos, a disciple of Parmenides and a representative of the Eleatic school. Fragments of his writings have been preserved.

Melita (mel'i.tạ). Ancient name of Malta, and also of Mljet.

Mélite (mā.lēt). Comedy by Pierre Corneille, produced in 1629.

Melitene (mel.i.tē'nē). In ancient geography, a district in E Cappadocia, Asia Minor.

Melitene. Ancient name of Malatya, city, Turkey.

Melito (mel'i.tō). fl. second half of the 2nd century A.D. Bishop of Sardis, noted as a Christian writer. He addressed an apology for the faith to Marcus Aurelius.

Melito (mā.lē.tō), André François, Comte Miot de. See Miot de Melito, André François, Comte.

Melitón Sarasate y Navascues (mā.lē.tōn' sä.rä.sä'tā ē nä.bäs'kwās), Pablo Martín. See Sarasate y Navascues, Pablo Martín Melitón.

Melitopol (mel.i.tô'pọl). City in the U.S.S.R., in the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, N of the Sea of Azov: food processing and machine tool industries. 75,735 (1939).

Melk (melk). [Latin, Namare; called in the Nibelungenlied Medelicke.] Town in E Austria, in the province of Lower Austria, W of Vienna, on the N bank of the Danube River. The Benedictine abbey, situated on a rocky ledge overlooking an arm of the Danube, was founded in 1089 and rebuilt (1702–49) from plans by Jakob Prandauer. The west front is of impressive grandeur, and the church one of the most excellent buildings of the period; the entire complex is an outstanding example of baroque architecture. 3,297 (1946).

Melkarth (mel'kärth). [Also: Melcarth, Melkart (mel'kärt).] Tutelary god of the Phoenician city of Tyre, an aspect of the Canaanite Baal. He was annually burned in effigy on a great pyre by the people of the city and in the Tyrian colonies. The Greeks identified Melkarth with their own Hercules, who cast himself upon a burning pyre. In Cyprus Melkarth was worshiped side by side with Adonis. He is represented riding on a sea horse, on the ancient coins of Tyre. His temple at Tyre was celebrated for its magnificence. Women were not allowed to enter the temples of Melkarth (nor those of Hercules).

Mell (mel), Max. b. at Marburg (now Maribor), in Austria-Hungary, Nov. 10, 1882—. Austrian author, equally important as a dramatist, lyric poet, and prose writer. He draws his inspiration from his native Styria; he is particularly well known for his Legendenspiele, plays with native settings and religious themes. Of these, the best known are Das Apostelspiel (1924; Eng. trans., Apostle Play, 1934) and Das Nachfolge Christi Spiel (The Play of the Imitation of Christ, 1927). Among his prose works are Barbara Naderers Viehstand (Barbara Naderer's Cattle, 1914) and Das Donauweibchen (1938).

Mell, Patrick Hues. b. at Walthourville, Ga., July 19, 1814; d. Jan. 26, 1888. American educator and Baptist clergyman.

Mell, Patrick Hues. b. at Penfield, Ga., May 24, 1850; d. at Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 12, 1918. American scientist and teacher.

Melle (mel'ẹ) or Mellestine (mel'ẹs.tēn). See Mali.

Mellefont (mel'ẹ.font). One of the principal characters in William Congreve's comedy The Double Dealer. He is in love with Cynthia.

Mellen (mel'ẹn), Grenville. b. at Biddeford, Me., June 19, 1799; d. at New York, Sept. 5, 1841. American poet.

Mellichampe, a Legend of the Santee (mel'i.champ; san.tē'). Historical romance by William Gilmore Simms, published in 1836.

Mellin (me.lēn'), Gustaf Henrik. b. at Revolax, Finland, April 23, 1803; d. Aug. 2, 1876. Swedish novelist, especially noted for historical novels.

Mellitus (mel'i.tus). d. April 24, 624. First bishop of London and third archbishop of Canterbury. He was sent by Pope Gregory I (Gregory the Great) to Saint Augustine at Canterbury in 601. Many of Gregory's epistles to Mellitus are extant. He was consecrated bishop c604, and in 619 became archbishop of Canterbury.

Mello (me'lö), Custodio José de. b. c1845; d. in March, 1902. Brazilian naval officer and revolutionist. As captain in 1889 he was prominent in the overthrow of the empire, was promoted to admiral, and was for a time minister of marine. On Sept. 6, 1893, he secretly seized the Brazilian warships in the harbor of Rio de Janiero, and at the head of this force declared against President Floriano Peixoto. Some of the harbor forts yielded to him; an intermittent bombardment of the loyal forts of Niterói and, to some extent, of Rio de Janeiro was kept up for six months, and there were several sharp land engagements. Foreign powers refused to recognize the rebels as belligerents, and they were hence unable to establish a blockade. During much of this time Mello operated on the southern coasts, leaving the command of the ships at Rio to Saldanha da Gama. Santa Catarina was taken late in September, 1893, and a provisional government established there, and communications were opened with the insurgents in Rio Grande do Sul. During Mello's absence a government fleet, which had been hastily ordered from Europe and the U.S., arrived before Rio de Janeiro, and Saldanha da Gama gave up the ships there (March 12, 1894), taking refuge on a Portuguese man-of-war. Mello still retained several of the strongest vessels, including the República and the Aquidaban, as well as portions of the southern states. He attacked Rio Grande do Sul early in April, 1894, but was repulsed, and on April 16 gave himself up to the Argentine authorities at Buenos Aires. On April 17 the Brazilian forces recovered Santa Catarina, the Aquidaban being sunk by torpedoes.

Mellon (mel'ọn), Andrew William. b. at Pittsburgh, Pa., March 24, 1855; d. at Southampton, N.Y., Aug. 26, 1937. American financier, industrialist, and public official, U.S. secretary of the treasury (1921–32) under Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover. He left college to go into the lumber business with his brother. In 1874, having sold the business at a profit, the brothers joined their father in the banking business at Pittsburgh, Andrew soon becoming a partner. After his father's retirement, Andrew built up the interests of the bank, founding the Union Trust Company (1889) and the Union Savings Bank, and gaining control of many business interests financed through the banks: coal, coke, railroads, steel, oil, water power, and the like. Through these "Mellon interests," which included the young, patent-protected aluminum industry, Mellon became one of the richest men in the U.S. His ten years as secretary of the treasury resulted in a reduction of the national debt, which had expanded as a result of World War I, by more than half, and a simultaneous reduction in the income tax, especially in the surtax. Mellon also worked toward a settlement of the war debts on the basis of ability to pay, and reached funding agreements with several of the debtor nations; the 1931 moratorium on debt payments was evolved by him. He served (1932–33) as U.S. ambassador to Great Britain. He was the principal benefactor of the Mellon Institute for Industrial Research (1911), the A. W. Mellon Educational and Charitable Trust (1930), and the National Gallery of Art (1937), to which he contributed the building and his own collection of paintings.

Mellon, Harriot. [Title, Duchess of St. Albans.] b. at London, c1777; d. there, Aug. 6, 1837. English comic actress.

Melloni (mel.lō'nē), Macedonio. b. at Parma, Italy, April 11, 1798; d. near Naples, Italy, Aug. 11, 1854. Italian physicist, noted especially for his discoveries in radiant heat. He was director (until 1848) of the observatory at Vesuvius. He demonstrated that heat waves, like light waves, could be reflected, refracted, polarized, absorbed. His work was primarily concerned with "dark" or infrared heat. He invented the term "diathermancy," which came to be applied to the property of transmission of heat.

Melmoth (mel'mǫth), Sebastian. French alias of Wilde, Oscar.

Mělník (myel'nēk). Town in Czechoslovakia in the kraj (region) of Praha, in N Bohemia, situated on the N bank of the Labe (Elbe) River near the influx of the Vltava, N of Prague. There is a castle of Prince Lobkowitz and a museum. The town is the marketing center of a wine-producing region. 11,251 (1947).

Melo (mā'lō). City in NE Uruguay, capital of Cerro Largo department: marketing center for farm products and granite. Pop. ab. 23,000.

Melo (me'lö), Francisco Manuel de. b. at Lisbon, Portugal, 1608; d. there, 1666. Portuguese historian, dramatist, essayist, and poet, who wrote both in Portuguese and Spanish and is considered the greatest scholar and most universal writer of his time in Portugal. His major works in Portuguese included Carta de guia de casados (1651), Epanáforas de vária história portuguesa (1660), Cartas familiares (1664), Obras métricas (poetry, 1665), and Apólogos dialogais (posthumous, 1721). His farce Auto do fidalgo aprendiz, the best play of the 17th century in Portuguese, was included in his Obras métricas and appeared in a separate edition (1676). His chief work in Spanish was Historia de los movimientos, separación y guerra de Cataluna (1645). For some years he lived in exile in Brazil.

Melo de Portugal y Villena (mā'lō dā pōr.tö.gäl' ē вē.lyā'nä), Pedro. b. c1725; d. at Montevideo, Uruguay, April 15, 1797. Spanish naval officer and colonial administrator.

Melodunum (mel.ǫ.dū'num). Ancient name of Melun, France.

Melo Franco (me'lö frung'kö), Afonso Arinos de. See Arinos, Afonso.

Meloney (mę.lō'ni), William Brown. b. at San Francisco, Calif., June 6, 1878; d. Dec. 7, 1925. American journalist and writer. He was city editor (1901–08) of the New York World. Author of The Girl of the Golden Gate (1913), The Heritage of Tyre (1916), Where Do We Go From Here? (1919), and the four-act play Graft (1911).

Melos (mē'los). [Italian, Milo.] Volcanic island in SE Greece, in the nomos (department) of Cyclades. It is noted for the Venus of Melos (Venus de Milo), found in the ruins of the ancient city of Melos in 1820, now in the Louvre at Paris. Area, ab. 57 sq. mi.; pop. 13,153 (1940).

Melozzo da Forlì (mā.lôt'tsō dä fōr.lē'). b. at Forlì, Italy, c1438; d. 1494. Italian painter, noted for his skill in foreshortening.

Melpomene (mel.pom'ę.nē). In Greek mythology, the Muse of tragedy, or of lyre-playing.

Melpomene. Asteroid (No. 18) discovered by J. R. Hind at London, June 24, 1852.

Melquíades Álvarez (mel.kē'ā.тнās äl'вä.reth), Gonzalez. b. at Gijon, Spain, 1864; executed 1936. Spanish politician, journalist, and leading industrialist of Bilbao and Oviedo. Before World War I he represented Asturian liberal and democratic interests as deputy, minister, and premier of the Cortes. He was publisher of La Libertad, and when the dictatorship of Primo de Rivera was established, he, together with Count Romanones, called upon Alfonso XIII to abide by the constitution and to convene the Cortes. Both men were dismissed from their posts and Álvarez turned toward moderate republicanism. He failed, however, to obtain a seat in the Cortes upon the establishment (1931) of the republic and sympathized with the rightist JONS (Juntas Ofensivas Nacional Sindicalistas). For that reason he was seized by the leftist government in 1936 and shot.

Melrose (mel'rōz). City in E Massachusetts, in Middlesex County, ab. 7 mi. N of downtown Boston. It is part of the urbanized area of Boston. 26,988 (1950).

Melrose. Police burgh, market town, and tourist center in SE Scotland, in Roxburghshire, situated near the river Tweed, ab. 30 mi. SE of Edinburgh, ab. 360 mi. N of London by rail. Melrose Abbey, now a national monument, was a Cistercian monastery, founded in 1136, but what remains is almost entirely of the 15th century. The heart of Robert Bruce is said to be buried beneath the high altar. The woolen industry of the Scottish border country had its beginnings here. 1,948 (est. 1948).

Melrose, Earl of. A title of Hamilton, Sir Thomas (1563–1637).

Melrose Park. Village in NE Illinois, in Cook County: a western residential and industrial suburb of Chicago. 13,366 (1950).

Melrose Park. Unincorporated community in SE Pennsylvania, in Montgomery County: a northern residential suburb of Philadelphia. Under the new urban definition established for use in the 1950 census it was counted with adjoining urban communities; the last official enumeration was 2,509 (1940).

Melros of Tynninghame (mel'ros; tin'ing.ąm), Baron. A title of Hamilton, Sir Thomas (1780–1858).

Melting Pot, The. Play (1908) by Israel Zangwill.

Melton Mowbray (mel'tǫn mō'brą). Urban district, market town, and manufacturing center in C England, in Leicestershire, ab. 13 mi. NE of Leicester, ab. 105 mi. NW of London by rail. It is located in a grassland region and specializes in fattening cattle and sheep for market. Melton Mowbray is especially noted for its Stilton cheese (cheese fairs are held here annually) and its pork pies. Industries include knitwear and woolen manufactures, and blast furnaces nearby. The town is located on an iron ore field (the ores, however, are low-grade). 14,052 (1951).

Meltzer (mel'tsėr), Charles Henry. b. at London, June 7, 1853; d. Jan. 14, 1936. American dramatist and journalist. He was associated as drama and music critic with various New York newspapers. His translations and stage adaptations include The Story of Rodion, the Student (an adaptation of Dostoyevsky's Crime and Punishment), Hauptmann's Hannele and The Sunken Bell, Mme. Sans-Gêne from the French of Sardou and Moreau, and Daudet's L'Arlésienne.

Meltzer, Samuel James. b. at Ponevyezh, in Courland, Russia, March 22, 1851; d. Nov. 7, 1920. American physiologist, head (1906 et seq.) of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research. His researches included the Kronecker-Meltzer theory of deglutition, excitation, and inhibition, theory of shock, the action of adrenalin, the anesthetic effects of magnesium salts, and artificial respiration by means of intratracheal insufflation.

Melun (mę.lėń). [Ancient name, Melodunum.] City in N France, the capital of the department of Seine-et-Marne, on the Seine River ab. 25 mi. SE of Paris. It is a river port, has metal and lumber industries, and is the marketing center of a dairy region. The forest of Fontainebleau is nearby. The city, including the Church of Saint-Barthélemy, was damaged during World War II. 17,573 (1946).

Melun (mę.lung'). French lord in Shakespeare's King John.

Melusina (mel.ū.sē'nạ). [French, Mélusine (mā.lü.zēn).] In French local legend, a water fairy of great power and wealth. She married Raymond, son of a Comte de Lusignan, who found her near a fountain or spring in the forest of Colombiers, in Poitou. The marriage took place in a castle which she built around the fountain. They lived happily until, breaking a promise he had made before marriage that he would never intrude on her seclusion on Saturdays, Raymond discovered her, half serpent and half woman, in a bath. His breach of faith and breaking of the taboo compelled her to leave him. Until the destruction of Lusignan (1574) she was said to appear high on its towers, and to shriek thrice whenever the head of that family or the king of France lay dying. The story of Jean d'Arras, compiled (1387) by the order of his master, the Duc de Berry, differs somewhat from the legend. Stephan, a Dominican of the house of Lusignan, developed the work of Jean d'Arras, and made the story so famous that the families of Luxembourg, Rohan, and Sassenaye altered their pedigrees in order to be able to claim descent from her. She is connected with the legends of both the banshee and the mermaid.

Mélusine (mā.lu.zēn'). See under Lusignan.

Melville (mel'vil). Town in SE Saskatchewan, Canada, ab. 55 mi. W of the Manitoba boundary and ab. 85 mi. NE of Regina. Wheat farming is the chief occupation in the surrounding area. 4,458 (1951).

Melville, Viscount. Title held by various members of the Dundas family.

Melville or Melvill (mel'vil), Andrew. b. at Baldovie, Forfarshire, Scotland, Aug. 1, 1545; d. at Sedan, France, 1622. Scottish reformer, scholar, and Presbyterian leader. In 1559 he entered St. Mary's College, St. Andrews; in 1564 went to Paris and in 1566 to Poitiers, where he became regent of the College of St. Marceon; and in 1569 went to Geneva. He was principal of Glasgow University (1574–80) and of St. Mary's College, St. Andrews (1580–1606). He was an active leader in the organization of the Scottish Presbyterian Church, and assisted in drafting the second "book of discipline" in 1581. He reorganized the Scottish universities, particularly St. Andrews, of which he became rector in 1590. In the long struggle against the spiritual authority of the king and hierarchy, he was repeatedly imprisoned. He was sent to the Tower of London, April, 1607. At his release he was installed in the chair of Biblical theology at Sedan, 1611, and died there.

Melville, David. [Titles: 3rd Earl of Leven, 2nd Earl of Melville.] b. May 5, 1660; d. June 6, 1728. Scottish military commander; son of George Melville (c1634–1707), 1st Earl of Melville, and Catherine, Countess Leven, daughter of Alexander Leslie, 2nd Earl of Leven. He fought for William III at Killiecrankie (1689), where his regiment was stationed on the extreme right, thus remaining intact. He distinguished himself in the campaign in Ireland, and served (1692) in the campaign in Flanders. Appointed (1706) commander in chief of the forces in Scotland, he suppressed (1708) the Jacobite rising with troops placed at his disposal by John Churchill, Duke of Marlborough. He was deprived (1712) of his offices by the Tory administration.

Melville, George. [Titles: 4th Baron and 1st Earl of Melville.] b. c1634; d. May 20, 1707. Scottish nobleman. He joined (1679) the Duke of Monmouth's army against the Covenanters, and urged the Covenanters to surrender without conflict. Implicated (1683) in the Rye House Plot, he escaped to the Netherlands and joined William, Prince of Orange (later William III of England). He was secretary of state (1689) for Scotland and, as commissioner (1690) to the Scottish parliament, attempted to secure the good will of the Presbyterians for the king. He was lord privy seal in 1691.

Melville, George Wallace. b. Jan. 10, 1841; d. March 17, 1912. American naval officer and arctic explorer. He entered the navy as assistant engineer in 1861, served in the Civil War, and became engineer in chief of the navy in 1887. He joined the Jeannette expedition to the arctic regions in 1879, commanded the only boat's crew which escaped from the ship to the Lena delta, and later led a relief expedition which recovered the records of the Jeannette and the bodies of its commander, George W. De Long, and others. He served as chief engineer in the expedition that rescued (1884) Adolphus W. Greely in the Arctic. He was chief (1887–1903) of the bureau of steam engineering in the navy and had much to do with the modernizing of the fleet. He retired in 1903.

Melville, Herman. b. at New York, Aug. 1, 1819; d. there, Sept. 28, 1891. American romancer and poet. Owing to his father's early death and the poverty of the family, his formal education was cut short in his teens, and in 1839 he went to sea as a "boy" on an American merchant vessel, the St. Lawrence, for a voyage to Liverpool and back. In 1841 he became a foremasthand on a New Bedford whaler, the Acushnet, and spent a year and a half before the mast, mostly in the Pacific. In 1842, after jumping ship, Melville lived for a few weeks among the Polynesians of the Taipi valley on the Marquesan island of Nuku Hiva. Later he spent some months on other whalers, roamed about Tahiti and Moorea in the Society Islands, and lived for a time at Honolulu. There, in 1843, he joined the crew of an American man-of-war, the United States, on which, in 1844, he returned to the U.S. In 1846 his first book, Typee, was a great popular success. It was followed by such works as Omoo (1847), Mardi (1849), Redburn (1849), and White-Jacket (1850), some of which were almost equally successful. In 1847 Melville married Elizabeth Shaw, of Boston, and after living for three years at New York, removed in 1850 to Pittsfield, Mass., which remained his home until 1863. In the former year he became acquainted with Nathaniel Hawthorne, whose friendship proved to be a source of great encouragement, and in 1851 Melville published his most important book, Moby Dick. It proved to be relatively a failure, however, and later works, such as Pierre (1852), Israel Potter (1855), The Piazza Tales (1856), and The Confidence Man (1857), were either denounced or ignored. After a journey to Europe and Palestine in 1856–57 Melville lived quietly at Pittsfield until his final move to New York in 1863. He now turned to the writing of verse, and in 1866 published a volume of poems dealing with the Civil War, Battle-Pieces and Aspects of the War. In 1876 he published a long narrative-philosophical poem, Clarel, based on his Near Eastern travels. From 1866 to 1885 he served as a district inspector for the U.S. Customs Office at New York. Two further volumes of poems, John Marr and Other Sailors (1888) and Timoleon (1891), were published privately, and a remarkable short novel, Billy Budd, Foretopman, the work of his very last years, was found among his papers and published in 1924. After a great initial success, Melville sank into obscurity, as a writer, during the whole later part of his life, and even when he was remembered it was as the author of his first few books rather than of Moby Dick. Though he was never completely forgotten, it was only at the time of World War I that his work was rediscovered by readers and writers in large numbers, and that it became clear, for the first time, that Moby Dick belonged among the two or three very great books produced by Americans. The book appears now to be not only a magnificent record of one particularly vivid chapter in American history, the chapter of whales and whaling, but a work of profound imaginative force and complexity and of far-reaching mythic significance. Melville's earlier books remain among the best examples of the narrative of seagoing and exotic adventure; his later work in fiction (especially some of the Piazza Tales and Billy Budd) abounds in interest of a psychological, satirical, or symbolic sort, and his poems, even including the very long Clarel, have begun to be appreciated as more remarkable than they were long felt to be. But it is primarily on the strength of Moby Dick that Melville is likely to remain indefinitely as a figure not only in American but in world literature.

Melville or Melvill (mel'vil), James. b. July 26, 1556; d. at Berwick-upon-Tweed, England, Jan. 13, 1614. Scottish reformer. Because of his activities on behalf of Presbyterianism, he was long forbidden to enter Scotland. He was allowed to return in 1613, but died on his way at Berwick. Among his works are A Spiritual Propine of a Pastor to his People (1598), The Black Bastill, a poem, and the Diary, a valuable historical record.

Melville, Lake. Tidal lake in SE Labrador, Canada, connected by a channel with Hamilton Inlet. Goose Bay airport is located at the head of Goose Bay, the SW extremity of the lake. Length, ab. 120 mi.; area, ab. 1,300 sq. mi.

Melville, Lewis. Pseudonym of Benjamin, Lewis Saul.

Melville, Robert. [Title, 1st Baron Melville.] b. 1527; d. in December, 1621. Scottish politician. He opposed the marriage between Darnley and Mary, Queen of Scots, but was sent as Mary's representative to Queen Elizabeth. He visited (1567) Mary, Queen of Scots, at Lochleven Castle and urged her to renounce Bothwell. He was released as a noncombatant (1568) after his capture at Langside. As privy councilor (1582), he urged Queen Elizabeth to spare Mary's life. He was acting chancellor (1589), and extraordinary lord of session (1594). He accompanied (1603) James VI to England when he became James I of England.

Melville Bay. Embayment of Baffin Bay, indenting the coast of NW Greenland. The inland ice sheet here reaches the sea, forming a long ice front along the coast.

Melville Island. Island N of the North Territory of Australia, E of the Coburg Peninsula. It forms the NW side of Van Diemen Gulf.

Melville Island. Large island of the Parry Island Group of the Arctic Archipelago, Canada. Area, ab. 16,164 sq. mi.

Melville of Hallhill (hôl'hil), Sir James. b. 1535; d. at his estate of Hallhill, Fifeshire, Scotland, Nov. 13, 1617. Scottish soldier, diplomat, and historical writer. He was privy councilor and gentleman of the bedchamber to Mary, Queen of Scots, and later held the same position in the court of Anne of Denmark, queen of James VI. His autobiography (Memoirs) is important historically.

Melville Peninsula. Peninsula in the NE part of the district of Keewatin, Northwest Territories, Canada, W of Foxe Channel, and separated from Baffin Island on the N by Fury and Hecla Strait.

Melville Sound. See Viscount Melville Sound.

Melvill van Carnbee (mel'vil vän kärn'bā), Baron Pieter. b. at The Hague, Netherlands, May 20, 1816; d. at Batavia, Java, Oct. 24, 1856. Dutch geographer, author of works on the hydrography and geography of the East Indies.

Melvin (mel'vin), Lough. Lake on the Irish Republic-Northern Ireland border, lying between County Fermanagh (Northern Ireland), and County Leitrim (Irish Republic), chiefly in the latter. Length, ab. 8 mi.; width, ab. 2 mi.

Melvindale (mel'vin.dāl). City in SE Michigan, in Wayne County: residential suburban community SW of Detroit, and adjoining Dearborn. 9,483 (1950).

Membij (mem'bij). See under Hierapolis, Syria.

Membré (mäⁿ.brā), Zenobius. b. at Bapaume, France, 1645; killed in Texas, c1687. French Roman Catholic missionary, companion of La Salle on his exploring expeditions in the Mississippi River valley.

Memel (mā'mẹl). [Lithuanian, Klaipeda.] City in W Lithuania, now under the administration of the U.S.S.R., formerly in East Prussia, situated at the entrance of the Kurisches Haff. It is the principal seaport of Lithuania, and has shipyards, and textile, paper, lumber, and food-processing industries. It was founded c1253. The Russians captured it in 1757 and in 1812. The treaty between England and Prussia was concluded here in 1807. It was administered by the League of Nations (1919–24) and by Lithuania (1924–39). In 1939 the city and adjoining territory were surrendered to Germany by Lithuania, but in 1945 were returned to Lithuania (which was now under Russia) in the partition of East Prussia. 38,900 (est. 1940).

Memel. German name of the lower course of the Neman.

Memel Territory. [German, Memelland (mā'mẹl.länt), Memelgebiet (-gẹ.bēt'').] Former free territory of E central Europe, bordering on the Baltic Sea between East Prussia and Lithuania. It was a part of Germany until 1918; was established as a territory under Allied control 1919–23; was seized and occupied by Lithuania in January, 1923; ceded by Lithuania to Germany under duress in March, 1939; retroceded to Lithuania in 1945. The only important city of the area is Memel, the population of which was predominantly German before World War II. The population of the country districts was predominantly Lithuanian. Since World War II the German minority has been expelled from the city. Area, ab. 1,100 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 154,700 (1939).

Memling (mem'ling), Hans. [Also: Memlinc, occasionally (wrongly) Hemling.] b. c1430; d. 1494. Flemish painter of Bruges, one of the leaders of the so-called school of Bruges. He apparently studied under Rogier van der Weyden and came to Bruges c1466 (according to tradition, he fled wounded from the battle of Nancy). Memling is noted for the clarity of his line, the warmth of his color, and his smooth style, rich in detail, as in landscape backgrounds to his portraits. His works include a Shrine of Saint Ursula (Bruges), considered his masterpiece, Seven Griefs of Mary (Turin), Seven Joys of Mary (Munich), Last Judgment (Florence), the Donne Triptych (Chatsworth), Last Judgment (Danzig), Madonnas, and portraits, such as that of Thomas Portinari and His Wife.

Memmi (mem'mē), Simone. See Martini or di Martino, Simone.

Memmingen (mem'ing.ẹn). City in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Bavaria, American Zone, in the Regierungsbezirk (government district) of Swabia, ab. 42 mi. SW of Augsberg: marketing center of a dairy district in the Bavarian Allgäu. It has woolen, knitwear, thread, furniture, leather, metal, and paper industries, and breweries. Contested between the Welfs and the Hohenstaufens in the early Middle Ages, it was a free imperial city from 1286 to 1802. The population increase in the period 1939–46 was 52.3 percent. 24,586 (1946). 25,343 (1950).

Memminger (mem'in.jẹr), Christopher Gustavus. b. in Württemberg, Germany, Jan. 9, 1803; d. March 7, 1888. American politician, Confederate secretary of the treasury (1861–64).

Memnon (mem'non). In Greek legend, an Ethiopian hero on the side of Priam in the Trojan War, slain by Achilles. He was a solar hero, son of Eos, Dawn, depicted as a youth of marvelous beauty and strength. His original home was said to be at Susa in Elam, where his temple or monument, the Memnonion, was situated. The Greeks gave his name to one of the colossi of Amenophis III at Thebes in Egypt, "the vocal Memnon," so called because the stone, when reached by the rays of the rising sun, was said to give forth a sound resembling that of a breaking chord.

Memnon. Character in John Fletcher's The Mad Lover. The play takes its name from him.

Memnonion (mem.nō'ni.on). See under Memnon, and under Abydos, Egypt.

Memoirs of a Cavalier. Historical romance by Daniel Defoe, published in 1720. According to Winston S Churchill, its method has been adopted for his volumes entitled The Second World War.

Memoirs of a Fox-Hunting Man. Autobiographical narrative, winner of the James Tait Black memorial prize and the Hawthornden prize, by Siegfried Sassoon. It was published in 1928.

Memoirs of an Infantry Officer. Autobiographical narrative by Siegfried Sassoon, published in 1930.

Memoirs of Carwin, the Biloquist (kär'win). Unfinished story by Charles Brockden Brown, published serially (1803–05) in The Literary Magazine and American Register and later reprinted at London (1822).

Memoirs of Martinus Scriblerus (mär.tī'nus skrib.lē'rus). See Martinus Scriblerus, Memoirs of.

Memoirs of P.P., Clerk of this Parish. See P.P., Clerk of this Parish, Memoirs of.

Memoranda During the War. Prose account of the Civil War, by Walt Whitman, published in 1875.

Memorial Day. [Also, Decoration Day.] American legal holiday celebrated on May 30 in most of the states, originally established to commemorate the dead of the Civil War, but now an occasion for honoring the memory of all dead American soldiers and sailors.

Memphis (mem'fis). In ancient geography, the early capital of Egypt. It was on the W bank of the Nile, ab. 13 mi. S of Cairo. It is said to have been built by Menes, first king of the Ist dynasty. In the IVth dynasty it was the capital. It suffered from the Hyksos invaders, and in the New Empire was second to Thebes. It was captured by the Assyrians and stormed by Cambyses. It continued to exist under the Roman Empire, but was gradually abandoned and ruined after the Mohammedan conquest. The ruins of Sakkara are near it.

Memphis. [Called the "Bluff City."] City in SW Tennessee, county seat of Shelby County, on the Mississippi River: largest city in the state and the most important river port between St. Louis and New Orleans. One of the leading U.S. hardwood and cotton centers, it is also important for the manufacture of cottonseed products. It is the seat of the medical, dental, and pharmacy schools of the University of Tennessee, Southwestern at Memphis, Memphis State College, Le Moyne College, and Christian Brothers College. The city was platted in 1819 on the site of old Fort Adams, built by the U.S. in 1797. In 1862 the city was taken by Union troops after a battle. Pop. of city, 292,942 (1940), 396,000 (1950); of urbanized area, 406,034 (1950).

Memphis. City in NW Texas, county seat of Hall County, SE of Amarillo: marketing center for an agricultural area producing cotton, feed, vegetables, and fruit. 3,810 (1950).

Memphis Convention. Convention (November, 1845) of Southern states held at Memphis, Tenn., for the purpose of discussing the economic and regional interests of the South. In his keynote address John C. Calhoun, who presided over the gathering, stressed the economic ties which must be forged between the agricultural states of the South and the West in order to form a political union against Northern domination. Calhoun's proposals, however, did not satisfy his states' rights audience, and the convention's proceedings were inconclusive. Calhoun's

Memphis Memorial is sometimes cited as being perhaps the most paradoxical pronouncement ever made by that firm adherent of strict construction. In it Calhoun called for federal river and harbor improvement in states along the Mississippi on the grounds that the Mississippi was virtually an inland sea and that such federal action was sanctioned by the commerce clause of the Constitution.

Memphremagog (mem.frẹ.mā'gog), Lake. Lake largely in the province of Quebec, Canada, but extending into N Vermont. It discharges by the rivers Magog and St. Francis into the St. Lawrence. Length, ab. 25 mi.; area, ab. 37 sq. mi., of which ab. 10 sq. mi. are in the U.S.

Mena (mē'nạ). City in W Arkansas, county seat of Polk County: shipping point for cotton and lumber. 4,445 (1950).

Mena (mā'nä), Juan de. b. at Córdoba, Spain, c1411; d. 1456. Spanish poet. He was the author of a didactic allegory, El Laberinto de Fortuna, sometimes called Las Trezientas or Las Tres Cientas ("The Three Hundred," in reference to the number of stanzas), published in 1496.

Menabrea (mā.nä.brā'ä), Count Luigi Federigo. [Additional title, Marchese di Valdora.] b. at Chambéry, France, Sept. 4, 1809; d. May 26, 1896. Italian general and statesman. He was appointed chief of the engineer corps in the Sardinian army at the beginning of the war of Sardinia and France against Austria in 1859, was made minister of marine in 1861, and was prime minister (1867–69), ambassador at London (1876–82), and ambassador at Paris (1882–92).

Menado (mā.nä'dō). [Also, Manado.] City in Indonesia, on Celebes, near the NE tip of the island: seaport exporting coffee, nutmeg, tropical woods, and rubber; chief commercial center of NE Celebes. It is the oldest center of Christianity in Indonesia, and has several mission schools. 27,544 (1930).

Menaechmi (mẹ.nek'mī). Comedy of Plautus, the plot of which turns upon the comical mistakes arising from the resemblance of twin brothers. It was translated into English in 1594 by "W.W." (William Warner). Shakespeare used its plot as the basis of his The Comedy of Errors.

Menaechmus (mẹ.nek'mus). fl. at Athens, c365–350 B.C. Greek mathematician. A pupil of Eudoxus, friend of Plato, and tutor of Alexander the Great, he is best known as the probable discoverer of the conic sections. None of his works has survived.

Ménage (mā.nàzh), Gilles. b. at Angers, France, Aug. 15, 1613; d. at Paris, July 23, 1692. French philologist. He wrote Origines de la langue française (1650), Origini della lingua italiana (1669), and Menagiana (1693).

Menahem (men'ạ.hem). King of Israel (c748–c738 B.C.). He was general under Zechariah, son of Jeroboam II, and obtained the throne by a revolution after having killed Shallum, the murderer of Zechariah. To secure his throne he applied for support to the Assyrian king Tiglathpileser III (in the Old Testament called Phul), for which he paid a thousand talents. From that time on the northern kingdom remained tributary to Assyria. In the Assyrian inscriptions he is mentioned by the name of Minihimmi of Samirina (Menahem of Samaria).

Menai Strait (men'ī). Narrow strait in NW Wales, separating Anglesey from Caernarvonshire. It connects Caernarvon Bay with Beaumaris Bay. The strait is crossed by the Britannia tubular railway bridge and a highway suspension bridge. The latter, built by Telford between 1819 and 1826, is 580 ft. long between the piers, and the roadway, supported by 16 chains, is 100 ft. above the high-tide level. It was reconstructed in 1940. Length of strait, ab. 14 mi.; width, from ab. 0.1 mi. to 1 mi.

Menam (me'näm'). [Also, Chao Phraya.] River in Thailand (Siam), which rises in N Thailand, near the border of Indochina, and flows S into the Gulf of Siam a few miles below Bangkok. Length, ab. 600 mi.

Menama (me.nä'mạ). See Manama.

Menan (mẹ.nan'). See Grand Manan.

Menander (mẹ.nan'dẽr). b. at Athens, 342 B.C.; said to have been drowned c291 B.C. Athenian comic poet, the chief of the writers of the "new comedy." He wrote more than 100 plays, each with its love story. The titles of some 80 are known, with numerous fragments available to modern scholars. Papyrus finds in Egypt have brought to light whole scenes and enable us to reconstruct a few plots, notably Epitrepontes ("The Arbitration") and Perikeiromene ("She Is Shorn of Her Locks"). In the former, a foundling infant, aided by slaves, recovers his rights and finds his parents, who had been estranged because of him. In the latter, a soldier-lover maltreats and loses his mistress, but regains her as wife after repentance. Through Plautus and Terence, Menander's influence passed to modern writers of comedy of manners. He won first prize only eight times, but was later extolled as supreme in depicting lively, natural characters in domestic difficulties. He took from Homer's Odyssey and from tragedy the theme of family reunion and recognition of lost relatives, but is original in his treatment of good women sinned against and men reformed by love for them.

Menangkabau (mā.näng.kä'bou). See Minangkabau.

Ménant (mā.nän), Joachim. b. at Cherbourg, France, April 16, 1820; d. at Paris, Aug. 30, 1899. French jurist and Assyriologist. He published Les Briques de Babylone (1859), Les Inscriptions cunéiformes (1860), Inscriptions de Hammourabi (1864), Exposé de la grammaire de la langue assyrienne (1868), Annales des rois d'Assyrie (1872), and, with Julius Oppert, La Grande Inscription de Khorsabad (1863).

Menant (mā.nänt'), José Miaja. See Miaja Menant, José.

Menantes (mā.nän'tes). Pseudonym of Hunold, Christian.

Menaphon: Camilla's Alarum to Slumbering Euphues (men'ạ.fon; kạ.mil'ạz; ū'fū.ēz). Love story by Robert Greene. It was published in 1589, and as Greene's Arcadia, or Menaphon in 1599. It contains his best lyrical verses.

Menapii (mẹ.nā'pi.ī). Ancient Gallic people in Gallia Belgica, formerly living in what is now Belgium and S Netherlands. They are mentioned by Julius Caesar as being the only Gallic people never to sue for peace during the whole Roman conquest of Gaul.

Menard (mẹ.närd'). Town in W central Texas, county seat of Menard County, ab. 130 mi. NW of Austin: shipping point for wool, mohair, and cattle. 2,685 (1950).

Ménard (mā.nàr), Auguste Émile René. b. at Paris, April 15, 1862; d. 1930. French painter. His works include landscapes, portraits, and other types. Of his pictures, L'Automne (1896) and Le Troupeau (1901) are in the Luxembourg Museum. Others are Le Jugement de Paris (1898), Orage sur la forêt (1900), Aigues-Mortes (1902), Paysage corse (1902), Chaine du Mont-Blanc (1905), Terre antique, le temple (1906), and Le Marais (1907).

Ménard, Louis Nicolas. b. at Paris, Oct. 19, 1822; d. there, Feb. 12, 1901. French scholar, poet, scientist, and artist. He was the author of numerous Hellenistic studies, studies in Biblical criticism and exegesis, and a translation of Hamlet. In 1846, experimenting chemically, he discovered collodion, but no use was made of the substance for some time.

Menard (mẹ.närd'), Michel Branamour. b. at Laprairie, Lower Canada (now Quebec), Dec. 5, 1805; d. Sept. 2, 1856. American pioneer and fur trader, remembered chiefly for his role in the development of Texas and for the founding of the city of Galveston City, Tex. He was a nephew of Pierre Menard.

Menard, Pierre. b. at St. Antoine, Quebec, Canada, Oct. 7, 1766; d. 1844. American politician and fur trader, first president (1812) of the Illinois senate and the first lieutenant governor (1818) of Illinois. He is remembered also for his skillful dealings with many Indian tribes. Previously he had organized (1809) the St. Louis Missouri Fur Company, and with Andrew Henry led (1810) the first organized invasion of trappers to the Three Forks of the Missouri.

Menasha (mẹ.nash'ạ). City in E Wisconsin, in Winnebago County, at the outlet of the Fox River from Lake Winnebago, ab. 14 mi. NE of Oshkosh: twin city of Neenah; manufactures include paper, printed matter, paperware, and machinery. 12,385 (1950).

Mencheres (meng'kẹ.rēz). See Menkure.

Mencius (men'shus). [Latinized from Meng-tse (mung'-dzu').] b. in what is now Shantung province, early in the 4th century B.C.; d. c289 B.C. Chinese philosopher, one of the most noted of the expounders of Confucianism. He appears to have studied under pupils of Confucius himself and at about the age of 40 to have begun traveling through the land teaching Confucian doctrine. He was a fearless champion of his message and did not hesitate to expound it before the strongest princes or to dispute with the most renowned sages. The prince, he held, was essentially meant to see to the well-being of his subjects, and if this were done, if men were educated, if war were eliminated, if there were enough to eat, then men would live among themselves at peace, for men were by nature righteous and benevolent, and their struggles were something that princes might eliminate. Mencius was the author of one of the Four Books, the classics written by the followers of Confucius; it is a compilation of his sayings. Since the 11th century A.D. Mencius has been venerated as one of the "four assessors."

Mencke (meng'kẹ) or Mencken (meng'kẹn), Johann Burkhard. b. at Leipzig, Germany, March 27, 1675; d. there, April 1, 1732. German scholar; son of Otto Mencke. He was historiographer to Frederick Augustus. He published Scriptores rerum Germanicarum, præcipue Saxonicarum.

Mencke or Mencken, Otto. b. at Oldenburg, Germany, March 22, 1644; d. at Leipzig, Germany, Jan. 29, 1707. German scholar, founder of the Acta Eruditorum in 1682.

Mencken (meng'kẹn), Henry Louis. b. at Baltimore, Md., Sept. 12, 1880—. American editor and satirist. He was a staff member of the Baltimore Morning Herald (1899–1905), the Baltimore Sun (1906–10), Evening Sun (1910–36), and of both Sun and Evening Sun (1936–41). He was also editor (1905–06) of the Baltimore Evening Herald, and literary critic (1908–23) and coeditor (1914–23) of Smart Set. He was a founder, with George Jean Nathan, coeditor, and editor of American Mercury (1924–33), and a contributing editor (1921–32) to The Nation. Mencken's caustic comments on the American scene made him famous; his work appeared principally in the green-covered American Mercury. He is the author of Ventures into Verse (1903), George Bernard Shaw—His Plays (1905), The Philosophy of Friedrich Nietzsche (1908), The Artist (1912), In Defense of Women (1917), The American Language (1918, 4th edition, revised, 1936, supplements I and II, 1945, 1948), Prejudices (in six series, 1919–27), Notes on Democracy (1926), Treatise on the Gods (1930), Treatise on Right and Wrong (1934), Generally Political (1944), Christmas Story (1946), and other books. He published the autobiographical volumes, Happy Days 1880–1892 (1939), Newspaper Days 1899–1905 (1941), and Heathen Days 1890–1936 (1943).

Mendaites (men'dạ.īts). See Mandaeans.

Mendaña de Neyra (men.dä'nyä dā nā'rä), Álvaro. [Also, Álvaro de Mendaña de Neyra.] b. at Saragossa, Spain, 1541; d. in the Solomon Islands, c1596. Spanish navigator. He discovered and named the Solomon Islands, and brought back exaggerated reports of their riches. In 1594 Philip II commissioned him governor of one of the islands. He sailed from Callao, Peru, on April 11, 1595, to colonize it, discovered and named the Marquesas group, and arrived at the Solomon Islands, where he died.

Mende (mänd). Town in S France, the capital of the department of Lozère, on the Lot River. It is an important tourist center. The Cathedral of Saint-Pierre was begun in 1365 by Pope Urban V, continued in the 15th century, partially destroyed in the religious wars, and rebuilt from 1599 to 1620. In the interior of the cathedral hang eight tapestries dating from 1706, representing the life of the Virgin Mary. The town has woolen industries. 7,003 (1946).

Mende (men'dā). [Also, Mendi (men'dē).] Mande-speaking people of W Africa, inhabiting SE Sierra Leone and W Liberia. Their population in Sierra Leone is estimated at ab. 560,000 (by T. N. Goddard, The Handbook of Sierra Leone, 1925). They are divided into numerous independent subgroups ruled by hereditary chiefs. Boys and girls are isolated from society for several years in secret initiation schools, known as Poro for boys and Sande for girls, in which they are trained for their future roles as adult men and women. The Mende practice hoe agriculture, and their principal food is rice.

Mendel (men'dẹl), David. Original name of Neander, Johann August Wilhelm.

Mendel, Gregor Johann. b. at Heinzendorf, near Odrau, Austrian Silesia, July 22, 1822; d. at Brünn, Jan. 6, 1884. Austrian botanist, noted for his experimental study of the problem of heredity, the results of which he formulated in a law of ancestral inheritance which bears his name. His experiments with the garden pea led to findings which constitute the basis of modern genetics. He entered the order of Augustinians at Brunn in 1843, and later became abbot. He published Versuche über Pflanzenhybriden (1865) and Über einige aus künstlicher Befruchtung gewonnene Hieracium-Bastarde (1869). The scientific importance of these essays was not recognized until about 1900, when they were advanced by Karl Erich Correns, Hugo de Vries, and others. Briefly stated, Mendel's laws, the results of years of painstaking recording of the several characteristics through many generations of plants, and of very carefully controlled breeding of the plants, indicate that each characteristic is transmitted from parent to offspring independently of other characteristics, that the individual receives from each parent one predisposing factor for each of the characteristics, that when these pairs of inherited factors differ it will often be true that one will appear as a dominant characteristic and the other will be recessive, that the individual will demonstrate the dominant characteristic but may transmit the recessive to its offspring. Thus, if a tall parent is crossbred with a short parent, each parent being purebred, if tallness is dominant the offspring will all be tall. If these hybrid offspring are bred, however, statistically one-fourth of the third generation will be short, since one of the four will receive two short (recessive) factors, two will receive one tall and one short, and one will receive two tall; since the tallness characteristic is dominant, three will appear tall, although only one is purebred tall and two are hybrids.

Mendel, Lafayette Benedict. b. at Delhi, N.Y., Feb. 5, 1872; d. Dec. 9, 1935. American physiological chemist. Discoverer (1913) of vitamin A, he investigated widely in various aspects of nutrition, touching on metabolism, growth, and the functions of vitamin C.

Mendel—A Story of Youth. Novel by Gilbert Cannan, published in 1916.

Mendeleyev (men.dẹ.lā'ẹf), Dmitri Ivanovich. b. at Tobolsk, Siberia, Feb. 7, 1834; d. at St. Petersburg, Feb. 2, 1907. Russian chemist. He so presented the periodic table of the elements as to make it the cornerstone of chemistry. Others had presented very similar classifications, but Mendeleyev's great achievement lay in recognizing valence as the fundamental classifying characteristic, and in boldly considering the arrangement as a natural law with predictive powers rather than just a convenient classification. He was thus able, by hypothesis from gaps in the periodic table, to predict the properties of three elements then as yet undiscovered: gallium, scandium, and germanium. Similarly he questioned accepted atomic weights for certain elements, and was proved correct. He was professor at the technological institute of St. Petersburg (1863–90), and director of the Russian bureau of weights and measures (1893–1907).

Mendeli (men'de.lē). See Pentelikon.

Mendelssohn (men'dẹl.sọn; German, men'dẹl.sōn), Felix. [Full name, Jakob Ludwig Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy (-bär.tọl'dē).] b. at Hamburg, Germany, Feb. 3, 1809; d. at Leipzig, Germany, Nov. 4, 1847. German composer and musician; grandson of Moses Mendelssohn. He and his sister Fanny (later Madame Hensel) were first taught music by their mother, but in 1816, when they were 7 and 11 years old respectively, they were taken to Paris and placed under the instruction of Madame Bigot. On the return of Felix to Berlin he studied under Berger, Zelter, and Henning, and afterward under Rietz. He made his first appearance in public on Oct. 28, 1818, and was much applauded in the pianoforte part of a trio for pianoforte and two horns by Woelfl. He began to compose regularly in his 12th year, and the symphonies, quartets, concertos, and other works which he produced after this time were performed at the musical parties which took place at his father's house on alternate Sunday mornings, his brother and two sisters assisting; he, however, always conducted and generally played the pianoforte parts. Many great artists visited the house on these occasions. He visited Paris in 1825, and in 1829 triumphantly conducted J. S. Bach's Matthäus-Passion at Berlin, after much opposition, for the first time after the death of the composer. The same year he went to England, where he was enthusiastically received; and he traveled there and on the Continent till July, 1832. In 1833 he was made musical director at Düsseldorf, in 1834 member of the Berlin Academy of Fine Arts, and in 1835 conductor of the Gewandhaus concerts at Leipzig, where he became the idol of the town. He became engaged to Cécile Charlotte Sophie Jeanrenaud in 1836 and was married in 1837. He went to Berlin in 1841 to assist in founding an academy of arts and paid his ninth visit to England in 1846, for the purpose of producing Elijah (revisited England in 1847). On his return he heard of the death of his sister Fanny. This, with the severe work which was beginning to tell on him, produced illness and depression from which he did not recover. He left between one and two hundred works, among which are the opera The Wedding of Camacho (1825), songs, chamber and orchestral music, five symphonies, a violin concerto, two piano concertos, the oratorios Elijah (1846) and St. Paul (1836), overture (1826) and music (1843) for Midsummer Night's Dream, Märchen von der schönen Melusine (Story of the Beautiful Melusine, 1833), Die Hebriden (The Hebrides), Lieder ohne Worte (Songs without Words), music to Goethe's Walpurgisnacht, Antigone (1841), Œdipus Coloneus, and Athalie, sonatas, and fragments of the opera Die Lorelei and of the oratorio Christus. His letters from 1830 to 1832 were published in 1861; from 1833 to 1847, in 1863.

Mendelssohn, Moses. b. at Dessau, Prussia, Sept. 6, 1729; d. Jan. 4, 1786. German philosopher; grandfather of Felix Mendelssohn. Born of a family of Talmudists, his father being a scribe and teacher in the Jewish community, Moses Mendelssohn was reared in great poverty, and in poverty he lived for a time after going to Berlin in 1743. Moreover, the intensity of his early studies had weakened his general health. However, he obtained a position as tutor in the family of a wealthy Jewish silk merchant, presently became an accountant with the latter's firm, and by 1750 was a partner in the business. But knowledge remained always his great passion, and with the easing of his material circumstances the range of his studies increased. His learning brought him the friendship of such contemporaries as Gotthold Ephraim Lessing and Christoph Martin Wieland, and in later years younger men like Johann Gottfried von Herder and Friedrich Heinrich Jacobi looked up to him. Lessing's admiration was especially great, and his famous drama Nathan the Wise is a literary monument to Mendelssohn, who was the original of its hero. Mendelssohn may be said to have had a fourfold importance. As a Jewish theologian he has been compared to Maimonides, for like that great medieval commentator, he gave a new turn to Jewish religious thought, a turn toward rationalism after a long period when, in the hard conditions of ghetto existence, Judaism had become more and more overlaid with superstition. His principal work in this field was Jerusalem; oder, Über religiöse Macht und Judentum. Mendelssohn moreover perceived the importance (at that time, from the Jewish viewpoint, the urgency) of arousing Jews to a knowledge of the life about them, and, as well, of winning sympathetic Gentile understanding of Jewish culture. His scholarly translations of the Pentateuch and of the Psalms into German were most influential in bridging the Jewish-Gentile cultural gulf. His third importance lay in his writings on aesthetic subjects. And finally, he was recognized as one of the foremost philosophers of his century. When the Berlin Academy of Sciences awarded him a prize for his essay Über die Evidenz der metaphysischen Wissenschaften, Immanuel Kant was among his unsuccessful competitors. Other of his philosophical works were published as Philosophische Gespräche (1755) and Philosophische Schriften (1761). His principal work in this field was Phädon; oder über die Unsterblichkeit der Seele (1767), a summary of all that religion, reason, and experience urge in support of belief in the immortality of the soul. The Berlin Academy elected him a member, but Frederick II (Frederick the Great), resenting Mendelssohn's unfavorable comments on his poetry and on his habitual use of French and neglect of the German language, refused to ratify the election, alleging a repugnance toward the idea of including a Jew in the Academy. At his death, however, Moses Mendelssohn was widely mourned as "the German Socrates."

Menden (men'dẹn). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the province of Westphalia, Prussia, ab. 50 mi. NE of Cologne: metal, machinery, chemical, lumber, knitwear, and rubber-goods industries; also manufactures of Catholic devotional articles. 23,007 (1950).

Mendenhall (men'dẹn.hôl), Thomas Corwin. b. near Hanoverton, Ohio, Oct. 4, 1841; d. at Ravenna, Ohio, March 22, 1924. American physicist. He was professor of physics and mechanics at Ohio University (1873–78), when he became professor of physics in the Imperial University at Tokyo, Japan. He returned to the U.S. in 1881, and resumed his chair at Ohio University. He held a professorship in the U.S. signal service (1884–86), when he became president of the Rose Polytechnic Institute, Terre Haute, Ind. He was superintendent of the U.S. Coast Survey (1889–94), and president of the Worcester Polytechnic Institute (1894–1901).

Mendenhall, Walter Curran. b. at Marlboro, Ohio, Feb. 20, 1871—. American geologist. He was associated (1894–1943) with the U.S. Geological Survey as chief geologist (1922–31) and director (1931–43).

Menderes (men.de.res'). Modern Turkish name of the Maeander, and also of the Scamander.

Menderes, Little. See under Caÿster.

Mendes (men'dēz). In ancient geography, a city in Egypt, situated in the Nile delta ab. 100 mi. E of Alexandria.

Mendès (mäⁿ.des), Catulle. b. at Bordeaux, France, May 22, 1841; d. at St.-Germain, France, Feb. 8, 1909. French poet, novelist, and dramatist, one of the founders of the Parnassian school of poetry. From 1893 he was dramatic critic of the Paris Journal. Among his works are Poésies (1872); the romances Le Roi vierge (1880), Méphistophéla (1890), La Maison de la vielle (1894), and Gog (1896); the dramas Les Mères ennemies (1882), La Femme de Tabarin (1887), La Reine Fiammette (1889), Médée (1898), and Scarron (1904); the librettos Gwendoline (1886; music by Chabrier), Isoline (1888; music by Messager), La Carmélite (1902; music by Hahn), Le Fils de l'étoile (1904; music by Erlanger), and Ariane (1906; music by Massenet); and Le Mouvement poétique 1867–1900 (1903).

Mendes (men'dẹs), Frederic de Sola. b. at Montego Bay, Jamaica, British West Indies, 1850; d. at New Rochelle, N.Y., 1927. American rabbi and author. One of the founders of The American Hebrew, he served (1879–85) on its editorial board. Author of Outlines of Jewish History, Synagogue and School, and A Hebrew's Reply to the Missionaries.

Mendès-France (mäⁿ.des.fräⁿs), Pierre. b. at Paris, Jan. 11, 1907—. French political leader, best known as French delegate (1947 et seq.) to the United Nations Economic and Social Council and as French governor of the International Monetary Fund. He was a Radical-Socialist deputy (1932–40), joined (1940) the Free French movement, holding several ministerial posts (1943–45), and was elected a deputy under the Fourth Republic (1946 et seq.). He was executive director (1946) of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

Mendesian Goat (men.dē'zhạn). In Egyptian mythology, one of the three most famous sacred animals, the others being the bulls Apis and Mnevis. He was called the Ram, and the seat of his cult was Mendes in the Nile delta. He was held to be a manifestation of Osiris; the living animal was regarded as an incarnation of the god, and when it died, there was ritual mourning.

Mendes Pinto (mān'dẹsh pēn'tō), Fernão. See Pinto, Fernão Mendes.

Méndez (men'des), Miguel Abadía. b. 1867—. President (1926–30) of Colombia.

Mendiburu (men.dē.bō'rō), Manuel de. b. at Lima, Peru, 1805; d. there, Jan. 21, 1885. Peruvian general and historian. He fought (1821–30) in the war against Spain, was minister of war under Gamarra, of finance under Echenique, special envoy to Europe (1851) and minister to Bolivia and Chile. His Diccionario histórico-biográfico del Perú is a work of the highest value: the first part, including the Inca and colonial periods, was published (1874) in eight volumes.

Mendieta (men.dyā′tä), Carlos. b. 1873—. Cuban political leader, provisional president (1934–35) of Cuba. He participated in the revolution (1895–98) against Spain, was leader of the Liberal Party, and attacked the administrations of Menocal and Machado. He opposed the radical regime of Grau San Martín, and became provisional president (Jan. 18, 1934–December, 1935), supported by Fulgencio Batista.

Mendieta, Geronimo de. b. at Victoria, Guipúzcoa, Spain, c1530; d. at Mexico City, May 9, 1604. Spanish Franciscan author. He is best known for his Historia Eclesiastica Indiana, first published in 1870 with notes by Icazbalceta. It is a work of great historical value.

Mending Wall. Poem in blank verse by Robert Frost, published in his North of Boston (1914).

Mendinueta y Musquiz (men.dē.nwā′tä ē mös.kēth′), Pedro. Spanish administrator, viceroy of New Granada (1797–1803).

Mendip Hills (men′dip). Range of hills in SW England, in Somersetshire, SW of Bristol. Highest elevation, 1,068 ft.

Mendive (men.dē′bā), Rafael María. b. at Havana, Cuba, Oct. 24, 1821; d. at Matanzas, Cuba, 1886. Cuban poet and journalist.

Mendocino (men.dō.sē′nō), Cape. Westernmost point of California, on the NW coast. It was named for Antonio de Mendoza.

Mendota (men.dō′tạ). City in N Illinois, in La Salle County, ab. 80 mi. SW of Chicago: processing and shipping center of an agricultural district. 5,129 (1950).

Mendota, Lake. Lake in S Wisconsin, in Dane County, bordering Madison on the NW. Area, ab. 15 sq. mi.

Mendoza (men.dō′sä). See also Ciudad Mendoza, Mexico.

Mendoza. Province in W Argentina, bordering on Chile. The W part lies in the Andes and their foothills. The climate is quite dry and most of the population is concentrated in oases in the foothill region which are watered by streams descending from the Andes. Petroleum is produced, as well as raisins, wine, and alfalfa. Capital, Mendoza; area, ab. 58,239 sq. mi.; pop. 588,231 (1947).

Mendoza. City in W Argentina, capital of Mendoza province, ab. 600 mi. W of Buenos Aires, situated at an elevation of ab. 2,475 ft., in an irrigated valley at the foot of the Andes. Mendoza is a center for the wine trade. 97,496 (1947).

Mendoza (men.dō′thä), Ana de. See Éboli, Princesa de.

Mendoza, Andrés Hurtado de. See Hurtado de Mendoza, Andrés.

Mendoza, Antonio de. b. c1485; d. at Lima, Peru, July 21, 1552. Spanish administrator. He was the first viceroy of New Spain, or Mexico (October, 1535–November, 1549), and viceroy of Peru (Sept. 23, 1551–1552). In the former country settlements were pushed to the north and northwest (now Colorado and New Mexico) with Coronado's expedition, and new mines of great wealth were discovered. In Peru Mendoza ordered the preparation of the code of laws called the Libro de Tasas. He introduced (1535) the printing press into the New World.

Mendoza, Antonio de. b. c1590; d. 1644. Spanish dramatist and lyric poet, secretary of state, and member of the Inquisition.

Mendoza, Diego Hurtado de. b. at Granada, Spain, c1503; d. at Valladolid, Spain, 1575. Spanish diplomat, politician, novelist, historian, and poet. He studied at Granada and Salamanca, and in Italy, took part in the battle of Pavia in 1525, was ambassador of Charles V to England in 1537 and to Venice in 1538, was imperial plenipotentiary at the Council of Trent, and was ambassador to the papal court in 1547, and governor of Siena. He lived at the court of Philip II until 1564. His works include Guerra de Granada (War of Granada, 1776), and poems (1610). Lazarillo de Tormes, famous picaresque novel, has often been attributed to him, but no evidence for the attribution is considered valid today.

Mendoza, Fernando Díaz de. b. at Muria, Spain, 1868—. Spanish actor and manager. He married Spain's leading actress, María Guerrero, in 1896, and founded the Guerrero-Mendoza Company with her. He was the leading actor of the repertory at the Teatro Español (1896–1909) and the Teatro de la Princesa (1909–24), made 22 tours in South America, and founded the Cervantes Theatre at Buenos Aires.

Mendoza, Garcia Hurtado de. See Hurtado de Mendoza, Garcia.

Mendoza, Íñigo López de. See Santillana, Marqués de.

Mendoza, Juan Gonzalez de. b. at Toledo, Spain, c1540; d. at Popayán, in New Granada (now Colombia), 1617. Spanish prelate and author, a member of the Augustine order. He was in China from 1580 to 1583, and on his return spent two years in Mexico; subsequently he was bishop of the Lipari Islands, of Chiapas, and of Popayán. His account of China, published in 1586, contains also much of interest concerning America.

Mendoza, Lorenzo Suarez de. [Title, Count of La Coruña.] b. c1510; d. at Mexico City, June 19, 1582. Spanish nobleman, viceroy of New Spain, or Mexico, from Oct. 4, 1580.

Mendoza, Pedro de. b. at Guadix, Granada, Spain, c1487; d. at sea, 1537. Spanish captain. After Charles V appointed him military governor of the territory extending from the Río de la Plata to the Strait of Magellan, he undertook (1534) at his own expense the colonization of the region about the Plata. He sailed from Sanlúcar de Barrameda, Spain, on Sept. 1, with 14 ships and 2,650 men, and founded the first colony of Buenos Aires (Feb. 2, 1535). The Spaniards suffered greatly from the Indian attacks and from famine. Mendoza finally left for Spain with a few companions, and died a maniac on the voyage. The colony, removed to Asunción, Paraguay, subsequently prospered and led to the settlement of that part of South America.

Mendoza Caamaño (kä.ä.mä′nyō), José Antonio de. [Title, Marquis of Villa Garcia.] b. c1680; d. at sea, 1746. Spanish diplomat and statesman. He was ambassador to Venice, viceroy of Catalonia, and from Jan. 4, 1736, to July 12, 1745, viceroy of Peru.

Mendoza Codex (men.dō′sä). Famous illustrated Aztec manuscript in the form of a copy on European paper with a Spanish translation. It was sent from Mexico by the viceroy Antonio de Mendoza as a present to Charles V, and was later published in England by Purchas (1625). Subsequently it became a part of the Bodleian Library, and was published in the Kingsborough collection. Other copies (one perhaps the original) are known. The manuscript relates to the history of the Aztecs, their domestic and civil economy, and especially the place of the individual in that economy.

Mendoza y Luna (men.dō′thä ē lō′nä), Juan de. See Hurtado de Mendoza y Luna, Juan Manuel.

Mendoza y Pimentel (ē pē.men.tel′), Diego Carrillo de. See Carrillo de Mendoza y Pimentel, Diego.

Mendrisio (men.drē′zyō). Town in S Switzerland, in the canton of Ticino, near the S end of Lake Lugano. 4,265 (1941).

Menelaus (men.ẹ.lā′us). In Greek legend, a king of Sparta; brother of Agamemnon, and husband of Helen. After the abduction of Helen by Paris, Menelaus enlisted the help of the Greeks to regain her. Thus began the Trojan War. After the fall of Troy Menelaus returned with Helen to Sparta.

Menelaus. Brother of Agamemnon, a character in Shakespeare's Troilus and Cressida.

Menelaus, Onias. See Onias Menelaus.

Menelik II (men′e.lik). [Also, Menelek II (-lek).] b. at Ankober, Ethiopia, Aug. 17, 1844; d. at Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, Dec. 22, 1913. Emperor of Ethiopia. In 1889 he signed the treaty of Uccialli (Uchali), which placed the empire under Italian domination. He abrogated this treaty in 1893 and, after the defeat of the Italians at Aduwa, March 1, 1896, established the independence of Ethiopia. He concluded (1897) a commercial treaty with France, and in the same year accorded "most-favored nation" treatment to Great Britain and her colonies. He signed an agreement (1902) establishing the boundary between Ethiopia and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, and one (1908) with Italy defining the limits of Italian Somaliland.

Menéndez (mā nen′des), Manuel. b. c1790; d. after 1845. Peruvian politician. He was president of the council of state under Gamarra in 1840, and on Gamarra's death (Nov. 20, 1841) became, by the constitution, acting president of Peru. He was deposed by Torrico in August 1842, but was restored by Ramón Castilla in 1844, and held the post until Castilla's election, April 20, 1845.

Menéndez de Avilés (mā.nen'deth dā ä.bē.lās'), Pedro. b. at Avilés, Asturias, Spain, 1519; d. at Santander, Spain, Sept. 17, 1574. Spanish captain. He was captain general (1554) of the Indies fleet under Philip II, and served that monarch in many important enterprises (including three trips to America) before he was disgraced and imprisoned in1563; he regained favor, and in 1565 was appointed governor of Cuba and Florida, with orders to colonize the latter country. He sailed from Cádiz, June 29, 1565, with 19 vessels and 1,500 men. The fleet was scattered by a storm, and he reached Florida with only seven ships. He founded St. Augustine (Sept. 8, 1565), captured a colony of French Protestants on the St. John's River and massacred nearly all of them, and, after the privations of the first winter had passed, succeeded in establishing Spanish rule firmly in Florida. In subsequent voyages Menéndez founded a post on Port Royal Bay, now in South Carolina, and left a mission on Chesapeake Bay. The latter was destroyed by the Indians, and in 1572 he ascended the Chesapeake and Potomac and killed many of them. In 1574 he was put in command of a large Spanish fleet destined to make a descent on the Netherlands, but he died soon after.

Menéndez y Pelayo (mā.nen'deth ē pā.lä'yō), Marcelino. b. at Santander, Spain, Nov. 3, 1856; d. there, May 19, 1912. Spanish literary critic, director of the Biblioteca Nacional at Madrid. He possessed extraordinary erudition and combined a historical and aesthetic approach in his evaluation of Spanish and Spanish-American writers. He worked untiringly, and from the age of 20 published a prodigious number of articles, and volumes of criticism and histories of Spanish literature. Author of La Historia de las ideas esteticas en España (History of Aesthetic Ideas in Spain, 1883–1911). He edited Antologia de liricos castellanos (1890–1908) and translated Shakespeare and Cicero.

Menenius Agrippa (mę.nē'ni.us ą.grip'ą). See Agrippa, Menenius.

Meneptah (mę.nep'tä). See Merneptah.

Menes (mē'nēz). [Also, Meni.] Founder of the 1st dynasty of Egyptian kings. His date has been variously given by Egyptologists from 5702 B.C. to 2691. Breasted gives the date of his accession as 4000. Apparently it was Menes who combined the separate kingdoms of Upper and Lower Egypt into one. He is credited with founding a city on the site of ancient Memphis.

Menevia (mę.nē'vi.ą). Ancient name of St. David's, Wales.

Menezes (mę.nā'zęsh), Francisco Barreto de. See Barreto de Menezes, Francisco.

Menezes, Luiz de. b. at Lisbon, Portugal, July 22, 1632; committed suicide there, May 26, 1690. Portuguese historian, general, and politician.

Menezes, Tobias Barreto de. See Barreto, Tobias.

Menfi (men'fē). [Also, Menfrici (men.frē'chē).] Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Agrigento, situated near the Mediterranean Sea between Agrigento and Marsala. It produces cotton, grain, olives, and wine. Pop. of commune, 10,879 (1936); of town, 10,655 (1936).

Mengelberg (meng'ęl.berch), Josef Willem. b. at Utrecht, Netherlands, March 28, 1871; d. at Chur, Switzerland, March 21, 1951. Dutch musical conductor. He became successively city music director of Lucerne (1891), conductor of the Amsterdam Concertgebouw Orchestra (1895) and the Choral Society (1898) at Amsterdam, and conductor of the Museum Concerts (1907) and the Cecilia Society (1908) at Frankfort on the Main. He conducted the concerts of the Philharmonic Society, New York, in 1905, was conductor (1911–14) of the London Symphony Orchestra and Royal Philharmonic Society, and conducted (1921–29) the National Symphony and New York Philharmonic. He was dismissed as conductor of the Amsterdam orchestra after World War II because of his alleged Nazi sympathies.

Menger (meng'ėr), Anton. b. at Maniow, Austria, Sept. 12, 1841; d. at Rome, Feb. 7, 1906. Austrian jurist and politician.

Menghin (men.gēn'), Oswald. b. at Meran (now Merano), in the Tyrol, April 18, 1888—. Austrian historian. Author of Einführung in die Vorgeschichte Böhmens und Mährens (Introduction to Prehistoric Times of Bohemia and Moravia, 1926) and Weltgeschichte der Steinzeit (World History of the Stone Age, 1931).

Mengs (mengs), Anton Raphael. b. at Aussig (now Ústí), in Bohemia, March 12, 1728; d. at Rome, June 29, 1779. German historical and portrait painter. Augustus III, king of Poland, made him his court painter at the age of 21, and he went soon after to Rome, where he was made (c1754) director of the school of painting then recently established there. From this time his reputation was great, and in 1761 he was made court painter to Charles III of Spain, who had urged him to go to Madrid. He worked chiefly at Rome and in Spain. Among his works are decorations in the banqueting hall of Madrid, and various works at Dresden, the chief of which is an Ascension.

Meng-tse (mung'dzu'). A Chinese name of Mencius.

Mengtsz (mung'dzu'). River port and former treaty port in S China, in the province of Yunnan, ab. 130 mi. SE of the city of Kunming, near the border of Indochina. It is a great tin-exporting port, sending the tin out by way of the Red River. 193,004 (1931).

Meni (mē'nę). See Menes.

Menin (mę.nań). French name of Meenen.

Men in Darkness. Collection of short stories by James Hanley, published in 1931.

Meninsky (mę.nin'ski), Bernard. b. in Russia, July 25, 1891—. English painter and art instructor.

Men in White. Play by Sidney Kingsley, produced and published in 1933 and awarded a Pulitzer prize in 1934.

Meninx (mē'ningks). Ancient name of Djerba.

Menippus (mę.nip'us). b. at Gadara, Syria; fl. probably c250 B.C. Cynic philosopher, originally a slave, noted for his satirical jests upon the follies of mankind, especially of philosophers. His writings, which combined prose and verse, are lost.

Menjou (men'jö, män'-), Adolphe Jean. b. at Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 18, 1890—. American actor. He fought in World War I and served in the army of occupation in Germany. Menjou has been a motion-picture star (c1913 et seq.) since the early days of the silent film. Among his earlier pictures were The Sheik, The Three Musketeers, and A Woman of Paris. It was in the last-named (1924) that he first played the role of the blasé sophisticate with whom he was later identified. A fluent speaker of French, Menjou appeared (1930) in the first talking picture made in France, and in the first bilingual picture made there (1930; French and English). For many years he has been known for his taste in dress, and appropriately chose for his autobiography (1948) the title It Took Nine Tailors.

Menkalinan (men"ką.li.nan', men.kal'i.nan). Second-magnitude star β Aurigae. The star is one of the first spectroscopic binaries to have been discovered.

Menkar (men'kär). [Also, Menkab (men'käb).] Star of 2½ magnitude, α Ceti, in the nose or jaw of the sea-monster.

Menken (meng'kęn), Adah Isaacs. b., probably at Milneburg, La., 1835; d. at Paris, Aug. 10, 1868. American actress, best remembered for the part of Mazeppa, which she acted (1861 et seq.) in America and Europe. She married (1856) Alexander Isaac Menken, whom she left (1859) and married (1859) the fighter John Carmel Heenan. A scandal was created when Menken announced (1860) that he had never divorced her, but he subsequently did. Her friends included Walt Whitman, Bret Harte, A. C. Swinburne, and George Sand. Author of poems, collected in Infelicia (1868).

Menkib (men.kib'). See under Scheat.

Menkure (men.kö'rā). [Also: Menkaura (men.kou'rą), Menkaure (men.kou'rā), Menkawra (men.kou'rą), Mencheres (men.kir'ēz), Latin, Mycerinus (mī.sę.rī'nus), Greek, Mykerinos (mī.kę.rī'nos).] fl. c2800 B.C. Egyptian king of the IVth dynasty, builder of the third of the great pyramids at Giza. The pyramid, smallest of the three, is the southwesternmost. Menkure's reign apparently marks the decline of the dynasty, but whereas Khufu and Khafre are reputed to have been bad kings, Menkure is said to have been a just and pious ruler whose reign was cut short; he seems to have reigned for 18 years.

Menlo Park (men'lō). City in C California, in San Mateo County: a southern residential suburb of San Francisco. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population grew from 3,258 (1940) to 13,587 (1950).

Menlo Park. Unincorporated community in NE New Jersey, ab. 7 mi. NE of New Brunswick. It is the site of a state park and museum, with a memorial tower, commemorating the site of the workshop of Thomas A. Edison, where he perfected the incandescent electric light bulb in 1879.

Menninger (men'ing.ėr), Karl Augustus. b. at Topeka, Kan., July 22, 1893—. American psychiatrist. Author of The Human Mind (1930), Man Against Himself (1938), Love Against Hate (1942), and other books. He was collaborator on Why Men Fail (1918), The Healthy-Minded Child (1930), and America Now (1938).

Mennonites (men'ọn.īts). Christian denomination which originated in Friesland in the early part of the 16th century, and holds doctrines of which Menno Simons (1492–1559) was the chief original exponent. The leading features of the Mennonite bodies have been baptism on profession of faith, refusal of oaths, of civic offices, and of the support of the state in war, and a tendency to asceticism. Many of these beliefs and practices have been modified. The sect became divided in the 17th century into the Upland (Obere) Mennonites, or Ammanites, and the Lowland (Untere) Mennonites, the former being the more conservative and rigorous. Members of the sect are found in the Netherlands, Germany, and elsewhere in Europe, and especially in the U.S. In the last-named country they are divided into Untere (or Old) Mennonites, Obere Mennonites (or Ammanites), New Mennonites, Evangelical Mennonites, and Reformed Mennonites (or Herrians).

Menno Simons (men'ō sē'môns) (or Symons or Simonis) (sē'mō.nis). b. at Witmarsum, Friesland, 1492; d. at Oldesloe, Holstein, Jan. 13, 1559. Friesian preacher and reformer, chief founder of the Mennonites, who take their name from him. He was ordained (c1516) a priest in the Roman Catholic Church, but in 1536, influenced by the teachings of Luther and the Anabaptists, he left the priesthood to become minister of a group of conservative Anabaptists at Groningen. He spent the remainder of his life as an Anabaptist missionary in Germany and the Netherlands. His works were published in 1681.

Meno (mē'nō). [Also, Menon (mē'non).] Dialogue of Plato; a conversation between Socrates, Meno (Menon), a slave of Meno, and Anytus upon the teachableness of virtue.

Menocal (men.ō.käl'; Spanish, mā.nō.käl'), Anicet Garcia. b. in Cuba, Sept. 1, 1836; d. at New York, July 20, 1908. American civil engineer, advocate (1877 et seq.) of an interoceanic canal through Nicaragua.

Menocal (mā.nō.käl'), Mario García. b. at Hanabana, Matanzas, Cuba, Dec. 16, 1866; d. at Havana, Cuba, Sept. 7, 1941. Cuban engineer and Conservative politician, president (1913–21) of Cuba. He participated in the revolution (1895–98) against Spain, was elected (1912) president, and reëlected (1916), the Liberals charging corruption and governmental interference. His administration was called a "businessman" government and was friendly to the U.S. A Liberal revolution (1917) was suppressed. A candidate (1924) for president, he was defeated by Machado, against whom he led (1931) an unsuccessful revolt. He opposed the administrations of Grau San Martin and Mendieta.

Men of Good Will. English title of Hommes de bonne volonté, Les.

Menoher (mẹ.nôr', mẹ.nō'ėr), Charles Thomas. b. at Johnstown, Pa., March 20, 1862; d. Aug. 11, 1930. American army officer. As brigadier general and major general in the National Army during World War I, he served with the Rainbow (42nd) division in the Lunéville sector, Baccarat sector, repulse of the German Champagne-Marne offensive, attack on the St.-Mihiel salient, and Meuse-Argonne offensive. He was named (1919) director of the air service at Washington, D.C.

Menominee (mẹ.nom'i.nē). City in the S part of the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, county seat of Menominee County, on Green Bay at the mouth of the Menominee River, across from Marinette, Wis., of which it is the twin city. It is a shipping point for fresh fish, and has manufactures of paper, machinery, furniture, and perambulators. 11,151 (1950).

Menominee River. River flowing SE to Green Bay, forming part of the boundary between Wisconsin and upper Michigan. Length, ab. 120 mi.

Menomini (mẹ.nom'i.ni). [Also, Menominee.] North American Indian tribe, formerly inhabiting NE Wisconsin and W Michigan, and speaking an Algonquian language. Their culture was Eastern Woodlands culture, and they took their name from their main article of subsistence, manomin (wild rice). Some 2,500 Menomini survive on reservations in NE Wisconsin.

Menomonie (mẹ.nom'ọ.ni). City in W Wisconsin, county seat of Dunn County, ab. 22 mi. NW of Eau Claire. It was platted in 1859. It is the seat of Stout Institute. 8,245 (1950).

Menon (mē'non). Killed c399 B.C. Thessalian mercenary, one of the leading generals in the expedition of Cyrus the younger. He was captured by Tissaphernes, tortured for a year, and then killed.

Menon (mẹ'nōn), Krishna K. V. b. 1897—. Indian author, journalist, and diplomat. Spokesman of the Congress Party in England during the period of Indian nationalism, he was Indian representative (1947–49) to Great Britain and Ireland and was appointed (1949) ambassador to China.

Menorca (mā.nôr'kä). Spanish form of Minorca.

Menotti (mẹ.not'i; Italian, mā.nôt'tē), Gian Carlo. b. at Cadegliano, Italy, July 7, 1911—. American composer. He studied at the Milan Conservatory and, after coming to the U.S. in 1928, at the Curtis Institute; he has taught (1941 et seq.) at the Curtis Institute. His compositions include the operas (for which he wrote his own librettos) Amelia Goes to the Ball (1936), The Old Maid and The Thief (1939, commissioned by the National Broadcasting Company), The Island God (1942), The Medium (1946, made into a motion picture 1951), The Telephone (1947, a chamber opera), The Consul (1950, winner of the 1950 Pulitzer prize for music), and Amahl and the Night Visitors (1951, written for television); the ballet Sebastian (1943); and a piano concerto (1945).

Menou (mẹ.nō), Jacques François, Baron de. b. at Boussay, Touraine, France, 1750; d. at Venice, Aug. 13, 1810. French general. He became (1800) commander of the army in Egypt, and was defeated at Alexandria (March 21, 1801) by the English under Sir Ralph Abercromby.

Menpes (mem'pẹs), Mortimer. b. in Australia, Feb. 22, 1860; d. April 1, 1938. British painter, etcher, and essayist, noted for his exotic scenes of the Near and Far East. He studied under Whistler. Among his principal paintings are The Bead-stringers, The Great Clock, Rouen, and Traghetto. His literary works include Whistler as I Knew Him (1904), Rembrandt (1905), and Sir Henry Irving (1906).

Menschliche Gesellschaft in ihren ethnosoziologischen Grundlagen (mensh'li.che gẹ.zel'shäft in ē'ren et"nō.zō"tsē.o.lō'gi.shen grunt'la.gen), Die. Ethnosociological work by Richard C. Thurnwald, published (1931–35) in five volumes. Assembling a vast body of material covering primitive cultures, the author applied a comparative analysis which has proved fruitful for the development of social and cultural generalizations.

Menschutkin (min.shöt'kin), Boris Nikolayevich. b. at St. Petersburg, 1874; d. 1938. Russian chemist and historian of chemistry. His work on aromatic hydrocarbons includes studies of cyclohexane dehydrogenation and the Friedel-Crafts reaction. His historical studies concentrated on the early Russian chemists.

Menschutkin, Nikolai Aleksandrovich. b. at St. Petersburg, 1842; d. there, 1907. Russian physico-organic chemist. He made extensive pioneer investigations of the relationship between the structure (particularly isomerism) of compounds and the rates of their chemical reaction (as esterification and amide formation) and physical properties.

Mensdorff-Pouilly-Dietrichstein (mens'dôrf pō.yē' dē'trich.shtīn), Count Albert von. b. at Lemberg, Austria (now Lvov, U.S.S.R.), Sept. 3, 1861; d. 1935. Austro-Hungarian diplomat. He was ambassador to Great Britain (1904–14). During World War I he negotiated with General J. C. Smuts in Switzerland (December, 1917), and he was the first Austrian delegate to the League of Nations.

Menshikov (men'shi.kȯf), Prince Aleksandr Danilovich. b. at Moscow, Nov. 16, 1672; d. at Berezovo, in Siberia, 1729 or 1730. Russian general and minister of state. He was of obscure origin, became a page at the court of Peter the Great, served with distinction against the Swedes, and in 1704 was promoted general. At the instance of Peter the Great he was also appointed a prince of the Holy Roman Empire. One of Peter's boon companions, a firm believer in the Westernization of Russia, and a very able administrator, he was also one of the most corrupt of Russian officials and was frequently in disgrace with Peter because of his frauds. On the death of Peter in 1725 he caused the empress dowager to be proclaimed empress under the title of Catherine I. She died in 1727, leaving him regent for her grandson Peter II. He was about to marry his daughter Mary to the emperor when the latter revolted against his domination, and exiled him to Siberia in 1727.

Menshikov, Prince Aleksandr Sergeyevich. b. Sept. 11, 1787; d. at St. Petersburg, May 2, 1869. Russian general, diplomat, and politician; great-grandson of Aleksandr Danilovich Menshikov. He served in the Napoleonic, Persian, and Turkish wars, and was commander of the Russian naval and military forces in the Crimea (1854–55). He was defeated at the Alma and at Inkerman in 1854.

Mentana (men.tä'nä). Village in the province of Roma, Italy, ab. 13 mi. NE of Rome. Here on Nov. 3, 1867, the Italian insurgents under Garibaldi, after gaining an advantage over the papal forces, were defeated by the French troops sent to the relief of Pope Pius IX. The former lost about 1,000 killed and wounded, the latter only 171.

Menteith (men.tēth'). Lowland district in S central Scotland, in Perthshire, lying between the rivers Teith and Forth, W of the Ochil Hills. Length, ab. 28 mi.; width, ab. 15 mi.

Menteith. Thane of Scotland, in Shakespeare's Macbeth.

Menteith, Sir John de. d. after 1329. Scottish knight who captured Sir William Wallace. He served (1296) in the movement opposing Edward I's conquest, for which he was imprisoned. He captured (1305) Wallace, with whom he had formerly been in league, and took him to London chained. He was appointed a representative of the Scots barons in the parliament of both nations.

Menteith, Loch. Small lake in S central Scotland, in SW Perthshire, in Menteith. In the lake are three islands, the largest of which has ruins of an Augustinian priory built in 1238. Another island has the ruins of a castle, formerly the stronghold of the earls of Menteith. Area, ab. 1 sq. mi.

Mentel (men'tęl) or Mentelin (men'tę.lin), Johann. German printer of Strasbourg in the 15th century. He was connected in business with Johann Gutenberg after the latter's quarrel with Johann Fust. After his death the claim that he was the inventor of printing was, without ground, made for him by his grandson.

Menten (men'tęn), Emile Ernest. b. at Brussels, Belgium, Nov. 7, 1882—. Dutch banker. He served (1922–29) in the Netherlands diplomatic service at Copenhagen. Bern, Vienna, and Paris. A member (1929 et seq.) of the banking firm of Heldring en Pierson at The Hague, he was treasurer of the National Crisis Committee and National Funds for Special Needs.

Menteur (mäⁿ.tėr), Le. [Eng. trans., "The Liar."] Comedy by Pierre Corneille, produced in 1643. La Suite du menteur (The Sequel to the Liar) came out in 1644 or 1645.

Menthon (mäⁿ.tôⁿ), François de. b. 1900—. French political leader and educator, commissioner of justice (1943 et seq.) in the Free French regime during World War II. Active in the Resistance movement, he escaped to Algiers, where he became a member of the De Gaulle cabinet. He served (1949) as a vice-president of the Council of Europe.

Menton (mäⁿ.tôⁿ). [Italian, Mentone (men.tō'nā).] Town in SE France, in the department of Alpes-Maritimes, beautifully situated on the Mediterranean near the Italian border, ab. 15 mi. NE of Nice. It is one of the chief winter resorts on the Côte d'Azur (French Riviera). It has a casino, regattas, and horse races. The small harbor imports coal and building materials. The quarter immediately behind the harbor was damaged during World War II. Menton was a part of the principality of Monaco until 1848, when it joined Sardinia; it passed to France in 1860. Pop. 13,864 (1946).

Mentor (men'tȯr). In Greek legend, an Ithacan to whom Odysseus, when about to depart for the Trojan War, entrusted the care of his house and the education of his son Telemachus. His name has become a synonym for a faithful adviser.

Mentu (men'tō). [Also, Ment (ment).] In Egyptian mythology, the falcon-headed god; the rising sun, associated with Ra, and as such called Mentu-Ra.

Mentuhotep (men'tö.hō'tep). [Also, Menthuhotep.] Name or surname of several Egyptian kings of the XIth dynasty, reigning at the close of the second millennium B.C. Mentuhotep V was the last king of the dynasty.

Mentuhotep. Royal architect in the time of Sesostris I (Senusret I, or Usurtesen I), Egyptian king of the XIIth dynasty. His tombstone is in the Gizeh Museum.

Menuhin (men'ū.in), Yehudi. b. at New York, Jan. 23, 1917—. American violinist. At the age of seven he appeared (1924) as soloist at a San Francisco Symphony Young People's concert; at the age of eight he played in a recital at the Manhattan Opera House, New York. He made (1934) a world tour which took him to 73 cities. After a short period of retirement he returned (1937) to the concert stage. He has appeared at various times with his sister Hephzibah (b. 1920), a pianist.

Menu von Minutoli (mā'nö fon mē.nö'tō.lē), Baron Heinrich. Title of Minutoli, Heinrich.

Men Without Women. Collection of 14 short stories by Ernest Hemingway, published in 1927, including "The Undefeated," "The Killers," and "Fifty Grand."

Menzaleh (men.zä'lę), Lake. See Manzala, Lake.

Menzel (men'tsęl), Adolf Friedrich Erdmann von. b. at Breslau, Dec. 8, 1815; d. at Berlin, Feb. 9, 1905. German historical and genre painter. He first made a name as an illustrator. His subjects were taken chiefly from Prussian history.

Menzel, Karl Adolf. b. at Grünberg (now Zielona Góra), in Silesia, Dec. 7, 1784; d. at Breslau, Aug. 19, 1855. German historian.

Menzel, Wolfgang. b. at Waldenburg, Prussia, Germany, June 21, 1798; d. at Stuttgart, Württemberg, Germany, April 23, 1873. German historian, critic, poet, and novelist. He wrote Geschichte der Deutschen (3 vols., 1824–25), Die deutsche Litteratur (1828), and historical works on modern times, the wars of 1866 and 1870–71, and others. A romantic in his original writing, he edited various periodicals and wrote Streckverse (1823), Rübezahl (1829), Narcissus (1830), and the historical novel Furore (1851).

Menzies (men'zēz), Robert Gordon. b. at Jeparit, Victoria, Australia, Dec. 20, 1894—. Australian political leader, prime minister (1939–41, 1949 et seq.) of Australia. He was educated at the University of Melbourne and was called to the Victoria bar in 1918. He became king's counsel in 1929. He entered (1928) politics in Victoria, reaching full ministerial rank in the McPherson government in 1932. He entered the federal house in 1934, serving as attorney general from 1934 to 1939. He became prime minister on the death of J. A. Lyons (1939), resigning in 1941. He was appointed minister of defense coördination in the succeeding Fadden government, but lost the leadership of both his own party and the combined opposition when the Fadden government fell before Labour in 1941. In 1943 Menzies formed a new party, the Liberal Party, and became its leader. A coalition of Liberal and Country parties won over Labour in the 1949 general election and Menzies again was named (Dec. 18, 1949) prime minister.

Meo (mā'ō). See Miao; also Miao-Yao.

Meopham or Mepeham (mep'ąm), Simon. b. probably at Meopham, near Rochester, Kent, England; d. Oct. 12, 1333. Archbishop of Canterbury (1327–33). He was elected archbishop against the opposition of Queen Isabella and Roger Mortimer and was consecrated in 1328 at Avignon. He was involved in constant quarrels with his clergy, which finally resulted in his excommunication in 1333.

Mephibosheth (mẹ.fib'ọ.sheth). In Old Testament history, the son of Jonathan and grandson of Saul. 2 Sam. iv. 4.

Mephistopheles (mef.i.stof'ẹ.lēz). [Also: Mephostophilis, Mephostophilus; original form, Mephostophiles.] Familiar spirit mentioned in the medieval German legend of Doctor Johannes Faust, and a principal agent in Marlowe's play Doctor Faustus and in Goethe's Faust. He represents the spirit of evil, or the Devil. He is the Mephostophilus of Shakespeare and Fletcher, and the Mephostophilis of Marlowe.

Meppel (mep'ẹl). Town in NE Netherlands, in the province of Drenthe, ab. 14 mi. NE of Zwolle: a center for trade in livestock and dairy products. It has chemical and tobacco industries. 13,693 (1939).

Meppen (mep'ẹn). Town in NW Germany, in the Land (state) of Lower Saxony, British Zone, formerly in the province of Hanover, Prussia, ab. 43 mi. NW of Osnabrück: port on the Dortmund-Ems Canal. It has livestock markets, and metal, knitwear, lumber, and foodstuff industries. It belonged formerly to the bishopric of Münster, and passed to Prussia in 1866. Pop. 11,740 (1950).

Mequinez (mā.kē.nāth'). A Spanish form of Meknès.

Mer (mer). French word for "ocean" or "sea": for entries not found immediately below see the distinguishing element of the name.

Mer, La. Set of three symphonic poems by Claude Debussy, first performed at Paris in 1905.

Mera (mā'rā), Juan León. b. at Ambato, Ecuador, 1832; d. 1894. Ecuadorean poet and novelist, outstanding for his use of Indian folk themes. Author of La Virgen del sol (1861), Cumandá (1871), and others.

Merak (mē'rak). Second-magnitude star, β Ursae Majoris, the southern of the two "pointers."

Meramec (mer'ạ.mek). River in E Missouri, rising in the Ozark Mountains and flowing generally NE to join the Mississippi just below St. Louis. Length, ab. 200 mi.

Merano (mā.rä'nō). [German, Meran (mā.rän').] Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Trentino-Alto Adige, in the province of Bolzano, situated on the Passero River near its junction with the Adige River, in an Alpine valley ab. 17 mi. NW of Bolzano. It is a tourist center and health resort, with numerous hotels and villas. It has a Gothic church of 1367, castle of 1450, and a museum. The majority of the population is German speaking. The town, first mentioned in 857 A.D., received city rights in 1305 and was capital of the Tirol until the 15th century. An important trade center in the early Middle Ages, it was under Austrian rule from 1420 to 1919; ceded to Italy by treaty of St.-Germain. Buildings of interest to tourists were undamaged in World War II. Pop. of commune, 25,902 (1936); of town, 11,006 (1936).

Méray (mā.rā), Hugues Charles. b. at Chalon-sur-Saône, France, Nov. 12, 1835; d. at Dijon, France, Feb. 2, 1911. French mathematician, who wrote on geometry and the theory of functions. He was interested in the reform of the teaching of geometry and wrote two elementary textbooks on the subject, Éléments de géométrie (1874) and Nouveaux éléments de géométrie (1906). His most important work was Leçons nouvelles sur l'analyse infinitésimale et ses applications géométriques (4 vols., 1894–98).

Merbal (mėr'bạl). King of Tyre (c556–552 B.C.). Before his accession to the throne he was a hostage at Babylon.

Merbecke or Merbeck or Marbeck (mär'bek), John. b. 1523; d. at Windsor, England, c1585. English scholar and composer. As a Calvinist, he was indicted and condemned for heresy, but pardoned. In The Booke of Common Praier noted (1550) he published the first musical setting to the liturgy sanctioned by the Act of Uniformity (1549). His works, including a mass and two motets, show his use of English rather than Latin rhythms. He published (1550) the first concordance to the English Bible.

Mercadante (mer.kä.dän'tā), Giuseppe Saverio Raffaelle. b. at Altamura, Italy, Sept. 17, 1795; d. at Naples, Italy, Dec. 17, 1870. Italian composer. His first work, a cantata, was written in 1818. He became maestro di capella (choirmaster) at the cathedral of Novara in 1833, and director of the conservatory at Naples in 1840. In 1862 he became totally blind. Among his operas are Elisa e Claudio (1821), I Briganti (1836), and Il Giuramento (1837). In addition to some 60 operas, he wrote symphonies, concertos, quartets, masses and other liturgical and religious music, fantasias, and songs.

Mercadet (mer.kä.de). See Faiseur, Le.

Mercala (mer.kä'lä). See Balsas.

Mercator (mėr.kā'tọr; Flemish, mer.kä'tôr), Gerardus. [Original name, Gerhard Kremer.] b. at Rupelmonde, Belgium, March 5, 1512; d. at Duisburg, Germany, Dec. 2, 1594. Flemish geographer. He studied philosophy and mathematics at the University of Louvain, and afterward devoted himself to geography. Through the influence of Cardinal Granvella, he received a commission from the emperor Charles V to manufacture a terrestrial globe and a celestial globe, which are said to have been superior to any that had then appeared. He took up his residence at Duisburg in 1559, and eventually became cosmographer to the Duke of Jülich and Cleve. He invented the Mercator system of projection, a projection in which the parallels of latitude and the meridians of longitude intersect at right angles; this, the most famous and widely used of all map projections, is accurate only along the line of the equator, but its greatest distortion occurring in the high and low latitudes makes it less objectionable for ordinary use than projections that distort the areas in the temperate and tropical zones. Mercator is likewise credited with breaking the hold that Ptolemaic maps had on European geographical study by his accurate execution. His chief works are Tabulae geographicae (1578–84) and Atlas (1595), the latter being completed after his death by his son.

Mercato Saraceno (mer.kä'tō sä.rä.che'nō). Town and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Emilia-Romagna, in the province of Forlì, situated on the Savio River, SE of Forlì: an agricultural commune. The name appears first in the 15th century as Emporium Saracenum. Pop. of commune, 10,238 (1936); of town, 946 (1936).

Mercé (mer.sā'), Antonia. Original name of Argentina, La.

Merced (mėr.sed'). City in C California, county seat of Merced County, in the San Joaquin Valley, in a hay, cotton, and fruit producing area. It is the principal gateway for motor and railroad routes to Yosemite National Park. 15,278 (1950).

Mercedario (mer.sā.ᵺä'ryō), Cerro del. [Also, Cerro Mercedario.] Mountain in E Chile, on the border of Argentina, in the state of Coquimbo. Elevation, ab. 21,884 ft.

Mercedes (mer.sā'ᵺās). City in E Argentina, in Buenos Aires province, ab. 60 mi. W of the city of Buenos Aires: livestock and allied industries. 16,932 (1947).

Mercedes. City in NE Argentina, in Corrientes province, ab. 385 mi. N of Buenos Aires. 14,813 (1947).

Mercedes. [Full name, Villa Mercedes.] City in C Argentina, in San Luis province, ab. 410 mi. W of Buenos Aires. 25,912 (1947).

Mercedes (mėr.sā'dēz). City in S Texas, in Hidalgo County, in the Rio Grande valley. It is in a petroleum area, and is also a shipping point for cotton, citrus fruits, vegetables, and livestock. It was established in 1906. Pop. 10,081 (1950).

Mercedes (mer.sā'ᵺās). [Full name, Villa Mercedes, also called Soriano.] Town in SW Uruguay, capital of Soriano department, on the Río Negro, ab. 20 mi. above its junction with the Uruguay River: agricultural center. Pop. ab. 30,000.

Mercedes of Castile (mėr.sē'dēz; kas.tēl'). Novel by James Fenimore Cooper, published in 1840.

Mercedonius (mėr.sē.dō'nē.us) or Mercedinus (mėr.sē.dī'nus). In the Roman calendar commonly ascribed to Numa Pompilius, second king of Rome, an intercalary month inserted every second year between the 23rd and the 24th of February, and having 22 or 23 days.

Merced River (mer.sed'). River in California. It traverses the Yosemite Valley, and joins the San Joaquin River ab. 86 mi. SE of San Francisco. Length, ab. 150 mi.

Mercer (mėr'sėr), Charles Fenton. b. at Fredericksburg, Va., June 16, 1778; d. near Alexandria, Va., May 4, 1858. American politician, Federalist and Whig member of Congress from Virginia (1817–39).

Mercer, Henry Chapman. b. at Doylestown, Pa., June 24, 1856; d. March 9, 1930. American archaeologist and antiquary. He was curator (1894–97) at the University of Pennsylvania of American and prehistoric archaeology. He invented (1899) a method for the manufacture of mural tiles and developed (1904) a process for the printing of large designs on paper and fabric. Author of The Lenape Stone (1885), Researches upon the Antiquity of Man in the Delaware Valley and the Eastern United States (1897), Tools of the Nation Maker (1897), The Bible in Iron (1914), and Ancient Carpenters' Tools (1929).

Mercer, Hugh. b. in Scotland, c1725; d. near Princeton, N.J., Jan. 12, 1777. American general. He served in the French and Indian Wars, distinguished himself at Trenton in 1776, and was mortally wounded at Princeton in 1777.

Mercer, James. b. Feb. 26, 1736; d. at Richmond, Va., Oct. 31, 1793. American Revolutionary leader; half brother of John Francis Mercer. He was elected (1762) to the Virginia House of Burgesses and was a member (1774, 1775, 1776) of the Revolutionary conventions. Named (1779) to the Continental Congress, he served also as a member (1779–89) of the Virginia first court of appeals and as a judge (1789–93) of the reorganized court of appeals.

Mercer, John Francis. b. in Stafford County, Va., May 17, 1759; d. at Philadelphia, Aug. 30, 1821. American Revolutionary soldier and politician; half brother of James Mercer. He was aide-de-camp (1778–79) to General Charles Lee, served (1781) under Lafayette, and commanded with the rank of lieutenant colonel a corps of militia grenadiers at the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown. He was elected (1782) to Congress from Virginia. Having settled (1785) in Maryland, he was a member (1787) of the Federal Convention, was elected (1791) to the House of Representatives, and was governor (1801–03) of Maryland.

Merchant Marine Acts. In U.S. history: 1. Act passed by the U.S. Congress in 1920 placing the American merchant fleet of World War I under the authority of the U.S Shipping Board, which was given the power to make loans for new ship construction. 2. Act passed by the U.S. Congress in 1928 which named terms for loans granted for building new vessels, increased the total of the construction fund, and set categories of compensation rates for ocean mail carriers. 3. Act passed by the U.S. Congress in 1936 which created the U.S. Maritime Commission and stressed the development of an American merchant marine aided by federal subsidies.

Merchant of Bruges (brözh, brö'jez), The. Alteration, by D. J. W. Kinnaird, of The Beggar's Bush by John Fletcher and others, produced in 1815, Kean taking the part of Flores.

Merchant of Venice (ven'is), The. Comedy by Shakespeare, entered on the Stationers' Register in 1598, published in quarto in 1600, 1619, 1637, and 1652. It was probably written c1597. Poor versions and adaptations of The Merchant of Venice were made by Dryden, Otway, Shadwell, Lansdowne, and others, which held the stage until 1741, when Macklin restored Shakespeare. Two of Shakespeare's most famous characters are in this play: Portia, the woman turned lawyer, and Shylock, an unusually sympathetic characterization of a Jew for the Elizabethan age.

Merchant Prince, The. Historical novel by Henry Christopher Bailey, published in 1926.

Merchant's Tale, The. One of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales. It is the story of the deception of an old husband by a young wife with the friendly assistance of an enchanted tree. The original is Eastern; an account of the Indo-Persian, Turkish, Arabian, Singhalese, and other versions of it is given in the Chaucer Society's Originals and Analogues. The Latin versions are Boccaccio's and Caxton's; the immediate source of Chaucer's version, however, is thought to be the Latin fable of Adolphe (c1315).

Merchantville (mėr'chant.vil). Suburban borough in SW New Jersey, in Camden County, E of Camden. 4,183 (1950).

Merchiston (mėr'kis.tọn), Laird of. Title of Napier or Neper, John.

Mercia (mėr'sha). Ancient Anglo-Saxon kingdom in C England, S of Northumbria and N of Wessex, and reaching W to Wales. It was founded probably in the 6th century, flourished under Penda and his successors in the 7th century, attained the overlordship of England under Ethelbald and Offa in the 8th century, passed under the supremacy of Wessex c827, and later, until the Norman conquest, was one of the great earldoms.

Mercia, Earl of. Title of Leofric (d. 1057).

Mercié (mer.syā), Marius Jean Antoine. b. at Toulouse, France, Oct. 30, 1845; d. 1916. French sculptor. He gained the Grand Prix de Rome in 1868. Among his works are the statue of David (1872), Dalila (1872; a bust in bronze), Gloria victis (1874; bought by the state and placed in the Square Montholon), Le Loup, la mère et l'enfant (1875; a bas-relief), David avant le combat (1876), Fleur de Mai (1876), Le Génie des arts (1877; for the Guichet des Tuileries), tomb of Michelet in Père-la-Chaise Cemetery (1879), and Judith (1880; a portrait).

Mercier (mer.syā), Charles Alfred. b. at McDonogh, near New Orleans, La., June 3, 1816; d. May 12, 1894. American writer and physician. He was the founder (1876) of the Athénée Louisianais and contributor to its Comptes Rendus. Author of the novels Le Fou de Palerme (1873), La Fille de Prêtre (1877); shorter tales, Lidia (1887), Émile des Ormiers (1891); the dramas L'Ermite du Niagara (1840) and Fortunia (1888); long poems, La Rose de Smyrne (1840), Réditus et Ascalaphos (1890); and nonfiction, Biographie de Pierre Soulé (1848) and Étude sur la Langue Créole en Louisiane (1880).

Mercier, Désiré Joseph. b. at Braine-l'Alleud, Belgium, Nov. 21, 1851; d. at Brussels, Belgium, Jan. 23, 1926. Belgian prelate and patriot. He was educated at Louvain, Paris, and Leipzig and was ordained to the priesthood in 1874. He became (1882) professor of philosophy at Louvain and organized (1894) the Institut Supérieur de Philosophie, which became the world center of neo-Thomism. He became archbishop of Mechelen (Malines) 1906) and cardinal of Belgium (1907 et seq.). After Belgium had been occupied (1914) by the Germans he issued a pastoral letter, Patriotism and Endurance, defining the position of the Belgian people toward the occupying power; in the following years he protested frequently against German violations of international law. His pastoral letters in wartime are notable for loftiness of thought and confidence in the triumph of the right; Cardinal Mercier became, in fact, the spokesman for the Belgians. After the war he participated in three conferences with representatives of the Church of England on doctrinal and historical questions. His chief work is Cours de philosophie. He also published works on psychology, metaphysics, logic, and theodicy.

Mercier, Ernest. b. at Constantine, Algeria, Feb. 5, 1878—. French industrialist and engineer, best known for his work in organizing the electric power companies of Paris, Lyons, and other French cities.

Mercier, Louis. b. at Coutouvre, near Lyons, France, 1870—. French poet. Author of collections of verse including Voix de la terre et du temps (1903), Le poème de la maison (1906), Poèmes de la tranchée (1916), and Les Petites Géorgiques (1923); and of two novels, Hélène Sorbiers (1912) and Les Demoiselles Valéry (1923). Beginning as a symbolist, he developed quickly into a poet of rural life, quite divorced from the Parisian schools.

Mercier, Louis Sébastien. b. at Paris, June 6, 1740; d. there, April 25, 1814. French writer and politician. A rebel and an adherent of romanticism after several of his early classical poems, plays, and novels failed, he attacked the traditions represented by Corneille, Boileau, and Racine, and decried philosophy and science. His L'An 2440 (1770) anticipated several of the reforms of the French Revolution. Among his other works are Le Tableau de Paris (12 vols., 1781–88) and Néologie, vocabulaire des mots nouveaux ou à renouveler (1801). He was a member of the Convention, voted (1793) against the execution of Louis XVI, was under arrest during the Terror, and became a member of the Council of Five Hundred.

Mercier (mėr.si.ā′), Philip. b. at Berlin, 1689; d. at London, July 18, 1760. English portrait painter. He went to London in 1716, and was appointed court painter and librarian in 1727.

Merciless Parliament. Name applied to the English Parliament of 1388: so named on account of the cruelty exercised by it toward the adherents of Richard II.

Merck (merk), Johann Heinrich. b. at Darmstadt, Germany, April 11, 1741; committed suicide there, June 27, 1791. German literary critic and author, a friend of Herder and Goethe. He exercised great influence upon the life of the latter. Mephistopheles in Goethe's Faust is supposed to have some characteristics taken from Merck.

Mercœur (mer.kėr), Duchesse de. See Mancini, Laure.

Mercurius (mėr.kū′ri.us). Surname of Pope John II.

Mercurius Aulicius (mėr.kū′ri.us ô.lish′us). Journal in the Royalist interest which was written and published by Sir John Birkenhead at Oxford while the king and court were there. The first number was issued in January, 1642, and it appeared continuously till 1645, after which it was issued occasionally as a weekly.

Mercury (mėr′kū.ri). In Roman mythology, the god of commerce, who became identified with the Greek Hermes and took on various other attributes of Hermes, such as being messenger of the gods. His cult came from S Italy into Rome c495 B.C. Mercury was the tutelary deity of thieves and tricksters; he became also the god of science, eloquence, and of the arts, and the patron of travelers and athletes. It was he who guided the shades of the dead to the underworld. He is represented in art as a young man, usually wearing a winged hat and the talaria or winged sandals, and bearing the caduceus, and often a purse.

Mercury. Innermost planet of the solar system, revolving in a markedly elliptical orbit (eccentricity, 0.20562) at a mean distance of 36 million mi. in a period of 87.97 days with a velocity varying from 35 to 23 mi. per second. It is seldom seen by casual observers because its greatest elongation from the Sun is never more than 28 degrees and may be as little as 18 degrees. Its mean maximum brightness is 0.16 magnitude, similar to the star Vega, but it is seen only in twilight (in the Northern Hemisphere). Its diameter of 3,200 mi., mass of about 2.4 times 10^{20} tons, and density of 2.86 times that of water make the planet only 1/26 the mass of the Earth and more like the Moon than other planets (excepting the still smaller asteroids). Two of Jupiter's satellites are about the same size as Mercury, while Titan and Neptune's large satellite are actually larger. It rotates in the same period as it revolves, thus constantly presenting the same face (subject to large librations) to the Sun. There is neither atmosphere nor moisture, and hence no life, on the planet, on the sunlit side of which the temperature is so intensely hot that lead would melt.

Mercutio (mėr.kū′shi.ō). In Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet, the friend of Romeo. He is endowed with courage, an easy mind, wit, fancy, and a light heart.

Mercy (mėr′si). In John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, the friend and companion of Christian.

Mercy (mer.sē′), Count Claudius Florimond. b. in Lorraine, 1666; killed near Parma, Italy, June 29, 1734. Austrian field marshal. He served in Italy in 1706, at Peterwardein in 1716, and at Temesvár (now Timişoara) in 1717. In 1720 he became governor of Temesvár, and in 1733 was appointed commander in Italy.

Mercy, Baron Franz von. Killed at the battle of Nördlingen, Aug. 3, 1645. Bavarian field marshal in the imperial service. He defeated Rantzau at Tuttlingen (1643) and Turenne at Mergentheim (May 5, 1645).

Mer de Glace (mer dę glàs). [Eng. trans., "Sea of Ice."] Glacier in SE France, on the N slopes of Mont Blanc, above the valley of Chamonix. It descends far down a side valley and is visited by many tourists because of its accessibility. Total length, ab. 8 mi.

Mère coupable ou L'Autre Tartufe (mer′ kö.pàbl′ ō lōtr′ tàr.tuf′), La. Comedy by Beaumarchais, played in 1792; a sequel to the Barbier de Séville and Mariage de Figaro.

Meredith (mer′ę.dith), Edwin Thomas. b. near Avoca, Iowa, Dec. 23, 1876; d. June 17, 1928. American editor, U.S. secretary of agriculture (1920–21) under Wilson. Owner and publisher (1896–1904) of the Farmers' Tribune, he founded (1902) and edited Successful Farming, bought (1922) the Dairy Farmer, and established (1922) Fruit, Garden and Home, the name of which was changed (1924) to Better Homes and Gardens.

Meredith, George. b. at Portsmouth, Hampshire, England, Feb. 12, 1828; d. at Box Hill, Surrey, England, May 18, 1909. English poet, novelist, and critic. The son and grandson of tailors, he was educated at Portsmouth and Southsea schools and at the Moravian Academy at Neuwied on the Rhine. He married (1849) a widow, Mary Ellen (Peacock) Nicholls (who left him in 1858), daughter of Thomas Love Peacock, and after her death (1861) married (1864) Marie Vulliamy. He made his living until 1894 as a journalist and publisher's reader. He was president (1892–1909) of the Society of Authors, and was awarded (1905) the Order of Merit. His works in verse are Poems (1851), Modern Love, a brilliant treatment of marital tragedy (1862), Poems and Lyrics of the Joy of Earth, a celebration of evolutionary naturalism as contrasted with sentimentalism (1883), Ballads and Poems of Tragic Life (1887), A Reading of Earth (1888), A Reading of Life (1901), and Last Poems (1910). Works of fiction are The Shaving of Shagpat, an Oriental extravaganza (1855), Farina, a rollicking burlesque of German romanticism (1857), The Ordeal of Richard Feverel, a tragedy of misapplied educational doctrines (1859), Evan Harrington (1860), Sandra Belloni, a satire on sentimentalism (1864), Rhoda Fleming (1865), Vittoria (1866; the sequel to Sandra Belloni), The Adventures of Harry Richmond, a picaresque romance (1870), Beauchamp's Career, a novel of political ideas (1874), The Tale of Chloe, a brief and moving tragedy (1879), The Egoist, a subtle study of selfishness (1879), The Tragic Comedians, a novel centered about the career of Ferdinand Lassalle (1880), four novels on feminism and politics, Diana of the Crossways (1885), One of Our Conquerors (1890), Lord Ormont and His Aminta (1894), and The Amazing Marriage (1895), and Celt and Saxon (1910), an unfinished novel. He was the author also of the critical work The Idea of Comedy and the Uses of the Comic Spirit (1877), an analysis of the corrective powers of laughter. The Memorial Edition of his Works (29 vols.) was published from 1909 through 1912; his collected Poetical Works and Letters (2 vols.) in 1912. His novels, presenting political and social ideas in advance of their time, are, like Ibsen's plays, now dated. Although overwritten and often obscure, they are notable for vivid metaphors, epigrammatic wit, subtleties of characterization, and philosophic insights. His best poems, such as Love in the Valley, Modern Love, The Woods of Westermain, Hymn to Color, and Lucifer in Starlight, endure for their startling imaginative and intellectual power. As a thinker, Meredith foreshadowed the emergent evolutionists, Lloyd Morgan and Samuel Alexander.

Meredith, Janice. See Janice Meredith.

Meredith, Owen. [Pseudonym of Edward Robert Lytton Bulwer-Lytton; title, 1st Earl of Lytton.] b. at London, Nov. 8, 1831; d. at Paris, Nov. 24, 1891. English diplomat, politician, and poet; son of Edward George Earle Lytton Bulwer-Lytton (1803–73). He was minister to Portugal (1874–76), governor general of India (1878–80), and ambassador to France (1887–91). During his tenure in India occurred the crowning of Victoria as Empress of India (1877) and the Afghan War (1878–79) that removed Shere Ali from the amirship of Afghanistan. He wrote Clytemnestra (1855), The Wanderer (1859), Lucile (1860), Serbski Pesme: National Songs of Servia (1861), The Ring of Amasis (1863), Chronicles and Characters (1867), Poems (1867), Orval (1869), Julian Fane (1871), Fables in Song (1874), Poems (1877), The Life, Letters, and Literary Remains of Edward Bulwer, Lord Lytton, Vols. I and II (1883), Glenaveril, or the Metamorphoses (1885), and After Paradise (1887). King Poppy was published posthumously in 1892.

Meredith, Samuel. b. at Philadelphia, 1741; d. at Mount Pleasant, Pa., Feb. 10, 1817. American Revolutionary soldier and financier. He took part in the battles of Trenton, Princeton, Brandywine, and Germantown. He served as a member (1778–79, 1781–83) of the Pennsylvania Colonial Assembly, was elected (1786) to the Congress of the Confederation, and was first treasurer (1789–1801) of the U.S.

Meredith, William Morris. b. at Philadelphia, June 8, 1799; d. there, Aug. 17, 1873. American politician and jurist, U.S. secretary (1849–50) of the treasury under Taylor. He was president (1834–49) of the select council of Philadelphia, and attorney general (1861–67) of Pennsylvania.

Merenptah (mer.en.tä'). See Merneptah.

Meres (mirz), Francis. b. in Lincolnshire, England, 1565; d. at Wing, Rutlandshire, England, Jan. 29, 1647. English divine and author. He was a graduate of Cambridge (Pembroke College), became rector of Wing in 1602, and kept a school there. Among his works is Palladis Tamia, Wits Treasury; being the second part of Wits Commonwealth (1598), one of a series of volumes of collected apothegms, containing criticisms of 125 English writers, painters, and musicians, a list of Shakespeare's plays, and a distorted account of the death of Christopher Marlowe.

Merezhkovskaya (mi.rish.kôf'ska.yą), Zinaida Nikolayevna. See Hippius, Zinaida.

Merezhkovsky (mi.rish.kôf'ski), Dmitry Sergeyevich. b. at St. Petersburg, Aug. 14, 1865; d. Dec. 7, 1941. Russian man of letters. In his youth he wrote verse in the symbolist manner, which he was one of the first to espouse. By the time he was 40 he had won a great reputation as poet, critic, essayist, religious thinker, and writer of fiction. Between 1896 and 1905 he published a trilogy of historical novels under the general title Christ and Anti-Christ, translated into English as The Death of the Gods (also Julian the Apostate), The Romance of Leonardo da Vinci, and Peter and Aleris. His novel about the Decembrist rising is also available in English (1923), and so are some of his stories, essays, and literary studies. In 1920 he and his wife, Zinaida Hippius, expatriated themselves, finally settling in France. As an émigré he produced a number of large-scale, turgid, fictional biographies, two of which, a life of Jesus and one of Ikhnaton, were translated into English.

Mergenthaler (mer'gen.tä.lėr), Ottmar. b. in Württemberg, Germany, May 11, 1854; d. at Baltimore, Oct. 28, 1899. American inventor. He came to the U.S. in 1872, and a few years later began experiments with typesetting machines which resulted in the Linotype. This machine was virtually completed in 1885, though it was subsequently improved.

Mergentheim (mer'gent.hīm). [Also: Bad Mergentheim; former name, Marienthal.] Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Württemberg-Baden, American Zone, formerly in the Jagst Kreis (department) of the free state of Württemberg, ab. 56 mi. NE of Stuttgart: health resort, with saline sulfur springs. There are machinery, furniture, and textile industries. The castle, built in 1572, contains collections and archives; the town church dates from the 13th century; the Church of the Dominicans from the 14th century. Mergentheim was the seat of the grand master of the Order of the Teutonic Knights from 1527 to 1809. Pop. 10,184 (1950)

Mergui (mėr.gwē'). Maritime district in the division of Tenasserim, S Burma, ab. 400 mi. SE of Rangoon. Rice, rubber, and manganese are the chief products. Capital, Mergui; area, ab. 10,900 sq. mi.; pop. 180,827 (1941).

Mergui. Town in S Burma, the capital of Mergui district and a seaport, situated on an island at the mouth of the Tenasserim River. It is the center of the Burmese rubber and pearl-diving industries. Its port will accommodate most large steamers. The main exports are rubber, pearls, tin, and tungsten. 20,405 (1931).

Mergui Archipelago. Group of islands in the Andaman Sea W of the S part of Burma, to which they belong. They extend N and S for ab. 275 mi. The largest islands in the group are Ross, Domel, Sullivan, and St. Matthew.

Merian (mā'rē.ăn), Maria Sibylla. [Married name, Frau Graff.] b. at Frankfort on the Main, Germany, April 2, 1647; d. at Amsterdam, Netherlands, Jan. 13, 1717. German naturalist and artist. In 1665 she married a Nuremberg artist, Johann Andreas Graff, but she is generally known by the surname Merian. Her best-known work is on the metamorphoses of insects of Surinam, the result of a visit to that country (1699–1701). It was first published in Latin, in 1705, and republished in French after her death, together with a similar work on the insects of Europe. The large plates illustrating these books are among the best of early zoölogical drawings, and the accompanying observations are generally very accurate.

Merian, Matthäus. [Called Merian the Elder.] b. at Basel, Switzerland, 1593; d. June 19, 1650. Swiss engraver.

Merian, Matthäus. [Called Merian the Younger.] b. at Basel, Switzerland, 1621; d. at Frankfort on the Main, Germany, 1687. Swiss portrait painter; son of Matthäus Merian (1593–1650).

Meribah (mer'i.bą). In Old Testament geography, the name of two places in the wilderness S of Palestine, noted in the history of Moses. At Meribah, in the wilderness of Zin, Moses smote the rock and the water came forth (Num. xx. 1–13).

Meriç (me.rēch'). See Maritsa.

Mérida (mā'rē.тнä). Colonial intendencia of New Spain, or Mexico, founded in 1786, and continued until the independence. It corresponded to the older province of Yucatán, and to the modern states of Yucatán, Campecho, and Tabasco.

Mérida. City in E Mexico, capital of Yucatán state: export trade in sisal, chicle, and hides. It was founded in 1542 on the site of a Maya town, and has flourishing manufactures and trade, a cathedral, a museum, and an important airport. 155,899 (1950).

Mérida. [Latin, Augusta Emerita.] City in W Spain, in the province of Badajoz, on the Guadiana River ab. 30 mi. E of Badajoz: important railroad junction; textile, leather, and cork industries. It has numerous Roman remains: the Arch of Trajan, an amphitheater, theater, aqueduct, and a bridge; the Roman fort was later the Moorish Alcázar. The town was founded c25 B.C. and as the capital of Lusitania soon became a flourishing commercial and military center. It was the seat of a Visigothic archbishopric, was taken by the Arabs in 713, and was reconquered by Alfonso IX in 1228. Mérida was captured by the Nationalists early in 1936 during the Spanish Civil War. 25,501 (1940).

Mérida. State in W Venezuela. Capital, Mérida; area, ab. 4,363 sq. mi.; pop. 209,811 (1950).

Mérida. City in W Venezuela, capital of Mérida state: cotton and wool textile mills. It was founded in 1558. Pop., including suburbs, 24,994 (1950).

Meriden (mer'i.dėn). City in C Connecticut, in New Haven County, ab. 18 mi. NE of New Haven. Its manufactures include silverware, britannia-metal wares, other metal products, machinery, and electrical equipment. 44,088 (1950).

Meridian (mē.rid'i.ąn). City in E Mississippi, county seat of Lauderdale County, ab. 86 mi. E of Jackson: railroad shops, textile mills, sawmills, cotton gins, and cottonseed-oil mills. It is the second largest city in the state. 41,893 (1950).

Merighi (mā.rē'gē), Michelangelo. See Caravaggio, Michelangelo Amerighi (or Merighi) da.

Mérignac (mā.rē.nyák). Town in SW France, in the department of Gironde: a western suburb of Bordeaux. 21,417 (1946).

Merigreek (mer'i.grēk), Matthew. See Merrygreek, Matthew.

Merikanto (me'ri.kän.tô), Franz Oskar. b. at Helsinki, Finland, Aug. 5, 1868; d. there, Feb. 17, 1924. Finnish organist and composer. Among his compositions are the operas Pohjan neito and Regina von Emmeritz. He also composed several Singspiels, a concerto for violin, clarinet, horn, and string quartet, violin, organ, and piano works, choruses, and songs.

Mérimée (mā.rē.mā), Prosper. b. at Paris, Sept. 28, 1803; d. at Cannes, France, Sept. 23, 1870. French novelist, archaeologist, historian, and literary critic. After spending some time in the study of law, he entered public life, served as inspector-general of historical monuments, and became (1853) a senator under the empire. He first published Théâtre de Clara Gazul (1825) and La Guzla (1827), the former purporting to be by a Spanish lady, the second supposedly being a translation from the Illyrian, both successful hoaxes. He gave further evidence of his talent in La Jacquerie (1828) and La Famille Carvajal. He wrote a novel, La Chronique du temps de Charles IX (1829), which testifies to careful historical preparation; and in 1830 he published Colomba, his masterpiece, which deals with the Corsican vendettas. From 1835 to 1843

Mérimée published a number of works describing his travels in France. In 1845 his novel Carmen appeared, a story from which Georges Bizet took his opera. As a historian he wrote Essai sur la guerre sociale (1841), Histoire de Don Pèdre (1843), La Conjuration de Catilina (1844), and Le faux Démétrius (1852). He translated from the Russian stories by Pushkin, Turgenev, and Gogol. In 1855 he edited the works of Brantôme and Agrippa d'Aubigné. He wrote frequently for La Revue de Paris, La Revue des Deux Mondes, and Le Moniteur. These articles and other papers by Mérimée have appeared in book form, as for instance Mélanges historiques et littéraires (1855), Dernières Nouvelles (1873), Portraits historiques et littéraires (1874), and Études sur les arts au moyen âge (1874). Another posthumous publication is Lettres à une inconnue (1873). Mérimée was elected a member of the French Academy in 1844. None of Mérimée's fiction is very long, his stories being novelettes rather than novels.

Merín (mā.rēn'), Laguna. Spanish name of Mirim, Lake.

Merino Village (mẹ.rē'nō). Unincorporated community in C Massachusetts, in Worcester County, the chief settlement in the town of Dudley. 3,118 (1950).

Merion (mer'i.ọn). Unincorporated community in SE Pennsylvania, in Montgomery County, near Philadelphia. 4,757 (1950).

Merion, Lower. See Lower Merion.

Merionethshire (mer.i.on'ẹth.shir) or Merioneth (mer.i.on'ẹth). Maritime county in NW Wales. It is bounded on the N by Caernarvonshire, on the N and E by Denbighshire, on the SE by Montgomeryshire, on the S by the estuary of the river Dovey, and on the W by Cardigan Bay. The coastline consists of alternate stretches of cliffs and of low, sandy beaches. Merionethshire may be said to be the most mountainous county in Wales. The highest point is reached in Aran Mawddwy (2,970 ft.). There are numerous lakes and waterfalls within the county. Bala Lake is the largest lake. Merionethshire is principally a sheep-rearing county; there is, however, considerable quarrying of slate and limestone. Manganese ore was mined at Barmouth and at Llanbedr until 1928. Merionethshire was one of the three ancient shires of Gwynedd (North Wales). Harlech was its ancient capital. County seat, Dolgelley; area, ab. 660 sq. mi.; pop. 41,456 (1951).

Merití (mā.rē.tē'). City in SE Brazil, in the state of Rio de Janeiro: a northwestern suburb of Rio de Janeiro. 38,645 (1940).

Merivale (mer'i.vāl), Charles. b. at Barton Place, Devonshire, England, 1808; d. Dec. 27, 1893. English historian and divine; son of John Herman Merivale. He was rector (1848–69) of Lawford, Essex, and became dean of Ely in 1869. His chief work is History of the Romans under the Empire (7 vols., 1850–62). He also wrote A General History of Rome (1875), Lectures on Early Church History (1879), Contrast between Christian and Pagan Society (1880), a translation of the Iliad in rhymed verse, and others.

Merivale, Herman. b. at Dawlish, Devonshire, England, Nov. 8, 1806; d. at London, Feb. 9, 1874. English lawyer, author, and politician; son of John Herman Merivale. He was professor of political economy at Oxford (1837–42), assistant undersecretary of state for the colonies in 1847 and undersecretary (1848–59), and undersecretary for India (1859–74). He wrote Historical Studies (1865) and others.

Merivale, Herman Charles. b. at London, Jan. 27, 1839; d. Jan. 14, 1906. English poet, dramatist, novelist, and editor; son of Herman Merivale. He gave up the law for literature in 1874. He edited (1870–80) the Annual Register. Author of All For Her (1875), Forget-Me-Not (1879), The White Pilgrim (1883), dramas; The Butler (1886) and The Don (1888), farces; Fawcit of Ballini, a three-volume novel of Oxford life (1882), Binko's Blues, a fairy tale (1884), and Bar, Stage, and Platform, recollections (1902).

Merivale, John Herman. b. at Exeter, England, Aug. 5, 1779; d. April 25, 1844. English scholar and poet. In 1831 he was appointed commissioner in bankruptcy. In 1814 he published Orlando in Roncesvalles; a collection of his Poems appeared in 1838. Byron was his friend and admirer.

Meriwether (mer'i.weтн.ėr), Lee. b. at Columbus, Miss., Dec. 25, 1862 —. American diplomat and writer. He wrote How to See Europe on Fifty Cents a Day (1887) and War Diary of a Diplomat (1919), relating his experiences as a special assistant of the U.S. state department at Paris.

Meriwether Lewis National Monument (lö'is). National monument in S central Tennessee, in Lewis County. It commemorates the explorer Meriwether Lewis, who died and is buried here. Area, 300 acres.

Merker (mer'kėr), Paul. b. 1881; d. at Dresden, Germany, 1945. German university professor and historian of literature, especially of the 16th century. His published studies include Simon Lemnius (1908), Murnerstudien (1917), Der Verfasser des Eccius Dedolatus (1923), and, on a more comprehensive scale, Neue Aufgaben der Literaturgeschichte (1920). With Wolfgang Stammler he edited the two-volume reference work Reallexikon der deutschen Literaturgeschichte, and the quarterly Zeitschrift für deutsche Philologie (1926 et seq.).

Merksem (merk'sẹm). [Also, Merxem.] Town in N Belgium, in the province of Antwerp, on the Albert Canal NE of Antwerp, of which it is a suburb. It has woolen and cotton textile manufactures, chemical, glassware, and margarine industries. 29,139 (1947).

Merlebach (mer.lẹ.bäk). [German, Merlenbach (mer'-lẹn.bäėh).] Town in E France, in the department of Moselle, SW of Forbach. It is a coal-mining town. 7,915 (1946).

Merle d'Aubigné (merl dō.bē.nyā), Jean Henri. b. at Eaux-Vives, near Geneva, Switzerland, Aug. 16, 1794; d. at Geneva, Oct. 20, 1872. Swiss Protestant church historian, professor (1830 et seq.) of historical theology at the École de Théologie Évangélique at Geneva. He wrote Histoire de la réformation (History of the Reformation, 1835–53), continued in Histoire de la réformation au temps de Calvin (History of the Reformation in the Time of Calvin, 1863–76), and others.

Merlin (mėr'lin). [Welsh, Myrddhin.] Legendary Brythonic poet and prophet of the 6th century, to whom a number of poems (none genuine) are attributed. In 12th century Arthurian romance he became the enchanter Merlin. In the romances he was of miraculous birth, was a powerful magician, and was beguiled by the enchantress Vivien (called Nimue in Caxton's Malory), who buried him under a rock from which he could not escape; or she left him spellbound in the tangled branches of a thorn bush, where he still sleeps, although sometimes his voice is heard. Tennyson, in his Idylls of the King, adopts nearly the latter version. Among other famous deeds Merlin instituted the Round Table. He first appears in Nennius's History of the Britons as Ambrosius. Geoffrey of Monmouth's Vita Merlini (1139–49) was translated by Wace into French verse (1155). This was probably familiar to Robert de Boron, who compiled a Merlin romance c1200. Robert de Boron's poem was translated into Italian in 1379, into Spanish in 1498, and into German in 1478. An English prose version of the Merlin romance appeared as Arthour and Merlin c1300. Malory got his Merlin material from the Huth Merlin. Two other English versions appeared in the 15th century.

Merlin. Dramatic narrative in blank verse by Edwin Arlington Robinson, published in 1917. It is part of his Arthurian trilogy, which includes Lancelot (1920) and Tristram (1927).

Merlin (mer.laṅ), Antoine Christophe. [Known as Merlin de Thionville.] b. at Thionville, in Lorraine, France, Sept. 13, 1762; d. at Paris, Sept. 14, 1833. French revolutionist, member of the Legislative Assembly (1791–92), of the Convention (1792–95), and of the Council of Five Hundred (1795–98).

Merlin, Comte Philippe Antoine. [Known as Merlin de Douai.] b. at Arleux, near Douai, France, Oct. 30, 1754; d. at Paris, Dec. 26, 1838. French jurist and revolutionary politician. He was a member of the National Assembly, went over to the radical party in 1792, and was president of the Convention after the Reign of Terror. He was later (1795) minister of justice and with the revolution of the 18th Fructidor became a member of the Directory.

Mermaid Tavern. In English history, an Elizabethan literary gathering place, at London. Sir Walter Raleigh, Ben Jonson. Francis Beaumont, John Fletcher, John Selden, and probably William Shakespeare were among the notable figures who frequented it.

Mermnadae (mėrm'na.dē). Last dynasty of the Lydian kings, beginning with Gyges (c700 B.C.) and ending with Croesus (560–546 B.C). Besides these kings it included Ardys, Sadyattes, and Alyattes.

Merneptah (mėr.nep'tä). [Also: Merenptah (mer.en-tä'), Meneptah (mę.nep'tä).] fl. c1225–1215 B.C. Egyptian king of the XIXth dynasty; son of Ramses II and his successor. He drove back (c1221 B.C.) an invasion of Egypt by the Libyans and the "peoples of the sea" that was part of the vast migrations in the eastern Mediterranean area in the late 13th century B.C., and suppressed other troubles in the kingdom, but his reign marks the beginning of the end of the power of the New Kingdom. It is generally supposed that the Exodus of the Hebrews took place during his reign.

Merodach (mę.rō'dak, mer'ō.dak). See Marduk.

Merodach, Evil. See Evil Merodach.

Merodach-baladan (-bal'a.dan). Name of several kings of Babylon. The most important of these appears first as the ruler of Bit Yakin. He submitted and paid tribute to the Assyrian king Tiglath-pileser III (745–727 B.C.). From 722 to 709 he appears in the inscriptions as king of all Babylonia. Afterward he entered into alliance with the Elamites against Sargon II. The allies were defeated by the Assyrian king, and Merodach-baladan saved himself only by flight. He reappears (705) in the first year of Sennacherib, and is, in all probability, identical with the Merodach-baladan mentioned in Isa. xxxix and 2 Kings xx. 12 ff. (under the form Berodach-baladan) as having sent ambassadors to Hezekiah to congratulate him upon his recovery from sickness. This embassy was also, no doubt, intended to draw Hezekiah into an alliance against Assyria. He was defeated by Sennacherib, who placed a certain Belibus on the Babylonian throne (702–699). In 699 Merodach-baladan is again found in rebellion against Assyria, and, again defeated, he escapes to Elam. He must have died shortly afterward, but his descendants continued to stir up rebellions in Babylonia against Assyria. The last scion of this house, when about to be delivered to Assurbanipal, caused his armorbearer to slay him.

Mérode (mā.rōd'), Willem de. [Pseudonym of W. E. Keuning.] b. 1887; d. 1939. Dutch author, notable as the leading poet of the modern Calvinistic literary movement. His mystical verses of highly melodious quality are contained in Het kostbaar Bloed (Precious Blood, 1922) and De verloond Doodenboek (Book of the Dead, 1934). In the Chinese manner he wrote the delicate verses Ruischende Bamboe (Rushing Bamboo, 1937). An anthology of his work is found in De Wilde Wingerd (The Virginia Creeper, 1936).

Meroë (mer'ō.ē). In ancient geography, the capital (c300 B.C.–350 A.D.) of the later kingdom of Ethiopia, situated at the junction of the Nile and the Atbara. The site has been excavated in the 20th century.

Merom (mē'rom), Waters of. See Huleh, Lake.

Merope (mer'ō.pē). In Greek mythology, one of the Pleiades. In some versions of the myth, Merope became the dim one of the seven stars because she married a mortal.

Merope. Star 23 Tauri of 4½ magnitude. It is enveloped in a nebulosity which was discovered before the application of photography, but is difficult to observe visually.

Mérope (mā.rop). Play (1743) by Voltaire.

Merovaeus (mę.rō'vē.us). Latinized form of Merowig.

Merovingians (mer.ō.vin'ji.ąnz). Dynasty (486–751) of Frankish kings. The name was derived, according to tradition, from Merowig or Merwig (Latinized, Merovaeus), a king of the Salian Franks who flourished in the early 5th century. His grandson Clovis made himself sole ruler of the Franks after defeating the Roman governor of Gaul, Syagrius, in 486. Clovis, who became a Christian in 496, died in 511, and his kingdom was divided among his four sons, one of whom, Clotaire I, reunited the several parts in 558. Further divisions took place, however, and subsequent reunions; at different times the kingdoms of Austrasia, Neustria, Burgundy, Paris, and Aquitaine were separate or united in various combinations, and violent family feuds prevailed, most notably that between Queen Brunehilde of Austrasia and Queen Fredegunde of Neustria in the late 6th and early 7th centuries. Dagobert I reigned briefly (630–633) over a united realm, but he was the last Merovingian monarch to wield effective power; his successors were incompetent idlers, who allowed authority to pass to the family which appears in history as the Carolingians, who were mayors of the palaces of Austrasia and of Neustria. In 687 Pepin of Heristal, mayor of the palace of Austrasia, became the actual ruler of both of these kingdoms, and his grandson, Pepin the Short (son of Charles Martel and father of Charlemagne) deposed the last Merovingian king, Childeric III, and in 751 caused himself to be crowned king of the Franks.

Merowig (mer'ō.wig). [Also, Merwig; Latinized, Merovaeus.] fl. early 5th century. Alleged chief or king of a part of the Salian Franks, and grandfather of Clovis. Some suppose Merowig or Merovaeus to have been the patronymic of the family or clan of Clovis, the Merovingians, derived from a more remote ancestor.

Merriam (mer'i.ąm), Augustus Chapman. b. at Locust Grove, N.Y., May 30, 1843; d. at Athens, Greece, Jan. 19, 1895. American classical scholar and archaeologist.

Merriam, Charles. b. at West Brookfield, Mass., Nov. 31, 1806; d. July 9, 1887. American printer and publisher. He established (1831) with his brother a printing firm at Springfield, Mass., which acquired (1843) the unsold copies of Noah Webster's American Dictionary of the English Language as well as all publishing rights.

Merriam, Clinton Hart. b. at New York, Dec. 5, 1855; d. at Berkeley, Calif., March 19, 1942. American zoölogist, botanist, and ethnologist. He was naturalist of the Hayden Survey, in Idaho, Wyoming, and Utah, in 1872, assistant of the U.S. Fish Commission in 1875, and chief (1885–1910) of the U.S. Biological Survey. In 1891 he was commissioner in charge of the fur seals in the Bering Sea. He was the author of numerous works on zoölogy, biology, and North American ethnology.

Merriam, Florence Augusta. See Bailey, Florence Augusta.

Merriam, Harold Guy. b. at Westminster, Mass., Sept. 6, 1883—. American professor and editor. He was head of the English department at the University of Montana, and editor of the Frontier and Midland magazine, published at Missoula, Mont.

Merriam, Henry Clay. b. at Houlton, Me., Nov. 13, 1837; d. at Portland, Me., Nov. 18, 1912. American soldier, inventor of the Merriam pack for soldiers. During the Civil War he led (1865) the attack at Fort Blakely. He participated (1890–91) in the Sioux Indian War, and commanded (1899) the department of Colorado during the Spanish-American War.

Merriam, John Campbell. b. at Hopkinton, Iowa, Oct. 20, 1869; d. at Oakland, Calif., Oct. 30, 1945. American paleontologist, president (1920–38) of Carnegie Institution. His writings include The Occurrence of Human Remains in California Caves, The Emergence of Man, Spiritual Values and Constructive Life, Science and Belief, Science in Mobilization, and Ultimate Values of Science.

Merriam, William Rush. b. at Wadham's Mills, N.Y., July 26, 1849; d. at Fort Sewall, Fla., Feb. 18, 1931. American politician credited with establishing the permanent Bureau of the Census. He was elected (1888, 1890) governor of Minnesota, and served as director (1899–1903) of the Twelfth Census.

Merrick (mer'ik). Unincorporated community in SE New York, on Long Island, in Nassau County: a southeastern residential suburb of New York. Under the new urban definition established for use in the 1950 census it was counted with adjoining urban communities; the last official enumeration was 2,935 (1940).

Merrick, James. b. at Reading, England, 1720; d. there, 1769. English poet.

Merrick, Leonard. [Original surname, Miller.] b. at London, Feb. 21, 1864; d. there, Aug. 7, 1939. English actor, novelist, dramatist, and short-story writer. He worked at diamond mining in South Africa, as a court clerk, and in the office of a Kimberley lawyer before returning to London. He became an actor, using the name Merrick, which later became his legal name. Author of Violet Moses (1891), The Man Who Was Good (1892), This Stage of Fools (1896), Cynthia (1897), One Man's View (1897), The Actor-Manager (1898), The Worldings

(1900), Conrad in Quest of His Youth (1903), The Quaint Companions (1903), The House of Lynch (1907), Lynch's Daughter (1908), The Position of Peggy Harper (1911), While Paris Laughed (1918), A Chair on the Boulevard (1921), and The Little Dog Laughed (1930), novels; Whispers About Women (1906) and The Man Who Understood Women (1908), short-story collections; When the Lamps Are Lighted, The Free Pardon, My Innocent Boy, The Elixir of Youth, and A Woman in the Case, plays.

Merrifield (mer'i.fēld), Charles Watkins. b. at London or Brighton, England, Oct. 20, 1827; d. at Brighton, Jan. 1, 1884. English mathematician.

Merrifield, Webster. b. at Williamsville, Vt., July 27, 1854; d. Jan. 22, 1916. American university professor. He was professor of Greek (1884–91) and of political and social science (1891–1905), and president (1891–1909) at the University of North Dakota.

Merrild (mer'il), Knud. b. in Jutland, Denmark, May 10, 1894—. American painter and sculptor, who has done many murals for hotels and other buildings in California. He studied at the Royal Academy of Fine Arts, Copenhagen, working his way through as a house-painter and decorator. He then traveled to Norway, Sweden, and England, finally arriving in the U.S. in 1921. Among his works are Deer and Tiger, Man and Horse, Leaping Deer, Hermaphrodite, and Portrait of D. H. Lawrence.

Merrilies (mer'i.lēz), Meg. In Sir Walter Scott's novel Guy Mannering, a weird and masculine Gypsy woman.

Merrill (mer'il). [Former names: Jenny Bull Falls, Jenny.] City in C Wisconsin, county seat of Lincoln County, on the Wisconsin River: once a great lumbering and sawmill center, it now produces paper, furniture, wood products, dairy products, and woolen hosiery. 8,951 (1950).

Merrill, Elmer Drew. b. at East Auburn, Me., Oct. 15, 1876—. American botanist, specialist in the taxonomy and phytogeography of Philippine, Polynesian, and Indo-Malayan plants.

Merrill, Elmer Truesdell. b. at Millville, Mass., Jan. 1, 1860; d. at Santa Barbara, Calif., April 20, 1936. American Latinist. Author or editor of Catullus (1893), Fragments of Roman Satire (1897), and Essays in Early Christian History (1924).

Merrill, Frederick James Hamilton. b. at New York, April 30, 1861; d. Nov. 29, 1916. American geologist.

Merrill, George Perkins. b. at Auburn, Me., May 31, 1854; d. there, Aug. 15, 1929. American geologist, noted chiefly for his theory of the explosive origin of meteors. He was assistant (1881–87) in charge of geology, curator (1887–97), and head curator (1897–1929) at the U.S. National Museum, where he developed the geology and paleontology collection. He made a special study (1906) of the Coon Butte or Meteor Crater in Arizona. He was professor (1893–1916) of geology and mineralogy at George Washington University. Author of Stones for Building and Decoration (1891), A Treatise on Rocks, Rock-weathering and Soils (1897), Non-metallic Minerals (1904), and The First One Hundred Years of American Geology (1924).

Merrill, Paul Willard. b. at Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 15, 1887—. American astronomer (1919 et seq.) at Mount Wilson Observatory, known for his researches in stellar spectroscopy.

Merrill, Selah. b. at Canton Center, Conn., May 2, 1837; d. near East Oakland, Calif., Jan. 22, 1909. American archaeologist and administrator. He was archaeologist (1874–75) and head (1876–77) of the expeditions of the American Palestine Exploration Society. He was appointed (1882) American consul at Jerusalem and later served as consul (1907–08) at Georgetown, British Guiana. Author of East of the Jordan (1881), Galilee in the Time of Christ (1881), Greek Inscriptions Collected in the Countries East of the Jordan (1885), The Site of Calvary Identified (1885), and Ancient Jerusalem (1908).

Merrill, Stephen Mason. b. near Mount Pleasant, Jefferson County, Ohio, Sept. 16, 1825; d. at Keyport, N.J., Nov. 12, 1905. American Methodist Episcopal clergyman.

Merrill, Stuart. b. at Hempstead, Long Island, N.Y., Aug. 1, 1863; d. at Versailles, France, Dec. 1, 1915. French poet of American birth, affiliated with the symbolists. Author of Les Gammes (1887), Pastels en prose (1890), Les Quatre Saisons (1900), and many articles on poets and poetic technique. Educated at a Paris lycée, then at Columbia Law School, he returned to France in 1890 and remained there until his death. With René Ghil and others, he preached the necessity of a new poetry which would be like music. He is credited with having introduced certain English rhythms in French prosody.

Merrill, William Emery. b. at Fort Howard, Wis., Oct. 11, 1837; d. Dec. 14, 1891. American military engineer. He developed (1879) the canalization of the Ohio River from Pittsburgh to its mouth.

Merrill's Marauders. In World War II, a jungle brigade that contributed greatly to General Joseph W. Stilwell's counteroffensive in Burma late in 1944. Trained for jungle operations and in penetrating enemy lines, this brigade was an important advance unit in the Allied gains in SE Asia.

Merrimack (mer'i.mak). Unincorporated community in N Alabama, in Madison County, near Huntsville. 3,035 (1950).

Merrimack. Forty-gun screw frigate built for the U.S. government in 1855. On April 19, 1861, the Norfolk navy yard was abandoned by the federal government, and the ships there, including the Merrimack, were sunk. The hull was raised by the Confederates and cut down to the berth deck. On the midship section a casemate of timber 170 ft. long was built, protected by a double iron plating four inches thick. The prow was of cast iron. She was renamed the Virginia, and was commanded by Commodore Franklin Buchanan. On March 8, 1862, she destroyed the Congress (a sailing ship of 50 guns) and the Cumberland (a sailing ship of 30 guns) at Newport News. On March 9 she attacked the Minnesota, and was met by the Monitor, which had arrived the night before. The battle, which lasted from 8 A.M. until noon, was inconclusive. The significance of this naval engagement lay in the fact that it demonstrated the value of iron armor for warcraft.

Merrimack River. River in S New Hampshire and NE Massachusetts. It is formed by the junction of the Pemigewasset and Winnipesaukee at Franklin, N.H., and flows into the Atlantic Ocean ab. 4 mi. E of Newburyport, Mass. It furnishes water power to Manchester, Nashua, Lowell, Lawrence, and other cities. Length, ab. 110 mi.

Merriman (mer'i.man), Henry Seton. Pseudonym of Scott, Hugh Stowell.

Merriman, John Xavier. b. in Somersetshire, England, 1841; d. at Stellenbosch, Union of South Africa, 1926. South African statesman. He practiced (1861) as a land surveyor at Cape Colony, was elected (1869) to the Cape house of assembly, and was commissioner (1875–77) of crown lands and public works. After serving (1890–93, 1898–1900) as treasurer general, he was prime minister (1908–10) of Cape Colony.

Merritt (mer'it), Ernest George. b. at Indianapolis, Ind., April 28, 1865—. American physicist, known for work on luminescence and radio. Collaborator on Fluorescence of the Uranyl Salts (1919) and other works.

Merritt, Leonidas. b. in Chautauqua County, N.Y., Feb. 20, 1844; d. at Duluth, Minn., May 9, 1926. American mine prospector. He was the discoverer (1890) with his brothers of the Mesabi deposits of iron ore in Minnesota, but they lost (1893) their control to John D. Rockefeller. He was commissioner of public utilities (1914–17) and commissioner of finance (1921–25) at Duluth, Minn.

Merritt, Wesley. b. at New York, June 16, 1834; d. at Natural Bridge, Va., Dec. 3, 1910. American general. He was in command at the capture of Manila (Aug. 13, 1898).

Merritt Island. Island in E Florida, in Brevard County. It is a low, flat island, with numerous orange groves and truck farms; the S extremity is a sandy point. Area, ab. 90 sq. mi.

Merritton (mer'i.ton). Town in the Niagara peninsula of SE Ontario, Canada, ab. 2 mi. SE of St. Catharines. It is the marketing center of an important fruit-growing district. 4,714 (1951).

Merriwell (mer'i.wel), Frank. Character in the juvenile series written by William Gilbert Patten under the pseudonym Burt L. Standish.

Merry (mer'i), Robert. Pseudonym, Della Crusca. b. at London, in April, 1755; d. at Baltimore, Dec. 14, 1798. English poet and dramatist. He became a member of the English Della Cruscan group at Florence (indeed, his pseudonym gave its name to this school of poetry). His affected style is exhibited in the correspondence with "Anna Matilda" (Hannah Cowley), which continued in the World till 1789.

Merry, William Lawrence. b. at New York, Dec. 27, 1842; d. Dec. 14, 1911. American diplomat. He was an advocate of the proposed Nicaragua canal.

Merry Conceited Humours of Bottom the Weaver, The. See Bottom the Weaver, The Merry Conceited Humours of.

Merry del Val (mer'rē del bäl'), Marquis Alfonso de. b. at London, 1864; d. at San Sebastián, Spain, May 26, 1943. Spanish diplomat. He received his education in Jesuit schools and at the University of Louvain, entering the Spanish diplomatic service in 1882. He became assistant private secretary to King Alfonso XIII in 1902, and served subsequently in the embassies at London, Brussels, Tangier, Vienna, and Rome and in the foreign office at Madrid. Created marquis in 1925, he was ambassador to Great Britain when the Spanish monarchy fell in 1931, and sent in his resignation. During the Spanish Civil War (1936–39) he engaged in liaison work between Spain and France in behalf of General Franco.

Merry Devil of Edmonton (ed'mən.tən), The. Comedy acted by the King's Men at the Globe Theatre, London, before Oct. 22, 1607. It is believed that this play was written before 1597. A prose tract, The Life and Death of the Merry Devil of Edmonton, was entered on the Stationers' Register in 1608 by "T.B." (Thomas Brewer). The popularity of the comedy probably suggested this tract, which does not cover quite the same ground. The play has been ascribed without reason to Shakespeare, to Thomas Heywood, and to Michael Drayton, but the authorship has not been established.

Merrygreek (mer'i.grēk), Matthew. [Also, Merigreek.] In Nicholas Udall's play Ralph Roister Doister, a parasite and mischievous boon companion of Ralph. He adroitly gets his own way by flattery and abuse.

Merrymount (mer'i.mount). Settlement within the present city of Quincy, Mass., made by Thomas Morton and others in 1625. The Pilgrims of Plymouth dispersed it in 1628, and it was again dispersed a few years later.

Merry Mount (mer'i mount). Opera in three acts (composed 1932; first performed 1934) by Howard Hanson, with a libretto by Richard Stokes based on Nathaniel Hawthorne's story The Maypole of Merry Mount.

Merry Widow, The. Operetta (1905) by Franz Lehár.

Merry Wives of Windsor (win'zər), The. Comedy by Shakespeare, produced c1600. It was first printed as we know it in the first folio, 1623. In 1602 an imperfect and probably unauthorized version in quarto was printed (reprinted in 1619). It seems to have been based on a mangled repetition stolen from the theater, or else was hurriedly written by command. For the plot Shakespeare was probably but little indebted to other writers. "The Two Lovers of Pisa" from Straparola, in Tarlton's News Out of Purgatory (1590), and a story from Il Pecorone of Ser Giovanni Fiorentino which suggests the hiding of Falstaff in the soiled linen, may possibly have suggested some of the incidents. An opera, Die lustigen Weiber von Windsor, by Otto Nicolai, words from Shakespeare by Mosenthal, was produced at Berlin in 1849.

Merry Wives of Windsor, The. English title of Lustigen Weiber von Windsor, Die.

Mers (mers). [Full name, Mers-les-Bains.] Sea-bathing resort in N France, on the English Channel: a northeastern part of Le Tréport, France.

Merscheid (mer'shīt). Former name of Ohligs.

Merse (mėrz). See under Berwickshire.

Merseburg (mer'zę.bůrk). City in E central Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony-Anhalt. Russian Zone, formerly in the province of Saxony, Prussia, on the Saale River ab. 16 mi. W of Leipzig. It has chemical, paper, leather, and machinery industries. The Dom (cathedral), originally a Romanesque building of the 13th century, has Gothic additions of the 16th century. The former episcopal castle is a Renaissance building of the 17th century. There are other ecclesiastical and secular buildings of the 13th, 15th, and 16th centuries. In the Carolingian period Merseburg was a fortress on the Slavic frontier; the Hungarians were defeated here by Henry I in 933; and Otto I founded the bishopric in 968. The Reformation was introduced in 1543. The city and its territory were incorporated into Prussia in 1815. During World War II Merseburg and its industrial plants were subjected to heavy Allied bombing attacks. 33,978 (1946).

Merseburger Zaubersprüche (mer'zę.bůr.gėr tsou'bėr-shprü.chę). Two Old High German magic charms, one for freeing a prisoner and the other for curing a horse of lameness. Although found on an otherwise empty page of a manuscript (in Merseburg) of the 10th century, these few lines of alliterative verse date from a much earlier time and are believed to be the oldest in the language. A. H. Krappe likens them to similar charms in the Atharva-Veda.

Mersenne (mer.sen), Marin. b. at La Soultière, Maine, France, Sept. 8, 1588; d. at Paris, Sept. 1, 1648. French theologian, mathematician, and philosopher, a friend of René Descartes, whose work he defended against clerical attacks. He discovered the laws which show the dependence of the time of vibration of a string upon its length, tension, and density, namely, that the time varies directly as the length and as the square root of the density, and inversely as the square root of the tension.

Merse of Berwick (mėrz; ber'ik). See under Berwickshire.

Mersey (mėr'zi). River in W England, in Cheshire and Lancashire. It is formed by the confluence of the rivers Tame and Goyt near Stockport, and flows by an estuary 16 mi. long into the Irish Sea at New Brighton. It is navigable to the mouth of the river Irwell. There is much shipbuilding and industry along its banks, and shipping moves up its channel to Liverpool and to inland canal and river ports. Length, ab. 70 mi.

Mershon (mėr.shon'), Ralph Davenport. b. at Zanesville, Ohio, July 14, 1868; d. Feb. 15, 1952. American electrical engineer. He invented the compounded rotary converter, the six-phase rotary converter, and the compensating voltmeter.

Mersin (mer.sēn'). See also Içel.

Mersin. [Also, Içel.] City in S Turkey, capital of the il (province or vilayet) of Içel, situated on the Mediterranean coast N of the NE tip of the island of Cyprus. It is a shipping port for the products of the nearby plain, including cotton, rice, and vegetables, and for the adjacent hill and mountain country, where olives, citrus fruits, wool, and wheat are produced. It is the terminus of the rail system serving S central and E Anatolia, and has important exports of chrome ore. 37,508 (1950).

Merson (mer.sôn), Luc Olivier. b. at Paris, May 21, 1846; d. there, Nov. 13, 1920. French painter of historical and religious scenes. He studied at the École de Dessin and the École des Beaux-Arts and won the Grand Prix de Rome in 1869. He exhibited at the Salon from 1867, and was commissioned to decorate parts of many buildings and to design tapestries for the Pantheon, the Peace Palace at The Hague, and the École des Beaux-Arts. He also designed the 50 and 100 franc notes. He was made commander of the Legion of Honor, and director of the École des Beaux-Arts, and won many medals for his work, a list of which includes The Soldier at Marathon, Rest in Egypt, Annunciation, Saint Louis Caring for the Sick, and illustrations for many books.

Merswin (mers'vin), Rulman. b. 1307; d. 1382. German merchant and mystic of Strasbourg, associated with Johannes Tauler and Heinrich Suso. He presented the Knights of Saint John with a cloister and retired to it himself. After his death certain of his writings were found (Von den vier Jahren seines angefangenen Lebens and Von den neun Felsen).

Merthyr Tydfil (mėr'thėr tid'vil). [Also: Merthyr Tydfyl, Merthyr Tydvil.] County borough and industrial town in S Wales, in Glamorganshire, on the river Taff ab. 164 mi. W of London by rail. It is situated on the South Wales coal field, and developed as a great iron and steel manufacturing center in the 19th century. In recent years the town has declined because of the preference of heavy industry in the area for a coastal location. Cyfarthfa Castle, now used as a school, museum, and art gallery, is here. 61,093 (1951).

Merton (mėr'tən), Thomas. b. in France, 1915—. American Trappist monk, poet, and religious writer. His earlier life was spent in England and France, and he attended Cambridge University in England before coming to the U.S., where he took his B.A. and M.A. degrees at Columbia University in New York. During his college days he was converted to the Roman Catholic faith, and in 1941 he entered the Trappist monastery at Gethsemane, Ky., and was subsequently ordained to the priesthood. His autobiographical work The Seven Storey Mountain (1948) was well received by critics and the public, and the same was true of his account of Trappist monastic life, The Waters of Siloe (1949). He is the author also of a book of religious meditations, Seeds of Contemplation (1949), and of two collections of poems, Figures for an Apocalypse (1947) and Tears of the Blind Lions (1949), and of The Ascent to Truth (1951).

Merton, Walter de. d. Oct. 27, 1277. Bishop of Rochester, and founder of Merton College, Oxford. In 1261 he was appointed chancellor of England, and he was elected bishop of Rochester in 1274. He originated the collegiate system of the English universities by the establishment in 1264 of Merton College, the "final statutes" of which date from August, 1274.

Merton Abbey. Factory and community of art workers established by William Morris at Merton, Surrey, England, in 1881, under the best attainable artistic conditions.

Merton and Morden (môr'dẹn). Urban district in SE England, in Surrey, ab. 9 mi. SW of Waterloo Station, London: a part of Greater London. At Merton there are remains of a priory founded in 1115. Pop. 74,602 (1951).

Merton College. One of the colleges of Oxford University. It was founded in 1264 by Walter de Merton, bishop of Rochester, at Malden, Surrey, and was transferred to Oxford in 1274. It is the college of Bodley, remembered in the name of a great library, Anthony à Wood, of the Athenae Oxonienses, Mandell Creighton, ecclesiastical historian and biographer of Wolsey and Elizabeth, Steele, who left before taking a degree, and Lord Randolph Churchill, father of the 20th-century prime minister.

Merton of the Movies. Novel by Harry Leon Wilson, published in 1922. It was dramatized (1922) by George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly.

Meru (mā'rö). See also Lumbwa.

Meru. In Hindu and Buddhist mythology, the central mountain of the earth, of prodigious height and precious material, having on its summit the abode of the gods. The sun, moon, and stars revolve around it. In Buddhist cosmogony, Meru rises out of the ocean.

Meru, Lake. See Mweru, Lake.

Meru, Mount. Volcanic peak in N Tanganyika, East Africa, ab. 45 mi. W of Mt. Kilimanjaro. 14,978 ft.

Merulo (mā'rö.lō), Claudio. [Called Claudio da Correggio.] b. at Correggio, Italy, 1533; d. at Parma, Italy, March 4, 1604. Italian composer and organist. Among his works are madrigals, ricercari, motets, masses, and organ works.

Merv (merv; Russian, myerf). See Mary, U.S.S.R.

Merville (mer.vēl). Town in N France, in the department of Nord, on the Lys River ab. 18 mi. W of Lille. The town has a number of factories and a river port. It was besieged by the Germans in World War I. 7,374 (1946).

Merwig (mėr'wig). See Merowig.

Merwin (mėr'win), Henry Childs. b. at Pittsfield, Mass., Aug. 5, 1853; d. Jan. 21, 1929. American lawyer. Author of Patentability of Inventions (1884), Life of Aaron Burr (1899), Life of Thomas Jefferson (1901), and The Horse (1916).

Merwin, Samuel. b. at Evanston, Ill., Oct. 6, 1874; d. Oct. 17, 1936. American writer and editor. He was associate editor (1905–09) and editor (1909–11) of Success magazine. Author of The Road to Frontenac (1901), The Merry Anne (1904), The Road Builders (1905), Drugging a Nation (1908), Anthony the Absolute (1914), Temperamental Henry (1917), The Passionate Pilgrim (1919), In Red and Gold (1921), Moment of Beauty (1924), Anabel at Sea (1927), Lady Can Do (1929), and Bad Penny (1933).

Merx (merks), Adalbert. b. at Bleicherode, Germany, Nov. 2, 1838; d. at Heidelberg, Germany, Aug. 4, 1909. German Protestant theologian and Orientalist. Author of Der Einfluss des alten Testaments auf die Bildung und Entwicklung der Universalgeschichte (The Influence of the Old Testament on the Culture and Development of Universal History, 1904).

Merxem (merk'sẹm). See Merksem.

Méry (mā.rē), Joseph. b. near Marseilles, France, Jan. 21, 1798; d. at Paris, June 17, 1866. French man of letters. Among his numerous works are novels, books of travel, plays, and poems. Conjointly with Auguste Barthélemy he wrote satirical verses.

Méryon (mā.ryôṅ), Charles. b. at Paris, 1821; d. at Charenton, near Paris, 1868. French etcher and engraver. Among his works are Le Pont du change, La Vielle Morgue, Le Petit Pont, and La Rue de la Pirouette.

Merzifon (mer.zē.fôn'). [Also, Marsivan.] Manufacturing town in N Turkey, in the il (province or vilayet) of Amasya, ab. 25 mi. NW of Amasya, in a coal-mining area. Pop. ab. 13,000.

Merzig (mer'tsiċh). Town in the Saar territory, formerly Saarland, Germany, on the Saar River ab. 21 mi. NW of Saarbrücken: pottery, leather, knitwear, and machine industries. Prior to 1919, it belonged to the Rhine Province, Prussia. It suffered considerable damage in World War II. 13,858 (1939).

Mesa (mē'zą). See also Mesha.

Mesa (mā'są). City in S central Arizona, in Maricopa County, ab. 16 mi. E of Phoenix: marketing center of an irrigated agricultural area producing citrus fruit, cotton, and vegetables. It was founded (1878) by the Mormons, and is the site of a Mormon temple. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population more than doubled. 7,224 (1940) 16,790 (1950).

Mesabi Range (mẹ.sä'bi). [Former names: Mesaba (mẹ.sä'bą), Masaba.] Range of metalliferous hills in NE Minnesota, NW of Lake Superior, the most important iron-producing region of the world. It was opened up in 1892. Up to 1949 the Mesabi iron mines had produced 1,656,460,550 tons of iron ore; the 1949 production was 52,551,346 tons, which amounted to 62 percent of the U.S. total. The largest mine, at Hibbing, produced ab. 12 percent of the total Mesabi output in 1949.

Mesa Encantada (mā'sä eng.kän.tä'ᵹhä). Spanish name of Katzimo.

Mesagne (mā.sä'nyā). Town and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Brindisi, situated on the Salentina peninsula ab. 8 mi. SW of Brindisi. The district produces olive oil, wine, and fruit. There is a medieval castle. Pop. of commune, 18,795 (1936); of town, 17,069 (1936).

Mesartim (mẹ.sär'tim). Commonly used name for the fourth-magnitude double star γ Arietis.

Mesa Verde National Park (mā'są vėrd'). National park (established 1906) between Mancos and Cortez in S Colorado. This was the seat of one of the main branches of Anasazi culture, and is particularly noted for its large cliff dwellings of the Great Pueblo period (1050–1200 A.D.). There are also pit-house and mesa-top ruins built during the earlier Modified Basketmaker and Developmental Pueblo times. The National Park Service maintains an excellent museum and conducts tours of the ruins. Area, 51,018 acres.

Mescala (mes.kä'lä). See Balsas.

Mescalero (mes.kä.lā'rō). Tribe of North American Apache Indians, formerly inhabiting the mountain districts east of the Rio Grande. Their language, Mescalero, belongs to the Western branch of the Apachean group of the Southern Athapascan languages. Today they survive on the Mescalero Reservation at Fort Stanton, N.M.

Meschede (mā'shā.dẹ). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the province of Westphalia, Prussia, on the Ruhr River ab. 10 mi. SE of Arnsberg: metalworking, knitwear, paper, lumber, and tobacco manufactures. A concentration camp was established here during World War II. 7,530 (1946).

Meschino (mās.kē'nō), Guerino. See Guerino Meschino.

Mescua (mes'kwä), Antonio Mira de. fl. 1602–35. Spanish dramatist, praised by Cervantes and Lope de Vega for his plays and verse.

Mesdag (mes dach), Hendrik Willem. b. at Groningen, Netherlands, Feb. 23, 1831; d. at The Hague, Netherlands, July 10, 1915. Dutch marine and landscape painter, who did not start to paint until he was almost 40. His work is now in many important European collections. Among his better-known paintings are Breakers in the North Sea, Return of the Fishing Boats, Collision, and Raising Anchor.

Meseritz (mā'zę.rits). German name of Międzyrzecz.

Mesha (mē'shą). [Also, Mesa.] King of Moab (c850 B.C.). He is mentioned in 2 Kings, iii as having been subject to the kings of Israel, but after Ahab's death he fell away. Hereupon Joram, king of Israel, in alliance with Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, undertook an expedition against him, and shut him up in Kir-Haresheth, situated a little to the E of the S end of the Dead Sea. In this emergency Mesha sacrificed his first-born son to Chemosh. The Israelites thereupon departed to their land. In 1868 a stele was discovered near Dhiban (Dibon), the ancient capital of Moab, on which Mesha had recorded this event. The stele is inscribed in the Moabite dialect.

Meshach (mē'shak). [Also: Misach; Hebrew, Mishael.] In the Bible, one of the three Hebrews cast by Nebuchadnezzar into the fiery furnace. His Hebrew name was Mishael, Meshach being substituted for it by the prince of the eunuchs of the king of Babylon. Dan. iii. 12-30.

Meshech (mē'shek). [Also: Moschoi, Muski.] According to Genesis, the descendants of Japheth. They were allies or subjects of Gog, the Prince of Rosh, Meshech, and Tubal, and inhabited the land of Musku, i.e., Meshech, in the mountains to the north of Assyria, and were gradually driven northward near the Black Sea. In the Tyrian markets they traded in slaves and bronze. Herodotus mentions them as Moschoi.

Meshed (me.shed'). [Also: Mashhad, Meshhed (meshhed').] City in NE Iran, former capital of Khurasan province, situated near the border of the U.S.S.R.: an important trading center, famous for rugs made on hand looms. Much of Iran's trade with the U.S.S.R. passes through the city. It is a noted place of pilgrimage. The mosque contains the Shiite shrine of the imam Riza. 176,471 (est. 1948).

Meshhed-Ali (mesh.hed'ä'lē). See An Najaf.

Meshhed-Hussein (-hō.sān'). See Karbala, town.

Meshhed-Murghab (-mör.gäb'). See under Pasargadae.

Mesilla (mā.sē'yą). [Also: Old Mesilla, La Mesilla.] Unincorporated community in S New Mexico, in Dona Ana County, near the Rio Grande. 1,264 (1950).

Mesjid-i-Sulaiman (mes.jid'ē.sō.lī.mān'). See Masjid-i-Sulaiman.

Mesmer (mes'mėr; Anglicized, also, mez'mėr), Friedrich (or Franz) Anton. b. near Konstanz, Baden, Germany, May 23, 1733; d. at Meersburg, Baden, March 5, 1815. German physician, originator of the theory of mesmerism or animal magnetism. He studied divinity at Dillingen and Ingolstadt, but afterward studied medicine at Vienna, where he took his degree in 1766. He began (c1771) an investigation into the supposed curative powers of the magnet, which led him to adopt the theory of animal magnetism. This he made public in 1775 in a pamphlet entitled Sendschreiben an einen auswärtigen Arzt über die Magnetkur. In 1778 he settled at Paris, where he created a sensation as a practitioner of hypnotism or mesmerism. In 1785 the French government appointed a commission of eminent physicians and scientists to investigate his system. An adverse report followed, and he fell into disrepute and spent his last years at Meersburg.

Meso-American (mes'ō.ą.mer'i.kąn). Term applied to the Indian peoples of the Pacific coasts of Nicaragua and Costa Rica, who migrated from Mexico before the Spanish conquest. They were either Nahuatlan or Chorotegan speaking groups. They were well organized politically and religiously, and highly developed in methods of warfare. It is well established that they practiced human sacrifice and cannibalism. They were distinguished by a certain type of polychrome pottery, which they introduced into Central America. They cultivated maize and tobacco, made gold beads, knew weaving, and practiced tattooing and tongue-piercing. The Meso-American languages, according to J. A. Mason's latest classification, are divided into four phylums: namely, Hokan-Siouan, Macro-Penutian, Macro-Otomanguean, and Macro-Chibchan.

Mesola (mā'zō.lä). Village and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Emilia-Romagna, in the province of Ferrara, situated in the Po delta, on the S bank of the Po di Goro River, E of Ferrara: agricultural commune. Pop. of commune, 13,623 (1936); of village, 800 (1936).

Mesolithic Period (mes.ō.lith'ik, mē.sō-). Name often given to the period between the Paleolithic and Neolithic at the close of the Pleistocene Period and the beginning of the recent age. It marks the final stages of the hunting cultures of the Ice Age and the commencement of the food-producing economy of the Neolithic. Several different cultures are distinguishable, but their relationships and chronology are still not clear.

Mesolonghi (me.sô.lông'gē). See Missolonghi, Greece.

Mesolongion (me.sô.lông'gyôn). Modern Greek name of Missolonghi, Greece.

Mesopotamia (mes''ō.pō.tā'mi.ą). [From Greek, meaning "Between Rivers"; Hebrew, Aram Naharaïm.] Country between the Euphrates and Tigris. It is usually divided into Upper Mesopotamia (ancient Chaldea) and Babylonia. It is a great lowland plain, and was formerly very extensively irrigated and cultivated; in recent decades there has been a considerable extension of the irrigated area. It was invaded and conquered several times by the Egyptians and has belonged at different times to the Median, Persian, Macedonian, Syrian, Parthian, Roman, New Persian, Saracenic, Mongol, and Turkish empires. It became a Turkish province, with Baghdad as capital, and after World War I became part of the kingdom of Iraq.

Mesopotamia, Argentine. [Spanish, Mesopotamia Argentina (mā''sō.pō.tä'myä är.hen.tē'nä).] That portion of Argentina lying between the Paraná and Uruguay rivers. It includes the provinces of Entre Ríos (which also means "between rivers") and Corrientes and the territory of Misiones. The term, coined by C. F. Jones, is used chiefly by U.S. and English writers. Area, ab. 73,545 sq. mi.; pop. 1,559,221 (1947).

Mesozoic Era (mes.ō.zō'ik, mē.sō-). Geological period immediately preceding the age of modern life forms; the age of the dinosaurs. See table at end of Volume III.

Mespila (mes.pē'lą). See under Kuyunjik.

Mesrob (mes.rōb'), Saint. [Also: Mesrop (-rōp'), Mashtotz.] b. in the province of Taron, Armenia, c350; d. 441. Armenian bishop and scholar. He was a disciple of Saint Nerses the Great and secretary to the Persian governor of Armenia. He became a monk, preached in Eastern Armenia, and six months before his death was named Katholikos (presiding bishop) of Armenia. He invented the Armenian alphabet of 36 letters, and translated the Bible into Armenian.

Messager (me.sä.zhā), André Charles Prosper. b. at Montluçon, France, Dec. 30, 1853; d. 1929. French composer, conductor, and impresario, a pupil of Saint-Saëns. Although he wrote serious music, he is best known as a composer of light operas. His works include François les bas bleus (1883), La Fauvette du Temple (1885), La Béarnaise (1885), Les Bourgeois de Calais (1887), Isoline (1888), Le Mari de la reine (1889), La Basoche (1890), Madame Chrysanthème (1893), Miss Dollar (1893), Mirette (1894), Le Chevalier d'Harmental (1896), Les P'tites Michu (1897), Véronique (1898), Les Dragons de l'impératrice (1905), and Fortunio (1907). For several years Messager was a conductor at the Paris Opéra-Comique, and a director (1907 et seq.) of the Paris Opéra.

Messager, Charles. See Vildrac, Charles.

Message to Garcia (gär'si.ą; Spanish, gär.sē'ä), A. Essay by Elbert Hubbard, published in 1899, describing the heroic action of Lieutenant Andrew Summers Rowan in meeting General Calixto García Íñiguez, leader of the Cuban insurgents. The essay's inspirational emphasis on fidelity and perseverance was found applicable in industry as well as war and approximately 40 million copies were circulated in the years after its publication.

Messala (or Messalla) Corvinus (me.sā'lą, me.sal'ą, kôr.vī'nus), Marcus Valerius. fl. in the second half of the 1st century B.C. Roman general, official, orator, historian, and patron of literature. He fought for Antony at Philippi (42 B.C.) but later was on Octavius's side at Actium (31 B.C.). He was consul (31 B.C.).

Messalians (me.sā'li.ąnz). See Euchites.

Messali Hadj (me.sä.lē' häj'). b. at Tlemcen, Oran, Algeria, c1896—. Algerian nationalist leader, advocate of Algerian autonomy and leader of the Algerian People's Party. Leader of the group called "North African Star"

(1927–37), which favored independence for French North Africa, he next formed (1937) the Algerian People's Party. Imprisoned (1937–43), he was released by General Giraud, placed under surveillance (1943–45), and was again placed under arrest (1945–46).

Messalina or Messallina (mes.ą.lī'nạ), Valeria. Executed 48 A.D. Roman empress. She became the third wife of Claudius, who afterward ascended the imperial throne. She was a woman of infamous vices, and during a temporary absence of her husband publicly married her favorite, Gaius Silius. Her partner in influence over Claudius, the freedman Narcissus, informed the emperor, and she was put to death by order of Claudius. She was the mother of Claudius Tiberius Germanicus and of Octavia, Nero's wife, by Claudius.

Messana (mẹ.sā'nạ). An ancient name of Messina, Italy.

Messapia (mẹ.sā'pi.ạ). In ancient geography, the peninsula at the SE extremity of Italy, often used as synonymous with Calabria or Iapygia. The name derives from its prehistoric Illyrian inhabitants.

Messe (mes'sā), Giovanni. b. at Mesagne, Italy, Dec. 10, 1883—. Italian general. He was active (1913–14, 1915–16) in the Libyan campaign and headed (1916) assault troops during World War I. In World War II he was in command (1941) of Italian troops fighting in Russia and was appointed (1942) general after returning to Italy. He was in charge (1943) of operations in Tunisia, where he was taken prisoner by Anglo-American forces, and was named marshal of Italy and chief of staff after his repatriation later in the same year.

Messene (mẹ.sē'nē). In ancient geography, a city in Messenia, Greece, on the slope of Mount Ithome, ab. 19 mi. SW of Megalopolis. It was founded (369 B.C.) as a fortress against Sparta, under the influence of the Theban general Epaminondas, and is noted now for its extensive ruins at the modern village of Mavromati.

Messene. An ancient name of Messina, Italy.

Messenia (mẹ.sē'ni.ạ). In ancient geography, a division of the Peloponnesus, Greece. It was bounded by Elis and Arcadia on the N, Laconia (separated by Mount Taygetus) on the E, and the sea on the S and W. It contained the fertile valley of the Pamisus, early settled by Dorians.

Messenia. [Also, Messinia.] Nomos (department) in S Greece, in the SW part of the Peloponnesus. Capital, Kalamata; area, ab. 1,315 sq. mi.; pop. 227,648 (1951).

Messenia, Gulf of. [Also, Gulf of Korone.] Inlet of the Mediterranean, S and E of Messenia, Greece.

Messer (mes'ėr), Asa. b. at Methuen, Mass., May 31, 1769; d. at Providence, R.I., Oct. 11, 1836. American educator, president (1802–27) of Brown University.

Messer, August Wilhelm. b. at Mainz, Germany, Feb. 11, 1867; d. at Rostock, Germany, July 11, 1937. German philosopher, professor (1904 et seq.) at the University of Giessen. Author of Einführung in die Philosophie und Pädagogik (1931), Einführung in die Psychologie (1931), Geschichte der Philosophie im Altertum und Mittelalter (1932), and (with A. Gemmer) Sören Kierkegaard und Karl Barth (1925).

Messer Marco Polo (mes'ėr mär'kō pō'lō). Romance by Brian O. Donn-Byrne, published in 1921.

Messerschmitt (mes'ėr.shmit), Wilhelm. b. 1898—. German aeronautical designer and builder. He established (1923) the Messerschmitt aircraft manufacturing works, of which he was chairman and director. He served as chairman (1928–38) of the Bayerische Flugzeugwerke until its amalgamation with the Messerschmitt firm. During World War II he supplied the German air force with leading types of combat aircraft.

Messersmith (mes'ėr.smith), George S. b. at Fleetwood, Pa., Oct. 3, 1883—. American diplomat. He entered (1914) the U.S. consular service, and was stationed (1914–16) at Fort Erie, Canada. He served as consul general in Belgium (1923–28), Argentina (1928), and Berlin (1930–34). He was appointed U.S. minister to Uruguay (1934) and Austria (1934), served (1937–40) as assistant secretary of state, and was ambassador to Cuba (1940–41), Mexico (1941–42), and Argentina (1946–47). He retired from foreign service to join (1947) the Mexico Light and Power Company as chairman and chief executive.

Messiah (mẹ.sī'ạ). [Sometimes called Messias (mẹ.sī'ạs).] Designation of Jesus as the Saviour of the world; the Hebrew equivalent of "Christ, the Anointed": from prophetic passages in the Hebrew Scriptures (where, except in two instances in Daniel, it is translated "Anointed," often as a noun) interpreted by Jesus and by Christians as referrring to him and universal in scope, but regarded by the Jews as promising a divinely sent deliverer for them. This belief in a coming Messiah is still held as a doctrine by many Jews, and at various periods of the Christian era impostors have assumed the name and character, and have had many adherents. The title is also applied figuratively to historical characters who have been great deliverers. The word is sometimes written Messias, after the Greek of the New Testament.

Messiah. Oratorio by George Frederick Handel, composed in 1741 (first produced at Dublin in 1742). The words are by Charles Jennens from the Scriptures. Mozart composed additional accompaniments to it in 1789. Probably no other musical composition has created such lasting and deep enthusiasm.

Messiah, The. Sacred pastoral by Alexander Pope, published in The Spectator, May 14, 1712.

Messias (mẹ.sī'ạs; German, me.sē'ās). [English, Messiah.] Epic poem by Friedrich Gottlieb Klopstock, in 20 cantos. The first three cantos were published in 1748 in the Bremer Beiträge, but he did not finish it till 1773. His model was Milton's Paradise Lost, but he did not profit sufficiently by his example. The poem suffers from excess of sentiment, and the lyric quality is more nearly related to the religious oratorios than to a genuine epic.

Messidor (me.sē.dôr). Name adopted in 1793 by the National Convention of the first French republic for the tenth month of the year. It consisted of 30 days, beginning in the years 1 to 7 with June 19, and in 8 to 13 with June 20.

Messin (me.saṅ), Pays. Former district in NE France. With Verdunois it formed one of the small governments of France prior to 1790. Chief town, Metz.

Messina (mẹ.sē'nạ; Italian, mās.sē'nä). Province in SW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Sicily. Capital, Messina; area, ab. 1,253 sq. mi.; pop. 627,093 (1936).

Messina. [Ancient names: Messana, Messene, Zancle.] City and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, the capital of the province of Messina, opposite the coast of Calabria. It is a port city, with active trade in citrus fruits, wine, and olive oil. Ferry boats connect it with Reggio di Calabria on the mainland. It is the seat of a bishopric and of a university (founded in 1548); there is a technical and a nautical institute, a marine-biological institute, and an art museum. The city suffered from earthquakes in 1783 and 1908; the latter was disastrous, inflicting about 80,000 casualties and tremendous damage to buildings (of the beautiful "palazzata," a row of three-story 18th-century buildings fronting the harbor, only the Piazza Municipale remained undamaged). Reconstructed are the cathedral, a building in Norman style; the Church of San Francesco (13th century); and several 16th-century churches, the most celebrated of which was San Giorgio. Messina was settled by Greeks in the 8th century B.C. under the name of Zancle; it changed sides several times in the struggle between Carthage and the powerful rulers of the rival town of Syracuse; fell into the hands of the Mamertines who, as allies of Rome, initiated the first Punic War. It was conquered by the Arabs in 831, by the Normans in 1061, and was under Spanish rule from 1282 to 1675 and from 1676 to 1713. Its attempt to adhere to France against Spain was frustrated after the defeat of the French fleet in the battle of Messina in 1676. Garibaldi occupied Messina on July 28, 1860, and the citadel on March 13, 1861. In World War II Messina was the place of the last stand of the German army in Sicily; it was occupied by the Allies in August, 1943. Considerable damage was suffered by some buildings of tourist interest, but repairs have been completed or are being carried out. Pop. of commune, 192,051 (1936), 220,790 (1951); of city, 121,605 (1936).

Messina, Antonello da. See Antonello da Messina.

Messina, Strait of. [Italian, Stretto (or Faro) di Messina; Latin, Fretum Siculum.] Strait in the Mediterranean, separating Sicily from the mainland of Italy. Width in narrowest part, ab. 2 mi.

Messine (me.sēn'). J. I.a. See Adam, Juliette.

Messinia (me.sē'ni.ạ). See Messenia.

Messkirch (mes'kirĉh). [Also, Mösskirch.] Small town in SW Germany, in the Land (state) of Baden, French Zone, ab. 24 mi. N of Konstanz. Near it, on May 5, 1800, the French under Jean Victor Moreau defeated the Austrians under Paul Kray.

Mesta (mes'tä). [Greek, Nestos; Turkish, Kara Su; Latin, Nestus.] River in SE Europe, rising in SW Bulgaria and flowing generally SE through NE Greece to the Aegean Sea opposite the island of Thasos. Length, ab. 150 mi.

Mesta (mes'tą), Perle. [Maiden name, Skirvin.] b. 1891—. American hostess and diplomat. She entered political life c1935. In 1946 she served as hostess at the coming-out party for Margaret Truman, daughter of President Harry S. Truman, and in 1949 was a chairman for the president's inaugural ball. She was named (1949) ambassador of the U.S. to Luxembourg, serving there until 1953. The appointment caused much comment and resulted in the hit musical comedy by Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse Call Me Madam (1950), in which Ethel Merman played the part of a hostess appointed ambassador to a mythical country called Lichtenburg.

Meston (mes'tǫn), William. b. in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, c1688; d. at Aberdeen, Scotland, 1745. Scottish burlesque poet. His poems are mostly imitations of Butler's Hudibras. Among them are The Knight of the Kirk (1723), Mob contra Mob (1731), and Old Mother Grim's Tales (1737).

Mestre (mes'trā). Town in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Venezia, ab. 5 mi. NW of Venice. It was incorporated into the commune of Venice in 1926. It is an important railroad center, port, and industrial suburb of Venice on the mainland. The parish church of San Lorenzo was slightly damaged during World War II. 23,887 (1936).

Meštrović (mesh'trǭ.vich), Ivan. b. at Otavitze, in Dalmatia, Aug. 15, 1883—. Yugoslav sculptor. His monumental sculptures have won international fame. He studied at Vienna and Paris, where he met Rodin and Bourdelle, and lived as a refugee at Rome, Geneva, and London during World War I. Though influenced by the modern art of his time, his work is intensely personal in its passionate expressionism. He utilizes religious, mythological, folklore, and symbolical subjects. Among his works are the monument to the Unknown Soldier near Belgrade, and The Archangel Gabriel at the Brooklyn Museum; among his portrait busts are those of President Masaryk and Sir Thomas Beecham. He had a one-man show (1947) at the Metropolitan Museum at New York.

Mesurado (mes.u.rä'dō), Cape. Former name of Montserrado, Cape.

Mészáros (mā'sä.rōsh), Lázár. b. at Baja, Hungary, Feb. 20, 1796; d. at Eywood, Herefordshire, England, Nov. 16, 1858. Hungarian revolutionary general and politician. He was minister of war (1848–49) and succeeded Görgey as commander in chief in 1849.

Meta (mā'tä). Intendency in C Colombia. Capital, Villavicencío; area, ab. 32,903 sq. mi.; pop. 51,674 (1938).

Metacomet (met.ą.kom'ęt). Original name of Philip, King.

Metairie (met'ą.ri). Unincorporated community in SE Louisiana, in Jefferson Parish, near New Orleans: formerly important for horse racing. Under the new urban definition established for use in the 1950 census it was counted with adjoining urban communities. The last official enumeration was 2,892 (1940).

Metamneh (me.tăm'ne). See Metemmeh.

Metamora, or the Last of the Wampanoags (met.ą.mō'rą; wom.pą.nō'ągz). Romantic tragedy by John Augustus Stone, produced in 1829.

Metamorphoses (met.ą.môr'fǭ.sēz). Poetical work by Ovid, based on the principal classical legends.

Metamorphoses. See Golden Ass, The.

Metaphysical School of Poets. Name given by Samuel Johnson to John Donne, Abraham Cowley, and other poets of the 17th century.

Metaphysics of Aristotle (ar'is.tot.l). Celebrated work by Aristotle. It consists of 13 books, more or less disconnected and imperfect, dealing with the doctrines of his predecessors and with various metaphysical topics.

Metapontum (met.ą.pon'tum). [Also, Metapontium (-pon'shi.um).] In ancient geography, a city in S Italy, situated on the Gulf of Tarentum ab. 25 mi. SW of Tarentum. It was one of the flourishing cities of Magna Graecia. Pythagoras died here. Still standing are the ruins of a temple of Apollo, Greek Doric of the 5th century B.C., hexastyle, peripteral, with sculptured metopes; and of a temple called the Tavola dei Paladini, Greek Doric of c600 B.C., hexastyle, with 12 columns on the flanks.

Meta River (mā'tä). River in C Colombia and Venezuela, which flows NE to join the Orinoco. Length, ab. 685 mi.; navigab'e for ab. 400 mi.

Metastasio (mā.tä.stä'zyō). [Original name, Pietro Antonio Domenico Bonaventura Trapassi.] b. at Rome, Jan. 3, 1698; d. at Vienna, April 12, 1782. Italian poet, court poet at Vienna (1730–82). He was the author of numerous lyric dramas (various composers supplying the music for each): Didone abbandonata (1724), Catone in Utica, Ezio, Semiramide, Alessandro nell' Indie, Artaserse, Demetrio, Adriano in Siria, Olimpiade, Demofoonte, La Clemenza di Tito (1734), Achille in Sciro, Antigone, Il Trionfo di Clelia, Partenope, and others. He also wrote poems for cantatas, oratorios, and others. Burney wrote his memoirs (1796).

Metauro (mā.tou'rō). [Latin, Metaurus (me.tôr'us).] Small river in Italy, which flows into the Adriatic ab. 28 mi. NW of Ancona. The battle of the Metaurus was a victory gained at the river, S of Rimini, in 207 B.C., by the Romans under the consuls Marcus Livius Salinator and Claudius Nero over the Carthaginians under Hasdrubal. Nero had eluded Hannibal in S Italy, and made a forced march of 250 mi. with 7,000 men. Hasdrubal was slain, and his army nearly annihilated. Hannibal was thus left in a hopeless position, unable to get reserves, in S Italy. This victory is ranked as one of the decisive battles of the world.

Metaxas (mę.tak'sąs; Greek, me'täk.säs), John. b. 1871; d. 1941. Greek general and dictator. He was chief of staff of the Greek army when Greece entered World War I on the side of the Allied Powers in 1917, and being pro-German, was compelled to leave the country. In 1920 he returned, and staged a counterrevolution against the newly established Greek republic, but was again exiled. After years of violence and chaos, the republic was overthrown, and Metaxas became premier under King George II in April, 1936. In August of that year he dissolved the parliament, assumed dictatorial power, and proceeded to rule by martial law. In July, 1938, he caused himself to be named premier for life. He displayed vigor and ability in resisting the Italian invasion of Greece beginning in October, 1940, but died in the course of the early stages of that struggle.

Metcalf (met'kåf), Victor Howard. b. at Utica, N.Y., Oct. 10, 1853; d. Feb. 20, 1936. American lawyer and cabinet officer, secretary of commerce and labor (1904–06) and secretary of the navy (1906–08) under Theodore Roosevelt. He was a Republican member of Congress for California (1899–1904).

Metcalf, Willard Leroy. b. at Lowell, Mass., 1858; d. at New York, March 9, 1925. American landscape painter. He was a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters and the League of American Artists. Among his principal works are May Night (Washington), On the River (Cincinnati), and Ice-Bound (Chicago).

Metcalf, William. b. at Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 3, 1838; d. Dec. 5, 1909. American steel manufacturer. He was general superintendent (1859–65) of the Fort Pitt Foundry at Pittsburgh, which manufactured heavy guns used in the Civil War.

Metcalfe (met'kåf), Charles Theophilus. [Title, 1st Baron Metcalfe.] b. at Calcutta, India, Jan. 30, 1785; d. near Basingstoke, Hampshire, England, Sept. 5, 1846. British administrator. He was provisional governor general of British India (1835–36), lieutenant governor of the Northwest Provinces (1836–38), governor of Jamaica (1839–42), and governor general of Canada (1843–45).

Metcalfe, Frederick. b. 1815; d. Aug. 24, 1885. English Scandinavian scholar.

Metcalfe, Samuel Lytler. b. near Winchester, Va., Sept. 21, 1798; d. at Cape May, N.J., July 17, 1856. American chemist, geologist, and physician.

Metchnikoff (mech'ni.kôf), Élie. [Also, Ilya Ilyich Mechnikov.] b. at Ivanovka, Kharkov, Russia, May 15, 1845; d. at Paris, July 16, 1916. Russian bacteriologist.

He studied at Kharkov, and at Giessen and Munich in Germany, worked at the biological stations on the island of Helgoland and at Naples (1865), and became (1870) professor of zoölogy and comparative anatomy at Odessa, leaving his university post in 1882 to concentrate on research in the anatomy of vertebrates. He organized (1886) the first Pasteur station in Russia, and devoted himself to studies in pathology. He went (1888) to Paris, where Pasteur gave him a laboratory at the École Normale, and was Pasteur's successor (1895) as director of the Pasteur Institute, holding the post until his death. He originated the theory of intracellular digestion and of phagocytosis (1884), shed new light on the role of the individual cell in the struggle with pathogenic bacteria (1887), thus modifying all medical thought and laying the basis for the contemporary theory of immunity against infectious diseases. With his name is also linked the concept of inflammation as a fundamental defense reaction of the organism. He contributed also to the advancement of comparative embryology, and showed that higher apes can be inoculated with syphilis (1904). He is also noted for his studies of longevity, particularly in relation to the bacteria of the alimentary canal. Together with Paul Ehrlich, he was awarded (1908) the Nobel prize for medicine. Author of Leçons sur la pathologie comparé de l'inflammation (1892), Aetiologie und Prophylaxe der Infektionskrankheiten (1897), Immunité (1897), L'Immunité dans les maladies infectieuses (1901; Eng. trans., Immunity in Infective Diseases, 1905), Essais optimistes and Études sur la nature humaine (1903; Eng. trans., The Nature of Man . . . Studies in Optimistic Philosophy, 1903), La Vieillesse (1903), Die Lehre von den Phagozyten und deren experimentelle Grundlagen (1904), Quelques remarques sur le lait aigri (1905), Genuine Lactobacilline, a Medicine and Food (1906), and Bactériothérapie, vaccination, sérothérapie (1908).

Metelino (mā.tā.lē'nō). Italian name of Lesbos.

Metellus (mę.tel'us), Lucius Caecilius. d. c221 B.C. Roman general. As proconsul he defeated the Carthaginians at Panormus in 250.

Metellus, Quintus Caecilius. [Surnamed Macedonicus, meaning "the Macedonian."] d. 115 B.C. Roman general. As praetor he was distinguished for his victories in Macedonia and Greece (148–146 B.C.). He was consul in 143, and censor in 131.

Metellus, Quintus Caecilius. [Surnamed Numidicus, meaning "the Numidian."] d. 99 B.C. Roman general: nephew of Metellus Macedonicus. As consul and proconsul he defeated Jugurtha in Numidia in 109 and 108 B.C. He was exiled (c100 B.C.) by his political opponents.

Metellus, Quintus Caecilius. [Surnamed Pius.] d. c64 B.C. Roman general; son of Metellus Numidicus. He was commander under Sulla in the civil wars, was consul in 80 B.C., and commanded later in Spain against Sertorius.

Metellus, Quintus Caecilius. [Surnamed Creticus, meaning "the Cretan."] d. probably c56 B.C. Roman general. He was consul in 69, and subdued Crete (68–67).

Metellus Celer (sē'lėr), Quintus Caecilius. d. 59 B.C. Roman statesman. He was praetor in 63, opposed the conspiracy of Catiline, and was consul in 60.

Metellus Nepos (nē'pos), Quintus Caecilius. d. c55 B.C. Roman statesman, a partisan of Pompey. He was tribune in 62 and consul in 57.

Metellus Pius Scipio (pī'us sip'i.ō), Quintus Caecilius. Committed suicide 46 B.C. Roman statesman; son of Scipio Nasica, and adopted son of Metellus Pius. He was consul with Pompey in 52 B.C., and Pompeian commander in Syria and Egypt.

Metemmeh (me.tem'me). [Also: El Metemmeh, Metamneh, Metemneh (me.tem'ne).] Place in Northern Province, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, on the W bank of the Nile, opposite Shendi. It was the objective of Steward's division of G. J. Wolseley's expedition (1885) to relieve Gordon at Khartoum.

Méténier (mā.tā.nyā), Oscar. b. at Sancoins, Cher, France, Jan. 17, 1859; d. at St.-Mandé, Seine, France, Feb. 8, 1913. French playwright and novelist. He was a prolific author of popular stage successes, such as La Famille (1887), La Casserole (1889), Mlle Fifi (1896), and others. Allied with the naturalist school, he collaborated in the dramatizations of the novels of the Goncourt brothers and others.

Methfessel (met'fes.ęl), Albert Gottlieb. b. at Stadt Ilm, Germany, Oct. 6, 1785; d. at Heckenbeck, Germany, March 23, 1869. German composer and conductor. His works include an opera, an oratorio, piano pieces, and many songs.

Methodius (mę.thō'di.us), Saint. [Called the "Apostle of the Slavs."] b. in Greece, 826; d., probably at Hardisch, on the March River, April 6, 885. Christian missionary; brother of Saint Cyril and coworker with him among the Slavic peoples of the Danube basin. Educated at Constantinople, he was consecrated bishop at Rome by Pope Adrian II in 869. Returning to his mission field he spread the Slavonic liturgy, despite opposition from Latinizing German bishops.

Methuen (mę.thū'ęn). Town in NE Massachusetts, in Essex County, ab. 27 mi. NW of Boston: manufactures of shoes, canvas, yarn, and textiles. The town was settled c1642 and incorporated in 1725. Pop. 24,477 (1950).

Methuen (meth'ū.ęn), Sir Algernon Methuen Marshall. [Original surname, Stedman.] b. at London, Feb. 23, 1856; d. at Haslemere, Surrey, England, Sept. 20, 1924. English publisher. For some years (1880 et seq.) a teacher, he engaged also (after 1889) in publishing; in 1895 he forsook teaching completely. His authors included Rudyard Kipling, Hilaire Belloc, J. B. Bury, G. K. Chesterton, Joseph Conrad, Anthony Hope Hawkins ("Anthony Hope"), E. V. Lucas, John Masefield, Sir Charles Oman, Sir Gilbert Parker, R. L. Stevenson, and Oscar Wilde. Methuen entered the publishing field at first in order better to market his own textbooks (in elementary Greek, Latin, and French). He compiled An Anthology of English Verse (1921) and Shakespeare to Hardy (1923).

Methuen, John. b. c1650; d. at Lisbon, Portugal, July 2, 1706. English diplomat and lord chancellor (1697–1703) of Ireland. As ambassador extraordinary to Portugal, he concluded (1703) the Anglo-Portuguese commercial treaty since known as the Methuen Treaty, an early and important factor in the close economic relationship which has since existed between the two countries. One result of the treaty was to change the drinking habits of the English; since port wine was now easier to obtain than French burgundy, port largely replaced the French wine as an English table beverage.

Methuen, Sir Paul. b. 1672; d. April 11, 1757. English diplomat; son of John Methuen.

Methuen, Paul Sanford. [Title, 3rd Baron Methuen.] b. Sept. 1, 1845; d. Oct. 30, 1932. English general, commander of the 1st Division of the First Army Corps in the Boer War (1899–1902). He was opposed by General Piet Cronje at the Modder River and was disastrously defeated by him at Magersfontein. In March, 1902, he was captured by Jacobus De La Rey, but was soon released. In May, 1907, he was appointed commander in chief in South Africa.

Methuen Treaty. Commercial treaty between England and Portugal, negotiated in 1703 by John Methuen. Portuguese wines imported into England were admitted for one third less duty than French wines, and English textiles were given exclusive priority in Portuguese imports. The result was a close dependence of the Portuguese economy on England and the displacement of burgundy wine by port as an English beverage.

Methusael (mę.thū'sā.el). In the Bible, one of the patriarchs of the race of Cain; father of Lamech. Gen. iv. 18.

Methuselah (mę.thū'zę.lą). In the Bible, according to the account in Genesis, the son of Enoch. He is said to have died at the age of 969 years, the oldest man mentioned in the Bible. Gen. v. 27.

Methymna (mę.thim'na). In ancient geography, a city in Lesbos.

Metidja (me.tē'ja). See Mitidja.

Metis (mē'tis). In Greek mythology, the daughter of Oceanus and Tethys, and first wife of Zeus. When Metis became pregnant Zeus took the embryo and placed it in his forehead, and thus enabled the goddess Athena to be born from the forehead of Zeus.

Metis. Ninth of the asteroids in the order of discovery, first observed by Graham at Markree, Ireland, in April, 1848.

Metis. An ancient name of Metz.

Metius (mā'tē.us), Jacobus. d. at Alkmaar, Netherlands, in June, 1628. Dutch inventor. The invention of the refracting telescope has been ascribed (by Descartes, among others) to him.

Metković (met'kô.vēch). Town in W Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Bosnia-Hercegovina, formerly in the banovina (province) of Primorska, situated on the Neredva River near its mouth, ab. 37 mi. N of Dubrovnik. It is connected by railroad with Sarajevo, Mostar, and Dubrovnik and is one of the two Adriatic ports of Bosnia-Hercegovina. It exports agricultural, forest, and mining products, and has fisheries. 6,888 (1931).

Metoac (met'ō.ak). Group of North American Indian tribes, embracing the Canarsee, Montauk, Rockaway, and Shinnecock. They spoke Algonquian languages.

Meton (mē'ton). fl. 5th century B.C. Greek astronomer. He was the discoverer of the Metonic cycle, a period of 235 lunations that in the 19 years it covers varies by less than two hours from the solar period and by only slightly more than an hour from the Julian period. The Metonic period, or "year," was long used in computing the date of Easter.

Metropolis (mē.trop'ō.lis). City and river port in S Illinois, in Massac County, on the Ohio River. 6,093 (1930).

Metropolitan Museum of Art. Institution organized in 1870, and afterward incorporated, having for its object the collection of works of art and the promotion of art culture in New York City. It is situated in Central Park, opposite East 82nd Street. The building was opened in 1880; new wings have since been added. Near it stands the Egyptian obelisk known as Cleopatra's Needle.

Metropolitan Opera House. Establishment at New York, occupying the block from 40th to 39th streets between Broadway and Seventh Avenue, designed by J. Cleaveland Cady. The house seats approximately 3,500 persons. Since its opening (1883, with Charles Gounod's Faust), the Metropolitan has been the home of the Metropolitan Opera Company; ballet performances have been held there also, but it is mainly noted as the foremost opera house in the U.S.

Metsu or Metzu (me.tsü'), Gabriel. b. at Leiden, Netherlands, c1630; d. at Amsterdam, Netherlands, Oct. 22, 1667. Dutch genre and portrait painter. He studied with Gerard Douw, or was influenced by him. In 1650 he settled at Amsterdam, and he received the freedom of the city in 1659. Among his works are Music Lesson, Gentleman Playing Violoncello, Sleeping Huntsman, and Corset Rouge.

Metsys (met'sīs), Quentin (or Quintin). See Massys or Matsys or Metsys, Quentin (or Quintin).

Mettauer (me.tô'ėr), John Peter. b. in Prince Edward County, Va., 1787; d. Nov. 22, 1875. American surgeon, a specialist in genitourinary operations. He performed over 800 operations for cataract and over 200 for stricture of the urethra, and was the first to operate (1838) on a vesico-vaginal fistula with the use of lead sutures.

Metternich (met'ėr.nich), Prince Klemens Wenzel Nepomuk Lothar von. [Full family name, Metternich-Winneburg.] b. at Koblenz, Germany, May 15, 1773; d. June 11, 1859. Austrian statesman, principal mover of the Holy Alliance. He was a student at Strasbourg when the French Revolution broke out, and he afterward stated that the excesses he saw committed there, and in Brussels and the Rhineland, in the name of freedom, turned him forever against liberalism. The scion of a noble family, he married (1795) Eleonore von Kaunitz, granddaughter of Count Wenzel von Kaunitz, Austrian chancellor under Maria Theresa and her successors; the marriage brought him great wealth and into intimate contact with the highest Viennese nobility. After several minor diplomatic missions, he became (1803) ambassador to Berlin. His ability there was noted and in 1806, at the request of Napoleon himself, he was appointed Austrian ambassador to France. There he first met Talleyrand and became acquainted with Napoleon. After the battle of Wagram (1809) he suggested that Austria, which had gone to war with France on the strength of his reports of French losses in Spain, negotiate a peace with France, and in August, 1809, he was appointed minister of foreign affairs on the resignation of J. P. von Stadion. Metternich held this post until forced out (1848) by the revolutionary ferment of 1848–49. Austria, in the early years of Metternich's ministry, was a diminished power, caught between the seemingly invincible strength of Napoleonic France and the threatening might of Russia. Metternich attempted to maintain Austrian neutrality while the two giants weakened themselves fighting each other, and at the same time to strengthen the diplomatic position of his country. One of his triumphs was the marriage (1810) of Napoleon to the Austrian princess Marie Louise. He consistently professed friendship for France and signed a treaty of alliance with her in 1812, but at the same time he made it apparent in the Russian court that the liaison was a matter of force. The collapse of Napoleon's Russian expedition of 1812 and the protracted negotiations for peace between France and the Allies permitted him to arm, seemingly to help France with the troops she demanded of him, but actually to come in on the side of Russia when the time was ripe. In 1813 he delivered to Napoleon, in person, what amounted to an ultimatum on the terms of peace, and, when Napoleon refused the projected (and empty) terms, Metternich brought Austria into the war on the Russian side as a member, with Russia, Prussia, and Great Britain, of the Quadruple Alliance. He had chosen his time correctly and soon he was able to offer Napoleon terms of peace on his own grounds. These were moderate, since France's ties with the reigning Austrian house through Napoleon's marriage to Marie Louise were stronger than would be the links with the projected French rulers, the Bourbons or the Bernadottes, and Austria's position would be weakened by Napoleon's disappearance from the scene. Soon after the battle of Leipzig (1813), a victory for the Allies, Metternich was made a hereditary prince of the Austrian Empire. At the Congress of Vienna (1814–15) Metternich reëstablished Austria as a first-rank European power, and his aim, during the next 35 years, was to maintain that power. He therefore insisted on maintenance of the status quo, of the treaties entered into among the powers, of the existing governments, and he resisted vigorously any attempt at change for fear that Austria's position would thereby be weakened. This strong conservative policy (which was intensified after the liberal gains of 1830) eventually led to repression through censorship and an elaborate police-spy system that entered even into the university lecture halls. Liberal movements were crushed almost before they could begin to form and Metternich's name became a curse in the ears of the progressive forces in Europe. Great Britain was lost to the alliance over the question of Greek freedom, and it was Great Britain's warning that lent force to the Monroe Doctrine (1823) when the European powers threatened to retake the revolting Spanish-American colonies in South and Central America. The revolutions of 1830 in Europe saw several changes in the composition of the alliance, but, though some gains were made by the liberals, the Metternich system began slowly to recover the ground it had lost. The explosion of 1848–49 ended the long so-called Age of Metternich. The prince was himself forced to resign (March, 1848) and flee to England; his fall led to widespread revolutions in Europe. Metternich returned to Vienna in 1851 and, though he refused to hold office again, he remained an adviser to the court, firm to the end in his belief that his policies had been correct and that his failures were due to weaknesses in others.

Metternich, Prince Richard Klemens Lothar Hermann von. [Family name, Metternich-Winneburg.] b. Jan. 7, 1829; d. at Vienna, March 1, 1895. Austrian diplomat; son of Prince K. W. N. L. von Metternich. He was ambassador (1859–71) at Paris.

Metternich-Winneburg (met'ėr.nich.vin'ę.bürk), Princess Pauline. [Maiden name, Countess Sándor.] b. at Vienna, Feb. 26, 1836; d. there, Sept. 26, 1921. Daughter-in-law of Prince K. W. N. L. von Metternich, who assisted her husband, Prince R. K. L. H. von Metternich, ambassador to France, in establishing friendly relations with Napoleon III. A friend of Empress Eugénie, she used her influence at court to befriend Richard Wagner. She wrote the memoirs Geschehenes, Gesehenes, Erlebtes (1920), and Éclairs Du Passé, 1859–75 (1922).

Mettmann (met'män). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, E of Düsseldorf: manufacturers silverware, machines, chemicals, textiles, and rubber articles. 18,694 (1950).

Mettray (me.trā). Locality in W central France, in the department of Indre-et-Loire, ab. 6 mi. N of Tours. It is noted for its prison farm for juvenile criminals, founded by F. A. Demetz in 1840.

Mettrie (me.trē), Julien Offray de La. See Lamettrie or La Mettrie, Julien Offray de.

Metuchen (mę.tuch'ęn). Residential and industrial borough in C New Jersey, in Middlesex County. 9,879 (1950).

Metz (mets; French, mes). [Ancient names: Divodurum Mediomatricum, Divodurum, Metis, Mediomatrica.] City in NE France, the capital of the department of Moselle, on the Moselle River ab. 175 mi. E of Paris. It is a commercial center with machinery and brewing industries. It has also long been (by reason of its proximity to the German border) a point of major importance in French military strategy. Metz was an ancient Gallic settlement, and a Roman garrison town. During the Middle Ages, it was contested between the German Empire and the kings of France, falling finally to the latter by the peace of Westphalia (1648). It was fortified by Vauban, and underwent a notable siege in the Franco-Prussian War (1870–71), finally capitulating to the Germans. It was then ceded to Germany, but was returned to France in 1919. The city was severely damaged in World War II. 70,105 (1946).

Metz, Bishopric of. Medieval bishopric, around Metz. It was taken by France in 1552, and formally ceded to France in 1648.

Metz (mets), Christian. b. at Neuwied, Germany, Dec. 30, 1794; d. at Amana, Iowa, July 27, 1867. American religious leader, founder of the Amana Society (incorporated 1859), in its day the most successful communist experiment in America. He was head (1817 et seq.) of the Community of True Inspiration in Germany, established (1842) a settlement of Inspirationists near Buffalo, N.Y., led (1854) the group to Iowa to settle Amana, and served as head (1859–67) of the Amana Society.

Metzingen (met'sing.ęn). Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Württemberg-Hohenzollern, French Zone, formerly in the Black Forest Kreis (department) of Württemberg, ab. 17 mi. SE of Stuttgart: basket, leather, textile, and metal industries. 8,024 (1946).

Metzinger (met.saṅ.zhā), Jean. b. at Nantes, France, June 24, 1883—. French cubist painter and theoretician, author, with A. Gleizes, of Du Cubism. He was influenced by impressionism, then pointillism, and finally joined the cubist movement in 1909. Among his better-known works are The Blue Bird, The Water Carrier, Card Party, Bottle of Chianti, The Slice of Melon, The Village, Woman on Horseback, and Lady in a Landscape.

Metzner (mets'nėr), Franz. b. at Wscherau, in Bohemia, Nov. 18, 1870; d. at Berlin, March 24, 1919. Austrian sculptor. He is best known for his sculptures of warriors and allegorical figures for the Völkerschlacht-Monument at Leipzig (1906–13).

Metzu (me.tsü'), Gabriel. See Metsu or Metzu, Gabriel.

Meudon (mė.dôṅ). Town in N France, in the department of Seine-et-Oise, on the Seine River SW of Paris, and included in its metropolitan area. It has an observatory which is part of the former castle of the Grand Dauphin, son of Louis XIV. The terrace, dating from the 17th century, commands a magnificent view of Paris. 20,797 (1946).

Meulan (mė.läṅ), Count of. Title of Beaumont, Waleran de.

Meulebeke (mė'lę.bā.kę). Town in NW Belgium, in the province of West Flanders, ab. 20 mi. SW of Ghent: linen manufactures. 10,127 (1947).

Meulen (mė'lęn), Adam Frans van der. b. at Brussels, Belgium, Jan. 11, 1632; d. at Paris, Oct. 15, 1690. French painter of battle scenes.

Meung or Meun (mėṅ), Jean de. See Jean de Meung (or Meun).

Meung-sur-Loire (mėṅ.sür.lwär). Town in the department of Loiret, France, on the Loire River ab. 11 mi. SW of Orléans. 3,201 (1946).

Meunier (mė.nyā), Constantin. b. at Etterbeek, a suburb of Brussels, Belgium, April 12, 1831; d. at Brussels, April 4, 1905. Belgian sculptor and painter. In 1882 he visited Spain and made many interesting studies of Spanish painting. He preferred to model subjects from the working classes (miners, founders, and the like) and produced a series of powerful statues including Le Puddleur and Le Marteleur. His last work was a monumental group, Le Travail, showing a central figure, Le Semeur, surrounded by four others, La Mine, La Moisson, Le Port, and L'Industrie. It was acquired by the Belgian government.

Meunier, Étienne Stanislas. b. at Paris, 1843; d. there, 1925. French geologist, remembered for his studies on the comparative geology of the solar bodies. He reproduced several minerals artificially.

Meurice (mė.rēs), François Paul. b. at Paris, Feb. 7, 1820; d. there, Dec. 10, 1905. French author and dramatist. His first drama, Falstaff, written with Théophile Gautier and Auguste Vacquerie, appeared in 1842, followed by Le Capitaine Paroles (1843), and Antigone, from Sophocles (1844), both in collaboration with Vacquerie, and a metrical version of Shakespeare's Hamlet, written with the elder Alexandre Dumas and Auguste Maquet (1847). He became (1848) editor of Victor Hugo's paper L'Événement, assisted in founding the new journal of the Hugo family, Le Rappel, in 1869, and was one of the executors of Hugo, having charge of the definitive edition of the latter's works (1880–85). He wrote, besides the works mentioned, Benvenuto Cellini (1852), Schamyl (1854), Struensée (1898), and other dramas.

Meurs (mėrs). French name of Moers, Germany.

Meurs, Jan de. See Meursius, Johannes.

Meursault (mėr.sō). Central character and narrator of L'Étranger (1943; Eng. trans., The Stranger, 1946), novel by Albert Camus. His incapacity for ordinary human emotion brings him to commit a murder; critics have compared him with Frank Chambers, hero of The Postman Always Rings Twice by James M. Cain.

Meursius (mėr'sē.us), Johannes. [Latinized name of Jan de Meurs.] b. at Loosduinen, near The Hague, Netherlands, Feb. 9, 1579; d. at Sorø, Denmark, Sept. 20, 1639. Dutch classical philologist and antiquary.

Meurthe (mėrt). Former department in NE France. A portion was ceded to Germany in 1871, the remainder was made part of the department of Meurthe-et-Moselle. When the ceded area was returned to France in 1919, it was incorporated into the department of Moselle.

Meurthe, Henri Deutsch de la. See Deutsch de la Meurthe, Henri.

Meurthe-et-Moselle (mėr.tā.mo.zel). Department in NE France, bounded by Belgium and Luxembourg on the N, Moselle on the NE and E, Vosges on the S, and Meuse on the W. The department consists of territory formerly included in Lorraine and in the bishoprics of Metz, Toul, and Verdun. It was formed in 1871 from parts of the formerly separate departments of Meurthe and Moselle, other parts having been incorporated into Germany. The metallurgical industry, based on the iron-ore deposits of the Longwy and Briey basins, ranks first among the industries of the department. There are iron and steel, machinery, chemical, wood, glass, ceramic, paper, and food-processing industries. Agriculture is of secondary importance. Capital, Nancy; area, 2,039 sq. mi.; pop. 527,956 (1946).

Meurthe River (mėrt). River in E France which flows generally NW to join the Moselle NW of Nancy. Length, ab. 105 mi.

Meuse (müz; French, mėz). Department in NE France, bounded by the Belgian province of Luxembourg on the N, Meurthe-et-Moselle on the E, Vosges and Haute-Marne on the S, Marne on the W, and Ardennes on the NW. It was formed from part of the old province of Lorraine. It is traversed by the Meuse River and by the forested ridges of the Ardennes and the Argonne. It was the scene (1870) of battles in the Franco-Prussian War, and was again a battle site in World Wars I and II. The prolonged struggle for Verdun (1914–18) was of epic proportions. The department is predominantly agricultural, with grain production taking the first rank. It has also a well-developed dairy industry. Metallurgical industries and stone quarries are of importance. Capital, Bar-le-Duc; area, 2,410 sq. mi.; pop. 188,786 (1946).

Meuse-Argonne American Cemetery (-är.gon′). American military cemetery near the town of Romagne-sous-Montfaucon, France, ab. 18 mi. NW of Verdun. It contains the graves of more than 14,200 American soldiers, most of whom fell during the operations (Sept. 26–Nov. 11, 1918) of the American First Army in the Meuse-Argonne Offensive. It is the largest of the American World War I cemeteries in Europe.

Meuse-Argonne American War Memorial. American war monument situated on the ruins of the former village of Montfaucon, France, ab. 13 mi. NW of Verdun, erected to commemorate the victory of the American First Army during the Meuse-Argonne Offensive (Sept. 26–Nov. 11, 1918). The memorial, which is in the form of a massive Doric column, is the largest American war memorial in Europe.

Meuse-Argonne Offensive. World War I military operation involving U.S. troops in the final Allied drive (beginning on Sept. 26, 1918) against the Germans along the Hindenburg Line on the Western Front. The American First Army under Pershing extended along a 72-mile front, heavily fortified by the enemy, in the area between the Meuse River and the Argonne Forest, in France. The operation, the largest one in which the American Expeditionary Force participated, assumed three phases. From September 26 to October 3, nine U.S. divisions (1st, 3rd, and 5th Corps) penetrated the Hindenburg Line. The second phase (October 4–30) broke the German main line of resistance, while the third phase (November 1–11) saw a general breakthrough, with the U.S. First Division reaching Sedan on November 11, when the armistice was declared. The offensive, in which 750,000 U.S. troops took part, cost 120,000 American casualties.

Meuselwitz (moi′zẹl.vits). Town in E central Germany, in the Land (state) of Thuringia, Russian Zone, ab. 22 mi. S of Leipzig: manufacturing town with porcelain, textile, and machinery industries; lignite mines. 10,688 (1946).

Meuse River (mūz; French, mėz). [Dutch, Maas; Latin, Mosa.] River in France, Belgium, and the Netherlands. It rises in the plateau of Langres, in the department of Haute-Marne, France, and flows N, NE, and W until it divides at Dordrecht, Netherlands, into two arms, flowing into the North Sea. Its chief tributaries are the Sambre, Ourthe, and Roer; the chief cities on it are Verdun, Sedan, Mézières, Namur, Liége, Maastricht, Roermond, Venlo, Gorkum, Dordrecht, and Rotterdam. Length, ab. 575 mi.; navigable from Verdun.

Mewar (mā.wär′). See Udaipur state.

Mews (mūz), Peter. b. near Shelborne, Dorsetshire, England, March 25, 1619; d. Nov. 9, 1706. English royalist, bishop (1672) of Bath and Wells and bishop (1684) of Winchester.

Mexborough (meks′bur.ō). Urban district in N central England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, ab. 11 mi. NE of Sheffield, ab. 163 mi. N of London by rail: coal mining. 18,965 (1951).

Mexcala (mes.kä′lä). See Balsas.

Mexia (mẹ.hä′ạ, -hē′-). City in C Texas, in Limestone County, NE of Austin, in a petroleum area. 6,627 (1950).

Mexicali (mek.si.kal′ī; Spanish, me.ʜē.kä′lē). City in NW Mexico, former capital of the Northern Territory of Baja California, situated on the U.S. border, in the Imperial Valley. 141,189 (1950).

Mexican Border Campaign (mek′si.kạn). American punitive expedition consisting of cavalry and other military units under the command of Brigadier General John J. Pershing which entered Mexico on March 15, 1916, after the Mexican bandit Pancho Villa had made several raids into Texas. Difficulties with the Mexican government led to military engagements at Carrizal and Parral. The American units had penetrated some 400 miles into Mexico when Pershing received an order (Feb. 5, 1917) to return to the U.S. The expedition was unsuccessful in capturing Villa.

Mexican Nun. See Cruz, Juana Inés de la.

Mexican Plateau. [Also: Central Plateau; Spanish, Altiplano de México.] Plateau of Mexico extending from the U.S. border to Tehuantepec. It is divided into two areas, the Mesa del Norte and the Mesa Central. Because of the arid climate, most water escapes by evaporation; few streams reach the sea, with the exception of the Rio Grande, Conchos, and Panuco rivers. The region, traversed by many mountain ranges, has active volcanoes and some of the highest mountain peaks in Latin America. Among these are Orizaba, Popocatepetl, Ixtacíhuatl, Colima, and Cofre de Perote.

Mexican War. Armed conflict (1846–48) between the U.S. and the republic of Mexico. Issues, quarrels, disputes, and bad feeling had accumulated for years, over such things as claims of American citizens against Mexico for damages incurred because of the unsettled state of Mexican politics and the influx of Americans into California, upon which it was believed that both Great Britain and France had designs, which the weak Mexican regime might not be able to frustrate. The admission into the Union in 1845 of Texas, which had been torn from Mexico by American settlers, brought matters to a head. President Polk proposed that the U.S. would assume the claims against Mexico if the government of the latter country would sell California and New Mexico to the U.S. and agree to certain modifications of the border between the two. These proposals being rejected by Mexico, an American force under General Zachary Taylor was ordered to advance to the Rio Grande, which the U.S. considered the boundary line. The Mexicans, who considered the more northerly Nueces River to be the line between Mexico and Texas, attacked. President Polk denounced this action as an invasion of American territory, and on May 12, 1846, Congress declared war. Already, on May 8 and May 9, Taylor had defeated Mexican forces at Palo Alto and at Resaca de la Palma. In September of that year he took Monterey, and in February, 1847, he gained a brilliant victory at Buena Vista. In March of that year General Winfield Scott's army took Veracruz and started toward Mexico City. Scott's progress was marked by victories at Cerro Gordo on April 18, at Contreras and at Churubusco on August 20, and at Molinos del Rey on September 8. The storming of Chapultepec by forces under General James Shields on September 13 led to the capture of Mexico City on the following day. Meanwhile Generals Stephen W. Kearny and Alexander Doniphan secured control of New Mexico; Kearny pushed on to California to join Commodore John D. Sloat and Colonel John C. Frémont in asserting American control there, and Doniphan invaded northern Mexico. The war was brought to an end on Feb. 2, 1848, by the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, in which Mexico ceded to the U.S. for 15 million dollars a vast territory, now comprised within the states of California, Nevada, Utah, and parts of Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, and Wyoming. Seldom has so comparatively brief and minor a conflict settled the destiny of so extensive an area. The roots of the Mexican War are to be seen in the uncontrollable urge of the American people toward expansion to the west, plus the desire of the ruling class in the slave-holding states to add other slave-holding states to the Union. The official U.S. position was sharply questioned by many citizens, including General Taylor, Representative Abraham Lincoln of Illinois, and a young American army officer named Ulysses S. Grant, who called the Mexican War the most unjust ever waged by a powerful against a weak country.

Mexico (mek′si.kō). [Mexican Spanish, México (me′-ʜē.kō); Spanish, Méjico; official name, Estados Unidos Mexicanos (es.tä′ᴛʜōs ö.nē′ᴛʜōs me.ʜē.kä′nōs).] Republic in North America, between the Gulf of Mexico and the Pacific Ocean, bounded on the N by the U.S., on the E by the Gulf of Mexico, on the SE by British Honduras and Guatemala, and on the S and W by the Pacific Ocean. The peninsula of Lower California, separated from the mainland by the Gulf of California, is entirely included in Mexico.

Population, Area, and Political Divisions. Mexico is divided into 29 states, one territory, and a Federal District; each state is a sovereign unit, with its own constitution, legislature, and laws; thus Mexico is organized on a federal system similar to that of the U.S. Capital, Mexico City; area, ab. 760,375 sq. mi.; pop. 25,581,250 (1950).

Terrain and Climate. Mexico is largely a highland country, with the principal part of the country occupying a high plateau and mountain region which is a continuation of the Rocky Mountain system. The mountains drop abruptly to narrow coastal lowlands on either side; the Pacific lowland practically disappears S of the Santiago River, whereas the Gulf lowland widens in the E to include the entire peninsula of Yucatán. The interior plateau region is lowest in the N, along the U.S. border, and rises gradually in elevation to ab. 8,000 ft. in S central Mexico; here is found a great east-west series of volcanic peaks among which are the highest mountains of Mexico: Orizaba, 18,696 ft.; Popocatepetl, 17,887 ft.; Ixtaccíhuatl, 17,343 ft.; Nevado de Toluca, 15,016 ft.; Nevado de Colima, 14,235 ft. The W part of the highland, the Sierra Madre Occidental, is a very rugged mountain region, with deep canyons and gorges, and peaks reaching over 9,000 ft. in elevation. No modern road or railroad has penetrated this barrier to reach the Pacific coast; the chief routes to the coast pass to the S of it, through Guadalajara. The S part of the highland, the Sierra Madre del Sur, is traversed by a single highway to Acapulco. The E border of the highland is the Sierra Madre Oriental, a broken series of ranges, with numerous gaps. The highland basins of the interior are most accessible from the Gulf coast. In SE Mexico is a separate mountain region, which continues into the Central American mountain system. All of Lower California, and most of NW and N central Mexico, has a dry climate; rainfall is scanty, and farming depends almost entirely upon irrigation. Rainfall is greater in the higher mountains, and in S central Mexico, where the highland climate is characterized by moderately warm and humid summers and cool, dry winters; SE Mexico has a humid tropical climate, and the lowland regions are extensively forested; there is a dry zone, however, in N Yucatán. In C Mexico there is a distinct vertical zonation of climate, and Mexicans recognize three categories: tierra caliente ("hot country"), from sea level to ab. 3,000 ft.; tierra templada ("temperate country") from ab. 3,000 ft. to ab. 6,000 ft.; tierra fría ("cold country") over 6,000 ft. in elevation.

Industry, Agriculture, and Trade. Nearly two thirds of the population of Mexico is engaged in farming; the chief concentration of population exists in the highland zone of S central Mexico. Maize, small grains, and beans are the staple crops. The chief commercial crops are sugar (a lowland crop), cotton, coffee, tobacco, maguey, sisal, and fruits. Livestock raising is quite important in large areas which are too hilly or too dry for cultivation. Crop land occupies only about four percent of the total area of Mexico, and poverty is common in rural areas. The Mexican government has carried out numerous irrigation projects in recent years in efforts to increase the land available for farming. Mexico has long been noted for its rich mineral resources: petroleum, silver, iron, lead, zinc, copper, and gold were the principal products in 1951. Coal is found in several localities, unfortunately not centrally located. Mexico is served by an extensive railroad system (ab. 15,300 mi.) and is traversed by the Inter-American Highway; all of the major cities are linked by highway, excepting the Yucatán centers. Manufacturing has increased in recent years with the development of the national market; the chief industries are textiles, clothing, beverages, food, tobacco, iron and steel, petroleum-refining, and smelting. Mexico City is the chief industrial center; other important centers include Monterrey, Tampico, Orizaba, and Guadalajara. Mexico has attracted increasing numbers of American tourists in recent years (the annual number of visitors exceeds 400,000).

History. The earliest known inhabitants of Mexico were various American Indian peoples. These groups formed settled communities in early times, and developed relatively advanced cultures and civilizations before the Christian Era: the two greatest early groups were the Toltecs of C Mexico and the Mayas of Yucatán. The Maya civilization passed through several stages of rise and decline, finally declining drastically in the 14th century for reasons as yet unknown. In C Mexico, however, the Aztecs rose to power in the 15th century and held sway over extensive dominions at the time of the Spanish conquest (1519–21) under Hernando Cortés. The Spaniards established Mexico as the colony (later viceroyalty) of Nueva España (New Spain) and extended their domains through the efforts of colonists and missionaries far to the NW, N, and SE from the early center in C Mexico, reaching to include New Mexico, most of California, and Texas. In 1810 the first outbreak of the Mexican war of independence occurred under Hidalgo, who was captured and executed in 1811; the movement remained powerful, however, and many other leaders took up arms. In 1821 General Agustín Iturbide was finally victorious in deposing the viceroy and in establishing Mexico's independence; the last Spanish effort at reconquest failed in 1829. In 1836 Texas seceded from Mexico, and a period of conflict between the U.S. and Mexico began which culminated in the Mexican War of 1846–48. Mexico was defeated and obliged to give up its claims to Texas and to cede a large area of the NW, then inhabited chiefly by Indians, to the U.S., including the present states of California, Nevada, and Utah, and parts of Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico, and Wyoming. In 1853 an additional tract (largely desert) was sold to the U.S. (Gadsden Purchase). Mexico then entered a stormy period of its political life, in which it was invaded and occupied by French forces (1863–67) and Maximilian was installed as emperor. Maximilian was executed and the republic restored in 1867. In 1910 the Mexican revolution began. At first it was a political movement against the continuance of the monopoly of power established by the Díaz regime, but it soon took on broader social aspects, and encompassed a popular movement of revolutionary character aimed at breaking up the landed estates and restoring ownership of the land to peasant smallholders. The Constitution of 1917 gave a legal basis to this aim, and also provided for labor legislation, including an eight-hour day, the right of labor to organize, a minimum wage law, and protection for women and children. The achievement of this program was relatively slow until the regime of Lazaro Cárdenas, who actively fostered the ejido (small peasant farm) movement. In 1938 Mexico expropriated foreign-owned oil fields, a move which created serious tension between U.S. and British oil interests, and Mexico. During the 1940's the social aspects of the Mexican revolution continued, with campaigns against illiteracy, an expansion of schools, and government efforts toward land conservation, crop improvement, and irrigation.

Culture. The native inhabitants of Mexico represent a fusion of Spanish and Indian elements, with the latter predominating. It is roughly estimated as about 10 percent white, 30 percent Indian, and 60 percent mestizo (mixed Indian-Spanish). Although the national language is Spanish, there are numerous Indian communities which speak Indian languages. There has been a relatively small immigration of Europeans in the 20th century, and a considerable emigration of Mexicans to the U.S. The predominant religion of Mexico is Roman Catholic, but the church in Mexico is not allowed to own or to inherit property, or to conduct schools. Religious freedom is guaranteed by law. Mexican culture has inherited both European and Indian elements; the modern art which has attracted much attention in the U.S. is noted for its richness of color. Diego de Rivera and José Orozco are among the better-known modern painters, who specialize in colorful murals. Art work and handicrafts are also highly developed in Mexico, and Mexican work in textiles, pottery, glass, and metal (especially silver) is much sought after.

Mexico. Town (in Maine the equivalent of township in many other states) and unincorporated village in SW Maine, in Oxford County: paper manufactures. Pop. of town, 4,762 (1950); of village, 3,821 (1950).

México (mek'si.kō; Spanish, me'ɲē.kō). [Spanish, Méjico.] State in S central Mexico, lying between Querétaro and Hidalgo on the N, Tlaxcala and Puebla on the E, Morelos and Guerrero on the S, and Michoacán and Guanajuato on the W. The Distrito Federal (Federal District), containing Mexico City, is surrounded by it on three sides, but has been separated from it as a political unit. Capital, Toluca; area, 8,268 sq. mi.; pop. 1,383,640 (1950).

Mexico (mek'si.kō). City in NE Missouri, county seat of Audrain County, ab. 97 mi. NW of St. Louis: brick factories and saddle-horse farms. 11,623 (1950).

Mexico, Gulf of. Large gulf of the Atlantic Ocean, lying S of the U.S. and E of Mexico. It communicates with the Atlantic on the E by the Straits of Florida, and with the Caribbean Sea on the SE by the Yucatan Channel, and receives the Mississippi, Rio Grande, and other large rivers. Length E to W, ab. 1,000 mi.; greatest width N to S, ab. 800 mi.; area, ab. 716,000 sq. mi.; greatest known depth, ab. 12,715 ft.

Mexico, History of the Conquest of. See History of the Conquest of Mexico.

Mexico, Valley of. Highland basin of the Mexican Plateau, in which Mexico City is situated. It has volcanic soils and numerous small cinder cones and old craters. It contains five principal lakes: Xochimilco, Chalco, Texcoco, Xaltocan, and Zumpango. At the time of the Spanish conquest these appear to have been much more extensive than at present and nearly confluent, entirely surrounding the Aztec city of Tenochtitlán, which was reached by causeways. Length, ab. 60 mi.; width, ab. 40 mi.; average elevation, ab. 7,400 ft.

Mexico City. [Also: Mexico; Spanish, Ciudad de México (or Méjico); original Indian name, Tenochtitlán.] City in S central Mexico, in the Distrito Federal, capital and largest city of the republic of Mexico, situated in the Valley of Mexico, ab. 7,400 ft. above sea level. Mexico City is the greatest commercial and industrial center in Mexico, and is the administrative, financial, and cultural heart of the country. It has numerous wide avenues, and modern hotels and apartment houses. Its climate is mild in summer, and cool and dry in winter; days are warm and nights are cool the year round. Practically all of the modest rainfall of 29 inches falls in the summer half-year (May–October). There are textile, food-processing, leather, automobile assembly, glass, tobacco, iron and steel, metal-smelting, and aircraft industries. There are also numerous artisan industries excelling in the production of silver, wood, ceramic, metal, and glass objects. It is the site of a cathedral (a large Renaissance building founded in 1573), the national library and museum, the national university of Mexico, and various educational institutions and learned societies. It was founded (as Tenochtitlán) by the Aztecs c1325, was besieged, taken, and destroyed by the Spaniards in 1521, has been several times inundated, and has been the scene of various revolutions. Battles were fought near it between the Mexicans and Americans in 1847, and it was occupied by the Americans in 1847–48. The Aztec city was situated on islands in Lake Texcoco. 1,448,422 (1940), 2,113,451 (1950).

Meyer (mī'ėr), Adolf. b. at Niederweningen, near Zurich, Switzerland, Sept. 13, 1866; d. at Baltimore, March 17, 1950. American psychiatrist. He was professor of psychiatry (1904–09) at Cornell University Medical College, and professor of psychiatry at Johns Hopkins and director of the Henry Phipps Psychiatric Clinic at Johns Hopkins Hospital (1910–41). He originated the terms "mental hygiene" and "ergasiatrics," the latter to specify man's unitary nature.

Meyer (mā.yer), Aloyse. b. at Clervaux, Luxembourg, Oct. 31, 1883; d. May 5, 1952. Luxembourg industrialist and engineer.

Meyer (mī'ėr), Annie. [Maiden name, Nathan.] b. at New York, Feb. 19, 1867; d. there, Sept. 23, 1951. American educator, founder of Barnard College, Columbia University. Author of Woman's Work in America (1891), Helen Brent, M.D. (1893), The Dominant Sex (1911), Barnard Beginnings (1935), and other books. She published plays such as The District Attorney (1920), The Advertising of Kate (1921), The New Way (1923), and Black Souls (1932).

Meyer, Arnòld Oskar. b. at Breslau, Oct. 20, 1877—. German historian. Author of England und die katholische Kirche unter Elisabeth und den Stuarts (England and the Catholic Church under Elizabeth and the Stuarts, 1911; Eng. trans., 1916), Deutsche Freiheit und englischer Parlamentarismus (German Freedom and English Parliamentarism, 1915), and others.

Meyer (mā.yer), Arthur. b. at Le Havre, France, June 16, 1844; d. at Paris, Feb. 2, 1924. French journalist, prominent as a defender of Alfred Dreyfus. Author of Ce que mes yeux ont vu (1911), and other works.

Meyer (mī'ėr), Balthasar Henry. b. at Mequon, Wis., May 28, 1866—. American economist and transportation authority. Professor of political economy (1900–10) at Wisconsin, he was appointed (1910) a member of the U.S. Railroad Securities Commission. He served as a member (1911–39) of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and as consultant and mediator on transportation (1939 et seq.).

Meyer, Conrad Ferdinand. b. at Zurich, Switzerland, Oct. 11, 1825; d. near there, Nov. 28, 1898. Swiss poet and author writing in German. His stories bear witness to his understanding of historical personalities and national characteristics. Das Amulett (1873) and Die Leiden eines Knaben (1883) have a French background, Der Heilige (1879) turns to England for the story of Thomas à Becket and Henry II, Angela Borgia (1891) to Italy, while his idyll in verse Huttens Letzte Tage (1871) and the novel Jürg Jenatsch (1876) deal with the fate of the reform movements in Switzerland and Germany. He was, in some ways, a forerunner of the modern symbolists. His poetry, including Balladen (1867), Romanzen und Bilder (1870), and Gedichte (1882), is generally considered to be among the best Swiss poetry of the 19th century.

Meyer, Eduard. b. at Hamburg, Germany, Jan. 25, 1855; d. at Berlin, Aug. 31, 1930. German historian. His main works were Geschichte des Altertums (History of Ancient Times, 1884–1902), Die Entstehung des Judentums (The Origin of Judaism, 1896), and Ursprung und Anfänge des Christentums (Origin and Beginning of Christianity, 1920–23).

Meyer, Felix. b. at Winterthur, Switzerland, Feb. 6, 1653; d. 1713. Swiss landscape painter, regarded in his time as the most talented of his group.

Meyer, George von Lengerke. b. at Boston, June 24, 1858; d. March 9, 1918. American politician and diplomat, U.S. postmaster general (1907–09) under Theodore Roosevelt and secretary of the navy (1909–13) under Taft. He was a member of the Massachusetts legislature (1892–96) and speaker of the House (1894–96). He served as U.S. ambassador to Italy (1900–05) and to Russia (1905–07).

Meyer, Georg Friedrich. b. at Mannheim, Germany, 1735; d. at Ermenonville, Oise, France, 1809. German genre and landscape painter. He lived for a short time with Jean Jacques Rousseau at Ermenonville.

Meyer, Hans. b. at Hildburghausen, Germany, 1858; d. at Leipzig, Germany, July 5, 1929. German explorer in Africa; son of Hermann Julius Meyer. He traveled in America, Asia, and Polynesia, visited South Africa in 1886, and explored German East Africa in 1887. In 1889, accompanied by the Austrian alpinist Purtscheller, he scaled the summit of Kibo, the highest peak of Kilimanjaro, and discovered its crater and glacier. He wrote Eine Weltreise (1885) and Zum Schneedom des Kilima-Ndscharo (1888).

Meyer, Hans Horst. b. at Insterburg, in East Prussia, March 17, 1853; d. at Vienna, Oct. 6, 1939. German pharmacologist. He was prominent in promoting scientific pharmacology by bringing it into closer relation with general biology, pathology, and clinical medicine. He made numerous contributions to the pharmacological effects of iron, bismuth, and aluminium; to the nature of acute phosphorous poisoning; to heat-regulation; to diuretic and narcotic effects, and to the theory of narcosis; and to the influence of the sympathetic system normally and as affected by drugs. His most important studies were made on the migration of tetanus toxin in nerves.

Meyer, Heinrich August Wilhelm. b. at Gotha, Germany, Jan. 10, 1800; d. June 21, 1873. German exegete, author of a commentary on the New Testament (1832–47).

Meyer, Hermann Julius. b. 1826; d. 1909. German publisher; son of Joseph Meyer. He came to the U.S. as a political fugitive (1849) but returned to Germany (1854), where he took over his father's firm, later (1879) moving it to Leipzig.

Meyer, Johann Georg. [Called Meyer von Bremen.] b. at Bremen, Germany, Oct. 28, 1813; d. there, Dec. 3, 1886. German genre painter. He studied at Düsseldorf, moved to Berlin in 1852, and was made professor there in 1863. His pictures of children are among his best productions. Many of them are in the U.S.

Meyer, Johann Heinrich. b. at Stäfa, Switzerland, March 16, 1759; d. at Weimar, Germany, Oct. 14, 1832. German writer on art, one of the editors of Winckelmann's works. He published Geschichte der bildenden Künste bei den Griechen (1824–36) and others.

Meyer, Joseph. b. at Gotha, Germany, May 9, 1796; d. June 27, 1856. German publisher and industrialist.

As a member of the firm of Henning at Gotha, he published Shakespeare and Scott in German. In 1825 he organized his own firm and issued Meyer's British Chronicle in English. The following year he founded the Bibliographische Institut and began to make hitherto expensive publications available to all strata of German society. In this way he issued numerous German classics. After moving his firm to Hildburghausen (1833) he produced the illustrated reference work Meyers Universum in 12 languages with more than 80,000 subscribers. In the period from 1840 to 1855 he brought out the first edition of his Grosses Konversationslexikon in 52 volumes. He discovered and acquired coal, iron, copper, and silver deposits in Thuringia, and advocated the development of a central German railway system. He was a close friend of Friedrich List, whose liberal and progressive views he shared.

Meyer, Jürgen Bona. b. Oct. 25, 1829; d. June 22, 1897. German philosophical writer. He wrote Kants Philosophie (1869) and other works.

Meyer, Karl. b. at Buchs, Switzerland, Nov. 21, 1885—. Swiss historian. Author of Die Gründung der Eidgenossenschaft im Lichte der Urkunden und der Chroniken (The Founding of the Confederacy in the Light of Documents and Chronicles, 1930).

Meyer, Leo. b. at Bledeln, Hanover, Germany, July 3, 1830; d. June 6, 1910. German philologist.

Meyer, Lothar Julius. b. at Varel, Germany, Aug. 19, 1830; d. at Tübingen, Germany, April 11, 1895. German chemist. His work on the periodic table of elements was of great importance in establishing that system of arrangement.

Meyer, Richard M. b. 1860; d. 1914. German university professor and historian of literature. His published studies include Goethe (1895; popular edition, 1913), Deutsche Stilistik (1906), Altgermanische Religionsgeschichte (1910), Nietzsche (1913), and Die Weltliteratur im 19. Jahrhundert (1913). His most important work is generally considered to be Die deutsche Literatur des 19. Jahrhunderts (1899), the first scientific treatment of the subject and the first attempt to write literary history in terms of generations.

Meyer, Robert. b. at Hanover, Germany, Jan. 11, 1864; d. at Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 12, 1947. German gynecologist. He studied the mechanism of menstruation, the relations between anatomy and function of the ovaries, the malignant degeneration of the placenta, and the malignant changes of the uterus. He described (1930) arrhenoblastoma and the relation of special ovarian tumors to sex characteristics (1931).

Meyer, Viktor. b. at Berlin, Sept. 8, 1848; d. at Heidelberg, Germany, Aug. 8, 1897. German chemist. He invented a method for the determination of vapor densities and discovered thiophen. Among his other researches were investigations into halogen dissociation and stereochemistry.

Meyerbeer (mī'ėr.bār; Anglicized, mī'ėr.bir), Giacomo. [Original name, Jakob Liebmann Beer.] b. at Berlin, Sept. 5, 1791; d. at Paris, May 2, 1864. German composer of opera. He lived chiefly at Paris after 1826. He was a pupil of Lauska, who was a pupil of Clementi, and the latter also gave him lessons. When only 7 years old he played Mozart's D minor concerto in public. He early obtained fame as a pianist, but his compositions were not successful till he went in 1815 to Italy to study vocal composition. There he began to produce operas in the style then recently introduced by Rossini; and Il Crociato in Egitto, produced at Venice in 1824, was completely successful, while three or four other operas were well received. From 1831 till 1849 he produced operas in a new style, the result of a study of French art. In 1849 he turned his attention to opéra comique. Among his operas are Robert le Diable (1831), Les Huguenots (1836), Ein Feldlager in Schlesien (1840), overture and entr'actes to Struensee (1846), Le Prophète (1849), L'Étoile du Nord (1854), Le Pardon de Ploermel (in Italian, Dinorah, 1859), and L'Africaine (1865). Among his other compositions are a number of cantatas and songs, and several Fackeltänze (torch dances), marches, and overtures, besides pianoforte music, some of which has never been published.

Meyer-Förster (mī'ėr.fėr'stėr), Elsbeth. b. at Breslau, Jan. 5, 1868; d. at Bolzano, Italy, May 17, 1902. German writer of dramas and stories; wife of Wilhelm Meyer-Förster.

Meyer-Förster, Wilhelm. b. at Hanover, Germany, June 12, 1862; d. 1934. German novelist, famous for the novel Karl Heinrich (1899). It was put on the stage as Alt-Heidelberg in 1901 and has been a favorite light opera throughout the world ever since, latterly under the title The Student Prince.

Meyerheim (mī'ėr.hīm), Friedrich Eduard. b. at Danzig, Jan. 7, 1808; d. at Berlin, Jan. 18, 1879. German genre painter; brother of Wilhelm Alexander Meyerheim.

Meyerheim, Wilhelm Alexander. b. 1815; d. at Berlin, Jan. 13, 1882. German painter of battle scenes, horses, and the like; brother of Friedrich Eduard Meyerheim.

Meyer-Helmund (mī'ėr.hel'mùnt), Erik. b. at St. Petersburg, April 25, 1861; d. 1932. Russian singer and composer. He is best known as a song-writer, although he wrote several operas, including Margitta (1889), Der Liebeskampf (1892), Trischka (1894), and Heines Traumbilder (1908), and ballet music.

Meyerhof (mī'ėr.hōf), Otto Fritz. b. at Hanover, Germany, 1884; d. 1951. German physiologist. He was professor of physiology (1918–24) at Kiel, served (1924–29) on the staff of the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute at Berlin, and was professor of physiology at Heidelberg (1930–38) and at the University of Pennsylvania (1940 et seq.). He made notable investigations in the oxidation mechanism of muscle cells and of their conversion of lactic acid. In 1922 he received (with A. V. Hill) the Nobel prize for physiology and medicine.

Meyer-Lübke (mī'ėr.lüp'kę), Wilhelm. b. at Dübendorf, Switzerland, Jan. 30, 1861; d. 1936. German-Swiss philologist. Educated at the Universities of Zurich and of Berlin, he held a professorial chair at the University of Jena before becoming, in 1890, professor of Romance philology at the University of Vienna. He was the author of Grammatik der romanischen Sprachen (4 vols., 1890–1905), Italienischen Grammatik (1891), Einführung in das Studium der romanischen Sprachwissenschaft (1901), Historische Grammatik der französischen Sprache (1908), and Katalonische Deutsche (1925).

Meyerowitz (mī.er'ō.wits), William. b. in Russia, July 15, 1887—. American landscape, figure, and still-life painter and etcher, an associate of the National Academy of Design. Many of his paintings are in collections in the U.S. and Europe. Fruit and Drapery and The Musician are two of his better-known works.

Meyersdale (mī'ėrz.dāl). Borough in SW Pennsylvania, in Somerset County; resort community. It has a maple sugar industry. It was platted in 1844. Pop. 3,137 (1950).

Meyerson (mā.yer.sôn), Émile. b. at Lublin, Poland, 1859; d. at Paris, 1933. French philosopher. Author of Identité et réalité (1908; Eng. trans., 1930) and Le Cheminement de la pensée (1931).

Meyerstein (mī'ėr.stīn), Edward Harry William. b. at Hampstead, London, in August, 1889; d. at London, Sept. 12, 1952. English writer. Author of the poetry collections The Door (1911), Selected Poems (1935), Odes (1936), Sonnets (1939), Eclogues (1940), The Visionary (1941), In Time of War (1942), Division (1946), and a translation of The Elegies of Propertius (1935). His novels include Terence Duke (1935), Seraphine (1936), and Joshua Slade (1938). His plays are Heddon (1921), and The Monument (1923). He was the author also of the short-story collections The Pageant (1934) and Four People (1939).

Meylieu-Montrond (mā.lyė.môn.trôn). Former name of Montrond-les-Bains.

Meynell (men'ęl), Alice Christiana. [Maiden name, Thompson.] b. at London, 1847; d. there, Nov. 27, 1922. English poet and essayist; wife of Wilfrid Meynell. Her works include Preludes (1875, later published as Poems, 1893), The Rhythm of Life, and Other Essays (1893), The Colour of Life, and Other Essays on Things Seen and Heard (1896), London Impressions (1898), The Spirit of Place, and Other Essays (1898), John Ruskin (1900), Later Poems (1901), The Children of the Old Masters (1903), A Seventeenth Century Anthology (1904), Cæsar's Runaway (1910), and Hearts of Controversy (1917).

Meynell, Francis. b. May 12, 1891—. English typographer and book designer; son of Wilfrid and Alice Meynell. He founded (1923) the Nonesuch Press. Author of The Typography of Newspaper Advertisements (1929) and English Printed Books (1946).

Meynell, Viola. English poet and novelist; daughter of Wilfrid and Alice Meynell; wife (married 1922) of John Dallyn. Author of The Frozen Ocean and Other Poems (1931) and Alice Meynell, a Memoir (1929). Her novels include Second Marriage (1918) and Kissing the Rod (1937).

Meynell, Wilfrid. b. in Yorkshire, England, 1852; d. at Pulborough, Sussex, England, Oct. 20, 1948. English journalist, biographer, and essayist; husband (married 1877) of Alice Christiana Meynell. He collaborated with his wife on the publication of the monthly reviews Pen and Merry England and the Roman Catholic Weekly Register, and was the first to publish work by Francis Thompson. He edited the works of Thompson, and wrote biographies of Disraeli (1903) and Johnson (1913). Author of Verses and Reverses, Rhymes with Reason, and other collections of verse.

Meyrick (mĭ'rik), Hans. One of the principal male characters in George Eliot's novel Daniel Deronda.

Meyringen (mī'ring.ẹn). See Meiringen.

Meyrswalden (mīrs'väl.dẹn), Ritter von. Title of Kralik, Richard von.

Meysenbug (mī'zẹn.bök), Malvida von. b. at Kassel, Germany, Oct. 28, 1816; d. at Rome, April 26, 1903. German feminist and writer. Although of noble birth, she took great interest in the revolutionary struggle of 1848 and eventually had to flee to London. She lived in exile the rest of her life, for a long time at London, and finally at Rome. Her memoirs (Memoiren einer Idealistin, 1875; Lebensabende einer Idealistin, 1898; Stimmungsbilder aus dem Vermächtnis einer alten Frau, 1879; abundantly abstracted in the English Rebel in Bombazine, 1936) throw very valuable light on her time. Among the prominent figures with whom she was closely associated were Richard Wagner, Franz Liszt, Friedrich Nietzsche, and Jakob Burckhardt.

Meywar (mā.wär'). Ancient name of Udaipur state.

Mèze (mez). Town in S France, in the department of Hérault, situated on the Étang de Thau, ab. 19 mi. SW of Montpellier. It is a small port, importing timber and exporting wines and liquors. 4,266 (1946).

Mezen (mā'zin). River in N European U.S.S.R. which flows generally NW into the Gulf of Mezen, an embayment of the White Sea. Length, ab. 565 mi.

Mézenc (mā.zaṅk), Mont. See under Cévennes.

Mezentius (mẹ.zen'shus). Legendary king of the ancient city of Caere in Etruria, noted for his cruelty. He was an ally of Turnus against Latinus and Aeneas, and killed Latinus in battle.

Mézeray (māz.rā), François Eudes de. b. at Ry, near Falaise, in Normandy, France, 1610; d. at Paris, July 10, 1683. French historian. His chief work is Histoire de France (1643–51). He published Abrégé chronologique de l'histoire de France (1668) and others.

Mezes (mā'zēz), Sidney Edward. b. at Belmont, Calif., Sept. 23, 1863; d. at Altadena, Calif., Sept. 10, 1931. American educator, head (1917) of the group that gathered the data on which President Wilson based his "Fourteen Points," which he used at the Versailles Peace Conference. He was professor (1900 et seq.), dean (1902–08), and president (1908–14) of the University of Texas, and president (1914–27) of the College of the City of New York. Author of portions of Josiah Royce's The Conception of God (1895), Ethics, Descriptive and Explanatory (1901), and What Really Happened at Paris (1921).

Mézières (mā.zyer). Town in N France, the capital of the department of Ardennes, situated on a bend of the Meuse River, opposite the town of Charleville, and forming with Charleville and Mohon a single urban community. It is an old fortified town; the remnants of the fortifications erected by Vauban are a national monument. The Church of Notre-Dame-d'Espérance is a Gothic building with later additions; the hôtel de ville (town hall) dates from the 14th century. Mézières, together with neighboring Charleville, is a center for the iron and steel industry in the department. The town suffered damage in World War II. 8,037 (1946).

Mézières, Alfred Jean François. b. at Réhon, Meurthe-et-Moselle, France, Nov. 19, 1826; d. there, Oct. 10, 1915. French man of letters and member of parliament. He taught foreign literature at Nancy (1854–63) and at the Sorbonne (1863 et seq.). He was a deputy (1881–1900) and a senator (1900 et seq.). His works include Shakespeare, ses œuvres et ses critiques (1861), Prédécesseurs et contemporains de Shakespeare (1863), Contemporains et successeurs de Shakespeare (1864), Pétrarque (1867), Goethe (1872–73), En France (1883), Hors de France (1883), and Vie de Mirabeau (1891).

Mezőberény (me'zė.be.rāny'). Town in SE Hungary, N of the city of Békéscsaba. Hemp and flax are processed. 13,853 (1948).

Mezőkövesd (me'zė.kė.vesht). Town in N Hungary, SE of the city of Eger, a station on the railroad line from Budapest to Miskolc; grain markets and flour mills. 18,087 (1948).

Mezőtúr (me'zė.tör). Town in E Hungary, between Szolnok and Békéscsaba. It is an agricultural trade center. 26,915 (1948).

Meztli (mes'tlē). In Aztec mythology, the moon god, and personification of the moon. He is sometimes identified with Tezcatlipoca, the great sky god and chief deity of the Aztec pantheon.

Mezzofanti (med.dzō.fän'tē), Giuseppe. b. at Bologna, Italy, Sept. 17, 1774; d. at Rome, March 14, 1849. Italian linguist. He was ordained priest in 1797, became professor of Arabic at Bologna in 1804, was appointed chief keeper of the Vatican library in 1833, and was made cardinal in 1838. He is said to have spoken 58 languages.

Mfan (ẹm.fän'). See Fang.

Mfengo (ẹm.feng'gō). See Fingo.

M'Fingal or McFingal (mąk.fing'gal). Hudibrastic mock-epic poem in four cantos by John Trumbull. The first canto was published in 1775, the second canto in 1776, and the whole in 1782. The work satirizes M'Fingal, a New England Tory squire who defends the British cause but is finally "converted" to the Revolutionary cause after being tarred and feathered. The poem was published in three editions during the Revolution and was issued in more than 30 editions during the period 1782–1840.

Mfumbiro (ẹm.föm.bē'rō). [Also, Virunga.] Volcanic range in E central Africa, E of Lake Kivu, extending along the borders of Belgian Congo, Ruanda-Urundi, and Uganda. Peak elevation, ab. 14,787 ft.; length, ab. 25 mi.

Mhow (mou). Town in Madhya Bharat, Union of India, ab. 13 mi. SW of Indore. It is a trading center. 34,823 (1941).

Miagao (myä.gä'ō). Town in Iloilo province, S Panay, Philippine Islands, on Panay Gulf. 4,248 (1948).

Miaja Menant (myä'hä mā.nänt'), José. b. at Madrid, 1878—. Spanish loyalist general. A brigadier general at the beginning of the Spanish Civil War in 1936, Miaja remained loyal to the republican government and became its strongest military supporter. He fought at first in Andalusia, then on the eastern front, and in 1939 he organized the defense of Madrid. Made commander of the central armies, he headed the council of national defense after Negrín had fled on March 6, 1939. A few days before the fall of Madrid Miaja left for France and eventually joined his fellow refugees in Mexico.

Miako (mē.ä.kō). See Kyoto.

Miall (mī'ąl), Edward. b. at Portsmouth, England, May 8, 1809; d. at Sevenoaks, Kent, England, April 29, 1881. English Nonconformist minister, journalist, and politician. In 1840 he established the Nonconformist, and devoted his life to the advocacy of freedom of religion from state control. In 1852 he was elected member of Parliament for Rochdale, and in 1858 served on the royal commission on education.

Miami (mī.am'i, -ą). Group of North American Indian tribes formerly inhabiting portions of N Indiana, NE Illinois, and W Wisconsin. They spoke an Algonquian language.

Miami. Town in E Arizona, in Gila County. With the Globe area, Miami constitutes one of the chief copper-mining districts in the U.S. Copper smelting is also important. 4,329 (1950).

Miami. City in S Florida, county seat of Dade County, on Biscayne Bay, an inlet of the Atlantic. Miami has a tropical climate with hot, humid summers and warm, sunny winters. Its climate has attracted visitors and residents from all parts of the U.S., and from abroad, and it owes much of its rapid growth and development in the last 50 years to its popularity as a winter resort. It is primarily a commercial city and a tourist center; manufacturing includes food-processing, aircraft parts, and diverse light industries. The chief concentration of hotels and winter visitors is at the city of Miami Beach, on the Atlantic Ocean front; Miami is the commercial and business center of the urbanized area. Miami has an international airport, serving traffic between the West Indies and Latin America and the U.S. It also has a seaport, and has frequent ship service to Havana, Cuba, and to the Bahamas. Although an old settlement existed on the site of Miami, its modern development dates from the arrival of the railroad in 1896. Pop. of city, 172,172 (1940), 249,276 (1950); of urbanized area, 458,647 (1950).

Miami. [Former name, Jimtown.] City in NE Oklahoma, county seat of Ottawa County, in the Tri-State district: located in a zinc-mining, cattle-raising, and dairying area. It has a zinc smelter, and is the seat of Northeastern Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College. 11,801 (1950).

Miami Beach. City in S Florida, in Dade County, on the Atlantic Ocean ab. 3 mi. E of Miami. It is the most frequented winter resort in Florida, with a fine beach over 8 mi. in length, and over 350 hotels. It was incorporated in 1915 and has grown rapidly since. It is linked with Miami by three causeways across Biscayne Bay. 46,282 (1950).

Miami River. [Also, Great Miami.] River in SW Ohio which joins the Ohio River near the SW corner of the state. Length, ab. 160 mi.

Miamisburg (mī.am'iz.bėrg). [Former name, Hole's Station.] City in SW Ohio, in Montgomery County: manufactures of paper, furniture, and cordage. Pop. 6,329 (1950).

Miami Shores. Village in SE Florida, in Dade County, just N of Miami. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population more than doubled. 1,956 (1940), 5,086 (1950).

Miami Springs. Village in SE Florida, in Dade County, just NW of Miami. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population grew from 898 (1940) to 5,108 (1950).

Miani (mē.ä'nē). [Also, Meanee.] Battlefield NW of Hyderabad, in the province of Sind, Pakistan. Here Sir Charles J. Napier, with 2,800 men, defeated (Feb. 17, 1843) the army of Sind, comprising 30,000 men.

Miantonomo or Miantonomoh (mi.an.tō.nō'mō, mī-). d. 1643. Sachem of the Narraganset Indians; nephew of Canonicus (c1565–1647). He maintained friendly relations with the English, particularly in Rhode Island, and in 1637 aided the colonists in defeating the Pequots.

Miao (myou). [Also: Miao-tze, Miao-tzu (myou'dzu'); Indo-Chinese, Meo.] A people dwelling in the high plateau of S China (principally Kweichow province), the Shan States of Burma, N Thailand (Siam), and N Laos and NW Tonkin in Indochina, where they occupy the higher slopes (above 3,000 ft.) of the mountains. Their language is related to that of the Yao.

Miaoules (mē.ou'lēs), Andreas Vokos. See Miaulis, Andreas Vokos.

Miao-Yao (myou'you'). [Also, Meo.] Linguistic family embracing the languages of the Miao and Yao tribes of S China and the N parts of Burma, Thailand (Siam), and Indochina. These languages are tonal and monosyllabic.

Miass (myäs). City in the U.S.S.R., in the Urals, in the Chelyabinsk oblast (region) ab. 55 mi. W of Chelyabinsk, on the Miass River. It is in a region producing gold, marble, and talc, and has marble-polishing, tool, and wood-distilling industries (producing rosin, pitch, and turpentine). 22,000 (1933).

Miass River. River in the U.S.S.R., flowing from the E slopes of the Urals generally E past Chelyabinsk to the Iset River, a tributary of the Tobol. In a region along its upper course gold was discovered in 1799; large deposits were found in 1823.

Miaulis (mē.ou'lēs), Andreas Vokos. [Also, Miaoules.] b. in Euboea, Greece, c1772; d. at Athens, June 24, 1835. Greek admiral, commander in chief in the war of independence.

Miava (n ē'ä.vä). See Myjava.

Micah (mī'kạ). In Old Testament history, an Ephraimite who stole 1,100 pieces of silver from his mother, but, alarmed by her imprecations on the thief, confessed the deed and returned the money. She thereupon dedicated it to the Lord, and made with it a graven and a molten image (teraphim), which Micah set up in his house, hiring a Levite as a priest. Judges, xvii.

Micah. [Also: Michah, Micheas.] In Old Testament history, a prophet, a native of Moresheth of Gath, near Eleutheropolis, and a contemporary of Isaiah. He is reckoned as the sixth of the minor prophets (the third in the Septuagint). He prophesied near the beginning of the reign of Hezekiah (end of the 8th century B.C.). His prophecy indicates the fall of Israel and Judah but holds out, in a famous passage, hope of redemption through the Messiah.

Micali (mē.kä'lē), Giuseppe. b. at Leghorn, Italy, c1776; d. at Florence, March 27, 1844. Italian archaeologist. Author of Storia degli antichi popoli d'Italia (1832) and others.

Micawber (mi.kô'bėr), Wilkins. One of the principal characters in Charles Dickens's David Copperfield. He is remarkable for his rapid alternations of depression and elevation of spirits, his "temporary embarrassments of pecuniary nature," and his constant persuasion that "something will turn up." His wife, as far as the elasticity of her spirits goes, is quite his equal. Her devotion to "the parent of her children and the father of her twins" induces her frequent well-known exclamation, "I never will desert Mr. Micawber!" The couple appear to have been suggested, more or less, by Dickens's father and mother.

Michabo (mich'ạ.bô). Culture hero and trickster of certain North American Algonquian tribes of the eastern U.S.: one of the many local variant names of Manabozho.

Michael (mī'kęl). One of the seven archangels of Christian legend; one of the four of Mohammedan legend. He is regarded as the leader of the whole host of angels, and, owing to miraculous appearances recorded in church legends, is considered to be the representative of the church triumphant. His feast occurs on Sept. 29 in the Roman Catholic and the Anglican churches. He is mentioned five times in the Bible, always as fighting; John mentions him as fighting at the head of the angels against the dragon and his host.

Michael. [Full Russian name, Mikhail Nikolayevich Romanov.] b. Oct. 13, 1832; d. at Cannes, France, Dec. 5, 1909. Grand Duke of Russia; son of Nicholas I.

Michael. Bark of 25 tons, one of the ships of Martin Frobisher's first expedition in search of the Northwest Passage. It early abandoned the other ship, the Gabriel, and returned to England.

Michael I (of the Byzantine Empire). [Also: Michael I Rhangabe (rang'gạ.bē), Michael I Rhagabe (rag'ạ.bē).] d. c845. Byzantine emperor (811–813). He was the son of one of the high functionaries at court, and was made master of the palace by Nicephorus I, whose daughter Procopia he married. He succeeded his wife's brother Stauracius, who reigned for only a few months after Nicephorus died. Michael was a supporter of the orthodox against the iconoclasts in the religious struggle of the period. He was deposed by Leo V, and retired to a monastery.

Michael II (of the Byzantine Empire). [Called Michael Balbus (bal'bus) or Michael Psellus, meaning "Michael the Stammerer"; also called Michael the Amorian.] b. at Amorium, Phrygia; d. 829. Byzantine emperor (820–829). He was of obscure origin, but rose to the highest dignities under Leo V, whom he had assisted in deposing Michael I, and whom he deposed in turn. He fought against Arab inroads in Crete and Sicily but was unable to maintain them. He attempted to steer a middle course between the iconoclasts and the orthodox but because of orthodox resistance to his second marriage began, near the end of his reign, actively to support the iconoclasts.

Michael III (of the Byzantine Empire). [Called "Michael the Drunkard."] b. 839; d. 867. Byzantine emperor (842–867); son of Theophilus. During his minority his mother, Theodora, acting as regent, decisively crushed the iconoclastic movement. He undertook (851), with his uncle Bardas, an expedition against the Bulgarians, which resulted in the conversion of the Bulgarian king to Christianity. In 863 his uncle Petronas gained a great victory over the Saracens in Asia Minor. He was assassinated (867) by Basilius the Macedonian, whom he had associated (866) with himself in the government.

Michael IV (of the Byzantine Empire). [Called "Michael the Paphlagonian" (paf.lą.gō'ni.ąn).] Byzantine emperor (1034–41); a younger brother of John the Eunuch, prime minister under Constantine VIII and Romanus III. He became chamberlain to Zoe, wife of Romanus III, who in 1034 poisoned her husband in order to marry Michael. An epileptic and a man of weak character, he was a mere instrument in the hands of his brother. His reign was marked by revolts of the Serbs and the Bulgarians and by a successful war against the Moslems in Sicily.

Michael V (of the Byzantine Empire). [Called Michael Calaphates (kal.ą.fā'tēz), meaning "Michael the Calker."] Byzantine emperor (1041–42); nephew of Michael IV. He banished his uncle John the Eunuch, which led to an insurrection at Constantinople. He was dethroned after a four month reign, and spent the rest of his life in a monastery.

Michael VI (of the Byzantine Empire). [Also, Michael VI Stratioticus; called "Michael the Warrior."] Byzantine emperor (1056–57). He was appointed by the empress Theodora as her successor on account of his military virtues. He was, however, old and feeble, and was deposed by Isaac Comnenus. He was allowed to retire to a monastery.

Michael VII (of the Byzantine Empire). [Also: Michael VII Ducas (dū'kas); Michael VII Parapinaces (par"ą.pi.nā'sēz).] Byzantine emperor (1071–78); son of Constantine X. The Byzantine territories in Italy were completely lost during his reign and the Seljuk Turks seized a large territory in Asia Minor. He resigned when faced with army revolts and retired to a monastery. His epithet, Parapinaces, means "one who takes food from the plate," a reference to the rise of food prices during his reign.

Michael VIII (of the Byzantine Empire). [Also, Michael VIII Palaeologus (pā.lē.ol'ō.gus, pal.ē-).] b. 1234; d. in December, 1282. Byzantine emperor (1261–82); descendant (through his mother, Irene Angela) of the Byzantine ruling house of Angelus and founder of the house of Palaeologus. He became commander of the French mercenaries in the service of the emperor of Nicaea, and in 1259 became, with the patriarch Arsenius, guardian of the emperor John IV (John Lascaris). He caused himself to be proclaimed joint emperor of Nicaea in 1260. In 1261 he defeated Baldwin II and won Constantinople from the Latins, thus restoring the Byzantine Empire, of which he was crowned emperor in the same year. He deposed and blinded John Lascaris in 1261. He attempted to unify the Western and Eastern churches and made an agreement (1274) to recognize papal supremacy, but his struggle against Charles I of Sicily (Charles of Anjou) and the resistance of his Orthodox subjects weakened his position in Constantinople to the extent that Pope Martin IV allied himself with Charles to dethrone Michael and establish Western power in Constantinople. The alliance failed, however, in the revolt (1282) known as the Sicilian Vespers that destroyed Charles's power.

Michael IX (of the Byzantine Empire). [Also, Michael IX Palaeologus.] d. 1320. Byzantine emperor (1295–1320); son and associate on the throne of Andronicus II, who outlived him.

Michael (of Rumania). [Rumanian, Mihai.] b. at Sinaia, Rumania, 1921—. King of Rumania (1927–30, 1940–47); son of Carol II. On the death of his grandfather Ferdinand I, Michael succeeded to the throne, Carol having renounced (1925) the succession when he deserted his wife to live with Magda Lupescu. Carol claimed the throne in 1930 and reigned until the German invasion in 1940, when Michael again became king. He took active part in the overthrow (1944) of the regime of Ion Antonescu, but was forced to abdicate (1947) under Communist pressure.

Michael (of Russia). b. 1596; d. July 12, 1645. Czar of Russia (1613–45). He was the founder of the Romanov dynasty. He was chosen czar by the boyars at the end of a long period of internal disorder that began with the reign of Boris Godunov in 1598 and included the fighting of the claimants who purported to be the Czarevich Dmitri (d. 1591). Michael reigned at first through his father's mediation and, after his death in 1633, through a group of ministers.

Michael, Archangel. Painting by Guido Reni, in Santa Maria dei Cappuccini, Rome. The saint, because of his beauty of face and form often called "the Catholic Apollo," is in the act of enchanting Lucifer.

Michael, Order of Saint. Order instituted in France by Louis XI, Aug. 1, 1469.

Michael Cassio (kash'i.ō). See Cassio, Michael.

Michaelis (mē.ċhä.ā'lis), Adolf. b. at Kiel, Germany, June 22, 1835; d. at Strasbourg, Germany, Aug. 12, 1910. German archaeologist. Author of Catalogue of Ancient Marbles in Great Britain (1882) and Kunstgeschichte des Altertum (History of the Arts of Ancient Times, 1898).

Michaelis, Caroline Albertine Dorothee. See Schlegel, Caroline Albertine Dorothee.

Michaelis, Johann David. b. at Halle, Germany, Feb. 27, 1717; d. at Göttingen, Germany, Aug. 22, 1791. German Biblical scholar. He was one of the first critics to approach the Bible as a document of a people living in a given area at a certain time and as an Eastern literary work. The interest he aroused led to the expedition (1761–67) of Carsten Niebuhr to the Middle East. His works include an introduction to the New Testament (4th ed., 1788), Mosaisches Recht (1770–71), Supplementa to Hebrew lexicons (1784–92), and others.

Michaelis (mē.kä.ā'lis), Karin. [Full name, Katharina Marie Bech Michaelis.] b. at Randers, Denmark, March 20, 1872; d. at Copenhagen, Jan. 11, 1950. Danish author of popular books for and about young girls, especially Den farlige Alder (The Dangerous Age, 1910). She was the wife of Sophus Michaelis, and later married C. E. Stangeland.

Michaelis (mē.ċhä.ā'lis), Leonor. b. at Berlin, Jan. 16, 1875; d. at New York, Oct. 8, 1949. German physical chemist. He is known for his studies in physical chemistry applied to biology, hydrogen ion concentration, membrane potentials, enzymes, oxidation reduction potentials, semiquinone intermediate in oxidation, and biological staining.

Michaelis (mē.kä.ā'lis), Sophus August Berthel. b. at Odense, Denmark, May 14, 1865; d. at Copenhagen, Jan. 28, 1932. Danish writer; husband of Karin Michaelis. His poems, novels, and plays reflected his wide travels.

Michael James Flaherty (mī'kęl jāmz fla'ėr.ti). See Flaherty, Michael James.

Michaelmas (mik'ęl.mąs). Roman Catholic and Anglican festival, which probably originated as a religious commemoration of the founding of a Roman basilica in honor of Saint Michael; later a more secular day on which, in England, quarterly rents were paid, at which time a goose was also usually given for the lord's dinner. It falls on Sept. 29. In the Eastern Church it falls on Nov. 8.

Michaelmas Terme. Play by Thomas Middleton, written c1604 and licensed and printed in 1607. It is a lively and effective comedy of city intrigue.

Michael Obrenovich (ō.bren'ọ.vich). b. at Kragujevac, in Serbia, Sept. 4, 1825; murdered near Belgrade, June 10, 1868. Prince of Serbia; younger son of Milosh Obrenovich. He reigned from 1839 to 1842 and 1860 to 1868.

Michael Perez (pē'rez). See Perez, Michael.

Michah (mī'ką). See the prophet Micah.

Michalovce (mē'hä.lôf.tse). [Hungarian, Nagymihály.] Town in E Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Prešov, in E Slovakia, situated on the Laborec River E of Košice, near the border of the U.S.S.R. 10,399 (1947).

Michalski (mē.käl'skē), Teodoro Picado. See Picado Michalski, Teodoro.

Michaud (mē.shō), Joseph François. b. at Albens, in Savoy, June 19, 1767; d. at Passy, near Paris, Sept. 30, 1839. French poet, historian, and Bourbon publicist; brother of Louis Gabriel Michaud. He was editor of the royalist La Quotidienne (1796 and again 1814 et seq.), for which he was proscribed during the French Revolution. His principal historical works are Histoire des progrès et de la chute de l'empire de Mysore (1801) and Histoire des croisades (1812–17). With his brother, he edited the Biographie universelle (1811–28).

Michaud, Louis Gabriel. b. at Bourg, France, 1772; d. at Ternes, France, March 13, 1858. French man of letters; brother of Joseph François Michaud, and his collaborator in editing the Biographie universelle.

Michaux (mē.shō), André. b. near Versailles, France, March 7, 1746; d. in Madagascar, Nov. 16, 1802. French botanist and traveler in Asia and America. Among his publications are Histoire des chênes de l'Amérique septentrionale (1801) and Flora Boreali-Americana (1803).

Michaux, François André. b. at Versailles, France, 1770; d. near Pontoise, France, 1855. French botanist; son of André Michaux. He wrote Histoire des arbres forestiers de l'Amérique septentrionale (3 vols., 1810–13; Eng. trans., The North American Sylva, 1817–19) and other works on the forests of North America.

Michaux, Henry. b. 1899—. French poet. Author of L'Espace du dedans (1944), Épreuves, exorcismes, 1940–1944 (1945), Liberté d'action (1945), and Un Barbare en Asie (1947; Eng. trans., A Barbarian in Asia, 1949). Relatively unknown before World War II, he emerged after the German occupation as an important poet.

Micheas (mī.kē'as). See the prophet Micah.

Michel (mē.shel), Claude. Original name of Clodion.

Michel, Francisque Xavier. b. at Lyons, France, Feb. 18, 1809; d. at Paris, May 18, 1887. French archaeologist, philologist, and historian. Among his works on medieval and Renaissance literature are editions of Roman de la rose and Chanson de Roland. Author of Histoire des races maudites de la France et de l'Espagne (1847), Le Pays Basque (1857), and Les Écossais en France et les français en Écosse (1862).

Michel (mē'chel), Julius. b. at Frankenthal, in the Rhine Palatinate, Germany, July 5, 1843; d. at Berlin, Sept. 29, 1911. German ophthalmologist. He was the first to describe thrombosis of the central vein and worked on tuberculosis of the eye and on the anatomy of optic fibers.

Michel (mē.shel), Louise. [Full name, Clémence Louise Michel.] b. in Haute-Marne, France, 1830; d. at Marseilles, France, Jan. 9, 1905. French anarchist. In 1860 she opened a school in the Quartier Montmartre, Paris. She took part (1871) in the uprising of the Commune, and was sentenced in the same year to deportation for life to New Caledonia. She was released by the amnesty of 1880, and returned to Paris, where she became prominent as an anarchist agitator. In 1883 she was sentenced to six years' imprisonment for inciting the poor to plunder the bakers' shops. She was released and again imprisoned in 1886, and later went to live at London.

Michelangelo (mī.kel.an'je.lō; Italian, mē.kel.än'je.lō [Full name, Michelangelo Buonarroti.] b. at Caprese, Italy, March 6, 1475; d. at Rome, Feb. 18, 1564. Italian sculptor, painter, architect, and poet. He came of an ancient but poor Florentine family. He was apprenticed to the painter Ghirlandajo April 1, 1488, and with other boys from the atelier began soon after to study the classical marble sculpture collected by Lorenzo de' Medici in the garden of San Marco. Lorenzo discovered him there, and in 1489 took him into his palace, where he had every opportunity for improvement and study. The Centaur relief in the Casa Buonarroti was made at this time, at the suggestion of Angelo Poliziano. In 1491 he came under the influence of Savonarola, whom he always held in great reverence. In 1492 Lorenzo died, and Michelangelo's intimate relations with the Medici family terminated. In 1493 he made a large wooden crucifix for the prior of San Spirito, and with the assistance of the prior began the profound study of anatomy in which he delighted. Before the expulsion of the Medici he fled to Bologna, where he was soon engaged upon the Arca di San Domenico begun by Niccolo Pisano in 1265, to which he added the well-known kneeling angel of Bologna. He was probably much influenced by the reliefs of Della Quercia around the door of San Petronio; two of these he afterward imitated in the Sistine Chapel. In 1495 he returned to Florence, when he is supposed to have made the San Giovannino in the Berlin Museum. From 1496 to 1501 he lived at Rome. To this period are attributed the Bacchus of the Bargello and the Cupid of the South Kensington Museum. The most important work of this time is the Pietà di San Pietro (1498). In 1501 he returned to Florence, and on September 13 began the great David of the Signoria, made from a block of marble abandoned by Agostino di Duccio, which was placed in position May 18, 1504. The two roundels of the Madonna and Child in Burlington House and the Bargello were probably made then, and also the picture of the Holy Family in the Uffizi. In 1503 Piero Soderini, gonfaloniere, projected two frescoes for the Sala Grande of the Palazzo Vecchio. The commission for one was given to Leonardo da Vinci, that for the other to Michelangelo in 1504. For it he prepared the great cartoon of the Battle of Cascina, an incident in the war with Pisa when, on July 28, 1364, a band of 400 Florentines were attacked while bathing by Sir John Hawkwood's English troopers. This cartoon contained 288 square feet of surface and was crowded with nude figures in every position. It had, probably, more influence upon the art of the Renaissance than any other single work. To about this time may be attributed the beginning of his poetic creations, of the multitude of which undoubtedly written a few only have come down to us. In November, 1505, he was called to Rome by Pope Julius II to design his mausoleum, the history of which runs through the entire life of the master. Repeated designs and repeated attempts to carry them out were made, only to be frustrated by the successors of the great Pope. The matter finally ended in the reign of Pope Paul III by the placing in San Pietro in Vincoli of the statue of Moses surrounded by mediocre works finished by Raffaello da Montelupo and others. The Two Captives of the Louvre are part of the work as originally designed. In the spring of 1506 he assisted in the discovery of the Laocoön in the palace of Titus. His favorite piece of ancient sculpture was the Belvedere Torso, supposed to be a copy of the Hercules Epitrapezius of Lysippus. In April, 1506, probably as a result of the intrigues of Bramante, he was forced to abandon Rome for Florence. In the autumn he joined the Pope at Bologna, and made (1506–07) the bronze statue of Julius which stood over the door of San Petronio and was destroyed in 1511. The ceiling of the Sistine Chapel was begun early in 1508, and finished in October, 1512. Pope Julius II died on Feb. 21, 1513, and was succeeded by Cardinal Giovanni de' Medici, son of the great Lorenzo, as Leo X. Michelangelo was diverted from the tomb of Julius by Leo, and employed from 1517 to 1520 in an abortive attempt to build the façade of San Lorenzo in Florence, and in developing the quarries of Carrara and Seravezza. In 1520 he began, by order of Cardinal Giulio de' Medici, the sacristy of San Lorenzo and the tombs of Giuliano and Lorenzo de' Medici with the famous reclining figures on the sarcophagi, perhaps the most thoroughly characteristic of all his works. Pope Leo X was succeeded by Adrian VI in 1521, and he in turn by Giulio de' Medici as Clement VII in 1523. On April 6, 1529, Michelangelo was appointed "governor and procurator-general over the construction and fortification of the city walls" of Florence. On Sept. 21, 1529, occurred his unexplained flight to Venice. He returned November 20 of the same year, and was engaged in the defense of the city until its capitulation, Aug. 12, 1530. Before the end of the year 1534 he left Florence, never to return. The statues of the sacristy, including the Madonna and Child, were arranged after his departure. Alessandro Farnese succeeded Clement VII as Pope Paul III, in October, 1534. The Last Judgment was begun about Sept. 1, 1535, and finished before Christmas, 1541. Michelangelo's friendship for Vittoria Colonna began c1538. The frescoes of the Pauline Chapel were painted between 1542 and 1549. They represent the conversion of Saint Paul and the martyrdom of Saint Peter. He succeeded Antonio da Sangallo in 1546 in the offices which he held, and became architect of Saint Peter's on Jan. 1, 1547. From this time until his death he worked on the church without compensation. The dome alone was completed with any regard to his plans.

Michele (mē.kā'lā), Andrea Cioni di. See Verrocchio, Andrea.

Michelet (mēsh.le), Jules. b. at Paris, Aug. 21, 1798; d. at Hyères, France, Feb. 9, 1874. French historian. He began his literary studies under the guidance of an old bookseller, and in his spare moments helped his father, a printer by trade, in setting type. He went through the Collège Charlemagne, and entered on a higher course of study. In 1821 he graduated with the highest university honors, and was called at once to the chair of history in the Collège Rollin (1821–26). His first works were Tableau chronologique de l'histoire moderne (1825), Tableaux synchroniques de l'histoire moderne (1826), and Précis de l'histoire moderne (1827). He was appointed lecturer at the École Normale in 1827, and published his Introduction à l'histoire universelle (1831), Origines du droit français (1837), and Histoire romaine: république (1839). Michelet began his famous courses of anticlerical, and in particular anti-Jesuit, lectures at the Collège de France in 1838, and wrote in that connection Des Jésuites (1843), Du prêtre, de la femme et de la famille (1844), and Du peuple (1845). The clergy succeeded at last in silencing him, and he retired to a life of study. The publication of his masterpiece, the Histoire de France in 16 volumes (1833–67), was interrupted by his Histoire de la révolution française (1847–53), Le Procès des templiers (1851), and Légendes démocratiques du Nord (1854). He wrote, further, Les Femmes de la révolution (1854), L'Oiseau (1856), L'Insecte (1858), L'Amour (1859), La Femme (1860), La Mer (1861), and La Bible de l'humanité (1864). Michelet made a last return to history in attempting to bring his great work down to date. He completed but a few volumes of his Histoire du XIXe siècle (1872–73).

Michelet (mē.shẹ.lā'), Karl Ludwig. b. at Berlin, Dec. 1, 1801; d. there, Dec. 16, 1893. German philosophical (Hegelian) writer. He wrote works on Aristotle as well as Geschichte der letzten Systeme der Philosophie in Deutschland (1837–38), Die Persönlichkeit Gottes (1841), Entwickelungsgeschichte der neuesten deutschen Philosophie (1843), Die Epiphanie der ewigen Persönlichkeit des Geistes (1844–52), Geschichte der Menschheit (1859–60), System der Philosophie (1876–81), and others.

Micheli (mē.kā'lē), Ferdinando. b. at Carrara, Italy, Jan. 12, 1872; d. at Turin, Italy, May 13, 1937. Italian clinician. He is known for his studies on endocarditis and acute and chronic rheumatism. He described a syndrome of nocturnal hemoglobinuria (also called Marchiafa-Micheli's syndrome).

Michelin (mēsh.laṅ'), André Jules. b. at Paris, Jan. 16, 1853; d. there, April 5, 1931. French industrialist and philanthropist; brother and partner of Édouard Michelin.

Michelin, Édouard. b. c1856; d. at Orcines, Puy-de-Dôme, France, Aug. 25, 1940. French industrialist and philanthropist, inventor of the rubber pneumatic tire; brother of André Michelin. They inherited (c1883) a rubber factory at Clermont-Ferrand, France, invented (1889) a removable rubber tire for bicycles, and later adapted it for horse carriages and automobiles. From this developed the automobile balloon tire. Their firm, the Michelin tire company, was the largest rubber-manufacturing concern in France before World War II.

Michelis (mē.ċhā'lis), Friedrich. b. at Münster, Germany, July 27, 1815; d. at Freiburg im Breisgau, Germany, May 28, 1886. German theologian and philosopher, one of the leaders of the Old Catholic movement who opposed the doctrine of papal infallibility enunciated in 1870 and was excommunicated (1871).

Michel of Northgate (mich'ẹl; nôrth'gāt), Dan. fl. 1340. Friar of the cloister of Saint Austin at Canterbury. He is noted as having completed in 1340 an English translation of La Somme des vices et des vertus, known as The Ayenbite of Inwyt, and valuable linguistically as an example of the Kentish dialect of Middle English.

Michelozzo Michelozzi (mē.ke.lôt'tsō mē.ke.lôt'tsē), Bartolommeo di Gherardo di. b. at Florence, 1396; d. 1472. Italian sculptor, engraver of gems, and architect. While associated with Donatello in making the monuments to Pope John XXIII, Cardinal Brancacci, and Bartolommeo Arazaggi, he was employed by Cosimo de' Medici to design and build the Medici Palace (now called the Riccardi Palace, as it was enlarged by the Marchese Riccardi in the 17th century). He created a distinctly Florentine type which was subsequently followed in the Strozzi and other Florentine palaces. During his exile (1433–34) with Cosimo de' Medici at Venice, he built the library of San Giorgio Maggiore, adjoining the Convent of San Marco, which Cosimo endowed with many precious manuscripts and books. At Milan he designed the chapel of Saint Peter Martyr in Santo Eustorgio, and other buildings. After his return to Florence, Michelozzo displayed great skill in restoring the lower part of the Palazzo Vecchio, which had been dangerously weakened by the weight of the upper stories. He also built the Villas Careggi, Caffagiolo, and Mozzi, and enlarged and rebuilt the Convent of San Marco. Among the few remaining examples of his skill as a sculptor are a silver statuette of Saint John Baptist on the altar of the Opera del Duomo in Florence, and a small Saint John over the door of the Canonica opposite the Baptistery.

Michels (mē'ċhẹls), Robert. b. at Cologne, Germany, Jan. 9, 1876; d. 1936. German economist and sociologist. Author of Sozialismus und Faschismus als politische Strömungen in Italien (Socialism and Fascism as Political Movements in Italy, 1925) and Italien von heute (Italy of Today, 1930).

Michelsen (mik'ẹl.sẹn), Christian. [Full name, Peter Christian Hersleb Kjerschow Michelsen.] b. at Bergen, Norway, March 15, 1857; d. at Gamlehaugen, Norway, June 29, 1925. Norwegian statesman and philanthropist, who led the struggle for Norwegian independence which culminated in the dissolution (1905) of the personal union of Norway and Sweden. He was the first premier (March, 1905–October, 1907) of independent Norway. Elected (1891) to the Storting (parliament), he became (1893) an influential cabinet member, continuing to press his campaign for independent consular representation of Norway. Defeated on this issue, he withdrew (Jan. 8, 1895) from the government, forcing its resignation, and became (March 11, 1895) premier of a coalition government, sponsoring a bill establishing a Norwegian consular service. An acute crisis in relations with Sweden ensued when royal approval was refused (May 27, 1895). The Norwegian government turned (June 7) its authority over to the Storting, refusing to rule. The union with Sweden was thenceforth considered to be dissolved, and the Storting declared that royal authority was to be exercised by the government. Michelsen headed the delegation which negotiated (Aug. 31–Sept. 23, 1905) the independence settlement with Sweden at a conference at Karlstad, Sweden. He left the bulk of his fortune to the Christian Michelsen Institute for Science and Civil Rights, a leading Norwegian philanthropic institution.

Michelson (mī'kẹl.sọn), Albert Abraham. b. at Strelmo, Germany, Dec. 19, 1852; d. May 9, 1931. American physicist, probably best known for his research in connection with the speed of light. He was graduated at the U.S. Naval Academy in 1873, studied in Germany and France, was instructor in the Naval Academy (1875–79), and was professor of physics in the Case Scientific School (1883–89) and Clark University (1889–92). From 1892 to 1929 he was professor of physics at the University of Chicago. By modification of an apparatus of prisms developed several years before by the French physicist Jean Bernard Léon Foucault he was able during the 1870's to determine the speed of light with an accuracy never previously possible. His work in this field led to development of the interferometer, by which, in 1893, he established, for the French government, the length of the standard meter. With E. W. Morley he carried out the famous experiment (the Michelson-Morley experiment) investigating the motion of the earth through the atmospheric ether. The result of this experiment was negative (that is to say, it demonstrated the impossibility of an absolute measurement in this field), but this negative result was of great importance in the formulation by Einstein of the theory of relativity. He published Velocity of Light (1902), Light Waves and their Uses (1903), and Studies in Optics (1927). In 1907 he was awarded the Nobel prize for physics.

Michelstadt (mē'ċhẹl.shtät). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of Hessen, American Zone, formerly in the province of Starkenburg, free state of Hesse, situated in the Odenwald Mountains, ab. 21 mi. SE of Darmstadt: a resort, with ivory and woodcarving manufactures, and lumber, plastics, and textile industries. 5,541 (1946).

Michener (mich'ẹ.nẹr), James Albert. b. at New York, Feb. 3, 1907—. American novelist. He worked as a merchant seaman, served with the U.S. navy in World War II, and after being discharged with the rank of lieutenant commander in the naval reserve joined the staff of the Macmillan Company at New York. He is the author of Tales of the South Pacific (1948; adapted as a musical comedy, South Pacific, 1949), The Fires of Spring (1949), Return to Paradise (1951), The Voice of Asia (1951), and The Bridges at Toko-Ri (1953).

Michetti (mē.kät'tē), Francesco Paolo. b. at Tocco da Casauria, Italy, Oct. 2, 1851; d. 1929. Italian landscape, historical, and portrait painter and engraver, who was director of the Academy at Naples, and considered to be one of the best of the Italian artists of his type. The Vatican, the Pitti Palace (Florence), the National Gallery (Berlin), the Art Institute of Chicago, and many other important museums have collected his works.

Michie (mich'i), Peter Smith. b. at Brechin, Forfarshire, Scotland, March 24, 1839; d. at West Point, N.Y., Feb. 16, 1901. American military engineer. As a Union officer during the Civil War, he was chief engineer (1864–65) under General Seymour on the Florida coast and under General Butler. He was instructor (1867–71) and professor (1871–1901) of natural and experimental philosophy at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point.

Michigan (mish'i.gan). [Called the "Wolverine State."] State in the N central United States, consisting of two peninsulas (separated by the Straits of Mackinac). The southern, Lower Michigan or the Lower Peninsula, is bounded by Lakes Huron, St. Clair, and Erie and the St. Clair and Detroit rivers on the E, Lake Michigan on the W, and Ohio and Indiana on the S; the northern or Upper Peninsula lies between Lake Superior on the N and Lakes Huron and Michigan and the state of Wisconsin on the S.

Population, Area, and Political Divisions. Michigan is divided for administrative purposes into 83 counties. It sends 17 representatives to Congress, and has 19 electoral votes. Leading cities are Bay City, Detroit, Flint, Grand Rapids, Lansing, Muskegon, and Saginaw. Capital, Lansing; area, 57,022 sq. mi. (58,216 sq. mi., including water, but not including water of the Great Lakes); pop. 6,371,766 (1950), an increase of 21.2 percent over that of 1940. The state ranks 22nd in area, and seventh (on the basis of the 1950 census) in population.

Terrain and Climate. The surface in the S part of the state is generally level, while in the N it is rolling or hilly in many places, the highest point being Porcupine Mountain (2,023 ft.) in the NW corner of the state. The principal rivers include the St. Marys, between Lakes Superior and Huron, with the Sault Sainte Marie (or Soo) Canals, consisting of one Canadian and two U.S. ship canals and five locks, situated at St. Marys Falls; the St. Joseph, Kalamazoo, Manistee, and Muskegon, flowing into Lake Michigan; the St. Clair, on the Ontario boundary; the Menominee, Brule, and Montreal, along the Wisconsin boundary. The coast has many inlets, among the largest being Saginaw Bay on Lake Huron and Green Bay on Lake Michigan. There are numerous inland lakes of glacial origin. The climate is characterized by cold winters and warm summers, and is moist at all seasons. Winters are more severe, with much snow, in the N than in the S.

Industry, Agriculture, and Trade. Michigan ranks first among the states in the manufacture of automobiles, this industry being concentrated in and about Detroit (the fifth largest city of the U.S.), Pontiac, Flint, and Lansing. The state also ranks first in the manufacture of chemicals and pharmaceuticals. Furniture is a major manufacture, especially at Grand Rapids. Paper is another important product, made in quantity at Kalamazoo. Food products include canned fish from the Great Lakes fisheries, beet sugar, canned fruits and vegetables, and dairy products. The state takes a high place in agriculture, the S part having a fertile soil suited to the growing of wheat, sugar beets, fruits (especially cherries and plums), and vegetables (especially beans). An important enterprise is the raising of cattle for beef and dairy products, and hogs and chickens. The state is rich in minerals, leading in the production of salt and taking sixth place in the production of copper. Iron mining is also outstanding, the state ranking second in the production of iron ore. There are deposits of coal in Lower Michigan. The state also has cement, petroleum, natural gas, and gypsum. The many lakes and state parks have given rise to a large summer resort and tourist industry. Annual income in the state from agriculture ranges as high as 605 million dollars, from manufacturing, as high as five billion; from mineral output, as high as 141 million; from vacationists and tourists, as high as 500 million.

History. Michigan was first visited by the French in the early 1600's; Marquette founded (1668) a mission at Sault Sainte Marie, and another three years later at Mackinac. Detroit was founded (1701) by Cadillac. The Michigan region was part of New France until 1763, when it was ceded to England; ceded (1783) by England to the U.S.; became (1787) part of the Northwest Territory, and a few years later part of the Indiana Territory. It was constituted the Michigan Territory in 1805. During the War of 1812 Detroit and Mackinac were captured by the British. The state applied for admission to the Union in 1835, but was not admitted, because of a boundary dispute with Ohio, until Jan. 26, 1837, when it became the 26th state. Detroit served as the capital until 1847, when Lansing assumed that function.

Culture. Michigan has a considerably larger urban than rural population; nearly 71 percent of the population was urban in 1950. It has attracted many immigrants, particularly Dutch, Finns, Poles, Italians, and Germans. Within recent years many Negroes have gone to live in the state. The Detroit area has been the scene of numerous labor conflicts in connection with the automobile industry. The Detroit Institute of Arts is a city-owned museum. Near Detroit is the Cranbrook Academy of Art, with which the architect Eliel Saarinen and the sculptor Carl Milles are associated. Among the leading institutions of higher learning are the state-supported University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, its library containing the William L. Clements library of American history with rare items dating from the 15th century; and Wayne University, at Detroit. The state motto is Si Quaeris Peninsulam Amoenam, Circumspice, meaning "If You Seek a Pleasant Peninsula, Look Around You." The state flower is the apple blossom.

Michigan, Lake. Southwesternmost of the Great Lakes of North America, and the only one entirely within U.S. territory, bordered by Michigan on the N and E, Indiana on the S, and Illinois and Wisconsin on the W. Chicago and Milwaukee are the chief cities on the lake. It discharges by the Strait of Mackinac into Lake Huron. Length, ab. 330 mi.; greatest width, ab. 80 mi.; greatest known depth, ab. 923 ft.; elevation, ab. 581 ft.; area, ab. 22,178 sq. mi.

Michigan Center. Unincorporated community in S Michigan, in Jackson County. 3,012 (1950).

Michigan City. City in NW Indiana, in La Porte County, on Lake Michigan ab. 40 mi. SE of Chicago: manufacturing and trade center, and summer resort. It has manufactures of railroad cars, machinery, boilers, bicycles, furniture, and clothing. There is a fishing and recreational harbor. It was established in 1832, and is the site of the Indiana state prison. 28,395 (1950).

Michilimackinac (mish''i.li.mak'i.nô). Strait of. Former name of Mackinac or Mackinaw, Strait of.

Michipicoten Island (mish''i.pi.kō'tẹn). Island in NE Lake Superior, part of Thunder Bay County, Ontario, Canada.

Michmash (mik'mash). [Also: Michmas; modern name, Mukhmas.] In Old Testament history, a place in Palestine, ab. 7 mi. NE of Jerusalem. It was the headquarters of the Philistines, particularly in their effort to put down the first uprising under Saul. 1 Sam. xiv. 5

Michoacán (mē''chō.ä.kän'). [Also: Michoacán de Ocampo (dā ō.käm'pō), or de Ocompo (ō.kōm'pō).] State in W central Mexico, surrounded by the states of Colima, Jalisco, Guanajuato, Querétaro, México, and Guerrero, and the Pacific Ocean. Capital, Morelia; area, 23,202 sq. mi.; pop. 1,412,830 (1950).

Michurin (mē.chö'rin), Ivan Vladimirovich. b. Sept. 20, 1854; d. at Michurinsk (formerly Kozlov), Russia, June 7, 1935. Russian horticulturist and geneticist. Because of his achievements in developing better strains and new varieties of fruits, vegetables, and grains, he has been compared with the American Luther Burbank. Before the Russian Revolution, Michurin was better known in other countries than in his own, but Lenin understood the vast potential value of his experiments, and the Soviet government took over the nursery he had established at Kozlov, expanded it to an experimental farm of 20,000 acres, and heavily subsidized his work.

Koslov was renamed Michurinsk in honor of the scientist, and became the seat of an agricultural college. Michurin was decorated with the highest Soviet honors and his 80th birthday was marked by an official celebration. His work bore practical fruit especially in the development of plants which thrive in such naturally arid areas and such regions of intense cold as abound in the vast Soviet territory. Michurin directly challenged former genetic theory by asserting that acquired characteristics can be inherited, and that his achievements proved it.

Michurinsk (mē.chō'rinsk). [Former name, Koslov, also spelled Kosloff, Kozloff, Kozlov.] City in the U.S.S.R., in the Tambov oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, ab. 44 mi. W of Tambov. It has important trade in agricultural products and its manufactures include tractors, foodstuffs, leather goods, and tobacco products. It also has locomotive repair shops. 70,202 (1939).

Micipsa (mi.sip'sạ). d. 118 B.C. Son of Masinissa, and chief ruler of Numidia after Masinissa's death in 149 B.C.

Mickiewicz (mĕts.kye'vēch), Adam. b. at Zaosie, Nowogródek, Lithuanian Poland, Dec. 24, 1798; d. at Constantinople, Nov. 26, 1855. Polish poet of the Romantic era. He was educated at the University of Vilna. In southern Russia, to which he was exiled for alleged participation in subversive political activities, he wrote the Crimean Sonnets, a cycle of descriptive stanzas which served to introduce the Oriental element into Polish poetry. Released in 1828, he spent the rest of his life in western Europe, mostly at Paris. Of his poems, the most important are based on Lithuanian themes, as Gražyna, Konrad Wallenrod (1828), the cycle Forefathers' Eve, and his masterpiece, Pan Tadeusz (1834), an idyll-epic of old Lithuania. His writings were a major factor in sustaining the Polish national will to survive, especially his Books of the Polish Nation (1832). Most of his works are available in English translation.

Mickle (mik'l), William Julius. b. at Langholm, Dumfriesshire, Scotland, Sept. 28, 1735; d. at Forest Hill, London, Oct. 28, 1788. Scottish poet. He translated the Lusiad (1775) and is the reputed author of the song There's nae luck aboot the hoose. Among his other works are a Spenserian poem, The Concubine (or Syr Martyn, 1765), and Cumnor Hall (1784), which Sir Walter Scott used as a basis in writing Kenilworth.

Micmac (mik'mak). Group of North American Indian tribes found in Nova Scotia, Cape Breton, and Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, and adjacent parts of Quebec. They speak an Algonquian language.

Micon of Athens (mī'kon; ath'ẹnz). Greek painter, a contemporary of Polygnotus, known principally from the works executed in conjunction with the latter in the Stoa Poikile, Theseum, and temple of the Dioscuri at Athens. He made the statue of the Athenian Callias, victor in Olympiad 77 (or 468 B.C.).

Micromégas (mē.kro.mā.gäs). Philosophical romance by Voltaire, published in 1752. It was in imitation of Jonathan Swift's Gulliver's Travels.

Micronesia (mī.krǫ.nē'zhạ, -shạ). Collection of island groups in the Pacific Ocean, including principally the Bonin, Caroline, Marianas, Gilbert, and Marshall groups. The islands (except the Marianas) are generally small (the name comes from Greek micros, "small," and nesos, "island"), low, and of coral formation. The inhabitants, chiefly Micronesians, are related in race and language. Land area, ab. 1,100 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 150,000.

Micronesians (mī.krǫ.nē'zhạnz, -shạnz). Indigenous peoples of Micronesia, inhabiting Pacific islands N of the equator, and thus including the peoples of the Caroline, Marshall, Marianas, and Gilbert islands. Although there is some inevitable admixture of Melanesian, Polynesian, and Malayan physical and cultural traits, the Micronesians as a people are distinct from any of these. They are definitely related to the Malays, but are predominantly of mixed Negroid and Mongoloid stock. They now number ab. 100,000. Their languages belong to the Micronesian group of the Malayo-Polynesian family, the separate languages being Caroline, Yap, Ponape, Gilbertese, Nauru, and Marianas.

Microscopium (mī.krǫ.skō'pi.um). Constellation S of Capricorn, introduced by Nicolas de Lacaille in 1752.

Microtechnum (mī.krǫ.tek'num) or Microtegnum (-tcg'-). See Tegnum.

Mictlan (mēk.tlän'). See Mitla.

Midas (mī'dạs). In Greek legend, a king of Phrygia, son of Gordius and Cybele. The god Dionysus, from gratitude for kindness shown to his teacher Silenus by Midas, promised to grant whatever the latter might ask. Midas, accordingly, requested that whatever he touched might turn to gold; but when he found that even his food was not excepted, and that he was likely to starve, he prayed that the gift might be taken away, and on bathing in the Pactolus was restored to his natural condition. The sands of the river, however, were ever after full of gold.

Middelburg or Middleburg (mid'l.bėrg). Town in S Africa, in E Transvaal, Union of South Africa, ab. 95 mi. E of Pretoria. Its main importance lies in the large coal deposit in the vicinity. Pop. 8,099 (1946), including 3,652 Europeans.

Middelburg (mid'ęl.bėrg; Dutch, mid'ęl.bėrch). Town in SW Netherlands, the capital of the province of Zeeland, situated on the island of Walcheren, N of Flushing. It is a seaport, with import, export, and agricultural trade. It is frequently visited by artists, and is the seat of the Zeeland science society. Once a fortified city, it was renowned in the Middle Ages for its cloth industry. The late Gothic 16th-century town hall, a symbol of the town's prosperity, the exterior decorated with the colossal statues of the counts and countesses of Holland and Zeeland, was severely damaged in World War II but is being restored; other monuments, such as the Abbey of Saint Nicholas, the Nieuwe Kerk, and the Steenroots House, were largely destroyed; the harbor installations, locks, and canals also suffered heavy damage. 21,417 (est. 1951).

Middelfart (miтн'ęl.färt). Town in NW Fyn, Denmark, in the amt (county) of Odense, situated on the Little Belt: formerly the E ferry terminus; since 1935 the ferry has been supplanted by a road and rail bridge. 8,089 (1945).

Middelschulte (mid'ęl.shůl.tę), Wilhelm. b. in Germany, April 3, 1863; d. there, May 4, 1943. German organist and composer. He was organist (1894–1914) with the Theodore Thomas orchestra at Chicago, and taught organ and theory at the Wisconsin Conservatory, Milwaukee. He was known as an interpreter of Bach.

Middle Ages. Period of about a thousand years, between the close of what is technically considered ancient history and the first definite movements in Europe of the distinctively modern spirit of freedom and enterprise, the Renaissance. Its beginning is synchronous with that of the so-called dark ages, and it is variously reckoned as extending to the fall of Constantinople (1453), the invention of printing, the Renaissance, or the discovery of America, in the 15th century, or to the Reformation, in the early part of the 16th.

Middle and Upper Franconia (frang.kō'ni.ạ). [German, Mittel- und Oberfranken.] Regierungsbezirk (government district) of the Land (state) of Bavaria, S Germany, American Zone, bounded by Württemberg-Baden on the W, Thuringia and Saxony on the N, and Czechoslovakia on the NE. The chief city is Nuremberg. The district lies astride two watersheds: that of the Rhine-Main and the Eger-Elbe river basins in the NE, and that between the Rhine-Main and the Danube river basins in the SW. It came to Bavaria in the Napoleonic period; consisted formerly of the free imperial city of Nuremberg, the margravate of Ansbach-Bayreuth, the bishopric of Bamberg, and a number of smaller territories. Koburg was added in 1919. The population increased in the period 1939–46 by 21.3 percent. Capital, Bayreuth; area, ab. 5,838 sq. mi.; pop. 2,286,282 (1946).

Middle Atlantic States. Name given collectively to the states of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and (sometimes) Delaware and Maryland.

Middleboro (mid'l.bur.ō). [Official spelling, Middleborough.] Town (in Massachusetts the equivalent of township in many other states) and unincorporated village in SE Massachusetts, in Plymouth County, ab. 34 mi. SE of Boston: manufactures of caskets, hospital supplies, shoes, and fire apparatus. Pop. of town, 10,164 (1950); of village, 5,889 (1950).

Middleburg (mid'l.bėrg). See Middelburg.

Middlebury (mid'l.ber.i). Town (in Vermont the equivalent of township in many other states) and village in C

Vermont, county seat of Addison County, on the Otter River near Lake Champlain, ab. 33 mi. SW of Montpelier: processing of marble. It is the seat of Middlebury College, noted for its annual summer writers' conference. Pop. of town, 4,778 (1950); of village, 3,614 (1950).

Middle Congo (kong'gō). [French, Moyen-Congo.] One of the four territories making up French Equatorial Africa. It stretches from the Atlantic Ocean NE to Ubangi-Shari territory and is bounded on the E by the Belgian Congo (from which it is separated by the Congo and Ubangi rivers) and on the W by Gabon territory and Cameroun. The climate is hot and very moist and much of the area is covered with dense tropical forest. The principal products are rubber, palm oil, mahogany, and cocoa. The capital was moved (1950) from Brazzaville to Pointe Noire; these cities are connected by the only railroad in the territory. Area, ab. 132,000 sq. mi.; pop. 684,450 (675,400 natives and 9,050 Europeans; 1950).

Middle East. Term used by the U.S. State Department and the National Geographic Society to designate the region occupied by India, Pakistan, Afghanistan, Nepal, Bhutan, Sikkim, and Ceylon. It is sometimes also used as almost synonymous with Near East.

Middle East Institute. Organization founded in 1946 for the purpose of developing study and research facilities for promoting a better understanding in the U.S. of the countries of the Middle East. It maintains headquarters at Washington, D.C., and publishes The Middle East Journal (quarterly).

Middle Europe (ū'rōp). See Mitteleuropa.

Middle Franconia (frang.kō'ni.ą). See Middle and Upper Franconia.

Middle High German. See under German.

Middlemarch (mid'l.märch). Novel by George Eliot, published in 1871 in Blackwood's Magazine, and in book form in 1872.

Middle Park. Elevated grass-covered valley in Grand County, N Colorado. Length, ab. 35 mi.

Middleport (mid'l.pōrt). Village in SE Ohio, in Meigs County, on the Ohio River: formerly important for river shipping. 3,446 (1950).

Middle River. Unincorporated community in E central Maryland, in Baltimore County, ab. 10 mi. E of downtown Baltimore: aircraft industry. 23,243 (1950).

Middlesboro (mid'lz.bur.ō). [Also, Middlesborough.] City in SE Kentucky, in Bell County. Coal mining is the principal industry. It was platted in 1885. Pop. 14,482 (1950).

Middlesbrough (mid'lz.brō). County borough, seaport, and manufacturing and shipbuilding center in NE England, in the North Riding of Yorkshire, situated on the S bank of the estuary of the river Tees, ab. 3 mi. E of Stockton-on-Tees, ab. 239 mi. N of London by rail. Its prosperity dates from the discovery of the iron ores nearby (first worked in 1850). Middlesbrough is the chief seat of the English iron trade, producing much pig iron (some of which is shipped to Sheffield) and possessing many steelworks which produce high-grade steel. The town began as a coal-exporting port (still important) and now also exports iron and steel. Imports include iron and manganese ores. Shipbuilding has declined somewhat in importance. 147,336 (1951).

Middlesex (mid'l.seks). Inland county in SE England, bounded on the N by Hertfordshire, on the E by Essex and by the County of London, on the S by Surrey, and on the W by Buckinghamshire. The surface is generally level, reaching slightly higher elevations in the N part. It is drained by the rivers Brent, Colne, Lea, and Thames. Next to Rutlandshire, it is the smallest English county. In 1888, by the Local Government Act, parts of Middlesex were incorporated into the County of London. Middlesex is wholly within Greater London. It is almost completely urban in character, but there is extensive market gardening, especially of potatoes for the London markets. Hogs also are widely raised. The functions of its county seat are performed by the City of Westminster, a metropolitan borough of London. Middlesex was an ancient Saxon kingdom dependent on Essex. From 1101 it was subject to the City of London. Area, 232 sq. mi.; pop. 2,268,776 (1951).

Middlesex. Borough in NE New Jersey, in Middlesex County: flower cultivation. 5,943 (1950).

Middlesex, Earl of. Title of Cranfield, Lionel.

Middleton (mid'l.tọn). See also Midleton.

Middleton. Municipal borough and market town in NW England, in Lancashire, ab. 5 mi. N of Manchester, ab. 189 mi. NW of London by rail. Its industries include cotton finishing and the production of woolen yarns. 32,602 (1951).

Middleton, Arthur. b. at Charleston, S.C., 1681; d. Sept. 7, 1737. English colonial administrator. He was a leader (1719) of the group that overthrew proprietary control, and president (1720–25) of the council and acting governor (1725 et seq.) of South Carolina.

Middleton, Arthur. b. near Charleston, S.C., June 26, 1742; d. there, Jan. 1, 1787. American patriot; son of Henry Middleton (1717–84). He was a delegate from South Carolina to the Continental Congress in 1776, and signed the Declaration of Independence. He sat again (1781–83) in Congress.

Middleton, Charles. [Titles: 2nd Earl of Middleton, titular Earl of Monmouth.] b. c1640; d. 1719. English statesman, secretary of state to James II; son of John Middleton (1619–74). At the Restoration he was appointed envoy extraordinary to Vienna; he became earl by succession in 1674 and on Aug. 25, 1684, succeeded Godolphin as secretary of state. After the reign of James II he remained in England, and in May, 1692, was committed to the Tower of London. In 1693 he joined James at St.-Germain. At the death of the king he was proclaimed Earl of Monmouth by James Francis Edward Stuart, the titular James III. He assisted in the Pretender's Scottish expedition in 1707.

Middleton, Sir Charles. [Title, 1st Baron Barham.] b. Oct. 14, 1726; d. June 17, 1813. English naval officer. He served (1778–90) as comptroller of the navy. One of the lords commissioners (1794–95) of the admiralty, he was appointed (1805) first lord of the admiralty, and was responsible for the preparations leading to the battle of Trafalgar.

Middleton, Christopher. d. Feb. 12, 1770. English naval commander and arctic explorer.

Middleton, Conyers. b. in Yorkshire, England, Dec. 27, 1683; d. July 28, 1750. English divine. In 1724 he went to Rome, and in 1729 published the Letter from Rome upon pagan beliefs and ceremonies in the Roman Catholic Church. In his Letter to Waterland he ridiculed some parts of the Book of Genesis, and showed a skeptical tendency in an Introductory Discourse (1747). Of his numerous works the best-known is his Life of Cicero.

Middleton, George. b. at Paterson, N.J., Oct. 27, 1880—. American playwright. He wrote a number of one-act plays, produced chiefly in "little theatres." He published collections of one-act plays such as Embers, Possession, Masks, and Tradition. Among his adaptations from the French are plays by Brieux, Édouard Bourdet, Sacha Guitry, and Marcelle Maurette. He collaborated with Paul Kester on The Cavalier (1902), with L. Westervelt on The Sinner (1907), with George M. Cohan and Guy Bolton on Hit-the-Trail Holliday (1915), with Guy Bolton on Polly With a Past (1917), with E. H. Sothern on Accused (1925), and with A. E. Thomas on The Big Pond (1929). Author of the autobiography These Things Are Mine (1947).

Middleton, Henry. b. 1717; d. June 13, 1784. American Revolutionary leader; son of Arthur Middleton (1681–1737). He was speaker (1747, 1754, 1755) of the South Carolina legislature, and a member (1755–70) of His Majesty's Council. He was a member (1774) and president (Oct. 22, 1774–May 10, 1775) of the Continental Congress, from which he resigned (1775) in protest against the radicals who sought independence. He was chosen (1779) to the first state senate.

Middleton, Henry. b. Sept. 28, 1770; d. at Charleston, S.C., June 14, 1846. American politician and diplomat; son of Arthur Middleton (1742–97). He was governor of South Carolina (1810–12), was a representative in Congress (1815–19), and was minister to Russia (1820–31). He negotiated with Russia the 1824 fisheries treaty.

Middleton, Sir Hugh. See Myddleton, Sir Hugh.

Middleton, John. [Title, 1st Earl of Middleton.] b. 1619; d. at Tangier, Morocco, in June, 1674. Scottish soldier; father of Charles Middleton (c1640–1719). He was second in command (September, 1645) of the Parliamentary army at Philiphaugh. He suppressed (1647) the Royalist uprising in the north under George Gordon, 2nd Marquis of Huntly, and distinguished (1648) himself at Preston, where he was taken prisoner. He was appointed commander in chief in Scotland, governor of Edinburgh Castle, and lord high commissioner to the Scottish Parliament (1660), but was deprived (1663) of his offices on the basis of charges made by John Maitland, 2nd Earl of Lauderdale, that he had withheld letters from the king on public affairs, taken bribes from Presbyterians, and committed other offenses.

Middleton, John Izard. b. near Charleston, S.C., Aug. 13, 1785; d. at Paris, Oct. 5, 1849. American archaeologist and artist; son of Arthur Middleton (1742–87). He was the author of the illustrated work Grecian Remains in Italy, a Description of Cyclopian Walls and of Roman Antiquities with Topographical and Picturesque Views of Ancient Latium (1812), a pioneer study valuable for its precision of detail.

Middleton, Peter. d. Jan. 9, 1781. British physician at New York. He was a professor (1767 et seq.) of the Medical School of King's (now Columbia) College, and delivered (1767) the school's opening oration.

Middleton, Thomas. b. probably at London, 1580; d. at Newington Butts, London, cJuly, 1627. English dramatist. He studied at Oxford, entered Gray's Inn c1593, became a playwright c1599, and wrote in conjunction with William Rowley, Anthony Munday, Michael Drayton, John Webster, and others. He arranged lord mayor's shows and court masques, and in 1620 was appointed city chronologer. Among his plays are The Old Law with Rowley (printed 1656), The Mayor of Quinborough with Rowley (1661), Blurt, Master Constable (1602, with Dekker, who probably wrote most of it), The Phoenix (1607), Michaelmas Terme (1607), The Family of Love (licensed 1607), A Trick to Catch the Old One (licensed 1607), Your Five Gallants (1607), A Mad World, my Masters (1608), The Roaring Girl with Dekker (printed 1611), A Fair Quarrel with Rowley (1617), The Changeling and The Spanish Gipsy with Rowley (1623), More Dissemblers besides Women (1615), Women Beware Women (licensed before 1622, printed 1657), and A Game at Chess (1624). The last-named play, an allegory written about the fruitless embassy of Prince Charles (later Charles I) to Spain in an attempt to secure a match with the Spanish infanta, displays an almost virulent anti-Spanish bias; as a result, complaints were officially made and the play was banned from the theaters. However, three editions were printed in the first part of 1625 and the play, though off the stage, continued popular. The date of the following plays is conjectural: A Chaste Maid in Cheapside (1611), No Wit, No Help like a Woman's (1613), The Witch (c1615), Anything for a Quiet Life, with Webster (1662), and The Widow, with Ben Jonson and Fletcher (c1616). Middleton also had a small part in writing with Dekker The Honest Whore (1st part, 1604). He was the author of the lost plays Caesar's Fall (1602), Randal, Earl of Chester, and The Viper and Her Brood (1606). The Puritan, or the Widow of Watling Street (1607), a play sometimes attributed to Shakespeare, may have been written by Middleton. He wrote also about 20 masques, entertainments, and pageants; some miscellaneous verse, including Microcynicon: Six Snarling Satires (1599); and various prose pamphlets, including The Black Book (1604) and Father Hubberd's Tale (1604). Middleton's works were not collected till 1840, when Alexander Dyce's edition appeared.

Middleton, Thomas Fanshaw. b. at Kedleston, Derbyshire, England, Jan. 26, 1769; d. at Calcutta, India, July 8, 1822. English scholar and divine, appointed first bishop of Calcutta in 1814.

Middletown (mid'l.toun). City in C Connecticut, a county seat of Middlesex County, on the Connecticut River ab. 15 mi. S of Hartford: manufactures include rubber goods, tools, textiles, and hardware. It is the seat of Wesleyan University. 29,711 (1950).

Middletown. City in SE New York, in Orange County, ab. 54 mi. NW of New York City: trading center for an agricultural area; manufactures of machine tools, clothing, textiles, leather goods, and wrapping machines. 22,586 (1950).

Middletown. City in SW Ohio, in Butler County, on the Miami River ab. 20 mi. SW of Dayton: manufactures of paper, aircraft, machinery, plug tobacco, and steel. It was platted in 1802, became an important livestock-shipping point, and was incorporated in 1886. Pop. 33,695 (1950).

Middletown. Borough in SE Pennsylvania, in Dauphin County, ab. 8 mi. SE of Harrisburg: manufactures of stoves and clothing. It was established in 1755. Pop. 9,184 (1950).

Middletown. Town in SE Rhode Island, in Newport County, adjoining Newport on the NE: a residential and summer resort area. It was incorporated in 1743. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population more than doubled. 3,379 (1940), 7,382 (1950).

Middletown. Sociological and cultural study by Robert S. Lynd and Helen M. Lynd, published in 1929. Based upon first-hand investigation conducted in 1924–25 by a field staff working under the Lynds' direction, Middletown is a monumental treatise on the social traits, structure, and activities of an average American community (Muncie, Ind.), the identity of Middletown being suppressed in the book itself (probably in an effort to give the work greater objectivity). Its sequel is Middletown in Transition (1937).

Middle Tunguska (tün.gös'kạ). See Tunguska, Stony.

Middle West. [Also, Midwest.] Region of the N central U.S., including the area N of the Ohio River and W of the Appalachians. Its SW and W limits are indefinite. It is generally taken to include the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, and North Dakota. Occasionally bordering portions of other states in the Mississippi valley and Great Lakes watersheds may be included (W Pennsylvania, NW West Virginia, E and C Montana, E Wyoming, and E Colorado).

Middlewich (mid'l.wich). Urban district and manufacturing town in W England, in Cheshire, situated on the Cheshire salt field, ab. 26 mi. SE of Liverpool, ab. 166 mi. NW of London by rail. It has a chemical industry producing soda. 6,734 (1951).

Middle Years, The. Title of a short story and an autobiographical piece by Henry James, published in 1917.

Midgard (mid'gärd). [Old Norse, Midhgardhr.] In Old Norse mythology, the middle earth; this earth, between heaven and hell; the abode of the human race, formed in the midst of Ginnungagap from the body of the giant Ymir, the first created being. Midgard is connected with Asgard, the home of the gods, by the rainbow bridge, Bifrost.

Midgardsorm (mid'gärd.sôrm). [Old Norse, Midhgardhsormr.] In Old Norse mythology, the Midgard serpent, or worm; the monstrous serpent which encircles the earth. His name was Jörmungand.

Midgley (mij'li), Thomas. b. at Beaver Falls, Pa., May 18, 1889; d. near Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 2, 1944. American chemist who discovered (1922) the value of tetraethyl lead as gasoline antiknock compound. He developed a method of extracting bromine from sea water, patented a refrigerant (freon) for air-conditioning systems and refrigerators, and was a pioneer in research (1928 et seq.) on synthetic rubber.

Midhat Pasha (mid.hät' pä.shä'). b. 1822; d. in Arabia, May 8, 1884. Turkish statesman, grand vizier in 1872 and 1876–77.

Midi (mē.dē), Aiguille du. See Aiguille du Midi.

Midi, Canal du. [Also, Canal du Languedoc.] Canal in France uniting the Mediterranean with the Atlantic. It extends from the Garonne River, near Toulouse, to the Étang de Thau, near Agde. It was completed in 1681. Because of its narrowness and shallowness, it is not much used today. Length, ab. 150 mi.; depth, ab. 7 ft.

Midi, Dent du. See Dent du Midi.

Midi, Pic du. See Pic du Midi de Bigorre; also Pic du Midi d'Ossau.

Midian (mid'i.ạn). In Biblical geography, a desert region in NW Arabia, SE of the Gulf of Aqaba, inhabited by the Midianites. According to Gen. xxv. 2, Midian was a son of Abraham by Keturah; through him the Midianites were linked to Abraham. The Midianites are prominent in the Bible: they rescued Joseph from the pit; Jethro, Moses's father-in-law, was a Midianite, as was Balaam; they were defeated by the Mosaic army led by Phinehas and again by Gideon.

Midillü (mē.dil.lü'). Turkish name of Lesbos.

Midland (mid'land). City in E central Lower Michigan, county seat of Midland County. Local salt brines provided the original basis for the establishment of a large plant which manufactures magnesium, aspirin, Epsom salts, synthetic phenol, and numerous other pharmaceutical and commercial chemicals. 14,285 (1950).

Midland. Town in Ontario, Canada, in Simcoe County, on Georgian Bay. It is a lake port and an historic spot. Here are located the remains of one of the famous French Jesuit missions which were burned by the Iroquois in the early days of the French regime. The town attracts many summer tourists. 7,206 (1951).

Midland. Borough in W Pennsylvania, in Beaver County, on the Ohio River: manufactures of steel, machinery, and coke by-products; railroad repair shops. 6,491 (1950).

Midland. City in W Texas, county seat of Midland County, S of Lubbock. It is located in a productive petroleum region, and has refineries. It is a supply center for surrounding oil fields and a shipping point for oil and cattle. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population more than doubled. 9,352 (1940), 21,713 (1950).

Midland Park. Borough in NE New Jersey, in Bergen County. 5,164 (1950).

Midlands (mid'lạnds). Name given collectively to nearly the whole of the area of the N Central inland counties of England.

Midleton (mid'l.tọn). [Also: Middleton; Irish, Mainistir na Coran.] Urban district and market town in S Irish Republic, in County Cork, ab. 12 mi. E of Cork city. 2,829 (1951).

Midleton, 1st Earl of. Title of Brodrick, William St. John Fremantle.

Midlothian (mid.lō'thi.ạn). Village in NE Illinois, in Cook County: a southern suburb of Chicago. 3,216 (1950).

Midlothian (mid.lō'тнi.ạn). [Former name, Edinburghshire.] Maritime county in S Scotland. It is bounded on the N by the Firth of Forth, on the E by East Lothian and Berwickshire, on the SE by Roxburghshire, on the S by Selkirkshire, Peeblesshire, and Lanarkshire, and on the W and N by West Lothian. The Moorfoot Hills cross the SE part of the county; in the C part are the Pentland Hills. Practically all of the streams flow into the Firth of Forth. The county has an important coal field, and mining is carried on. A variety of industries are engaged in, among them brewing, brick and tile manufactures, and papermaking. The chief crops raised are oats, potatoes, wheat, turnips, and barley. County seat, Edinburgh; area, 366 sq. mi.; pop. 565,746 (1951).

Midnapore (mid'nạ.pōr). [Also, Midnapur (-pör).] District in West Bengal, Union of India, ab. 65 mi. W of Calcutta. The chief crops are rice, maize, wheat, and barley. Capital, Midnapore; area, ab. 5,274 sq. mi.; pop. 3,359,022 (1951).

Midnapore. [Also, Midnapur.] Capital of the district of Midnapore, West Bengal, Union of India, situated on the Kasai River ab. 70 mi. W of Calcutta: cotton mills and light industry; trading center. 43,171 (1941).

Midnight Judges. In U.S. history, a derisive term applied by the Jeffersonian Republicans to the appointments to judicial posts made (1801) by President John Adams shortly before he left office. In the succeeding administration under Jefferson, most of these appointments were legislated out of existence by the Judiciary Act of 1801, but the controversy over the administration's refusal to deliver the commission of a justice of the peace named by Adams culminated in the noted Supreme Court case of Marbury v. Madison (1803).

Midrash (mid'rash). Name for the old rabbinical commentaries on Biblical books, which grew out of the popular discourses and lectures delivered during the services in the synagogue. Among the older Midrashim are Mechilta on a part of Exodus, Siphra on Leviticus, and Siphre on Numbers and Deuteronomy, all of which belong to the period of the Mishnah. The most popular of the Midrashim was that of Rabbah or Rabboth (magnum) on the Pentateuch and the so-called "Five Rolls," i.e., the books of Canticles, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, and Esther, which was composed between the 6th and 12th centuries. Midrash is of two types: Haggadah (homilies) and Halakah (discussions of the law).

Midsomer Norton (mid'sum"ẽr nôr'tọn). See under Norton Radstock.

Midsummer Day. [Also, Saint John's Day.] Formerly an English holiday (June 24), commemorating the birth of Saint John the Baptist.

Midsummer Night's Dream, A. Comedy by Shakespeare, written c1594. It is mentioned by Francis Meres in his Palladis Tamia, which was issued in 1598, and was entered on the Stationers' Register Oct. 8, 1600.

Midsummer Night's Dream Music. Overture and incidental music by Felix Mendelssohn, composed as a setting for Shakespeare's comedy. The overture (1826) was first performed at Stettin in 1827; the additional numbers (1843) were written at the request of Frederick William IV of Prussia and first given in the same year at Potsdam.

Midvale (mid'vāl). City in N Utah, in Salt Lake County, on the Jordan River: lead, zinc, and iron smelters. It was settled in 1852. Pop. 3,993 (1950).

Midway (mid'wā). Coral atoll NW of the Hawaiian Islands, 1,200 mi. from Honolulu. It was discovered and claimed for the U.S. in 1859. The island is a major air and naval base for the American armed forces. Area, 2 sq. mi.; pop. 437 (1940).

Midway, Battle of. Japanese-U.S. naval-air engagement (June 3–6, 1942) in the Pacific Ocean, in World War II. The battle, which was fought a few hundred miles west of Midway Island (and some 1,500 mi. W of the Hawaiian Islands), ended a Japanese attempt to take Midway, which the Japanese strategists had planned to use as a base for an assault on Hawaii. The Japanese losses (four carriers, a heavy cruiser, and three destroyers) were decisive in eventually restoring naval superiority in the Pacific to the U.S., although this fact did not clearly emerge for some time. From Midway on, however, the outcome of the naval war in the Pacific rested primarily on the shipbuilding capacities of the two powers chiefly involved, and in this contest the Japanese resources were hopelessly inferior to those of the U.S. The battle involved a U.S. carrier force (including the Hornet, Enterprise, and Yorktown) under Rear Admiral Frank J. Fletcher and Rear Admirals Marc Mitscher and Raymond A. Spruance. The battle was joined when heavy U.S. air force bombers and navy Catalinas attacked a cruiser- and destroyer-escorted Japanese fleet of transports some 700 mi. W of Midway on June 3, 1942. Two additional Japanese forces (including four carriers, as well as battleships, heavy cruisers, and various lighter vessels) were reported the next day a few hundred miles north of Midway, and for the next three days a practically continuous air battle took place between the various forces (in addition to carrier-based planes, the U.S. commanders were able to draw upon planes from the U.S. marine corps base on Midway). Air torpedoes were particularly decisive in this battle. The Japanese lost, in addition to the vessels mentioned above, some 275 aircraft and 4,800 men. The U.S. forces lost the Yorktown, a destroyer, and 150 planes.

Midway Park. Unincorporated community in SE North Carolina, in Onslow County. 3,703 (1950).

Midwest City. City in C Oklahoma, in Oklahoma County, near Oklahoma City. 10,166 (1950).

Midwout (mid'wout). Original Dutch name of Flatbush.

Mie (mē.ā). Ken (prefecture) of S Honshu, Japan, SW of Nagoya, bordering on Ise Bay and on the Pacific. It is largely mountainous, with a narrow coastal lowland. Capital, Tsu; area, ab. 2,225 sq. mi.; pop. 1,461,197 (1950).

Międzyrzecz (myen.dzi'zhech). [German, Meseritz.] Town in NW Poland, in the województwo (province) of Zielona Góra, formerly in Grenzmark Posen-Westpreussen, Germany, on the Obra River ab. 55 mi. W of Poznań: agricultural markets and food-processing industries. The town came under the administration of Poland in 1945. Pop. 12,093 (1939); 4,385 (1946).

Miegel (mē'gel), Agnes. b. at Königsberg, in East Prussia, March 9, 1879—. German poet, famous for her ballads. Her books of verse (Gedichte, 1901; Balladen und Lieder, 1907; Gesammelte Gedichte, 1927; Herbstgesang, 1932) have been interspersed with some stories about her homeland (Geschichten aus Altpreussen, 1926; Gang in die Dämmerung, 1934) and the autobiographical Kinderland (1930).

Miel (mēl) or Meel (māl), Jan. [Called Giovanni della Vite.] b. near Antwerp, Belgium, 1599; d. 1664. Flemish painter.

Mielatz (mē'läts), Charles Frederick William. b. at Bredlin, Germany, May 24, 1864; d. at New York, June 2, 1919. American etcher and painter, noted mostly for his etchings of views of New York. He taught at the National Academy of Design, and was made an associate there in 1906.

Mieres (myā'rās). Town and commune in NW Spain, in the province of Oviedo, ab. 9 mi. S of Oviedo. Center of the Asturian iron, coal, sulfur, copper, and tin mining district, it has large iron foundries and chemical works, and timber, cider, and livestock markets. Pop. of commune, 58,310 (1950).

Mierevelt (mē'rę.velt), Janszen van. b. at Delft, Netherlands, May 1, 1567; d. there, July 27, 1651. Dutch portrait painter.

Mierevelt, Pieter van. b. 1596; d. 1632. Dutch portrait painter; son of Janszen van Mierevelt.

Mieris (mē'ris), Frans van. [Called Mieris the Elder.] b. at Delft, Netherlands, April 16, 1635; d. at Leiden, Netherlands, March 12, 1681. Dutch genre painter.

Mieris, Frans van. [Called Mieris the Younger.] b. 1689; d. 1763. Dutch painter and historian; grandson of Frans van Mieris (1635–81).

Mieris, Willem van. b. at Leiden, Netherlands, 1662; d. there, Jan. 24, 1747. Dutch painter; son of Frans van Mieris (1635–81).

Mierisch (mē'rish). German name of the Mureș.

Mierosławski (mye.rô.släf'skē), Ludwik. b. at Nemours, France, 1814; d. at Paris, Nov. 23, 1878. Polish revolutionist and military writer. He was the leader in the attempted rising of the Poles in 1846, and in the insurrections at Poznań (Posen) in 1848, in Sicily and Baden in 1849, and in Poland in 1863.

Miers (mirz), John. b. at London, Aug. 25, 1789; d. at Kensington, London, Oct. 17, 1879. English engineer and botanist.

Mies (mēs) or Mies-Kladrau (mēs'klä'drou). German name of Stříbro-Kladruby.

Miessner (mēs'nėr), William Otto. b. at Huntingburg, Ind., May 26, 1880—. American composer and music teacher. Author of The Motif-Method of Music-Reading and The Place of Music in Education. His compositions include cantatas and overtures as well as many pieces for voice or piano.

Miës van der Rohe (mē'ęs vän dėr rō'ę), Ludwig. b. at Aachen, Germany, March 27, 1886—. American architect and industrial designer. Though without any formal architectural training, he became one of the leaders of modern European architecture, and was later an influence in U.S. design. His functionalist approach and predominant interest in spatial arrangement is best evidenced in his Tugendhat House (1930) at Brno, Czechoslovakia. He began as a furniture designer (1905–07) in Bruno Paul's studio at Berlin, was assistant (1908–11) to Peter Behrens, became (1927) director of the Werkbund Exhibit and Weissenhof Siedlung at Stuttgart, served (1930–32) as head of the Bauhaus at Dessau, designed the German Pavilion for the Barcelona World Exhibit (1930), participated in the Berlin Reichsbank competition (1933), in which his was the only modern design among the six prize-winning ones, came (1937) to the U.S., and became (1944) a U.S. citizen. After serving as director of design at the Armour Institute, Chicago, he became (1940) a teacher at the Illinois Institute of Technology.

Mifflin (mif'lin), Fort. Fort on the Delaware River near the mouth of the Schuylkill; one of the defenses of Philadelphia.

Mifflin, George Harrison. b. at Boston, May 1, 1845; d. April 5, 1921. American publisher. He entered (1867) the publishing house of Hurd and Houghton and was admitted (1872) to the firm. He became a partner (1878–80) in the firm of Houghton Osgood and Company, and was a partner (1880–1908) and president (1908 et seq.) of Houghton, Mifflin Company, publishers, and its affiliate, the Riverside Press at Cambridge, Mass.

Mifflin, Lloyd. b. at Columbia, Pa., Sept. 15, 1846; d. there, July 16, 1921. American poet. He studied (1869–72) painting in Europe, and then turned to poetry and published At The Gates of Song (1897), The Slopes of Helicon, and Other Poems (1898), Echoes of Greek Idyls (1899), The Fields of Dawn and Later Sonnets (1900), Castalian Days (1903), The Fleeing Nymph, and Other Verse (1905), My Lady of Dream (1906), Toward the Uplands (1908), Flower and Thorn (1909), and As Twilight Falls (1916).

Mifflin, Thomas. b. at Philadelphia, Jan. 10, 1744; d. at Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 20, 1800. American Revolutionary general and politician. He graduated from the College of Philadelphia (now the University of Pennsylvania) in 1760. He married (1767) a cousin, Sarah Morris, and became a merchant at Philadelphia. An ardent patriot and radical politician, he was elected to the provincial assembly four successive years (1772–76), and to the First and Second Continental Congresses. He engaged in military activity immediately upon the outbreak of war, thereby severing his connection with the Society of Friends. He was appointed a major in the Continental Army (May, 1775) and made Washington's aide-de-camp. He served as quartermaster general of the army (August, 1775), with the rank of colonel (December, 1775), becoming a brigadier general (May, 1776) and a major general (February, 1777). Seeking combat duty, he resigned as quartermaster general (June, 1776), but returned reluctantly to that position (October, 1776) at the urgent request of Washington and Congress. An eloquent speaker, he performed great service in recruiting troops and holding men in the army beyond the expiration of their terms (1776–77). Pleading ill health, he resigned again as quartermaster general (October, 1777), but had to continue his duties until his successor was appointed (March, 1778). Accused of peculation by his enemies, he sought investigation of his administration, but no inquiry was made; he insisted that Congress accept his resignation from the army (August, 1778). The charge of peculation was never sustained. Although in the circle of those implicated in the so-called Conway Cabal because he was appointed to board of war (November, 1777) and was instrumental in securing General Horatio Gates as its president, and though a known critic of Washington, he was vehement in his denials of complicity in any conspiracy or of disloyalty to Washington, and the charge of conspiracy remains unsupported. He entered the Pennsylvania state assembly (1778–79), and was reëlected (1780–81). He returned to Congress (1782–84), and was elected its president (1783). He reëntered the state assembly (1785) and was elected its speaker, served as a member of the Federal Constitutional Convention (1787), and was elected to the supreme executive council of Pennsylvania (1788) and served as its president (1788–90). He was chairman of the state constitutional convention (1789–90). He served three terms as the first governor of Pennsylvania (1790–99), and did much to develop the state. He led a valiant though vain fight against severe epidemics of yellow fever which ravaged Philadelphia (especially in 1793 and 1798). Despite his Jeffersonian and pro-French sympathies, he zealously coöperated in the suppression of the Whiskey Insurrection (1794), and vigorously prepared for the anticipated war with France (1798). Elected to the Pennsylvania house of representatives (1799), he died during the legislative session.

Migdal (mig.däl'). Hebrew name of Magdala.

Migdol (mig'dol). In Biblical geography: 1. A station on the route of the Israelites from Egypt to the Red Sea (Ex. xiv. 2), situated ab. 12 mi. NW of the head of the Red Sea. 2. The Migdol of Ezekiel was in the neighborhood of Pelusium (probably ab. 10 mi. E of the present Suez Canal).

Mighty Dollar, The. Play by Benjamin Edward Woolf, produced in 1875. Among its characters is the Hon. Bardwell Slote, a caricature of the American politician.

Migliorati (mē.lyō.rä'tē), Cosimo de'. Original name of Pope Innocent VII.

Mignard (mē.nyär), Pierre. b. at Troyes, France, in November, 1610; d. at Paris, May 13, 1695. French painter of portraits and historical pieces.

Migne (mēny'), Jacques Paul. b. at St.-Flour, Cantal, France, 1800; d. at Paris, Oct. 25, 1875. French priest, noted as an editor and publisher of religious works. He served for a time as curate at Puiseaux in the diocese of Orléans. In 1833 a quarrel with his bishop drove him to Paris, where he founded L'Univers Religieux, and, having soon sold this paper, established a large publishing house. The works issued by him include Scripturae sacrae cursus completus (28 vols., 1840–45), Theologiae cursus (28 vols., 1840–45), Patrologiae cursus completus (383 vols., 1844–66), Encyclopédie théologique (171 vols., 1844–66), and Collection des orateurs sacrés (100 vols., 1846–48).

Mignet (mē.nye), François Auguste Marie. b. at Aix, France, May 8, 1796; d. at Paris, March 24, 1884. French historian. In 1815 he studied law in his native town, and enjoyed there the companionship of a young fellow student, Louis Adolphe Thiers, with whom he kept up a lifelong friendship. In 1830 Mignet and Thiers founded a newspaper, Le National. Mignet was a liberal and, though an opponent of Charles X, a constitutional monarchist, and was always ready to take up his pen in defense of his ideas. He appeared for the first time before the public, in successful competition for a prize offered by the Académie des Inscriptions, with an essay entitled De la féodalité des institutions de Saint-Louis, et de la législation de ce prince (1821). Thereupon he came to Paris, where he published his Histoire de la révolution française de 1789 à 1814 (1824), Négociations relatives à la succession d'Espagne sous Louis XIV (1836–42), Notices et mémoires historiques (1843, and again 1858 and 1854), Vie de Franklin (1848), Histoire de Marie Stuart (1851), Charles-Quint (1854), Éloges historiques (1863, 1877), various Notices historiques (1872–75), and Rivalité de François I et de Charles-Quint (1875). As a dramatist Mignet wrote Antonio Perez et Philippe II (1845, 1846).

Mignon (min'yŏn). Unincorporated community in E central Alabama, in Talladega County. 3,053 (1950).

Mignon (mē.nyôn'). In Goethe's Wilhelm Meister's Lehrjahre, a mysterious Italian girl, the daughter of an old harper. She loves Wilhelm, and dies in despair when she finds that her love is not returned.

Mignon. Opera in three acts by Ambroise Thomas, first produced at Paris in 1866. The libretto, based on Goethe's Wilhelm Meister's Lehrjahre, is by Carré and Barbier.

Mignon, Abraham. b. at Frankfort on the Main, Germany, c1640; d. at Wetzlar, Germany, 1679. German painter of flowers, fruit, and still life.

Miguel (mē.gel'). [Called Dom Miguel; full name, Miguel Maria Evaristo de Braganza.] b. at Lisbon, Portugal, Oct. 26, 1802; d. at Bronnbach, near Wertheim, Baden, Germany, Nov. 14, 1866. Portuguese pretender; third son of John VI of Portugal. He was the head of the absolutist party, was expelled from the kingdom in 1824, became regent in 1828, usurped the kingdom (1828–34), and was deposed and capitulated at Évora, May 26, 1834.

Mihai (mē.hī'). Rumanian form of Michael.

Mihailović (mē.hī'lô.vich), Draža. See Mikhailovich, Draja.

Mihalache (mē.hä.lä'kä), Ion. b. in Rumania, 1882—. Rumanian political leader, vice-president of the National Peasant Party. He occupied (1928–33) numerous cabinet posts. He was sentenced (1947) to life imprisonment by the Communist regime.

Mihrgan (mēr.gän'). Among the Persians, the festival of the autumnal equinox, beginning on the 16th day of the month Mihr (September), and lasting six days. Firdausi ascribes its institution to Faridun.

Mikado (mi.kä'dō), The. Comic opera in two acts by Arthur Sullivan, with a libretto by W. S. Gilbert, produced at London on March 14, 1885.

Mikhailov (mē.hī'lǫf), Nikolai Aleksandrovich. b. 1906—. Russian politician. He was a steelworker in Moscow, joined the Young Communists' League, and edited several factory newspapers before becoming editor of the Komsomolskaya Pravda, official organ of the Young Communists. He became secretary of the Young Communists' League in 1938, a member of the Orgburo (the organizational department of the Communist Party) in 1939, and a member of the presidium and secretariat of the party in 1952.

Mikhailovich (mē.hī'lô.vich), Draja. [Also, Draža Mihailović.] b. in Serbia, 1893; executed at Belgrade, Yugoslavia, July 17, 1946. Yugoslav military leader, head of nationalist guerrilla (Chetnik) forces in Yugoslavia during World War II. A member of the Yugoslav officer corps, he organized (1941) the first Yugoslav guerrilla forces after the German conquest of the country, and served as war minister in absentia in the government-in-exile. He became involved in a controversy with the partisans under Tito regarding control of the guerrilla movement, and the Chetniks soon were at open warfare with Tito's followers and probably were collaborating with the occupation forces in attempting to crush them. Mikhailovich's forces shrank; Tito's grew; and eventually Tito was recognized as the leader of Yugoslav resistance. Almost a year after the end of World War II, Mikhailovich was captured and executed for treason by the Tito regime, despite many protests from the outside world.

Mikhalkov (mē.häl'kǫf), Sergey Vladimirovich. b. 1913—. Russian playwright and writer of verse. With El Registan (pseudonym of Gabriel Arkadievich Ureklian, 1898–1945) he composed the national anthem of the U.S.S.R.

Mikindani (mē.kin.dä'nē). [Sometimes called "Port Peanut."] Town in E Africa, the southernmost seaport in Tanganyika territory, situated on the Indian Ocean a few miles N of the Mozambique border, ab. 43 mi. S of Lindi, another port in the territory. Mikindani has assumed greater importance with the construction of a railway from the port inland for 120 mi. to the site of the large peanut-growing area developed in the late 1940's by the British government. Improvement of the port has also been undertaken. There are few Europeans in the area. The port has been nicknamed "Port Peanut" because of the nut-growing project.

Mikkeli (mik'ke.li). [Swedish, St. Michel.] Lääni (department) in S Finland, bounded by Häme, Uusimaa, Kymi, and Kuopio. Capital, Mikkeli; land area, ab. 6,750 sq. mi.; pop. 243,814 (1951).

Mikkeli. [Swedish, St. Michel.] Town in S Finland, the capital of the lääni (department) of Mikkeli, situated on an arm of Lake Saimaa NE of Helsinki. It is a commercial center. 15,955 (1951).

Mikkelsen (mik'ęl.sęn), Ejnar. b. at Copenhagen, Dec. 23, 1880—. Danish explorer. He accompanied the Amdrup expedition (1900) to Christian XI Land in E Greenland, was a member of the Baldwin-Ziegler expedition (1901–02) to Franz Josef Land, and with Leffingwell led the Anglo-American expedition (1906–08) N of Alaska, fixing the position of the continental shelf of the Arctic Ocean. He explored (1909–10) the N coast of Greenland, and was on expeditions to Scoresby Sound (1924), W Greenland (1925), and SE Greenland (1932). Author of Conquering the Arctic Ice (1909), Lost in the Arctic (1913), Mylius-Erichsen's Report on the Non-Existence of Peary's Channel (1913), and Frozen Justice (1920).

Miklas (mēk'läs), Wilhelm. b. at Krems, Austria, Oct. 15, 1872—. Austrian statesman and teacher. He became (1907) a member of parliament, of which he was later president (1923–28). He was elected (1928) president of the Austrian republic, and reëlected in 1931. He retired (March, 1938) when the Nazis occupied Austria.

Miklosich (mē'klô.shich), Franz von. [Also, Miklošić.] b. near Luttenberg, Styria, Austria, Nov. 20, 1813; d. at Vienna, March 7, 1891. Austrian Slavic scholar, professor of Slavic philology (1849–86) at the University of Vienna. He published Vergleichende Grammatik der slawischen Sprachen (Comparative Grammar of the Slavic Languages, 1852–74), Etymologisches Wörterbuch der slawischen Sprachen (Etymological Dictionary of the Slavic Languages, 1886), and other works.

Mikołajczyk (mē.kô.lī'chik), Stanisław. b. 1901—. Polish politician. A member of the Polish parliament (1930–35), he served in the Polish army when World War II broke out, arrived in France after Poland was occupied by Germany and Russia, and became a member of the Polish National Council in exile at London, later becoming its acting chairman as representative of the Peasant Party (1943–45). He was vice-premier and minister of home affairs in the government at London. After Sikorski's death he was premier (1943–44) of the government in exile. He resigned when the Polish government in exile refused to accept the Yalta treaty, and went to Moscow, where he made known his acceptance of the Russian-sponsored regime in Poland, and became its vice-premier. The Communists, however, after making use of his influence over the Polish peasants, made it clear that his services were no longer needed, and he fled (1947) to the U.S. He wrote The Rape of Poland (1948).

Mikołów (mē.kô'lŏf). [German, Nikolai.] Town in SW Poland, in the województwo (province) of Katowice, formerly in Silesia, Prussia, ab. 7 mi. SW of Katowice: metal, paper and lumber industries. It belonged to Prussia from 1742 to 1919, and was incorporated into Poland after the Upper Silesian plebiscite in 1920. Pop. 12,824 (1946).

Mikonos (mik'ō.nos, mī'kō.nos; Greek, mē'kô.nôs). See Mykonos.

Mikoyan (mē.ko.yän'), Anastas Ivanovich. b. at Sanain, Tiflis, Armenia, Nov. 25, 1895—. Russian administrator. He graduated (1915) from the Nestorian seminary at Tiflis, but that same year, despite his religious training, joined the Bolsheviks. He organized the party in the Baku area, was wounded in the fighting during the civil war, and edited the Social Democrat, the local Communist newspaper. When Baku was taken by the counterrevolutionaries, Mikoyan somehow escaped with his life, but was sent to Siberia. He escaped and returned to the Caucasus region, where he again became an organizer for the Communist Party. By 1922 he was a member of the central committee of the party and in 1926 became minister of trade. From 1930 to 1938 he was in charge of supplies. A member of the Politburo (1935 et seq., after serving as an alternate from 1922), he was a member of the defense committee for the U.S.S.R. during World War II and served as people's commissar for foreign trade (1938–46) and minister of foreign trade (1946 et seq.). He became a member of the presidium of the Communist Party in 1952. Mikoyan, generally considered one of the most efficient members of the Russian government, negotiated during World War II for supplies from Russia's allies and secured the necessary materials on excellent terms for Russia; his later work entailed the arrangement of trade with the countries within the Russian sphere so as to make those countries dependent on Russia. His success in these undertakings has been held up as an indication of his astuteness.

Mikoyan, Artem J. b. 1905—. Russian aviation engineer. In 1939, after being appointed chief designer at a Russian airplane factory, he built his first plane, the MIK-I fighter of World War II. With Anatoly Gorevich, he designed (1947 et seq.) a number of jet planes which, from the initials of their creators, became known as the MIG's or MiG's; the MIG-15 became famous for its fighting ability.

Mikra Dilos (mē.krä' ᵺē'lôs). A modern Greek name of Delos.

Mikszáth (mēk'sät), Kálmán. b. at Szklabonya, Hungary, 1847; d. at Budapest, 1910. Hungarian novelist, who described humorously the decline of the Hungarian gentry. More a social critic than a social reformer, he was one of the most popular novelists in Hungary. Author of Beszterce ostroma (The Siege of Besztercze, 1895), A Noszty fiú esete Tóth Marival (The Case of the Noszty Boy with Mary Toth, 1908), A Fekete város (The Black City, 1911), and Két koldusdiák (The Two Beggar-Students, 1886).

Mikulicz-Radecki (mē.kō'lēch.rä.dets'kē), Johann von. b. at Czernowitz (now Chernovtsy), in Bukovina, Austria, May 16, 1850; d. at Breslau, June 14, 1905. German surgeon. He made brilliant contributions to the surgery of cancer of the colon (1903), was the first to treat cancer of the esophagus by resection and plastic reconstruction (1886), introduced lateral pharyngotomy in excising malignant tumors of the tonsillar region (1886), and described (1892) a symmetrical disease of the lachrymal and salivary glands, known as Mikulicz's disease. He advocated the use of cotton gloves in surgical operations, approached the antrum from the nose (1877), described the two-stage resection of tumors of the intestines, and collaborated in an atlas (1892) and a treatise (1898) on diseases of the mouth. Called after him are many methods of operation on carcinoma of the esophagus, stricture of the esophagus, gastroenterostomy, reduction of hip dislocation, intestine resection, nasal lobule, nasal sinuses, pharyngotomy, pyloroplasty, rectal prolapse, an angle of declination of the femur, the foam cells, and a dictum on the danger of general anesthesia in certain cases.

Mikulov (mē'kō.lôf). [German, Nikolsburg.] Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Brno, in S Moravia, situated near the Austrian border, ab. 44 mi. N of Vienna. On July 26, 1866, a preliminary agreement was reached here, preceding the final peace treaty between Austria and Prussia which terminated the Seven Weeks' War and gave Prussia a free hand in Germany. 5,220 (1947).

Milagro (mē.lä'grō). Lowland city in W Ecuador, in Guayas province. 16,389 (est. 1944).

Milan (mi.lan', mil'ən). [Also, the Milanese (mil.ən.ēs', -ēz').] Former duchy in Lombardy, N Italy. Gian Galeazzo Visconti was the first duke (1395), and the end of the Visconti line came in 1447. The duchy was ruled by the Sforza family (1450–1535), possession being disputed with France (1499–1526), passed to Spain in 1535, and to Austria in 1713–14. It was conquered by France in 1796, and formed part of the Cisalpine Republic from 1797, of the Italian Republic from 1802, and of the kingdom of Italy from 1805. Milan was ceded to Austria in 1814, and was annexed to Sardinia in 1859.

Milan. [Italian, Milano (mē.lä'nō); German, Mailand; Latin, Mediolanum.] City and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Lombardy, the capital of the province of Milano, situated in the Lombardy plain. It is the second largest city in Italy and the chief financial, commercial, and industrial center of the country. The great banking and insurance companies of Italy have their headquarters here. There are numerous industries, among which the machinery, metalworking, textile, and printing and publishing industries rank first; there are also chemical, pharmaceutical, food and beverage, leather (gloves), ceramic, and furniture industries. Among the metal products are locomotives, automobiles, aircraft, and electrical appliances. Milan is also the center of the Italian trade-union movement. It is the seat of an archbishopric, a university, a technological institute, a veterinary institute, and scientific, literary, and art academies. In the Castello Sforzesco is a collection of archaeological and historical materials, paintings, and sculpture; the famous Brera collection contains a library, numismatic collections, and an art gallery (Titian, Mantegna, and others); the Ambrosiana is one of the most valuable libraries of Europe. La Scala, erected by Piermarini in 1770–78, and containing 3,600 seats, is one of the leading opera houses in the world. Architecturally Milan is a modern city; the core of the old town is surrounded by fast-growing modern suburbs. The medieval castle of the Sforza family (begun 1386, reconstructed 1893–1911) is in the center. The most famous building of Milan is the Duomo (cathedral), started in its present form in 1387, in rich Gothic style with a profusion of sculptured decoration and pinnacles; it was not finished until 1813. The oldest church is the venerable Sant' Ambrogio (4th century), which was badly damaged during World War II; San Satino is a Renaissance church; Leonardo da Vinci's famous Last Supper is in the Church of Santa Maria delle Grazie. There are a number of historical palaces, among them the former royal palace and the archepiscopal palace. Milan is an ancient Celtic city, captured by the Romans under Scipio in 222 B.C. It was made an imperial residence by Diocletian. The edict of Milan was issued here by Emperor Constantine I in 313 A.D. Its commanding position in church history stems from Bishop Ambrosius (374–397 A.D.). The town was overrun by Huns in 452, by Ostrogoths in 490, conquered by Lombards in 569, and by Charlemagne in 774. Incorporated into the German Empire by Otto I (962), the city soon asserted its independence and led in defying Emperor Frederick I in his struggle with the Lombard League; it was taken by the emperor in 1158 and 1162 and almost entirely destroyed. Rebuilt in 1167, Milan resumed its role as one of the foremost Guelph cities of Italy; ruled by the Visconti family as dukes of Milan (1311–1447), and by the Sforza family (1447–1535), it shared actual power in north Italy with Venice and Genoa. Much contested in the Hapsburg-

French wars in Italy in the 16th century, it passed to Spain in 1535, and to Austria in 1713. It was the capital of Napoleon's Cisalpine Republic and of the kingdom of Italy (1797–1815); from 1815 to 1859 it was again under Austrian rule. Milan and its patriots led in the national liberation movement of the Risorgimento. The Austrians ceded Milan to Piedmont in 1859, from which year dates its rapid modern development as the chief industrial and cultural center of a united Italy. Some damage was done through air raids in World War II to buildings of tourist interest, but repairs have been completed or are being carried out. Allied troops entered the city on April 29, 1945, after partisan forces had liberated it in an uprising four days earlier. Pop. of commune, 1,115,848 (1936), 1,292,934 (1951); of city, 916,991 (1936).

Milan (mī'lạn). Village in SE Michigan, in Monroe and Washtenaw counties, ab. 40 mi. SW of downtown Detroit: 2,768 (1950).

Milan. Town in NW Tennessee, in Gibson County: shipping center for strawberries and vegetables; manufactures of clothing and cigars. 4,938 (1950).

Milan. A former name of Syracuse, N.Y.

Milan I (of Serbia) (mē'län). [Also, Milan Obrenovich.] b. Aug. 22, 1854; d. Feb. 11, 1901. King of Serbia (1882–89). He became (1868) prince of Serbia on the assassination of his cousin Michael Obrenovich, the government being conducted by a regency until he became (1872) of age. He married (1875) Natalie, Princess of Sturdza. He allied himself with Russia in the Russo-Turkish War (1877–78) with the result that Serbia was made (1878) independent of Turkey. He was proclaimed king in 1882 (Serbia having been made a kingdom), and abdicated (1889) in favor of his son Alexander.

Milan (mi.lan', mil'ạn), Edict of. Edict proclaiming toleration of the Christians, promulgated by the emperors Constantine and Licinius in 313 A.D.

Milan Decree. Decree issued by Napoleon at Milan, Italy, Dec. 17, 1807, a part of the plan known as the Continental System. It declared the forfeiture of all vessels bound to or from British ports, and of all which paid licenses or duties to Great Britain or had submitted to search by British cruisers.

Milanesi (mē.lä.nā'zē), Gaetano. b. at Siena, Italy, Sept. 9, 1813; d. at Florence, March 12, 1895. Italian critic and historian of art. In 1856 he was made resident academician of the Academia della Crusca at Florence, and in 1858 second director of the Tuscan Archives, becoming superintendent in 1889. He devoted himself chiefly to the study of the art history of Italy, and published frequently in the Archivio Storico Italiano, Archivio dell' Arte, and other periodicals. Among his works are Documenti per la storia dell' arte senese (1854–56), Lettere di Michelangelo Buonarroti (1875), and the standard edition of Vasari's Lives.

Milanés y Fuentes (mē.län.ās' ē fwen'tās), José Jacinto. b. at Matanzas, Cuba, Aug. 16, 1814; d. there, Nov. 14, 1863. Cuban poet. He published several plays, the best being El Conde Alarcon, a tragedy (1838). Next to José María de Heredia y Campuzano he was the most popular of the Cuban poets of his time.

Milano (mē.lä'nō). Province in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Lombardy. Capital, Milan; area, 1,066 sq. mi.; pop. 2,175,838 (1936).

Milas (mē.läs'). Modern name of Mylasa.

Milazzo (mē.lät'tsō). [Also: Melazzo; ancient name, Mylae.] Seaport in S Italy, on the N coast of the island of Sicily, in the province of Messina, ab. 18 mi. W of Messina. Near here the Roman fleet under Duilius gained its first naval victory over the Carthaginians in 260 B.C., and Agrippa defeated Sextus Pompeius's fleet in 36 B.C.; and here, on July 20, 1860, Garibaldi defeated the Neapolitans. Considerable damage was suffered during World War II by some buildings of tourist interest, but repairs have been completed or are being carried out, wherever possible. 10,378 (1936).

Milbank (mil'bangk). City in NE South Dakota, county seat of Grant County: granite quarries. 2,982 (1950).

Milburn (mil'bėrn), Devereux. b. 1881; d. at Westbury, Long Island, N.Y., Aug. 15, 1942. American lawyer and sportsman, internationally famous as a polo player. He played (1909–27) with the American international polo team and served (1921–27) as team captain.

Milch (milch), Erhard. b. at Wilhelmshaven, Germany, March 30, 1892—. German air force general. He served in World War I, became (1926) a director of the commercial Lufthansa, was made (1933) state secretary for aeronautics, and became (1935) an air force general. In 1947 the international war crimes tribunal sentenced him to life imprisonment, later (1951) commuted to 15 years in prison.

Mildmay (mīld'mā), Sir Walter. b. c1520; d. at Hackney, London, May 31, 1589. English chancellor of the exchequer (1566 et seq.) under Elizabeth, and founder of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. On the accession of Elizabeth he was made treasurer of her household, and on April 21, 1566, succeeded Sir Richard Lockville as chancellor of the exchequer. In 1586 he was one of the judges of Mary, Queen of Scots, at Fotheringay.

Mildred Rogers (mil'dred roj'ėrz). See Rogers, Mildred.

Milé (mē.lā), Jean François. See Millet, Jean François (1642–79).

Miles (milz). Bacon's servant in Robert Greene's play Friar Bacon and Friar Bungay.

Miles, Nelson Appleton. b. near Westminster, Mass., Aug. 8, 1839; d. at Washington, D.C., May 15, 1925. American general in the Civil War and the Spanish-American War. At the outbreak of the Civil War he raised a company which became a part of the 22nd Massachusetts regiment and was commissioned a captain of infantry. During the Peninsular Campaign he was a member of General O. O. Howard's staff and in recognition of his gallantry at the battle of Fair Oaks, at which he was wounded, was promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel. He took command of his regiment during the battle of Antietam and became (Sept. 30, 1862) a colonel. He was also wounded at the battle of Fredericksburg. His performance at Chancellorsville brought him a promotion to the rank of brevet brigadier general and the Congressional Medal of Honor (awarded July 23, 1892). He received the thanks of Congress for his role in the battles of the Wilderness and Spotsylvania, and at Petersburg was wounded a fourth time. At 26 years of age he became (Oct. 21, 1865) a major general of volunteers in command of the 2nd army corps. After the war he acted for a time as the custodian of Jefferson Davis during the latter's imprisonment at Fortress Monroe. He became (July 28, 1866) a colonel in the regular army and for 15 years after joining the 5th infantry in 1869 took part in Indian campaigns west of the Mississippi. He became (Dec. 15, 1880) a brigadier general and was in command of the Department of the Columbia until 1885. In 1886 he led the campaign for the pacification of the Arizona Indians under Geronimo and Naiche. He became (April 5, 1890) a major general and suppressed (1890–91) serious disturbances among the Sioux Indians in the Dakota Territory. He commanded (1894) the troops which put down the disorders during the Pullman strike at Chicago, was commander (1894–95) of the Department of the East, and became (Oct. 2, 1895) commander in chief of the U.S. Army. In the Spanish-American War, he led reinforcements to Cuba, dictated the terms of the Spanish surrender, and led the expedition to Puerto Rico. He became (Feb. 11, 1901) lieutenant general and was retired from active service on Aug. 8, 1903. He wrote Personal Recollections and Observations of General Nelson A. Miles (1896), Military Europe (1898), and Serving the Republic (1911).

Miles City. City in E Montana, county seat of Custer County: livestock-trading center. 9,243 (1950).

Miles Coverdale (kuv'ėr.dāl). See Coverdale, Miles.

Milesians (mī.lē'zhạnz). Inhabitants of Miletus.

Milesians. In Old Irish mythology and legend, the fifth and last invaders of Ireland. They are so named because they came to Ireland with the five sons of Mil Latinized, Milesius), king of Spain. They are regarded as ancestors of the modern Irish. They were at first beaten off by the Tuatha De Danann (the ancient divine race of Ireland), but they finally made a landing and overcame the Tuatha De Danann in two great battles. Three of the five sons of Mil survived: Eremon, who became king of the north of Ireland, Eber, who became king in the south, and Amergin, who was a poet and disclaimed possessions.

Milesian Tales or Fables (mī.lē'zhạn). Short stories of a witty and obscene nature, greatly in vogue among the Greeks and Romans. The name has arisen from a collection of tales by Antonius Diogenes, compiled by Aristides of Miletus; they were translated into Latin by Cornelius Sisenna (119–67 B.C.). These tales are now lost, but the name is still given to stories of a like nature.

Miles Wallingford (mīlz wol'ing.fȯrd). Novel by James Fenimore Cooper, published in 1844.

Miletus (mī.lē'tus). In ancient geography, a city situated in Caria, SW Asia Minor, in what is now SW Turkey, on the coast opposite the mouth of the Maeander River. Founded about the 12th century B.C. by Ionian Greeks, it was one of the leading early Greek cities, a colonizer, and a center of philosophy and literature. It headed the Ionian revolt against Persia in 500 B.C., and was stormed and sacked by the Persians in 494 B.C. It was the birthplace of the philosophers Thales and Anaximander, and of the traveler Hecataeus and the courtesan Aspasia.

Milford (mil'fȯrd). Town in SW Connecticut, in New Haven County, on Long Island Sound: residential community between Bridgeport and New Haven. 26,870 (1950).

Milford. City in S central Delaware, in Kent and Sussex counties, on the Mispillion River: manufactures of dental products, wood veneers, clothing, and boats. 5,179 (1950).

Milford. Town (in Massachusetts the equivalent of township in many other states) and unincorporated village in S Massachusetts, in Worcester County, ab. 28 mi. SW of Boston: manufactures of boots. Pop. of town, 15,442 (1950); of village, 14,396 (1950).

Milford. Town (in New Hampshire the equivalent of township in many other states) and unincorporated village in S New Hampshire, in Hillsborough County: textile manufactures. Pop. of town, 4,159 (1950); of village, 3,269 (1950).

Milford Haven or Milford. Urban district and seaport in SW Wales, in Pembrokeshire, situated on Milford Haven (an inlet of the Atlantic), ab. 260 mi. W of London by rail. The town exports a little coal. 11,717 (1951).

Milford Haven. Inlet of the Atlantic Ocean in SW Wales, in Pembrokeshire. It is one of the best natural harbors in Great Britain. Richard II landed here on his return from Ireland in 1399, just before his final defeat by Henry IV, and Henry VII landed here in 1485 on his campaign to overthrow Richard III. Length, ab. 12 mi.; greatest width, ab. 2 mi.

Milford Haven, Marquis of. See Battenberg, Prince Louis Alexander of.

Milford Haven, 3rd Marquis of. See Mountbatten, David Michael.

Milford Sound. Inlet on the SW coast of the South Island, New Zealand.

Milfort (mil'fȯrt; French, mēl.fôr), Le Clerc. b. near Mézières, France, c1750; d. there, 1817. French adventurer. He was a chief among the Creek Indians, and later became a general under Napoleon.

Milguy (mil.gī'). Local name of Milngavie.

Milhau (mē.yō). See Millau.

Milhaud (mē.yō), Darius. b. at Aix-en-Provence, France, Sept. 4, 1892—. French composer. He studied (1910 et seq.) at the Paris Conservatory, and settled at Paris, joining "The Six," of which Arthur Honegger, Georges Auric, L. E. Durey, François Poulenc, and Germaine Taillefere were also members. He visited (1922) the U.S., appearing as pianist and conductor in the performance of his compositions. Among his works are the operas Les Malheurs d'Orphée (1926), Pauvre Matelot (1926), Maximilien (1930), and Médée (1938); a musical novel (1923) based on Francis Jammes's La Brebis Égarée; music for Paul Claudel's opera Christophe Colomb (1928); the ballets Le Bœuf sur le Toit (1919), based upon Jean Cocteau's farce, La Création du Monde (1923), Salade (1924), Le Train Bleu (1924), and Les Songes (1933); and incidental music to Claudel's translation of the Orestes triology of Aeschylus. He has also composed symphonies for small orchestras, orchestral suites, music for motion pictures, chamber music, piano selections, songs, and vocal works.

Milhaud, Gaston. b. at Nîmes, France, 1858; d. at Paris, 1918. French philosopher and mathematician. Author of Essai sur les conditions et les limites de la certitude logique (1894), Le Rationel (1898), La Pensée scientifique chez les Grecs et les modernes (1906), and Nouvelles études sur l'histoire de la pensée scientifique (1911).

Milholland (mil.hol'ąnd), Inez. See Boissevain, Inez.

Mili Atoll (mē'lē). [Former name, Mulgrave Islands.] Small group of coral atolls in the SE part of the Marshall group, Pacific Ocean.

Milič (mē'lich), Jan. b. at Kroměříž (Kremsier), in Moravia; d. at Avignon, France, June 29, 1374. Bohemian preacher, one of the precursors of the Reformation. He preached not only in Latin, but also in Czech and German, depending on his audience, being one of the first to preach in the common tongue. Imprisoned by the Inquisition, he was freed by Pope Urban V.

Milićević (mē.lē'che.vich), Milan. b. at Ripanj, in Serbia, June 16, 1831; d. at Belgrade, Nov. 17, 1908. Serbian educator and writer. Author of Life of Serbian Peasants (1867), The Kingdom of Serbia (1884), and others.

Militärgrenze (mē.lē.ter'gren''tsę). [Serbo-Croatian, Krajina; English, Military Frontier; Latin, Confinium Militare.] Historical region comprising the territory on the former Austrian-Turkish frontier, as it existed from the 16th to the 19th centuries. The frontier moved S and E from the regions of Carniola (Krain) and Upper Slavonia, where it was established c1535, toward Lower Slavonia, Srem, Bačka, Banat, and Siebenbürgen (the last-named now part of Rumania), as the Austrian armies wrested more and more territories from the retreating Turks. These regions were settled under Imperial grants by peasant soldiers of Serbian, Croatian, Hungarian, and German nationality who were to cultivate the wastelands and to take to arms, if necessary. They were under specially appointed military governors. During the 19th century, the territories of the former Militärgrenze were incorporated into Hungary.

Military Academy, U.S. [Commonly called West Point.] Government training institution for officers in the U.S. Army, founded at West Point, N.Y., by acts of the U.S. Congress (1794 and 1802). It was originally called a "School for Artillerists and Engineers"; its present designation dates from the establishment created by the act of March 16, 1802. The foundations of the modern academy's training methods were laid during the superintendency (1817–33) of Brevet Major Sylvanus Thayer. Candidates for the academy are drawn from every state in the Union. Each member of Congress is apportioned four appointees. Others may be appointed from the territories of Hawaii and Alaska, from the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the Panama Canal Zone, the U.S. at large (by nomination of either the president or vice-president of the U.S., or from among sons of U.S. servicemen who lost their lives in World Wars I and II), and from the ranks of the regular army and the National Guard. Candidates must be U.S. citizens between the ages of 17 and 22. They are admitted as cadets, receive 780 dollars a year (supplemented by varying allowances for daily rations), and undergo a four-year training course leading to the B.S. degree and commissions as second lieutenants in the U.S. Army. Total enrollment is authorized at 2,496. Diplomas and commissions are awarded at West Point during the colorful "June Week" ceremonies.

Military Policy of the United States, The. Military-historical treatise written by Emory Upton (1839–81), U.S. army officer and Civil War general, which was uncompleted at his death and was not published until 1904, when it was brought out under U.S. government imprint at the suggestion of Secretary of War Elihu Root. Its provocative observations on national military policy exerted a profound influence upon professional military men and government officials and led to a number of reforms in the military system. The work is still recognized as a standard authority.

Militello (mē.lē.tel'lō). [Full name, Militello in Val di Catania (ēm väl dē kä.tä'nyä).] Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Catania, SW of Catania. Pop. of commune, 11,314 (1936); of town, 11,138 (1936).

Milk (milk). River formed in Alberta, Canada, by the junction of two forks, which flows SE across N Montana to join the Missouri just below Fort Peck. Length, ab. 625 mi.

Miłkowski (mēl.kôf'skē), Zygmunt. [Pseudonym, Teodor Tomasz Jeż.] b. 1824; d. 1915. Polish revolutionary and novelist. He was educated at the University of Kiev. He took an active part in the revolutionary activities of 1848 on a variety of fronts, especially in Hungary and the Balkans. His novels (Wasyl Holub, The Uskoks, and others) are important not in themselves but as being among the earliest to introduce South Slav and Ukrainian themes into the popular novel in Poland.

Milky Way. [Also, Galaxy.] In astronomy, the luminous band extending around the sky produced by the concentration of telescopic stars. The Sun, which is one of its 30 billion or more member stars, is situated near the central plane of this vast stellar system of about 50,000 light years' radius, but about 30,000 light years from the center. This position of the solar system in a flattened discus-shaped "spiral nebula" causes faint stars to appear in increasing numbers towards the Milky Way, where the density of such stars makes the night sky noticeably brighter than elsewhere. The rifts and comparatively blank areas are caused by intervening dust clouds. In the direction of Saggitarius are the brightest star clouds, beyond which is the obscured central core, also composed of stars. Around this center the Sun and the stars visible to the naked eye revolve in about 200 million years.

Mill (mil), James. b. at Northwater Bridge, Forfarshire, Scotland, April 6, 1773; d. at Kensington, London, June 23, 1836. English utilitarian philosopher. He was the son of a shoemaker. He entered Edinburgh University in 1790, and from 1794 to 1798 studied divinity. He was licensed to preach in 1798. He sought literary employment in London in 1802, and in 1806 began the History of India, which was finished 10 years later. He also formed a close intimacy with Bentham, whose disciple he became, revising his writings and advancing his principles. The History of India appeared in 1817, and became a standard work immediately. In 1819 he entered the India House. His intimacy with Ricardo began in 1811. Other disciples were George Grote, Henry Bickersteth, and John Black. He assisted in establishing the Westminster Review in 1824. His Analysis of the Human Mind was published in 1829, his Elements of Political Economy in 1821.

Mill, John. b. at Shap, Westmorland, England, c1645; d. June 23, 1707. English Biblical scholar. He published a critical edition of the New Testament (1707), after 30 years of work collecting, collating, and comparing all previous collections of notes, variants, and critical writings.

Mill, John Stuart. b. at London, May 20, 1806; d. at Avignon, France, May 8, 1873. English philosophical writer, logician, and economist; eldest son of James Mill. He was a precocious child and was put through an extraordinary system of forcing by his father, who took entire charge of his education. He was brought up an agnostic from his infancy and never acquired any religious beliefs. In 1820 he visited France and in 1823 entered the India House as his father's assistant. He became chief examiner in 1856. His first important literary work was the editing of Buchanan's Treatise upon Evidence (1825). His Essays on Unsettled Questions of Political Economy were written c1830 (published 1844). In 1836 the London Review, established in 1835, was amalgamated with the Westminster Review, and Mill became practically its superintendent; he was its proprietor from 1837 to 1840. In 1836 he passed through a severe mental crisis, probably as a result of his extraordinary training, and was led to modify the strict utilitarianism of his father's school. His intimacy with Mrs. Taylor (whom he married in 1851) began in 1830. Mill's Logic, his first successful work, was published in 1843. His Political Economy was published in 1848. His most carefully written work, the Essay on Liberty, was published in 1859. He was elected member of Parliament for Westminster in 1865. His book On the Subjection of Women was published in 1869; his Autobiography appeared in 1873. Among his other publications are Thoughts on Parliamentary Reform (1859), Dissertations and Discussions (1859–67), Considerations on Representative Government (1861), Utilitarianism (1863), Examination of Sir William Hamilton's Philosophy (1865), Auguste Comte and Positivism (1865), England and Ireland (1868), On the Irish Land Question (1870), and Nature, the Utility of Religion, and Theism (1874).

Millais (mi.lā'), Sir John Everett. b. at Southampton, England, June 8, 1829; d. at London, Aug. 13, 1896. English painter. In 1848, with Holman Hunt, D. G. Rossetti, and others, he founded the association which was afterward known as the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood, and began to paint with the precision and attention to detail which characterize that school. He became associate royal academician in 1854, royal academician in 1863, and president of the Royal Academy in 1896. He was created baronet in 1885. In 1883 he was elected to the French Institute. Among his works are Isabella (1849), Christ in the House of his Parents (1850), The Huguenot (1852), Ophelia (1852), The Proscribed Royalist (1853), The Order of Release (1853), Autumn Leaves (1856), Sir Isumbras at the Ford (1857), The Black Brunswicker (1860), Charlie is my Darling (1864), The Minuet (1866), Rosalind and Celia (1868), The Gambler's Wife (1869), The Boyhood of Raleigh (1870), Chill October (1871), The Northwest Passage (1874), Yes or No? (1875), Yeoman of the Guard (1876), Jersey Lily (1878), Bride of Lammermoor (1878), Olivia (1882), Idyl of 1745 (1884), Lady Peggy Primrose (1885), Dew-drenched Furze (1890), Dorothy (1891), and others. He also designed illustrations for a number of books, including Tennyson's poems and some of Trollope's novels.

Millais, John Guille. b. at London, March 24, 1865; d. 1931. English painter and illustrator; fourth son of Sir John Everett Millais. He is known primarily as the editor of his father's letters.

Millamant (mil'ą.mant). Principal female character in William Congreve's comedy The Way of the World. She is an incarnation of elegance, indifference, impertinence, and affectation; and, though a brilliant coquette and fine lady, is not without heart.

Millar (mil'ar), Andrew. b. in Scotland, 1707; d. at Kew Green, London, June 8, 1768. British publisher. He began business in the Strand, London, about 1729, retiring a year before his death, and was noted for his generous terms to authors. He paid Henry Fielding 183 pounds for Joseph Andrews, 700 pounds for Tom Jones, and 1,000 pounds for Amelia. He published James Thomson's Seasons, Samuel Johnson's Dictionary (paying him long before the work was completed), David Hume's History of England, and William Robertson's History of Scotland.

Millau (mē.yō). [Also: Milhau; ancient name, Aemilianum.] Town in S France, in the department of Aveyron, on the Tarn River, ab. 54 mi. NW of Montpellier. It has important manufactures of kid gloves, and other leather industries, and is a center for leather and woolen trade. 17,678 (1946).

Millay (mi.lā'), Edna St. Vincent. b. at Rockland, Me., Feb. 22, 1892; d. near Austerlitz, N.Y., Oct. 19, 1950. American poet; wife (married 1923) of Eugene Jan Boissevain. Author of Renascence and Other Poems (1917), A Few Figs from Thistles (1920), Second April (1921), The Buck in the Snow (1928), Wine from these Grapes (1934), Conversation at Midnight (1937), Huntsman, What Quarry? (1939), Make Bright the Arrows (1940), There Are No Islands, Any More (1940), Collected Sonnets (1941), Collected Lyrics (1943), and other volumes of verse. She was awarded the Pulitzer prize in poetry for The Harp Weaver and Other Poems (1923). Her verse plays include Aria da Capo (1921), The Lamp and the Bell (1921), and Two Slatterns and a King (1921). She published the sonnet sequence Fatal Interview (1931), and wrote the libretto for an opera composed by Deems Taylor, The King's Henchman (produced at Metropolitan Opera House, N.Y., 1927). She was the translator (with George Dillon) of Baudelaire's Les Fleurs du mal.

Millbrae (mil'brā'). City in W California, in San Mateo County, a southern residential suburb of San Francisco; trading center for dairy and nursery products. It was formerly noted as a home of the "bonanza kings" of San Francisco. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population more than tripled. 2,623 (1940), 8,972 (1950).

Millburn (mil'bern). Township in NE New Jersey, in Essex County; suburban residential community. 14,560 (1950).

Millbury (mil'ber'i, -ber.i). Town in S Massachusetts, in Worcester County, just S of Worcester; manufactures of textiles, spindles, and felt. 8,347 (1950).

Mille (mēl), Frans. See Millet, Jean François (1642–79).

Mille, Pierre. b. at Choisy-le-Roi, near Paris, 1864; d. at Paris, Jan. 15, 1941. French journalist and fiction writer, long (1890–1941) on the staff of Le Temps, author of some 30 volumes of long short stories, many in a Kiplingesque manner and set in the French colonies. The best known are Sur la vaste terre (1906; Eng. trans., Barnavaux, 1915), Barnavaux et quelques femmes (1908; Eng. trans., Under the Tricolour, 1915), and Louise et Barnavaux (1912; Eng. trans., 1916). Educated for the law, he turned to journalism in 1890, became an expert on colonial affairs, and was appointed (1912) to the Conseil Superieur des Colonies, a governmental board.

Milledge (mil'ij), John. b. at Savannah, Ga., 1757; d. Feb. 9, 1818. American Revolutionary soldier and politician. He was a member (1792–93, 1795–99, and 1801–02) of Congress, governor of Georgia (1802–06), and U.S. senator (1806–09). He donated the land on which the University of Georgia stands. Milledgeville, capital of the state from 1804 to 1868, was named for him.

Milledgeville (mil'ij.vil). City in C Georgia, capital of Baldwin County, on the Oconee River ab. 85 mi. SE of Atlanta. Named for John Milledge, it was the state capital from 1804 to 1868. 8,835 (1950).

Millen (mil'ən). City in E Georgia, county seat of Jenkins County, ab. 79 mi. NW of Savannah. 3,449 (1950).

Miller (mil'ėr), Alice Duer. b. at New York, July 28, 1874; d. there, Aug. 22, 1942. American author, noted for her narrative poem The White Cliffs (1940), written as a tribute to England during World War II. Her works include The Modern Obstacle (1903), Are Women People? (1915), The Charm School (1919), The Springboard (a play; 1927), Forsaking All Others (1930), Not for Love (1937), and And One Was Beautiful (1937). Several of her novels, such as Gowns by Roberta (1933), were made into motion pictures and plays.

Miller, Arthur. b. at New York, Oct. 17, 1915—. American novelist and playwright. Among his plays are The Man Who Had All the Luck (1944), All My Sons (1947), which won the Drama Critics' Award, Death of a Salesman (1949), which received a Pulitzer prize, and The Crucible (1953). He is the author of a novel, Focus (1945), and Situation Normal (1944), an account of army life.

Miller (mē.yā), Bénigne Emmanuel Clément. b. at Paris, 1812; d. at Nice, France, 1886. French Hellenist, noted as a paleographer.

Miller (mil'ėr), Charles Ransom. b. at Hanover Center, N.H., Jan. 17, 1849; d. July 18, 1922. American journalist and editor. He was assistant telegraph editor (1875–76), head of the weekly edition (1876–79), foreign editor (1879–80), editorial writer (1880 et seq.), and editor in chief (1883–1922) of the New York Times. He purchased (1893) the Times from the Jones heirs, and was vice-president (1896 et seq.) of the Times under Adolph S. Ochs.

Miller, Cincinnatus Hiner (or Heine). See Miller, Joaquin.

Miller, Daisy. See Daisy Miller.

Miller, David Hunter. b. at New York, 1875; d. 1932. American lawyer. An authority on international law, he was legal adviser to the U.S. mission to Paris (1918) headed by Colonel Edward House. He collaborated with Sir Cecil Hurst in preparing the initial draft of the League of Nations covenant. Among his works are Secret Statutes of the United States (1918), International Relations of Labor (1921), The Geneva Protocol (1925), and The Peace Pact of Paris (1928).

Miller, Dayton Clarence. b. at Strongsville, Ohio, March 13, 1866; d. at Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 22, 1941. American physicist and musicologist. He was instructor (1890–93) and professor (1893 et seq.) of physics at the Case School for Applied Science at Cleveland, Ohio. He performed experiments to determine the ether drift, which tended to indicate a modification of the theory of relativity. Author of Laboratory Physics (1903), Sound Waves, Shape and Speed (1937), Sparks, Lightning, Cosmic Rays (1939), and works on music, including Boehm on the Flute and Flute-Playing (1908), The Science of Musical Sounds (1916), and Anecdotal History of Sound (1935). He was said to own the largest collection of flutes in the world.

Miller, Sir Denison. b. near Wollongong, New South Wales, Australia, March 8, 1860; d. at Sydney, Australia, June 6, 1923. Australian banker, founding governor of the Commonwealth Bank of Australia. In 1912 he was appointed governor of the Commonwealth Bank newly established by Andrew Fisher's Labour government, with a capital advance of 10,000 pounds from the government. Miller built the institution soundly out of profits, making immense progress in World War I toward its eventual status as the central bank of the Commonwealth.

Miller, Edward. b. near Dover, Del., May 9, 1760; d. March 17, 1812. American physician, the founder (1797) of the Medical Repository, credited with being the first medical journal in America.

Miller, Ferdinand. b. at Munich, Germany, June 8, 1842; d. 1929. German bronze founder and sculptor. His work in the U.S. includes a figure on the Soldiers' Monument at Charleston, S.C., statues for a fountain at Cincinnati, Ohio, and figures of Humboldt, Columbus, and Shakespeare at St. Louis, Mo.

Miller, Francis Trevelyan. b. at Southington, Conn., Oct. 8, 1877—. American writer and historian. He collaborated with Frederick A. Barber on A Motion Picture History of the World, a collection of scenes from historical films. Author of Portrait Life of Lincoln (1910), World Religions (6 vols., 1927), Life of Thomas A. Edison (1931), and History of World War II (1946).

Miller, George Abram. b. at Lynnville, Pa., July 31, 1863—. American mathematician. Author of Determinants (1892), Historical Introduction to the Mathematical Literature (1916), and other books, and coauthor of Theory and Applications of Groups of Finite Order (1916) and others.

Miller, Harriet Mann. [Pseudonym, Olive Thorne Miller.] b. at Auburn, N.Y., June 25, 1831; d. at Los Angeles, Calif., Dec. 25, 1918. American writer and lecturer. Among her works are Little People of Asia (1882), Bird Ways (1885), Four-handed Folk (1890), Our Home Pets (1894), The First Book of Birds (1899), The Second Book of Birds (1901), With the Birds in Maine (1904), Kristy's Surprise Party (1905), and The Bird our Brother (1908).

Miller, Helen Topping. b. at Fenton, Mich., Dec. 8, 1884—. American writer; niece of John Dewey. Her books include The Flaming Gahagans (1932), Splendor of Eagles (1935), Hunter's Moon (1942), and Trumpet in the City (1948).

Miller, Henry. b. at New York, Dec. 26, 1891—. American author. He attended the College of the City of New York, was employment manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company at New York, and resided (1930–40) in Europe. Author of novels, essays, and travel accounts, including Tropic of Cancer (1934), Aller Retour New York (1935), Black Spring (1936), The Cosmological Eye (1939), Tropic of Capricorn (1939), Hamlet: A Philosophic Correspondence (written with Michael Fraenkel; 2 vols., 1939, 1941), The Colossus of Maroussi (1941), The Wisdom of the Heart (1941), Sunday After the War (1944), The Air-Conditioned Nightmare (1945), and The Smile at the Foot of the Ladder (1948). Miller's techniques place him in the forefront of experimental writers.

Miller, Hugh. b. at Cromarty, Scotland, Oct. 10, 1802; committed suicide near Edinburgh, Dec. 23, 1856. Scottish geologist, editor from 1840 of The Witness, an Edinburgh newspaper devoted to the church controversy in Scotland. In his youth he worked as a stonemason. In 1829 he published Poems, Written in the Leisure Hours of a Journeyman Mason. In 1834 he became an accountant in the Commercial Bank of Cromarty. His Scenes and Legends of the North of Scotland, with a chapter on geology, appeared in 1835. He corresponded with Murchison and Agassiz, and published The Old Red Sandstone (1841), The Footprints of the Creator, or the Asterolepis of Stromness (1847), My Schools and Schoolmasters (1852), and others. The Testimony of the Rocks, explaining the six days of creation as six periods, was published in 1857.

Miller, James. b. at Peterborough, N.H., April 25, 1776; d. at Temple, N.H., July 7, 1851. American general and politician, distinguished at Lundy's Lane in 1814.

Miller, James Russell. b. at Harshaville, Pa., March 20, 1840; d. July 2, 1912. American Presbyterian clergyman. He was superintendent (1887–1912) of the Presbyterian Board of Publication, and founded and edited Forward, a weekly. Author of Week-Day Religion (1880) and the very popular Devotional Hours with the Bible (8 vols., 1909–13).

Miller, Joaquin. [Original name, Cincinnatus Hiner (or Heine) Miller.] b. at Liberty, Ind., March 10, 1839; d. at San Francisco, Feb. 17, 1913. American poet. He went to Oregon in 1852, was afterward a miner in California, studied law, edited the Democratic Register in Eugene, Ore., and was judge (1866–70) of Grant County, Ore. He was led to adopt his pseudonym (by which he is now generally known) from having written in defense of Joaquín Murrieta, a Mexican brigand. He was a journalist at Washington, D.C., and in 1886 returned to California. He was the author of Specimens (1867), Joaquin et al (1869), Pacific Poems (1870), Songs of the Sierras (1871), Songs of the Sun-lands (1873), Life Amongst the Modocs (1873), The Ship in the Desert (1875), Songs of Italy (1878), Shadows of Shasta (1881), The Destruction of Gotham (1886), Songs of the Mexican Seas (1887), The Building of the City Beautiful (1897), and Light (1907). His Complete Poetical Works appeared in 1897. His best-known single poem is probably Columbus.

Miller, Joe. [Actual name, Joseph or Josias Miller.] b. 1684; d. at London, 1738. English actor. The collection of jests known as Joe Miller's Jests appeared originally in 1739 as Joe Miller's Jest Book, or the Wit's Vade Mecum. It was made by John Mottley and received its name unwarrantably from Joseph Miller, who is popularly said never to have made a joke in his life, and could neither read nor write. It has been many times enlarged and reprinted. Any stale jest is now known as a "Joe Miller" from the fact that it is supposed to have emanated at some time from this source.

Miller, Johann Martin. b. at Ulm, Württemberg, Germany, Dec. 3, 1750; d. there, June 21, 1814. German novelist and lyric poet, author of the novel Siegwart (1776), an imitation of Goethe's Leiden des jungen Werthers.

Miller, John Franklin. b. at South Bend, Ind., Nov. 21, 1831; d. at Washington, D.C., March 8, 1886. American lawyer, soldier, and politician. He was president (1869–81) of the Alaska Commercial Company, which established the fur-seal monopoly in the Pribilof Islands. As U.S. senator (1880–86) from California, he advocated (1882) the Exclusion Bill.

Miller, Joseph (or Josias). See Miller, Joe.

Miller, Leonard. Original name of Merrick, Leonard.

Miller, Lewis. b. at Greentown, Ohio, July 24, 1829; d. at New York, Feb. 17, 1899. American inventor and philanthropist, the cofounder (1874) with John H. Vincent of the Chautauqua Institution for educational recreation on Lake Chautauqua, N.Y. A member (1852 et seq.) of the farm equipment firm of Ball, Aultman and Company at Canton, Ohio, he invented the double-jointed cutting bar for mowing machines, and the "low down" binder, and devised a way of binding grain with twine.

Miller, Max. b. near Traverse City, Mich., Feb. 9, 1899—. American journalist and author. His books include I Cover the Waterfront (1932), The Beginning of a Mortal (1933), The Second House from the Corner (1934), The Man on the Barge (1935), Fog and Men on Bering Sea (1936), Mexico Around Me (1937), A Stranger Came to Port (1938), Reno (1941), Land Where Time Stands Still (1943), Daybreak for Our Carrier (1944), The Far Shore (1945), The Lull (1947), and The Town with the Funny Name (1948).

Miller, Merle. b. in Toma County, Iowa, May 17, 1919—. American editor and novelist. He was Washington correspondent (1940 et seq.) for the Philadelphia Record, and during his U.S. army service in World War II was a founder and editor of the armed forces weekly, Yank. He later held editorial posts with Time and Harper's. His novels include Island 49 (1945), That Winter (1948), and The Sure Thing (1949). Author also of The Judges and the Judged (1952).

Miller, Nathan L. b. at Solon, N.Y., Oct. 10, 1868; d. at New York, June 26, 1953. American jurist, governor (1921–22) of New York.

Miller, Oskar von. b. at Munich, May 7, 1855; d. there, April 9, 1934. German electrical engineer. He organized (1881) at Munich the first electrical exposition in Germany and, with Walter Rathenau, was director (1884–90) of the Allgemeine Elektrizitats Gesellschaft (called A. E. G., and meaning General Electric Company) at Berlin. As director of the electrical exhibition (1891) at Frankfort on the Main, he installed and operated apparatus which successfully transmitted high-tension alternating current from Lauffen on the Neckar to Frankfort (about 110 miles). He played an important role in developing water and electrical power in Bavaria.

Miller, Richard E. b. at St. Louis, Mo., March 22, 1875; d. 1943. American painter. He is represented in the Metropolitan Museum (The Chinese Statuette), Art Institute of Chicago (Sunlight), Musée du Luxembourg, Paris (The Old Maidens; Portrait of an Old Woman), and elsewhere, including galleries at Oslo, Antwerp, Venice, and Paris, and by murals in the Missouri State capitol, Jefferson City.

Miller, Samuel Freeman. b. at Richmond, Ky., April 5, 1816; d. at Washington, D.C., Oct. 13, 1890. American jurist. He practiced medicine for a time, but afterward became a lawyer, and in 1850 moved from Kentucky to Keokuk, Iowa. He was appointed associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court by President Lincoln in 1862, and was a member of the electoral commission of 1877 to decide the Hayes-Tilden election dispute.

Miller, Thomas. [Called "the Basketmaker."] b. at Gainsborough, England, 1807; d. at London, Oct. 24, 1874. English poet, novelist, and writer on rural life.

Miller, Warner. b. at Hannibal, N.Y., Aug. 12, 1838; d. at New York, March 21, 1918. American paper manufacturer and politician. He developed new processes for making paper from wood pulp. He served one term (1879–81) as a Republican congressman from New York and one term (1881–87) in the Senate.

Miller, William. b. at Pittsfield, Mass., Feb. 15, 1782; d. in Washington County, N.Y., Dec. 20, 1849. American religious enthusiast, the founder of the Millerites or Adventists. He commenced lecturing on the millennium in 1831.

Miller, William. b. at Wingham, Kent, England, Dec. 2, 1795; d. at Callao, Peru, Oct. 31, 1861. English general in the service of Peru. He fought with the British in the Peninsular War (1811–14), and in the U.S. in 1815. He took service with the patriots at Buenos Aires in 1816, and distinguished himself in the invasion (1817–19) of Chile, and in Peru, where he held independent commands and led the cavalry at Junín (Aug. 6, 1824) and Ayacucho (Dec. 9, 1824). He remained in the service of Peru, became grand marshal under Santa Cruz, and on Santa Cruz's defeat (1839) was banished. He returned and was reinstated in rank in 1859. His Memoirs, published in 1829, give one of the best accounts of the Spanish-American revolutionary period.

Miller, William. b. at Edinburgh, May 28, 1796; d. at Sheffield, England, Jan. 20, 1882. Scottish line-engraver. He was apprenticed in 1811 to William Archibald, engraver, and in 1819 studied with George Cook at London. He returned to Edinburgh, and his first plates were for Williams's Views in Greece (1822). In 1824 he began to engrave after Turner, of whom he was the chief interpreter.

Miller, William. [Called the "Laureate of the Nursery."] b. at Bridgegate, Glasgow, in August, 1810; d. there, Aug. 20, 1872. Scottish woodworker and poet. He contributed poems and songs (1832–53) to Whistle Binkie, but is best known for his nursery lyric "Wee Willie Winkie," which appeared in Scottish Nursery Songs and Other Poems (1863), the only collected edition of his works.

Miller, William Allen. b. at Ipswich, England, Dec. 17, 1817; d. at Liverpool, England, Sept. 30, 1870. English chemist. His first experiments in spectrum analysis were published in a paper before the British Association in 1845, in which diagrams of flame spectra were first shown. In 1862 this was followed by a paper on the Photographic Transparency of Various Bodies, illustrated by photographs of the spectra of 25 metals. With the assistance of William Huggins he began in 1862 experiments on the spectra of the heavenly bodies, procuring the first trustworthy results in solar chemistry. In 1851 he published Report on the Metropolitan Water Supply. He invented a self-registering thermometer for deep-sea soundings.

Miller, William Hallowes. b. at Velindre, near Llandovery, Carmarthenshire, Wales, April 6, 1801; d. March 20, 1880. English mineralogist, remembered for his work in crystallography and for his improvement on the foundation of the science built by William Whewell and F. E. Neumann. He is also known for his reconstruction of standards of length and weight.

Miller, William Henry Harrison. b. at Augusta, N.Y., Sept. 6, 1840; d. at Indianapolis, Ind., May 25, 1917. American lawyer, attorney general of the U.S. (1889–93) under Benjamin Harrison. He did notable work on cases involving the Sherman Antitrust Act, the Interstate Commerce Act, and the constitutionality of the McKinley Tariff.

Miller, Willoughby Dayton. b. near Alexandria, Ohio, Aug. 1, 1853; d. at Newark, Ohio, July 27, 1907. American dentist, practicing at Berlin. His researches into the bacteriologic causes of tooth decay and the etiology of dental erosion were published in Die Mikro-organismen der Mundhöhle (1889), Lehrbuch der Conserviren den Zahnheilkunde (1896), and articles in Dental Cosmos and Independent Practitioner. He also did research in chemistry relating to oral diseases.

Millerand (mēl.räⁿ), Alexandre. b. at Paris, Feb. 10, 1859; d. at Versailles, France, April 6, 1943. French statesman, president (1920–24) of France. In 1885 he was elected to the Chamber of Deputies from the department of the Seine, and before long was a recognized leader and spokesman of the political left wing. Taking a Marxist position, he called for collective ownership of the means of production and distribution, and for the international solidarity of labor. However, when he became the first French socialist to take office in a bourgeois government, as he did by accepting the post of minister of commerce in the cabinet of René Waldeck-Rousseau (a portfolio he held from 1899 to 1902), he made no attempt to promote a socialistic program, contenting himself with measures for the amelioration of the condition of the workers, with the extension of technical education, and with the development of trade. His defection was bitterly criticized in his party, and caused it to lose much of its strength. Out of office but still a member of the Chamber, he worked successfully to extend the right of the workers to organize, and he secured the enactment, in 1905, of an old-age pension law. When Aristide Briand formed a cabinet in 1909, Millerand became minister of public works. In October of the following year, he used strong measures to break a strike of railway workers. When Raymond Poincaré became premier in 1912, Millerand accepted the portfolio of minister of war, and in this position encouraged the development of military aviation. He resigned from the Poincaré cabinet in 1913, but returned to office under René Viviani at the outbreak of World War I in August, 1914, again as minister of war, holding that post until the fall of the Viviani government in October, 1915. At the close of the war Millerand was, in 1919, appointed commissioner general for Alsace and Lorraine, and proved efficient in the task of reintegrating those recovered provinces with France. In the fall of 1919, the Bloc National, a patriotic coalition, swept the elections; Georges Clemenceau became premier, but resigned in January, 1920, and was succeeded by Millerand, who in addition to the premiership took the portfolio of foreign affairs. He directed a temporary French occupation of Frankfort on the Main to compel German compliance with terms of the peace. He recognized the faction of General Wrangel as the government of Russia, but Wrangel was irretrievably defeated soon afterward. He sent General Weygand to head the Polish forces which, under his command, defeated the invading Red Army. Upon the resignation of President Paul Deschanel in 1920, Millerand was elected to that office. Believing that the president should be more than a neutral figurehead, he intervened in both domestic and foreign affairs. A coalition of Socialists and Radical Socialists, led by Édouard Herriot and critical of Millerand, swept the elections of 1924. Herriot, by refusing to form a government while Millerand remained president, forced the latter's resignation. Thereafter he was for some years an influential member of the senate.

Millersburg (mil'ėrz.bėrg). Borough in S central Pennsylvania, in Dauphin County, on the Susquehanna River: manufactures shoes and machine tools; shipping point for agricultural and dairy products. It was settled in 1790. Pop. 2,861 (1950).

Miller's Hollow (mil'ėrz). A former name of Council Bluffs.

Miller's Tale, The. One of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales. Its source is unknown, but the elements of the story were probably in circulation in a number of naughty tales of the time.

Millerstown (mil'ėrz.toun). Former name of Annville.

Millersville (mil'ėrz.vil). Borough in SE Pennsylvania, in Lancaster County, near Lancaster: seat of a state teachers college. 2,551 (1950).

Miller Valley (mil'ėr). Unincorporated community in C Arizona, in Yavapai County. 2,953 (1950).

Milles (mil'ęs), Carl. [Original name, Vilhelm Carl Emil Anderson.] b. at Lagga, near Uppsala, Sweden, June 23, 1875—. Swedish sculptor. He was educated at Stockholm, Paris, Munich, and Rome. Among his best-known works are his architectural sculptures at Rockefeller Center, New York, representing allegorical figures. Though influenced by Rodin, he has an individual style, combining decorative forms with a strong monumental emphasis. Among his many monuments are the Sten Sture monument (1902–25) near Uppsala, the monument to Gustavus Vasa at Uppsala, and fountains at Stockholm and Göteborg. He is presently living and working at the Cranbrook Academy of Art in Michigan, where he has been almost continuously since 1933.

Millesimo (mēl.lā'sē.mō). Village in Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Liguria, in the province of Savona, ab. 36 mi. W of Genoa. Here on April 13 and 14, 1796, Napoleon defeated the Austrian and Sardinian forces.

Millet (mē.le; Anglicized, mi.lā'), Aimé. b. at Paris, Sept. 27, 1819; d. there, Jan. 13, 1891. French sculptor. He studied both painting and sculpture, and was for a time in the studio of David d'Angers. He first exhibited drawings at the Salon of 1842, and until 1852 his exhibits were both paintings and statues. After that he confined himself entirely to sculpture. Among his works are Une Bacchante (1845), Ariane, now at the Luxembourg (1857), Vercingétorix, a colossal statue in copper set up at Alise-Ste.-Reine, Côte-d'Or (1865), a number of portrait busts, including George Sand and Edmond Adam, Tombeau de la Princesse Christine de Montpensier, for the city of Seville (1881), La Physique, for the Nice Observatory (1881), various colossal figures for public buildings in Paris (1882), a bronze statue of Edgar Quinet (1885), and Phidias, for the Luxembourg Gardens (1887).

Millet (mil'ęt), Francis Davis. b. at Mattapoisett, Mass., Nov. 3, 1846; drowned on the steamship Titanic, April 15, 1912. American painter. He was correspondent for the London Daily News in the war between Russia and Turkey. Among his works are Bay of Naples (1875), Bashi Bazouk (1880), A Window Seat (1885), The Handmaid (1886), A Cosy Corner (1886), and How the Gossip Grew (1890).

Millet (mē.le; Anglicized, mi.lā'), Jean François. [Also: Frans Mille, Jean François Milé; often called Francisque.] b. at Antwerp, Belgium, 1642; d. at Paris, 1679. Flemish landscape painter, follower of Poussin.

Millet, Jean François. b. at Gruchy, near Gréville, Manche, France, Oct. 4, 1814; d. at Barbizon, near Fontainebleau, France, Jan. 20, 1875. French painter, noted for his representations of peasant life in France. He worked with his father, a farmer, as a farm-laborer in his youth; but in 1832, having shown ability in drawing, he was placed at Cherbourg, where he secured an annuity enabling him to proceed with his studies. He went to Paris in 1837, and studied with Paul Delaroche, and in 1840 his first work, a portrait, was accepted at the Salon. He struggled to maintain himself for some years, and in 1848 fought at the barricades in Paris. The next year he settled at Barbizon, where he remained for the rest of his life. Among his works are The Sower (1849), Peasants Grafting (1855), The Gleaners (1857), The Angelus (1859), Death and the Wood-cutter (1859), Waiting (1860), The Sheep-shearers (1860), The Man with the Hoe (1863, known also from the fact that it led to Markham's famous poem), Wool-Carding (1863), Shepherdess and Sheep (1864), Goose Girl (1867), Evening Prayer (1868), and Potato Planters (1868).

Millevoye (mēl.vwȧ), Charles Hubert. b. at Abbeville, France, 1782; d. at Paris, 1816. French poet. His article on Le Danger des romans (1804) and a series of his poems (1806–12) were crowned by the Academy.

Milligan (mil'i.gạn), Robert Wiley. b. at Philadelphia, April 8, 1843; d. at Annapolis, Md., Oct. 14, 1909. American naval engineer. He served (1863 et seq.) on the Mackinaw during both attacks on Fort Fisher and the James River campaign, and was chief engineer (1897 et seq.) on the Oregon during the Spanish-American War.

Milligan, Ex parte, 4 Wallace 2 (1866). U.S. Supreme Court decision, rendered in an opinion by Justice David Davis, declaring the illegality of the military commission authorized by President Lincoln in the trial and punishment of a civilian during the Civil War. The decision was handed down by a divided court after the close of the war, but is nevertheless notable for the limits it sets on the authority of the president in time of war. By an act of March 3, 1863, Congress authorized the president to suspend the writ of habeas corpus, and under this authority President Lincoln suspended the writ (Sept. 15, 1863) in cases where officers held persons for offenses against the military or naval service. An Indiana teacher, Milligan, was arrested, tried by a military commission, found guilty of fomenting insurrection, and sentenced to be hanged. He petitioned the U.S. circuit court for a writ of habeas corpus. The decision of the court condemned military tribunals in sections where the civil courts were open, and, by implication, raised serious doubts as to the legality of Congressional reconstruction.

Millikan (mil'i.kạn), Robert Andrews. b. at Morrison, Ill., March 22, 1868—. American physicist. Member of physics faculty (1896–1921) and professor (1910–21) at Chicago; director (1921–45) of Norman Bridge Laboratory of Physics at California Institute of Technology; considered first to isolate electron and measure its charge; investigated penetrating power of cosmic rays, absorption of x-rays, Brownian movement in gases, photoelectric determination of Planck's constant, and extension of ultraviolet spectrum; awarded Nobel prize in physics (1923). Author of textbooks and Electricity, Sound and Light (1908), The Electron (1917), Science and Life (1923), Evolution of Science and Religion (1927), Science and the New Civilization (1930), Time, Matter, and Value (1932), Protons, Photons, Neutrons, and Cosmic Rays (1935), Cosmic Rays (1939), and other books. His autobiography was published in 1950.

Millin (mil'in), Sarah Gertrude. [Maiden name, Liebson.] b. at Kimberley, South Africa, March 19, 1889—. South African novelist and biographer. Her writing is concerned with the racial and colonial problems in South Africa. Author of Rhodes: A Life (1933), General Smuts (1936), and the novels The Dark River (1920), Middle-class (1921), God's Stepchildren (1924), Three Men Die (1934), What Hath a Man? (1938), The Herr Witch Doctor (1941), and King of the Bastards (1950).

Millington (mil'ing.ton). Town in SW Tennessee, in Shelby County, ab. 10 mi. N of Memphis. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population grew from 730 (1940) to 4,696 (1950).

Millinocket (mil.i.nok'ẹt). Town (in Maine the equivalent of township in many other states) and unincorporated village in C Maine, in Penobscot County; manufactures paper pulp and newsprint paper. Pop. of town, 5,890 (1950); of village, 5,755 (1950).

Millis (mil'is), Harry Alvin. b. at Paoli, Ind., May 14, 1873—. American economist. He was professor (1916–38) and head of the economics department (1928–38) at Chicago. He served as a member (1934–35, 1945 et seq.) and chairman (1940–45) of the National Labor Relations Board. Author of The Japanese Problem in the United States (1915), Sickness and Insurance (1926), and other works.

Millis, Walter. b. at Atlanta, Ga., March 16, 1899—. American journalist. He became a member of the staff of the Baltimore News, and joined (c1924) the staff of the New York Herald-Tribune. His works include Sand Castle (1929), The Martial Spirit (1931), a historical study of the Spanish-American War, The Road to War (1935), an account of the period immediately preceding the U.S. entry into World War I, Viewed Without Alarm: Europe Today (1937), Why Europe Fights (1940), and The Faith of an American (1941). With E. S. Duffield, he edited The Forrestal Diaries (1951).

Millöcker (mil'ėk.ėr), Karl. b. at Vienna, May 29, 1842; d. at Baden, Austria, Dec. 31, 1899. Austrian operetta composer, notably of Der todte Gast (1865), Gräfin Dubarry (1879), Der Bettelstudent (1881), Der arme Jonathan (1890), and Der Probekuss (1895). He was the composer also of piano pieces.

Mill on the Floss (flos), The. Novel by George Eliot, published in 1860.

Millot (mē.yō), Claude François Xavier. b. at Ornans, France, March 5, 1726; d. at Paris, March 21, 1785. French historical writer, a member of the Jesuit order.

Millport (mil'pōrt). Burgh in SW Scotland, in Buteshire, on the S coast of Great Cumbrae Island: resort; fisheries. 2,083 (1931).

Mills (milz). A former name of Hudson, Mass.

Mills, Albert Leopold. b. at New York, May 7, 1854; d. Sept. 8, 1916. American army officer.

Mills, Benjamin Fay. b. at Rahway, N.J., June 4, 1857; d. at Grand Rapids, Mich., May 1, 1916. American liberal evangelist.

Mills, Charles. b. near Greenwich, England, July 29, 1788; d. at Southampton, England, Oct. 9, 1826. English historian.

Mills, Clark. b. in Onondaga County, N.Y., Dec. 1, 1815; d. at Washington, D.C., Jan. 12, 1883. American sculptor. He made equestrian statues of Jackson and Washington (at Washington), the statue Liberty (Capitol, Washington), and others.

Mills, Darius Ogden. b. at North Salem, N.Y., Sept. 5, 1825; d. Jan. 4, 1910. American banker. He emigrated (1848) to California, where he established a bank at Sacramento (1850) and the Bank of California (1864), of which he was president (except for the period 1873–75) until he moved (1878) to New York. Among his many philanthropies (which included aid to St. Luke's Hospital, the University of California, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and the New York Botanical Garden) were his so-called Mills Hotels, providing hotel accommodations at minimum cost.

Mills, Earle Watkins. b. at Little Rock, Ark., June 24, 1896—. American naval officer, chairman (1946 et seq.) of the U.S. Maritime Commission.

Mills, Enos Abijah. [Known as the "Father of the Rocky Mountain National Park."] b. near Kansas City, Kan., April 22, 1870; d. at Estes Park, Colo., Sept. 21, 1922. American writer and advocate of national parks. He settled (1886) in a log cabin on Longs Peak, Colo., and traveled extensively through the Rocky Mountains, acting as guide and "snow observer" (1907, 1908) for the government. Author of The Story of Estes Park (1905), Wild Life in the Rockies (1909), Rocky Mountain Wonderland (1915), Adventures of a Nature Guide (1919), and Watched by Wild Animals (1922).

Mills, Lawrence Heyworth. b. at New York, 1837; d. Jan. 29, 1918. American Orientalist, known for his translation and interpretation of the Avesta. He published over 100 papers and at Friedrich Max Müller's request completed translation of the texts which appeared at Oxford (1887) as Volume XXXI of The Sacred Books of the East.

Mills, Ogden Livingston. b. at Newport, R.I., Aug. 23, 1884; d. at New York, Oct. 11, 1937. American lawyer and politician; grandson of Darius Ogden Mills. He was U.S. senator (1921–27), and undersecretary (1927–32) and U.S. secretary (1932–33) of the Treasury.

Mills, Robert. b. at Charleston, S.C., Aug. 12, 1781; d. March 3, 1855. American architect and engineer, designer (1836) of the Washington Monument. He also designed the state house at Harrisburg, Pa. (1810), the Baltimore monument to Washington (1814), and, as architect of public buildings (1836–51), the original buildings of the U.S. Post Office, Treasury, and Patent Office.

Mills, Roger Quarles. b. in Todd County, Ky., March 30, 1832; d. at Corsicana, Tex., Sept. 2, 1911. American politician. He settled in Texas in 1849, served as a Confederate officer in the Civil War, and was a member (1873–92) of Congress from Texas. He was chairman (1887–89) of the Ways and Means Committee, and as such introduced (1888) the Mills Bill, revising the tariff downward. The House passed it, but the Republican Senate refused it, and the question became the big campaign issue of the presidential election of 1888; Cleveland, for the bill, was defeated by Benjamin Harrison, but received a larger popular vote. Mills represented (1892–98) Texas in the U.S. Senate.

Mills, Sir William. b. at Sunderland, Durham, England, April 24, 1856; d. at Weston super Mare, Somersetshire, England, Jan. 7, 1932. English inventor who developed (1915) the hand grenade ("Mills bomb") first used by Allied soldiers during World War I. He founded (1915) Mills Munitions Ltd. to manufacture the grenade. He was a pioneer researcher in alloys, invented a lifeboat-launching gear for steamships, and opened the first aluminum foundry in Great Britain.

Millspaugh (milz'pô), Arthur Chester. b. at Augusta, Mich., March 1, 1883—. American diplomat and financier. He served as administrator general of finances in Persia (1922–27) and Iran (1943–45), and as financial adviser and receiver of customs (1927–29) in Haiti. Author of The American Task in Persia (1925), Haiti under American Control (1931), Public Welfare Organization (1935), Democracy, Efficiency, Stability (1942), Peace Plans and American Choices (1942), and other books.

Millspaugh, Charles Frederick. b. at Ithaca, N.Y., June 20, 1854; d. Sept. 15, 1923. American botanist, known as a lecturer and curator of botany at the Field Museum of Natural History, Chicago. His publications include the self-illustrated two-volume American Medicinal Plants (1887) and Flora of Santa Catalina Island (Field Museum Publications, Botanical Series V, 1923, written in collaboration with L. W. Nuttall).

Mill Springs (mil). Locality in S Kentucky, in Wayne County, on the Cumberland River. Near here, on Jan. 19, 1862, Union forces under George H. Thomas defeated the Confederates under George Bibb Crittenden.

Milltown (mil'toun). Borough in N central New Jersey, in Middlesex County. 3,786 (1950).

Milltown. Former name of Downingtown, Pa., and also of Milton, Pa.

Mill Tract (mil). A former name of Norristown, Pa.

Millvale (mil'vāl). Borough in SW Pennsylvania, in Allegheny County, on the N bank of the Allegheny River, opposite Pittsburgh: metal and meat-packing industries. It was incorporated in 1868, and is now part of the urbanized area of Pittsburgh. 7,287 (1950).

Mill Valley (mil). Town in C California, in Marin County: a northwestern residential suburb of San Francisco, located in a mountain valley. 7,331 (1950).

Millville (mil'vil). City in SW New Jersey, in Cumberland County, on the Maurice River ab. 40 mi. S of Philadelphia: glass manufactures. 16,041 (1950).

Milly Bloom (mil'i blöm). See Bloom, Milly.

Milly Costigan (kos'ti.gạn). See Costigan, Emily.

Milman (mil'mạn), Henry Hart. b. at London, 1791; d. near Ascot, England, Sept. 24, 1868. English clergyman. In 1812 he won the Newdigate prize with an English poem on the Apollo Belvedere and in 1821 was elected professor of poetry at Oxford. Fazio, a drama composed at Oxford, was published in 1815. Samor, an epic, appeared in 1818, the Fall of Jerusalem in 1820, and the Martyr of Antioch in 1822. In 1835 he published translations from Sanskrit poems. His History of the Jews, which appeared in 1830, treated them as an Oriental tribe, with little attention to the miraculous element. In 1835 Sir Robert Peel made him canon of Westminster and rector of Saint Margaret's. In 1840 he published the History of Christianity under the Empire. Although shunned by the clergy for his unconventional views, he was advanced to the deanery of Saint Paul's in 1849. In 1838 he edited Gibbon, and in 1855 published the History of Latin Christianity down to the death of Pope Nicholas V.

Milne (miln), A. A. [Full name, Alan Alexander Milne.] b. Jan. 18, 1882—. English novelist, poet, and playwright. He is known especially for his children's books in prose, including Winnie-the-Pooh (1926) and The House at Pooh Corner (1928), and in verse, such as When We Were Very Young (1924) and Now We are Six (1927). He was assistant editor (1906–14) of Punch. His plays include Wurzel-Flummery (1917), Make-Believe (1918), Mr. Pim Passes By (1919), The Romantic Age (1920), The Truth About Blayds (1921), The Dover Road (1922), The Great Broxopp (1923), Ariadne (1925), The Ivory Door (1927), Michael and Mary (1930), Toad of Toad Hall (1930), Miss Elizabeth Bennet (1936), Sarah Simple (1937), and Gentleman Unknown (1938). Author also of The Day's Play (1910), Once on a Time (1917), Mr. Pim (1921), The Red House Mystery (1922), Two People (1931), Four Days' Wonder (1933), It's Too Late Now (1939), and Chloe Marr (1946).

Milne, John. b. at Liverpool, England, 1850; d. July 31, 1913. English seismologist, for many years employed by the Japanese government as a geologist and mining engineer. He traveled widely in Asia, Australasia, and the U.S. His most notable work was the establishment of the seismic survey of Japan, with nearly a thousand stations, and the projecting of a similar survey of the world. He published Earthquakes (1883), Seismology (1898), and numerous scientific papers.

Milne, Joshua. b. 1776; d. Jan. 4, 1851. English actuary, author of a treatise (1815) on annuity valuation and life expectancy that revolutionized life insurance actuarial work. As actuary of the Sun Life Assurance Society (1810), he reconstructed life tables which were based on tables deduced by Dr. Richard Price from burial registers (1735–80) of All Saints' Church, Northampton. Milne's calculations, based on the Carlisle bills of mortality prepared by Dr. John Heysham, turned out to be remarkably accurate.

Milne Bay. Arm of the Pacific Ocean in extreme SE New Guinea, in the Territory of New Guinea. During World War II it was occupied by Japanese forces briefly, but they were driven out by Australian forces who invaded the area in October, 1942, and established an airfield. Length, ab. 30 mi.

Milne-Edwards (mēl.nā.dwärs), Alphonse. b. at Paris, Oct. 13, 1835; d. there, April 21, 1900. French naturalist; son of Henri Milne-Edwards. He was especially known for his work on crustaceans.

Milne-Edwards, Henri. b. at Bruges, Belgium, Oct. 23, 1800; d. at Paris, July 28, 1885. French naturalist. His works include Éléments de zoologie (1834), Histoire naturelle des crustacés (3 vols., 1834–41), Leçons sur la physiologie et l'anatomie comparée de l'homme et des animaux (14 vols., 1857–81), and Recherches pour servir à l'histoire naturelle des mammifères (1864–74).

Milner (mil'nẽr), Sir Alfred. [Title, 1st Viscount Milner.] b. in Germany, March 23, 1854; d. near Canterbury, England, May 13, 1925. English administrator. He was educated at King's College, London, and at Balliol College, Oxford, and was called to the bar of the Inner Temple in 1881. From 1881 to 1885 he was on the staff of the Pall Mall Gazette, and then became private secretary to G. J. Goschen, who became chancellor of the exchequer in 1887. Through Goschen's influence, Milner was appointed (1889) undersecretary of finance in Egypt, serving during a period when the Egyptian financial system was being overhauled. He returned to England to serve (1892–97) as chairman of the board of inland revenue. He published (1892) England in Egypt, an account of the work that had been done there. In 1897 he was named by Joseph Chamberlain, the colonial secretary, high commissioner for South Africa and governor of Cape Colony. He studied the situation in South Africa and became convinced that British disabilities under the Boer governments in the Transvaal and the Orange Free State would remain, that the Boers had no intention of granting the franchise to the Uitlanders (Outlanders), as the British immigrants into the Dutch regions were called, and that warfare was the only solution. A conference (May-June, 1899) between Milner and Paul Kruger, president of the South African Republic, broke down, and despite attempts at compromise of the difficulties war broke out (October, 1899). Milner performed many services as civilian head of the South African administration, and he was the author of the final surrender document, signed May 31, 1902. Milner's advocacy of the war and of the measures taken by Kitchener in suppressing the guerrilla raids of the Boers alienated the Liberal Party from Milner, but he was named (1902) governor of the Transvaal and Orange River colonies. He worked during his administration of the conquered territories toward the eventual consolidation of the whole area into one union. After the grant of representative government in the Transvaal (1905; not adopted by the Liberal government in England), Milner resigned his posts and returned to England. During the Parliamentary crisis of 1909–11, he sided strongly with the Conservatives, but he became (1916) a member of the inner war cabinet of Lloyd George during World War I. Milner was responsible in 1918 for the appointment of Ferdinand Foch as supreme allied commander and served (April-December, 1918) as secretary of state for war. He was secretary of state for colonies (1918–21) and headed the mission (1919–20) that recommended Egyptian independence, abolition of the capitulations there, and British guarantee of Egyptian territorial integrity. He was knighted in 1895, was raised to the peerage as Baron Milner in 1901, and was created a viscount in 1902.

Milner, Isaac. b. at Leeds, England, Jan. 11, 1750; d. at Kensington, London, April 1, 1820. English mathematician and divine, dean of Carlisle (1791 et seq.); brother of Joseph Milner. He became first Jackson professor of natural philosophy, Cambridge, in 1782. He was made dean of Queen's College in 1788, vice-chancellor of the university in 1792, and Lucasian professor of mathematics in 1798.

Milner, John. b. at London, Oct. 14, 1752; d. at Wolverhampton, England, April 19, 1826. English priest and archaeologist, vicar-apostolic of the Roman Catholic Church. In 1803 he was appointed by Pope Pius VII bishop in partibus of Castabala, and vicar-apostolic of the Midland district. In politics he opposed any plan for Catholic emancipation which should recognize a right of veto in the English crown. As an archaeologist he published The History, Civil and Ecclesiastical, and Survey of the Antiquities of Winchester (1798–1801). A Treatise on the Ecclesiastical Architecture of England during the Middle Ages was published in 1835.

Milner, Joseph. b. at Leeds, England, Jan. 2, 1744; d. at Hull, England, Nov. 15, 1797. English church historian; brother of Isaac Milner.

Milner, Miss. Principal character in Elizabeth Inchbald's Simple Story.

Milner, Moses Embree. See California Joe.

Milnes (milz), Richard Monckton. [Title, 1st Baron Houghton.] b. at London, June 19, 1809; d. at Vichy, France, Aug. 11, 1885. English statesman and poet. He graduated at Cambridge (Trinity College) in 1831, and was an intimate there of Alfred Tennyson, Arthur Henry Hallam, and William Makepeace Thackeray. He became a Conservative member of Parliament for Pontefract in 1837, but joined the Liberal Party during the Corn Law struggle, and assisted in passing the copyright act. In 1863 he was created Baron Houghton. He was noted as a patron of letters; his circle included many brilliant authors whose first recognition came from him. He published several volumes of poems and The Life and Letters of Keats (1848).

Milngavie (mil.gī′). [Local name, Milguy (mil.gī′).] Police burgh in C Scotland, in Dunbartonshire, ab. 6 mi. NW of Glasgow, ab. 449 mi. N of London by rail. 7,172 (est. 1948).

Milnrow (mil′rō). Urban district in NW England, in Lancashire, ab. 2 mi. SE of Rochdale, ab. 196 mi. NW of London by rail. 8,585 (1951).

Milo (mī′lō) or Milon (mī′lon). b. at Crotona, Magna Graecia, Italy; fl. in the last part of the 6th century B.C. Greek athlete, famous for his strength. He was six times victor in wrestling at the Olympic Games and six times at the Pythian, and many stories were told of his extraordinary feats of strength, of which the best-known is his carrying a heifer, four years old, on his shoulders through the stadium at Olympia, then slaying it with his fist and eating the whole of it in a day. He is said to have been eaten by wolves which attacked him while his hands were caught in a cleft tree which he had endeavored to rend.

Milo. Town in C Maine, in Piscataquis County; manufactures of cotton thread, yarn, and paper. 2,898 (1950).

Milo. In Maurice Hewlett's historical novel The Life and Death of Richard Yea-and-Nay (1900), an abbot, the friend and confessor of Richard Coeur-de-Lion, and the supposed teller of the story.

Milo (mē′lō). Italian name of Melos.

Milo (mī′lō), Titus Annius Papianus. Killed in Lucania, Italy, 48 B.C. Roman partisan leader, a rival of Clodius. The gangs of toughs hired by the two kept Rome in constant uproar during the struggle between Pompey and the conservative group on the one hand and the democratic party on the other. Milo, an adherent of Pompey, was tribune of the plebs in 57 B.C. and had Cicero recalled from exile. The struggle came to a climax in 52 B.C., when Milo and Clodius met by chance at Bovillae; Milo's band, at his orders, set upon Clodius's and Clodius was killed. Feeling ran high and Milo, after a trial, was exiled to Massilia. Cicero's speech in his behalf was not delivered for fear of violence; the oration (Pro Milone) which we possess is an expanded version published after the trial for impeachment. Milo joined with Marcus Caelius Rufus in a revolt (48 B.C.) against Caesar and was killed. He was married to Sulla's daughter Fausta.

Miloradovich (mē.lo.rä′dọ.vich), Count Mikhail. b. at St. Petersburg, 1770; killed there, Dec. 26, 1825. Russian general, distinguished in the Napoleonic wars. He fought at Austerlitz (1805) and Borodino (1812) and against the Grande Armée during the retreat from Moscow. He was military governor (1818–25) at St. Petersburg, being killed in the Decembrist revolt.

Milor Beefington (mī′lôr bē′fing.tọn). See Beefington, Milor.

Milosh Obrenovich (mē′lôsh ō.bren′ō.vich). [Also: Miloš, Milosh I.] b. at Dobrinia, Serbia, 1780; d. at Belgrade, Serbia, Sept. 26, 1860. Prince of Serbia (1817–39, 1858–60), leader of the second Serbian war for independence (1815), generally considered the founder of modern Serbia. A cattle drover and swineherd, he became one of Karageorge's commanders in the struggle for independence, and remained in Serbia in 1813 when Karageorge and his other regional commanders fled before the invasion of the Turkish troops. In 1815 he led the second uprising against Turkish rule, and, by playing on the cupidity of Turkish officials, obtained recognition of limited self-government for Serbia. In 1817, after Karageorge had been killed by followers of the Obrenovich family, thus beginning the long family feud between the Karageorgevich and Obrenovich families, he was named Prince of Serbia. He was recognized as hereditary prince by the national assembly (1827) and by the sultan (1830). His autocratic rule and his growing refusal to be guided by Russia resulted (1839) in his forced abdication in favor of his son Milan. Milan died in 1839 and was succeeded by Michael, another of Milosh's sons. In 1842 Michael was deposed in favor of Alexander Karageorgevich. Milosh was recalled (1858) when a factional dispute unseated Alexander; he died two years later and Michael was recalled to succeed him.

Miłosz (mē′lôsh), Czesław. b. 1911—. Polish poet and official. From 1945 he served as cultural officer of the Polish government in the U.S.

Milovanović (mē.lô.vä′nô.vich), Milovan. b. at Belgrade (then in Serbia), 1863; d. there, 1912. Serbian statesman, minister of foreign affairs (1907–11) and prime minister (1911–12).

Milspe (mil′spẹ). Former town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the province of Westphalia, Prussia, situated on the Ennepe River, NE of Wuppertal; iron foundries, machine, ceramics, textile, and other industries. In 1946 it was incorporated into the new town of Ennepetal. 13,520 (1946).

Milstein (mil′stīn), Nathan. b. at Odessa, Russia, Dec. 21, 1904—. Russian concert violinist. He made his American debut (1928) with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. He is known for his interpretations of Bach's violin sonatas.

Miltenberg (mil′tẹn.berk), Gustav. A pseudonym of Lafontaine, August Heinrich Julius.

Miltiades (mil.tī.ā′dēz). d. c489 B.C. Athenian general, victor over the Persians at Marathon. When Darius I of Persia invaded (c516–513 B.C.) Scythia, Miltiades was a member of the expedition and was stationed at the bridge across the Ister (Danube); according to most accounts, when Darius failed to appear after a certain time, Miltiades counseled the destruction of the bridge. He was involved in the Ionian revolt (499 B.C. et seq.) against the Persians and escaped to Athens when the revolt was crushed. He was appointed one of the ten generals to direct the defense against the coming invasion of the Persians under Datis and Artaphernes. The traditional account holds that he influenced Callimachus, who had the deciding vote as polemarch, to break the deadlock among the generals and to vote for giving battle at Marathon. The Persians, planning an amphibious invasion of Athens, embarked part of their army on ships and the remainder began to march on Athens. On the plain of Marathon they were met by the Greeks, led into a trap by the apparent collapse of the Greek center, and slaughtered by the more heavily armed though outnumbered Greeks. Miltiades then turned quickly and marched back to Athens to face the threatened landing from the Persian ships, but the Persians, rather than land, drew off and gave up their expedition. Miltiades was then given command of a fleet of 70 Athenian ships, with which he attacked, for reasons now uncertain, the island of Paros. He was unsuccessful and was, moreover, wounded in the leg. On his return to Athens he was tried for deceiving the people and fined 50 talents. His wound had turned gangrenous and he died of it before the fine could be paid.

Miltiades, Saint. [Also, Melchiades.] b. in Africa; d. Jan. 11, 314. Pope from 311 to 314. During his reign Constantine I defeated Maxentius and assured the adoption of Christianity.

Milto (mil'tō). Original name, according to Plutarch, of Aspasia the Younger.

Milton (mil'tən). Unincorporated community in SW Illinois, in Madison County, near St. Louis, Mo. 8,232 (1950).

Milton. Town in E Massachusetts, in Norfolk County, ab. 7 mi. S of downtown Boston, and part of its urbanized area. It was settled in 1636 and incorporated in 1662. Pop. 22,395 (1950).

Milton. [Former name, Milltown.] Borough in E central Pennsylvania, in Northumberland County, on the Susquehanna River: manufactures of metals, textiles, and furniture. It was incorporated in 1817. Pop. 8,578 (1950).

Milton. Symbolic and mystical poem by William Blake, published in 1804. Returning to earth from Heaven, John Milton corrects the interpretation given to his works, and enters the soul of Blake, who expounds the Christian doctrine of forgiveness.

Milton, John. b. c1563; d. in March, 1647. English scrivener and musician; father of John Milton the poet. He was educated at Christ Church, Oxford, where he became a Protestant. He was admitted to the Company of Scriveners at London on Feb. 27, 1600. He married Sarah, daughter of Paul Jeffrey, a merchant tailor. He was a man of high character, a good scholar, and devoted to music.

Milton, John. b. at London, Dec. 9, 1608; d. there, Nov. 8, 1674. English poet. His father was John Milton, a scrivener. Educated by private tutors and at St. Paul's School, he entered Christ's College, Cambridge, in 1625 (B.A., 1629; M.A., 1632). The years 1632–38 were devoted to study at his father's country estate at Horton. It was at either Cambridge or Horton that he abandoned his destined career as minister for that of poet. The writing of great poetry, he felt, demanded severe intellectual and moral discipline. His poems up to this date, both Latin and English, gave him mastery of nearly all types of lesser poetry (chief poems: On the Morning of Christ's Nativity, L'Allegro, Il Penseroso, Comus, Lycidas). In 1638 he traveled in Europe, spending the chief part of his time with people in the literary circles of Italy. It was in Italy also that he met Galileo. He returned (1639) to England because civil war threatened, and now abandoned his poetical ambitions to write prose tracts in the cause of liberty as he saw it. His position was extremely liberal. He attacked the episcopal system (Of Reformation touching Church Discipline in 1641, and others); advocated divorce (The Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce in 1643, and others), reform in education (Of Education in 1644), freedom from censorship (Areopagitica in 1644, one of the world's most famous writings on this subject), and the right of the people, under the contract theory of government, to execute a tyrant (Of the Tenure of Kings and Magistrates in 1649). This last tract's appearance just after the execution of Charles I brought him into Cromwell's government as Secretary for Foreign Tongues. His chief duty was what is now called propaganda. He wrote Eikonoklastes (1649) in English in a vain attempt to discredit the very popular Eikon Basilike, purportedly written by Charles I; his Latin tract Pro Populo Anglicano Defensio (1651) was a successful rebuttal of a Latin defense of Charles I by Claude de Saumaise (Salmasius), a famous European scholar (two other Latin defenses followed). Writing the Defensio hastened his blindness, which became total in 1652. In that same year his first wife died. She was Mary Powell, daughter of an Oxfordshire royalist. Milton had married her in 1642, when she was 17. Differences in age (he was then 34), political sympathies, and, doubtless, temperament made the marriage a failure, and after a month she returned to her parents. This desertion was an important contributing factor in his writing on divorce (and the threat of prosecution arising from the first divorce tract contributed to the writing of Areopagitica). However, Mary returned to Milton in 1645 and of the marriage three children (all daughters) survived their father, but he does not seem to have been on happy terms with them. In 1656 he married Catherine Woodcock, who died in 1658. His great sonnet Methought I saw my late espoused Saint is evidence that this marriage was completely happy. In 1663 he married (apparently again happily) his third wife, Elizabeth Minshull, who survived him. After 1655 he did little official work. Continuing his struggle to the end, he wrote in 1659 several tracts urging a republican form of government. He had become famous (or, in the eyes of some, infamous) as the chief literary defender of the Commonwealth, and it is not known why he escaped punishment at the Restoration. In spite of his public and private calamities he now turned back to poetry. The theme for Paradise Lost had been considered as early as 1640, and he had probably begun composing it by 1658. The poem was completed in 1665 and published in 1667. It derives from the Bible plus the body of Christian and Jewish commentary, from the theologians, from classic epics, and from various Renaissance versions of portions of the theme. It brought him little money but won immediate recognition. In 1671 he published Paradise Regained and Samson Agonistes, the latter being almost certainly his last poem. Partly responsible for the writing of Paradise Regained was the suggestion of Thomas Ellwood: "Thou hast said much of Paradise lost, but what hast thou to say of Paradise found?"

Milton, John. b. in Jefferson County, Ga., April 20, 1807; d. at Tallahassee, Fla., April 1, 1865. American soldier and politician, Civil War governor of Florida (1861–65). As governor he advocated wartime prohibition and issuance of paper money backed by the public land of the state. Upon the Confederate defeat, he committed suicide.

Milton Regis (rē'jis). See under Sittingbourne and Milton.

Milvian Bridge (mil'vi.ən). [Also: Mulvian Bridge; Italian, Ponte Milvio (mēl'vyō); Latin, Pons Milvius (mil'vi.us) or Mulvius.] Ancient bridge across the Tiber River N of Rome, built in 109 B.C., at the crossing of the river by the Via Flaminia. It was the site of the victory of Constantine over Maxentius (312 A.D.) and of the vision of Constantine of a cross in the sky, which led him to embrace Christianity. The bridge was reconstructed on the old foundations in the 13th century, and was again renovated in the 19th century. It is still in use.

Milwaukee (mil.wô'kē). City in SE Wisconsin, county seat of Milwaukee County, on Lake Michigan and at the confluence of three rivers: railroad center, lake port, and largest city in the state. Its manufactures include beer, leather, cranes, hoists, steam shovels, excavators, food products, mining equipment, electrical machinery, automobile bodies, agricultural equipment, shoes, and bosiery. Milwaukee has a museum, two art galleries, an extensive system of parks, and public beaches along Lake Michigan. It is the seat of Marquette University, Milwaukee-Downer College, Mount Mary College, and a state teachers college. It was settled c1820. Pop. of city, 587,472 (1940), 637,392 (1950); of urbanized area, 829,495 (1950).

Milwaukie (mil.wô'kē). City in NW Oregon, in Clackamas County, on the Willamette River ab. 5 mi. S of Portland. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population more than doubled. 1,871 (1940), 5,253 (1950).

Milyas (mil'i.ąs). In ancient geography, a region in SW Asia Minor, of uncertain extent, usually including parts of Lycia and Pisidia.

Milyukov (mē.lyö.kôf'), Pavel Nikolayevich. b. near St. Petersburg, 1857; d. at Aix-les-Bains, France, March 31, 1943. Russian historian and political leader. Deprived of his teaching position at the University of Moscow in 1895 because of his liberal political views, he served (1897–98) as professor of history at the University of Sofia, Bulgaria, after which he came to the U.S. and was for some years a lecturer at the University of Chicago. When the political crisis in Russia sharpened in 1905, he returned thither and organized the Union of Unions, a group of intellectuals, and also the Constitutional Democratic Party, which called for constitutional government and universal suffrage. Elected to the first Duma as a candidate of this party, he was arrested but subsequently released. He was also a member of the Duma which in March, 1917, during World War I, refused to dissolve at the czar's order, and he became minister for foreign affairs in the provisional government headed by Prince Lvov. His attempt to keep Russia in the war aroused such popular resentment that he was forced to resign. After the Bolshevik Revolution in October, 1917, he fled to Paris, where he edited various Russian-language publications, maintaining to the end an uncompromising anti-Communist position. He was the author of Main Currents of Russian Historical Thought (1893–95), Sketches of Russian Culture (1895–96), Democracy and the Second Duma (1905), A Year of Struggle (1907), and Russia's Catastrophe (1927).

Mimas (mī'mąs). Innermost satellite of Saturn, discovered by Sir William Herschel, Sept. 17, 1789.

Mimbres (mim'bręs). Intermittent river in SW New Mexico which empties into a dry inland basin. Length, ab. 70 mi.

Mimbres Mountains. [Also, Black Range.] Mountain range in SW New Mexico. Peak elevation, ab. 10,011 ft.

Mime (mē'mę). See under Mimir.

Mimer (mē'mer). See Mimir.

Mimico (mim'i.kō). Town in SE Ontario, Canada, on the N shore of Lake Ontario. It is a western suburb of Toronto. 11,342 (1951).

Mimir (mē'mir). [Also, Mimer.] In Old Norse mythology, a giant who dwelt by the root of the world-tree Yggdrasil at the well of Mimir (the ocean), the source of all wisdom, from which he drank, and thus knew all things, past, present, and future. Odin, to obtain a drink from the well, gave up one of his eyes in exchange. In Wagner's Ring of the Nibelungs, he appears as Mime.

Mimnermus (mim.nėr'mus). fl. c630–600 B.C. Greek elegiac poet of Colophon. He was a contemporary of Solon. His elegiac poems form an epoch in the history of that form of verse. He was the first systematically to make it the vehicle for plaintive, mournful, and erotic strains.

Min (min). [Also, Min-Kong.] River in SE China, in the province of Fukien. It flows S and SE and empties into the East China Sea at Foochow. Length, ab. 358 mi.

Min. See Khem.

Mina (mē'nä), El. See El Mina.

Mina (mē'nä), Francisco Javier. b. at Otan, near Monreal, Navarra, Spain, Dec. 3, 1789; executed in Guanajuato, Mexico, Nov. 11, 1817. Spanish soldier; nephew of Francisco Espoz y Mina. With his uncle he was a noted guerrilla leader against the French (1808–10) and against Ferdinand VII (1814), having been imprisoned from 1810 to 1814. He organized in England and the U.S. an expedition for the aid of patriots of Mexico, landed in Tamaulipas, in April, 1817, marched into the interior, and repeatedly defeated the Spanish forces, but was eventually captured and shot.

Minami-tori Shima (mē.nä.mē.tō.rē shē.mä). Japanese name of Marcus Island.

Minangkabau (mē''näng.kä.bou'). [Also, Menangkabau.] Ethnic group, numbering ab. two million, found along the coast and in the highlands of W central Sumatra. The name is also given to ab. 14,000 inhabitants of Negri Sembilan and parts of Malacca in Malaya, the descendants of Minangkabau colonists who came from Sumatra sometime before the 16th century. The Minangkabau speak a language closely related to Malay. They are matrilineal and in the Sumatra highlands live in large multiple-family houses.

Minas (mē'näs). [Also, Lavalleja.] City in S Uruguay, capital of Lavalleja department. Pop. ab. 32,000.

Minas Basin (mī'nąs). Easternmost arm of the Bay of Fundy, Nova Scotia, noted for its high tidal range, which reaches a maximum of over 50 ft. Length, ab. 60 mi.

Minas Channel. Arm of the Bay of Fundy, connecting with Minas Basin, Nova Scotia, Canada. Width at narrowest point, ab. 3 mi.

Minas Gerais (mē'nązh zhę.rīs'). [Also, Minas Geraes.] State in E Brazil: site of the world's most extensive known iron-ore deposits, and of some diamond mines. Most of the population is employed in agriculture; coffee, cotton, tobacco, sugar, and citrus fruit are the chief commercial crops. Capital, Belo Horizonte; area, ab. 224,702 sq. mi.; pop. 7,839,792 (1950).

Minatitlán (mē''nä.tē.tlän'). City in SE Mexico, in Veracruz state, a port on the Coatzacoalcos River: large petroleum refinery; airport. 18,539 (1940).

Minc (mēnts), Hilary. b. 1905—. Polish politician. When Hitler occupied Poland, he went to the U.S.S.R., where he played a leading role in founding the Soviet-sponsored Union of Polish Patriots. He became minister of trade in the Warsaw government (1945), and in 1948 became virtual economic dictator of Poland, directing the interests of the country in closest cooperation with the U.S.S.R. In 1952 he became Polish vice-premier under Bierut.

Minch (minch). [Also, North Minch.] Sea passage in NW Scotland, lying between Lewis island, in the Outer Hebrides, and the Scottish mainland. Width, ab. 25 to 45 mi.

Minch, Little. Sea passage in N Scotland, connecting the Sea of the Hebrides with the Minch. It lies between the Outer Hebrides and the island of Skye. Width, ab. 14 to 20 mi.

Min-chia (min'chyä'). Non-Chinese tribe centered for the most part in the Ta-li plain of Yunnan province, China. They live by agriculture, and speak (but do not write) their own language. See Yün-nan the Link between India and the Yangtze, by H. R. Davies (1909).

Mincing (min'sing). Character in William Congreve's comedy The Way of the World, Millamant's waiting-maid.

Mincio (mēn'chō). [Latin, Mincius (min'shus).] River in N Italy. It rises in the Italian Tyrol as the Sarca, traverses Lake Garda, and joins the Po ab. 11 mi. SE of Mantua. Near it, on Dec. 25 and 26, 1800, the French under Guillaume Brune defeated the Austrians under Heinrich von Bellegarde; and in 1814 Eugène de Beauharnais defeated the Austrians. The battle of Solferino (June 24, 1859) is sometimes called the battle of the Mincio. The river formed the boundary between the dominions of Victor Emmanuel and of Austria from 1859 to 1866. Total length, ab. 120 mi.

Mincopies (ming'kǫ.pēz). See Andamanese.

Mind (mint), Gottfried. [Called the "Raphael of Cats."] b. at Bern, Switzerland, 1768; d. there, Nov. 7, 1814. Swiss painter, especially remarkable for his pictures of cats.

Mindanao (min.dą.nä'ō). One of the southern islands of the Philippines. Next to Luzon, it is the largest of the group. The surface is mountainous. It came into the possession of the U.S. in 1898. Area, ab. 36,906 sq. mi.; pop. 1,828,071 (1939).

Mindanao Deep. Deep point in the Philippine Trench, in the W Pacific Ocean, 1. of the NE part of the island of Mindanao. It is the greatest known ocean deep in the world, ab. 35,410 ft.

Mindanao River. [Also: Pulangi, Rio Grande de Mindanao.] Largest river in Mindanao and the second in size in the Philippines. It rises in the highlands in the N central part of the island and flows SW and then NW to the Moro Gulf on the SW side of the island. The city of Cotabato is situated at the mouth. Length, ab. 200 mi.

Mindanao Sea. Sea in the Philippine Islands, lying N of Mindanao and S of Bohol, and connected on the E by Surigao Strait with the Pacific Ocean, and on the W with the Sulu Sea.

Mindelheim (min'dẹl.hīm). Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Bavaria, American Zone, in the Regierungsbezirk (government district) of Swabia, ab. 29 mi. SW of Augsburg: dairy, brewing, tanning, and furniture industries. It is an old town, with remains of medieval town walls and gates, and churches of the 18th century. 7,673 (1946).

Minden (min'dẹn). City in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the province of Westphalia, Prussia, on the Weser River ab. 35 mi. SW of Hanover: river port on the Weser. It has shipyards, breweries, distilleries, canneries, lumber mills, iron foundries, and textile mills. The Catholic Dom (cathedral), an interesting structure in the Romanesque and early Gothic styles of the 13th century, was heavily damaged during World War II; the same is true of the 13th-century Rathaus (town hall). One of the northernmost of the ancient Roman military camps was erected here; Charlemagne founded the bishopric c800. Minden was a member of the Hanseatic League; city and territory fell to Brandenburg in 1648. In World War II the city was entered by Allied troops on April 6, 1945; a concentration camp had existed here during the war. The population increase in the period 1939–46 was 25.2 percent. 34,293 (1946), 41,527 (1950).

Minden. City in NW Louisiana, parish seat of Webster Parish: ginning and shipping point for cotton. 9,787 (1950).

Mindoro (min.dō'rō). Province in W central Philippine Islands, consisting of Mindoro and adjacent islands lying S of the W part of Luzon (separated by Verde Island Passage). Mount Halcon, the culminating peak, is 8,484 ft. high. The mountains are covered with valuable forests. Rivers are numerous but small. The best harbors are Puerto Galera on the N, and San José on the SW coast, both safe for large craft in all weather. Pola Bay, on the NE, is good in the southwest monsoon, and Paluan Bay, on the W, in the northeast monsoon. Coal is found in the south, and gold in various parts of the province. Rice, copra, and Manila hemp are the chief products. Capital, Calapan; area, ab. 3,891 sq. mi.; pop. 167,705 (1948).

Mindoro. Island in the Philippines, S of Luzon, from which it is separated by Verde Island Passage. With adjacent islands it forms Mindoro province. Area, ab. 3,794 sq. mi.; pop. 116,988 (1939).

Mindoro Invasion. Military operation in the Pacific area, in World War II. An important prelude to the U.S. invasion of Luzon, the assault on this western Philippine island, below Manila, bypassed the central islands then held by the Japanese. Troops landed on Dec. 15, 1944, and encountered only weak resistance.

Mindoro Strait. Strait in the Philippines, separating Mindoro from the Calamian Islands.

Mindszenty (mind'sen.tē), Joseph. b. at Csehimindszenty, Hungary, 1892—. Hungarian Roman Catholic churchman. In September, 1945, he was named archbishop of Esztergom, thereby becoming primate of Hungary, and in February, 1946, was elevated to the rank of cardinal. During World War II he resisted German domination of his country, and in 1944 was imprisoned for several months by the Nazi-dominated Hungarian puppet government. In 1946 he briefly visited the U.S. and Canada. When the Hungarian government came under Communist control, Cardinal Mindszenty inevitably came into conflict with it in various matters. Late in 1948 he and several other persons, clericals and laymen, were arrested on charges of treason as well as of certain monetary transactions in violation of the law. It was alleged that he was involved in a plot to restore the Hapsburg monarchy in the person of Archduke Otto, with whom he had been in contact during his American-Canadian visit. World attention was drawn to the public trial of Mindszenty and his associates, and a great sensation was caused by his admission of guilt on several of the charges. In a letter written before his arrest, however, he had asked that any confession he might make should be disregarded. In view of this there arose a widespread opinion that the confession had been brought about by the use of some mysterious drug, an idea to which Mindszenty himself lent no countenance. Alternatively, it has been suggested that psychological pressure put upon him during his imprisonment accounted for his admissions. The court found him guilty, and could have condemned him to death but, cognizant of world opinion, imposed instead a sentence of life imprisonment, explaining this supposed leniency as a recognition of his courageous anti-Nazi stand during the war.

Minehead (mīn'hed''). Urban district, market town, and seaside resort in SW England, in Somersetshire, situated on the south shore of Bristol Channel ab. 25 mi. NW of Taunton, ab. 168 mi. SW of London by rail. It is a former seaport, now used mainly by fishing boats. 7,400 (1951).

Mineola (min.ẹ.ō'lạ). Suburban village in SE New York, county seat of Nassau County, on Long Island. 14,831 (1950).

Mineola. City in NE Texas, in Wood County, E of Dallas: sawmills and railroad shops. 3,626 (1950).

Miner (mī'nẹr), Alonzo Ames. b. at Lempster, N.H., Aug. 17, 1814; d. June 14, 1895. American Universalist clergyman, active as an antislavery and total-abstinence lecturer. He was president (1862–74) of Tufts College, in Massachusetts.

Miner, William Harvey. b. at New Haven, Conn., March 5, 1877; d. Feb. 10, 1934. American writer. Author of The Iowa Indians (1911), Bananas, A Trip to the Tropics (1914), and History of the American Indians, North of Mexico (1917).

Mineral City (min'ẹ.rạl). A former name of Big Stone Gap.

Mineral del Monte (mē.nā.räl' del mōn'tā). City in E Mexico, in Hidalgo state, just E of Pachuca: noted silver-mining center. 13,536 (1940).

Mineral Point (min'ẹ.rạl). City in S Wisconsin, in Iowa County, SW of Madison: trading and shipping center for dairy products; formerly important for lead and zinc mining. 2,234 (1950).

Mineral Wells. City in N central Texas, in Palo Pinto County, ab. 40 mi. W of Fort Worth: health resort; manufactures of medicinal crystals. 7,801 (1950).

Minersville (mī'nẹrz.vil). Borough in E central Pennsylvania, in Schuylkill County, ab. 81 mi. NW of Philadelphia: anthracite coal mining; manufactures of clothing. It was settled c1793. Pop. 7,783 (1950).

Minerva (mi.nẹr'vạ). Village in E Ohio, in Carroll and Stark counties, ab. 15 mi. E of Canton: trading center for agricultural products; manufactures of pottery. It was settled in 1802, and incorporated in 1835. Pop. 3,280 (1950).

Minerva. In Roman mythology, one of the three chief divinities, the other two being Jupiter and Juno. The chief seat of the cult of all three was the great temple on the Capitoline Hill. Minerva was originally an ancient Italian goddess adopted from the Etruscans by the Romans. She was a goddess of artisans, a more important patronage in Etruria than in Rome. In Roman myth, she was the virgin daughter of Jupiter, the supreme god, and hence was identified, as the Romans came more and more under the influence of Hellenic culture, with the Greek Athena. Like Athena, Minerva was represented in art with a grave and majestic countenance, armed with helmet, shield, and spear, and wearing long full drapery, and on her breast the aegis.

Minervino Murge (mē.ner.vē'nō mör'jā). Town and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Bari, ab. 43 mi. W of Bari. Pop. of commune, 19,132 (1936); of town, 18,604 (1936).

Minervius (mi.nẹr'vi.us). See Schaidenreisser, Simon Felix.

Mines (mīnz), John Flavel [Pseudonym, Felix Oldboy.] b. at Paris, Jan. 27, 1835; d. at New York, Nov. 5, 1891. American writer. He wrote Heroes of the Last Lustre (1859), A Tour around New York (1892), and Walks in Our Churchyards (1893).

Mines, U.S. Bureau of. Unit of the national government established in 1910 for the purpose of carrying out studies and investigations of mine hazards to health and safety, and disseminating information servin r to prevent mine disasters resulting from explosions and other causes.

It also conducts researches in technology with a view to encouraging greater economy in production and consumption. The bureau was under the Department of the Interio from 1910 to 1925, under the Department of Commerce from 1925 to 1934, and thereafter again under the authority of the Department of the Interior.

Minetta (mi net'a). Flippant waiting-maid in Hannah Cowley's comedy A Bold Stroke for a Husband.

Mineur (mē.nėr'), Henri. b. March 7, 1899—. French astronomer, whose contributions have been in the field of celestial mechanics.

Ming (ming). Native Chinese dynasty which overthrew the Mongols in 1368 and ruled China until 1644, when the Manchu (Ch'ing) dynasty succeeded it. The city of Peiping (Peking) as we know it today was laid out by the third Ming emperor in 1403. It was the last great period of purely Chinese power. During the reign of the Ming rulers, European influence began to be felt in China; the Portuguese and the Jesuits obtained footholds, and Canton and Macao came under foreign sway.

Mingan Islands (ming'gan). Island group in E Quebec, Canada, along the N shore of the St. Lawrence River, N of Anticosti Island.

Minger (ming'ėr), Rudolf. b. at Mülchi, Switzerland, Nov. 13, 1881—. Swiss statesman. He was a member (1919–29) of the National Council and served (1929–40) on the Federal Council, of which he was president in 1935.

Minghetti (mēng.gāt'tē), Marco. b. at Bologna, Italy, Sept. 8, 1818; d. at Rome, Dec. 10, 1886. Italian statesman, political economist, and publicist. He became minister of the interior under Cavour in 1860, and retained the position, after Cavour's death, in the cabinet of Ricasoli; was minister of finance under Farini in 1862; and was premier (1863–64, 1873–76). Among his works is Dell' economia publica (On Public Economy, 1859).

Mingo, and Other Sketches in Black and White (ming'gō). Local-color sketches by Joel Chandler Harris, published in 1884.

Mingo Junction. City in E Ohio, in Jefferson County, on the Ohio River S of Steubenville, in a coal-mining region: steel mills. 4,464 (1950).

Mingotti (mēng.gôt'tē), Regina. [Maiden name, Valentini.] b. at Naples, Italy, c1725; d. at Neuburg, Germany, 1808. Italian soprano, a rival of Faustina Bordoni Hasse at Dresden. Trained by her husband, Pietro Mingotti, she performed at Dresden, Naples, London, and in Spain.

Mingrelia (min.grē'li.ą, ming-). [Russian, Megreliya.] Region and former principality, bordering on the Black Sea, now a part of the Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic, in SW U.S.S.R. Ancient Colchis was in this region. The principality became feudatory to Russia in 1804 and was incorporated with Russia in 1857.

Minh-huong (min'hwông'). In Indochina, persons of mixed Chinese and Vietnamese (Annamese) ancestry, who often form separate villages. They number ab. 80,000 and are particularly numerous in South Viet-Nam (Cochin-China).

Minho (mē'nyō). Northernmost province of Portugal, bounded by Spain on the N and NE, by Tráz-os-Montes e Alto Douro on the E, by Douro Litoral on the S, and by the Atlantic Ocean on the W. A large part of the Spanish border is formed by the Minho River. The province contains the districts of Viana do Castelo and Braga. It has forests and intensive agriculture. The chief products are wine, grain, and cork. Capital, Braga; area, 1,868 sq. mi.; pop. 741,510 (1940).

Minho River. [Spanish, Miño; Latin, Minius.] River which rises in NW Spain, forms part of the N boundary between Portugal and Spain, and flows into the Atlantic at the NW corner of Portugal. Total length, ab. 210 mi.

Minhow (min'hō'). See Foochow.

Minia (min'ya) or Mineh (mē'ne). See Minya.

Minianka (mē.nē.äng'kä). [Also, Bamana.] Northern subgroup of the Senufo, a Sudanic-speaking people of W Africa. They inhabit a region in SE French Sudan. Their population is estimated at ab. 130,000 (by M. Delafosse, Haut-Sénégal-Niger, 1912). They are not to be confused with the Mande-speaking Banmana, or Bambara, their neighbors to the W.

Minidoka Dam (min i.dō'ka). Irrigation dam in S Idaho, in the Snake River. It was completed in 1909, and forms a reservoir ab. 10 mi. long which supplies water for the irrigation of ab. 300 sq. mi. of farm land. Length, ab. 0.8 mi.

Minié (mē.nyā'), Claude Étienne. b. at Paris, 1814; d. 1879. French infantry officer, instructor in the military school at Vincennes. He was the inventor of the Minié rifle (1849), and of a bullet adapted to it.

Minimo (mē'nē.mō), Duca. Pseudonym of D'Annunzio, Gabriele.

Minims (min'imz). Order of monks, founded in the middle of the 15th century by Saint Francis of Paula, confirmed by Pope Sixtus IV, and again confirmed by Pope Alexander VI under the name of Ordo Minimorum Eremitarum S. Francisci de Paula (Order of the Least Hermits of Saint Francis of Paula). Members of this order, in addition to the usual Franciscan vows, were pledged to the observance of a perpetual Lent.

Minissais (min.i.sā'is). Indian name of Bedloe's Island.

Minister's Black Veil, The. Parable by Nathaniel Hawthorne, originally published (1836) in The Token and collected in Twice-Told Tales (1837).

Minister's Wooing, The. Novel by Harriet Beecher Stowe, published in 1859.

Minius (min'i.us). Latin name of the Minho River.

Miniver Cheevy (min'i.vėr chē'vi). Poem by Edwin Arlington Robinson, published in The Town Down the River (1910).

Min-Kong (min'kông'). See Min.

Minkowski (ming.kôf'skē), Hermann. b. at Alexoten, near Kaunas, in what is now Lithuania, June 22, 1864; d. at Göttingen, Germany, Jan. 12, 1909. German mathematician and scientist, noted especially for the "geometry of numbers," the concept of "convex body," the "Minkowski geometry," and "Minkowski's gravitational principle." He wrote also on quadratic forms, Diophantine analysis, capillarity, electrodynamics, and other aspects of pure and applied mathematics. He emigrated to Germany in 1872, studied at Königsberg and Berlin, and taught at the universities of Bonn, Zürich, and Göttingen. His best-known book is Raum und Zeit (1909), suggesting a four-dimensional world. He wrote also Geometrie der Zahlen (1896), Diophantische Approximationen (1907), and Zwei Abhandlungen über die Grundgleichungen der Electrodynamik (1910). His Gesammelte Abhandlungen appeared in two volumes in 1911.

Minkowski, Oskar. b. at Alexoten, near Kaunas, in what is now Lithuania, Jan. 13, 1858; d. at Fürstenberg Sanitarium, in Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Germany, June 18, 1931. German clinician. He studied the acetone bodies in diabetic urine (1884) and did pioneer work (1885) upon metabolism after excision of the liver. In 1889, with the assistance of J. von Mehring, he produced diabetes experimentally in dogs by extirpation of the pancreas. He described (with Chauffard, 1900) the congenital form of chronic hemolytic jaundice (Chauffard-Minkowski syndrome) and pointed out the possible pituitary origin of acromegaly (1887).

Minna von Barnhelm (min'ä fon bärn'helm). Comedy by Gotthold Ephraim Lessing, published in 1767. It is the first German national drama which deals with contemporary events, in this case with events growing out of the Seven Years' War.

Minne (mēn), Georges. b. at Ghent, Belgium, 1866; d. 1941. Belgian artist and sculptor. He studied at Ghent, Brussels, and Paris, where he worked under Rodin, and made his debut in 1889 as one of a group known as "the Twenty." Among his principal works are L'Homme à l'oeuvre, Mère et enfant, and La Fontaine des Eplorés, erected behind the parliament building at Brussels.

Minneapolis (min.ē.ap'ō.lis). City in E Minnesota, county seat of Hennepin County, on the Mississippi River at the St. Anthony Falls, above the confluence of the Minnesota and Mississippi rivers; twin city of St. Paul. It is the banking and wholesale center of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, and E Montana. It is the largest city in the state and one of the leading flour-milling centers of the U.S. Other manufactures include farm implements, machinery, paper bags, dairy products, clothing, chemicals, and electrical equipment. There are several small lakes within the city limits, and hundreds of lakes in the surrounding countryside, which attract summer visitors and create a tourist trade for the city. It is the seat of the University of Minnesota, Augsburg College and Theological Seminary, and several art and music schools. Minneapolis is located above the site of Fort Snelling, established in 1819. The community was incorporated in 1856. Pop. of city, 492,370 (1940), 521,718 (1950); of urbanized area (including St. Paul), 985,101 (1950).

Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. Orchestral ensemble established (1903) at Minneapolis, Minn., by Emil Oberhoffer, who was its conductor until 1921. Among his successors have been Verbrugghen (1923–31), Eugene Ormandy (1931–35), Dmitri Mitropoulos (1936–49), and Antal Dorati (1949 et seq.).

Minnehaha (min.ē.hä'hä), Falls of. Cascade in a small creek in the SE part of Minneapolis, Minn. Henry Wadsworth Longfellow gave the name Minnehaha to the principal female character of The Song of Hiawatha. Height, ab. 60 ft.

Minnekahta (min.ē.kä'tạ). Former name of Hot Springs, S.D.

Minnesingers (min'ē.sing.ėrz). [Eng. trans., "Love-Singers."] Class of German lyric poets and singers of the 12th and 13th centuries, so called because love was their chief theme. They were chiefly or exclusively men of noble descent: knights, nobles, princes, and even emperors. They sang their pieces to their own accompaniment on the viol, and often engaged in poetical contests for the gratification of princes and ladies of the court. Among the chief seats of the Minnesingers were Swabia and Austria, and the leading dialect used was the Swabian.

Minnesota (min.ē.sō'tạ). [Called the "Gopher State"; also, the "North Star State."] State of the N United States, bounded by the Canadian provinces of Manitoba and Ontario on the N, Lake Superior and Wisconsin on the E, Iowa on the S, and North Dakota and South Dakota on the W.

Population, Area, and Political Divisions. Minnesota is divided for administrative purposes into 87 counties. It sends nine representatives to Congress, and has 11 electoral votes. Leading cities are Duluth, Minneapolis, Rochester, St. Cloud, and St. Paul. Capital, St. Paul; area, 80,009 sq. mi. (84,068 sq. mi., including water, but not including water of the Great Lakes); pop. 2,982,483 (1950), an increase of 6.8 percent over that of 1940. The state ranks 11th in area, and 18th (on the basis of the 1950 census) in population.

Terrain and Climate. The surface is generally an undulating plain originally covered by prairie in the S and W, and by forest in the rest of the state. Two inconspicuous divides through the N and C section are sometimes known as the "Height of Land" and form the watersheds between the Mississippi, St. Lawrence, and Hudson Bay systems. The highest point in the state is located near the NE corner, in the hills N of Lake Superior, where there is an elevation of 2,230 ft. The chief rivers of the state are the Mississippi, which rises in Lake Itasca and flows generally SE, being joined by numerous tributaries including the St. Croix; the Red River of the North, which starts in the W and forms much of the W boundary as it flows N; and the Minnesota which traverses the S central part of the state, discharging into the Mississippi at Fort Snelling. There are more than 10,000 lakes in the state, the largest being Red Lake, Mille Lacs, and Leech Lake. Minnesota has very cold winters, and rather warm summers in which the nights are generally cool; the N part has colder and longer winters than the S.

Industry, Agriculture, and Trade. Minnesota is a leading agricultural state, with much closely allied industry. Corn, oats, wheat, flaxseed, honey, dairy products, hogs, poultry, and cattle are the leading agricultural products. With the help of its abundant water power and fertile soil, the state leads all others in the manufacture of flour and grist-mill products, with Minneapolis ranking as one of the largest flour-milling and grain-marketing centers in the world, as well as a transportation center. Meat packing is a large industry; the production of paper and paper boards and other lumber products is also large, as is that of linseed oil. St. Paul, twin city of Minneapolis, is a distributing, trading, railroad, and air center. Duluth ranks second only to New York in the U.S. as a harbor in tonnage moved; this consists almost entirely of one-way traffic in iron ore shipped from the Mesabi and neighboring ranges down the Great Lakes to the iron and steel mills. Mining is a great source of wealth, the state producing more than 70 percent of the nation's iron ore (1949). Building stone, gravel, sand, limestone, shale, and clay are also found. Annual income in the state from agriculture ranges as high as 1,400,000,000 dollars; from manufacturing, as high as 846 million dollars; from mining, as high as 325 million dollars.

History. French traders explored the state as early as the 1650's. Radisson, Groseilliers, Du Lhut, Hennepin, and Le Sueur all visited the area. The W portion was ceded (1762) to Spain; reverted later to France before going to the U.S. in the Louisiana Purchase of 1803. The E part, ceded (1763) to Great Britain, was acquired (1783) by the U.S. and later became (1787) part of the Northwest Territory. The first U.S. settlement was made (1820) at Fort Snelling. St. Paul was settled not long afterward. After periods of inclusion in various other territories, Minnesota was organized as a territory in 1849, and included territory now a part of North Dakota and South Dakota. The state was admitted (May 11, 1858) to the Union (as the 32nd state). The state was harassed by the Sioux Indians for some time, a massacre of close to 400 settlers occurring in 1862.

Culture. Minnesota is rather closely balanced between urban and rural development, 54.5 percent of its 1950 population being classed as urban. A large part of the population is of German, Irish, and Scandinavian descent. St. Paul and Minneapolis are great cultural and educational centers with a particular interest in music. At Minneapolis are the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, the Minneapolis Institute of Arts, the Minneapolis School of Art, and the Walker Art Center. The Mayo Clinic at Rochester, SE of St. Paul, is an internationally known medical center affiliated with the University of Minnesota. Among the institutions of higher learning are the state-supported university, at Minneapolis, St. Paul, and Duluth; Hamline University, Macalester College, St. Thomas College, and St. Catherine's College (all recognized private schools), at St. Paul; and St. Olaf College, at Northfield, widely known for its college choir. The state motto is L'Étoile du Nord, meaning "The Star of the North." It is likewise known as the "Land of Ten Thousand Lakes." The state flower is the moccasin flower.

Minnesota River. River in S central Minnesota, rising in lakes on the South Dakota border and joining the Mississippi ab. 7 mi. SW of St. Paul. Length, ab. 332 mi.

Minnetonka (min.ẹ.tong'kạ), Lake. Resort lake ab. 12 mi. W of Minneapolis. Area, ab. 20 sq. mi.

Minnewit (min'ẹ.wit), Peter. See Minuit or Minnewit, Peter.

Minni (min'ī). In Jer. li. 27, the name of a tribe inhabiting ancient Armenia, mentioned in the cuneiform inscriptions.

Minnigerode (min'i.gẹ.rōd), Meade. b. at London, June 19, 1887—. American writer. Author of Laughing House (1920), The Big Year (1921), Oh, Susanna (1922), The Fabulous Forties (1924), Some American Ladies (1926), Presidential Years (1928), Jefferson, Friend of France (1928), The Magnificent Comedy (1931), Marie Antoinette's Henchman (1936), Black Forest (1937), The Terror of Peru (1940), and other books.

Miño (mē'nyō). Spanish name of the Minho River.

Minodunum (min.ọ.dū'num). Latin name of Moudon, Switzerland.

Minooka (mi.nō'kạ). Unincorporated community in NE Pennsylvania, in Lackawanna County: residential community, in the urbanized area of S ranton. Under the new urban definition established for use in the 1950 census it was counted with adjoining urban communities; the last official enumeration was 2,828 (1940).

Minor (mē'nôr), Jakob. b. 1855; d. 1912. Austrian historian of literature, professor at the University of Vienna. He prepared numerous critical editions (Novalis, Ferdinand von Saar, August Wilhelm and Friedrich Schlegel, Arnim, Tieck, Wackenroder, and others), and wrote a biography of Schiller (2 vols., incomplete, 1889–90), a commentary on Goethe's Faust, Part I (2 vols., 1901), and Neuhochdeutsche Metrik (1893).

Minor (mī'nor), Lucian. b. in Louisa County, Va., April 24, 1802; d. at Williamsburg, Va., July 8, 1858.

American lawyer, writer, professor, and temperance advocate. He was an officer, editorial manager, and lecturer for the Sons of Temperance of the United States, and prepared legislative papers for the Virginia prohibitory movement of the 1840's and '50's. His writings include "Letters from New England," published in the Southern Literary Messenger (November, 1834–April, 1835), and Reasons for Abolishing the Liquor Traffic (1853), which had a circulation of 30,000 copies.

Minor, The. Comedy by Samuel Foote, produced at Dublin in 1760.

Minor, Virginia Louisa. b. in Goochland County, Va., March 27, 1824; d. Aug. 14, 1894. American suffragist. A founder and first president (1867) of the Woman Suffrage Association of Missouri, she (with Francis Minor, her lawyer husband) claimed woman suffrage to be guaranteed by the national constitution, but was denied (1872) the vote. The Minors brought suit, but received an adverse decision from the U.S. Supreme Court (Minor v. Happersett, 1875).

Minorca (mi.nôr'kạ). [Spanish, Menorca.] Second largest island in the Balearic Islands, Spain, in the Mediterranean Sea ab. 25 mi. NE of the island of Majorca. It has great natural beauty. The chief crops are grain, early vegetables, and fruits. There are fisheries along the coast. The island has numerous caves and prehistoric monuments. It was occupied by the British during the War of the Spanish Succession and held by them from 1708 to 1782 and from 1798 to 1802. Chief town, Mahón; area, ab. 270 sq. mi.; pop. 43,023 (1940).

Minories (mī'nọr.iz), the. Parish in London, on the left bank of the Thames, not far from the Tower. In old London, the house of the sisters of the Franciscan order without the walls at Oldgate was called the Abbey of Saint Clare. The nuns were called Poor Clares or Minoresses, whence the name Minories.

Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wallace 162 (1875) (mī'nọr; hap'ẽr.set). U.S. Supreme Court decision holding that the Constitution does not confer the right of suffrage on anyone, and that a state law conferring suffrage on men alone was valid. The case concerned Virginia Minor, a woman citizen of Missouri, a provision of whose constitution confined the right of suffrage to men alone, and involved the interpretation of the relation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the right to vote, with particular reference to the privileges and immunities clause of that amendment.

Minos (mī'nos, -nọs). In Greek legend, a king of Crete and lawgiver of that island; after his death a judge in the lower world. Minos was the son of Zeus and Europa, and husband of Pasiphae, who, enamored of a bull which Minos refused to sacrifice to Poseidon, conceived and bore the Minotaur. Minos had the Labyrinth built to contain the monster.

Minot (mī'nọt). City in N North Dakota, county seat of Ward County, on the Souris River; shipping point for lignite and for dairy and poultry products. It is the seat of a state teachers college. Settled in 1885, it was incorporated in 1887. Pop. 22,032 (1950).

Minot, Charles Sedgwick. b. at Boston, Dec. 23, 1852; d. Nov. 19, 1914. American biologist, professor (1892 et seq.) of comparative anatomy in the Harvard Medical School. He was the inventor of the rotary automatic microtome.

Minot, George Richards. b. at Boston, Dec. 2, 1885; d. at Brookline, Mass., Feb. 25, 1950. American physician. He was professor of medicine (1928–48) at Harvard. He shared the Nobel prize in physiology and medicine (1934) with William P. Murphy and George H. Whipple for work on liver treatment of the anemias. Coauthor with William B. Castle of Pathological Physiology and Clinical Description of the Anemias (1936).

Minot, Laurence. b. c1300; d. c1352. English soldier and war poet, author of 11 poems in the Northumbrian dialect, featuring the use of alliteration. These battle songs deal with the period 1333–52, the first poem glorying in the English victory at Halidon Hill, and the last celebrating the capture of Guines. He was intensely patriotic and loyal to Edward III, whose victories in Scotland, France, and Flanders inspired him. Minot's poetry was discovered by Thomas Tyrwhitt, Chaucerian scholar, and first published (1795) by Joseph Ritson, exposer of literary forgeries, as Poems on Interesting Events in the Reign of King Edward III

Minotaur (min'ọ.tôr). In Greek mytho'ogy, a monster having a human body and the head of a bull; the offspring of Pasiphae (wife of Minos) and a bull. He was confined in the Cretan Labyrinth and fed with human flesh; he devoured the seven youths and seven maidens whom Minos compelled the Athenians to send him periodically as a tribute. The Minotaur was killed by the hero Theseus, a member of the last company so sent, who escaped from the Labyrinth by the aid of a clew of thread devised by Ariadne, daughter of Minos.

Minots Ledge (mī'nọts). Reef near the entrance of Massachusetts Bay, ab. 15 mi. SE of Boston. It has a lighthouse.

Minsheu (min'shö), John. fl. early in the 17th century. English lexicographer. He lived chiefly at London, in great poverty, visiting Oxford and Cambridge to collect material. He wrote a Dictionary in Spanish and English (1599 and 1623), A Spanish Grammar (1599), both founded on the works of Richard Percival, and a large English dictionary, Ductor in Linguas, or the Guide into Tongues (1617, 1625, 1627), containing equivalent words in 11 languages.

Minsk (minsk). Former guberniya (government) in W Russia, which previously formed part of the ancient Lithuania. It was surrounded by the governments of Vilna, Vitebsk, Mogilev, Chernigov, Kiev, Volhynia, and Grodno. It had a generally flat surface, and extensive marshes. It is now incorporated into the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic of the U.S.S.R. Area, ab. 35,293 sq. mi.

Minsk. City in the U.S.S.R., capital of the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, situated on the main railroad line between Moscow and Warsaw, Poland, ab. 430 mi. SW of Moscow. It is in a region producing potatoes, rye, flax, and livestock. It has food-processing, auto, tractor, linen textile, and leather industries. Minsk is the seat of a university. The city existed in the 11th century; it passed to Lithuania in the 13th century, thence to Poland, and to Russia in 1793. It was taken by Napoleon in 1812. In World War II it fell to the attacking Germans on June 27, 1941, and was retaken by the Russians on July 3, 1944. The city suffered devastation from artillery and air bombardment, but has been largely reconstructed since the end of World War II. 238,772 (1939).

Mińsk Mazowiecki (mēnsk' mä.zô.vyets'kē). [Russian, Novo Minsk.] Town in E central Poland, in the województwo (province) of Warszawa, ab. 23 mi. SE of Warsaw; summer resort, known for its castle. 10,023 (1946).

Minsky (min'ski), N. [Pseudonym of Nikolay Maksimovich Vilenkin.] b. at Glubokoye, Vilna, Lithuania, 1855; d. 1937. Russian-Jewish journalist, philosopher, and poet, who became an émigré in 1905 and settled in France. He was one of the initiators of the modernist trend in Russian poetry.

Minstrel, The. Poem by James Beattie, published in 1771–74.

Mintaka (min'tạ.kạ). Second-magnitude star δ Orionis, the westernmost in the giant's belt.

Minto (min'tō), Earl of. See Elliot-Murray-Kynynmond.

Minto, 3rd Baronet of. Title of Elliot, Sir Gilbert (1722–77).

Minto, Lord. Title of Elliot, Sir Gilbert (1651–1718).

Minto, William. b. in Alford parish, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, Oct. 10, 1845; d. at Aberdeen, Scotland, March 1, 1893. Scottish man of letters, editor (1874–78) of the London Examiner, and professor of logic and English literature in the University of Aberdeen from 1880. He wrote a Manual of English Prose Literature (1872), Characteristics of English Poets from Chaucer to Shirley (1874), and several novels.

Minto Lake. Lake in N Quebec, Canada, near the E shore of Hudson Bay. It is drained by the Leaf River into Ungava Bay. It was named after Gilbert John Elliot-Murray-Kynynmond, 4th Earl of Minto, governor general (1898–1904) of Canada. Area, ab. 485 sq. mi.

Minton (mint'ọn), Sherman. b. at Georgetown, Ind., Oct. 20, 1890— . American politician and lawyer. By appointment of Governor Paul V. McNutt, he served as public counselor of Indiana (1933–34), acquiring a reputation by his able conduct of public utility rate cases. In 1934 he was elected to the U.S. Senate. He supported virtually all of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal measures, including the proposals for reorganization of the Supreme Court. He opposed the President, however, in the matter of a bonus for World War I veterans, and in the matter of extension of low interest rates on loans to farmers (both of which Roosevelt opposed). In May, 1941, he was named a judge of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, on which he served until, by nomination of President Truman, he was elevated to the Supreme Court of the U.S., as an associate justice, in October, 1949.

Minturn (min'tėrn), Robert Bowne. b. at New York, Nov. 16, 1805; d. there, Jan. 9, 1866. American shipowner and merchant. His firm, Grinnell, Minturn and Company, owned 50 ships (including the clipper Flying Cloud) in trade chiefly with London and Liverpool. He aided in the founding of Saint Luke's Hospital and the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor. Although initially a Whig, Minturn became a Republican and was first president of the Union League Club.

Minturnae (min.tėr'nē). In ancient geography, a town in Latium, Italy, situated near the mouth of the Liris River, near what is now Minturno.

Minturno (mēn.tōr'nō). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Latium, in the province of Latina, situated on the Gulf of Gaeta, near the mouth of the Garigliano River (the lower course of the Liri), NW of Naples. The site of the ancient town of Minturnae is nearby. Considerable damage was suffered during World War II by some buildings of tourist interest. Pop. of commune, 13,650 (1936); of town, 3,720 (1936).

Minucius Felix (mi.nū'shus fē'liks), Marcus. fl. 2nd or 3rd century A.D. Roman advocate and Christian apologist, possibly a contemporary of Marcus Aurelius. His dialogue Octavius is the earliest extant work of Latin Christian literature. The scene of the conversation is laid at Ostia, and the speakers are Caecilius Natalis, Octavius Januarius, and the author. Caecilius attacks Christianity on various grounds, and Octavius defends it; at the conclusion Caecilius admits that he is beaten in the argument, and the author, who acts as umpire, declares that a decision is unnecessary.

Minufiya (mē.nō.fē'yą). Province of Egypt, in the delta of the Nile River, in the apex formed by the Damietta and Rosetta branches. Capital, Shibin el Kom; settled area, ab. 613 sq. mi.; pop. 1,168,777 (1947).

Minuit (min'ū.it) or Minnewit (min'ę.wit), Peter. b. at Wesel, Netherlands, then in the Duchy of Cleve, 1580; d. at sea, 1638. Dutch colonial administrator, director general of New Netherland and governor of New Sweden, noted for his purchase of Manhattan island from the Indians. Sailing for New Netherland in 1625, he arrived at Manhattan aboard the vessel Het Meeuwtje in 1626. Shortly after his arrival he became director general of the colony, in which capacity he bought Manhattan island from the Indians for trinkets costing 60 guilders (24 dollars). Recalled in 1631 by the Amsterdam Chamber of the West India Company, Minuit was dismissed after an examination lasting several months. In the fall of 1637 Minuit led an expedition from Göteborg for the purpose of founding a Swedish colony on Delaware Bay. Minuit reached the mouth of the Delaware in March, 1638, and bought a tract of land on the right bank of the river, calling the area New Sweden. He built Fort Christina (named for Queen Christina of Sweden) on the site of what is now Wilmington. He died off the coast of the island of St. Christopher during a hurricane.

Minusinsk (mē.nō.sēnsk'). Town in the U.S.S.R., in the Krasnoyarsk Territory of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, on the upper Yenisei River, in a coal-mining region. It has flour mills and is a river port. The vicinity is noted for archaeological finds. The Minusinsk culture, dating from c700 B.C. to the beginning of the Christian era, is known primarily from enormous burial mounds. Extensive iron metallurgy has been found. Domestic animals and agriculture with irrigation were known in this culture. 23,500 (1933).

Minuteman. Name applied to a member of the Massachusetts militia after its reorganization in September, 1774, when minuteman regiments (in readiness "at a minute's warning") were established following the elimination of those who remained loyal to the British crown. Minutemen took part in the battles of Concord and Lexington, where statues commemorate their deeds.

Minutoli (mē.nō'tō.lē), Heinrich. [Title, Baron Menu von Minutoli.] b. at Geneva, Switzerland, May 12, 1772; d. at Lausanne, Switzerland, Sept. 16, 1846. German archaeologist and traveler. His chief work is Reise zum Tempel des Jupiter Ammon und nach Oberägypten (Journey to the Temple of Jupiter Ammon and to Upper Egypt, 1824).

Minutoli, Baron Julius von. b. at Berlin, Aug. 30, 1804; d. near Shiraz, Persia, Nov. 5, 1860. Prussian administrator, diplomat, and author; son of Heinrich Minutoli.

Minya (min'yą). Province of Egypt, in NE Africa, occupying land on both sides of the Nile River in the vicinity of the city of Minya, its capital, and situated between the provinces of Beni Suef and Asyut. Capital, Minya; settled area, ab. 782 sq. mi.; pop. 1,056,466 (1947).

Minya. [Also: El Minya, Minia, Minieh.] Town in NE Africa, Egypt, on the W bank of the Nile River, ab. 153 mi. S of Cairo by rail. It is the capital of the province of Minya and the site of the two oldest sugar factories in Egypt. 69,667 (1947).

Minyae (min'yē, min'i.ē). In Greek legend, a prehistoric people, descendants of Minyas, who founded Orchomenus in Boeotia, and there established his family. Most of the Argonauts were his descendants.

Minya Gongkar (min'yą gông'kär). See under Great Snowy Mountains.

Minyas (min'i.ąs). In Greek mythology, a king of Orchomenus in Boeotia, and eponymous ancestor of the Minyae. He was famous for his great wealth. His three daughters considered themselves superior to the ecstasies of the Bacchic revelers, and sat quietly at home. In time, however, the frenzy possessed them also; they found that they craved human flesh, and cast lots as to whose child should be sacrificed. This is the basis for the assumption that in Orchomenus the human sacrifice was always chosen from the royal family.

Miocene Period (mī'ō.sēn). See table at end of Vol. III.

Miomandre (myo.mäńdr), Francis de. b. at Tours, France, 1880—. French poet, novelist, critic, and translator. He is known for such novels as Baroque (1930) and for his translations from the Spanish of Unamuno and others.

Miomba (mē.ōm'bä). See Yombe.

Mionnet (myo.ne), Théodore Edme. b. at Paris, Sept. 2, 1770; d. there, May 7, 1842. French numismatist.

Miot de Melito (myō dę me.lē.tō), André François, Comte. b. at Versailles, France, Feb. 9, 1762; d. at Paris, Jan. 5, 1841. French diplomat, politician, and author. He was secretary-general for foreign affairs during the French Revolution and, after serving in several diplomatic and military posts, entered Joseph Bonaparte's service in Naples and Spain. He made translations of the works of Herodotus (1822) and Diodorus (1835–38).

Miquel (mē.kel'), Friedrich Anton Wilhelm. b. at Neuenhaus, Hanover, Germany, Oct. 24, 1811; d. at Utrecht, Netherlands, Jan. 23, 1871. German botanist and physician.

Miquel, Johannes von. b. at Neuenhaus, Hanover, Germany, Feb. 21, 1829; d. at Frankfort on the Main, Germany, Sept. 8, 1901. German statesman, converted to extreme socialism by the writings of Karl Marx, but later persuaded to modify his views. He was a National Liberal member of the Prussian house of deputies from 1867 to 1882, when he entered the upper chamber. He was a member (1887 et seq.) of the Reichstag. As Prussian minister of finance (1890–1901), he reformed the Prussian system of taxation.

Miquelon (mik'ę.lon; French, mēk.lôṅ). Larger of the two islands which make up the French colony of St. Pierre and Miquelon, off the S coast of Newfoundland. The chief industry is cod fishing. Area, 83 sq. mi.; pop. 550 (1945).

Mira (mē'rä). Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Venezia, ab. 11 mi. W of Venice. The Palazzo dei Leoni was slightly damaged during World War II. Pop. of commune, 21,130 (1936); of town, 4,684 (1936).

Mira (mī'ra, mē'ra). Remarkable variable star o Ceti, which is sometimes brighter than the second magnitude and sometimes fainter than the tenth, though its brightness at maximum now seldom exceeds the fourth magnitude; its period is about 11 months. It was discovered by David Fabricius in 1596 and was the first variable star to be discovered.

Mirabeau (mir'ą.bō; French, mē.rà.bō), Marquis de. [Title of Victor Riqueti or Riquetti.] b. in Provence, France, Oct. 14, 1715; d. at Argenteuil, France, July 11, 1789. French political economist; father of Honoré Gabriel Riqueti, Comte de Mirabeau. He was sometimes called "The Friend of Man" ("L'ami des hommes"), from the title of one of his works (L'Ami des hommes ou traité de la population, 1756). Author also of Testament politique (1747) and Théorie de l'impôt (1760).

Mirabeau, Comte de. [Title of Honoré Gabriel Riqueti or Riquetti.] b. at Bignon, near Nemours, France, March 9, 1749; d. at Paris, April 2, 1791. French revolutionary orator and statesman; son of Victor Riqueti, Marquis de Mirabeau. He entered (1767) the army, served in Corsica, and rose to the rank of captain of dragoons. His escapades, in which his success in amorous intrigue was not hampered by his disfigurement by smallpox at the age of three, caused his father to have him imprisoned by lettre de cachet. He became reconciled with his father and married (1772) according to his father's wishes, but he soon spent the better part of his wife's fortune and again was imprisoned, this time in the Château d'If, near Marseilles. He was moved to the castle of Joux, but, enjoying comparative liberty, escaped (1775) from Pontarlier, nearby, with Mme. de Monnier (Sophie in his notorious letters to her). They went to Holland, where he was arrested (1777); he then spent 42 months in prison at Vincennes. Up to the time of his release, he had written essays and pamphlets, translated English and German books, and kept up a correspondence with Sophie, to whom he dedicated his Erotica biblion and other works. To the early period of his life belong the Essai sur le despotisme and Essai sur les lettres de cachet. After traveling in Switzerland, he went to London (1784–85) and then to Berlin (1785–86). From here he wrote home a series of official reports, Histoire secrète de la cour de Berlin (1789), and he also gathered materials for his De la monarchie prussienne sous Frédéric le Grand (1788). The result of these writings was to alienate the opinion of those in power in France and to build at the same time his reputation as a scholar. When the Estates General was called (1789), Mirabeau, rejected by the nobility, was elected delegate of the third estate from Aix. His ability as an orator almost immediately made him a political power and for the next two years he was the virtual leader of the French Revolution. Mirabeau was however a moderate, and everything he did tended to moderate the position of the radicals and to make of the revolution a movement to establish a constitutional monarchy rather than to sweep away the institution of monarchy. He attempted to obtain a ministry for the crown that would include all the most important men in France at the time, but he was forestalled when the Assembly voted that no member of that body might become a minister of the crown. In 1790 Mirabeau became president of the Jacobin Club. He was often defeated in his moderating attempts, but he spoke ably on every question before the Assembly and sometimes carried the day. He was able, for example, to get the Assembly to vote the king's control of questions of peace and war. From the middle of May, 1790, Mirabeau probably was in the service of the king, virtually the king's chief minister, and was paid by the court, but his honesty was such that this did not influence his stand on the various questions that arose. He was elected (1791) president of the National Assembly but he died soon afterward of the results of his youthful debauchery.

Mirabeau, Vicomte de. [Title of André Boniface Louis Riqueti (or Riquetti); called Mirabeau-Tonneau, meaning "Mirabeau the Barrel," on account of his size.] b. at Bignon, near Nemours, France, 1754; d. at Freiburg im Breisgau, Germany, in August, 1792. French royalist deputy to the National Assembly; son of Victor Riqueti, Marquis de Mirabeau. He was with the French forces in America during the Revolutionary War. His violent royalism caused him to emigrate (c1790).

Mirabeau, Comtesse de. [Maiden name, Marie de Gonneville; pseudonyms: Vicomte de Flagy, de Chut, Zut, Nick, Shocking, Jack Frank.] b. at Nancy, France, 1827; d. at Cosseville, France, 1914. French novelist; mother of the novelist Gyp (Comtesse de Martel de Janville). Author, under many pseudonyms, of a large amount of light fiction.

Mirabeau, Sibylle Gabrielle Marie Antoinette de Riquetti de. See Martel de Janville, Comtesse de.

Mirabel or Mirabell (mir'ą.bel). Principal character in John Fletcher's play The Wild-Goose Chase. He is a libertine and fashionable rake, gaining his title of "wild goose" from his successful evasion of the marriage noose.

Mirabel or Mirabell. In William Congreve's comedy The Way of the World, a brilliant and witty fine gentleman.

Mirabel, Old. In George Farquhar's comedy The Inconstant, a peevish old man with a fondness for his son.

Mirabel, Tommy. Son of Old Mirabel; "the inconstant" in Farquhar's play of that name. He is a gay and generous fine gentleman, but unstable in his affections.

Mirabella (mir.ą.bel'ą). Fair maiden, in Edmund Spenser's Faerie Queene, who had scorned many lovers. She was sentenced in Cupid's court to ride on a wretched jade, "accompanied by a fool, till she had saved as many lovers as she had slain."

Mirabilis (mi.rab'i.lis), Doctor. See Bacon, Roger.

Mirach or Mirak (mī'rak, mē'rak). Ordinary name of the second-magnitude star β Andromedae. The name is also applied to the third-magnitude star ε Boötis, which is more usually known as Izar.

Miracle on Sinai (sī'nā.ī, -nī). Satirical novel by Sir Osbert Sitwell, published in 1933.

Miraflores (mē.rä.flō'räs). Modern residential quarter of Lima, Peru, on the Pacific coast ab. 6 mi. S of the city center. Here the Peruvians established their last line of defense against the Chileans, and were defeated after a bloody battle on Jan. 15, 1881.

Miraflores, Marquis of. [Title of Manuel de Pando.] b. at Madrid, Dec. 24, 1792; d. there, March 17, 1872. Spanish diplomat, politician, and political writer.

Miramas (mē.rà.mà). Town in SE France, in the department of Bouches-du-Rhône, situated N of the Étang de Berre, between Marseilles and Arles. It is an industrial town. 6,594 (1946).

Mirambo (mē.räm'bō). d. 1885. Chief of the Nyamwezi, E Africa, who rose from the rank of a common porter to that of a powerful chief and conqueror.

Miramichi Bay (mir"ą.mi.shē'). Bay forming an arm of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, indenting the E coast of New Brunswick. Length, ab. 20 mi.

Miramichi River. River in E central New Brunswick, Canada, which empties into Miramichi Bay. Length, 135 mi.

Miramion (mē.rà.myôñ), Madame de. [Maiden name, Marie Bonneau.] b. at Paris, 1629; d. there, 1696. Frenchwoman noted for her charitable enterprises. After an unhappy youth, her husband of one year dying when she was 17, she founded the House of Refuge, the establishment of Ste.-Pélagie, and the original community of 12 girls which became later the Congrégation des Miramionnes. She became the superior, and left her great fortune to this and other benevolent institutions.

Miramón (mē.rä.mōn'), Miguel. b. at Mexico City, Sept. 29, 1832; d. at Querétaro, Mexico, June 19, 1867. Mexican general. He was prominent on the side of the reactionists (1856–58), succeeded Félix Zuloaga as president of that faction (Feb. 2, 1859), and during the succeeding two years of the War of the Reform spent much of the time in the field against Benito Juárez and his adherents. He was eventually defeated near Mexico City, on Dec. 22, 1860, and fled from the country. Maximilian, to whom he adhered, made him grand marshal and minister to Berlin. He returned to Mexico in 1866, became one of Maximilian's most trusted generals, and was captured and shot with him at Querétaro.

Miranda (mē.ran'dà). State in N Venezuela, bordered on the NE by the Caribbean Sea, on the N by the Distrito Federal (Federal District), on the SW by Aragua, and on the S by Guarico and Anzoategui. The state is mountainous and has one principal lowland, the valley of the Río Tuy. Coffee and cacao are the chief commercial crops. Capital, Los Teques; area, ab. 3,070 sq. mi.; pop. 277,761 (1950).

Miranda (mi.ran'dạ). Fifth satellite of Uranus, discovered by G. P. Kuiper Feb. 15, 1948.

Miranda. In Shakespeare's play The Tempest, the daughter of Prospero. She is loved by Ferdinand.

Miranda. In Susannah Centlivre's comedy The Busybody, an heiress.

Miranda (mē.rän'dä), Francisco Antonio Gabriel. b. at Caracas, Venezuela, c1750; d. at Cádiz, Spain, July 14, 1816. Spanish-American patriot. He was an officer in the Spanish army (1773–82), and subsequently served with the French in the North American Revolutionary War. He was in St. Petersburg, where he received a pension from Catherine II, fought in the French republican army as a general of division (1792–93), and after the battle of Neerwinden, despite his warning to the authorities of Dumouriez's impending desertion, in the latter year was accused before the Revolutionary tribunal, was acquitted but imprisoned, and eventually escaped to England and the U.S. He spent many years in scheming for the liberation of Spanish South America, and made an unsuccessful descent on the coast of Venezuela in 1806, with the design of leading a revolt. After the revolution of 1810 he returned to Venezuela, was made commander of the patriot army, and in April, 1812, was made dictator. The great earthquake of March 26, 1812, left the country impoverished, and was regarded by many as a sign of divine wrath: as a consequence the royalists gained ground, and on July 25 Miranda signed a treaty which gave up the country to them. He was arrested soon after, sent to Spain, and died in captivity. Miranda's influence on the Spanish-American revolution was very great, but mainly indirect, through the secret societies which he established, and through his influence with European statesmen.

Miranda (mē.run'dạ), Francisco de Sá de. See Sá de Miranda, Francisco de.

Miranda (mē.rän'dä), Juan Carreño de. See Carreño de Miranda, Juan.

Miranda de Ebro (mē.rän'dä dā ā'ʙrō). Town in N Spain, in the province of Burgos, on the Ebro River ab. 36 mi. NE of Burgos: railroad shops, flour mills; cattle, wine, and grain markets. There are a number of old churches and convents. 15,116 (1940).

Mirandola (mē.rän'dō.lä). Town and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Emilia-Romagna, in the province of Modena, ab. 18 mi. NE of Modena. It was once the capital of a duchy belonging to the Pico family. Francesco Maria, the last duke, sold it to Modena in 1710. Some damage was suffered by the Church of the Gesù during World War II. Pop. of commune, 22,472 (1936); of town, 6,171 (1936).

Mirandola, Count of. See Pico della Mirandola, Giovanni.

Miranha (mē.rän'hä). See Boro.

Mirano (mē.rä'nō). Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Venezia, W of Venice. Pop. of commune, 15,354 (1936); of town, 2,939 (1936).

Mirat or Miraṭh (mē'rạt). See Meerut.

Mirbeau (mēr.bō), Octave Henri Marie. b. at Trévières, France, Feb. 16, 1850; d. at Paris, Feb. 15, 1917. French journalist, critic, and author. He founded the Paris-Midi, and, with others, Les Grimaces, a satirical journal. A naturalist, he was much read because of his advocacy of important social reforms. Author of the plays Les Mauvais Bergers (1897), and of the celebrated indictment of modern business Les Affaires sont les affaires (1903). Among his other works are Lettres de la chaumière (1886), Le Calvaire (1886), Sébastien Roch (1890), Le Jardin des supplices (1899), Les Mémoires d'une femme de chambre (1901), Les Vingt-et-un Jours d'un neurasthénique (1902), and the plays Le Portefeuille (1902) and Farces et moralités (1904).

Mirbel (mēr.bel), Charles François Brisseau de. b. at Paris, March 27, 1776; d. near Paris, Sept. 12, 1854. French botanist. Among his works are Traité d'anatomie et de physiologie végétale (1802) and Éléments de physiologie végétale et de botanique (1815).

Mirecourt (mēr.kör). Town in E France, in the department of Vosges, ab. 27 mi. S of Nancy. It has long-established manufactures of musical instruments, lace, and embroidery. 5,275 (1946).

Mirecourt, Eugène de. [Pseudonym of Charles Jean Baptiste Jacquot.] b. at Mirecourt, France, Nov. 19, 1812; d. in Tahiti, Feb. 13, 1880. French novelist and miscellaneous writer. Among his romances are Les Confessions de Marion Delorme (1848), Mémoires de Ninon de Lenclos (1852), and La Marquise de Courcelles (1859).

Mireille (mē.rey'). Opera in five acts by Charles Gounod, with a libretto by Michel Carré, produced in 1864. It was taken from Frédéric Mistral's poem Mirèio.

Mirèio (mē.rā'yō). Poem by Frédéric Mistral, published (1859) in the Provençal dialect with a French translation.

Mirfak (mēr'fak). Second-magnitude star α Persei; often called Algenib, and sometimes Alchemb.

Mirfield (mēr'fēld). Urban district in N central England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, situated on the river Calder, ab. 5 mi. NE of Huddersfield, ab. 186 mi. N of London by rail. 11,885 (1951).

Mirgorod (mēr'gọ.rọt). Town in the U.S.S.R., in the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, ab. 100 mi. W of Kharkov: food-processing industry. 15,027 (1937).

Miriam (mir'i.ạm). Hebrew prophetess, sister of Moses and Aaron. She is represented as giving a response to the song of Moses sung by the Israelites at the Red Sea. Ex. xv. 20.

Miriam. Woman of warm and passionate nature and mysterious origin and powers in The Marble Faun (1860) by Nathaniel Hawthorne. She sanctions the crime which Donatello commits, and in so doing binds herself to him.

Miriam. One of the heroines of D. H. Lawrence's autobiographical novel Sons and Lovers (1913).

Mirim (mē.rēn'), Lake. [Portuguese, Lagoa Mirim; Spanish, Laguna Merín.] Lake near the Atlantic Ocean in NE Uruguay and S Brazil, draining NE into the Lagoa dos Patos, in the state of Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil. Length, ab. 108 mi.

Miro (mē'rō). See Lango.

Miró (mē.rō'), Esteban Rodríguez. b. in Catalonia, Spain, 1774; d. in Spain, 1795. Spanish governor of Louisiana (1785–91), accused of making a 2,000-dollar yearly profit by the purchase of Kentucky tobacco through an intrigue arranged with an American, James Wilkinson. Returning to Spain, he exonerated himself of several alleged swindles, including the Wilkinson affair.

Miró, Joan. b. at Montroig, Spain, April 20, 1893—. Spanish surrealist painter, considered one of the leaders of contemporary art. He studied at the Academy of Fine Arts at Barcelona from 1907 to 1910, but was forced to give up painting for two years because of difficulties with his parents. From 1912 to 1915 he studied at the Academy Gali at Barcelona; he had his first exhibit in 1918. The following year he went to Paris, and was associated with the dada group there. In 1924 he was allied with the surrealists and exhibited with them, but he has always maintained his independence. For the Paris Exposition of 1937 he painted a large mural decoration. Among his more important works are Landscape with Olive Trees, Nude with Mirror, Self-Portrait, Catalan Landscape, Portrait of a Spanish Dancer, The Farm, The Farmer's Wife, Dutch Interior, In Reverse, Maternity, The Harlequin's Carnival, Person Throwing Stone at a Bird, Dog Barking at the Moon, Rope and Personages, Still Life with Old Shoe, Object, Relief Construction, Head of a Man, many Compositions, designs for the ballet Jeux des Enfants, and illustrations for many books.

Mirón (mē.rōn'), Salvador Díaz. See Díaz Mirón, Salvador.

Mironescu (mē.rō.nes'kō), Gheorghe. b. in Rumania, 1874—. Rumanian scholar and political leader, premier (1930–31), and foreign minister (1928–31, 1932–33).

Mirror for Magistrates, The. Compilation of poems undertaken by William Baldwin with aid from George Ferrers and others. It was begun and partly printed in 1555, but was stopped by the lord chancellor, Stephen Gardiner. In 1559, after Elizabeth's accession, it was licensed and first issued. It then contained 19 metrical tragedies, or biographies, of men in high place who had come to violent ends, and was an English sequel to John Lydgate's Falls of Princes (from Boccaccio). It was republished in 1563, 1574, 1578, and 1587, each time with additions. The "Induction" and "Complaint of Buckingham" which were contributed by Thomas Sackville, Lord Buckhurst, to the edition of 1559, but not published till 1563, are usually considered the best poems in the compilation.

Mirror of Modesty, The. Pamphlet by Robert Greene, published in 1584. It tells the story of Susanna and the elders.

Mirror of the World, The. Book translated from a Latin Speculum vel Imago Mundi in 1245, for the Duke of Berry, into French verse, which was afterwards turned by a Maistre Gossouin (possibly only a copyist) into French prose. From that prose William Caxton made his translation in 1481 at the request of Hugh Brice, of the Mercers' Company, alderman of London.

Mirs Bay (mirz). [Chinese, Ta-p'eng-wan.] Bay in the SE coast of China, in the NE part of the British colony of Hong Kong.

Mirzam (mêr.zäm'). Third-magnitude star β Canis Majoris, in the paw of the animal. The Arabs gave the same name to three other stars: β Canis Minoris, and α and γ Orionis.

Mirzapur (mēr'zä.pör). District in Uttar Pradesh, Union of India, ab. 30 mi. SW of Benares: rice, wheat, sugar, silk, and oil seeds. Capital, Mirzapur; area, 4,322 sq. mi.; pop. 1,017,289 (1951).

Mirzapur. Capital of the district of Mirzapur, Uttar Pradesh, Union of India, on the Ganges River ab. 31 mi. SW of Benares: long noted for its cotton trade. It has important shellac and carpet factories and a considerable brass industry for the manufacture of domestic utensils. 70,944 (1941).

Mirza-Schaffy (mēr''zä.shä.fē'). Oriental poet who was the teacher and friend of the German poet and writer Friedrich Bodenstedt during his residence in Tiflis (Tbilisi). The Songs of Mirza-Schaffy, published (1851) by Bodenstedt, are (with one or two exceptions) his own, but are Oriental in spirit and imagery. They became, and still are, extraordinarily popular.

Misa (mē'sạ). See Misahohe.

Misach (mī'sak). See Meshach.

Misahohe (mē.sạ.hō'ẹ). [Also: Ho, Misa.] Town in the French trust territory of Togo, W Africa, situated near the border of Togoland (British Togo), ab. 70 mi. from the coast. It is near the terminus of the railway line from Lomé in French Togo, and is a local commercial center. Founded in 1890 by Germans, it was an administrative center of German Togoland. Elevation, ab. 1,550 ft.; pop. 5,840 (1948).

Misamis (mē.sä'mēs). Former province on Mindanao island, Philippines. It was divided into Misamis Oriental, Misamis Occidental, Bukidnon, and parts of Lanao and Zamboanga provinces.

Misamis Occidental (ôk''sē.ᴛʜen.täl'). Province of the Philippine Islands, on the N side of Mindanao island, W of Iligan Bay. It is bordered on the W by Zamboanga, on the S by Lanao, on the E by Ilagan Bay, and on the N by the Mindanao Sea. It is separated from the W part of the island by the Malindang highland, with Mount Malindang reaching a height of 7,956 ft. Misamis, an important port, is situated on Panguil Bay, in the S part of the province. Capital, Oroquieta; area, ab. 802 sq. mi.; pop. 207,575 (1948).

Misamis Oriental (ō.ryen.täl'). Province of the Philippine Islands, on the N coast of Mindanao island, E of Iligan Bay. It also includes Camiguin Island, in the Mindanao Sea. It is bordered on the E by Agusan, on the S by Bukidnon and Lanao, on the W by Iligan Bay, and on the N by the Mindanao Sea. Macajalar Bay separates the province into an E and a W part; Talisayan is the port for the former, and El Salvador for the latter. Cacao, coffee, Manila hemp, corn, copra, rice, and sugar cane are among the products. The native race is Visayan. Capital, Cagayan; area, ab. 1,512 sq. mi.; pop. 369,671 (1948).

Misanthrope (mē.zänṫ.trop), Le. Comedy by Molière, produced in 1666. This play is an almost inexhaustible source of allusions, quotations, and proverbial sayings. It is the ideal of French classic comedy.

Misch (mish), Georg. b. at Berlin, April 5, 1878—. German philosopher; son-in-law of Wilhelm Dilthey, whose philosophical ideas he supported. Author of Geschichte der Autobiographie (1907), Diltheys Lebensphilosophie (1924), Der Weg in die Philosophie (1926), and Lebensphilosophie und Phänomenologie (1930).

Mischabelhörner (mish'ä.bẹl.hėr''nėr). Mountain group in the Swiss Alps, in Valais canton. The highest are the Dom (ab. 14,940 ft.) and the Täschhorn (ab. 14,757 ft.).

Miseno (mē.zā'nō), Cape. [Latin, Promontorium Misenum.] Promontory at the NW entrance to the Bay of Naples. Near it was the ancient city of Misenum, where a naval base was built in the time of Augustus.

Misenus (mī.sē'nus). In Roman legend, a companion of Aeneas, who was drowned in the Bay of Naples. Cape Miseno is named for him.

Mise of Lewes (mīz; lö'ẹs). See Lewes, Mise of.

Miser, The. Comedy by Thomas Shadwell (1671), founded on Molière's L'Avare.

Miser, The. Comedy (1733) by Henry Fielding, based on Molière's L'Avare.

Misérables (mē.zā.rạbl), Les. See Les Misérables.

Mises (mē'zẹs), Ludwig von. b. at Lemberg, Austria (now Lvov, U.S.S.R.), Sept. 29, 1881—. American economist. He served as professor (1918 et seq.) at Vienna, Geneva, Mexico, and New York. Author of The Theory of Money and Credit (1934), Omnipotent Government (1944), and Bureaucracy (1944).

Mises, Richard von. b. at Lemberg, Austria, April 19, 1883; d. July 14, 1953. German mathematician, who contributed especially to statistics and applied mathematics. He taught at Brünn (Brno), Strasbourg, Dresden, Berlin, and Istanbul before emigrating (1939) to the U.S., where he taught at Harvard University. Author of Elemente der technischen Hydromechanik (1914), Vorträge über Theorie und Berechnung der Flugzeuge (1918), Probability, Statistics and Truth (1928; Eng. trans., 1939), Vorlesungen aus dem Gebiete der angewandten Mathematik (1931), Fluid Dynamics (1941), and others.

Misfortunes of Arthur (är'thėr), The. Tragedy written principally by Thomas Hughes, produced in 1587 before Queen Elizabeth. Eight members of the Society of Gray's Inn coöperated with him, and the "triumphs" and dumb-show were devised principally by Francis Bacon.

Misgar (mis'gär). Town in the Gilgit territory, Kashmir, N of Gilgit, at the beginning of the Kilik Pass.

Mishael (mish'ạ.el). Hebrew name of Meshach.

Mishawaka (mish.ạ.wô'kạ). City in N Indiana, adjoining South Bend on the E: manufactures of rubber and woolen goods, heavy machinery, furniture, automobile accessories, and meat products. 32,913 (1950).

Mishnah (mish'nạ). Collection of rabbinical discussions on the law of Moses, the object of which was to apply and adapt it to the varying circumstances of life and of the times, and to extend it by logical conclusions and analogies. The word Mishnah properly means "repetition," then "instruction," "learning." It was not at first permissible that these discourses should be reduced to writing; they had to be learned by heart, and are called the oral law as opposed to the written law, or the Pentateuch. The beginning of the Mishnah goes back to the time of the Maccabees. It was delivered in the schools orally from generation to generation. At the end of the 2nd century A.D. the patriarch Judah I collected, arranged, and codified the accumulated material in its present shape. The numerous rules and decisions are arranged according to subject in six orders (sedarim): (1) seeds (zeraim), on agriculture; (2) festivals (moed); (3) women (nashim), on connubial affairs; (4) damages (nezikim), civil and criminal laws; (5) sacrifices (kodashim); (6) purifications (tahoroth). The six orders are divided into 63 tracts, and these again into chapters. The explanations of or comments on the Mishnah are called Gemara, and both together constitute the Talmud.

Misilmeri (mē.sēl me rē'). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Palermo, SE of Palermo. Pop. of commune, 12,176 (1936); of town, 11,665 (1936).

Misiones (mē.syō'nās). [Portuguese, Missiones.] Territory in NE Argentina, lying between Brazil and Paraguay. It is the rainiest area in the country, the climate is subtropical, and most of the land is forested. Various crops are produced, including corn, fruit, manioc, tobacco, and yerba maté. Capital, Posadas; area, 11,514 sq. mi.; pop. 246,396 (1947).

Misis (mē.sēs'). See Mopsuestia.

Misitra (mē'sē.trä). See Mistra.

Miskito (mis.kē'tō). See Mosquito, and Mosquitoan.

Miskito Coast. See Mosquito Coast.

Miskolc (mēsh'kōlts). [Also, Miskolcz.] City in NE Hungary, on the Sajó River ab. 90 mi. NE of Budapest. It is an important commercial and industrial center, with leather, paper, lumber, iron and steel, and tobacco industries. It is for the most part a modern city, but has fine examples of baroque architecture. The oldest building of the city is the chapel of Saint Anne, built in 1480, which served as a mosque during the Turkish occupation of Hungary. 103,698 (1948).

Misnia (mis'ni.ạ). Latin name of Meissen.

Misogonus (mi.sog'ọ.nus). Rhymed play (1560) often attributed to Thomas Richards. It contains songs, and has some changes of meter, but is mainly four-lined stanzas.

Misol (mē'sôl). [Also: Misoöl (mē'sō.ôl), Mysol, Mysool.] Small island NW of New Guinea, in Indonesia.

Misquito (mis.kē'tō). See Mosquito.

Misquitoan (mis.kēt'ō.ạn). See Mosquitoan.

Misr (mis'ėr). Arabic name of Egypt.

Miss Betsy Thoughtless (bet'si thôt'lęs). Novel by Eliza Haywood, published in 1751.

Missenyi (mi.sen'yē). Subgroup of the Haya, a Bantu-speaking people of NW Tanganyika, in E Africa.

Misses Mallett (mal'ęt), The. See Bridge Dividing, The.

Missinaibi (mis.i.nī'bi). River rising in C Ontario, Canada, NE of Lake Superior, and flowing generally N and NE to its junction with the Mattagami to form the Moose River. Length, ab. 265 mi.

Miss in Her Teens, or the Medley of Lovers. Comedy by David Garrick, produced in 1747.

Missinipi or Missinnippi (mis.i.nip'i). See Churchill River.

Mission (mish'ọn). City in S Texas, in Hidalgo County, in the Rio Grande valley citrus-growing area: manufactures of bricks and tiles; machine shops; canneries. 10,765 (1950).

Missionary Ridge (mish'ọ.ner.i). Mountain in NW Georgia and SE Tennessee, SE of Chattanooga. It was the scene of the final struggle in the battle of Chattanooga, Nov. 25, 1863. The ridge was occupied by the Confederates in a strongly intrenched position. The Union forces attacked in three divisions under Joseph Hooker, G. H. Thomas, and W. T. Sherman, and after a long hand-to-hand fight succeeded in taking the position.

Missiones (mē.syô'nēs). Portuguese form of Misiones.

Mission Indians. See Tobikhar.

Mission Nuestra Señora del Refugio (nwes'trä sā.nyō'rä del rā.fō'ʜyō). Original name of Refugio, Tex.

Mission Range (mish'ọn). Mountain range in W Montana, in Lake and Missoula counties. Peak elevation, ab. 10,300 ft.

Mississippi (mis.i.sip'i). [Called the "Magnolia State"; also, the "Bayou State."] State of the SE United States, bounded by Tennessee on the N, Alabama on the E, the Gulf of Mexico and Louisiana on the S, and separated by the Mississippi River on the W from Arkansas and in part from Louisiana: a Southern State and one of the Gulf States.

Population, Area, and Political Divisions. Mississippi is divided for administrative purposes into 82 counties. It sends seven representatives to Congress, and has nine electoral votes. Leading cities are Greenville, Biloxi, Gulfport, Greenwood, Columbus, Laurel, Jackson, Hattiesburg, Meridian, Natchez, and Vicksburg. Capital, Jackson; area, 47,420 sq. mi. (47,716 sq. mi., including water); pop. 2,178,914 (1950). The state ranks 31st in area, and 26th (on the basis of the 1950 census) in population.

Terrain and Climate. The surface of Mississippi is hilly in part, but generally rolling or level, the highest ridges being in the NE and the highest point being 806 ft., in the NE corner of the state. The flat lowland plain in the W, bordering on the Mississippi River above Vicksburg, is extremely fertile, much of this land having been reclaimed by the building of levees as a flood preventive. Nevertheless, this part of the state has suffered at numerous times from severe floods of the Mississippi River. The U.S. Waterways Experiment Station is located at Vicksburg; it deals with harbor and river problems throughout the nation. The Mississippi and its tributaries, such as the Yazoo, which flows SW from Leflore County into the Mississippi just above Vicksburg, and the Big Black, flowing SW from N and C Mississippi into the Mississippi somewhat below Vicksburg, drain the W part of the State. The Pearl River, starting in the C part of the state and forming part of the SW boundary with Louisiana, flows directly into the Gulf of Mexico. The climate is characterized by long, hot summers and cool winters; in the N winters usually bring cold waves when snow is not uncommon, but along the Gulf Coast they are generally mild and snow occurs rarely.

Industry, Agriculture, and Trade. Although agriculture has long been the state's leading industry, manufacturing has developed rapidly in recent years. The state ranks second in the production of cotton, its chief crop. Other agricultural products include dairy products (dairying is a major industry), corn, oats, hay, sweet potatoes, pecans, rice, peanuts, sugar cane, and fruits. Lumber and timber products are outstanding among the industrial products; these are followed by processed food products (particularly fish and shellfish), cottonseed oil, textiles, chemicals, and fiber board. Biloxi is the largest U.S. center for packing oysters and shrimp. Jackson, Hattiesburg, Meridian, and Vicksburg are the leading manufacturing cities. Petroleum, natural gas, limestone, sand, gravel, clay, and lignite are found. Annual income in the state from agriculture ranges as high as 495 million dollars; from mineral output, as high as 22 million; and from manufacturing, as high as 300 million dollars.

History. The region was visited (1540) by De Soto. The Mississippi River was explored by Marquette, Joliet, and La Salle, La Salle naming the entire Mississippi River region Louisiana. An attempt at settlement was made (1699) by the French under Iberville at Biloxi; Natchez was settled in 1716. The territory was ceded (1763) by France to Great Britain; part was ceded to the U.S. in 1783, and the remainder was acquired by the U.S. in 1811. Mississippi Territory was organized in 1798 and included part of Mississippi and Alabama, and later all of Mississippi and Alabama. The present state of Mississippi was admitted to the Union (as the 20th state) on Dec. 10, 1817. It seceded Jan. 9, 1861, and was the scene of various conflicts during the Civil War. One of the most notable battles fought in the state was at Vicksburg, which was besieged from 1862 to 1863 before falling to Union forces. Vicksburg National Military Park (1,323 acres) was established in 1899, commemorating the siege. Other important battles included those at Corinth (1862) and Jackson (1863). The state was readmitted to the Union on Feb. 23, 1870, and adopted its present constitution in 1890.

Culture. Mississippi has a preponderantly rural population; in 1950 only ab. 28 percent of the population was urban. Negroes represent close to half of the total. The percentage of foreign-born residents is extremely low. Natchez, before the Civil War, an important river-port town at the end of the 500-mi. trail (the Natchez Trace) from Nashville, Tenn., and a center of wealth and social activity, still retains much of its ante-bellum charm, many old houses having been preserved. Biloxi is a resort and the site of Keesler Field, a center for U.S. Air Force training. Among the institutions of higher learning in Mississippi is the state-supported University of Mississippi, first opened in 1840, at Oxford. The state motto is Virtute et Armis, meaning "By Valor and Arms." The state flower is the magnolia.

Mississippian Period (mis.i.sip'i.ạn). Geological period early in the Carboniferous Period. See table at end of Volume III.

Mississippi River (mis.i.sip'i). [Called the "Father of Waters," and "Great River."] Largest river of North America. It rises in the headstreams of Lake Itasca, in N Minnesota, and forms part or all of the boundary between Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, and Louisiana on the W and Wisconsin, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Mississippi on the E, flowing generally S. In SE Louisiana it empties into the Gulf of Mexico by several mouths. It is navigable for steamboats to the Falls of St. Anthony, Minnesota (ab. 2,000 mi.). Much of the land in the lower valley below St. Louis is below the river level and has to be protected by levees. Numerous flood-control dams and spillway projects have been constructed since the disastrous flood of 1927. The chief tributaries are the Minnesota, Des Moines, Missouri, St. Francis, White, Arkansas, and Red rivers from the W, and the Wisconsin, Rock, Illinois, Ohio, and Yazoo from the E. It was discovered by Hernando de Soto in 1541; Jacques Marquette and Louis Jolliet descended it in 1673, and La Salle in 1681; it formed the W boundary of the U.S. from 1783 to 1803; and its source was discovered by H. R. Schoolcraft in 1832. During the 19th century the Mississippi and its chief tributaries carried an active commerce and were the principal arteries of trade and transport in the central U.S. The picturesque river steamers were celebrated in American literature and painting. The development of a railroad network in the latter part of the 19th century and the reorientation of freight routes led to the decline of river shipping, and to the stagnation of many of the smaller cities and towns along the river. The Mississippi system is still the greatest inland waterway of the U.S. (excluding the Great Lakes), and carries a heavy traffic of barge shipment: petroleum, coal, steel, building materials, heavy machinery, and bulk materials are moved by river. Most of the traffic is carried by the Illinois and Ohio waterways, and by the Mississippi below the influx of the Illinois (just above St. Louis). Minneapolis, St. Paul, St. Louis, Memphis, Vicksburg, Baton Rouge, and New Orleans are on its banks. The basin includes the whole of Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Arkansas, Kentucky, and Tennessee; parts of Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Texas, Louisiana, and Mississippi; and small parts of New York, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, New Mexico, and the Canadian provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta. Area of drainage basin, 1,257,545 sq. mi. Length of river to Lake Itasca, 2,350 mi.; total length from the mouth of the Mississippi to the headwaters of the Missouri, 3,892 mi.

Mississippi River. River in SE Ontario, Canada, flowing generally NE and N to join the Ottawa River ab. 30 mi. W of Ottawa. Length, ab. 105 mi.

Mississippi Scheme or Mississippi Bubble. Speculative scheme formed under the lead of John Law for paying off the national debt of France. It resulted in a financial panic in 1720. Law expanded far beyond its assets the stock in a company to colonize the Mississippi area, and by his financial maneuvering made his affairs look for a time so prosperous that it was seriously believed that he could support the national bank as well as the private companies.

Mississippi Sound. Part of the Gulf of Mexico lying S of Mississippi, and partly enclosed by a chain of islands. Length, ab. 75 mi.; area, ab. 750 sq. mi.

Mississippi Valley. Great central lowland region of the U.S., drained by the Mississippi and its tributaries, lying between the Appalachian Plateau and the Rocky Mountains.

Mississippi Valley Historical Association. Scholarly organization formed (1907) at Lincoln, Neb., under the guidance of Clarence S. Paine, for the purpose of promoting study and research in the field of American history. Its publication is the quarterly Mississippi Valley Historical Review (1914 et seq.).

Miss Kilmansegg and Her Precious Leg (kil'man.seg). Poem by Thomas Hood, of which it has been said that "as a sustained piece of metrical humor, [it] is absolutely unique."

Miss Lulu Bett (lö'lō bet). Novel by Zona Gale, published in 1920 and dramatized in 1920. The stage version was awarded the Pulitzer prize in 1921.

Miss Mole (mōl). Novel by E. H. Young, published in 1930.

Missolonghi (mis.ō.lông'gē). [Also, Mesolonghi; modern Greek, Mesolongion.] Town in W Greece, the capital of the nomos (department) of Aetolia and Acarnania, situated on the Gulf of Patras. It was successfully defended by the Greeks against the Turks in 1822 and 1823, and was besieged and taken by the Turks and Egyptians in 1825–26. It was retaken by the Greeks in 1829. The poet Byron died here in 1824 (a monument has been erected to him). 13,837 (1951).

Missoula (mi.zö'la). City in W Montana, county seat of Missoula County, on the Missoula River near its confluence with the Bitter Root River, ab. 93 mi. NW of Butte; marketing center for a lumbering, mining, and farming region. It is the seat of the University of Montana. 22,485 (1950).

Missoula River. Name formerly applied to the upper course of Clark Fork above its junction with the Flathead River.

Missouri (mi.zö'ri, -ra). North American Indian tribe, speaking a language of the Siouan family, formerly occupying the C and W parts of what is now the state of Missouri, which was named after them.

Missouri. [Called the "Bullion State"; popular name, the "Show Me State."] State of the C United States, bounded by Iowa on the N, Illinois, Kentucky, and Tennessee on the E (separated from all three by the Mississippi River), Arkansas on the S, and Oklahoma, Kansas, and Nebraska on the W (separated in part from Kansas and from Nebraska by the Missouri River).

Population, Area, and Political Divisions. Missouri is divided for administrative purposes into 114 counties. The state sends 13 representatives to Congress, and has 15 electoral votes. Leading cities are Joplin, Kansas City, St. Joseph, St. Louis, and Springfield. Capital, Jefferson City; area, 69,270 sq. mi. (69,674 sq. mi., including water); pop. 3,954,653 (1950), an increase of 4.5 percent over that of 1940. The state ranks 18th in area and 11th (on the basis of the 1950 census) in population.

Terrain and Climate. The part of Missouri N of the Missouri River is largely rolling prairie land. In the S the land is hilly and contains the Ozark Mountains, the highest point being Taum Sauk Mountain (1,772 ft.) in the SE. The Missouri River not only forms the NW boundary but flows across the state from Kansas City to the Mississippi, which it joins a short distance N of St. Louis. Other rivers in the state include the Salt, in the NE; the St. Francis and the Black, in the SE; the White, in the SW; the Osage, in the C part of the state, flowing from E Kansas through the Lake of the Ozarks and into the Missouri slightly E of Jefferson City; the Grand and the Chariton, N tributaries of the Missouri; and the Gasconade, a S tributary of the Missouri. The Lake of the Ozarks (ab. 130 mi. long) in the C section of the state is a large artificial lake created by Bagnell Dam, which is the site of the state's largest hydroelectric generating plant. The climate of Missouri is characterized by cold winters and hot summers; the summers are long and subject to heat waves associated with the inflow of hot air from the SW.

Industry, Agriculture, and Trade. Agriculture is Missouri's leading industry. Corn is the chief crop, but winter wheat, tobacco, soybeans, and cotton are also grown extensively, cotton growing being important only in the SE. Cattle, mules, poultry, and hogs are raised in great numbers. Kansas City is known for its stockyards and packing houses, and is a major national market for livestock and for agricultural products. St. Louis, an important national livestock and grain market, is also one of the world's greatest fur markets. Dairy products, beef, pork, boots and shoes, flour, feed, clothing, and machine-shop products are among the leading manufactures. Kansas City and St. Louis have large printing establishments. The state is rich in minerals, particularly zinc, lead, coal, barite, clay, and silica. Annual income in the state from agriculture has ranged as high as 1,085,717,000 dollars; from manufacturing, as high as three billion dollars; from mineral output, as high as 587,961,729 dollars.

History. Missouri was visited (1541) by De Soto and later (1673) by Marquette. The first permanent settlement was made (c1735) by the French at St. Genevieve. The territory was included in the Louisiana region ceded (1763) to Spain; ceded (1800) back to France, formed (1803) part of the Louisiana Purchase. It was included (1805) in the Louisiana Territory. Missouri Territory was formed in 1812. When Missouri applied (1817) for statehood a controversy over its status as a slave or free state arose. This bitter dispute was settled by the Missouri Compromise of 1820, by which Missouri was admitted (Aug. 10, 1821) to the Union (as the 24th state) as a slave state and Maine as a free state, with the provision that slavery was not to be permitted in any of the other regions N of 36°30′. Although Missouri did not secede, Missourians engaged in what approached a civil war along the Kansas-Missouri border, its proslavery citizens carrying on guerrilla activities against antislavery Kansans. In the Civil War itself, the many German residents were predominantly Unionist in sentiment, however, and a Union force headed by Captain Nathaniel Lyon captured (May 10, 1861) Camp Jackson on the outskirts of St. Louis. The first armed conflict occurred (June 17, 1861) at Boonville and resulted in a Confederate defeat. Later there were many minor engagements in the state and, in 1864, Lyon, now a general, was defeated by the Confederates near Springfield. However, Confederate General Sterling Price was defeated at Westport (now included in Kansas City) after a three-day battle (Oct. 21–23) which began at Independence nearby and which virtually ended all armed warfare in the state.

Culture. Missouri residents are balanced between urban and rural population; 61.5 percent of the population was urban in 1950. German immigration began in the 1850's, as the result of the German revolution of 1848. Negroes represent a sizable proportion of the total population. St. Louis is one of the nation's great historic and cultural centers. Here Joseph Pulitzer founded (1878) the St. Louis Post Dispatch, still one of the major U.S. newspapers. The city was the seat of a philosophical movement which studied Aristotle, Plato, Hegel, and Kant; an outgrowth of this intellectual activity was the publication of the Journal of Speculative Philosophy, edited by William Torrey Harris, and the first journal of its kind in English. The Louisiana Purchase Exposition was held (1904) at St. Louis. A group of city residents were the sponsors of Charles A. Lindbergh's transatlantic flight (1927) in the Spirit of St. Louis. The municipally owned City Art Museum has extensive collections of art ranging from ancient to modern. Kansas City was the focus of national attention in 1939 when the corruption of its Democratic political machine was revealed, and the Democratic political boss T. J. Pendergast was imprisoned for income-tax evasion. At Hannibal are the boyhood home of Mark Twain and a statue of his two famous characters Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn. The boyhood home of the bandit Jesse James is located near Excelsior Springs. Independence, the home town of President Harry S. Truman, was a large Mormon settlement in the early 1800's, although the sect was driven out in 1833–34; today, however, the town is the international headquarters of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints. Among the state's institutions of higher learning are the state-supported University of Missouri, at Columbia, with a branch at Rolla; St. Louis University, at St. Louis, with branches at Webster Grove, St. Mary's (Kan.), O'Fallon, and East St. Louis (Ill.); the University of Kansas City; and Washington University, at St. Louis. The state motto is Salus Populi Suprema Lex Esto, meaning "Let the Welfare of the People Be the Supreme Law." The state flower is the hawthorn. The state song, adopted in 1949, is the Missouri Waltz.

Missouri. Battleship of the U.S. Navy, of 52,000 tons, built during World War II. The Japanese surrender, on Sept. 2, 1945, took place on its deck, while it was anchored in the harbor of Tokyo.

Missouri, Great Falls of the. Former cataract in the Missouri River, in Montana, ab. 10 mi. NE of Great Falls. In a distance of ab. 15 mi. below the city of Great Falls, the Missouri River dropped ab. 315 ft. in a series of cascades and rapids. Four hydroelectric power dams have been constructed in this section of the river, and only rapids remain. Former height, 92 ft.; width, ab. ¼ mi.

Missouri, Little. See Little Missouri.

Missouri Compromise. In U.S. history, name given to an agreement relative to the extension of slavery, embodied in a bill passed by the U.S. Congress, March 2, 1820, and in the act of Congress admitting Missouri into the Union, passed in 1821. It was enacted that in all the territory ceded by France at the time of the Louisiana Purchase, north of lat. 36°30′ N., excepting Missouri, slavery should be forever prohibited; and on this concession by the proslavery party in Congress, Missouri was admitted as a slave state. It was abrogated by the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska Bill in 1854.

Missouri River. River in N and W central U.S., the longest tributary of the Mississippi. It is formed by the junction at Three Forks, Mont., of the Madison, Gallatin, and Jefferson rivers. It flows through Montana, North Dakota, and South Dakota, thence forms in part the boundary between Nebraska and Kansas on the W and South Dakota, Iowa, and Missouri on the E, traverses Missouri, and unites with the Mississippi ab. 17 mi. N of St. Louis. It passes (in Montana) through the gorge called "Gates of the Rocky Mountains." Great Falls, Bismarck, Pierre, Sioux City, Omaha, Council Bluffs, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth, Kansas City, and Jefferson City are on its banks. Length (to headwaters), 2,714 mi.; navigable at high water to Fort Benton (ab. 2,100 mi.), but at low water barely open to Sioux City (for the total length of the Missouri-Mississippi to the sea, see under Mississippi River).

Missouri River Basin Project. Plan for the development and conservation of water resources of the Missouri River basin, presented to the U.S. Senate in April, 1944. Under the proposed plan, approximately 7,438 sq. mi. of land would be irrigated, 17 power plants would be constructed, having an installed capacity of 758,500 kilowatts, and about 100 large flood-control reservoirs would be built. The final cost of the project was estimated in 1944 at about one and a quarter billion dollars. The demand for flood control in the area was stimulated by disastrous floods of the Kansas River in July, 1951, and of the Missouri and its tributaries in April, 1952. President Truman appointed a survey commission in January, 1952.

Missouri Valley. City in W Iowa, in Harrison County, on the Willow River: trading and shipping point for hogs and agricultural products. It was settled in 1854. Pop. 3,546 (1950).

Missouri v. Holland, 252 U.S. 416 (1920) (hol′ənd). U.S. Supreme Court decision involving the use of the treaty-making power to establish national regulatory authority which might otherwise be construed as an infringement of the Tenth Amendment. The court upheld the Migratory Bird Act of 1918, based upon the U.S.-Canadian treaty of 1916, which regulated the killing of wild birds. The case is notable for the opinion of Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, which defended the use of national power in instances serving to promote the national welfare.

Miss Ravenel's Conversion from Secession to Loyalty (rav′ẹ.nelz). Novel by John William DeForest, published in 1867.

Miss Sara Sampson (sär′ạ samp′sọn). Play by Gotthold Ephraim Lessing, written and produced in 1755. With it the so-called "bourgeois tragedy" was introduced into Germany.

Missunde (mi.sün′dẹ). Village in the Land (state) of Schleswig-Holstein, British Zone, Germany, ab. 6 mi. E of Schleswig. It was the scene of engagements between the Danes and troops of Schleswig-Holstein on Sept. 12, 1850, and between the Danes and Prussians on Feb. 2, 1864.

Mistake, The. Comedy (1705) by John Vanbrugh, taken in part from Molière's Le Dépit amoureux.

Mistassini (mis.tạ.sē′ni), Lake. Lake in Canada, in C Quebec, which drains by the Rupert River into James Bay. Length, ab. 100 mi.; elevation, 1,243 ft.; area, ab. 840 sq. mi.

Misterbianco (mēs.ter.byäng′kō). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Catania, W of Catania. Pop. of commune, 11,387 (1936); of town, 10,679 (1936).

Misti (mēs′tē). [Also: El Misti, Arequipa.] Volcano in S Peru, near the city of Arequipa. Elevation, ab. 19,200 ft.

Mistir (mis.tir′). See Monastir.

Mistra (mēs′trä). [Also, Misitra.] Fortress and town near Sparta, Greece, built in 1248. The fortress, founded in the 13th century by the prince of Achaia, is one of the most curious and complete memorials of medieval life now existing. On the slopes remain churches, escutcheoned palaces, and fortified streets, and the hill is crowned by a great castle with imposing groups of battlemented and machicolated towers and every defensive device of the Middle Ages.

Mistral (mēs.trăl), Frédéric. b. at Maillane, Bouches-du-Rhône, France, Sept. 8, 1830; d. there, March 25, 1914. Provençal poet, belonging to and considered the leading poet of the brotherhood of modern Provençal poets known as Les Félibriges. Among his works (in Provençal, with French translations) are Mirèio (Mireille, 1859), Calendau (1867), Lis Iscio d'or (Les Îles d'or, 1875), Lou Tresor dou félibrige (1879–86; a Provençal-French dictionary), Nerto (1884), La Reino-Jano (1890), Lou Pouèmo dou Rose (1897), and a volume of memoirs (1906). In 1904 he received, with José Echegaray, the Nobel prize for literature.

Mistral (mēs.trăl'), Gabriela. [Pseudonym of Lucila Godoy Alcayaga.] b. at Vicuña, Chile, April 7, 1889—. Chilean poet, awarded (1945) the Nobel prize in literature. Long an educator, she has represented her country at international gatherings, was a consul at Lisbon, Madrid, Nice, and Los Angeles, and held posts in Brazil and Mexico. She has served as visiting professor at the universities of Puerto Rico and Montevideo, and at Barnard, Middlebury, and Vassar colleges. Predominantly mystic, her poems center to a great extent around children. Author of Desolación, Vida de San Francisco d'Asis, Rondas para niños, and others.

Mistress, The. "Love-cycle" by Abraham Cowley, published in 1647.

Mistress Quickly (kwik'li). See Quickly, Mistress (or Hostess).

Mistretta (mēs.trāt'tä). [Ancient name, Amestratus.] Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Messina, situated near the N coast of Sicily, between Messina and Palermo. Buildings of interest to tourists were undamaged in World War II. Pop. of commune, 11,546 (1936); of town, 11,464 (1936).

Misumalpan (mis.u.mal'pạn). New term proposed for the South American Indian language stock comprised of the Mosquitoan, Suman, and Matagalpan language families. Groups using languages of this stock are found chiefly in Nicaragua, except for the area along the Pacific coast.

Misurata (mē.sö.rä'tä). [Also, Misurati.] Coastal town in N Africa, in Libya, situated on the W side of the Gulf of Sidra. It was the capital of a province in the former Italian colony of Libya. It is on the coast highway between Tripoli (W) and Bengasi (E). During World War II it was the scene of several battles. Pop. ab. 5,000.

Misurata, Conte di. See Volpi, Giuseppe, Conte di Misurata.

Mitau (mē'tou). German name of Jelgava.

Mitava (mē'tạ.vạ). Russian name of Jelgava.

Mitcham (mich'ạm). Suburban municipal borough in SE England, in Surrey, ab. 10 mi. SW of Victoria Station, London, and included in Greater London. Medicinal herbs are grown here. 67,273 (1951).

Mitchel (mich'ẹl), John. b. at Dungiven, County Derry, Ireland, Nov. 3, 1815; d. March 20, 1875. Irish revolutionist, a leader in the "Young Ireland" movement. He was convicted as editor of the United Irishman for advocating armed rebellion against England and sentenced to 14 years' banishment in 1848, escaped from Van Diemen's Land (Tasmania) and came to New York in 1854, and lived in the U.S. until 1874, when he returned to Ireland. In 1875 he was elected to Parliament for Tipperary, but was declared ineligible. He wrote Jail Journal (1854), The Last Conquest of Ireland—Perhaps (1861), and others.

Mitchel, John Purroy. b. July 19, 1879; killed in airplane accident at Lake Charles, La., July 6, 1918. American politician. He was elected (1914) mayor of New York on a platform of civic reform and launched a program for tax relief, military preparedness, less unemployment, and reduction of the city debt.

Mitchel, Ormsby MacKnight. b. in Union County, Ky., July 28, 1809; d. at Beaufort, S.C., Oct. 30, 1862. American astronomer and general. He graduated (1829) from West Point and taught mathematics there until 1832, when he resigned from the army. In 1836 he became professor of mathematics and natural philosophy at Cincinnati College, a position he held until 1859. Through his efforts an astronomical observatory was established there, of which he became director in 1845. In 1846 he founded the Sidereal Messenger, a journal of astronomy. He published several popular works on astronomy, including Planetary and Stellar Worlds (1848) and Orbs of Heaven (1851). From 1859 to 1861 he was director of the Dudley Observatory at Albany, N.Y. He became a brigadier general of volunteers in 1861, and in 1862 a major general. He died of yellow fever in the latter year.

Mitchell (mich'ẹl). City in S Indiana, in Lawrence County: cement manufactures. 3,245 (1950).

Mitchell. City in SE South Dakota, county seat of Davison County, ab. 70 mi. NW of Sioux Falls: trading, processing, packing, and shipping center for poultry, meat, butter, cheese, grain, livestock, and frozen eggs. It is the seat of Dakota Wesleyan University. 12,123 (1950).

Mitchell. Former name of Idabel, Okla.

Mitchell, Clifford. b. at Nantucket, Mass., Jan. 28, 1854; d. at Chicago, Oct. 19, 1939. American physician, specialist in urinology and kidney diseases. He was co-discoverer with Frederick G. Germuth of a reagent for the detection of uranium.

Mitchell, David Scott. b. at Sydney, Australia, March 19, 1836; d. there, July 24, 1907. Australian bibliophile and philanthropist, founder of the Mitchell Library at Sydney. He collected books, manuscripts, pictures, prints, maps, and charts concerning the history of Australia, New Zealand, and the islands of the Pacific. In 1898 he announced that he would give the collection to the colony if a suitable building were provided; such a building was begun in 1906, and the collection passed to the state as a memorial to the Mitchell family.

Mitchell, Donald Grant. [Pseudonym, Ik Marvel.] b. at Norwich, Conn., April 12, 1822; d. at Edgewood, Conn., Dec. 15, 1908. American essayist and novelist. He was consul at Venice (1853–55), and later lived on his farm, "Edgewood," near New Haven, Conn. He wrote Fresh Gleanings (1847), The Battle Summer (1850), Reveries of a Bachelor (1850), Dream Life (1851), My Farm of Edgewood (1863), Seven Stories with Basement and Attic (1864), Wet Days at Edgewood (1864), Dr. Johns, a novel (1866), Rural Studies (1867; reprinted as Out-of-Town Places, 1884), Bound Together (1884), and English Lands (4 vols., 1889–97).

Mitchell, Edward Page. b. at Bath, Me., March 24, 1852; d. at New London, Conn., Jan. 22, 1927. American journalist. He was associated (1875–1927) with the New York Sun as editorial writer, editor, president of the Sun Printing and Publishing Association, and finally as director of the Sun and the Evening Telegram.

Mitchell, Elisha. b. at Washington, Conn., Aug. 19, 1793; d. in the Black Mountains, N.C., June 27, 1857. American chemist, surveyor, and clergyman. Mount Mitchell was named for him.

Mitchell, Helen Porter. See Melba, Dame Nellie.

Mitchell, Henry. b. on Nantucket, Mass., Sept. 16, 1830; d. at New York, Dec. 1, 1902. American engineer and hydrographer; brother of Maria Mitchell. As a member (1849–88) of the U.S. Coast Survey, he studied the causes of fluctuation in shore lines. His publications include Tides and Tidal Phenomena (1868) and The Under-Run of the Hudson (1888).

Mitchell, Hinckley Gilbert Thomas. b. at Lee, Oneida County, N.Y., Feb. 22, 1846; d. May 19, 1920. American Biblical scholar and professor.

Mitchell, John. b. at Braidwood, Ill., Feb. 4, 1870; d. Sept. 9, 1919. American labor leader. From 1882 he worked in the coal mines; he joined the Knights of Labor in 1885 and, when the United Mine Workers of America was founded in 1890, became one of its first members. He was president of the United Mine Workers from 1898 to 1908. In 1900 he directed the strike of the anthracite coal miners that obtained a ten percent wage increase, and in 1902 led a strike to obtain union recognition. The attitude of the mine owners, who at that time refused absolutely to negotiate, obtained much sympathy for the strikers among the public; after a strike that began in March and continued into the autumn, President Theodore Roosevelt, threatening at first to use troops to mine the coal, intervened. A commission was formed, and, though the mine owners refused to sit on the same committee with a union representative, one was seated in the guise of an "eminent sociologist"; union recognition was not obtained, but the miners' day was reduced to nine hours and they received a ten percent rise in wages. Mitchell served as a vice-president (1899–1914) of the American Federation of Labor and as chairman (1915–19) of the New York State Industrial Commission. Author of Organized Labor (1903) and The Wage Earner and His Problems (1913).

Mitchell, John Ames. b. at New York, Jan. 17, 1845; d. at Ridgefield, Conn., June 29, 1918. American artist, author, and founder (1883) of Life. He founded Life to provide an organ for American artists and to present the humor of the American scene. His novels include Amos Judd (1895), The Pines of Lory (1901), The Villa Claudia (1904), The Silent War (1906), and Pandora's Box (1911). His most notable philanthropy was "Life's Fresh Air Fund" providing summer camp facilities for poor children.

Mitchell, John Hipple. b. in Washington County, Pa., June 22, 1835; d. at Portland, Ore., Dec. 8, 1905. American lawyer and U.S. senator (1872 et seq.). His Democratic opposition sought to prevent him from taking his seat in the U.S. Senate by charging him with bigamy, abandonment of a Pennsylvania wife, use of an assumed name, and financial corruption. He was after his fourth election (1901) to the Senate convicted (1905) in the U.S. district court of having accepted fees for interceding on behalf of clients pressing claims before the U.S. Land Commissioner.

Mitchell, John Thomas Whitehead. b. at Rochdale, England, Oct. 18, 1828; d. 1895. English economist, the first to practice and propagate extensively what was later known as the Rochdale system of coöperative enterprise, by which the coöperators, instead of being engaged in manufacturing, concentrated on wholesale and retail trade. His propagation of this practice, the full implications of which were first shown (1891) by Beatrice Porter (later Beatrice Webb), led to the success of many retail coöperatives throughout England and the U.S.

Mitchell, Langdon Elwyn. [Pseudonym, John Philip Varley.] b. at Philadelphia, Feb. 17, 1862; d. there, Oct. 21, 1935. American playwright; son of Silas Weir Mitchell. His plays include Becky Sharp, a stage adaptation of W. M. Thackeray's Vanity Fair, The New York Idea, and The Kreutzer Sonata, from Jacob Gordin's Yiddish play. Author also of Sylvian, and Other Poems (1884), Poems (1894), Love in the Backwoods (1896), and Understanding America (1927).

Mitchell, Lucy Myers Wright. b. at Urumiah, Persia, March 20, 1845; d. at Berlin, March 10, 1888. American archaeologist.

Mitchell, Margaret. [Married name, Marsh.] b. at Atlanta, Ga., 1900; d. there, Aug. 16, 1949. American novelist. She was a feature writer and reporter for the Atlanta Journal (1922–26). Author of the Civil War novel Gone With the Wind (1936), which received a Pulitzer prize (1937) and was later (1939) filmed; the book sold over eight million copies and was translated into 30 languages.

Mitchell, Margaret Julia. [Known as Maggie Mitchell.] b. at New York, June 14, 1837; d. there, March 22, 1918. American actress, made famous (1860) as the title role comedian in Fanchon the Cricket (adapted from George Sand's La Petite Fadette). Known also for her dancing, she became (1857) a feature attraction at Burton's Theater, New York.

Mitchell, Maria. b. at Nantucket, Mass., Aug. 1, 1818; d. at Lynn, Mass., June 28, 1889. American astronomer; sister of Henry Mitchell. She was professor of astronomy at Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, New York, from 1865. Her special fields of study were the sun and Jupiter and Saturn. In 1847 she discovered a telescopic comet. She was the first woman elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. She was elected (1922) to the Hall of Fame.

Mitchell, Mount. Highest mountain in the E part of the U.S., in the Black Mountains, Yancey County, North Carolina. It is named for Elisha Mitchell, who perished (1857) while exploring the mountain. Elevation, 6,684 ft.

Mitchell, Nahum. b. at East Bridgewater, Mass., 1769; d. there, 1853. American lawyer, noted as Bartholomew Brown's collaborator (1802) on the Bridgewater Collection of liturgical music.

Mitchell, Sir Peter Chalmers. b. at Dunfermline, Scotland, 1864; d. at London, July 2, 1945. English zoölogist and author, noted for improvements in the care of animals at the London zoo. His scientific works include Outlines of Biology (1894), The Biological Problem of Today (1896), The Nature of Man (1904), The Childhood of Animals (1912), Evolution and the War (1915), and Materialism and Vitalism in Biology (1930). Author also of My House in Málaga, My Fill of Days: Reminiscences, and a biography of Thomas Henry Huxley.

Mitchell, Ruth Comfort. b. at San Francisco—. American writer. Her books include The Night Court and Other Verse (1916), Play the Game (1921), Narratives in Verse (1923), The Wishing Carpet (1926), Army with Banners (1928), The Legend of Susan Dane (1933), Strait Gate (1935), and Dust of Mexico (1941).

Mitchell, Samuel Alfred. b. at Kingston, Ontario, Canada, April 29, 1874—. American astronomer. He was professor and director of the McCormick Observatory at University of Virginia (1913–45). Author of Parallaxes of 260 Stars (1920), Eclipses of the Sun (1923), Solar Eclipses (1929), Variable Stars (1935), and other works. Coauthor with D. Reuyl of Parallaxes of 650 Stars (1940).

Mitchell, Samuel Augustus. b. at Bristol, Conn., March 20, 1792; d. at Philadelphia, Dec. 18, 1868. American geographer and publisher. He spent 40 years producing textbooks, maps, and manuals; at one time over 400,000 copies of his books were sold annually. His works include Mitchell's Geographic Reader (1840), A General View of the United States (1846), and Map of the United States and Territories (1861).

Mitchell, Silas Weir. b. at Philadelphia, Feb. 15, 1829; d. there, Jan. 4, 1914. American physician and author, noted for researches in toxicology and the nervous system, and as a writer of historical novels. As a physician he specialized in nervous diseases and was an advocate of the rest cure for certain nervous disorders. He edited Five Essays: On the Cryptogamous Origin of Malarious Fevers (1858), and wrote Researches upon the Venom of the Rattlesnake (1860), Researches upon the Venoms of Poisonous Serpents (with E. T. Reichert, 1886), Wear and Tear, or Hints for the Overworked (1871), Injuries of the Nerves (1873), Fat and Blood (1877), Hephzibah Guinness, and Other Stories (1880), Lectures on Diseases of the Nervous System (1881), In War Time, a novel (1885), Poems (1882, 1887), Doctor and Patient (1887), Characteristics (serially, 1891), When All the Woods Are Green (1894), A Madeira Party (1895), Collected Poems (1896), Hugh Wynne, Free Quaker (1897), The Adventures of François (serially, 1898), Autobiography of a Quack (1900), Dr. North and his Friends (1900), The Wager, and Other Poems (1900), Circumstance (1901), Comedy of Conscience (1903), Little Stories (1903), Mr. Kris Kringle (1904), New Samaria (1904), Youth of Washington (1904), Constance Trescot (1905), A Diplomatic Adventure (1906), The Red City (1908), Venture in 1777 (1908), The Comfort of the Hills (1909), John Sherwood, Ironmaster (1911), and Westways (1913).

Mitchell, Stephen Mix. b. at Wethersfield, Conn., Dec. 9, 1743; d. Sept. 30, 1835. American politician and judge. He was a Connecticut representative (1783–88) to the Continental Congress, U.S. senator (1793–95), filling Roger Sherman's unexpired term, and chief justice (1807–14) of the Connecticut supreme court. He was an ardent Federalist.

Mitchell, Sir Thomas Livingstone. b. at Craigend, Stirlingshire, Scotland, June 16, 1792; d. at Sydney, Australia, Oct. 5, 1855. Australian explorer. He was aide-de-camp to the Duke of Wellington in Spain. He was appointed deputy surveyor of New South Wales in 1827 and surveyor general in 1828. He began his explorations in 1831, and in 1835 and 1836 proved that the Darling River flowed into the Murray and traversed great stretches of what is now Victoria. From 1846 to 1847 he explored toward the northwest in what is now southwestern Queensland. He laid out 200 towns and villages in New South Wales, retaining aboriginal names and natural features. Mitchell translated Camoens's Lusiad (1854).

Mitchell, Wesley Clair. b. at Rushville, Ill., Aug. 5, 1874; d. at New York, Oct. 29, 1948. American economist and educator. He was professor at the University of California (1909–12) and Columbia (1914–19, 1922–44), a founder and director (1919–31) of the New School for Social Research, director of research (1920–45) of the National Bureau of Economic Research, and a member of several government boards. Author of A History of the Greenbacks (1903), Gold, Prices and Wages under the Greenback Standard (1908), Business Cycles, the Problem and Its Setting (1927), The Backward Art of Spending Money (1937), and other books. Coauthor of Measuring Business Cycles (1946) and others. Two Lives (1953), by his wife, Lucy Sprague Mitchell, is the story of his life and hers.

Mitchell, William. [Called "Billy" Mitchell.] b. at Nice, France, Dec. 29, 1879; d. at New York, Feb. 19, 1936. American air-force officer, an early and outspoken advocate of strong air power and a separate air force. Joining the army (1898) as a private in the infantry, he rose to the rank (1920) of brigadier general. He participated in the Spanish-American War, the Philippine campaign, the Mexican Border Campaign, and in World War I. His charges against the War and Navy departments of mishandling of aviation forces led to a court-martial (1925) by which he was convicted and suspended from service for five years. He resigned his commission (1926). In World War II a bomber was named for Mitchell, and a Congressional resolution condemned the decision of the court-martial. Author of Our Air Force (1921), Winged Defense (1925), and Skyways (1930).

Mitchell, William DeWitt. b. at Winona, Minn., Sept. 9, 1874—. American lawyer, soldier, and politician, U.S. attorney general (1929–33) under Hoover. He served as U.S. solicitor general (1925–29). He practiced law (1933 et seq.) at New York. He was chosen chief counsel for the Congressional committee investigating the Pearl Harbor disaster.

Mitchell-Thomson (-tom'sọn), William. See Selsdon, 1st Baron.

Mitchell v. United States, 313, U.S. 80 (1941). U.S. Supreme Court decision involving the denial of equal accommodations to a Negro passenger aboard a train traversing a state whose laws required the segregation of colored from white persons. The Interstate Commerce Commission had ruled that in view of the small number of Negro passengers using the route, occasional discrimination could be justified. The court upheld that "the comparative volume of traffic cannot justify the denial of a fundamental right of equality of treatment. . . . While the supply of particular facilities may be conditioned upon there being a reasonable demand therefor, if facilities are provided, substantial equality of treatment of persons traveling under like conditions cannot be refused. It is the individual . . . who is entitled to the equal protection of the laws,—not merely a group of individuals, or a body of persons according to their numbers."

Mitchelstown (mich'ẹlz.toun). [Irish, Baile Mhisteala.] Market town in SW Irish Republic, in County Cork, ab. 27 mi. NE of Cork. It was the scene of a riot between the Irish nationalists and police on Sept. 9, 1887. Pop. 2,151 (1951).

Mitchill (mich'il), Samuel Latham. b. at North Hempstead, N.Y., Aug. 20, 1764; d. at New York, Sept. 7, 1831. American physician, naturalist, politician, and miscellaneous writer. He founded, with Dr. Edward Miller and Dr. Elihu H. Smith, the New York Medical Repository and was its chief editor from 1797 to 1820. He taught at Columbia (1792–1801) and at the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons (1807–26), and founded (1826) Rutgers Medical College. He served in the U.S. House of Representatives (1801–04, 1810–13) and in the U.S. Senate (1804–09).

Mitchison (mich'i.sọn), Naomi. [Full name, Naomi Margaret Haldane Mitchison.] b. at Edinburgh, Nov. 1, 1897—. British writer. Author of The Conquered (1923), When the Bough Breaks (1924), Cloud Cuckoo Land (1925), The Laburnum Branch (poetry, 1926), Barbarian Stories (1929), Comments on Birth Control (1930), The Corn King and the Spring Queen (1931), The Delicate Fire (1933), The Fourth Pig (1936), The Kingdom of Heaven (1939), The Blood of the Martyrs (1939), and The Bull Calves (1947).

Mite (mīt), Sir Matthew. "Nabob" in Samuel Foote's play of that name. He returns from a profitable residence in India with ill-gotten gains, which he uses to annoy and ruin his neighbors.

Mitford (mit'fọrd), John. b. at Richmond, Surrey, England, Aug. 13, 1781; d. April 27, 1859. English writer and clergyman. He became curate of Kelsale, Suffolk, in 1809. From 1834 until 1850 he edited the Gentleman's Magazine. He assisted in editing the Aldine edition of British poets, and wrote Agnes, the Indian Captive, a poem (1811).

Mitford, Mary Russell. b. at Alresford, Hampshire, England, Dec. 16, 1787; d. at Swallowfield, near Reading, England, Jan. 10, 1855. English author. Her father, George Mitford, was a physician who squandered his wife's fortune and finally became dependent upon his daughter's earnings. At ten years of age she drew a lottery prize of 20,000 pounds, which her father also spent. In 1810 her Miscellaneous Poems appeared, and in 1812 Blanche of Castile. In 1820 her father's irregularities obliged her to support herself by literature. Julian, a tragedy, was accepted by W. C. Macready and performed at Covent Garden, March 15, 1823. The Foscari was produced by Charles Kemble, Nov. 4, 1826, and Rienzi, her best tragedy, was produced at Drury Lane, Oct. 9, 1828. The sketches entitled Our Village began in the Lady's Magazine in 1819, and gained great popularity. Belford Regis, a novel, was published in 1835, and Recollections of a Literary Life in 1852. She also published a number of poems, sonnets, stories of American life, and stories for children.

Mitford, William. b. at London, Feb. 10, 1744; d. at Exbury, England, Feb. 10, 1827. English historian. The first volume of his History of Greece, suggested by Edward Gibbon, appeared in 1784; the work was completed in 1810. Mitford, writing in a period when the French Revolution and its excesses caused high feeling, was a monarchist, and his treatment of the Athenian democracy shows his bias. His work was, however, of such excellence that not until the appearance of the more balanced histories of George Grote and Connop Thirlwall in the 1840's was it superseded. He was a member of Parliament (1785–90, 1796–1806, and 1812–18).

Mithra (mith'rạ) or Mithras (mith'rạs). In ancient Persian mythology, the god of light and truth, and an ally of Ahura Mazda in his struggle against evil and darkness. In Vedic mythology, he is Mitra, a sun god, and ruler of the day. His worship was introduced into Rome. After Pompey had wrested Pontus in Asia Minor from the Persians, the worship of Mithra superseded the Dionysia, and was prevalent throughout the Roman Empire. In the 2nd century Mithraism was stronger than Christianity in the Roman Empire. Certain initiatory ceremonies entailed in the worship of Mithra have been reflected in the ceremonies of the secret societies of the Middle Ages, of the Rosicrucians, and of the Freemasons.

Mithridate (mē.trē.dât). Tragedy by Jean Baptiste Racine, produced Jan. 13, 1673.

Mithridates or Mithradates VI (mith.ri.dā'tēz or mithrạ.dā'tēz). [Also: Mithridates VI Eupator (ū'pạ.tôr); called Mithridates the Great.] b. c132 B.C.; d. 63 B.C. King of Pontus (120–63 B.C.). He subjugated the peoples on the eastern shore of the Black Sea, and conquered the Crimea and southern Russia. He next attacked Paphlagonia, Cappadocia, and Bithynia, client states of Rome, which caused the interference of that power. The first Mithridatic War broke out in consequence in 88. He rapidly made himself master of all the Roman possessions in Asia Minor, except Magnesia on the Maeander, and caused a general massacre of the Italian inhabitants, said to have numbered 80,000, or, according to others, 150,000. He also instigated a rising of the European Greeks, to whose aid he sent a formidable land and naval force under his general Archelaus. Archelaus was defeated by Sulla at Chaeronea in 86 and at Orchomenus in 85. Sulla crossed the Hellespont to Asia, and dictated a peace at Dardanus in 84. Mithridates surrendered his fleet, paid a heavy war indemnity, and restored all his conquests, retaining Pontus only. In 83 the second Mithridatic War broke out, owing to his failure completely to evacuate Cappadocia. The propraetor Murena invaded Pontus, but was defeated and forced to withdraw. Peace was restored in 81 on the basis of the treaty of Dardanus. In 74 the third Mithridatic War broke out, occasioned by an attempt on the part of Mithridates to take possession of Bithynia, which had been bequeathed to the Romans by his son-in-law Nicomedes III, late king of Bithynia. Mithridates defeated Marcus Aurelius Cotta at Chalcedon in 74, but was expelled from his own kingdom by Lucullus, and took refuge with his son-in-law Tigranes, king of Armenia. Lucullus defeated the latter at Tigranocerta in 69, but was unable to prevent Mithridates from reconquering Pontus and ravaging Bithynia and Cappadocia. He was superseded by Gnaeus Pompeius Magnus (Pompey the Great), who defeated Mithridates in 66, and compelled the surrender of Tigranes at Artaxata. Mithridates fled to Panticapaeum (the modern Kerch in the Crimea), and was planning a new campaign when his troops revolted. He was at his own bidding put to death by a Celtic soldier in 63, after having vainly sought to kill himself by poison.

Mithridates, King of Pontus (pon'tus). Tragedy by Nathaniel Lee, produced in 1678.

Mithridatic Wars (mith.ri.dat'ik). Three wars between Rome and Mithridates, king of Pontus. The Romans were commanded in the first (88–84 B.C.) by Sulla and his lieutenant Fimbria; in the second (83–81) by Murena; and in the third (74–63) by Lucullus, later by Pompey the Great. In the last Mithridates and his ally Tigranes were defeated, and Pontus was annexed to Rome in 63 B.C.

Mitidja (mi.tē'ją). [Also, Metidja.] Fertile plain in N Africa, in Algeria, S and SW of Algiers. It is ab. 60 mi. long and 10 mi. wide, and is covered with a deep layer of alluvial soil. It is extremely fertile and is one of the most densely populated areas of North Africa.

Mitishchi (mē.tēsh.chē'). See Mytishchi.

Mitla (mē'tlä). [Also Mictlan.] Mixtec Indian city, now in ruins, SE of Oaxaca, Mexico. Its stone buildings are famous for their elaborate stone mosaic decoration.

Mito (mē.tō). City in E Honshu, Japan, capital of Ibaraki ken (prefecture), situated near the Pacific coast, ab. 65 mi. NE of Tokyo: trade center in a fertile agricultural plain, with fisheries and a paper industry. 67,16; (1950).

Mitra (mit'ra). See under Mithra.

Mitre (mē'trā), Bartolomé. b. at Buenos Aires, June 26, 1821; d. Jan. 19, 1906. Argentine general, statesman, journalist, and author, president (1862–68) of Argentina. Banished by Rosas, he lived successively in Uruguay, Bolivia, Peru, and Chile, and was a noted journalist in all those countries. He served in the Uruguayan army (1838–46) and in the Bolivian army (1847). As colonel of artillery, he took part in the overthrow of Rosas (1852), opposed Urquiza, and led the movement by which Buenos Aires declared itself independent (Sept. 17, 1852). He was made minister of the interior and later minister of war of the Buenos Aires government, and in the latter capacity commanded the army which was defeated by Urquiza at Cepeda on Oct. 23, 1859, the result being the reunion of Buenos Aires with the Argentine Confederation. Mitre was then elected governor of Buenos Aires (May, 1860) and, new difficulties having arisen with the federal government, he defeated Urquiza's army at Pavón on Sept. 17, 1861. Soon after, Mitre was made president ad interim, and in October, 1862, was elected president of the new Argentine Republic for six years. For two years he commanded the army of the Triple Alliance (Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay) against Paraguay. At the end of his term Mitre was made minister to Brazil. He was a presidential candidate in 1874, and, being defeated, headed an abortive rebellion. In 1852 Mitre founded La Nación, which became the most important journal of the Platine region. Besides poems, essays, and speeches, he published two historical works, the Historia de Belgrano y de independencia argentina (1858 et seq.) and the Historia de San Martín y de la emancipación sud-americana (1884; English abridged trans., 1893).

Mitre (mī'tėr), The. London tavern, formerly standing in Mitre Court, off Fleet Street. It was Samuel Johnson's favorite resort.

Mitropoulos (mi.trop'o.lǫs), Dimitri. b. at Athens, Greece, March 1, 1896—. American orchestra conductor and composer. He made his American debut (1936) as conductor of the Boston Symphony, was regular conductor (1937–49) of the Minneapolis Symphony, and became (1949) conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra. Among his compositions are La Mise au Tombeau du Christ, an orchestral work, a Concerto Grosso for orchestra, and an opera, Soeur Beatrice.

Mitrovica (mē'trô.vē.tsä). See Sremska Mitrovica.

Mitrowitz (mē'trō.vits). German name of Sremska Mitrovica.

Mitscher (mich'ėr), Marc Andrew. b. at Hillsboro, Wis., Jan. 26, 1887; d. Feb. 3, 1947. American admiral and naval aviation expert. He was pilot of the naval aircraft which made the first transatlantic flight, from Newfoundland to the Azores, in 1919. At various times he served in the bureau of aeronautics of the Navy Department, between tours of duty as an officer of the U.S.S. Langley and of the U.S.S. Wright. During World War II he commanded the aircraft carrier Hornet when Major General James H. Doolittle took off from it for his historic bombing flight over Japan, in April, 1942. He held active commands during the further operations in the Pacific theatre, and became chief of naval operations for air in 1945.

Mitscherlich (mich'ėr.liċh), Eilhard. b. at Neuende, near Jever, Germany, Jan. 7, 1794; d. at Berlin, Aug. 28, 1863. German chemist, professor at Berlin (1821 et seq.). He discovered isomorphism (the principle that compounds of similar chemical nature crystallize similarly) in 1818. He made several discoveries in derivatives of benzoic acid and benzene, and investigated the crystal structure of various chemical substances. He wrote Lehrbuch der Chemie (1829–40) and others.

Mitshi (mē'chē). See Tiv.

Mitsui (mē.tsō.ē), Hachiroemon. b. at Kyoto, Japan, in January, 1857—. Japanese industrialist and philanthropist. He contributed vast sums to public and private charity. He became president (1916) of Mitsui Gombei Kaisha and head of the powerful Mitsui family.

Mitsui, Takayasu. b. at Kyoto, Japan, in May, 1850; d. Jan. 5, 1922. Japanese financier, remembered as one of the financiers of the Russo-Japanese War (1904–05). He was president of the Mitsui bank (1890–1922), and an executive member of the Mitsui Gombei Kaisha.

Mitsukuri (mē.tsō.kō.rē), Kakachi. b. at Edo, Japan, 1857; d. 1909. Japanese zoölogist and educator. He served as professor of the college of science at the Imperial University of Tokyo, dean (1901) of the college of science, and councilor of the university (1893). As head of the Fur-Seal Commission (1896), he signed a treaty with the U.S. and Great Britain. As a zoölogist, he is remembered as the author of a series of important papers (1886–96) on the embryology of turtles.

Mittag-Leffler (mit'täg.lef'lėr), Gösta. b. at Stockholm, March 16, 1846; d. at Djurscholm, near Stockholm, July 7, 1927. Swedish mathematician, known for the "Mittag-Leffler theorem" in analysis and for his work on the theory of uniform analytic functions and linear homogeneous equations. He served his country in various diplomatic capacities. In 1882 he founded the journal Acta Mathematica, to which he contributed many papers. The 50th volume of this journal (1927) contains an account of his life and work.

Mitteleuropa (mit'ęl.oi.rō'pä). [English, Middle Europe or Central Europe.] Concept of Germany as the leader in a Central European federation to include Austria-Hungary, Turkey, and part of the Balkans. This vision, propagated during World War I by Friedrich Naumann and others, saw a German-dominated sphere from the North Sea to the Persian Gulf, and appeared to have been realized in the early stages of World War I when Germany had as its allies Austria-Hungary, Turkey, and Bulgaria. In one form or another the concept of Mitteleuropa has several times reappeared since.

Mittelfranken (mit'ęl.fräng'kęn). See Middle and Upper Franconia.

Mittelmark (mit'ęl.märk). Region in NE Germany, in the Land (state) of Brandenburg, Russian Zone, extending from the Havel E to the Oder River. It comprises the districts around Brandenburg, Berlin, and Potsdam, forming part of the old possessions of Brandenburg, and of the original holding of the house of Hohenzollern in 1415.

Mittelmeer (mit'ęl.mār) or Mittelländisches Meer (mit.ęl.len'd'sh.ęs mār'). German names of the Mediterranean Sea.

Mittel- und Oberfranken (mit'ęl ụnt ō'bėr.fräng'kęn). German name of Middle and Upper Franconia.

Mitten (mit'ęn), Thomas Eugene. b. at Brighton, England, March 31, 1864; drowned near Milford, Pa., Oct. 1, 1929. American street-railway executive. He was president (1905–11) of the Chicago City Railway Company, and president (1911–23) and chairman of the board of directors (1923–29) of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, which, under Mitten management, was charged (1929) with failure to submit annual reports to the city comptroller and with having incurred excessive operational expenditures. Mitten drowned shortly after an investigation was ordered, but in 1931 the report of the investigators confirmed the charges directed against his management.

Mittenwald (mit'ęn.vält). Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Bavaria, American Zone, in the Regierungsbezirk (government district) of Upper Bavaria, situated on the Isar River near the Austrian border, ab. 50 mi. S of Munich: tourist center in the Bavarian Alps, at an elevation of ab. 2,995 ft. It specializes in the manufacture of violins and other carved-wood articles. 7,300 (1946).

Mitterer (mit'ę.rėr), Erika. b. at Vienna, March 30, 1906—. Austrian writer, outstanding in the fields of the historical novel and lyric poetry.

Mittermaier (mit'ėr.mī.ėr), Karl Joseph Anton. b. at Munich, Germany, Aug. 5, 1787; d. at Heidelberg, Germany, Aug. 28, 1867. German jurist and politician. He wrote works on criminal law and other aspects of jurisprudence.

Mittu (mi'tö). [Also, Mittoo.] Almost extinct people of SW Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, in NE Africa. Important in the 1870's when visited by G. A. Schweinfurth and Wilhelm Junker, they have disappeared as political and cultural units, as the result of raids by the Zande and by the Arab traders and slavers. In language and culture they resembled the Bongo, whom they bordered on the SE.

Mittweida (mit'vī.dä). Town in E central Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony, Russian Zone, ab. 34 mi. W of Dresden. It has textile, metal, and furniture industries. The population increased in the period 1939–46 by 21.7 percent. 22,794 (1946).

Mitú (mē.tö'). Settlement in SE Colombia, capital of Vaupés commissary. 312 (1938).

Mitylene (mit.i.lē'nē). See Mytilene.

Mivart (mī'vạrt, miv'ạrt), St. George Jackson. b. at London, Nov. 30, 1827; d. there, April 1, 1900. English naturalist. He became a lecturer in St. Mary's Hospital Medical School in 1862, was appointed professor of biology in University College, London, in 1874, and professor of the philosophy of natural history in the University of Louvain in 1890. He was an evolutionist, but refused to admit of anything but divine influence on the development of man's mind. He made attempts to reconcile religion and science, but after several of his works, admitting the correctness of the scientific view when it clashed with the religious, were placed on the Index, he was excommunicated (1900) by Herbert, Cardinal Vaughan. He published On the Genesis of Species (1871), Lessons in Elementary Anatomy (1873), The Cat (1880), Nature and Thought (1882), and others.

Miwok (mē'wok). [Also, Meewok.] Group of North American Indian tribes, whose languages formed an independent family, formerly inhabiting the E central part of what is now the state of California. Like many other names given by North American Indians to themselves, the name Miwok means "people." They were divided into three groups, coastal, lake, and interior.

Mixco (mēs'kō). [Also: Mixco Viejo, meaning "Old Mixco."] Former city and stronghold of the ancient Cakchiquel Indians of Guatemala, ab. 25 mi. N of the modern Guatemala City. It was on a nearly inaccessible hill, and was fortified with great skill. In 1525 the Spaniards, under Gonzalo Alvarado, besieged it for a month and finally took it by assault after a terrible fight. The town was burned, and only its ruins remain; the surviving inhabitants were removed to the site of what is now the small village of Mixco, 5 mi. E of Guatemala City.

Mixcoatl (mēks.kō.ä'tl). In Aztec mythology, the cloud god, called Cloud Serpent. He was also a god of stars and numbers, tutelary god of hunters, and was identified with the morning star. He was the culture hero who taught man how to make fire with two sticks, and as culture hero was sometimes identified in the creator role.

Mixe (mēk'sā). Indian tribe which once flourished in SE Mexico, in the mountains of the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, in Oaxaca and Chiapas. Descendants of members of this tribe now comprise a large part of the rural population of the area.

Mixe. Language of the Mixe Indians of Mexico, belonging to the Zoquean family of languages.

Mixed Claims Commission. Joint commission created by executive agreement between the U.S. and Germany on Aug. 10, 1922, to adjudicate test cases for claim liabilities resulting from World War I. Each government nominated one member of the commission and in case of disagreemen the two chose a third member as umpire. The commission classified 27 types of cases and judged cases in each category. It also made general administrative decisions relating to such matters as nationality of claimants, and expressed opinions on individual claims, as in the case of death claims arising from the Lusitania sinking.

Mixtec (miks'tek). [Also, Mixtecas (mēs.tā'käs).] Ancient pre-Toltec Indian people who were already centered in what is now Oaxaca, Mexico, at the time of the Spanish conquest. Descendants of these people now make up a large part of the population in the area.

Mixtec. Language stock to which the Mixtec and several other Latin American Indian languages and dialects belong.

Miyagi (mē.yä.gē). Ken (prefecture) of NE Honshu, Japan, bordering on the Pacific Ocean. Most of the area is mountainous or hilly, but the fertile lowland of the Kitakami River extends through the N central part of the prefecture, and is intensively cultivated. Rice, soybeans, small grains, and vegetables are the chief crops. There is considerable lumbering in the forested mountains, and commercial fisheries along the coast. Capital, Sendai; area, ab. 2,805 sq. mi.; pop. 1,663,442 (1950).

Miyajima (mē.yä.jē.mä). See Itsuku-shima.

Miyazaki (mē.yä.zä.kē). City in SE Kyushu, Japan, a Pacific port located near the coast on a small river. The city has a ceramic industry and handicrafts, and ships subtropical woods, fruits, and vegetables. 103,443 (1950).

Mizar (mī'zạr, mē'zạr). Familiar name of the bright second-magnitude double star ζ Ursae Majoris. This star is at the bend (second from the end) of the handle of the Big Dipper, and with Alcor makes a double star visible to the naked eye. It has a fourth-magnitude companion, found by G. B. Riccioli c1650, making the first telescopic double. In 1889 the brighter component was proved by E. C. Pickering to be a spectroscopic binary, the first ever discovered. The same name is also, rarely, applied to ε Boötis.

Mizpah (miz'pạ). [Also, Mizpeh (miz'pe).] Name (meaning "watchtower") of several places mentioned in Old Testament history, including: 1. A place in Gilead, where Jacob and Laban made their covenant (Gen. xxxi, 49); sometimes identified with Ramoth Gilead. 2. A place in Benjamin, Palestine, probably ab. 5 mi. NW of Jerusalem.

Mizraim (miz.rā'im, mits.rā'yim). Biblical name of Egypt.

Mjöllnir (myėl'nir). In Old Norse mythology, Thor's hammer, "the crusher," made by the dwarfs. It was the constant weapon of Thor in his warfare against the giants. It symbolized the thunderbolt. His worshipers used to make the sign of the hammer, as Christians today make the sign of the cross.

Mjosa (myō'sa). [Swedish, Mjösen (myö'sęn).] Largest inland lake in Norway, ab. 35 mi. NE of Oslo at the nearest point. Length, ab. 60 mi.; area, ab. 141 sq. mi.; greatest known depth, ab. 1,453 ft.

Mladá Boleslav (m'la.dä bō'le.slaf). [German, Jungbunzlau.] Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Praha, in N central Bohemia, ab. 31 mi. NE of Prague. The town was founded in 995 and has a number of medieval buildings, such as the Gothic Church of Saint Mary, the Church of the Bohemian Brethren, the castle, and the old town hall. 23,731 (1947).

Mława (m'la.va'). Town in C Poland, in the województwo (province) of Warszawa, situated near the former East

Prussian border, ab. 67 mi. NW of Warsaw: agricultural industries and markets. In World War I, fighting took place near here between the Germans and Russians, February–July, 1915. In World War II, it was occupied by the Germans on Sept. 5, 1939. Pop. 13,817 (1946).

M'Lehose (mak'lē.hōz), Agnes. See Maclehose, Agnes.

Mljet (mlyet). [Italian, Meleda; ancient name, Melita.] Island in SW Yugoslavia, in the Adriatic Sea, in the federative unit of Croatia, formerly in the banovina (province) of Zetska, W of the city of Dubrovnik. It belonged to Dubrovnik (Ragusa) in the Middle Ages. Length, ab. 23 mi.; pop. 2,050 (1931).

Mnemosyne (nē.mos'i.nē, -moz'-). In Greek mythology, a Titaness, the goddess of memory; daughter of Uranus (Heaven) and Ge (Earth), and mother, by Zeus, of the Muses.

Mnesicles (nes'i.klēz). Architect of the Propylaea on the Athenian Acropolis (begun 437 B.C.). It was five years in building. An inscription with his name, but later in time, has been found among the ruins of the Propylaea.

Mnevis (nē'vis). Ancient Egyptian sacred black bull of Heliopolis, believed to be an incarnation of the sun god. Mnevis was especially sacred to Osiris, however, and was worshiped the same as the god. Osiris as god of the dead was also associated with the growth of crops, and the bull was sacred to him for having helped with the first sowing of corn in the land.

Mnichovo Hradiště (mnē'hô.vô hrä'dish.tye). [German, Münchengrätz.] Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Liberec, in N Bohemia, ab. 39 mi. NE of Prague. It has shoemaking and sugar-refining industries. There is a castle of the counts of Waldstein (or Wallenstein). General Wallenstein's tomb is in Saint Anne's Church. 3,733 (1947).

Mnong (mnông). Group of tribes dwelling in the mountains of E Cambodia and Central Viet-Nam (Annam) in Indochina. They are expert hunters and tamers of elephants. They speak a Mon-Khmer language closely related to Cambodian.

Moab (mō'ab). [Also, Moabites (mō'ą.bīts).] Ancient people of Palestine who dwelt in the area E of the Jordan and the Dead Sea, N of Edom, and S of Ammon and the Israelite Transjordan districts. There is little information about them outside of the Old Testament and even these references are much disputed. They were related to the ancient Hebrews, however, and their language, Moabite, belonged to the Canaanite group of the Semitic family of languages.

Moallakat or Muallaqat (mō.äl.lä.kät'). Collection of seven Arabic poems, composed by different authors in the 6th and early 7th centuries, and compiled in the 8th century. The poems, all dating from pre-Islamic times, are considered the classics of Arabic literature; the picture they draw of Arabic life is unequaled. By popular derivation, the name, which means "the suspended," is held traditionally to reflect the hanging of the poems, inscribed in gold on linen, on the Kaaba.

Moaria (mō.ār'i.ą). Hypothetical South Pacific continent of which only New Zealand and other Oceanian or Polynesian islands remain; so named from the supposed former range of the moa. Its assumed existence accounts for many features of the present geographical distribution of animals and plants. The name was proposed by G. A. Mantell.

Moawiyah (mō.ä'wi.yą). See Muawiyah.

Mobangi (mō.bang'gē). See Ubangi.

Moberg (mō'bery'), Vilhelm. [Full name, Carl Artur Vilhelm Moberg.] b. at Algutsboda, Småland, Sweden, 1898—. Swedish novelist. He worked until 1927 as a journalist for the Swedish provincial press. During World War II Moberg's best-selling novel Rid i natt! (Ride This Night, 1941) succeeded in mobilizing a tremendous nationalistic and anti-German fervor. A play and a motion picture were made from the same work. The Emigrants was published in 1951.

Moberly (mō'bėr.li). City in N Missouri, in Randolph County, in a coal-mining region: manufactures of shoes, tools, and hosiery; railroad division point. 13,115 (1950).

Mobile (mō.bēl'). City in SW Alabama, county seat of Mobile County, on Mobile Bay. It is the only seaport and the second largest city of the state. It has shipyards, and a large trade in lumber, naval stores, and coal, and is one of the leading ports in the country for the export of cotton. Manufactures include sugar, textiles, meat products, and roofing materials. It was founded by Pierre and Jean Baptiste Lemoyne in 1702, was the capital of Louisiana until 1723, passed to Great Britain in 1763 and to Spain in 1783, was taken by the Americans under James Wilkinson in 1813, and became a city in 1819. In the Civil War it was occupied by Union forces April 12, 1865. Its annual Mardi Gras Carnival traces back to 1704. Pop. of city, 78,720 (1940), 129,009 (1950); of urbanized area, 182,963 (1950).

Mobile, Fort Louis de la. See under Condé, Fort.

Mobile Bay (mō'bēl). Inlet of the Gulf of Mexico, in SW Alabama. Length, ab. 36 mi.

Mobile Bay, Battle of. Naval victory gained Aug. 5, 1864, by the Union navy (with seven sloops of war and four ironclad monitors), under David Farragut, over the Confederates (with the ram Tennessee, which had to surrender, and three gunboats), under Franklin Buchanan. It was on this occasion that Farragut exclaimed, "Damn the torpedoes!"

Mobile Point. Sandy point at the E entrance of Mobile Bay: the site of Fort Morgan.

Mobile River (mō.bēl'). River in Alabama which is formed by the union of the Alabama and Tombigbee, and empties into Mobile Bay. Length, 38 mi.

Möbius (mė'bę ůs), August Ferdinand. b. at Schulpforta, Prussia, Nov. 17, 1790; d. at Leipzig, Sept. 26, 1868. German mathematician and astronomer. He became (1816) professor at Leipzig. His work was important to the progress of analytic projective geometry, through his introduction of the principle of duality and of homogeneous coördinates. With others he developed the study of topology, the analysis of geometrical qualities unaffected by the deformations of a figure. The Möbius strip, named for him, is a three-dimensional figure with only one surface (a strip rotated in part through 180° and joined to itself). His chief work is Der barycentrische Kalkul (1827).

Möbius, Karl. b. at Eilenburg, Germany, Feb. 7, 1825; d. at Berlin, April 26, 1908. German zoölogist, director (1887–1905) of the Museum of Natural History at Berlin.

Möbius, Paul Heinrich August. b. at Leipzig, Germany, May 31, 1825; d. at Friedrichroda, Germany, June 8, 1889. German miscellaneous writer; son of August Ferdinand Möbius. He wrote tales, Bar-Cocheba (a tragedy), a catechism of German literature, and others.

Möbius, Paul Julius. b. at Leipzig, Germany, Jan. 24, 1853; d. there, Jan. 8, 1907. German neurologist. He described dysthyroidism (1886), periodic ophthalmoplegic migraine, called Möbius's disease (1882), and an atrophic type of progressive muscular dystrophy seen in children. Author of Die basedowsche Krankheit (1896), Über die hereditären Nervenkrankheiten (1879), Die Migräne (1894), Über das Pathologische bei Goethe (1898), Über Schopenhauer (1899), Über den physiologischen Schwachsinn des Weibes (1900), Über Kunst und Künstler (1901), Über das Pathologische bei Nietzsche (1902), Die Geschlechter der Tiere (1905–06), and Über Robert Schumanns Krankheit (1906).

Möbius, Theodor. b. at Leipzig, Germany, June 22, 1821; d. there, April 25, 1890. German philologist; son of August Ferdinand Möbius. He was appointed professor at Leipzig in 1859, and at Kiel in 1865. He published numerous works on Scandinavian philology and literature.

Mobridge (mō'brij). City in N South Dakota, in Walworth County, on the Missouri River: rail division point. It occupies the site of former Arikara and Sioux Indian villages. 3,753 (1950).

Moca (mō'kä). Town in N Dominican Republic, capital of Espaillat province. 9,739 (1950).

Moçambique (mō.sum.bē'kę). Portuguese name of Mozambique.

Moch (mok), Jules. b. at Paris, March 15, 1893—. French political leader, active in the Free French movement during World War II and a cabinet minister under the Fourth Republic. A graduate engineer, he headed (1919–20) the service of industrial restitution in occupied countries. He was a deputy (1928–40), a minister without portfolio (1931), and became minister of public works (1938). He was interned (1940–41), but was active in the Resistance movement and in the Free French movement at London and Algiers. He served as minister of public works (1945–46) and minister of interior (1947–48). After serving as premier (October, 1949), he was vice-premier and minister of the interior (1949–50) and minister of defense (1950 et seq.).

Mocha (mō'kạ). Seaport in SW Yemen, SW Arabian peninsula, situated on the Red Sea ab. 120 mi. NW of Aden. Formerly the chief center for export of coffee of distinctive aroma and flavor, which was named for the town, it has declined since the modern development of Aden and Hodeida as the chief ports. Pop. ab. 5,000.

Mochis (mō'chēs), Los. See Los Mochis.

Mock Doctor, The. Farce by Henry Fielding, slightly altered from Molière's comedy Le Médecin malgré lui.

Mock Doctor, The. English libretto of Charles Gounod's opera Le Médecin malgré lui, by Charles Kenny.

Mockel (mo.kel), Albert Henri Louis. b. at Ougrée les Liége, Belgium, 1866; d. 1945. Belgian-French poet and critic. Author of Chantefable un peu naïve (1891), Clartés (1901), and La Flamme immortelle (1924). As editor of the important literary review Wallonie, he was instrumental in establishing French symbolism in Belgian literature.

Mockery Gap. Novel by Theodore Francis Powys, published in 1925.

Mocoa (mō.kō'ä). Town in SW Colombia, capital of Putumayo commissary. 1,446 (1938).

Mocoas (mō.kō'ạz). Tribe of Indians in S Colombia, centered about the upper Japurá or Caquetá River and its branches. They are an agricultural and peaceable people, and are noted for their skill in weaving and dyeing cotton fabrics, and in other small industries. At present they are partially Europeanized, and speak a dialect of Quechua. Their own language, with that of several neighboring tribes, appears to constitute a distinct stock. The Engaños or Ingaños, on the Engaño River, a branch of the Caquetá, are either identical with the Mocoas or closely allied to them.

Mocquereau (mo.krō), Dom André. b. at Tessoualle, France, June 6, 1849; d. at Solesmes, France, Jan. 18, 1930. French Benedictine monk, an expert on Gregorian music. He was the founder of the Paléographie musicale, and author of Méthode de chant grégorien (1899) and Le Nombre musical grégorien ou rythmique grégorienne (1908).

Mocrum (mō'krum). Latin name of Makarska.

Moctezuma (môk.tā.sō'mä). See Montezuma I.

Moctezuma River. River in NE Mexico, flowing NE to join the Panuco River.

Modder (mod'ėr). River in S Africa, in the Orange Free State, Union of South Africa; it empties into a tributary of the Vaal, SW of the city of Kimberley. The passage of the Modder was forced by Paul Sanford Methuen, 3rd Baron Methuen, against the Boers under Piet Cronjé, with great loss, on Nov. 28, 1899, in his unsuccessful attempt to relieve Kimberley. Length, ab. 225 mi.

Modena (mô'dā.nä). Province in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Emilia-Romagna. Part of it was an independent duchy until 1860. Capital, Modena; area, ab. 1,040 sq. mi.; pop. 467,555 (1936).

Modena. [Ancient name, Mutina.] City and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Emilia-Romagna, the capital of the province of Modena, ab. 24 mi. NW of Bologna. The cathedral, consecrated in 1184, is a well-designed Romanesque structure. The west façade is one of the best of its date in Italy: it has three round-arched portals, a gallery of graceful triple arcades which is continued around the church, a large wheel-window, and much interesting sculpture. There are two sculptured porches on the south side. The three-aisled interior contains interesting sculpture and tombs. The Ghirlandina Tower, the campanile of the cathedral, finished to the spire in 1315, is one of the best of its kind. The height is 315 ft. The massive square lower stage, ab. 200 ft. high, bears the slender spire, which springs from an octagon of two arcaded tiers and is pierced with flower-like openings (whence the name of the tower). Other objects of interest are the art academy, university, picture gallery, library, and ducal palace. Modena became a Roman colony c183 B.C. It was situated on the Aemilian Way, and was a flourishing Roman city. It became the capital of the duchy of Modena, ruled by the Este family, and was famous in the 16th century for terra-cotta sculpture. Considerable damage was suffered during World War II by some buildings of tourist interest, but repairs have been completed or are being carried out. Pop. of commune, 96,337 (1936), 112,846 (1951); of town, 50,541 (1936).

Modena, Duchy of. Former duchy of N Italy, now included in the modern provinces of Modena, Massa-e-Carrara, and Reggio nell'Emilia. The family of Este became rulers of Modena c1290; it was made a duchy in 1452, was annexed to the Cispadane Republic in 1796, and passed to an Austrian line in 1814. There was an unsuccessful insurrection in 1848–49. The duke was deposed in 1859, and the duchy was united to the dominions of Victor Emmanuel I in 1860.

Modern Chivalry. Satirical novel by Hugh Henry Brackenridge, published between 1792 and 1815.

Modern Comedy, A. Omnibus volume by John Galsworthy, published in 1929, which includes The White Monkey (1924), The Silver Spoon (1926), and Swan Song (1928), and two "interludes," The Silent Wooing (1925) and Passersby (1927). This collective work depicts the fortunes of the Forsyte family in the 20th century.

Moderne Kapitalismus (mō.der'nẹ kä"pi.tä.lēs'mus). Der. Work (1916–27) by Werner Sombart, analyzing the nature and tracing the growth of modern capitalism as a unique historical phenomenon which characterizes a particular period in the development of Western civilization. Capitalism in its "high" stage is marked by a purely rational spirit which, the writer believed, was not present in its earlier periods.

Modern Instance, A. Novel by William Dean Howells, published in 1881.

Modern Language Association of America. Organization founded in 1883 (incorporated 1900) for the purpose of advancing research in modern languages and literature. It maintains headquarters at New York and publishes PMLA (quarterly), Monograph Series, and General Series.

Modern Love. Sequence of 50 poems by George Meredith, published in 1862. Each poem, consisting of 16 lines, deals with some phase of a passionate but unhappy and discordant marriage which ends in separation. It is supposed that the series of poems reflects Meredith's marriage with Mary Ellen Nicolls.

Modern Painters. Work on art, by John Ruskin (published 1843, 1846, 1856, and 1860).

Modern Temper, The. Critical work by Joseph Wood Krutch, published in 1929.

Modersohn (mō'dėr.zōn), Otto. b. at Soest, Germany, Feb. 22, 1865—. German landscape painter; husband of Paula Becker Modersohn. His work is in collections at Bremen, Berlin, Dresden, Munich, Prague, Weimar, and elsewhere. Autumn in the Swamp and Storm on the Teufelsmoor are among his better-known works.

Modersohn, Paula Becker. [Known as Paula Becker-Modersohn or Modersohn-Becker.] b. at Dresden, Germany, Feb. 8, 1876; d. at Worpswede, Germany, Nov. 21, 1907. German painter and etcher, a forerunner of expressionism, whose promising career was cut short in 1907; wife of Otto Modersohn. In 1900 she went to Paris, and the following year married Otto Modersohn and settled at Worpswede. She knew the work of Cézanne, Gauguin, and Van Gogh several years before Picasso and Matisse did, and was influenced by the post-impressionists, although she developed her own original style. There are two galleries in Germany, at Bremen and Worpswede, devoted solely to her work. Self-Portrait and Self-Portrait in Straw Hat are two of her better-known works.

Modesto (mō.des'tō). City in C California, county seat of Stanislaus County, situated in the San Joaquin Valley; packing, canning, and shipping center for fruits and vegetables. 17,389 (1950).

Modica (mō'dē.kä). [Ancient name, Motyca.] Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Ragusa, SE of Ragusa. Pop. of commune, 37,936 (1936); of town, 27,928 (1936).

Modicia (mō.dish'a). Ancient name of Monza, Italy.

Modigliani (mō.dē.lya'nē), Amedeo. b. at Leghorn (Livorno), Italy, July 12, 1884; d. at Paris, Jan. 25, 1920. Italian painter and sculptor. He studied at Leghorn, Florence, Rome, and Venice, and went to Paris in 1906. He was influenced by Cézanne, Matisse, Picasso, and primitive art, but his works have a classical feeling, and an elegance and sadness that are purely Italian. Since his death, his works have been exhibited and collected by almost every important museum of modern art in Europe and the U.S. Among his better-known paintings are: Peasant Boy, Portrait of Leon Bakst, The Rose Nude, Portrait of Lepoutre, Portrait of Zborowski, The Landlady's Daughter, Portrait of Mme. Modigliani, The Blue Child, Redhead, Recumbent Nude, The Green Corsage, Woman Seated, Woman with Necklace, Girl with Rose, and Bust of a Woman.

Modish (mō′dish), Lady Betty. In Colley Cibber's comedy The Careless Husband, a brilliant coquettish woman of quality, wayward and selfish, but not heartless.

Modjeska (mō.jes′kạ), Helena. [Polish, Modrzejewska; maiden name, Opid.] b. at Kraków, Poland, Oct. 12, 1840; d. at Los Angeles, Calif., April 9, 1909. Polish actress. She was married to her tutor, Gustav Modrzejewski, when she was about 17 years of age, and with him played in a stock company which toured Galicia. At the time of her second marriage, to Count Bozenta Chlapowski, in 1868, she was already known as a successful actress in Poland. In 1876, owing to restrictions laid upon her interpretations by Russian authorities at Warsaw, she sailed for America with her husband and a company of famous emigrés, including Henryk Sienkiewicz, the author of Quo Vadis. Settling in California, she made her first American appearance at San Francisco in the fall of 1877 in Adrienne Lecouvreur. In December of the same year she appeared in the same play at New York, and in January, 1878, played in Camille, which brought her instant recognition. From that time until her retirement in 1905 she was a well-known figure on the American stage, appearing also in many foreign capitals. Noted for her interpretation of Shakespearian heroines, she played the parts of Beatrice, Rosalind, Ophelia, Imogen, and Juliet, as well as Lady Macbeth and Desdemona, the latter played to Edwin Booth's Othello. In a large repertory of "emotional" roles, she appeared in Maria Stuart, several Ibsen plays, and even in "modern" plays of the French school by Alfred de Musset and Victorien Sardou. Her presentations won the acclaim not only of the public generally but of such critics as William Winter. The two directors Dion Boucicault and Charles Frohman managed most of her performances.

Modjeski (mō.jes′ki), Ralph. [Original surname, Modrzejewski.] b. at Kraków, Poland, Jan. 27, 1861; d. at Los Angeles, Calif., June 26, 1940. American civil engineer; son of Helena Modjeska. He was educated at the École des Ponts et Chaussées at Paris, came to the U.S. in 1876, and was a consulting engineer (1892 et seq.) at Chicago. He served as a member of the Quebec bridge commission, was chief engineer and chairman of the board of engineers for the Philadelphia-Camden bridge (completed in 1926), chairman of the board of consulting engineers for the Trans-Bay bridge at San Francisco (completed in 1936), and chief engineer of the Huey P. Long bridge at New Orleans.

Modjopahit (moj.o.pä′hit). See Majapahit.

Modlin (mô′dlēn). [Russian, Novogeorgievsk.] Fortress in C Poland, in the województwo (province) of Warszawa, situated at the junction of the Mkra and Narew rivers, near their influx into the Vistula River, ab. 18 mi. N of Warsaw. A strong fortress was erected here by Napoleon I in 1807, and later became part of the Russian system of fortifications against Germany, forming the fortified quadrangle, together with Warsaw, Ivangorod, and Brest-Litovsk; it was conquered by the Germans Aug. 20, 1915. In World War II, the Germans occupied the fortress on Sept. 28, 1939.

Mödling (mėd′ling). Town in E Austria, in the province of Vienna, on the slopes of the Wienerwald and on the Mödling River, S of Vienna. It is a station on the Südbahn railroad line between Vienna and Baden, has an agricultural school and enamel, metal, machine, and shoe factories. The inner town, around the Gothic Church of Saint Othmar, is of medieval character. 15,379 (1946).

Modoc (mō′dok). North American Indian tribe, now greatly reduced, formerly inhabiting NE California and S central Oregon. The language belonged to what used to be called the Klamath-Modoc family. Klamath and Modoc are now reclassified as comprising the Lutuamian linguistic family.

Modoura (mō.dö′ṛạ). Ancient Greek name of Muttra, city.

Modred (mō′dred). [Also, Mordred.] In Arthurian romance, the treacherous nephew (or son) of King Arthur, a knight of the Round Table. When Arthur departed for the campaign against Rome, he left both his kingdom and his queen in Modred's care, but Modred seized both in his absence. When Arthur returned he drove Modred out of the kingdom and finally killed him at the battle of Camlan, but was killed himself.

Modrzejewska (môd.zhe.yef′skä), Helena. See Modjeska, Helena.

Modrzejewski (môd.zhe.yef′skē), Ralph. See Modjeski, Ralph.

Modugno (mō.dö′nyō). Town and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Bari, ab. 6 mi. SW of Bari. Pop. of commune, 11,433 (1936); of town, 11,047 (1936).

Moe (mō′ę), Jørgen Ingebretsen. b. on the estate of Moe, Ringerige, Norway, 1813; d. at Kristiansand, Vest-Agder, Norway, 1880. Norwegian poet, folklorist, and theologian. He studied theology at Christiania (now Oslo) after 1830. His first literary venture was the little Samling af Sange, Folkeviser og Stev i norske Almuedialecter (Collection of Songs, Ballads, and Staves in the Norwegian Popular Dialects, 1840). With public assistance he now set about the collecting, in various parts of Norway, of popular literature of the same character; and in 1841, in collaboration with Peter Christian Asbjørnsen, published Norske Folke Eventyr (Norwegian Folk-Tales). A collection of his later poems appeared in 1845 under the title At hænge paa Juletræet (To Hang on the Christmas Tree). His earlier poems were collected and published as Digte (Poems) in 1849. In 1853 he became a clergyman, and ultimately was made bishop of Kristiansand. His collected works, Samlede Skrifter, were published in 1877 in two volumes.

Moe, Moltke. b. at Krødsherad, near Oslo, Norway, June 19, 1859; d. at Oslo, Dec. 15, 1913. Norwegian folklorist and scholar; son of Jørgen Ingebretsen Moe. He served as professor (1899 et seq.) at Oslo, and edited collections of folk songs and fairy tales. Author of Samlede Skrifter (1925–27).

Moeller (mul′ėr), Henry. b. at Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec. 11, 1849; d. there, Jan. 5, 1925. American Roman Catholic clergyman, archbishop (1904 et seq.) of Cincinnati.

Moeller, Louis Charles. b. at New York, Aug. 5, 1855; d. at Weehawken, N.J., Nov. 11, 1930. American genre painter. He became a member of the National Academy of Design in 1895. His painting Disagreement is in the Corcoran Gallery, Washington, D.C.

Moeller van den Bruck (mėl′ėr fän den brůk′), Arthur. b. 1876; d. 1925. German writer, notable for his strongly nationalistic and conservative views. He edited Poe's works in German (10 vols., 1901–04) and was coeditor (with Dmitri Merezhkovsky) of the first German edition of Dostoevski's works (22 vols., 1906–15). His political writings include Das Recht der jungen Völker (1919) and Das Dritte Reich (1923). The title of the latter work came to be adopted as the unofficial designation of Hitler's Germany.

Møen or Möen (mė′ęn). See Møn.

Moenus (mē′nus). Latin name of the Main.

Moerae (mē′rē). See Moirai.

Moeris (mē′ris), Lake. In ancient geography, an artificial lake in Middle Egypt, W of the Nile, ab. 50 mi. SW of what is now Cairo. It was mentioned by Herodotus. The old lake basin is now partly occupied by the shallow lake Birket el Kurun.

Moero or Moëro (mō.ā′rō), Lake. See Mweru, Lake.

Moers (mėrs). [Also: Mörs; French, Meurs.] Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, situated near the Rhine River, ab. 6 mi. NW of Duisburg-Hamborn: coal mines, iron foundries, and machinery, metalworking, chemical, leather, and textile industries. There are old town walls, a castle of the 14th century, and agricultural and mining schools. It was an independent county and principality until 1801, belonged to France, 1801–14, and then passed to Prussia. 34,832 (1950).

Moeschlin (mésh'lin), Felix. b. at Basel, Switzerland, 1882—. Swiss author and journalist writing in German. After a prolonged sojourn in Sweden he wrote Der Amerika-Johann (1912), the story of a Swedish emigrant returning to his native village, where he is unable to adjust himself to the moral demands of a frugal existence in the country. Wir durchbohren den Gotthard (1947–48) is an account of the building of the Gotthard Tunnel in the Alps.

Moesia (mē'shi.ą). In ancient geography, a northeastern province of the Roman Empire, lying N of the Balkans, S of the Danube, and W of the Black Sea, corresponding to the N and C parts of modern Bulgaria and Serbia. It was made a Roman province c16 B.C., was divided later into Moesia Superior (in the W) and Moesia Inferior (in the E), and was overrun by Goths in the 3rd and 4th centuries.

Moeskroen (mös'krön). Flemish form of Mouscron.

Moesogoths (mē'sō.goths). Those Goths who, after their conversion to Christianity by Ulfilas about the middle of the 4th century, settled in Moesia, and there, under the protection of the Roman emperors, devoted themselves to agricultural pursuits.

Mofadhdhal (mō.fäd'däl), Abul Abbas al-. d. 784 A.D. Arab poet, philologist, and genealogist. His principal work was a collection of the most celebrated longer poems of the Arabs, ab. 128 in number. Called the Mofadhdhaliat, it is the oldest anthology of Arab poets, of whom 68, most of them of the early Islamic years, are represented. His other works were a book of proverbs, a treatise on prosody, and a vocabulary.

Moffat (mof'ąt). Police burgh and spa in S Scotland, in Dumfriesshire, ab. 20 mi. NE of Dumfries, ab. 341 mi. N of London by rail. The town has mineral springs. 2,024 (est. 1948).

Moffat, David Halliday. b. at Washingtonville, N.Y., July 22, 1839; d. en route to New York, March 18, 1911. American capitalist. He promoted railroads, including the Denver and Pacific (of which he was treasurer) and the Denver, Northwestern and Pacific (the original main line of which is sometimes still called the "Moffat road").

Moffat, Robert. b. at Ormiston, East Lothian, Scotland, Dec. 21, 1795; d. at Leigh, Lancashire, England, Aug. 8, 1883. Scottish missionary. After a course of study he was accepted by the London Missionary Society in 1816, arrived at Capetown Jan. 13, 1817, and labored among the Bechuana until 1870. By 1826 he had prepared a spelling book of the Bechuana language. Parts of the Scriptures were translated into Bechuana. The New Testament was completed and carried by him to London in 1839. In London he met David Livingstone, who married his daughter in 1844. The translation of the Old Testament into Bechuana was finished in 1857. He returned to England finally in June, 1870. He published Missionary Labours and Scenes in South Africa (1842).

Moffatt (mof'ąt), James. b. at Glasgow, July 4, 1870; d. at New York, June 27, 1944. Scottish theologian and author. He was ordained (1896) a minister of the United Free Church of Scotland, was professor of Greek (1912–15) at Mansfield College, Oxford, and served as professor of church history at the United Free Church College, Glasgow (1915–27) and the Union Theological Seminary, New York (1927–38). His works include Presbyterianism, Theology of the Gospels, Love in the New Testament, and The Books of the Prophets. He translated the New Testament, published as The Moffatt New Testament (1913).

Moffat Tunnel (mof'ąt). Railroad tunnel in N central Colorado, in Grand and Gilpin counties, piercing the Continental Divide in the Rocky Mountains, ab. 40 mi. NW of Denver. The tunnel, named for David Halliday Moffat, was completed in 1928, and the railroad between Salt Lake City and Denver via the Moffat Tunnel was opened in 1934, shortening the rail distance between these two cities by ab. 173 mi. Length, ab. 6.3 mi.; elevation, ab. 9,200 ft.

Moffett (mof'ęt), Cleveland Langston. b. at Boonville, N.Y., April 27, 1863; d. at Paris, Oct. 14, 1926. American journalist and author of books, plays, and short stories. His plays include Money Talks (1906) and Greater Than the Law (1912). Among his other works are The Mysterious Card (1912) and True Detective Stories from the Archives of the Pinkertons (1897).

Moffett, William Adger. b. at Charleston, S.C., Oct. 31, 1869; killed in the crash of the dirigible Akron off the New Jersey coast, April 4, 1933. American naval officer. He served (1898) on the Charleston under Admiral Dewey at the capture of Manila. He was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for distinction as commander (1914) of the Chester at the capture of Veracruz under Admiral H. T. Mayo. During World War I he was commander (1914–18) of the naval training station at Great Lakes, Ill. He was chief (1921–33) of the bureau of aeronautics.

Mogadishu (mog.ą.dish'ö). [Also: Magadoxo; Italian, Mogadiscio (mō.gä.dē'shō).] Seaport, capital of Italian Somaliland, situated on the coast of the Indian Ocean, about one third of the way from the border of Kenya to Cape Guardafui. It was one of the chief Italian bases and ports of supply during the conquest (1936) of Ethiopia, and was taken (February, 1941) by British forces in World War II. Pop. ab. 74,000 (1950).

Mogador (mog'ą.dôr). Seaport in NW Africa, in French Morocco, situated on the Atlantic coast ab. 100 mi. W of Marrakech, with which it is connected by road. It has important commerce. The French occupied the city in 1907. Pop. 28,620 (1947).

Moghileff (mo.gē.lyôf'). See Mogilev and Mogilev-Podolski.

Moghileff on the Dniester (nēs'tėr, dnyes'tėr). See Mogilev-Podolski.

Moghreb el Aksa (mô'greb el āk'są). Arabic name of Morocco.

Mogí das Cruzes (mō.zhē' dąs krö'zēs). City in S Brazil, in the state of São Paulo. 31,782 (1950).

Mogila (mo.gē'lą), Peter. [Also, Peter Mogilas (mo.gē'ląs).] b. in Moldavia, c1596; d. 1647. Russian prelate and theologian. As metropolitan of Kiev (1632 et seq.), he had drawn up (1640) the Orthodox Confession, the leading symbol of the Eastern Church, which was accepted by the patriarchs of Constantinople, Jerusalem, Antioch, and Alexandria, and by the synod of Jerusalem (1672).

Mogilev (mo.gē.lyôf'; Anglicized, mō'gi.lef). [Also: Mogilev (or Mohileff or Moghileff) on the Dnieper.] City in W U.S.S.R., in the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, ab. 115 mi. E of Minsk, situated on the Dnieper River: agricultural machinery, clothing, leather, and food-processing industries. It has a flourishing trade. Near it, on July 23, 1812, the French under Louis Nicolas Davout defeated the Russians under Prince P. I. Bagration. The city fell to the Germans in August, 1941, and was recaptured by Russian forces in June, 1944. Pop. 99,440 (1939).

Mogilev-Podolski (-po.dôl'ski). [Also: Mogilev (or Mohileff or Moghileff) on the Dniester (nēs'tėr, dnyes'tėr).] Town in SW U.S.S.R., in the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, situated on the E bank of the Dniester River: food processing. 22,000 (1935).

Mogliano Veneto (mō.lyä'nō ve'nā.tō). Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Treviso, ab. 10 mi. NW of Venice. The Villa Trevisanato was undamaged in World War II. Pop. of commune, 12,669 (1936); of town, 1,870 (1936).

Mogok (mō'gōk). Town in N central Burma, ab. 70 mi. NE of Mandalay: the center for the mining of rubies and other precious stones in Burma. It is served by two highways. 6,078 (1931).

Mogollon (mō.gǫ.yōn'). Indian culture, known only archaeologically, from SE Arizona and SW New Mexico and dated as having existed from c500 B.C. to 1200 or 1400 A.D. It was possibly an outgrowth of the Cochise culture, but during its history was increasingly influenced by the neighboring Anasazi culture.

Mogollon Mountains. Range of mountains in SW New Mexico. Peak elevation, 10,892 ft.

Mogollon Plateau. [Also, Mogollon Mesa.] Extensive mesa or plateau region in E central Arizona, N of the Salt River valley and occupying the SW margin of the Colorado Plateau. It is the high SW portion of the Colorado Plateau, mostly lying at an elevation above 7,000 ft., and with extensive pine forests. The highest point is ab. 8,076 ft. The rim of the plateau borders on a rugged mountainous area which drops abruptly into canyons and to the desert region of S central Arizona.

Mogontiacum (mō.gon.ti'a.kum). Latin name of Mainz.

Mogridge (mog'rij), George. b. at Ashted, near Birmingham, England, Feb. 17, 1787; d. at Hastings, England, Nov. 2, 1854. English writer, chiefly of juveniles.

Moguls (mō'gulz, mō.gulz'), Empire of the. [Also, Empire of the Mughals.] Mohammedan empire in India. It began with Baber, conqueror of Hindustan, 1526, and was at its height under Akbar, Jahangir, Shah Jehan, and Aurung-Zeb. After the death of the last-named (1707), the empire split up and the power passed to the Mahrattas and to the British in 1803. The last (nominal) emperor was deposed in 1857 (d. 1862). The greatness of the Mogul Empire survives in its art and architecture.

Mohács (mō'hächˌ). City in S Hungary, on the W bank of the Danube River, N of the Yugoslav border. It is connected by railroad with Pécs. It has woolen, hemp, and linen industries, and is a center of lumber and grain trade and a river port. Here, on Aug. 29, 1526, the Turkish sultan Suleiman II defeated Louis II of Hungary, thus subjecting Hungary to Turkish rule; in 1687, Duke Charles V of Lorraine and Louis of Baden, commanding the imperial army, defeated the Turks. 19,081 (1948).

Mohammed (mō.ham'ĕd) or Mahomet (mą.hom'ĕt). [Also: Mahomed, Muhammad, Mahmoud, Mahmud, Mehemet; Eng. trans., "Praised One."]. b. at Mecca, Arabia, c570; d. at Medina, Arabia, June 8, 632. The founder of Mohammedanism, or Islam (meaning "surrender," namely, to God). He was the posthumous son of Abdallah by his wife Amina, of the family of Hashim, of the noble tribe of Koreish, and was brought up in the desert among the Banu Saad by a Bedouin woman named Halima. At the age of six he lost his mother, and at eight his grandfather, after which he was cared for by his uncle. As a youth he attended sundry preachings and literary recitations at the annual fair of Okatz at Mecca, which may have awakened his poetical and rhetorical powers and his religious feelings. He came to be known among his people as al-Amin ("the trustworthy or faithful"). It was, in all probability, at the commercial city of Mecca that he first came in contact with Jews and Christians. For some time he was occupied as a shepherd, to which he later refers as being in accordance with his career as a prophet, even as it was with that of Moses and David. When 25 years old he entered the service of the widow Khadijah, and made a successful business journey to Syria, where he had an opportunity to come in frequent contact with Jews and Christians and to increase his knowledge of their religious teachings. He soon married Khadijah, who was 15 years his senior. Of the six children which she bore him, Fatima became the most famous as the only one to carry on Mohammed's line. In 605 he attained some influence in Mecca by settling a dispute about the rebuilding of the Kaaba. The impressions which he had gathered from his contact with Judaism and Christianity, and from Arabic lore, began now strongly to engage his mind. He frequently retired to solitary places, especially to the cave of Mount Hira, north of Mecca. He passed at that time (he was then about 40 years old) through great mental struggles. It must have been during these lonely contemplations that the yearnings for a messenger from God for his people, and the thought that he himself might be destined for this mission, were born in his ardent mind. During one of his reveries, in the month of Ramadan, 610, he heard the voice of the angel Gabriel, who ordered him to recite after him the words which begin the 96th sura (chapter) of the Koran. This is known as the Call of Mohammed. After the lapse of some time, the revelations began to follow one another frequently. His own belief in his mission as apostle and prophet of God was now firmly established. The first convert was his wife Khadijah, then followed his cousin Ali, his adopted son Zeid, and his friend Abu-Bakr, afterward his father-in-law and first successor (caliph). Gradually some 50 adherents rallied about him. But after three years' preaching the mass of the Meccans rose against him, so that part of his followers had to flee to Abyssinia for safety in 614. This is termed the first hejira (flight). Mohammed in the meanwhile continued his meetings in the house of one of his disciples, in front of the Kaaba, which later became known as the "House of Islam." At one time he offered the Koreish a compromise, admitting some of their gods into his system as intercessors with Allah, the Supreme Being, but, becoming conscience-stricken, he repented of this deed and uncompromisingly asserted the unity of God. The conversion of the hitherto belligerent Hamza and Omar and a few others in 615–616 strengthened his cause. The alarmed Koreish now excommunicated Mohammed and his followers, who were therefore forced to live in retirement. In 620, at the pilgrimage, he won over to his teachings a small party from the northern city of Medina. In Medina, whither a teacher was deputed, the new religion spread rapidly. In 622 more than 70 persons from Medina bound themselves to stand by Mohammed. These invited him to their city to arbitrate their tribal disputes, and in return promised him their support against his Meccan enemies. The Meccans now plotted to kill Mohammed, and he fled on June 20, 622, to Medina. This is known as the Hejira, and marks the beginning of the Mohammedan era. This event formed a turning point in the activity of Mohammed. He was thus far a religious preacher and persuader; he became in his Medinian period a legislator and warrior. He built there in 623 the first mosque, and married Ayesha, the young daughter of Abu-Bakr, his friend and successor. To this period also belongs the vision or dream of the miraculous ride on the winged horse Al Borak to Jerusalem, where he was received by the prophets, and thence ascended to heaven. In 624 the first battle for the faith took place between Mohammed and the Meccans in the plain of Bedr; the latter were defeated. He now changed the direction of prayer (kibla) from that of Jerusalem to that of the Kaaba at Mecca, appointed Friday as the day for public worship, and instituted the fast of the month of Ramadan and the tithe or poor rate. Mohammed had at first reached out to the Jews of Medina for recognition and support. These, however, not only refused to recognize him as a prophet, but ridiculed his claims and teaching. He retaliated by accusing them of falsifying the Scriptures and now claimed that God had sent him as the last and the "seal of the prophets" to restore and complete the sacred revelation. As the rift widened, Mohammed took aggressive measures. The Jewish tribe of the Banu Kainuka, settled at Medina, was driven out; while of another Jewish tribe, the Banu Kuraiza, all the men, some 600 in number, were executed for their plotting against him with the Meccans. In 625 Mohammed and his followers were defeated by the Meccans in the battle of Ohud. The following years were filled with expeditions. One tribe after another submitted to Mohammed, until by late 630 something like a definite Mohammedan state was established, the culmination coming in the conquest of Mecca itself. In the following years Mohammed concluded treaties of peace with the Jews and Christians, who were called on to pay land and poll taxes in return for protection and freedom of worship. This policy was followed by his successors. In 632 the prophet made his last pilgrimage to Mecca, known as the "farewell pilgrimage," or the pilgrimage of the "announcement" of "Islam." In the same year he died while planning an expedition against the frontier of the Byzantine Empire. Mohammed was a little above middle height, of a commanding figure, and is described as being of a modest, tender, and generous disposition. His manner of life was very simple and frugal. He mended his own clothes, and his common diet was bread, dates, and water. But he enjoyed perfumes and the charms of women. His character appears composed of the strongest inconsistencies. He could be tender, kind, and liberal, but on occasion could sanction wholesale political executions. His leadership and vision led him to undertake, with some measure of success, a social revolution in Arabia, where religious unity and allegiance took precedence over the blood ties of tribe and family, and where woman made some progress towards emancipation. With regard to his prophetic claims, it is less difficult to assume that he was sincere throughout, or self-deceived, than that he was throughout an impostor. In his doctrines there is practically nothing original. The legends of the Koran are chiefly drawn from the Old and New Testaments and rabbinical literature, though Mohammed presents them as original revelations by the angel Gabriel.

Mohammed I (of Turkey). [Also, Mahomet I.] b. c1387; d. 1421. Sultan of the Turks (1413–21); a younger brother of Bajazet I. He reunited the empire that had fallen apart as the result of Tamerlane's conquests. He is credited with establishing the Ottoman navy.

Mohammed II (of Turkey). [Called Mohammed the Conqueror, Mohammed the Great.] b. c1430; d. 1481. Sultan of Turkey (1451–81); son of Murad II whom he succeeded. In 1444, his father, tired of the continued warfare with the Europeans, abdicated in his favor but soon was forced to resume the throne because of the inroads of the Hungarians. Murad died in 1451 and Mohammed finally became sultan. He prepared a tremendous assault on Constantinople, and on May 29, 1453, after a 53-day siege, carried the city, the last Byzantine emperor, Constantine XI, dying in its defense. Constantinople now became the capital of the Ottoman empire and was transformed into a Moslem city; the cathedral of Hagia Sophia became a mosque and the Levantine inhabitants of the city were given special privileges. Mohammed proceeded with his conquests: he subdued the Morea, Serbia, Bosnia, and Albania, and made (1475) the Crimea a dependency. He was defeated by John Hunyadi at Belgrade (1456) and by the Knights of St. John at Rhodes (1479), but won Scutari and other places and a large indemnity from Venice in 1478 after a war of 15 years. He conquered Trebizond and Karamania in Asia Minor and captured (1480) Otranto in Italy. He was a noted patron of the arts and education, and is credited with founding the ulema, the ecclesiastical court of Islam. He is regarded as the real founder of the Ottoman power.

Mohammed III (of Turkey). b. 1566; d. 1603. Sultan of Turkey (1595–1603); son of Murad III whom he succeeded. His army defeated (1596) the forces of the Holy Roman Empire at Keresztes, but the war in Hungary continued indecisively. In the last years of his reign he was faced with several revolts and in 1603 with a war against Persia, losing Tabriz to the Persians just before his death.

Mohammed IV (of Turkey). b. c1641; d. 1691. Sultan of Turkey (1648–87); son of Ibrahim whom he succeeded after the latter was deposed and killed. Internal disorders prevailed until, under the viziers Mohammed Kuprili and his son, Ahmed, the disturbances were suppressed (1656 et seq.). He was deposed as a result of the reverses sustained by his arms at Vienna (1683) and Mohács (1687).

Mohammed V (of Turkey). b. Nov. 3, 1844; d. July 3, 1918. Sultan of Turkey (1909–18). Until the time he succeeded (April 27, 1909) his deposed elder brother, Sultan Abdul Hamid II, in the sultanate, he had been in captivity as a prisoner of state. His lack of experience and education made him a ruler of very minor importance; he was completely under the influence of the Young Turks. As a result of the Balkan Wars (1912–13) Turkey's possessions in Europe shrank to a fraction of what they had been, and Turkey's siding with the Central Powers in World War I resulted in further loss of territory.

Mohammed VI (of Turkey). b. at Constantinople, Jan. 12, 1861; d. at San Remo, Italy, May 16, 1926. Sultan of Turkey (1918–22). The brother of Mohammed V, he faced popular dissatisfaction caused by the Greek seizure of Smyrna after World War I. His efforts to suppress the Nationalists under Mustafa Kemal were unsuccessful, and after his deposition (Nov. 3, 1922) by the national assembly, he went into exile.

Mohammed, Abu Abdallah. See ibn-Batuta.

Mohammed, Ras. See Ras Muhammad.

Mohammed Ali (ä'lē). See also Mehemet Ali.

Mohammed Ali. b. 1872; d. 1925. Shah of Persia (1907–09); son of Muzaffar-ed-Din. His rule began shortly after the inauguration of the government under the constitution of 1906. In his opposition to constitutional government in Persia, he called on the Russians for support. After a period (1908–09) of civil war, he abdicated, and, following an unsuccessful attempt to regain the throne, went into retirement in Europe. He was succeeded by his son, Ahmed Shah.

Mohammed Ali. b. 1878; d. 1931. Indian Moslem leader and advocate of pan-Islamism. He was a founder (1906) of the All-India Moslem League, and after World War I was a leader of the Moslem community in the agitation to preserve the powers of the sultan of Turkey as caliph of the Islamic world. His violent campaign in favor of Turkey forced many Moslems into the Indian nationalist movement headed by Gandhi. Mohammed Ali continued to lend his services to the cause of Indian nationalism, although he considered himself a supranationalist because of loyalty to Islamic authority beyond the Indian borders. Imprisoned (1921) because he urged Indian Moslems to refuse military service and because he publicly urged Indians to aid Afghan forces if they invaded India, he later took part in discussions of the future of India at the round table conference in 1931.

Mohammedanism. [Also, Islam.] Religion named after its founder and prophet, Mohammed. Every true follower of it is called upon to perform certain prescribed rites: to recite the creed, "There is no God but Allah, and Mohammed is his prophet"; to worship God, from the age of seven, five times daily, morning, noon, afternoon, evening, and night, by praying on individual prayer rugs, washing his hands and feet, kneeling, touching his forehead to the ground, and, always, facing to the east; to fast during the month of Ramadan (which is their ninth month); to give prescribed alms to the poor; and, if it is at all possible for him to do so, to make the pilgrimage to Mecca once in his life. It is estimated that there are over 210 million Mohammedans today, most of them in Asia Minor, India, China, and Africa. The word Islam is also often used to refer to the entire Mohammedan world, as well as the religion.

Mohammed ibn-Daud (ib'n dä.ōd'). See Alp Arslan.

Mohammed Nadir Shah (nä'dir shä). See Nadir Shah, Mohammed.

Mohammed Riza Pahlavi (rē.zä' pä'lä.vē). b. c1919—. Shah (1941 et seq.) of Iran (formerly Persia). He succeeded his father, Riza Shah Pahlavi, who abdicated on Sept. 16, 1941. His reign was marked by increasing pressure from the U.S.S.R. and Great Britain for control of the strategic area of Iran and for its oil. The nationalization of the oil industry under Premiers Hussein Allah and Mohammed Mossadegh in 1951 was an attempt to relieve this pressure.

Mohammed Zahir Shah (zä.hēr' shä). b. at Kabul, Afghanistan, Oct. 3, 1914—. King of Afghanistan (1933 et seq.); son of Nadir Shah. During the reign of Zahir Shah, diplomatic relations were established in 1942 with the U.S. and with other lands, including the Union of India and Pakistan.

Mohammerah (mō.hä.me.rä'). Former name of Khorramshahr.

Moharek (mō.hä'rek). See Muharraq.

Moharram (mō.här'ram). See Muharram.

Moharraq (mō.här'rak). See Muharraq.

Mohave (mō.hä'vē). Tribe of North American Indians formerly occupying the region of the lower Colorado River in Arizona and California. Their culture was largely agricultural; they practiced totemic clan exogamy, and were lacking in stone architecture, basketry, masks, and representative art. Their language is classified in the Colorado-Gila group of the Yuman family of North American Indian languages.

Mohave Desert. See Mojave Desert.

Mohawk (mō'hôk). North American Indian tribe formerly centered in what is now the E part of the state of New York. It was one of the member tribes of the League of the Iroquois. They spoke an Iroquoian Indian language.

Mohawk. Village in C New York, in Montgomery County: manufactures of knitted underwear. 3,196 (1950).

Mohawk River. River in E central New York which joins the Hudson at Cohoes, ab. 9 mi. N of Albany. The Cohoes Falls (70 ft. high), near its mouth, have been used to develop water power. Length, 148 mi.

Mohawk Trail. Historic route traversing N Massachusetts from Boston through Lexington, Concord, Fitchburg, Greenfield, and North Adams, now followed by State Highway 2. It was the route most commonly used by settlers migrating westward, as it linked C New England with the Hudson and Mohawk valleys.

Mohawk Trail. Historic route through the Mohawk valley in E New York, which led from the Hudson W to the Great Lakes region. It was an important route for settlers migrating westward until it was supplanted by the Erie Canal, and later, by the railroad.

Mohee (mō'hē). Little. See Little Mohee.

Mohegan (mō hē'gan). [Also, Mohican.] Tribe of North American Indians formerly occupying SW Connecticut.

They belonged to the Algonquian linguistic stock. Originally they were united with the Pequot under one chief. One small group, however, rebelled and broke away and established a new settlement centering about the present town of Mohegan, which is named for them. This group became specifically known as the Mohegan. Later, however, the Mohegan and Pequot reunited, and with English support became a powerful group in New England. Eventually they gave up their lands to white settlers, moved onto a reservation on the Thames River in Connecticut, and quickly died out.

Mohéli (mo.ā.lē). See under Comoro Islands.

Mohenjo-Daro (mō.hen'jō dä'rō). Ancient civilization of the Indus valley in India. It supported large cities, laid out to plan, with many-roomed houses of brick, and had an elaborate municipal sewage system. Remains of a prehistoric embankment point to continued efforts at primitive flood control. Evidences of extensive trade have been found, high developments in jewelry, metallurgy, and other arts were attained.

Mohican (mō.hē'kan). See Mahican, and Mohegan.

Mohileff (mō.hē.lyôf'). See Mogilev and Mogilev-Podolski.

Mohl (mōl), Hugo von. b. at Stuttgart, Germany, April 8, 1805; d. at Tübingen, Germany, April 1, 1872. German botanist; brother of Julius and Robert von Mohl. He became (1835) professor of botany at Tübingen. He was an authority on vegetable anatomy and physiology, and made valuable contributions to the study of the cell. The word "protoplasm" applied to the extra-nuclear cell substance was his suggestion.

Mohl, Julius von. b. at Stuttgart, Germany, Oct. 28, 1800; d. at Paris, Jan. 4, 1876. German Orientalist; brother of Hugo and Robert von Mohl. He became professor of Oriental literature at Tübingen in 1826, resided (1826–27, 1830–31), at London and Oxford, and was appointed professor of Persian at the Collège de France in 1845. He edited the Shahnamah (1838–68).

Mohl, Robert von. b. at Stuttgart, Germany, Aug. 17, 1799; d. at Berlin, Nov. 5, 1875. German jurist; brother of Hugo and Julius von Mohl. He published works on constitutional law, political science, and others, including Geschichte und Litteratur der Staatswissenschaft (1855–58) and Staatsrecht, Völkerrecht und Politik (1860–69).

Möhler (mė'lėr), Johann Adam. b. at Igersheim, Württemberg, Germany, May 6, 1796; d. at Munich, April 12, 1838. German Roman Catholic theologian, professor at Tübingen, and after 1835 at Munich. His chief work is Symbolik (1832), a book that aroused much controversy with Protestant apologists.

Mohler (mō'lėr), John Robbins. b. at Philadelphia, May 9, 1875—. American bacteriologist, chief of the pathological division of the U.S. Bureau of Animal Industry from 1902 and head (1917 et seq.) of the bureau.

Mohn (mōn). German name of Muhu.

Mohn, Henrik. b. at Bergen, Norway, May 15, 1835; d. at Oslo, Sept. 12, 1916. Norwegian meteorologist. He headed (1876–78) an expedition to the northern coast of Norway, formulated a hypothesis of arctic currents and drift, and is best known for his study of the oceanography and meteorology of the north Atlantic regions and for his investigations of the dynamics of the atmosphere. Author of the widely translated Grundzüge der Meteorologie (1875; 5th ed., 1898).

Mohocks (mō'hoks). Ruffians who infested the streets of London about the beginning of the 18th century: so called from the fact that their savagery was supposed to resemble that of the Mohawk (or, in an older form, Mohock) Indians.

Moholy-Nagy (mō'hōy' nôdy'), László (or Ladislaus). b. at Borsod, Hungary, July 20, 1895; d. at Chicago, Nov. 24, 1946. Hungarian painter, designer, photographer, typographer, and writer, who taught at the Bauhaus at Weimar and Dessau, and coedited the Bauhaus books with Gropius. He originally studied law, but turned to painting in 1915.

Mohon (mo.ôn). Town in NE France, in the department of Ardennes, situated on the Meuse River, adjoining Mézières, of which it is a southeastern suburb. It has iron foundries and nail works. 7,705 (1946).

Mohr (mōr), Charles Theodore. b. at Eslingen, Germany, Dec. 28, 1824; d. at Asheville, N.C., July 17, 1901. American botanist. He emigrated to the U.S. after the revolution of 1848 and settled finally (1857) at Mobile, Ala., where he undertook a thorough study of the flora of the state. Of almost a hundred papers his most important are a report on the Alabama forests for the Tenth Census, a report on the timber pines of the southern U.S., and Plant Life of Alabama (1901).

Mohr, Eduard. b. at Bremen, Germany, Feb. 19, 1828; d. at Malange, Angola, Africa, Nov. 26, 1876. German traveler in Polynesia, the Bering Sea, California, and Africa.

Mohr, Friedrich. [Full name, Karl Friedrich Mohr.] b. at Koblenz, Germany, Nov. 4, 1806; d. at Bonn, Germany, Sept. 27, 1879. German chemist and physicist. He became (1867) professor of pharmacy at Bonn. He is best known for his work in volumetric analysis.

Mohr, Josef. b. 1792; d. 1848. Austrian priest and poet. He is remembered by the poem Stille Nacht, Heilige Nacht (Silent Night, Holy Night), which has become one of the best-known of all Christmas anthems.

Mohs (mōs), Friedrich. b. at Gernrode, in Anhalt, Germany, Jan. 29, 1773; d. at Agordo, near Belluno, Italy, Sept. 29, 1839. German mineralogist, professor successively at Graz, Freiberg, and Vienna. His scale of hardness, ranging from talc (1) to diamond (10), is widely used. He wrote Grundriss der Mineralogie (1822–24) and others.

Mohun (mön), Charles. [Title, 5th Baron Mohun.] b. c1675; killed in a duel in Hyde Park, London, Nov. 15, 1712. English desperado. On Dec. 9, 1692, he was associated with Captain Richard Hill in the murder of William Mountfort, the actor, but he was acquitted after trial by the House of Lords. He was repeatedly engaged in duels, and twice tried for murder and acquitted. In 1701 he was involved in a protracted lawsuit with James Douglas, 4th Duke of Hamilton, over the estate of the Earl of Macclesfield, which resulted in a duel and the death of both parties. This duel figures in Thackeray's Henry Esmond.

Mohun, Michael. b. c1625; d. at London, in October, 1684. English actor. Before the English Civil War he performed at the Cockpit, Drury Lane, London. He fought in the army of Charles I and in Flanders. He returned with Charles II, and was with Thomas Killigrew's company from 1660 to 1663. Pepys calls him the "best actor in the world," and he was said to "speak as Shakespeare wrote."

Moi (moi). Any or all of the Mon-Khmer-speaking tribes dwelling in the mountains of the highlands of Annam in Indochina. The predominant physical type among the Moi is said to be non-Mongoloid, with a medium-long head, wavy hair, a broad, flat nose, and brown skin. However, there is much variation and Mongoloid admixture. This type is classified as Veddoid by some authorities, and by others compared with the Proto-Malay or Indonesian racial type of the Malay Archipelago; hence the Moi are sometimes called Indonesians (regardless of the degree to which a particular tribe conforms to the Proto-Malay type). Any or all of the indigenous mountain peoples of Indochina are also referred to as Moi. In this usage, the term includes also various tribes speaking Thai, Tibeto-Burman, or Miao-Yao languages.

Moigno (mwȧ.nyō), François Napoléon Marie. b. at Guéméné, Morbihan, France, April 20, 1804; d. at St.-Denis, Seine, France, July 13, 1884. French mathematician. He wrote Leçons de calcul (1840–44) and other works.

Moineaux (mwȧ.nō), Georges. See Courteline, Georges.

Moir (moir), David Macbeth. [Pseudonym, Delta, written Δ.] b. at Musselburgh, Scotland, Jan. 5, 1798; d. at Dumfries, Scotland, July 6, 1851. Scottish author. Among his works are poems, the tale Autobiography of Mansie Wauch, Tailor (1828), and Sketches of the Poetical Literature of the Past Half-Century (1851).

Moirai (moi'rī). [Also: Moirae, Moerae.] In Greek mythology, the three birth goddesses, identified with the Fates. Homer uses the name in the singular, as of a single divinity, and also in the plural. He also calls them the "spinners of the thread of life." They are spoken of as daughters of Night and Darkness, and also as daughters of Zeus and Themis. Hesiod represented them as three:

Clotho (the spinner), Lachesis (disposer of lots), and Atropos (the inevitable). The first spins the thread of life, the second fixes its length, and the third severs it.

Moisant (moi'sant), John B. b. at Chicago, April 25, 1870; d. near New Orleans, La., Dec. 31, 1910. American architect and aviator. While traveling in France he became interested in aviation, bought a Blériot monoplane, and after a very little practice flew from Paris to London in August, 1910, carrying a passenger, the first such flight between the two cities. Returning to America, he entered the international races at Belmont Park, Long Island, in October, 1910, finishing second in the Gordon-Bennett cup race.

Moïse (mō.ēz'), Penina. b. at Charleston, S.C., April 23, 1797; d. there, Sept. 13, 1880. American poet whose major work is found in Hymns Written for the Use of Hebrew Congregations (1856). Her other works include Fancy's Sketch Book (1833), and poems contributed to such journals as Godey's Lady's Book and Heriot's Magazine.

Moisie (mwä.zē'). River in E Quebec, Canada, flowing S to the St. Lawrence ab. 13 mi. E of Sept-Îles (Seven Islands). A railroad to the iron-ore fields on the Labrador-Quebec boundary follows the upper Moisie valley for a considerable distance. Length, ab. 210 mi.

Moissac (mwȧ.sȧk). Town in SW France, in the department of Tarn-et-Garonne, on the Tarn River. It is an old town which grew up about a Benedictine abbey of great importance in the Middle Ages. The cloister is one of the most beautiful Romanesque monasteries in France. The adjacent Church of Saint Pierre has a portal dating from the 12th century. The town is the marketing center of a wine-making region. 9,181 (1946).

Moissan (mwȧ.sȧṅ), Henri. b. at Paris, Sept. 28, 1852; d. there, Feb. 20, 1907. French chemist, professor of chemistry in the Sorbonne. He was the first to isolate fluorine, and also developed a method for the artificial production of diamonds, using the electric furnace, which he devised, to attain the necessary high temperatures. He wrote Reproduction du diamant (1893) and other works. In 1906 he received the Nobel prize for chemistry.

Moissi (moi'sē), Alexander. b. at Trieste, 1881; d. at Vienna, March 22, 1935. Italian tragic actor, the most famous member of the Reinhardt Company. Born of Italian-Albanian parents, Moissi went to Vienna at the age of 18 to give Italian lessons. Under Max Reinhardt, he became one of the foremost actors in Germany, although at first audiences jeered at him because of his pronounced Italian accent. His most famous roles included Shylock, Othello, Romeo, Danton, Hamlet, Marc Antony, Oswald in Ghosts, and Fedya in Tolstoy's Redemption. In 1927 he came with the Reinhardt Company to New York, playing in Everyman, Ghosts, Redemption, and A Midsummer Night's Dream.

Moivre (mwä'vrę), Abraham de. b. at Vitry, in Champagne, France, May 26, 1667; d. at London, Nov. 27, 1754. French mathematician. He produced works on fluxions (1695), the doctrine of chances (1711, 1718), and life annuities (1725); the curve of probability (normal distribution) is credited to him, as is also an early statement (1733) of the law of normal error. When the controversy as to priority in discovering the infinitesimal calculus arose between Leibniz and Newton, he was chosen (1712) to arbitrate the matter. He published Doctrine of Chances (1718) and others, and formulated "De Moivre's theorem."

Mojaisk (mo.zhīsk'). See Mozhaisk.

Mojave Desert (mō.hä'vā). [Also, Mohave.] Low-lying basin, chiefly in San Bernardino County, SE California.

Moji (mō.jē). City in N Kyushu, Japan, on Shimonoseki Strait at the W entrance to the Inland Sea. It is the focus of many transportation lines which cross the strait from the city of Shimonoseki, on Honshu, by ferry and by tunnel. It is an industrial center producing such varied articles as paper, steel products, glass, machine tools, toys, and cement, and exporting coal. 124,399 (1950).

Mojib (mō'jib), Wadi. Arabic name of the Arnon.

Mojos (mō'hōz). [Also, Moxos.] Tribe of South American Indians of N Bolivia, occupying the regions of the Madeira and Mamoré rivers. They belong to the Arawakan linguistic stock.

Mojsisovics von Mojsvár (moi'shi.shō.vich fon moish'vär), Edmund. b. at Vienna, Oct. 18, 1839; d. at Mallnitz, Austria, Oct. 2, 1907. Austrian geologist and paleontologist. He became (1870) chief geologist at the Imperial Geological Institute, of which he was assistant director from 1892 to 1900. He was editor (with Melchior Neumayr) of Beiträge zur Paläontologie und Geologie Österreich-Ungarns (1880–90). Author of Das Gebirge um Hallstatt (1873–76) and Die Dolomitrisse von Südtirol und Venetien (1878–80).

Mojsisovics von Mojsvár, Roderich. b. at Graz, Austria, May 10, 1877—. Austrian composer and musicologist; nephew of Edmund Mojsisovics von Mojsvár. He was appointed (1912) head of the Steiermärkischer Musikverein at Graz. Among his compositions are the operas Die Locke and Anno Domini. He also composed chamber music, orchestral works, choral music, organ and piano selections, and songs.

Mokanna (mō.kan'ȧ). See under Hakim ibn-Otta, al-.

Mokattam Hills (mō.kät'ȧm). Low range of hills in NE Africa, just SE of the city of Cairo, Egypt. They rise to a height of 550 ft. above the Nile River and are noted for their quarries.

Mokcsa (mōk'chô), Ágoston Haraszthy de. See Haraszthy de Mokcsa, Ágoston.

Mokenna (mō.ken'ȧ), al-. See Hakim ibn-Otta, al-.

Moki (mō'kę). See Hopi.

Mokpo (môk'pō). [Japanese, Moppo.] City and seaport in SW Korea, on the Yellow Sea. Much rice, cotton, and barley are produced in the area, and there are fisheries. The city processes these products and has an active trade. 103,081 (1946).

Moksha (môk'shȧ). River in the U.S.S.R., rising near Penza, and flowing W, N, and W in a winding course to join the Oka ab. 85 mi. E of Ryazan. Length, ab. 430 mi.

Mokuaweoweo (mō.kö'ȧ.wā'ō.wā'ō). Volcanic crater on the summit of Mauna Loa, on the island of Hawaii. The floor of the crater is ab. 13,000 ft. in elevation; the highest point on the rim, 13,680 ft. Length, ab. 4 mi.

Mokuk (mō'kök). [Also: Oshiba, Oshyeba.] Subgroup of the Pangwe, a Bantu-speaking people of C Africa. They inhabit a region along the upper Ogowe River in the province of Gabon in French Equatorial Africa.

Mol (môl). [Former name, Moll.] Town in N Belgium, in the province of Antwerp, ab. 30 mi. E of Antwerp: woolen, zinc, and tobacco manufactures; cattle markets. 19,083 (1947).

Mola (mō'lä), Emilio. b. in Cuba, 1887; killed in an air crash, in Spain, June 3, 1937. Spanish nationalist general. He reached the rank of general in the Moroccan service and was made director general of the Spanish police in 1930. He resigned his post when the monarchy fell, but was reinstated in his Moroccan command in 1935, only to be dismissed again by the leftist government of 1936. Upon the rising of General Francisco Franco he recruited an antirepublican northern army in Navarre, the center of violent clerical, Carlist, and monarchist partisanship. He was second in command to General Franco when he was killed in an air crash on the northern front. He has been credited with coining the term "Fifth Column," which has also been attributed to Queipo de Llano. He published three volumes of memoirs, Memórias de mi paso por la dirección de seguridad (1931–33).

Mola (mô'lä), Pietro Francesco. [Called Mola di Roma (dē rō'mä).] b. near Como, Italy, c1621; d. at Rome, c1655. Italian landscape painter.

Mola di Bari (mô'lä dē bä'rē). [Also, Mola.] Town and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Bari, situated on the Adriatic Sea, ab. 12 mi. SE of Bari. Pop. of commune, 19,831 (1936); of town, 19,514 (1936).

Mola di Gaeta (dē gȧ.e'tä). Former name of Formia.

Molala (mō.lā'la). See under Waiilatpuan.

Molasses Act. Act of the British Parliament (May 17, 1733) which placed heavy duties upon the importation of rum, sugar, and molasses from the French West Indies to the American colonies. A gallon of rum was taxed ninepence, a hundredweight of sugar five shillings, and a gallon of molasses sixpence. The act was passed in response to the demand of British merchants with interests in the British West Indies. The act was widely evaded, chiefly by smuggling. Had it been enforced, it would have undermined almost completely the triangular trade (West Indian molasses to New England, New England rum to Africa, African slaves to the West Indies) upon which the New England merchants depended for their favorable balance of trade.

Molay or Molai (mo.lā), Jacques de. b. in Burgundy, France, c1243; burned at Paris, March 18, 1314. Last grand master of the Templars (c1298–1314). By secret agreement, Pope Clement V and King Philip IV of France decided to crush the Knights Templars. In 1306 de Molay was called to France, ostensibly to discuss plans for a new crusade, but on Oct. 13, 1307, all the Templars in France were arrested. DeMolay was tortured and admitted certain errors. When (1314) he was brought up for sentencing, he recanted his confession and was burned as a heretic.

Molbech (môl'bek), Christian. b. at Sorø, Denmark, Oct. 8, 1783; d. at Copenhagen, June 23, 1857. Danish philologist and historian. Among his philological works are a Danish Dictionary (1833) and a Danish Dialect-Lexicon (1833–41).

Molbech, Christian Knud Frederik. b. at Copenhagen, July 20, 1821; d. at Kiel, Germany, May 20, 1888. Danish poet and dramatist; son of Christian Molbech. In 1840 appeared a first volume of poems, Billeder af Jesu Liv (Pictures from the Life of Jesus). The romantic drama Klintekongens Brud (The Bride of the Mountain King) appeared in 1845, in which year also was produced the drama Venusbjerget (The Venusberg). A collection of poems with the title Dæmring (Twilight) appeared in 1851. Dante, a tragedy, is from 1852. He was also the translator of Dante's Divine Comedy (Guddomlige Komedie, the first part of which appeared in 1851).

Mold (mōld). See also Matilda (1102–1167).

Mold. Urban district and market town in NE Wales, in Flintshire, ab. 6 mi. S of Flint, ab. 193 mi. NW of London by rail. Coal is mined in the district, and the town is a center of the tin-plate industry. A victory gained here by the Britons over the Picts and Scots on March 30, 430, is called the Hallelujah Victory after the war cry of the Britons. 6,436 (1951).

Moldau (mol'dou). German name of the Vltava, and also of Moldavia.

Moldavia (mol.dā'vi.ą). [Rumanian, Moldova; German, Moldau.] Province in NE Rumania, bounded by the U.S.S.R. in the E, and the Rumanian provinces of Muntenia in the S, Transylvania in the W, and South Bucovina in the N. Capital, Iaşi; area, ab. 14,690 sq. mi.; pop. 2,593,258 (1948).

Moldavians (mol.dā'vi.ąnz). Indigenous inhabitants of the Moldavian Soviet Socialist Republic and of the Rumanian province of Moldavia, and adjoining regions, who speak a dialect of Rumanian. They are nearly all farmers and herders.

Moldavian Soviet Socialist Republic. One of the Soviet Socialist Republics, in SW U.S.S.R., bordered by Rumania and by the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic. It is in an agricultural region producing wheat, maize, barley, tobacco, sugar beets, wines, and fruits. Industrial plants are chiefly devoted to food processing. Capital, Kishinev; area, ab. 13,050 sq. mi.; pop. 2,700,000 (1941).

Molde (môl'dę). Town in W Norway, in the fylke (county) of Møre og Romsdal, situated on the N shore of Molde Fjord, an arm of the Norwegian Sea: clothing industry; tourist resort. During World War II the center of the town was destroyed by German bombing (1940), but it has since been rebuilt. Pop. 3,774 (1946); with suburbs, 5,565 (1946).

Moldova (môl.dō'vä). See Moldavia.

Molé (mo.lā), Comte Louis Mathieu. b. at Paris, Jan. 24, 1781; d. at Château Champlâtreux, Seine-et-Oise, France, Nov. 25, 1855. French politician. He held several posts under Napoleon, becoming minister of justice in 1813. Under Louis XVIII he was minister of marine (1817–18) and under Louis Philippe he became minister for foreign affairs (1830). In 1836 he succeeded to the prime ministry, but, having alienated Guizot, he was forced out (1839) by a coalition of left and right which not even dissolution of the chamber and a new election could halt. He became a member of the Constituent Assembly (1848) and the Legislative Assembly (1849) of the Second Republic, but resigned after the coup d'état of Dec. 2, 1851 brought Louis Napoleon (Napoleon III) to the French dictatorship.

Molé, Matthieu. b. 1584; d. 1656. French politician. He was appointed president of the Parliament of Paris by Richelieu in 1641, a post which he retained until 1653. He became keeper of the great seal in 1651. An opponent of extension of the royal power, he nevertheless attempted to mediate between the opposing parties before and during the Fronde. He negotiated (1651) the peace of Rueil between the factions.

Molech (mō'lek). See Moloch.

Mole-Dagbane (mō'lā.däg.bā'nā). [Also, Moshi-Dagomba.] Group of linguistically and culturally related peoples of NE Ivory Coast and the Northern Territories of the Gold Coast. This group includes the Birifo, Builsa, Dagari, Dagomba, Gurma, Konkomba, Kusasi, Mamprusi, Mossi, Nabdan, Nankansi, Nanumba, Tallensi, Wala, and Yansi. Although some groups, such as the Tallensi, lack centralized political authority, the Mamprusi, Dagomba, and Mossi have kingdoms which are historically related, according to native traditions, and the Gurma are also organized into a kingdom.

Molen (mō'lęn). See Beir.

Molenbeek-St.-Jean (mō'lęn.bāk.saṅ.zhäṅ'). [Flemish, St. Jans-Molenbeek.] Town in C Belgium, in the province of Brabant, a western suburb of Brussels, part of its metropolitan area. Numerous horticultural enterprises and light industries are located here. 63,922 (1947).

Moleschott (mō'lę.sċhôt), Jacob. b. at 's Hertogenbosch, Netherlands, Aug. 9, 1822; d. at Rome, May 20, 1893. Dutch-Italian physiologist, professor of physiology successively at Zurich (1856), Turin (1861), and Rome (1879). He was made a senator of the kingdom of Italy in 1876. Among his works are Physiologie der Nahrungsmittel (Physiology of Food, 1850), Lehre der Nahrungsmittel (1850; Eng. trans., Chemistry of Food and Diet, 1856), Der Kreislauf des Lebens (1852), and others.

Moléson (mo.lā.zôṅ). Alpine peak and viewpoint in the canton of Fribourg, Switzerland, ab. 18 mi. E of Lausanne. Elevation, ab. 6,581 ft.

Molesworth (mōlz'wėrth), Mary Louisa. [Pseudonym, Ennis Graham; maiden name, Stewart.] b. at Rotterdam, Netherlands, May 29, 1839; d. at London, July 20, 1921. English novelist and author of juveniles. As Ennis Graham and under her married name she wrote stories for children, in which she was at her best, and serious novels, in which she was less successful. Among her works are Lover and Husband (1869), She Was Young and He Was Old (1872), Cicely (1874), Tell Me a Story (1875), Carrots (1876), The Cuckoo Clock (1877), The Tapestry Room (1879), Miss Bouverie (1880), A Charge Fulfilled (1887), Marrying and Giving in Marriage (1887), The Third Miss St. Quentin (1888), Meg Langholme (1897), Miss Mouse and Her Boys (1897), The Laurel Walk (1898), The Grim House (1899), Peterkin (1902), and The Story of a Year (1910).

Molesworth, Richard. [Title, 3rd Viscount Molesworth.] b. 1680; d. Oct. 12, 1758. English field marshal. He was present at Blenheim, and was one of Marlborough's aides-de-camp at Ramillies on May 23, 1706, when he saved the duke's life. In 1735 he was made major general, in 1739 lieutenant general in Ireland, in 1751 commander in chief in Ireland, and in 1757 field marshal.

Molesworth, Sir William. b. at London, May 23, 1810; d. there, Oct. 22, 1855. English baronet and politician. He lived in southern Europe until 1831, when he returned to England to take part in the reform movement (he became a member of Parliament for East Cornwall in 1832). He associated himself with George Grote and J. S. Mill. In April, 1835, he started the London Review. His edition of Hobbes's works was published in 16 volumes from 1839 to 1845. In July, 1855, he was appointed colonial secretary in Palmerston's government.

Molesworth, William Nassau. b. at Millbrook, near Southampton, England, Nov. 8, 1816; d. at Rochdale, England, Dec. 19, 1890. English historian. In 1844 he was appointed vicar of Spotland, near Rochdale. He was a friend of John Bright. His chief works are History of the Reform Bill of 1832 (1864), History of England from 1830 (1871–73), and History of the Church of England from 1660 (1882).

Moley (mō'li), Raymond Charles. b. at Berea, Ohio, Sept. 27, 1886—. American educator, journalist, and public official. He began his career as a teacher in secondary schools and at Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio. Appointed director of the Cleveland Foundation, he conducted investigations the results of which were published under the title Cleveland Crime Survey (1922). In 1923 began his long association with Columbia University at New York, first as associate professor of government, and after 1928 as professor of public law. His involvement in political matters began when he became economic adviser to Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York. In the so-called Brain Trust of advisers selected by Franklin D. Roosevelt, Moley was an original key figure. He is credited with originating the phrase "New Deal" to symbolize Roosevelt's purposes. In 1933 Roosevelt appointed Moley an assistant secretary of state, and named him a delegate to the World Economic Conference at London. In this connection sharp differences arose between Moley and Secretary of State Hull, and Moley resigned. In that same year, with the backing of Vincent Astor, W. Averell Harriman, and Mary Harriman Rumsey (Harriman's sister), he established the weekly magazine Today, and edited it until 1937, when it was merged into the publication Newsweek, of which he became an associate editor. For a time he continued on friendly terms with the president, but eventually, and especially after joining the staff of Newsweek, he became one of the most thoroughgoing critics of Roosevelt policies. Among his books are Lessons in American Citizenship (1917), Lessons in Democracy (1919), Parties, Politics, and People (1921), The Outline of Government (1922), Politics and Criminal Prosecution (1929), Our Criminal Courts (1930), After Seven Years (a critique of the Roosevelt administration, 1939), Twenty-Seven Masters of Politics (1949), and How to Keep Our Liberty (1952).

Moleyns (mō'linz), Adam de. See Molyneux or Moleyns or Molins, Adam de.

Molfetta (môl.fāt'tä). City and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Bari, situated on the Adriatic Sea ab. 16 mi. NW of Bari. The Duomo (cathedral) was undamaged in World War II. Pop. of commune, 49,361 (1936); of city, 48,898 (1936).

Molière (mo.lyer). [Pseudonym of Jean Baptiste Poquelin.] Baptized at Paris, Jan. 15, 1622; d. there, Feb. 17, 1673. French dramatist and actor, most famous of French writers of comedies. His works have been translated into a vast number of languages and he is generally ranked among the great dramatists of the world. His father was an upholsterer, as were the male relatives of his mother, Marie Cressé, who died when he was quite young. He received a good education at the Jesuit Collège de Clermont. In 1643, however, he renounced the profession of his father, who had become an upholsterer to the king, and, with Madeleine Béjart and others of her family, formed a troupe of professional actors, the "Illustre Théâtre." It was then he took the name Molière. Unsuccessful in two years of struggles at Paris, Molière and the Béjarts joined a troupe of strolling players, of which he later became the leader. Thirteen years of touring the provinces brought him invaluable experience. He composed several farces, now lost, and two longer plays in Italian style. Returning to Paris, he won the favor of Louis XIV and, after the success of Les Précieuses ridicules in 1659, his troupe was firmly established and could resist the attacks of rival authors and actors, and the more threatening hostility occasioned by Le Tartuffe (first presented in three acts in 1664, finally permitted to be played in public in 1669), a daring portrayal of religious hypocrisy in that day. The poet's marriage to Armande Béjart, Feb. 20, 1662, was not a happy one. Leading actor of his troupe in comic roles, as well as director, and often summoned to perform before the king or to compose a play for some royal fête, Molière had to work feverishly, and suffered from ill health, but the 28 plays composed between 1659 and 1673 include many masterpieces. Even his death was dramatic, caused by a hemorrhage as the sick actor indomitably played the imaginary invalid, in the fourth performance of Le Malade imaginaire. In that play, as in others, his own experience with doctors and with sickness furnished material for his ridicule. He drew from all sources, ancient and modern plays, people and events about him, transforming his borrowings by his skill in adapting them to his purpose. He was the foe of quackery in all its guises. He mocked the bombast of rival actors, demanding that both author and actor follow nature and depict men of their own day. He believed also in the duty of the writer of comedies to correct men while amusing them, and one of his great contributions was to put into the framework of the old farce or comedy of situation true observation of character and manners, exaggerated to be sure, but with a real face behind the mask, and a lesson with the laugh. He exposed unerringly the foibles and vices of his time, but he also laid bare depths of the human soul, and in his mirror the audience of today can see its own frailties and perceive defects of mankind in general. In verse or in prose, sometimes with ballets as an essential part, his plays range from slapstick farce, as in Les Fourberies de Scapin, to the thought-provoking study of Le Misanthrope. Throughout one finds a complete grasp of comic devices, whether of words, situation, or naïve self-revelation. He satirizes whatever is antisocial or deviates from the golden mean (often mere folly, but sometimes dangerous vices) and, constantly, human gullibility. He has sometimes been criticized for being too matter-of-fact, too materialistic, too bourgeois, lacking idealism, fantasy, and romance. His characters seem too much "of a piece," having one-track minds, lacking the complexity of those of Shakespeare, just as his verse lacks the latter's vivid imagery and soaring fancy. His plays conform usually to the unities and can be presented with a single setting. In addition to still popular farces, such as Le Mariage forcé (1664), L'Amour médecin (1665), Le Médecin malgré lui (1666), and Les Fourberies de Scapin (1671), and one-act plays of dramatic criticism, La Critique de l'École des femmes and L'Impromptu de Versailles (1663), Molière left enduring monuments in L'École des maris (1661), Les Fâcheux (1661), L'École des femmes (1662), Don Juan (1665), Le Misanthrope (1666), Amphitryon (1668), L'Avare (1668), Le Tartuffe (1669), Le Bourgeois gentilhomme (1670), Les Femmes savantes (1672), and Le Malade imaginaire (1673). His influence was immediately felt in England and has continued to dominate writers of comedies and affect letters in general.

Molina (mō.lē'nä), Count of. Title of Carlos, Don (1788–1855).

Molina, Alonso de. b. c1510; d. at Mexico City, c1585. Spanish Franciscan missionary. He went to Mexico when a child, early learned the Nahuatl (Aztec) tongue, and acted as interpreter to the first Franciscan missionaries, subsequently joining the order. His books on the Nahuatl language were among the earliest printed in America.

Molina, Héctor Bienvenido Trujillo. See Trujillo Molina, Héctor Bienvenido.

Molina, Juan Ignacio. b. in Talca, Chile, June 23, 1737; d. at Bologna, Italy, Sept. 12, 1829. Chilean Jesuit historian. His principal works are Saggio sulla storia naturale di Chile (1782) and Saggio della storia civile di Chile (1787). They were widely read, and there are many editions in various languages.

Molina, Luis. b. at Cuenca, New Castile, Spain, 1535; d. at Madrid, Oct. 12, 1600. Spanish Jesuit theologian. He propounded in 1588 the doctrine that the efficacy of divine grace depends simply on the will which accepts it, that grace is a free gift to all, but that the consent of the will is requisite in order that grace may be efficacious. The Dominicans in particular attacked the doctrine; the resultant controversy was eventually suppressed by papal order. His chief work is Liberi arbitrii cum gratiae donis, divina praescientia, providentia, praedestinatione et reprobatione, concordia (1588).

Molina, Tirso de. See Tirso de Molina.

Molina de Segura (dā sā.gō'rä). Town in E Spain, in the province of Murcia, on the Segura River ab. 8 mi. N of Murcia. It has salt works and paper mills, and is the marketing center of a rich orchard district (almonds and citrus fruits). 13,721 (1940).

Molinara (mō.lē.nä'rä), La. [English title, "The Girl from the Mill."] Opera by Giovanni Paisiello, produced at Naples in 1788.

Molinari (mō.lē.nä'rē), Bernardino. b. at Rome, April 11, 1880; d. there, Dec. 25, 1952. Italian conductor. He led (1928, 1931–32) the New York Philharmonic Symphony Society, and also conducted the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra and toured extensively in Europe and the U.S.

Molinari (mo.lē.nä.rē), Gustave de. b. at Liége, Belgium, 1819; d. 1911. Belgian political economist. He served as professor (1851 et seq.) at the University of Brussels. Author of Études économiques (Economic Studies, 1846), Le Droit de la paix et de la guerre (The Law of Peace and the Law of War, 1887), and Les Problèmes du XXe siècle (The Problems of the XXth Century, 1901).

Molina y Salazar (mō.lē'nä ē sä.lä.thär'), Antonio Sebastian de Toledo. See Toledo Molina y Salazar, Antonio Sebastian de.

Moline (mō.lēn'). City in NW Illinois, in Rock Island County, on the Mississippi River, adjoining Rock Island on the E. The chief industry is the manufacture of agricultural machinery and implements. Together with East Moline, Rock Island (both in Illinois), and Davenport, Iowa, it forms an urbanized area formerly referred to as the "Tri Cities" but now called the "Quad Cities." Pop. of Moline, 37,397 (1950); of entire urbanized area, 194,925 (1950).

Molinel (mol'i.nel), Sir Thomas. See Molyneux or Molinel, Sir Thomas.

Molinella (mō.lē.nel'lä). Town and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Emilia-Romagna, in the province of Bologna, ab. 19 mi. NE of Bologna. Pop. of commune, 13,183 (1936); of town, 2,129 (1936).

Molinists (mō'li.nists). [Also, Quietists.] Followers of Miguel de Molinos, who taught the direct relationship between the soul and God.

Molino del Rey (mō.lē'nō del rā'). [Eng. trans., "King's Mill."] Locality ab. 3 mi. SW of downtown Mexico City, now in Chapultepec Park, ab. ½ mi. from Chapultepec Castle, which commands it. Here in 1847 were several massive stone buildings used as mills and foundries. These buildings, defended by 4,000 Mexicans, were stormed by about the same number of U.S. troops under W. J. Worth, September 8. The battle was one of the hardest fought of the Mexican War, and the loss on both sides was heavy.

Molinos (mō.lē'nōs), Miguel de. b. at or near Saragossa, Spain, Dec. 21, 1640; d. at Rome, Dec. 29, 1696. Spanish mystic, founder of the Molinists or Quietists. He was condemned by the Inquisition in 1687 and died in prison. His most noted work is Guida spirituale (Spiritual Guide, 1675).

Molins (mō'linz), Adam de. See Molyneux or Moleyns or Molins, Adam de.

Molique (mo.lēk'), Wilhelm Bernhard. b. at Nuremberg, Germany, Oct. 7, 1802; d. at Cannstatt, Germany, May 10, 1869. German violinist and composer. He was leader (1826–49) of the royal band at Stuttgart, went (1849) to England, where he taught and passed the rest of his professional life, and retired (1866) to Cannstatt.

Molisch (mō'lish), Hans. b. at Brünn (now Brno, Czechoslovakia), Dec. 6, 1856; d. at Vienna, Dec. 8, 1937. German botanist, noted for his contributions in the fields of comparative plant anatomy and the microchemistry and microbiology of plants. Author of Leuchtende Pflanzen (1903), Mikrochemie der Pflanze (1920), and Die Lebensdauer der Pflanze (1929).

Molise (mô'lē.zā). Former province of the kingdom of Naples in SE Italy, now the province of Campobasso, in the region of Abruzzi e Molise.

Molitor (mo.lē.tôr), Gabriel Jean Joseph, Comte. b. at Hayange, in Lorraine, France, March 7, 1770; d. at Paris, July 28, 1849. French marshal. His record was a distinguished one throughout the Napoleonic wars, especially at Essling and Wagram in 1809. He served (1811–13) as governor general of Holland. He was exiled (1815), recalled (1818), and commanded in the French expedition (1823) into Spain. He was created marshal by Louis XVIII.

Moll (môl). See Mol, Belgium.

Moll (mol), Albert. b. at Lissa, Germany (now Leszno, Poland), May 4, 1862—. German psychiatrist. Author of Der Hypnotismus (1889; Eng. trans., Hypnotism, 1890), The Sexual Life of the Child (1912), Perversions of the Sex Instinct; a Study of Sexual Inversion (1931), Libido Sexualis; Studies in the Psychosexual Laws of Love Verified by Clinical Sexual Case Histories (1933), and others. He was editor of the Handbuch der Sexualwissenschaften (1911, 1921, 1926).

Moll, Bruno. b. at Halle, Germany, Oct. 10, 1885—. German political economist. Author of Die Logik des Geldes (The Logic of Money, 1916) and Lehrbuch der Finanzwissenschaft (Textbook of the Science of Public Finance, 1930).

Moll Cutpurse (mol kut'pėrs). See Frith, Mary.

Mollendo (mō.yen'dō). City in S Peru, in Arequipa department, on the Pacific coast: railway terminus and principal seaport of S Peru, important also as a transit port for Bolivia. 12,628 (1940).

Möllendorf (mėl'ẹn.dôrf), Wichard Joachim Heinrich von. b. in Priegnitz (a region of Brandenburg), Germany, Jan. 7, 1724; d. at Havelberg, Prussia, Germany, Jan. 28, 1816. Prussian field marshal, who distinguished himself under Frederick the Great in the Seven Years' War. He was victorious over the French at Kaiserslautern, May 23, 1794. He was captured (1806) at the rout at Auerstädt and retired from military life when he obtained his release.

Möllendorff (mėl'ẹn.dôrf), Wichard. b. at Hong Kong, China, Oct. 3, 1881—. German economist. He was appointed (1918) undersecretary in the ministry of economics. Author of Deutsche Gemeinwirtschaft (1916) and Vom Einst zu Einst (1917).

Mollenhauer (mol'ẹn.hou.ėr), Emil. b. at Brooklyn, N.Y., Aug. 4, 1855; d. at Boston, Dec. 10, 1927. American violinist and conductor. He was the conductor (1888–89) of the Germania and later of the Boston Festival Orchestra, and succeeded (1899) Benjamin Johnson Lang as conductor of the Handel and Haydn Society.

Møller (mėl'ėr), Christmas. [Full name, Guido Leo John Christmas Møller.] b. at Copenhagen, April 3, 1894; d. there, April 13, 1948. Danish political leader who, while leader of the Conservative Party, came repeatedly into conflict with large groups of his party over his advocacy of advanced democratic reforms. Elected (1932) to the chairmanship of the Conservative Party, he resigned (1939) when Conservative voters failed to support a projected new Constitution. He entered (1920) the Folketing, became (1923) secretary-general of the Conservative Party, and was minister (1940) without portfolio. He escaped (1942) from German-occupied Denmark, was chairman of the Danish Council in London until 1945, and served (1945) briefly as foreign minister. He resigned from the Conservative Party, and failed (1947) of election to parliament as an Independent.

Möller (mėl'ėr), Eberhard Wolfgang. b. at Berlin, Jan. 6, 1906—. German playwright for stage and radio, an ardent National Socialist. His numerous works include Douaumont oder die Heimkehr des Soldaten Odysseus (1929), Kalifornische Tragödie (1929), Rothschild siegt bei Waterloo (1933), Frankenburger Würfelspiel (1936), and Soldatenkönig (1936).

Moller (mol'ėr), Georg. b. at Diepholz, Hanover, Germany, Jan. 21, 1784; d. March 13, 1852. German architect.

Mollet (mo.le), Guy. b. at Flers, Orne, France, Dec. 31, 1905—. French political leader and teacher, secretary-general of the French Socialist Party after World War II. He was active (1941–44) in the Resistance movement, served (1945 et seq.) as a deputy, and became (September, 1946) secretary-general of the Socialist Party. He served (1950) on the general affairs committee of the Council of Europe and was vice-premier (1951) in the Queuille cabinet.

Moll Flagon (mol flag'ọn). See Flagon, Moll.

Moll Flanders (mol flan'dėrz). Novel by Daniel Defoe, published in 1722.

Möllhausen (mėl'hou.zẹn), Heinrich Balduin. b. Jan. 27, 1825; d. at Berlin, May 28, 1905. German traveler in the U.S., and writer of novels and works of travel. He published Tagebuch einer Reise vom Mississippi nach der Südsee (1858; republished as Wanderungen durch die Prairien und Wüsten des westlichen Nordamerika, 1860), Reisen in die Felsengebirge Nordamerikas bis zum Hochplateau von Neumexiko (1861), and others.

Mollinedo y Saravia (mō.lyē.nā'ᴛʜō ē sä.rä'ʙyä), Antonio Gonzalez. [Often called Antonio Gonzalez de Saravia.] b. c1745; executed near Oajaca, Mexico, Dec. 2, 1812. Spanish general.

Mollison (mol'i.sọn), James Allan. b. in Lanarkshire, Scotland, April 19, 1905—. British aviator; married (1932) and divorced (1938) Amy Johnson. He set records including flight from Australia to England in eight days, 21 hours (1931); England to Capetown by way of the African west coast in four days, 17 hours (1932), and (with his wife) England to India in 22 hours (1934). He accomplished the first solo North Atlantic westward flight (August, 1932) from Ireland to New Brunswick, and the first flight from England to South America (1933). He made (1933) with his wife the first flight from England to the U.S., the plane crashing at Bridgeport, Conn.

Mölln (mėln). Town in NW Germany, in the Land (state) of Schleswig-Holstein, British Zone, formerly in the province of Schleswig-Holstein, Prussia, situated on the Lake of Mölln ab. 24 mi. E of Hamburg: grain, livestock, and lumber markets. It has metal, ceramic, and other industries. The Church of Saint Nicholas is a Romanesque and Gothic building of the 13th–15th centuries; the Rathaus (town hall) is also in the Gothic style. Till Eulenspiegel, the legendary prankster, is alleged to have been buried in the Church of Saint Nicholas. The church remained undamaged in World War II. 13,721 (1950).

Mollwitz (mol'vits). [Also, Molwitz.] Village S of Brieg (now Brzeg), in Silesia. Here on April 10, 1741, was gained the first Prussian victory in the Silesian wars. Frederick the Great was in nominal command, but left the battlefield, and Schwerin and Leopold of Dessau were the real chiefs. The Austrians were commanded by Neipperg. Each army numbered ab. 22,000, and lost ab. 4,500.

Molly Bloom (mol'i blōm). See Bloom, Molly.

Molly Maguires (ma.gwīrz'). Secret organization in Ireland, organized with the object of defeating and terrorizing land agents, process servers, and others engaged in the business of evicting tenants.

Molly Maguires. Secret organization in the mining regions of Pennsylvania, notorious in the decade following the Civil War for the commission of various crimes, including murderous attacks upon the owners, officers, or agents of mines, until their suppression by the execution of several of their leaders in 1877, after a Pinkerton agent, James McParlan, had worked his way into the organization and disclosed their leadership. The name was derived from the original Molly Maguires in Ireland.

Molly Pitcher (pich'ėr). See McCauley, Mary Ludwig Hays.

Molmenti (mōl.men'tē), Pompeo Gherardo. b. at Venice, Sept. 1, 1852; d. at Rome, Jan. 24, 1928. Italian lawyer and statesman. After teaching at Venice he was named deputy (1890) and senator (1909). He served (1919–20) as first undersecretary for fine arts. Author of Storia di Venezia nella vita primitiva (History of Venice in Primitive Times, 1880), in three volumes.

Molnár (mōl'när), Ferenc. b. at Budapest, Hungary, Jan. 12, 1878; d. April 1, 1952. Hungarian novelist and playwright. His plots are based on the problems and situations of life in the modern city, but are concerned rather with entertainment value than with the problems. He wrote several novels, among them the juvenile The Paul Street Boys (1907; Eng. trans., 1927), but is best known for his plays, which include The Devil (1907), Liliom (1909), The Guardsman (1910), The Swan (1920), The Red Mill (1923), The Glass Slipper (1924), The Play's the Thing (1925), No Greater Glory (1934), and Delicate Story (1940).

Mölndal (mėln'dal). City in SW Sweden, in the län (county) of Göteborg and Bohus, ab. 3 mi. SE of Göteborg. It has cotton textile, paper, and margarine industries. 20,857 (1950).

Moloch (mō'lok). [Also, Molech.] In the ancient Canaanite religion, a form of Baal, worshiped among all the ancient Canaanitish and Semitic tribes. The worship of Moloch involved offering of human sacrifices. The Carthaginians sacrificed their first-born children to him. The image was bronze, calf-headed, and had long arms which were slanted to an opening in the breast, through which the victims rolled into the furnace blazing inside. It is said that music of flute and timbrel was played to drown the cries. The worship of Moloch was introduced into Israel at different periods, with its principal place in the valley of Hinnom (it certainly existed under Ahaz, Manasseh, and Amon). The Old Testament mentions children being burned for Moloch (Lev. xviii. 21, xx. 2; 1 Kings, xi. 7; 2 Kings, xxiii. 10; Jer. xxxii. 35). At Carthage the bloody rites of Moloch were officially suppressed by the emperor Tiberius (14–37 A.D.).

Mologa (mo.lô'ga). Former town in the U.S.S.R., in the Yaroslavl oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, on the lower Mologa River near its junction with the Volga, ab. 175 mi. N of Moscow. The town was evacuated and its site submerged by the formation of the Rybinsk Reservoir in 1941.

Mologa River. River in N central European U.S.S.R., a tributary of the Volga, flowing in a winding course to the NW arm of the Rybinsk Reservoir. Length, ab. 250 mi.

Molokai (mō.lọ.k'ī.) Fifth largest of the Hawaiian Islands, SE of Oahu. The surface is mountainous. The Kalaupapa leper settelment is maintained here. Length, ab. 38 mi.; width, ab. 10 mi.; area, ab. 259 sq. mi.; pop. 5,340 (1940).

Molon (mō'lon), Apollonius. See Apollonius Molon.

Molossians (mọ.los'i.ạnz). Ancient tribe of Epirus, in N Greece. They occupied at first a district in the center but ultimately their kings ruled over all Epirus. Their breed of huge hounds was famous.

Molossus (mọ.los'us). In Greek legend, the son of Neoptolemus and Andromache, eponymous ancestor of the Molossians.

Molotov (mô'lọ.tof). Oblast (region) of the U.S.S.R., in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, centered on the W slopes of the Ural Mountains. Mining is an important occupation, with iron ore, chromite, coal, petroleum, salt, and potash the leading minerals. There are rich forests, especially in the N and E parts of the oblast, and forest products have become important in recent years. Industries are principally engaged in processing the mineral and forest products of the area, and in machinery manufacturing. The agriculture of the region is of the general farming and livestock-raising type. Capital, Molotov; area, ab. 53,384 sq. mi. (1939), ab. 66,000 sq. mi. (1951); pop. 2,082,166 (1939).

Molotov. [Former name, Perm.] City in the U.S.S.R., in the Molotov oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, in the W Ural Mountains, a major transport center at the head of deep-river navigation on the Kama River. It has various industries producing machinery, aircraft engines, boats, phosphate fertilizers, lumber, wood products, petroleum products, telephone equipment, and food products. 255,196 (1939).

Molotov, Vyacheslav Mikhailovich. [Original surname, Skriabin.] b. at Vyatka, near St. Petersburg, March 9, 1890—. Russian political leader and diplomat. As a student and a member of a Marxist group, he took part in the revolutionary attempt of 1905, and at that time changed his name, but did not succeed entirely in eluding the police, and in the following years, during which he was active in illegal agitation, he was several times arrested and exiled. After the October Revolution, in 1917, he came quickly to the fore, becoming a member of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., a member of the Praesidium of the Central Executive Committee, and chairman of the Council of People's Commissars, a position equivalent to that of premier in Western countries. In May, 1939, when the Soviet government determined to negotiate a nonaggression treaty with the Nazi government of Germany, Molotov became people's commissar for foreign affairs, displacing Maxim Litvinov, who as a Jew and as the most outspoken critic of Hitlerism, could not easily have conducted those negotiations. In June, 1941, the pact concluded by Molotov and Joachim von Ribbentrop, German foreign minister, was broken by the German invasion of Soviet territory. A month earlier, in view of the looming crisis, Joseph Stalin had taken over the chairmanship of the Council of People's Commissars, Molotov becoming vice-chairman. He remained head of the department of foreign affairs (its title being changed in 1946 to foreign affairs) until 1949, when he was succeeded in that office by Andrei Vishinsky, Molotov continuing to be vice-premier, as well as a member of the Politburo of the Communist Party of the U.S.S.R. In 1945 he led the Soviet delegation to the San Francisco Conference which established the United Nations, and until 1949 was the chief Soviet spokesman at the U.N. meetings which successively marked the rise of acrimonious differences between the bloc of Socialist nations under Soviet hegemony, and the Western and other countries led by the U.S. and Great Britain. After the death of Stalin in 1953 he remained foreign minister and was generally recognized as being (with Malenkov and Beria) one of the three most powerful men in the U.S.S.R.

Moltke (molt'kẹ), Count Helmuth Johannes Ludwig von. b. at Gersdorf, Germany, May 23, 1848; d. at Berlin, June 18, 1916. German soldier, chief of the German general staff (1906 et seq.); nephew of Count Helmuth K. B. von Moltke. He planned the German strategy in World War I upon Alfred von Schlieffen's plan, which he modified by strengthening the left wing of the armies in the West, and by not retreating behind the Vistula in the East. He was blamed for the German retreat in 1914, and was succeeded by General von Falkenhayn.

Moltke, Count Helmuth Karl Bernhard von. b. at Parchim, in Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Germany, Oct. 26, 1800; d. at Berlin, April 24, 1891. Prussian field marshal. Graduated from the military academy at Copenhagen in 1818, he received a commission in the Danish army in 1819, and entered the Prussian army in 1822. He completed his studies at the military academy at Berlin (1823–26), was assigned to duty on the general staff in 1832, and assisted in the reorganization of the Turkish army on the Prussian model during a leave of absence (1835–39). He was appointed chief of the general staff in 1858, and, in conformity with the determination of William I to raise Prussia to the rank of a great military power, immediately began a reorganization of the army on an enlarged plan, which, with the parliamentary support of Bismarck, the head of the cabinet, and of General von Roon, the secretary of war, was completed in 1863. He was the chief strategist in the war of Austria and Prussia against Denmark (1864), in the Austro-Prussian War (1866), and in the Franco-Prussian War (1870–71). He resigned his post as chief of staff in 1888. Among his works are Briefe über Zustände . . . in der Türkei 1835–39 (1841), Der russischtürkische Feldzug 1828–29 (1845), and Geschichte des deutsch-französischen Krieges von 1870–71 (1891). The appendix to the last contains a fuller version of an article on the battle of Königgrätz and the war of 1866. His Briefe (1892) cover a period of 65 years, including, besides those from Turkey, letters from Rome (1845–46) and Paris and Russia (1858–61). His collected works, including numerous letters, essays, speeches, autobiographical notes, and a novel, appeared in 1891–93. His military works were published (1892–93) separately.

Molucca Passage (mọ̄.luk'ạ). Sea passage lying between the Moluccas on the E and the N part of Celebes on the W. Length, ab. 200 mi.

Moluccas (mọ̄.luk'ạz). [Also: Spice Islands; Dutch, Molukken (mō.luk'ẹn).] Group of islands in Indonesia E of Celebes and W of New Guinea: formerly part of the Netherlands Indies, now comprising a province of the Republic of Indonesia. The chief islands are Morotai, Halmahera, Batjan, Amboina, Ceram, Boeroe, and the Banda Islands. The surface is generally mountainous. The group is noted for the production of cloves and nutmegs. The islands were discovered and taken possession of by the Portuguese c1512, but came under Dutch suzerainty at the beginning of the 17th century. The name "Spice Islands" originally designated a small group off Halmahera extending from Ternate to Batjan. Area, ab. 32,000 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 560,000.

Molwitz (mol'vits). See Mollwitz.

Molyneux (mol'i.nōks, -nūks, -nū) or Moleyns or Molins (mō'linz), Adam de. d. at Portsmouth, England, Jan. 9, 1450. English bishop and politician. He was keeper (1444) of the privy seal, and bishop (1446–50) of Chichester. Blamed by popular opinion for the surrender of Maine, in France, he was attacked by rioting sailors at Portsmouth and killed.

Molyneux, Sir Richard. d. 1459. English favorite of Henry VI, and Lancastrian soldier during the Wars of the Roses.

Molyneux, Richard. [Title, 1st Viscount Maryborough.] b. 1593; d. May 8, 1636. English nobleman who served as receiver general of the duchy of Lancaster.

Molyneux or Molinel (mol'i.nel), Sir Thomas. b. at Calais, France, 1531; d. at Dublin, Jan. 24, 1597. Chancellor of the Irish exchequer (1590) and receiver of customs and imposts on wine (1591).

Molyneux, William. b. at Dublin, April 17, 1656; d. there, Oct. 11, 1698. Irish philosopher. He devoted himself especially to philosophy and mathematics. His version of Descartes's Meditations was published in 1680. In 1686 he published his Sciothericum Telescopum, and the Dioptrica Nova in 1692. He enjoyed the intimate friendship of John Locke. His best-known work, The Case of Ireland's being Bound by Acts of Parliament in England Stated, was published in 1698.

Mombasa (mom.bä'sạ). [Also, Mombaz (mom.bäs').] Seaport city in British East Africa, in Kenya protectorate, on an island off the E coast just N of the Tanganyika boundary: the former capital of the British East African Protectorate. When that protectorate became (1920) Kenya colony, Mombasa remained a part of Kenya protectorate, nominally under the sultan of Zanzibar but actually administered and controlled by the British. Mombasa was taken in 1505 by the Portuguese, who built a fort there toward the close of the century. They were expelled in 1698. Mombasa was acquired by Zanzibar in 1834, and in 1890 passed to the British East Africa Company. It is the terminus of a railway to Uganda, and a naval coaling station. Because of its rail connection with the interior it is the principal port serving Kenya, Uganda, E Belgian Congo, and N Tanganyika. It has two harbors: Mombasa Old Harbor, and Kilindini, the modern harbor. 84,746 (1948).

Mombattou (mom.bä'tö). See Mangbetu.

Mombert (mom'bẻrt), Alfred. b. at Karlsruhe, Germany, Feb. 6, 1872; d. at Winterthur, Switzerland, 1942. German poet. Author of Tag und Nacht (1894), Der Glühende (1896), Die Schöpfung (1897), Die Blüte des Chaos (1905), and Der himmlische Zecher (1909). He also wrote three dramas, Aeon der Weltgesuchte, Aeon zwischen den Frauen, and Aeon vor Syrakus (1907–11). Later lyrical works are Der Held der Erde (1919), Aiglas Herabkunft (1929), and Sfaira der Alte (1936).

Momein (mō'mān'). See Tengchung.

Momence (mọ̄.mens'). City in NE Illinois, in Kankakee County, ab. 30 mi. S of Chicago. 2,644 (1950).

Mommsen (mom'zẹn), Theodor. b. at Garding, Schleswig, Nov. 30, 1817; d. at Charlottenburg, Nov. 1, 1903. German historian. He studied philology and jurisprudence at Kiel. From 1844 to 1847 he traveled in France and Italy, engaged in archaeological studies. In 1848 he was made professor of law at Leipzig, a position which he was obliged to renounce in 1850 in consequence of his participation in the political movements of 1848–49. In 1852 he became professor of Roman law at Zurich. In 1854 he accepted a similar professorship at Breslau, and in 1857 was made professor of ancient history at the University of Berlin. His principal work, one of the classics of historical writing, is his Römische Geschichte (vols. 1–3, 5, 1854–56; the fourth volume never appeared). Other works are Die römische Chronologie bis auf Cäsar (1858), Geschichte des römischen Münzwesens (1860), Römische Forschungen (1864–79), Römisches Staatsrecht (1871–76), and numerous minor articles and monographs on archaeological subjects and Roman law. As secretary, after 1873, of the Berlin Academy, he was the editor of the great Corpus inscriptionum latinarum published (1861 et seq.) by that body. He was awarded (1902) the Nobel prize for literature. He took, at various times, an active part in politics, and was a member (1863 et seq.) of the Prussian House of Delegates and the German Reichstag, where his political views were latterly those of the National Liberal Party.

Mommsen, Wilhelm. b. at Berlin, Jan. 25, 1892—. German historian; grandson of Theodor Mommsen. Author of Bismarcks Sturz und die Parteien (Bismarck's Fall and the Parties, 1924), Legitime und illegitime Geschichtsschreibung (Legitimate and Illegitimate Historiography, 1930), and Die politischen Anschauungen Goethes (Goethe's Political Ideas, 1949).

Momotombo (mō.mō.tôm'bō), Mount. [Also, Momotomba (-bä).] Volcano in W Nicaragua, near Lake Managua, NW of Managua. Elevation, ab. 4,128 ft.

Mömpelgard (mėm'pėl.gärt). German name of Montbéliard.

Mompós (mōm.pōs'). [Also, Mompox (mōm.pōs').] Town in N Colombia, in Bolívar department, on the Magdalena River: shipping point for cattle and tobacco. 6,694 (1938).

Momus (mō'mus). [Also, Momos (-mos).] In Greek mythology, the personification of ridicule, censure, and mockery; according to Hesiod, the son of Night.

Møn (mėn). [Also: Møen, Möen, Mön.] Island in the Baltic Sea, belonging to Denmark, SE of Zealand, in the amt (county) of Præstø. Chief town, Stege; area, ab. 84 sq. mi.; pop. 14,156 (1945).

Mon (mōn). [Also: Peguans, Talaing.] Mon-Khmer-speaking people of the central plains and coastal regions of Burma; they numbered 336,728 in 1931. They formerly constituted a kingdom, with its capital at Pegu, which for centuries contested for supremacy with the Burmans and finally fell to them in 1757. Groups of Mon fled to Thailand (Siam), where some 60,000 of them live today, principally near Bangkok; those who remained in Burma are adopting Burmese speech and customs.

Mona (mō'nạ). Opera in three acts by Horatio Parker, with a libretto by Brian Hooker, first performed at the New York Metropolitan Opera House, March 4, 1912.

Mona. Latin name of Anglesey and of Man, Isle of.

Monaca (mon'ạ.kạ). Borough in W Pennsylvania, in Beaver County: manufactures of glass, iron, steel, enamel, and galvanized ware. It was settled in 1813, and in 1832 became a settlement of secessionists from a colony of the Harmonists. 7,415 (1950).

Monaco (mọ.nä'kō, mon'ạ.kō; French, mo.ná.kō; Italian, mô'nä.kō). Sovereign principality in S Europe, wedged into the French department of Alpes-Maritimes and situated on the Mediterranean Sea, E of Nice. It is a narrow, rocky coastal tract, ab. 2 mi. in length; it had 22,994 inhabitants in 1933, of which, however, only 2,500 were citizens of the principality. It consists of three communes: Monaco, La Condamine, and Monte Carlo. The fame of the state springs from the international resort at Monte Carlo and its gambling casino. The seigneury of Monaco became a vassal of the republic of Genoa in the 12th century, but was placed (1641) under the protectorate of France, to which it was annexed from 1793 to 1814. It was under the protection of Sardinia from 1815 to 1860. The towns of Roquebrune and Menton separated from Monaco in 1848; they later went to France. The arrangement which preserves the sovereignty of the principality was made with France in 1860. Capital, Monaco; area, ab. 368 acres; pop. 20,202 (1951).

Monaco. [Ancient name, Monoecus.] Capital of the principality of Monaco, situated on a rocky promontory overlooking the Mediterranean Sea, between Nice and Menton. It has a palace dating from the 16th and 17th centuries, a cathedral, and an oceanographic museum. 2,056 (1933).

Monadhliath Mountains (mō'nạ.lē'ạ). Mountain highland in N central Scotland, in Inverness-shire, E of Loch Ness. Peak elevation, 3,087 ft.

Monadnock (mọ.nad'nok). Isolated mountain in Cheshire County, SW New Hampshire, ab. 37 mi. SW of Concord. Elevation, 3,165 ft.

Monagas (mō.nä'gäs). State in NE Venezuela: oil fields. Capital, Maturín; area, 11,158 sq. mi.; pop. 175,502 (1950).

Monagas, José Gregorio. b. at Maturín, Venezuela, 1795; d. at Maracaibo, Venezuela, 1858. Venezuelan soldier and politician; brother of José Tadeo Monagas. He was an unsuccessful presidential candidate in 1846, but was elected for the term 1851–55. During this period slavery was abolished (March, 1854). After his brother's downfall (1858) he was arrested, and died in captivity.

Monagas, José Ruperto. Venezuelan politician and president (1868–70) of the republic, son of José Tadeo Monagas. He succeeded his father in the presidency and was overthrown (1870) by General Antonio Guzmán Blanco.

Monagas, José Tadeo. b. near Maturín, Venezuela, Oct. 28, 1784; d. at El Valle, near La Guaira, Venezuela, Nov. 18, 1868. Venezuelan general and politician, president (1847–51, 1855–58); brother of José Gregorio Monagas. He served (1813–21) under Bolívar, headed an unsuccessful rebellion (1835), was elected president for the term 1847–51 as successor to José Antonio Páez, who sponsored his candidacy, and in 1848 assumed dictatorial powers, imprisoning Páez, who had declared against him. Succeeded by his brother in 1851, he took command of the army, and was reëlected president (1855), but was driven from office by reaction against his constitution of 1857. In March, 1868, he declared against Juan Falcón, drove him from the country, and was elected president by the congress, but died before he could assume office.

Monaghan (mon'ạ.gạn, -han). [Irish, Muineachán.] Inland county in N Irish Republic. It is bounded on the N by County Tyrone (Northern Ireland), on the NE by County Armagh (Northern Ireland), on the SE by County Louth, on the S by County Meath, on the SW by County Cavan, and on the W by County Fermanagh (Northern Ireland). The surface is rolling or hilly, and is covered with many bogs and lakes. The chief crops are oats, potatoes, barley, and some wheat. Dairy cattle, sheep, and pigs are also raised. The county has linen manufactures. Monaghan is the county seat; area, 498 sq. mi.; pop. 55,362 (1951).

Monaghan. Urban district, market town, and customs station in N Irish Republic, county seat of County Monaghan, situated on the Ulster Canal ab. 49 mi. SW of Belfast, Northern Ireland. 4,725 (1951).

Monaghan, John James. b. at Sumter, S.C., May 23, 1856; d. Jan. 7, 1935. American Roman Catholic clergyman.

Monahans (mon'ạ.hanz). City in W Texas, in Ward County, SW of Lubbock, in a petroleum region. 6,311 (1950).

Monaldeschi (mō.näl.dās'kē), Marchese Giovanni. d. at Fontainebleau, France, Nov. 10, 1657. Italian favorite of Queen Christina of Sweden, murdered by her order.

Mona Lisa (mō.nạ lē'zạ). [Also, La Gioconda.] Portrait by Leonardo da Vinci, in the Louvre, Paris (stolen in August, 1911; recovered in December, 1913). It is said to represent "La Gioconda," the wife of the Florentine Francesco del Giocondo. The painter worked at it for four years, and then proclaimed it unfinished.

Mon-Annam (mōn'ăn.näm'). See Mon-Khmer.

Mona Passage (mō'nạ). Strait between SE Dominican Republic and W Puerto Rico. Width, ab. 75 mi.

Monapia (mọ.nā'pi.ạ). A Latin name of Man, Isle of.

Monarcho (mō.när'kō). fl. at London, 16th century. Italian court fool at Elizabeth's court, who professed to be the king of all the world. Armado, in Shakespeare's Love's Labour's Lost, is once called by his name.

Monash (mō'nash), Sir John. b. at Melbourne, Australia, June 27, 1865; d. there, Oct. 8, 1931. Australian soldier and engineer. He joined the Australian Imperial Force (1914), served at Gallipoli and in France, rising to the rank of major general (1916), and finally became a lieutenant general (1918) in command of the Australian Army Corps, France. At one time he had 50,000 U.S. troops under his command. After the war he became (1920) general manager of the state electricity commission of Victoria, developing the Yallourn brown coal deposits.

Monasterion (mô.nä.stē'ryôn). Greek name of Bitola.

Monastery, The. Novel by Sir Walter Scott, published in 1820. The Abbot (1820) is a sequel to it.

Monastir (mon.as.tir'). [Also: Mistir; ancient name, Ruspina.] Seaport in N Africa, in Tunisia, situated on the E coast of the country, opposite Sousse. It is connected with the latter port and with Tunis by rail. Pop. ab. 9,000.

Monastir (mon.as.tir'; Turkish, mō.näs.tir'). Turkish name of Bitola.

Monastir-Doiran (mon.as.tir'doi'răn). Battles of. See Dobropolje, Battles of.

Monboddo (mon.bod'ō), Lord. Title of James Burnett.] b. in October or November, 1714; d. May 26, 1799. Scottish judge. He became sheriff of Kincardineshire in 1764, and in 1767 became an ordinary lord of session, on which occasion he assumed the title of Lord Monboddo. He was a pioneer anthropological theorist whose hypotheses were looked upon in his day as eccentric. He conceived of man as primarily a species of animal and studied him as such, as related to the orang-utans, and he used the practices of primitive tribes to illustrate social habits. Man's rise to civilization he traced as growing out of his social needs, as did also language. Author of Of the Origin and Progress of Language (1773–92) and Ancient Metaphysics (1779–99).

Monbutu (mōn.bö'tö). See Mangbetu.

Moncada (mōng.kä'тнä), Francisco de. b. at Valencia, Spain, Dec. 29, 1586; killed at Goch, Prussia, 1635. Spanish historian and general. He wrote History of the Expedition of the Catalans and Aragonese against the Turks and Greeks (1623).

Moncada, José María. b. at San Rafael del Sur, Nicaragua, Dec. 8, 1871; d. in Nicaragua, Feb. 23, 1945. Nicaraguan political leader, president (1929–32) of Nicaragua. He was publisher (1893–1910) of El Centinela and El Nacionalista, minister of interior (1910–11), senator (1925, 1943), and minister of war (1926–27). Leader of a liberal revolt against Adolfo Díaz, he was elected president following several years of civil war and U.S. intervention, culminating in an armistice under the Stimson-Moncada agreement (May, 1927), by which the 1928 election was held under U.S. supervision. The refusal of Augusto Sandino, one of Moncada's officers, to comply with the armistice was the occasion of a campaign (1927–33) by U.S. Marines.

Moncalieri (mōng.kä.lye'rē). Town and commune in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Piedmont, in the province of Torino, situated on the Po River ab. 5 mi. S of Turin. The Royal Castle suffered some damage during World War II. Pop. of commune, 21,181 (1936).

Monceau (môn.sō), Henri Louis Duhamel du. See Duhamel du Monceau, Henri Louis.

Monceaux (môn.sō), Marquise de. Title of Estrées, Gabrielle d'.

Moncenisio (mōn.chā.nē'zyō). An Italian name of Cenis, Mont.

Moncey (môn.sā), Bon Adrien Jeannot de. [Title, Duc de Conegliano.] b. at Besançon, France, July 31, 1754; d. at Paris, April 20, 1842. French marshal, distinguished in the Revolutionary and Napoleonic campaigns in Italy and Spain. He defended (1814) Paris against the Allied armies. His marshal's baton, granted by Napoleon, was taken from him temporarily for his refusal to participate in Ney's trial. He commanded (1823) a corps against Spain.

Mönch (mėnċh). [Also, Weiss Mönch, meaning "White Monk."] Peak in S central Switzerland, in the Bernese Oberland, on the border of the cantons of Bern and Valais, ab. 38 mi. SE of Bern. It was first ascended in 1857. Elevation, ab. 13,468 ft.

Monchique (mōn.shē'kę). Parish and concelho (commune) in S Portugal, in the province of Algarve, in the district of Faro, situated in the Serra do Monchique, NW of Faro. Nearby is Caldas de Monchique, a resort with hot springs. Pop. of concelho, 15,000 (1940); of parish, 9,166 (1940).

Monchy (môn'ċhē), Willem Hugo de. b. at Rotterdam, Netherlands, Oct. 23, 1894—. Dutch industrialist, a director (1934 et seq.) of the Holland-America Line.

Monck (mungk), Charles Stanley. [Titles: 4th Viscount Monck (in Irish peerage), 1st Baron Monck (in peerage of United Kingdom).] b. at Templemore, County Tipperary, Ireland, Oct. 10, 1819; d. Nov. 29, 1894. British politician. He was a Liberal member of Parliament (1852), and lord of the treasury (1855–58). As captain general and governor in chief of Canada and governor general of British North America, he had to deal with border disturbances (1864) against the U.S. by Confederate refugees in Canada, and Fenian raids (1866) against British North America. During his term confederation of Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia as the Dominion of Canada was carried through by means of the British North America Act (1867). He was first governor general (1867–68) of the new dominion.

Monck or Monk, George. [Titles: Baron Monck, 1st Duke of Albemarle, Earl of Torrington.] b. at Potheridge, Devonshire, Dec. 6, 1608; d. Jan. 3, 1670. English general. He served as lieutenant colonel in the Scottish war in 1640, and in the Irish rebellion of 1642. In the English Civil War he entered the king's service, was captured (1644) at Nantwich, and was committed to the Tower for two years. In 1646 he was released, and served (1647–49) Parliament in Ireland. In 1651 he was left in Scotland by Cromwell as commander in chief. He was associated with Robert Blake and Richard Deane in command of the fleet in the Dutch war in 1653. In 1654 he suppressed the Royalist insurrection in Scotland, and was made governor of that country. He was faithful to both the Cromwells. After the death of Richard Cromwell, he took the part of Parliament and the army, and on the expulsion of Parliament by John Lambert Oct. 13, 1659, secured the Scottish fortresses, advanced into England, scattered Lambert's army, and entered London Feb. 3, 1660. Apparently he realized that the passing of the Cromwells left only the Stuarts to turn to to restore some form of stable government in England and he entered into correspondence with Prince Charles (Charles II). He convinced Charles that he should issue the amnestying Declaration of Breda (April, 1660). On Feb. 12 Monck ordered the guards to admit the "secluded" or Royalist members to Parliament, and a new council was elected with Monck at its head. A new parliament met April 25, 1660, and the restoration of the monarchy was voted May 1, 1660. Monck met Charles II at Dover May 25. On July 7 he was created Earl of Torrington and Duke of Albemarle. He served in the Dutch War as admiral April, 1666, and assisted in maintaining and restoring order during the plague (1665) and at the great fire of London (1666), and in defending the Thames against the invading Dutch fleet (1667).

Monckton (mungk'tọn), Robert. b. June 24, 1726; d. May 3, 1782. English general. He served in Germany in 1743 and in Flanders in 1745, and was a member of Parliament for Pontefract in 1751. In 1752 he was sent to Nova Scotia, and in 1755 assisted in carrying out Edward Braddock's scheme of driving the French army out of Nova Scotia. On March 11, 1759, he was appointed second in command in James Wolfe's expedition against Quebec, and was wounded in the assault of Sept. 13. In February, 1761, he was made major general, and in March governor of New York and commander in chief of the province. In the same year he engaged in the capture of Martinique. On June 28, 1763, he returned to England, and was appointed lieutenant general April 30, 1770.

Monckton-Arundell (-ar'un.del), George Vere Arundell. See Galway, 8th Viscount.

Moncontour (môn.kôn.tör). [Full name, Moncontour-de-Poitou (-dę.pwä.tö).] Village in the department of Vienne, France, situated on the Dive River ab. 28 mi. NW of Poitiers. Here on Oct. 3, 1569, the French Catholics under the Duc d'Anjou (afterwards King Henry III) defeated the Huguenots under Admiral Gaspard de Coligny. Pop. ab. 600.

Moncrieff (mon.krēf', mọn-), James. b. 1744; d. at Dunkerque, France, Sept. 7, 1793. British military engineer. He served in the West Indies and North America for many years. In September, 1777, he was present at the battle of the Brandywine, in 1779 distinguished himself in the Carolinas, and in 1780 was chief engineer at the investment of Charleston. On the declaration of war with France in 1793, he was appointed quartermaster general to the army in the Netherlands, and acted as chief engineer for the British at Valenciennes, in July, 1793. He was killed at the siege of Dunkerque.

Moncrieff, William Thomas. b. at London, Aug. 24, 1794; d. in the Charterhouse, London, Dec. 3, 1857. English dramatist. As manager of the Regency (later Prince of Wales) Theatre, he wrote Moscow, or the Cossack's Daughter in 1810; and for the Olympic All at Coventry (Oct. 20, 1815). He joined R. W. Elliston at Drury Lane, and wrote Wanted, a Wife (May, 1819), Monsieur Tonson (September, 1821), and The Spectre Bridegroom (July 2, 1821). Tom and Jerry, or Life in London was produced at the Adelphi Nov. 26, 1821, and ran continuously for two seasons. The Cataract of the Ganges, produced at Drury Lane in 1823, introduced a real waterfall, which was then an innovation. For Charles Mathews the elder he wrote The Bashful Man (1826); for the Surrey Theatre, Old Heads and Young Shoulders (1828); and for W. J. Hammond of the Strand, Sam Weller (July, 1837).

He became blind in 1813 and was admitted as a brother at the Charterhouse in 1844. He wrote more than 170 plays in all, besides other works.

Moncton (mungk'tən). City in E New Brunswick, Canada, a river port on the Petitcodiac River ab. 95 mi. NE of St. John, with which it is connected by rail. There are natural gas wells and gypsum mines in the vicinity. The main highway and railroad to Nova Scotia pass through the town. 27,334 (1951).

Mond (mond), Sir Alfred Moritz. [Title, 1st Baron Melchett.] b. at Farnworth, Lancashire, England, Oct. 23, 1868; d. 1930. English industrialist, financier, and politician; son of Ludwig Mond. Educated at Cambridge and Edinburgh, he became managing director of his father's chemical company. He served as a Liberal member of Parliament (1906, 1910–23, 1924–28), and was first commissioner of works (1916–21) and minister of health (1921–22).

Mond, Ludwig. b. at Kassel, Germany, March 7, 1839; d. at London, Dec. 11, 1909. British chemist. In 1862 he went to England and engaged in chemical manufacturing. Using a modification of the Solvay process, his firm, Brunner, Mond and Company, produced alkali by efficient means. He developed Mond producer gas, used for power and heating, discovered nickel carbonyl, and exploited this discovery by establishing a nickel-producing plant. In 1896 he founded and endowed the Faraday Research Laboratory of the Royal Institution. He owned a notable collection of works of art, a large part of which he bequeathed to the British nation.

Mond, Sir Robert Ludwig. b. at Farnworth, Lancashire, England, 1868; d. at Paris, Oct. 22, 1938. English executive in the nickel industry, chemical researcher, and archaeologist; son of Ludwig Mond. He engaged in research in pure and applied chemistry, electrochemistry, and color photography, and assisted in the discovery of new carbonyls. He conducted excavations in the cemetery at Thebes, in Palestine, and in Brittany, and organized the Mond expedition in Egypt.

Monday (mun'dā). Second day of the week.

Monday, Anthony. See Munday, Anthony.

Monde (mônd), Le. Paris daily evening newspaper, founded in 1944. It was considered to take the position previously held by Le Temps, which ceased publication during World War II. Its circulation (1948) was 175,000.

Mondovì (mōn.dō.vē'). Town and commune in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Piedmont, in the province of Cuneo, ab. 48 mi. S of Turin. It has a cathedral. Damage was suffered during World War II by some buildings of tourist interest, but repairs have been completed or are being carried out. Pop. of commune, 19,621 (1936); of town, 7,225 (1936).

Mondragone (mōn.drä.gō'nā). Town and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Campania, in the province of Napoli, situated on the Gulf of Gaeta, between Gaeta and Naples. The site of the ancient Sinuessa is nearby. Pop. of commune, 11,376 (1936); of town, 11,061 (1936).

Mondriaan (môn'drē.än), Piet. [Full name, Pieter Cornelis Mondriaan.] b. at Amersfoort, Netherlands, March 7, 1872; d. 1944. Dutch neoplastic painter, and founder of this movement. He was a pupil at the Amsterdam Academy and was first influenced by Dutch romanticism and mannerism. In 1910 he went to Paris, where he was influenced by Picasso. From 1914 to 1917 he went through a period now known as plus and minus. In 1917 he became an outstanding member of the Stijl group, in the Netherlands, and in the same year did his first pure abstract works. In 1920 he founded neoplasticism; he became one of the leaders of the abstraction-creation group at Paris in 1932. His aim was Chomoplasticism, which, he said, could only be realized in architecture.

Mondsee (mont'zā). Lake in NW Austria, in the province of Upper Austria, ab. 15 mi. E of Salzburg. Elevation, ab. 1,578 ft.; length, ab. 7 mi.; area, ab. 5.5 sq. mi.

Mone (mō'nə), Franz Joseph. b. at Mingolsheim, Baden, Germany, May 12, 1796; d. at Karlsruhe, Baden, March 12, 1871. German historian, antiquary, and philologist.

Monemuji (mō.ne.mō'zhē'). At the time of the Portuguese discoveries in Africa, a great native kingdom between Lake Tanganyika and the E coast; probably the modern Unyamwezi.

Monemvasia or Monembasia (mô.nem.vä.sē'ä). [Also: Monembasias (mô.nem.vä.sē'äs); Italian Malvasia.] Village in S Greece, in the nomos (department) of Laconia, situated on the coast ab. 46 mi. SE of Sparta. It was an important medieval fortress, and was formerly noted for its export of wine. 683 (1940).

Monessen (mō.nes'ən). City in SW Pennsylvania, in Westmoreland County, ab. 20 mi. SE of Pittsburgh, in a bituminous coal-mining area; manufactures of steel. The name of the town is derived from the first syllable of Monongahela and Essen (Germany). 17,896 (1950).

Monet (mo.ne; Anglicized, mō.nā'), Claude. b. at Paris, Nov. 14, 1840; d. 1926. French painter whose experimental technique of painting almost exclusively with bright unmixed colors led him to be regarded as one of the foremost impressionist painters. His works, most of which have landscapes for subject matter, include The Seine at Giverny, Bordighera, Cape Martin, Snow at Port Villers, Un Déjeuner sur l'Herbe, and Gare St. Lazare, as well as studies of French cathedrals.

Monet or Monet de Lamarck (mo.ne də lä.märk), Jean Baptiste Pierre Antoine de. See Lamarck, Jean Baptiste Pierre Antoine de Monet, Chevalier de.

Moneta (mō.nā'tä), Ernesto Teodoro. b. at Milan, Italy, Sept. 20, 1833; d. Feb. 10, 1918. Italian journalist, editor (1867–96) of the Secolo at Milan. He served under Garibaldi in the campaign for Italian unification. He was president of the Lombardy Union and International Peace Society, and in 1907 was awarded the Nobel peace prize, sharing it with Louis Renault.

Monett (mō.net'). City in SW Missouri, in Barry and Lawrence counties; shipping point for fruit. 4,771 (1950).

Money. Comedy by Edward Bulwer-Lytton, first produced on Dec. 8, 1849.

Moneytrap (mun'i.trap). In Sir John Vanbrugh's play The Confederacy, a threadbare, rusty, rich money-scrivener.

Monfalcone (mōn.fäl.kō'nā). Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Friuli-Venezia Giulia, in the province of Gorizia, situated near the mouth of the Isonzo River and at the N end of the Adriatic Sea, ab. 17 mi. NW of Trieste. It has a port on the Adriatic, shipyards, cotton mills, and a chemical industry. Under Venetian rule from the 15th century, it passed in 1798 to French control, and was then under Austrian rule (1814–1918). It suffered severe damage in World War I. Pop. of commune, 19,634 (1936); of town, 14,964 (1936).

Monferrato (mōn.fer.rä'tō). Italian name of Montferrat.

Monforte de Lemos (mōn.fōr'tā dā lā'mōs). Town in NW Spain, in the province of Lugo, ab. 35 mi. S of Lugo; linen and soap manufactures; livestock markets; ruins of medieval castle. 21,264 (1940).

Mongalla (mong.gal'ə). City in Equatoria province, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, in NE Africa, on the E bank of the Nile River, ab. 150 mi. N of the Uganda border. It was formerly the provincial capital but was replaced by Juba.

Mongarh (mong.gur'). See Monghyr.

Monge (môñzh), Gaspard. [Title, Comte de Péluse.] b. at Beaune, France, May 10, 1746; d. at Paris, July 18, 1818. French mathematician, founder of the science of descriptive geometry. He was minister of marine (1792–93), and the chief founder of the École Polytechnique at Paris. His best-known work is Géométrie descriptive (1799).

Monghyr (mong.gir'). [Also: Mongarh, Monghir, Mungir.] District in Bihar Union of India, ab. 80 mi. E of Patna; rice, wheat, sugar, cotton, and silk. Capital, Monghyr; area, ab. 3,975 sq. mi.; pop. 2,849,127 (1951).

Monghyr. [Also: Mongarh, Monghir, Mungir.] City in NE Union of India, in Bihar, capital of the district of Monghyr, on the Ganges River ab. 80 mi. E of Patna; important trading and distributing center, formerly a fortress. 63,114 (1941).

Mongibello (mōn.jē.bel'lō). An Italian (Sicilian) name of Etna, Italy.

Mongkut (mông'kŭt'), Maha. See Rama IV.

Mongolia (mong.gō'li.ə, mən-), Independent Republic of. See Mongolian People's Republic.

Mongolia, Inner. Name given to that part of China lying between the Mongolian People's Republic and the Great Wall of China, formerly including the provinces of Jehol, Chahar, Suiyuan, Ningsia, and the W part of Liaoning. The area is mostly plateau and grades from poor grassland in the SE to desert in the NW. Winters are long and cold, summers are short, and rainfall is less than 15 inches. Some grains are grown, but the principal products are wool and hides. See Inner Mongolian Autonomous Region.

Mongolia, Outer. See Mongolian People's Republic.

Mongolian (mong.gō'li.ạn, mon-). [Also, Mongolic (-gō'lik).] Family of languages of E Asia, of which the Eastern group includes literary Mongolian, Mongolian proper, Southern Mongolian (embracing the languages of Chahar, Ordos, and others), and Buryat. The Western group includes Oirot, which in turn includes Kalmuck, and the language of Afghanistan. The earliest literature now known written in literary Mongolian is dated c1240. The Mongolian family of languages has been assigned by some scholars in the arbitrary linguistic classification known as the Altaic branch of the Ural-Altaic family of languages. This relationship, however, is not established.

Mongolian People's Republic (mong.gō'li.ạn, mon-). [Also: Independent Republic of Outer Mongolia; former name, Outer Mongolia.] Republic in Asia, lying NW of China and bordered on the E, S, and W by China, and on the N by the U.S.S.R. The surface is a series of plateaus and mountains. Much of the plateau area is covered with desert, including a great part of the Gobi. The area came under Chinese suzerainty at the end of the 17th century and became known as Outer Mongolia. In 1920 Baron Roman von Ungern-Steinberg seized control of the government. The Mongolians revolted in 1921, and on March 13 of that year they established the present republic. Since attaining its independence, Mongolia has been rather carefully controlled by the U.S.S.R. The chief occupation of the people is nomadic herding, and much of the produce (hides, skins, and wool) is sent to the U.S.S.R. The Mongols are all believers in the Lama variety of Buddhism, similar to that of Tibet. Capital, Ulan Bator; area, ab. 626,000 sq. mi.; pop. 885,000 (est. 1950).

Mongols (mong'gọlz, -gōlz). People of Asia scattered throughout Mongolia, Manchuria, and the Buryat-Mongol Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic, and speaking languages belonging to the Mongolian or Mongolic family of languages. The Mongols under Genghis Khan conquered an empire which stretched from the Dniester River to the Pacific Ocean and from the Persian Gulf to the Amur River, by 1241. These Mongol hordes were comprised of many peoples of Turkic and other strains, and became known collectively as Tartars or Tatars. Although their fortunes declined after the 13th century, the Mongols retained their independence until conquered by the Manchus in 1691.

Mongols, Empire of the. Medieval Asiatic empire. It was founded by Genghis Khan (d. 1227), extended over China and large portions of C and W Asia and Russia, was checked in its western advance at Liegnitz (Wahlstatt), Silesia, in 1241, and overthrew the caliphate in 1258. A Mongol dynasty, known as the Yüan dynasty, ruled in China from Kublai Khan (c1259) to 1368, when the Ming dynasty superseded it. The empire divided into various parts at the close of the 13th century, but was temporarily revived under Tamerlane c1400. His descendant Baber founded the empire of the Moguls in India.

Monhegan (mon.hē'gạn). Island of Lincoln County, SE Maine, situated in the Atlantic, ab. 16 mi. SE of Boothbay Harbor. Area, ab. 0.8 sq. mi.; pop. 75 (1950).

Monica (mon'i.kạ), Saint. [Also, Monnica.] b. at Tagaste, in northern Africa, 332 or 333; d. at Ostia, Italy, May 4, 387. Mother of Saint Augustine. Married to a pagan, she helped convert him to Christianity. Her prayers and solicitude were also influential in the conversion of Augustine, as he relates in his Confessions.

Monick (mo.nēk), Emmanuel. b. 1893—. French government official, governor (1944–49) of the Bank of France. He was active in the Resistance movement in France and Morocco during World War II.

Monier (mo.nyā), Joseph. b. at St.-Quentin la Potérie, France, 1823; d. at Paris, March 13, 1906. French inventor. His method of reinforcing concrete with iron rods (first patented in 1867) was originally used for gardening tubs, and later for bridges and staircases.

Monier-Williams (mun'i.ėr.wil'yạmz, mon'-), Sir Monier. b. at Bombay, India, Nov. 12, 1819; d. at Cannes, France, April 11, 1899. English Orientalist, professor of Sanskrit (1860 et seq.) at Oxford. He obtained the professorship after a much publicized contest with F. Max Müller for the chair. He founded (1880) the Indian Institute at Oxford. His works include a Sanskrit grammar (1846), an English-Sanskrit dictionary (1851), a Sanskrit-English dictionary (1872), grammars of Hindustani, translations of the Sakuntala and other Sanskrit works, Indian Epic Poetry (1863), Indian Wisdom (1875), Hinduism (1877), Modern India and the Indians (1878), Religious Life and Thought in India (1883), Buddhism (1889), Brahmanism (1891), and others.

Monikins (mon'i.kinz), The. Satirical novel by James Fenimore Cooper, published in 1835.

Monime (mo.nēm). Principal female character in Jean Baptiste Racine's Mithridate.

Monimia (mō.nim'i.ạ). Chief female character in Thomas Otway's play The Orphan; an orphan left in charge of old Acasto, and loved by both his sons, Castalio and Polydore. Though married to the former, she became the innocent victim of the latter, and her woes have made the character proverbial as a type of suffering innocence.

Moñino (mō.nyē'nō), José. See Florida-Blanca, Count of.

Monis (mo.nēs), Ernest Antoine Emmanuel. b. at Châteauneuf, Charente, France, May 23, 1846; d. May 26, 1929. French minister of state. He was elected to the Chamber of Deputies in 1885, and in 1901 to the Senate, of which he later became vice-president. He served (1899–1902) as minister of justice in the Waldeck-Rousseau cabinet. On the fall of the Briand cabinet (March, 1911), he became premier, and held office until June, 1911, when he gave place to Joseph Caillaux. He served (1913–14) as minister of marine.

Moniteur (mo.nē.tėr). Official journal (1799–1868) of the French government. It first appeared in 1789 under the name Gazette Nationale, and from 1799 was known as the Moniteur Universel.

Monitor (mon'i.tọr). Ironclad steam battery, consisting of an iron hull covered by a projecting deck, and surmounted by a revolving turret protecting the guns, designed by John Ericsson, and employed by the Union navy in the Civil War. Her commander was Lieutenant J. L. Worden, and her executive officer Lieutenant S. D. Greene. She was launched at Greenpoint, N.Y., Jan. 30, 1862. On March 9 occurred the battle between the Monitor and the Merrimack, which resulted in a draw. She afterward joined the unsuccessful expedition commanded by Captain John Rodgers against Fort Darling, near Richmond, and was sunk off Cape Hatteras on her way to Beaufort, S.C., on Dec. 29, 1862. Sixty vessels were built or projected on her plan during the war.

Moniuszko (mô.nyösh'kô), Stanisław. b. at Minsk, Russia, May 5, 1813; d. at Warsaw, Poland, June 4, 1872. Polish composer. His works include operas such as Halka, songs, and choral and orchestral compositions.

Moniz (mō'nēsh), Antônio Caetano de Abreu Freire Egas. b. at Avanca, Portugal, Nov. 29, 1874—. Portuguese neurologist. He taught at Coimbra (until 1911) and Lisbon (1911 et seq.) and served as director of the Lisbon Institute of Neurology. In 1927 he developed cerebral angiography, a method of describing the way blood circulates in the brain; later he discovered prefrontal lobotomy or leucotomy, a surgical means of treating schizophrenia and paranoia by severing the connections between the frontal portions of the brain and the rest of the cerebrum. For this latter discovery, of great success in treating insanity, he was corecipient, with Walter Rudolph Hess, of the 1949 Nobel prize in physiology and medicine. Moniz was Portuguese minister to Madrid in 1918 and minister of foreign affairs (1918–19); he was chief of the Portuguese delegation to the peace conference at Paris after World War I. He is author of several books on neurology.

Monjas (mōng'нäs), Casa de las. See under Uxmal, Mexico.

Monk (mungk), George. See Monck or Monk, George.

Monk, Maria. b. c1817; d. 1850. Canadian adventuress. She appeared in New York in 1835, posing as a refugee from the Hôtel Dieu, a Roman Catholic nunnery at Montreal. In Awful Disclosures by Maria Monk (1836) and a sequel published the same year, her descriptions of practices she claimed were prevalent at the nunnery were believed by many people and caused an outbreak of feeling against Roman Catholics. The books had a sensational sale, but the fraud was shortly exposed and she was disclosed as an immoral impostor seeking publicity.

Monk, The. [Original full title, Ambrosio, or the Monk.] Gothic romance by Matthew Gregory ("Monk") Lewis, published in 1795. A second edition was issued in which many passages considered objectionable in the first edition were omitted. The author gained the sobriquet of "Monk" Lewis from this book.

Monk, William Henry. b. at London, March 16, 1823; d. there, 1889. English organist, one of the editors of Hymns Ancient and Modern (1861).

Mon-Khmer (mōn'kmār'). [Also, Mon-Annam.] Linguistic stock of SE Asia with representatives in Assam (Khasi), Burma (Mon, Palaung, Wa), Thailand, Indochina (Cambodian or Khmer, and most of the languages of the Moi or mountain tribes), the Malay Peninsula (Semang, Sakai), and the Nicobar Islands. Cham is also one of the important languages of Cambodia. The languages of this family are nontonal and form derivatives by prefixation and infixation. A genetic relationship of Mon-Khmer with Malayo-Polynesian has been suggested; a proposed connection with the Munda languages of India is at present rejected by most authorities. Vietnamese (Annamese) has certain affinities with the Mon-Khmer languages.

Monkhouse (mungk'hous), Allan. [Full name, Allan Noble Monkhouse.] b. at Durham, England, May 7, 1858; d. at Disley, Cheshire, England, Jan. 10, 1936. English novelist and playwright. He was literary editor (1902–32) of the Manchester Guardian. He was the author of many dramas, most of which were produced by repertory theaters at Birmingham, Manchester, and Liverpool. Among his plays are Mary Broome (1912), Four Tragedies (1913), The Education of Mr. Surrage (1913), War Plays (1916), The Conquering Hero (1923), The Grand Cham's Diamond (1924), First Blood (1924), and Cecilia (1932). His novels include A Deliverance (1898), Love in a Life (1903), Dying Fires (1912), Men and Ghosts (1918), True Love (1919), My Daughter Helen (1922), Suburb (1925), and Farewell Manchester (1931).

"Monk" Lewis (mungk' lö'is). See Lewis, Matthew Gregory.

Monk's Mound. See under Cahokia.

Monk's Tale, The. One of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales. It is unfinished, being stopped by the knight. It contains the story of Ugolino from Dante, and follows Boccaccio's De casibus illustrium virorum in a general way.

Monkwearmouth (mungk.wir'muth). Northern ward and former suburb of Sunderland county borough, Durham, NE England, situated on the N bank of the river Wear. It had a Benedictine monastery, founded in 674, on the lands of which Bede was born and which was later his residence. 7,403 (1931).

Monmousseau (môn.mö.sō), Gaston. b. at Luynes, Indre-et-Loire, France, Jan. 17, 1883—. French Communist and trade-union leader. A railway office worker by profession, he was general secretary (1922–35) of the Unitary General Confederation of Labor (CGTU), and secretary (March, 1945, et seq.) of the General Confederation of Labor (CGT). He was a member of the Chamber of Deputies (1936–39) and the Consultative Assembly (November, 1944).

Monmouth (mon'muth, mun'-). Municipal borough, in SW England, county seat of Monmouthshire, situated at the confluence of the rivers Monnow and Wye, ab. 145 mi. W of London by rail. 5,432 (1951).

Monmouth (mon'muth). City in NW Illinois, county seat of Warren County, ab. 94 mi. NW of Springfield. It is the seat of Monmouth College. It has manufactures of pottery, metal products, farm implements, and feed. It was named for the battle of Monmouth in the Revolutionary War. 10,193 (1950).

Monmouth, Duke of. [Title of James Scott; additional title, Duke of Buccleuch; known as James Fitzroy and James Crofts; called the "Protestant Duke."] b. at Rotterdam, April 9, 1649; executed at London, July 15, 1685. English rebel; illegitimate son (recognized by the king) of Charles II of England and Lucy Walters, the king's mistress during his stay at the Hague. He was created duke of Monmouth in 1663, and treated as a prince, was made captain general of the army in 1670, and came to be known as "the Protestant Duke." He commanded the English forces sent to assist the French in the Dutch war, and afterward the army sent against the Scottish Covenanters (1675–79). The realization that the Duke of York (later James II) had close ties with Roman Catholics roused the "anti-popery" section of England to the point where the possibility grew strong that Monmouth might be legitimized and recognized as heir to the English throne. Charles attempted to frustrate this development and in 1679 Monmouth went into exile. But when James received permission to live at Edinburgh, Monmouth returned (1679) to England. The king ordered him to leave; he disobeyed openly, but he was not punished. Monmouth, advised by the leaders of the Whigs, made a series of regal progresses (1680, 1682) and gained popular support, especially in the west. He became voluble in opposition to the succession of James, but repressive measures were instituted against the Whigs, especially after the Rye House Plot (1683) was exposed. Monmouth, disclaiming any previous knowledge of the plot, was exiled to Holland (1684), where, when he heard of Charles's death (May, 1685), he embarked for England. His landing (June 11) at Lyme Regis, Dorsetshire, was a complete fiasco. He claimed the throne as the Protestant head of the royal house and had himself proclaimed king at Taunton on June 20. But his followers, undisciplined and nondescript, were driven back and defeated by the royal forces at Sedgemoor (July 6) and Monmouth himself was captured two days later. He had, even before the battle, lost heart and now begged mercy of James, confessing his misdeeds and, as a last resort, offering to become a Roman Catholic. But his anguished writhings were obviously insincere and he was beheaded on Tower Hill. The circuit made by George Jeffreys in the west country, where Monmouth had had his greatest support, became known as the Bloody Assizes because of the severe punishment meted out to anyone who had sympathized with Monmouth.

Monmouth, 1st Earl of. Title of Carey, Robert.

Monmouth, (titular) Earl of. Title of Middleton, Charles (c1640–1719).

Monmouth, 1st Earl of (of the 2nd creation). A title of Mordaunt, Charles.

Monmouth (mon'muth), Battle of. Victory gained June 28, 1778, at Monmouth Court House, Freehold, Monmouth County, N.J., by the Americans under George Washington over the British under Sir Henry Clinton. The Americans under Charles Lee were at first repulsed. Lee was subsequently court-martialed. The loss of the Americans was about 230; that of the British, over 400, besides many deserters. A considerable number of men on both sides succumbed to the intense heat.

Monmouth (mon'muth, mun'-), Geoffrey of. See Geoffrey of Monmouth.

Monmouth Courthouse (mon'muth). Former name of Freehold, N.J.

Monmouthshire (mon'muth.shir, mun'-) or Monmouth (mon'muth, mun'-). Maritime county in SW England, on the Welsh border. It is bounded on the NW and N by Brecknockshire (Wales), on the NE by Herefordshire, on the E by Gloucestershire, on the S by Bristol Channel and the estuary of the river Severn, and on the W by Glamorganshire (Wales). The surface is hilly, especially in the N and W parts, where it reaches an elevation of over 2,200 ft. The coastline is low, flat, and regular, being indented only by the estuary of the river Usk. Wheat and rye are grown in the valley of the Usk and oats and barley are grown in the uplands. Monmouthshire has considerable permanent pasture devoted to the raising of cattle and sheep. Coal and iron mining, as well as large iron and steel works, are found in the W part of the county; Ebbw Vale is a center of the tin-plate industry. Monmouthshire was made an English county in 1535. Welsh is very generally spoken and the county has more affinities with Wales than with England. The General Register Office now groups it for statistical purposes with Wales. County seat, Monmouth; area, ab. 546 sq. mi.; pop. 424,647 (1951).

Monnerville (mo.ner.vēl), Gaston. b. at Cayenne, French Guiana, Jan. 2, 1897—. French political leader and lawyer, president of the Council of the Republic, the upper house of the French legislature under the Fourth Republic. A moderate leftist in politics, he was active in court cases of political character. He served as a deputy (1932–40, 1944 et seq.). A specialist in colonial affairs, he was undersecretary of state for colonies (1937, 1938), was active in the Resistance in France during World War II, and was president (1947 et seq.) of the Council of the Republic. A Negro, he has been active in the defense of colonial peoples.

Monnet (mo.ne), Jean. b. at Cognac, Charente, France, 1888—. French banker, businessman, and government official, in charge (1945 et seq.) of the French plan of modernization and reëquipment of the national productive system, known as the "Monnet Plan," of which he was named (December, 1945) commissioner general. He was a leading figure (1914–18) in the organization of inter-Allied supply agencies, including the wheat council and the Allied maritime council, was associate general-secretary (1919–23) of the League of Nations, and was associated (1923–33) with the Blair and Giannini banking interests in the U.S. He served (1933–38) in China as a financial adviser, and was active (1938–39) on French supply missions to the U.S. and Great Britain. After the fall of France (June, 1940), he returned to London, where he was appointed (August, 1940) to a British diplomatic post, as a member of the British purchasing commission in Washington. Sent (1943) to investigate the state of the French army in Africa, he resigned from the British supply council, became the economic adviser of General Henri Giraud, and negotiated the formation (June, 1943) of the French committee of national liberation, of which he became a member. He held various supply posts in the Free French regime in Algiers and Paris and sponsored (1945) the creation of the plan for modernization of French national production to which his name was given. In 1952 he was head of the top authority of the west European resources pool.

Monnica (mon'i.kạ), Saint. See Saint Monica.

Monnier (mo.nyā), Henri Bonaventure. b. at Paris, June 6, 1799; d. there, Jan. 3, 1877. French caricaturist and author. Among his works are Scènes populaires (1830) and Mémoires de M. Joseph Prudhomme (1857).

Monnier, Marc. b. at Florence, Italy, 1829; d. at Geneva, Switzerland, April 18, 1885. French poet and prose writer. His works include poems, literary criticisms, and volumes on Italy.

Monnier, Philippe. b. at Geneva, Switzerland, 1864; d. there, 1911. Swiss author writing in French. His Causeries genevoises (1902) show him to be both an erudite and a whimsical observer, much in the manner of his literary predecessor Rodolphe Toeppfer.

Monocacy (mọ.nok'ạ.si). Small tributary of the Potomac River. Near it, in the vicinity of Frederick, Md., on July 9, 1864, the Confederates (20,000) under Jubal Early defeated Union forces (6,050) under Lew Wallace.

Monoceros (mọ.nos'ẹ.ros). Constellation, the Unicorn, S of Gemini and Cancer, and between Canis Minor and Canis Major. It contains no star brighter than the fourth magnitude. The constellation lies on the axis of the Milky Way, which is, however, inconspicuous in that part of the sky.

Monod (mo.nō), Adolphe. b. at Copenhagen, Jan. 21, 1802; d. at Paris, April 6, 1856. French Protestant clergyman, noted as a pulpit orator.

Monod, Frédéric Joël Jean Gérard. b. at Monnaz, Vaud, Switzerland, May 17, 1794; d. at Paris, 1863. French Protestant clergyman, founder of the Free Church of France.

Monod, Gabriel. b. at Ingouville, France, March 7, 1844; d. at Versailles, France, April 10, 1912. French historian. He served as professor (1905 et seq.) at the Collège de France. Author of Bibliographie de l'histoire de France jusqu'en 1789 (Bibliography of French History until 1789; 1888), Les Maîtres de l'histoire: Renan, Taine, Michelet (Masters of Historiography: Renan, Taine, Michelet, 1894), and others.

Monoecus (mọ.nē'kus). Ancient name of Monaco.

Mono Lake (mō'nō). Salt lake in Mono County, E California. It has no outlet. Elevation, ab. 6,430 ft.; area, ab. 90 sq. mi.

Monomachus (mọ.nom'ạ.kus), Constantine. See Constantine IX.

Monomotapa (mō"nō.mō.tä'pä). Name given to an African kingdom said once to have flourished in the lower Zambezi basin. It was often mentioned by early Portuguese writers for its gold mines, but all attempts of the Portuguese to colonize the area failed, and most of the accounts of it were so embellished by legend as to be of little historical use.

Monona (mọ.nō'nạ). Village in S Wisconsin, in Dane County, near Madison. 2,544 (1950).

Monongahela (mọ.nong.gạ.hē'lạ). [Former names: Parkinson's Ferry, Monongahela City.] City in SW Pennsylvania, in Washington County, on the Monongahela River: manufactures of machinery, chemicals, and firebrick; river coal-shipping point. It was chartered in 1873. Pop. 8,922 (1950).

Monongahela River. River in N West Virginia and SW Pennsylvania. It is formed by the union of the West Fork and Tygart River, and unites with the Allegheny at Pittsburgh to form the Ohio. Braddock was defeated on its banks near the site of what is now Pittsburgh, on July 9, 1755, by the French and Indians. Total length, including Tygart, ab. 300 mi.; length of Monongahela, 128 mi.; navigable to Fairmont, W.Va.

Mono Pass (mō'nō). Pass in the Sierra Nevada Mountains, in E California. Elevation, ab. 10,599 ft.

Monophysitism (mọ.nof'i.sīt.iz.ẹm). A much disputed doctrine concerning Jesus Christ. While the term Monophysitism (from Greek elements meaning "belief in one nature") came into wide and definite use only after the Council of Chalcedon (451), the concept arose much earlier, and that synod was in fact an effort to preserve the religious and political unity of the Christian world, threatened by bitter contention over the question of whether Jesus could be said to have a single or a dual nature. Apollinaris the Younger (Apollinaris of Laodicea) had put forward in the 4th century an essentially monophysite theory, which was condemned by the First Council of Constantinople (381). On the other hand the doctrine propounded in 428 by Nestorius, patriarch of Constantinople, carrying the dualistic concept to the point of denying that the Virgin Mary could properly be called the Mother of God, was pronounced heretical by the Council of Ephesus (431). Eutyches and others were so outraged by the Nestorian heresy that they rejected the theory of the two natures in any form or degree, and accused the Council of Chalcedon of Nestorianism. That Council, respondent to a letter from Pope Leo I, and resting on the findings of the Council of Nicaea (325), formulated the doctrine of Jesus Christ as "perfect God and perfect man, consubstantial with the Father according to His deity, consubstantial with us according to His humanity, in two natures without confusion or change, without division or separation." For a century and a half thereafter, popes endeavored to enforce doctrinal uniformity; emperors alternately upheld one faction and the other; monks and mobs rioted; bishops were deposed, elevated, and murdered; even Justinian was unable to compose the schism; Rome and the church generally throughout the West upheld the concept of the two natures, but the Monophysites with their formula of "the one nature of the incarnate Word of God" prevailed in Egypt and Syria and spread their doctrine to Ethiopia and to Armenia. Ironically, the most decisive result of this greatest schism in Christianity before the late 15th century, was that it left Christianity in the East virtually impotent against the flood of Islam when it rose in the 7th century. As islands of Christianity (though in both Roman and Greek eyes heretical) the Coptic, Ethiopian, Jacobite, and Armenian churches have survived 13 centuries of engulfment in the Moslem world, and continue to hold to the concept of Monophysitism.

Monopoli (mō.nō'pō.lē). Town and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Bari, situated on the Adriatic Sea ab. 25 mi. SE of Bari. Pop. of commune, 28,856 (1936); of town, 18,092 (1936).

Monor (mō′nōr). Town in N central Hungary, between Budapest and Cegléd. It is an agricultural trade center. 13,518 (1948).

Monotheletism (mō.noth′ē.let.iz.ēm) or Monothelitism (-lit-). A much disputed doctrine concerning Jesus Christ, the name of which is derived from Greek elements meaning "belief in one will." By the end of the 6th century, Monophysitism, the doctrine of the single nature of Jesus, condemned as a heresy by Rome and alternately condemned, adopted, or tolerated by Constantinople, had prevailed throughout the African, Syrian, and Armenian churches against the doctrine of the Saviour's dual nature, as laid down by the Council of Chalcedon (451). The church everywhere throughout the West, however, accepted the Chalcedonian doctrine. The Christian world had for more than a century and a half been torn and weakened religiously and politically by this schism when in 622 the emperor Heraclius I proposed what seemed like a workable compromise. The Heraclian thesis was that Christ possessed two natures, the divine and the human, but that only one will, the divine, directed his actions. The Eastern hierarchy went along with the emperor cautiously and without enthusiasm until Cyrus, patriarch of Alexandria, pronounced strongly in favor of Monotheletism, provoking an attack by Sophronius, a monk who later became patriarch of Jerusalem, and an appeal to Sergius, patriarch of Constantinople, who wrote to Pope Honorius I at Rome, and got a reply which seemed to favor the new formula, while at the same time enjoining any further debate of the problem. Thus encouraged, Heraclius in 638 proclaimed Monotheletism the official Christian doctrine throughout the empire. When this became known at Rome, Severinus, successor to Honorius in the papal see, promptly condemned Monotheletism. Heraclius later recanted, but his successors Constantine III and Constans II tried to enforce the doctrine, while the successors of Severinus, Popes John IV and Theodore I, anathematized it anew. Meanwhile the Monophysites utterly rejected the olive branch, and the Christian world was thus actually, as a result, the more dangerously divided precisely when the Mohammedan tide was rising to overwhelm it in the East. Constans II now attempted, as had Pope Honorius, to forbid any mention of the disputed doctrines, but Pope Martin I summoned a Council to condemn Monotheletism, which led to his seizure, torture, and exile and to the persecution of Catholic upholders of the doctrine of the two natures, until a new emperor, Constantine IV, restored toleration. The Sixth General Council (Third Council of Constantinople) in 680 again stigmatized Monotheletism as heresy, and except for an attempt to revive it in 711–713, it died away everywhere except among the Maronites of Syria, where it persisted until they came again into communion with Rome in the 12th century.

Monrad (môn′räʊʀн), Ditlev Gothard. b. at Copenhagen, Nov. 24, 1811; d. March 28, 1887. Danish statesman, bishop of Lolland-Falster (1849–54, 1871–87). He was minister president from 1863 until after Denmark's defeat (1864) by Prussia in the first of Bismarck's wars of consolidation.

Monreale (mōn.rā.ä′lā). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Palermo, ab. 5 mi. SW of Palermo. The cathedral, considered the finest existing building of the Sicilian Norman-Saracenic style, was begun in 1173. The exterior, except the arcaded chevet, is very plain; the bronze north doors have 28 Romanesque relief-panels, and the west doors are decorated with 43 Bible scenes. The interior length is 335 ft., the greatest width 131 ft.; the nave has 18 Corinthian columns, in part taken from ancient buildings, with stilted pointed arches; the three apses open on the broad transept. The roof is of wood, open-framed. The lower parts of the walls are encrusted with marble; all the rest is covered with mosaics on gold ground, consisting of Old and New Testament scenes and rich arabesques. The cloister, one of the most admirable creations of the 12th century, is a large quadrangle. It has coupled columns with many of the shafts inlaid with mosaic, carved foliage and figure capitals, and stilted arches. The cathedral and other buildings of interest to tourists escaped damage in World War II. Pop. of commune, 19,578 (1936), of town, 14,340 (1936).

Monro (mun.rō′), Alexander. b. at London, Sept. 8, 1697; d. at Edinburgh, July 10, 1767. British anatomist and surgeon, professor of anatomy (1720 et seq.) at Edinburgh. His chief work is Osteology (1726).

Monro, Harold Edward. b. at Brussels, Belgium, March 14, 1879; d. at Broadstairs, Kent, England, March 16, 1932. English poet, critic, and anthologist. He founded the Poetry Society and the Poetry Review, a quarterly, in 1911, established (1912) the Poetry Bookshop in a London slum area, in order to bring poetry to the people, and founded (1913) the periodical Poetry and the Drama, which was suspended (December, 1914) because of World War I and was reëstablished (1919) as The Chapbook and finally discontinued in 1921. Author of Poems (1906), Judas (1908), Before Dawn (1911), Children of Love (1914), Trees (1916), Strange Meetings (1917), Real Property (1922), The Earth for Sale (1928), and Elm Angel (1930), poetry; Proposals for a Voluntary Nobility (1907), Chronicle of a Pilgrimage: Paris to Milan on Foot (1909), The Evolution of the Soul (1917), Some Contemporary Poets (1920), and One Day Awake: A Modern Morality (1922). prose; and of Twentieth Century Poetry (1929), an anthology. Among his single poems are Every Thing, City, Storm, Solitude, Children of Love, Dog, and Man Carrying Bale.

Monro or Monroe or Munro (mun.rō′), Henry. b. 1768; hanged at Lisburn, Ireland, in June, 1798. Irish patriot; son of a Scottish Presbyterian minister settled at Lisburn. He entered the linen business c1788, and in 1795 joined the United Irishmen. In the rebellion of 1798 he succeeded to the command, was captured on June 15, and was hung at Lisburn.

Monro or Munro, Robert. d. c1680. Scottish general. He served in the Scottish rebellion against Charles I, in which connection he was sent (1640) to Aberdeen with about 800 men. Named (1644) to replace Alexander Leslie, 1st Earl of Leven, commander of the English and Scottish forces in Ulster, he captured (1644) Belfast. He refused to surrender Carrickfergus and Belfast at the conclusion of peace and was superseded (1648) by George Monck. He was then imprisoned for five years in the Tower of London.

Monroe (mun.rō′). City in N Georgia, county seat of Walton County: cotton mills. 4,542 (1950).

Monroe. City in N Louisiana, parish seat of Ouachita Parish, on the Washita River, in a natural gas area: manufactures include carbon black, chemicals, paper, lumber, wood products, and cottonseed oil. 38,572 (1950).

Monroe. [Called the "Floral City."] City in SE Michigan, county seat of Monroe County, on the Raisin River ab. 35 mi. SW of Detroit: paper manufactures, steel rolling mill, and plant nurseries. 21,467 (1950).

Monroe. City in S North Carolina, county seat of Union County: manufactures of cottonseed oil, lumber, and brick and tile products. It was named for President James Monroe. 10,140 (1950).

Monroe. City in S Wisconsin, county seat of Green County: trading and shipping center for Swiss and Limburger cheese. 7,037 (1950).

Monroe, Fort. [Also, Fortress Monroe.] Fort on Old Point Comfort, at the mouth of the James River, in E Virginia. It occupies a tract of 200 acres ceded in 1818 by Virginia to the U.S.

Monroe, Harriet. b. at Chicago, Dec. 23, 1860; d. Sept. 26, 1936. American poet and editor. She established (1912) at Chicago and edited (1912–36) Poetry: A Magazine of Verse. Her Columbian Ode was commissioned (1891) and read (1892) at the ceremonies celebrating the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America. Author of Valeria and Other Poems (1892), The Passing Show—Motion Plays in Verse (1903), You and I (1914), The Difference and Other Poems (1924), and Poets and Their Art (1926).

Monroe, James. b. in Westmoreland County, Va., April 28, 1758; d. at New York, July 4, 1831. American statesman and diplomat, U.S. secretary of state (1811–17) and fifth President of the United States (1817–25), known for his declaration of the Monroe Doctrine (1823). He attended the College of William and Mary and at the age of 18 became a lieutenant in the Continental line. He took part in the battles of Harlem, White Plains, Trenton (where he was wounded), Brandywine, Germantown, and Monmouth. Leaving the army as a major, he studied law under Thomas Jefferson and in 1782 was elected to the Virginia legislature. He served (1783–86) in the Congress of the Confederation, where he defended Southern rights to the navigation of the Mississippi. He was a delegate to the Annapolis interstate conference of 1786 and upon the expiration of his term in Congress took his seat in the Virginia legislature. He also served as a member of the Virginia convention for ratification of the Constitution but voted against its adoption. In 1790 he went to the U.S. Senate to fill a vacancy. Here he became a member of the Republican (Jeffersonian) Party. In June, 1794, he was appointed minister to France. Recalled from this post in 1796 because of his alleged failure to uphold administration policy, he defended his record in A View of the Conduct of the Executive, in the Foreign Affairs of the United States (1797). He became (1799) governor of Virginia, serving until December, 1802, when he was sent by Jefferson on a treaty mission to France. At Paris, he assisted R. R. Livingston in the purchase of the province of Louisiana offered by the French and later went on an unsuccessful mission to Madrid, where he sought to negotiate the title to West Florida. He later participated, togother with William Pinkney, in negotiating a treaty (December, 1806) with Great Britain; it was so favorable to the British cause that Jefferson and Madison declined to submit it to the Senate. Offended by this repudiation of his labors, he ran against Madison in the presidential contest of 1808 but was badly beaten. Reëlected (1810) to the Virginia legislature, he became again (January, 1811) governor of that state. In April, 1811, after a reconciliation with Madison, he accepted appointment as secretary of state with the understanding that he should have a free hand in attempting to settle maritime controversies with Great Britain. Finding this impossible, he became an advocate of war, which was declared on June 18, 1812. From August, 1814, to March 1, 1815, Monroe also served as secretary of war. The presidential successor to Madison, he took office in 1817 and followed the conservative policies adopted by Madison after the end of the war. As president he signed the Missouri Compromise act (1820), but the principal achievements of his administration were in foreign policy: the limitation of naval armament on the Great Lakes, the settlement of boundary and fisheries controversies with Great Britain, the acquisition from Spain of Florida and rights on the Pacific coast, the enunciation (Dec. 2, 1823) of what posterity has termed the Monroe Doctrine. For all these achievements except the first much credit was due to John Quincy Adams, secretary of state. A capable administrator and an excellent judge of public opinion, Monroe became a popular figure. The Federalist Party disappeared from national politics, and in his reëlection to the presidency in 1820 Monroe received all but one of the votes cast in the electoral college. Though marked by strong personal rivalries among Republican Party leaders, his administration is customarily associated with the "era of good feeling" in national history. After leaving office, Monroe became (1828) a member of the Board of Visitors of the University of Virginia and was elected (1829) to the Virginia constitutional convention, at which he served as presiding officer. Burdened by financial difficulties in his last years, he moved (1830) to New York to live with his daughter and her husband. He died there, and in 1858 his remains were transferred to Richmond, Va. See The Writings of James Monroe, edited by S. M. Hamilton (7 vols., 1898–1903).

Monroe, Paul. b. at North Madison, Ind., June 7, 1869; d. at Garrison, N.Y., Dec. 6, 1947. American educator and authority on the history of education, who served as editor in chief of the Cyclopedia of Education (5 vols., 1910–13). He was professor of education (1902–35) at Teachers College, Columbia, director (1915–23) of the School of Education, and headed the International Institute of Teachers College until 1935. He was a cofounder (1926) of the China Institute of America, and president (1932–35) of Robert College and Istanbul Woman's College in Turkey.

Monroe Doctrine. Doctrine formulated in 1823 by President James Monroe, a basic pillar of U.S. polity in international affairs, that non-American powers shall not intervene in the political affairs of the American continents. It is a unilateral doctrine, resting solely upon the determination of the U.S. (although it is generally conceded by U.S. historians that the tacit support of Great Britain, and hence of the British fleet, was what chiefly made it effective at various times in the 19th century). Two circumstances led to its promulgation. As late as the early 1820's, Russian explorations along the Pacific coast held the threat of colonization; and the group of European monarchical governments known as the Holy Alliance was thought to be contemplating a reconquest of the Latin-American countries which had lately thrown off Spanish rule and established their independence, which had been recognized by the government at Washington. With respect to the first of these situations, Secretary of State John Quincy Adams suggested to President Monroe a declaration that "the American continents should no longer be subjects for any new European colonial settlement," and this the president stated, in Adams's words, in his annual message read to Congress on Dec. 2, 1823. With respect to the threat of European intervention in Latin America, the interests of Great Britain, because of her extensive commerce, coincided with those of the U.S. Accordingly, George Canning, British foreign minister, proposed a joint British-American declaration against the plans of the Holy Alliance. Adams successfully opposed such joint action, but with his approval the president in his message stated that "we could not view an interposition for oppressing them [the Spanish-American republics] or controlling in any other manner their destiny, by any European power, in any other light than as a manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States." In general the Monroe Doctrine has been effectively upheld against all challenges except, for a time, that of France and Austria, when in 1864 they set up the archduke Maximilian as emperor of Mexico. The hands of the U.S. government were then tied by the Civil War, but when that came to an end Napoleon III found it expedient to withdraw the French army which sustained Maximilian, and the patriot forces soon brought his adventure to an end. In the second administration of President Grover Cleveland the Monroe Doctrine was invoked to restrain British action against Venezuela in a dispute concerning the boundary between that country and British Guiana, and in 1898 it was cited in connection with the Spanish-American War. But, by the beginning of the 20th century, various incidents and tendencies had caused the Doctrine more and more to appear, in Latin-American eyes, as a cover for U.S. hegemony and "Yankee imperialism." This impression was deepened by the annexation of Puerto Rico and by the restraints placed upon the republic of Cuba following the war with Spain, and a few years later by the apparent willingness of the U.S. government to aid in the secession of Panama from Colombia. President Theodore Roosevelt, at the time of the Panama incident, alarmed all Latin America by broadening the scope of the Monroe Doctrine to include the implied right of the U.S. to intervene in case of alleged misconduct by, or even in case of prolonged disorder within, any Latin-American country. Much has been done by the U.S. since that time to allay the suspicions of the countries south of the Rio Grande, especially through the "good neighbor" policy of comparatively recent years.

Monroeville (mun.rō'vil). Town in SE Alabama, county seat of Monroe County, ab. 70 mi. NE of Mobile, in a farming region. 2,772 (1950).

Monrovia (mun.rō'vi.ą). City in S California, in Los Angeles County, NE of Los Angeles: residential suburb with orange groves. It is a shipping point for oranges, and also has some manufactures. 20,186 (1950).

Monrovia. Town in W Africa, the capital of Liberia, situated on the Atlantic coast. It is the chief port of the country, and is connected by road with the interior. It was founded (1822) by the American Colonization Society, and named after President James Monroe. Modern port facilities were established here after World War II by American technicians. Pop. ab. 12,000 (1950).

Mons (môñs; Anglicized, monz). [Flemish, Bergen.] City in SW Belgium, the capital of the province of Hainaut, situated on the Trouille River W of Charleroi. It is the trade center for the Borinage coal-mining district and has iron and steel, cement, and ceramic manufactures, and oil refineries. The Cathedral of Sainte Waudru is in the late Gothic style; the town hall dates from the 15th century and has a beautiful belfry. Mons was founded by Julius Caesar as a Roman military camp; it became an important commercial and industrial center in the Middle Ages. It was taken by Louis of Nassau in 1572, and by the French in 1691, but in both cases soon returned to Spanish and Hapsburg rule. It was French from 1792 to 1814, and under the Netherlands in the period 1814–30. It was occupied by the Germans in World Wars I and II. About one fourth of the city's buildings were damaged in World War II, and the archives were destroyed. 25,661 (1947).

Mons (monz). Latin word for "hill," "mount," or "mountain": for entries not found immediately below see the distinguishing element of the name.

Mons (môńs, monz), Battle of. Military operation on the Western Front, in the early period of World War I. It focused about Mons, strategically important for its rail connections, and directly in the path of General von Kluck's invading German troops. On Aug. 23 and 24, 1914 Kluck's forces and troops under British General Sir John French clashed; the quick advances of other German invading wedges brought fear of encirclement and the Allied forces retreated.

Mons Brisiacus (monz bri.sī'ą.kus). Latin name of Breisach.

Monschau (mōn'shou). [Former name, Montjoie.] Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, situated on the Roer River near the Belgian border, ab. 16 mi. SE of Aachen: resort, with agricultural markets and textile manufactures. Heavy fighting took place here at the close of World War II, from December, 1944, to January, 1945. In spite of this the town suffered only slight damage. 2,420 (1946).

Monseigneur (môń.se.nyėr). In French history, a title of the Dauphin, the king's eldest son.

Monselice (mōn.se'lē.chā). Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Padova, ab. 14 mi. SW of Padua. Buildings of interest to tourists were undamaged in World War II. Pop. of commune, 16,447 (1936); of town, 5,895 (1936).

Monsell (mon.sel'), John Samuel Bewley. b. at St. Columb's, County Londonderry, Ireland, March 2, 1811; d. at Guilford, Surrey, England, April 9, 1875. Anglican clergyman and hymn writer.

Mons-en-Barœul (môń.zäń.bą.rėy'). Town in N France, in the department of Nord: a northeastern industrial suburb of Lille. 8,705 (1946).

Mons-en-Pévèle (môń.zäń.pā.vel) or Mons-en-Puelle (-pü.el). Village in the department of Nord, France, ab. 13 mi. S of Lille. Here on Aug. 18, 1304, Philip IV of France defeated the Flemings.

Monserrat (mon.sę.rat'). See Montserrat.

Monserrat (mōn.ser.rät'), Joaquin de. [Title, Marquis of Cruillas.] Spanish general, viceroy of Mexico from Jan. 25, 1761, to August, 1766.

Monsieur (mę.syė). In French history, a title of the king's eldest brother. The appellation was used from the time of Louis XIV.

Monsieur, Théâtre de. Theater which existed at Paris, in the Foire St.-Germain, in the latter part of the 18th century. It was founded by a coiffeur of Marie Antoinette named Léonard Autre, and was named for "Monsieur," the king's brother, who backed it. Italian opera and French comedy were played there, and it had a brilliant existence from 1789 to 1791, when a new house was built for it in the Rue Feydeau and it received the name of Théâtre Feydeau.

Monsieur Beaucaire (bō.ker). Romance by Booth Tarkington, published in 1900.

Monsieur de Pourceaugnac (dę pōr.sō.nyak). Comedy by Molière, played in 1660. It is a satire on the country squires of France.

Monsieur Lecocq (lę.kok). Detective story by Émile Gaboriau, published in 1869.

Monsieur X (ēks). Pseudonym of Parodi, Alexandre.

Monsigny (môń.sē.nyē), Pierre Alexandre. b. near St.-Omer, France, Oct. 17, 1729; d. Jan. 14, 1817. French composer. His most successful opera was Le Déserteur, ou Peut-être trouvé (1777).

Monson (mun'son). Town in S Massachusetts, in Hampden County, near the Chicopee River: granite quarrying and manufactures of wool textiles. 6,125 (1950).

Monson, Sir Edmund John. b. at Chart Lodge, Kent, England, Oct. 6, 1834; d. at London, Oct. 29, 1909. English diplomat. He was private secretary to R. B. P. Lyons, 1st Earl Lyons, English minister at Washington during the Civil War, and subsequently held diplomatic posts in Europe and South America. During his stay at Copenhagen (1884–88) he was selected as arbitrator of the Butterfield claim between Denmark and the U.S.

Monson, Sir William. b. 1569; d. at Kinnersley, Herefordshire, England, in February, 1643. English admiral. In 1585 he ran away to sea, and in 1588, the year of the Spanish Armada, was made lieutenant of the Charles. In 1591 he was captured and detained in the castle of Lisbon. In 1602 he was vice-admiral of the squadron under Sir Richard Leveson sent to raid the Spanish treasure fleet, in 1604 was appointed admiral of the Narrow Seas (the Channel patrol), and in 1614 was engaged in suppressing piracy on the coast of Ireland. He was imprisoned (1615–16) in the Tower of London and did not serve again until the Dutch campaign of 1635. He is best known for his naval Tracts, discussions of past campaigns and suggestions for reforms.

Mons Pessulus (pes'ū.lus). Latin name of Montpellier.

Mons Rubicus (rō'bi.kus). Latin name of Montrouge.

Monster (môn'stėr). Commune in W Netherlands, in the province of South Holland, situated on the North Sea coast between The Hague and Hoek van Holland. The commune contains several villages; vegetable culture is predominant. 11,837 (1939).

Monster and Other Stories, The. Collection of stories by Stephen Crane, published in 1899.

Monstrelet (môńs.trę.le), Enguerrand de. d. 1453. French chronicler, author of a chronicle of contemporary French history covering the period 1400–44.

Monsummano (mōn.sōm.mä'nō). Town in Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Pistoia, ab. 25 mi. NW of Florence. Near it is a warm stalactitic grotto noted as a health resort. The parish church was undamaged in World War II. 8,527 (1936).

Montacute (mon'tą.kūt) or Montagu (mon'tą.gū), John de. [Title, 3rd Earl of Salisbury.] b. c1350; beheaded at Cirencester, England, Jan. 7, 1400. English soldier; nephew of William de Montacute, 2nd Earl of Salisbury. A prominent Lollard, he attended their meetings and kept a Lollard chaplain. In 1397 he succeeded to the earldom. He was a favorite adviser of Richard II. On the landing of the Duke of Lancaster (later Henry IV), he raised troops in the west to oppose him. On the downfall of Richard and the accession of Henry IV, he was committed to the Town of London. He was released, entered into a conspiracy against Henry, was discovered, and was murdered by a mob.

Montacute or Montagu, Thomas de. [Title, 4th Earl of Salisbury.] b. 1388; d. at Meung, France, Nov. 3, 1428. English general; son of John de Montacute, 3rd Earl of Salisbury, and father of Alice Neville, who was mother of Richard Neville, Earl of Warwick, known as the "Kingmaker." He was summoned to Parliament as Earl of Salisbury in October, 1409, and restored to the dignity of his father in 1421. In 1415 he served King Henry V in France, fighting at Harfleur and Agincourt, and he was made lieutenant general of Normandy in April, 1419. He continued to fight in France as the most famous and skillful English general until the siege of Orléans, in October, 1428. He was wounded there, and died at Meung.

Montacute or Montagu, William de. [Titles: 3rd Baron Montacute, 1st Earl of Salisbury.] b. 1301; d. Jan. 30, 1344. English soldier. In 1327 he fought with Edward III in Scotland. During the Parliament of Nottingham (October, 1330) he arrested Roger de Mortimer in the queen mother's apartments. On March 16, 1337, he was created Earl of Salisbury; he was appointed marshal of England Sept. 20, 1338.

Montacute or Montagu, William de. [Title, 2nd Earl of Salisbury.] b. June 25, 1328; d. June 3, 1397. English soldier. He was one of the original knights of the Order of the Garter (1350). In 1354 he was appointed constable of the king's army in France, where he served until the peace of Bretigny (1360), having fought at Crécy (1346) and Poitiers (1356). In 1369 he served under John of Gaunt in the north of France. He assisted at the coronation of Richard II in 1377, and in 1381 went with the king to meet Wat Tyler's rebels at Smithfield.

Montagna (mōn.tä'nyä), Bartolommeo. b. at Orzinovi, near Brescia, Italy, c1450; d. at Vicenza, Italy, 1523. Italian painter. He is said to have studied under Andrea Mantegna at Padua, and also under Giovanni Bellini and Carpaccio. Among his works are The Presentation of Jesus Carist in the Temple, at Vicenza; Madonna and Two Saints, at Venice; and Ecce Homo, in the Louvre.

Montagnais (mon.tąn.yā'). Collective name for a number of North American Indian tribes in a large area of SE Quebec and Labrador. Their languages are of the Algonquian family.

Montagnana (mōn.tä.nyä'nä). Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Padova, ab. 24 mi. SW of Padua. Pictures from Florence, which had been deposited here, were severely damaged during World War II. Pop. of commune, 12,702 (1936); of town, 4,290 (1936).

Montagnana, Domenico. b. c1695; d. 1740. Italian violinmaker, a pupil of Stradivarius. After working at Cremona, he settled at Venice, manufacturing violins, violas, and cellos.

Montagnards (môn.tä.nyär). Group of North American Indians of the Rocky Mountain region of the U.S. and Canada, embracing six tribes. They belong to the Northern group of the Athapascan linguistic stock.

Montagne (môn.tàny'). [Plural, Montagnes (môn.tàny').] French word for "mountain": for geographical entries of this kind see the distinguishing element of the name. See also Mountain.

Montagney (môn.tä.nyā), Maurice. Original name of Artôt, Maurice Montagney.

Montagu (mon'tą.gū). See also Montacute.

Montagu, Marquis of. A title of Neville, John.

Montagu, Basil. b. at London, April 24, 1770; d. at Boulogne, France, Nov. 27, 1851. English lawyer and writer; son of John Montagu, 4th Earl of Sandwich, by his mistress Martha Ray. Acknowledged by his father, he was educated at the Charterhouse and at Christ's College, Cambridge, where he graduated in 1790. He was admitted to Gray's Inn, and went to London in 1795. He was an intimate of Samuel Coleridge and William Wordsworth. He was called to the bar in 1798, and published in 1801 A Summary of the Law of Set Off, and from 1805 to 1807 prepared a Digest of the Bankruptcy Laws. In 1825 he exposed the delay and expense of the existing bankruptcy procedure, and in 1835 was made accountant general in bankruptcy. Between 1825 and 1834 he edited the Works of Lord Bacon. His Essays were published in 1824.

Montagu, Charles. [Title, 1st Duke of Manchester.] b. c1660; d. Jan. 20, 1722. English diplomat; grandson of Edward Montagu (1602–71), 2nd Earl of Manchester. He joined the Prince of Orange (William III) on his landing in England, became (1689) captain of the yeomen of the guard and lord lieutenant of Huntingdonshire, and fought (1690) for William in Ireland. He was later sent on several diplomatic missions.

Montagu, Charles. [Title, 1st Earl of Halifax.] b. probably at Horton, Northamptonshire, England, April 16, 1661; d. May 19, 1715. English statesman, financier, and poet; grandson of Henry Montagu, 1st Earl of Manchester. He studied at Westminster and at Cambridge (Trinity College). In 1689 he was returned to the Convention Parliament for Maldon. In March, 1692, he was appointed a lord of the treasury, and induced Parliament to raise a loan of a million in annuities based on new excise duties. This loan was the beginning of the English national debt. Adopting William Patterson's scheme for a national bank, he carried through a bill to raise a loan of 1,200,000 pounds based on a tonnage bill, the subscribers to form a corporation known as the Governor and Company of the Bank of England. On April 30, 1694, he was made chancellor of the exchequer. With the aid of Somers, Locke, Newton, and Halley he reformed the currency in 1695, and for the first time issued the exchequer bills by which the British government gets its first credit from the House of Commons. In 1696 he carried his "general mortgage" scheme, by which a consolidated fund was formed. In 1697 he became prime minister, but resigned in 1699. In 1698 he established the society to which a monopoly of the Indian trade was given. On Dec. 13, 1700, he was created Baron Halifax. He was impeached in 1701 and acquitted, but was not in office during Queen Anne's reign. On Oct. 19, 1714, he was created Earl of Halifax. He served as president of the Royal Society from 1695 to 1698. He was the collaborator of Matthew Prior in The City Mouse and the Country Mouse (1687), a parody of John Dryden's The Hind and the Panther.

Montagu, Edward. [Title, 1st Baron Montagu of Boughton.] b. 1562; d. a Royalist prisoner, at London, June 15, 1644. English Royalist; brother of Henry Montagu, 1st Earl of Manchester. He was a member of Parliament (1601, 1603–04, 1611, 1614, 1620–22). Imprisoned (1642) in the Tower of London by an order of Parliament, he was later moved to his home as a result of his poor health.

Montagu, Edward. [Title, 2nd Earl of Manchester.] b. 1602; d. May 5, 1671. English statesman; eldest son of Henry Montagu, 1st Earl of Manchester. He entered Cambridge (Sidney Sussex College) in 1618, and was elected member of Parliament for Huntingdon in 1623. In 1626 he was created Baron Montagu, while holding the courtesy title of Viscount Mandeville. In 1640 he was one of the 12 peers to petition the king to call the Long Parliament, and was in accord with Pym, Hampden, Fiennes, and St. John in opposition to the arbitrary government of the Stuarts. In January, 1642, he was impeached by the king for high treason; in September he commanded a regiment of foot in Essex's army; and in November he became Earl of Manchester. In August, 1643, he was made major general in the eastern counties. At Marston Moor (July 2, 1644) he was general field officer with Oliver Cromwell as commander of his horse. On Nov. 25, 1644, Cromwell charged Manchester before the Commons with neglect and incompetency, and on April 2, 1645, he resigned his commission in the army. On Jan. 2, 1649, he opposed the ordinance for the king's trial in the House of Lords, and retired from public life before the formation of the Commonwealth. On March 15, 1649, he was made chancellor of the University of Cambridge. He assisted in the restoration of Charles II, and in 1660 regained many of his offices.

Montagu, Edward. [Title, 2nd Baron Montagu of Boughton.] b. at Weekley, England, July 11, 1616; d. Jan. 10, 1684. English nobleman; son of Edward Montagu (1562–1644). He was a member of Parliament (1640), and treated (1646) for the surrender of Newark. He conducted Charles I to Holmby House, and attended him until his escape (1647).

Montagu or Mountagu, Edward. [Title, 1st Earl of Sandwich.] b. July 27, 1625; killed in a naval action, May 28, 1672. English admiral; nephew of Henry Montagu (1563–1642) and of Edward Montagu (1562–1644). He followed Parliament, and in 1643 raised a regiment of foot in Cambridgeshire. He fought at Naseby June 14, and at Bristol Sept. 10, 1645, but had no share in the king's trial and execution. In 1656 he was appointed Robert Blake's colleague in command of the fleet. He supported Richard Cromwell, and was actively engaged in the restoration of Charles II. In 1660 he was appointed general of the fleet with Monck, and with Samuel Pepys (author of the Diary) as his secretary. On May 23, 1660, the king embarked on his flagship, and on May 25 landed at Dover. Montagu was created Earl of Sandwich July 12. In 1661–62 he was engaged in Morocco and Portugal. He was blown up in his ship, the Royal James, in a battle in Southwold Bay with the Dutch.

Montagu, Edward Wortley. d. in January, 1761. English diplomat; grandson of Edward Montagu (1625–72), 1st Earl of Sandwich, and husband of Lady Mary Wortley Montagu. A member of Parliament (1705–13, 1722, 1727, 1734–47, 1754–61), he served as commissioner (1714–15) of the treasury, and as ambassador (1716–17) to Constantinople. The second volume of Addison's Tatler was dedicated to him.

Montagu, Edward Wortley. b. 1713; d. in Italy, 1776. English author; son of Lady Mary Wortley Montagu. He was the reputed author of Reflections on the Rise and Fall of Ancient Republics (1759).

Montagu, Edwin Samuel. b. 1879; d. 1924. English politician. He was a member of Parliament (1906–22), Parliamentary undersecretary of state for India (1910–14), financial secretary to the treasury (1914–16) and minister of munitions (1916). As secretary of state for India (1917–22), he supported a policy of progressive self-government. He toured (1917–18) the provinces of India with a small delegation before drafting (1918) the report on constitutional reform, the basis of the Government of India Act (1919), known for him and F. J. Napia, Viscount Chelmsford, as the Montagu-Chelmsford Report.

Montagu, Elizabeth. [Maiden name, Robinson.] b. at York, England, Oct. 2, 1720; d. at Montagu House, London, Aug. 25, 1800. English author and social leader. On Aug. 5, 1742, she married Edward Montagu, grandson of the Edward Montagu, 1st Earl of Sandwich, and cousin of Edward Wortley Montagu. After 1750 she held her salon in Hill Street, Mayfair. The epithet "bluestocking" was first applied to her assemblies. Among her visitors were George, Lord Lyttelton, Edmund Burke, David Garrick, and Sir Joshua Reynolds. Her younger associates included Hannah More and Fanny Burney. In 1760 she contributed three dialogues to Lyttelton's Dialogues of the Dead. In 1769 she wrote an essay on the Genius of Shakespeare in answer to Voltaire.

Montagu, George. [Title, 4th Duke of Manchester.] b. April 6, 1737; d. at Brighton, England, Sept. 2, 1788. English statesman. He served as lord of the bedchamber (1763–70). He supported the Americans in Parliamentary debates preceding and during the American Revolution, voted against the Roman Catholic relief bill of 1778, and was lord chamberlain (1782) and privy councilor.

Montagu, George. b. at Lackham, Wiltshire, England, 1751; d. at Knowle House, Kingsbridge, Devonshire, England, Aug. 28, 1815. English naturalist.

Montagu, Sir Henry. [Titles: 1st Earl of Manchester, Viscount Mandeville.] b. at Boughton, Northamptonshire, England, c1563; d. Nov. 7, 1642. English statesman and judge; brother of Edward Montagu (1562–1644). He was a member of Parliament (1601, 1604, 1614), and recorder of London (1603). As chief justice (1616–20) of the king's bench, he condemned (1618) Sir Walter Raleigh to execution. He was lord high treasurer (1620), head (1624) of the Virginia commission, lord privy seal (1628), and one of the guardians of the realm during the absence (1641) of Charles I. Author of Contemplatio Mortis et Immortalitatis (1631).

Montagu, John. [Title, 2nd Duke of Montagu.] b. c1688; d. July 6, 1749. English courtier; son of Ralph Montagu. Appointed (1722) governor and captain-general of the islands of St. Lucia and St. Vincent's in the West Indies, he failed in attempts to take them from the French and the inhabitants.

Montagu, John. [Title, 4th Earl of Sandwich.] b. Nov. 3, 1718; d. at London, April 30, 1792. English diplomat. He was educated at Eton and Cambridge, but left the university in 1738 without a degree, and traveled in Europe and the East. In December, 1744, he was appointed a lord commissioner of the admiralty by John Russell, 4th Duke of Bedford. In 1748 he was plenipotentiary at the conclusion of the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle. In February, 1748, he was made first lord of the admiralty, and was dismissed from office June 12, 1751. He disgraced himself at the notorious prosecution of John Wilkes; he had been a good companion of Wilkes, especially as a member of the Mad Monks of Medmenham, and now turned against him. He was thenceforth given the nickname Jemmy Twitcher, from a blackguardly highwayman in John Gay's Beggar's Opera. In December, 1770, he was appointed a secretary of state under Lord North, and was first lord of the admiralty during the American war, when the lowest depths of corruption were reached by the British navy. He retired from public life on the fall of the North administration, in March, 1782. Basil Montagu was his son by his mistress, Martha Ray, a singer who was murdered by a suitor April 7, 1779. The Sandwich Islands (Hawaii) were named for John Montagu by James Cook.

Montagu, John de. See Montacute, John de.

Montagu, Lady Mary Wortley. [Maiden name, Pierrepont.] Baptized at Covent Garden, London, May 26, 1689; d. in England, Aug. 21, 1762. English writer; eldest daughter of Evelyn Pierrepont, 5th Earl (later Duke) of Kingston. She privately married (against her father's wishes) Edward Wortley Montagu, grandson of Edward Montagu, 1st Earl of Sandwich, on Aug. 12, 1712. She was a favorite of the Princess of Wales (afterward Queen Caroline). In 1716 Montagu was appointed ambassador to Turkey. He was recalled in October, 1717, but resided in Constantinople until June, 1718. An interesting account of the visit appears in her Letters. While at Adrianople she observed the practice of inoculation against smallpox, and she assisted in introducing it into England. She was quite intimate with Alexander Pope, but quarreled with him finally, perhaps because, as some believe, she laughed aloud at a declaration of love from the deformed poet or perhaps because she allowed a parody she had written of one of his poems to circulate. In 1739 she again went abroad, and in 1758 settled at Venice, returning to England in 1762. Her Letters appeared in 1763 and 1767.

Montagu, Ralph. [Title, 1st Duke of Montagu.] b. c1638; d. March 9, 1709. English diplomat; son of Edward Montagu (1616–84). As ambassador (1669, 1676–78) to Louis XIV, he was active in arrangements for England's neutrality during war between France and the Netherlands. He bargained unsuccessfully (1678) for the post of secretary of state, and plotted to have Monmouth declared Prince of Wales. He escaped (1680) to France, but returned to England after the accession of James II. He embraced the cause of William III during the revolution of 1688, and became (1689) a privy councilor. His home, Montagu House, Bloomsbury, London, was bought (1753) by the government to house the collection that formed the basis of the British Museum; the present museum stands on its site.

Montagu or Mountague, Richard. b. at Dorney, Buckinghamshire, England, 1577; d. April 13, 1641. English prelate and controversialist, an ardent defender of Anglicanism against Roman Catholicism. He is remembered particularly for his Diatribae upon the First Part of the late History of Tithes (1621), in which he asserted that tithes are due by divine right. His numerous theological writings constituted one of the subjects of dispute between king and Parliament under James I and Charles I. Later he became one of Archbishop Laud's lieutenants, and was appointed (1638) bishop of Norwich, which position he held until death.

Montagu, William. [Title, 5th Duke of Manchester.] b. Oct. 21, 1768; d. at Rome, March 18, 1843. English administrator; son of George Montagu (1737–88). As governor (1808–27) of Jamaica, he instituted reforms allowing freed Negroes to give evidence, abolishing Sunday markets, and forbidding the carrying of whips. He was postmaster general (1827–30).

Montagu-Chelmsford Report (-chemz'ford). [Also known as the Montford Report.] In the history of the British Commonwealth, a report (1918) recommending further constitutional reforms leading to eventual self-government for India. It became the basis for the Government of India Act (1919). Jointly proposed by the viceroy (Frederic John Napier, 1st Viscount Chelmsford) and the secretary of state for India (E. S. Montagu) after lengthy discussions with Indian political leaders, it called for the immediate introduction of partly responsible government in the Indian provinces, and greater Indian representation in the central government.

Montague (mon'ta.gū). Town (in Massachusetts the equivalent of township in many other states) in N Massachusetts, in Franklin County, on the Connecticut River, ab. 15 mi. NE of Northampton; hydroelectric power station. Turners Falls (pop. 5,179 in 1950) is the chief village in the town. Pop. 7,812 (1950).

Montague. In Shakespeare's tragedy Romeo and Juliet, the family name of Romeo.

Montague. "Honest man" in John Fletcher and Philip Massinger's play The Honest Man's Fortune.

Montague, Henry James. Stage name of Henry J. Mann. b. in Staffordshire, England, 1843; d. at San Francisco, Aug. 11, 1878. English actor.

Montague, Lady. In Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet, the mother of Romeo.

Montague, Montague Francis Ashley. b. at London, June 28, 1905— . American anthropologist. He was a research associate at the British Museum of Natural History (1926–27) and curator of physical anthropology at the Wellcome Museum of the History of Medicine (1929–30) before coming to the U.S. From 1931 to 1938 he was assistant professor of anatomy at New York University; he was associate professor of anatomy at the Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital at Philadelphia (1938–49); and he became (1949) chairman of the department of anthropology at Rutgers. An authority on questions of race, he wrote for the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) the statement on race issued by that body in 1950; the educational film One World Or None (1946) was written, directed, financed, and produced by him. Author of Coming Into Being Among the Australian Aborigines (1937), Man's Most Dangerous Myth, the Fallacy of Race (1942), On Being Human (1950), and others.

Montague, William Pepperell. b. at Chelsea, Mass., Nov. 24, 1873—. American philosopher, professor of philosophy (1920–47) at Barnard College, Columbia University. His books include The Ways of Knowing or the Methods of Philosophy (1925) and The Chances of Surviving Death (1934).

Montaigne (mon.tān'; French, môn.teny'), Michel Eyquem de. b. at the Château Montaigne, Dordogne, France, Feb. 28, 1533; d. there, Sept. 13, 1592. French essayist and philosopher. His early education was carried on at home under his father's guidance. After graduating from college at Bordeaux, he studied law. In 1559 he was at the court of Francis II, and in 1571 became attached to the person of Henry III. In this year Montaigne published his friend Étienne La Boétie's translations from the Greek, and in 1572 edited the latter's French verses. In 1580 he traveled in Germany, Switzerland, and Italy. He left Rome in 1581 to become mayor of Bordeaux. Montaigne is chiefly known for his Essais (Bordeaux, 1580; the edition of 1588 was the last to be published during the author's lifetime). Mademoiselle de Gournay, a warm admirer of Montaigne who prepared the edition of 1595, did not have access to the copy of his last edition which Montaigne himself had corrected. The famous English translation of 1603, by John Florio, was made from Mademoiselle de Gournay's text. There are many complete modern translations. In his essays, usually considered the best personal essays ever written, Montaigne studies himself as well as the men of the society of his day. He examines everything in a skeptical spirit, is inclined to doubt, and his motto is Que sais-je? (What do I know?). Montaigne's ideas and influence are to be traced in many of the best French authors of the 17th and 18th centuries, while outside of France his essays were diligently read by Bacon, Shakespeare, and many succeeding writers.

Montalba (mont.al'bą), Clara. b. at Cheltenham, England, 1842; d. at Venice, Aug. 13, 1929. English landscape and marine painter in water color, noted particularly for her scenes of Venice; sister of Henrietta Skerrett Montalba. She studied at Paris with Eugene Isabey; later she became an associate of the London Society of Painters in Water Color (1874) and of the Belgian Society (1876); meanwhile she exhibited frequently at London. Her paintings are found in museums at Antwerp, Brussels, Leeds, and Norwich. Among her principal works are Festa di S. Antonio, Dalmatian Boat, and Venice, Riva degli Schiavoni.

Montalba, Henrietta Skerrett. b. at London, 1856; d. at Venice, Sept. 14, 1893. English sculptor; sister of Clara Montalba. She studied at South Kensington, at the Belle Arti, Venice, and with Jules Dalou at London. She exhibited first at the Royal Academy in 1876. Among her portrait busts is one of Browning in terra cotta (1883). Her other works include A Dalecarlian Peasant Woman, The Raven, and Venetian Boy catching a Crab.

Montalcino (mōn.täl.chē'nō). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Siena, ab. 52 mi. S of Florence. Buildings of interest to tourists were undamaged in World War II. Pop. of commune, 10,216 (1936); of town, 2,803 (1936).

Montalembert (môn.tą.läṅ.ber), Comte de. [Title of Charles Forbes René de Montalembert.] b. at London, May 29, 1810; d. at Paris, March 13, 1870. French politician and writer. A liberal and an opponent of state control of the church, he founded (1830), with Félicité Lammenais and J. B. H. Lacordaire, the periodical L'Avenir, but its publication was suspended (1832) after it was condemned as too liberal by the Roman curia. He was one of the most voluble of the supporters of Roman Catholicism in France and, though he opposed the Ultramontanists and fought against promulgation of the doctrine of papal infallibility, he remained loyal to the Pope and an opponent not only of the extremists in his own church but also of the liberal and radical freethinkers outside it. He was a member of the Constituent Assembly (1848) and of the Legislative Assembly (1849 et seq.) and the most outspoken opponent of Louis Napoleon, especially after the latter had made himself French dictator in December, 1851. His chief works are La Vie de Ste. Elisabeth de Hongrie (1836) and Les Moines d'Occident (5 vols., 1860–68; completed in seven volumes from his notes after his death).

Montalembert, Marc René, Marquis de. b. at Angoulême, France, July 16, 1714; d. at Paris, March 29, 1800. French military engineer. His chief work is La Fortification perpendiculaire (1776–96).

Montalván (mōn.täl.bän'), Juan Pérez de. b. at Madrid, 1602; d. there, June 25, 1638. Spanish dramatist, novelist, and ecclesiastic, apostolic notary of the Inquisition. He was a close friend of Lope de Vega and wrote a biography of the dramatist.

Montalvo (mōn.täl'bō), Francisco. b. at Havana, Cuba, 1754; d. at Madrid, in October, 1822. Spanish general, acting viceroy of New Granada and Venezuela from May, 1813, to December, 1817.

Montalvo, Juan. b. at Ambato, Ecuador, 1832; d. 1889. Ecuadorean essayist, exiled for his writings against the authorities in his country. Before his exile he conducted the journal El Cosmopolita; later in France, he founded El Espectador. Author of Siete tratados (c1873; published 1882), Catilinarias (1880), and a popular imitation of Don Quixote entitled Capítulos que se le olvidaron a Cervantes.

Montaña (mōn.tä'nyä). Name given in South America, especially in Peru and Bolivia, to the forest-covered region which forms the lower part of the E slopes of the Andes, and includes numerous valleys of tributaries of the Amazon. By extension the term is often used for all forest land in the region, including parts of the upper Amazon lowland.

Montana (mon.tan'ą). [Called the "Treasure State"; also, the "Mountain State."] State of the NW United States, bounded by the Canadian provinces of British Columbia, Alberta, and Saskatchewan on the N, North Dakota and South Dakota on the E, Idaho and Wyoming on the S, and Idaho on the W.

Population, Area, and Political Divisions. Montana is divided for administrative purposes into 56 counties. It sends two representatives to Congress, and has four electoral votes. Leading cities are Billings, Butte, Great Falls, Helena, and Missoula. Capital, Helena; area, 146,316 sq. mi. (147,138 sq. mi., including water); pop. 591,024 (1950), an increase of 5.6 percent over that of 1940. The state ranks third in area, and 43rd (on the basis of the 1950 census) in population.

Terrain and Climate. The Continental Divide, the line of the Rocky Mountain peaks separating the waters flowing N or E from those flowing W, extends from the SW boundary of the state toward the NW. The Rockies cross the entire W portion of the state, the Bitterroot Range lying in the extreme W, the Beaverhead Range in the extreme SW, and the Lewis Range in the E section of the Rockies. The E part of the state has numerous small isolated mountain groups, but is largely a prairie region of low hills and plains. The principal river of the state is the Missouri, which flows from the S to the N and then E; its chief tributaries are the Yellowstone, which starts in NW Wyoming, and the Musselshell, in the C section. Fort Peck Dam, on the Missouri in the NE, is used for power, flood control, and navigation purposes. Montana has a distinctly continental type of climate, with severely cold winters and warm summers; in the mountains, however, summers are decidedly cool. Moisture is ample in the mountains for tree growth, but the E part of the state has a somewhat dry climate, with only about 15 inches of annual precipitation. Yellowstone National Park (established 1872), extending also into Wyoming and Utah, lies on the S boundary of the state; ab. 222 sq. mi. fall within Montana. Glacier National Park (established 1910; ab. 1,558 sq. mi.) lies in the NW and contains many small glaciers and lakes; it is part of the Waterton-Glacier International Peace Park, an international park established in 1923 and containing also Waterton Lakes National Park in S Alberta, Canada. Flathead Lake (ab. 30 mi. long), in the NW, is the only lake of considerable dimension in the state.

Industry, Agriculture, and Trade. Montana is a leading mining state. It produces about one third of the copper produced in the U.S. Butte (with neighboring Anaconda) is the site of the largest copper mining, smelting, refining, and manufacturing enterprises in the world. The state is also rich in gold, silver, lead, zinc, manganese, natural gas, petroleum, coal, and vermiculite. Agriculture is carried on with the help of irrigation; more than one fifth of the cropland is irrigated. Wheat is the chief crop; hay, corn, oats, barley, sugar beets, potatoes, and flaxseed are other important crops. Stock raising is a large-scale occupation, and the state is especially known for its cattle and its wool-producing sheep. Refining and smelting are dominant industries, although there is considerable flour milling and some meat packing and processing of beet sugar. Income from agriculture has ranged as high as 300 million dollars; from mineral production, as high as 100 million dollars; from manufacturing, as high as 70 million dollars.

History. The Frenchman De la Verendrye is believed to have explored Montana c1743. The next known explorers were Meriwether Lewis and William Clark, who passed through the W part of Montana in 1805. All of the state's present area except for a small NW piece was included in the Louisiana Purchase of 1803. The section E of the Rockies became a part of Missouri Territory in 1812, of Nebraska Territory in 1854, of Dakota Territory in 1861, and of Idaho Territory in 1863. The part W of the Rockies became part of Oregon Territory in 1848, of Washington Territory in 1853, and of Idaho Territory in 1863. The territory of Montana was established in 1864. Montana was admitted to the Union, Nov. 8, 1889, as the 41st state. It was the scene of much conflict between the white settlers and the Indians, and it was on the banks of the Little Bighorn River in S Montana that General George A. Custer and more than 260 men were massacred (June 25, 1876) by Indians. The spot is marked by Custer Battlefield National Cemetery (ab. 765 acres; established as a national cemetery 1886, as a national monument 1946). Another fierce struggle, resulting in the defeat of the Nez Perce Indians, occurred (Aug. 9, 1877) ab. 55 mi. SW of Butte. Its site is now commemorated by Big Hole Battlefield National Monument (200 acres; established 1910).

Culture. Montana is rather closely divided between urban (43.7 percent of the 1950 population) and rural development, its thickest settlements being in the W mining regions. A good percentage of its residents are of foreign birth or background, Irish, Finnish, Italian, Chinese, German, and Swedish immigrants having made sizable settlements there. Much immigration was attracted by the discovery of gold in the 1860's. The mines of Butte have long been known as a center of strong union activities and have been the scene of several violent labor conflicts. The city is also known for its gambling houses and saloons. The state's magnificent scenery and sports facilities have made it one of the great recreational areas of the U.S. Among the institutions of higher learning are the state-supported Montana State University, at Missoula, and Montana School of Mines, at Butte. The state motto is Oro y Plata, meaning "Gold and Silver." The state flower is the bitterroot.

Montanelli (mōn.tä.nel'lē), Giuseppe. b. at Fucecchio, Tuscany, Italy, c1813; d. June 17, 1863. Tuscan revolutionist, triumvir at Florence in 1849 with Giuseppe Mazzini and Francisco Guerrazzi. He advocated union of all Italy, but especially of Tuscany and Rome. In addition to historical works, he wrote a dramatic poem, La Tentazione, and a tragedy, Camma.

Montanists (mon'tan.ists). Sect of the Christian church, now extinct, founded during the 2nd century A.D. by Montanus of Phrygia. The Montanists believed in the divine and prophetic inspiration of Montanus, the continuance of the miraculous gifts of the apostolic church, the immediate approach of the second advent of Christ, and the establishment of the heavenly Jerusalem at Pepuza in Phrygia. They practiced rigorous asceticism.

Montanus (mon.tā'nus). b. in Phrygia, Asia Minor; fl. 2nd century A.D. Christian schismatic, founder of the Montanist sect, probably c157.

Montanus, Benedictus Arias. See Arias Montanus, Benedictus.

Montargis (môn.tär.zhē). Town in C France, in the department of Loiret, on the Loing River ab. 63 mi. SE of Paris. It has many bridges and small canals; produces hosiery, rubber goods, and leatherware. It is the site of ruins of a medieval castle and of a statue of the "Dog of Montargis," which, reputedly, exposed the murderer of its master. According to the legend, when the murderer was accused by the dog's attitude, Charles VIII ordered that a duel be fought between the dog and the accused. The dog won this "judicial combat" and the murderer confessed his crime. 14,615 (1946).

Montataire (môn.tâ.ter). Town in N France, in the department of Oise, ab. 30 mi. N of Paris. It is an industrial town, producing garments mainly. It suffered damage during World War II. 7,368 (1946).

Montauban (môn.tō.bäṅ). City in SW France, the capital of the department of Tarn-et-Garonne, on the Tarn River, N of Toulouse. It is a station on the railroad lines between Paris and Toulouse and between Bordeaux and Toulouse, and a commercial center for the products of Languedoc. It has woolen, silk, pottery, starch, and porcelain manufactures, metal industries, flour mills, and dye works. Montauban was one of the chief centers of the Albigensian heresy which was cruelly repressed by the Inquisition. Later, it became a Calvinist stronghold and one of the four places of safety accorded to the French Protestants in 1570. It resisted a siege in 1621, but in 1629 its fortifications were razed by Richelieu. The city has interesting monuments, particularly around the Place Nationale (built 1616). The Church of Saint-Jacques dates from the 14th and 15th centuries. The Musée Ingres has remarkable art collections. 36,281 (1946).

Montauk (mon'tôk). Tribe of North American Indians, speaking a language of the Algonquian family, formerly inhabiting E Long Island.

Montauk Point. Easternmost point of Long Island, in SE New York, in Suffolk County. It has a state park and an important lighthouse.

Mont Aux Sources (môn tō sörs). See under Drakensberg.

Montbard (môn.bär). Town in E France, in the department of Côte-d'Or, on the Brenne River ab. 40 mi. NW of Dijon. It has metalworking industries. 4,455 (1946).

Montbars (môn.bär). [Called "the Exterminator."] b. in Languedoc, c1645; date of death not known. French buccaneer. He was of good family, and accompanied his uncle, a naval officer, to the West Indies in 1663. His uncle having been killed by the Spaniards, he joined the buccaneers, rose to high command, and for several years ravaged the Spanish colonies about the Caribbean Sea. There is no record of his subsequent life or of his death.

Montbéliard (môn.bā.lyär). [German, Mömpelgard.] Town in E France, in the department of Doubs, situated on the Rhine-Rhone Canal near the Swiss border, ab. 36 mi. NE of Besançon. It has cotton-textile industries and manufactures watches and gold and silver threads. The town is dominated by a citadel; it has a number of buildings in Renaissance style. Until 1793 it was the capital of an independent countship under a German prince. 14,301 (1946).

Mont Beuvray (môn bē.vrā). See under Bibracte.

Mont Blanc (môn bläṅ). See Blanc, Mont.

Montbrison (môn.brē.zôn). Town in E central France, in the department of Loire, ab. 38 mi. SW of Lyons. The Church of Notre-Dame-d'Espérance dates from the 13th-16th centuries. The Diana, a building dating from the 13th century, serves as a museum and a library. The town is a center for excursions. 7,934 (1946).

Montcalm (mōn.kälm', Anglicized, mont.kam'), Marquis de. [Full name, Louis Joseph de Montcalm Gozon, Marquis de Saint Véran.] b. at the Château de Candiac, near Nîmes, France, Feb. 29, 1712; d. at Quebec, Canada,

Sept. 14, 1759. French general. In the French and Indian Wars, he was appointed (1756) commander of the French forces in Canada, captured Fort Ontario at Oswego in 1756, and Fort William Henry, Lake George, in 1757, and repulsed the British under James Abercrombie at Ticonderoga in 1758. He repelled James Wolfe's attack on Quebec on July 31, 1759, but was defeated and mortally wounded in the battle of Quebec on the Plains of Abraham, Sept. 13, 1759. Wolfe died in the same battle.

Montcalm de Candiac (môn.kàlm dẹ käṅ.dyäk), Jean Louis Philippe Élisabeth. See Candiac, Jean Louis Philippe Élisabeth Montcalm de.

Montceau-les-Mines (môṅ.sō.lā.mēn). Industrial commune in C France, in the department of Saône-et-Loire, ab. 34 mi. W of Mâçon. It is noted for coal mines and for metal industries. 26,726 (1946).

Montchanin-les-Mines (môṅ.shȧ.naṅ.lā.mēn). [Also, Montchanin.] Town in C France, in the department of Saône-et-Loire, W of Chalon-sur-Saône. It is an industrial town and has coal mines. 5,009 (1946).

Montchrétien (môṅ.krā.tyaṅ), Antoine de. b. c1575; d. in October, 1621. French tragic playwright and economist. He is presumed to have introduced the term "political economy" into French in a treatise (1615) on the subject. He is the author also of various poems and six tragedies.

Montclair (mont.klār'). Suburban residential town in NE New Jersey, in Essex County, ab. 13 mi. NW of New York. 43,927 (1950).

Mont-de-Marsan (môṅd.mȧr.säṅ). Town in SW France, the capital of the department of Landes, on the Midouze River ab. 70 mi. S of Bordeaux. It is a trade center, and has manufactures of furniture, lumber, and naval stores. 14,055 (1946).

Montdidier (môṅ.dē.dyā). Town in N France, in the department of Somme, ab. 20 mi. SE of Amiens. The town, which has some industries, was almost entirely destroyed in World War I; it suffered considerable damage in World War II. 4,399 (1946).

Montdidier, Aubry de. See Aubry de Montdidier.

Montdidier-Noyon Defensive (môṅ.dē.dyā' nwȧ.yôṅ'). World War I military operation involving U.S. and French troops facing a German assault on a 20-mile line between Montdidier and Noyon, west of Soissons, France. The enemy attack, part of the German drive on Paris along the Marne salient, began on June 9, 1918, and was driven back by a counteroffensive initiated by the French on June 11. The action came to an end on June 13. The U.S. 1st Division at Cantigny was exposed to intense artillery fire.

Mont Dore (môṅ.dôr). See also Dore, Monts.

Mont-Dore. [Also: Mont-Dore-les-Bains (môṅ.dôr.lā.baṅ), Le Mont-Dore.] Village and spa in C France, in the department of Puy-de-Dôme, situated in the Massif Central at the source of the Dordogne River, ab. 20 mi. SW of Clermont-Ferrand. It is a noted health resort with thermal springs, and has many hotels. The spa was first developed by the Romans. Elevation, ab. 3,185 ft.; pop. 2,703 (1946).

Monte (mōn'tā). Italian and Spanish word for "mount" or "mountain": for entries not found immediately below see the distinguishing element of the name.

Monte, Giammaria Ciocchi del. Original name of Pope Julius III.

Monteagle (mont.ē'gl), 4th Baron. A title of Parker, William.

Monteagudo (mōn''tā.ä.gö'ᴛʜō), Bernardo. b. at Tucumán (now in Argentina), 1787; assassinated at Lima, Peru, Jan. 28, 1825. Spanish-American republican. He was one of the most influential advocates of independence, was secretary to José de San Martín, and was the leading spirit of the first republican government of Peru, as minister of war and marine (1821–22).

Monte Albán (mōn'tā äl.bän'). Prehistoric city in S Mexico, located on a mountain ab. 5 mi. SW of the modern city of Oaxaca: apparently the early capital and chief center of the Zapotec Indian civilization of S Mexico. Archaeological excavations here have revealed an elaborate series of tombs, temples, courts, and staircases, and many valuable objects of jade, gold, and crystal, produced by the Indians, have been found; many of these are in the national museum at Mexico City.

Monte Alegre (mōn'tẹ ạ.lā'grẹ), Baron, Marquis, and Viscount of. Titles of Costa Carvalho, José da.

Montealegre (mōn''tā.ä.lā'grā), José María. b. at San José, Costa Rica, March 19, 1815; d. at Mission San José, Calif., Sept. 26, 1887. Costa Rican statesman, president (1859–63) of Costa Rica.

Monte Argentario (mōn'tā är.jen.tā'ryō). Commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Grosseto, situated on a promontory in the Tyrrhenian Sea, S of Grosseto, and separated from the mainland by the lagoon of Ortobello. The chief place in the commune is Porto Santo Stefano. Pop. of commune, 10,039 (1936); of Porto Santo Stefano, 6,339 (1936).

Montebello (mon.tẹ.bel'ō). City in S California, in Los Angeles County, an eastern residential suburb of Los Angeles: commercial flower raising and oil production. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population more than doubled. 8,016 (1940), 21,735 (1950).

Montebello, Battle of. 1. Victory gained at the village of Montebello (near Casteggio, ab. 32 mi. S of Milan, Italy) by the French under Jean Lannes over the Austrians, June 9, 1800. It was speedily followed by the battle of Marengo. For the victory Lannes was created Duc de Montebello. 2. Victory gained at Montebello May 20, 1859, by the French under Élie Forey over the Austrians. It was the opening battle of the Italian campaign of 1859.

Montebello (mōn.tā.bel'lō), Duc de. A title of Lannes, Jean, and also of Lannes, Napoléon Auguste.

Montebelluna (mōn''tā.bel.lö'nä). Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Treviso, NW of Treviso. Pop. of commune, 18,412 (1936); of town, 3,192 (1936).

Monte Carlo (mon'tẹ kär'lō; French, môṅ.te kȧr.lō; Italian, mōn'tā kär'lō). Town in the principality of Monaco, situated on the Mediterranean Sea coast between Nice and Menton, adjacent to the town of La Condamine. It is one of the most fashionable resorts on the French Riviera, with a bathing beach and artistic and sports festivals. The famous gambling casino was built in 1879 and enlarged at the end of the 19th century. 9,453 (1933).

Monte-Caseros (mōn'tā.kā.sā'rōs). [Also. Caseros.] Former village in the vicinity of Buenos Aires, Argentina. It was the site of the battle (Feb. 3, 1852) between Justo José Urquiza and his Brazilian allies, and the dictator Juan Manuel de Rosas. The latter was decisively defeated, took refuge in the British legation, and shortly thereafter fled the country.

Monte Cassino (mōn'tā kās.sē'nō). See under Cassino.

Montecatini Terme (mōn''tā.kä.tē'nē ter'mā). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Pistoia, situated between Lucca and Pistoia, ab. 24 mi. NW of Florence. Buildings of interest to tourists were undamaged in World War II. Pop. of commune, 13,276 (1936); of town, 8,292 (1936).

Montecerboli (mōn.tā.cher'bō.lē). Village in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Pisa, ab. 42 mi. SW of Florence. It is noted for boracic springs or lagoons, from which boric acid is produced.

Monte Cristi or Montecristi (mōn.tā.krēs'tē). Province in NW Dominican Republic. Capital, Monte Cristi; area, ab. 1,150 sq. mi.; pop. 79,310 (1950).

Monte Cristo (mōn'tā krēs'tō). [Also, Montecristo.] Small uninhabited island in the Mediterranean, belonging to Italy, ab. 27 mi. S of Elba. Its fame rests on the novel Le Comte de Monte Cristo by Alexandre Dumas père. Area, ab. 4 sq. mi.

Monte Cristo, Count of. Title of Dantès, Edmond.

Montecucculi (mōn.tā.kök'kö.lē) or Montecuccoli (mōn.tā.kök'kō.lē), Count Raimondo. [Additional title, Duke of Melfi.] b. at the castle of Montecucculi, in the territory of Modena, Italy, 1608; d. at Linz, Austria, Oct. 16, 1680. Austrian general. He served with distinction in the Thirty Years' War, commanded the Austrian army sent to the assistance of Poland against the Swedes and Transylvanians (1657–60), gained the victory of St. Gotthard over the Turks (Aug. 1, 1664), and opposed Turenne and the Great Condé on the Rhine (1672–75) without fighting any decisive battle. His works include Commentarii bellici cum puncto artis bellicae systemate (1818).

Montefiascone (mōn″tā.fyäs.kō′nā). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Umbria, in the province of Viterbo, situated on Lake Bolsena, N of Viterbo. Only slight damage was suffered during World War II by some buildings of tourist interest. Pop. of commune, 11,277 (1936); of town, 3,307 (1936).

Montefiore (mon.tē.fi.ō′rē), Sir Moses Haim. b. at Leghorn (Livorno), Italy, Oct. 24, 1784; d. at Ramsgate, England, July 28, 1885. English philanthropist. He was the son of an Italian-Jewish merchant of London. A member through marriage of the Rothschild family, he amassed a fortune as a stockbroker at London, and retired in 1824, devoting himself thereafter to improving the condition of the Jews. In November, 1840, he obtained a firman securing the rights of Jews throughout the Ottoman Empire. In 1846 he secured the abrogation of the ukase of Czar Nicholas I, removing the Jews on the German and Austrian frontier into the interior of Russia. He published Narrative of a Forty Days' Sojourn in the Holy Land (1875), an account of his seventh voyage to Palestine, made when he was 90 years of age. He founded (1855) a hospital and girls' school at Jerusalem. Montefiore's great contribution, by his constant activity to secure recognition of Jewish political emancipation in England and alleviation of Jewish suffering elsewhere, was his arousing of a spirit of unity among European Jews, among whom his name became a proverb for sanctity (he remained strictly orthodox throughout his life); the feeling resulted in the growth of the Zionist movement.

Montefrío (mōn.tā.frē′ō). Town in S Spain, in the province of Granada, ab. 22 mi. NW of Granada: textile and soap factories; distilleries; cattle markets. 13,246 (1940).

Montegnée (môɴ.tę.nyā). Town in E Belgium, in the province of Liége: a western coal-mining suburb of Liége. 10,605 (1947).

Montego Bay (mon.tē′gō). City in NW Jamaica, on the Caribbean Sea: seaport and winter resort. 11,547 (1943).

Montégut (môɴ.tā.gü), Jean Baptiste Joseph Émile. b. June 24, 1825; d. Dec. 11, 1895. French littérateur and translator from the English. He introduced (c1847) the doctrines of R. W. Emerson, then unknown in France, in an article in the Revue des Deux Mondes. In 1850 he published a translation of Emerson's philosophical essays, and in 1862 he became literary critic of Le Moniteur Universel. He also published volumes of literary criticisms and translations, especially of Macaulay and Shakespeare.

Monteiro Lobato (mōn.tā′rō lō.bä′tō), José Bento. See Lobato, José Bento Monteiro.

Montejo (mōn.tā′ʜō), Francisco. b. in Salamanca, Spain, c1484; d. in Spain, c1550. Spanish soldier in Central America.

Monteleone di Calabria (mōn″tā.lā.ō′nā dē kä.lä′brē.ä). See Vibo Valentia.

Montélimar (môɴ.tā.lē.mär). [Ancient names, Acunum Acusio, Montilium Adhemari.] Town in SE France, in the department of Drôme, situated in the Rhone valley ab. 25 mi. S of Valence. It is a center of the fruit and wine trade, has a medieval castle and a collegiate church dating from the 15th century. It has manufactures of chocolates, silk goods, hats, and lumber. 15,972 (1946).

Montelios (mōn.tā′lyösh). See under Braga, city.

Montelius (môn.tā′lę.ůs), Oskar. b. at Stockholm, Sept. 9, 1843; d. there, Nov. 4, 1921. Swedish archaeologist, founder of prehistoric historiography, developer in this field of the so-called typological method. He served as professor (1888 et seq.) at the museum of national antiquities at Stockholm, and as state archaeologist (1913 et seq.).

Montellano (mōn.tā.lyä′nō). Town in S Spain, in the province of Sevilla, situated on the Salado de Moron River, ab. 37 mi. S of Seville. 10,919 (1940).

Montemayor (mōn″tā.mä.yor′), Jorge de. b. at Montemayor, Portugal, c1520; d. at Turin, Italy, Feb. 26, 1561. Spanish romancer and poet, author of the pastoral romance Diana Enamorada. A soldier during his youth, he was later attached as a musician to the traveling chapel of Prince Philip (later Philip II) of Spain. Some sources have suggested that his principal work mentioned above may have been used in translation by Shakespeare in the preparation of Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Montemezzi (mōn.tā.med′zē), Italo. b. at Vigasio, Italy, Aug. 4, 1875; d. at Verona, Italy, May 15, 1952. Italian composer of the operas Giovanni Gallurese, Hellera, L'Amore dei Tre Re, La Nave, and La Notte di Zoraima. He also composed a symphonic poem, Paolo e Virginia.

Montemolín (mōn″tā.mō.lēn′), Count of. Title of Carlos, Don (1818–61).

Montemorelos (mōn″tā.mō.rā′lōs). [Also, Morelos.] Town in N Mexico, in Nuevo León state, ab. 55 mi. SE of Monterrey. 5,579 (1940).

Monten (mon′tęn), Dietrich. b. at Düsseldorf, Germany, in September, 1799; d. at Munich, Dec. 13, 1843. German painter of battle scenes.

Montenegro (mōn.tę.nā′grō). See also Amapá, town.

Montenegro (mon.tę.nē′grō). [Serbo-Croatian, Crna Gora; Turkish, Kara Dagh; Eng. trans., "Black Mountain."] Federative unit of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia, established in 1945. It is bounded on the NW by Bosnia-Hercegovina, on the NE by Serbia, on the S by Albania, and on the SW by the Adriatic Sea. It is the smallest and least populous of the federative units. The surface is mountainous and in part eroded; the soil is poor. The chief occupation is the raising of livestock, particularly of cattle, sheep, and goats. The language is a dialect of Serbian. The inhabitants are noted for the independent spirit with which they resisted the Turkish penetration for centuries. From 1918 to 1945 it was the central part of the banovina (province) of Zetska; before 1918 it was an independent kingdom. Montenegro became independent of Serbia in 1389; the last dynasty had ruled since 1697. The country was for centuries at war with the Turks. The sultan finally recognized the independence of the country in 1799. In the 19th century, Montenegro succeeded in acquiring territory on the Adriatic coast (Bar and Ulcinj); at the end of the Balkan War of 1912 it acquired the Sanjak of Novi-Pazar. During World War I it was occupied by the Austrians. The country joined Yugoslavia in 1918, disregarding the claims of the native dynasty. During World War II, the area was a stronghold of the Chetniks under the command of General Draža Mihailović. Capital, Cetinje; area, ab. 5,342 sq. mi.; pop. 377,189 (1948).

Monte Nero (mōn′tā nā′rō). See Sila.

Monte Nevoso (mōn′tā nā.vō′sō), Prince of. Title of D'Annunzio, Gabriele.

Montenotte (mōn.tā.nôt′tā). Village in NW Italy, ab. 26 mi. W of Genoa. Here on April 12, 1796, Napoleon began his first Italian campaign by defeating the Austrians.

Montépin (môɴ.tā.pañ), Xavier Aymon de. b. at Apremont, Haute-Saône, France, March 18, 1824; d. at Passy, Paris, April 30, 1902. French novelist and playwright. He wrote some 100 novels and about 30 plays, and collaborated in 1848 on various antirevolutionary journals. His works have been translated into many languages.

Montepulciano (mōn″tā.pöl.chä′nō). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Siena, ab. 53 mi. SE of Florence. Some damage was suffered during World War II by some buildings of tourist interest, but repairs have been completed or are being carried out. Pop. of commune, 16,866 (1936); of town, 2,906 (1936).

Montereau (môɴt.rō). [Full name, Montereau-faut-Yonne (-fō.yon′).] Town in N central France, in the department of Seine-et-Marne, situated at the junction of the Yonne and Seine rivers, ab. 51 mi. SE of Paris. It is an industrial town. The town suffered damage in World War II, particularly the Church of Notre-Dame-et-St.-Loup (13th-15th centuries). John the Fearless, Duke of Burgundy, was assassinated here at the instigation of the Dauphin (afterward Charles VII), Sept. 10, 1419. Here on Feb. 18, 1814, Napoleon defeated the Allies. 8,962 (1946).

Monterey (mon.tę.rā′). City in W California, in Monterey County, on the coast NW of Los Angeles. Founded by the Spanish in 1775, it became the capital of Alta California territory and remained the focal point of the area until the American occupation. The principal present-day industry is fishing and fish-packing (chiefly sardines). 16,205 (1950).

Monterey Park. City in S California, in Los Angeles County: an eastern residential suburb of Los Angeles. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population more than doubled. 8,531 (1940), 20,395 (1950).

Montería (mōn.tā.rē'ä). City in NW Colombia, in Bolívar department. 12,804 (1938).

Montero (mōn.tā'rō), Luis. d. 1868. Peruvian painter. His principal work is the Funeral of Atahualpa.

Montero Rodríguez (rō.ᵺrē'ges), Juan Esteban. b. at Santiago, Chile, Feb. 12, 1879—. Chilean lawyer, president (1931–32) of Chile. He was deposed (June, 1932) by a revolution.

Monte Rotondo (mōn'tā rō.tōn'dō), Prince of. See Poniatowski, Joseph Michael Xavier Francis John.

Monterrey (mon.tę.rā'; Spanish, mōn.ter.rā'). City in N Mexico, capital of Nuevo León state. It is an important transportation center on the Inter-American Highway. It is one of Mexico's chief centers of modern industry, with manufactures including iron and steel, textiles, cement, glass, beer, tobacco products, and foodstuffs. Monterrey is the site of the largest iron and steel plant in Mexico. It is the seat of the state university of Nuevo León. The city was founded in the 16th century. It was occupied by U.S. troops under Zachary Taylor in 1846. Pop. 186,092 (1940), 339,634 (1950).

Monterrey, Count of. Title of Zúñiga y Azevedo, Gaspar de.

Montes (mōn'tās), Ismael. [Called El Gran Presidente.] b. 1861; d. 1933. Bolivian lawyer, soldier, and politician, president of Bolivia (1904–09, 1913–17). He served in the war (1879) with Chile, in the liberal revolution (1898), and in the Acré campaign (1903) against Brazil, becoming (1910) general. He was minister of war (1900) and minister to England and to France (1917), and lived at Paris after the revolution of 1920, but returned (1928) as head of the Liberal Party.

Monte San Giuliano (mōn'tā sän jö.lyä'nō). Former name of Erice (town); see also San Giuliano, Monte (mountain).

Monte Sant'Angelo (mōn'tā sän.tän'je.lō). Town and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Foggia, ab. 28 mi. NE of Foggia. Buildings of interest to tourists suffered negligible damage during World War II. Pop. of commune, 25,509 (1936); of town, 20,130 (1936).

Montes Claros (mōn'tęs klä'rös). City in E Brazil, in the state of Minas Gerais. 20,795 (1950).

Montes-Claros (mōn'tās.klä'rōs), Marquis of. Title of Hurtado de Mendoza y Luna, Juan Manuel.

Montesino (mōn.tā.sē'nō) or Montesinos (mōn.tā.sē'nōs), Antonio. [Called the "Apostle of Puerto Rico."] d. after 1526. Spanish Dominican missionary. His representations against Indian slavery resulted in the promulgation (1512) of the "laws of Burgos." Later he was a friend of Bartolomé de Las Casas, and was constantly engaged in helping the Indians.

Montesinos (mōn.tā.sē'nōs). Legendary hero of Spanish medieval romance. According to legend, he retired to a cavern at La Mancha, and lived there. In Cervantes's Don Quixote, the hero's visit to the cave of Montesinos (book ii, chap. 23) is an important episode.

Montesinos, Fernando. b. at Osuna, Sevilla, Spain, c1600; d. probably in Sevilla, Spain, c1655. Spanish lawyer and historian. His principal works are Memorias antiguas historiales del Perú and Anales nuevas del Perú. Montesinos gives a long list of the pre-Incan monarchs of Peru, which he professes to have received from the natives.

Montespan (môn.tes.päṅ; Anglicized, mon.tę.span'), Marquise de. [Maiden name, Françoise Athénaïs de Rochechouart.] b. 1641; d. at Bourbon-l'Archambault, France, May 27, 1707. Mistress of Louis XIV. She was a daughter of the Duc de Mortemart, and married L. H. Pardaillan de Gondrin, Marquis de Montespan, in 1663. She succeeded (c1667) Mademoiselle de la Vallière as mistress of Louis XIV, and was in turn supplanted by the tutor of her children, Madame de Maintenon, three years later, although she was not wholly discarded before 1686. She eventually entered a convent. She had eight children by the king, including Louis Auguste, Duc de Maine, Louis César, Comte de Vexin, and Louis Alexandre, Comte de Toulouse. The Marquis d'Antin (b. 1665) was her son by her husband.

Montesquieu (mon'tęs.kū; French, môn.tes.kyė), Baron de la Brède et de. [Title of Charles de Secondat.] b. at the Château de la Brède, near Bordeaux, France, Jan. 18, 1689; d. at Paris, Feb. 10, 1755. French writer and political philosopher. He was brought up at the College of Juilly, near Meaux, and returned to his native province to study law. In 1714 he was made councilor, and in 1716 president, of the Bordeaux parliament. He was not in sympathy, however, with the duties of his position, and he gradually withdrew from them and devoted his attention to the study of literature and jurisprudence. In 1721 he won fame in the world of letters with his Lettres persanes, in which he criticizes the French society of his time, using the fiction of two Persians who see French life from an alien and therefore fresh viewpoint. For this work he was elected to the French Academy in 1728. The following years were spent in travel, and he visited Austria, Italy, Germany, Switzerland, the Netherlands, and England. After his return to France he devoted his life entirely to literary work. Among his many productions, the two which have contributed most to his renown are the Considérations sur les causes de la grandeur et de la décadence des Romains (1734) and L'Esprit des lois (1748). The latter played an important role in shaping subsequent political thought.

Montesquiou-Fezensac (môṅ.tes.kyö.fę.zäṅ.sȧk), Comte Robert de. b. at Paris, March 9, 1855; d. at Menton, France, 1921. French poet and essayist. Author of Les Chauves souris (1892), Le Chef des odeurs suaves (1894), Le Parcours du rêve au souvenir (1895), and other works. He is less important as a writer than as a prominent figure of the literary world of the 1890's, an elegant dilettante and model "decadent." He was a close friend of Marcel Proust and is alleged to be the prototype of important characters in Proust's À la recherche du temps perdu and in André Gide's Les Faux Monnayeurs.

Montessori (mon.tę.sō'ri; Italian, mōn.tās.sō'rē), Maria. b. near Ancona, Italy, 1870; d. at Noordwijk, Netherlands, May 6, 1952. Italian educator, originator of the world-famed Montessori system of teaching children through their natural impluses. She obtained (1894) her medical degree at Rome, being the first woman in Italy to do so. While working with mentally defective children at the university, she became interested in the problem of teaching them and studied pedagogical methods. She established (1898) the Orthophrenic School, of which she was principal, to teach handicapped children and, in view of her success, determined to attempt an extension of the method to normal children. She opened (1907) the first of her case dei bambini (children's houses) at Rome, and later (1922) became government inspector of schools. Montessori institutes and training centers were opened elsewhere in Europe in later years. The method is one of providing the child with chosen materials and, without attempting formal training, to permit his natural initiative to teach him; sense training and muscular coördination are thus obtained, with the teacher as a guide rather than an instructor, as a result of the child's own impulses rather than through an imposed system. She was the author of The Montessori Method (1912), Pedagogical Anthropology (1913), The Advanced Montessori Method (1917), and others.

Montet (môṅ.te), Pierre. b. at Villefranche, France, 1885—. French Egyptologist, who taught (1919 et seq.) at the University of Strasbourg. He directed (1921–24) the excavations at Byblos, Syria. Author of Byblos et l'Égypte, quatre campagnes de fouilles à Byblos (Byblos and Egypt, Four Excavation Expeditions to Byblos, 1928).

Monteux (môṅ.tė), Pierre. b. at Paris, April 4, 1875—. French orchestra conductor. He was the conductor (1912) of Diaghilev's Ballet Russe, for which he directed Stravinsky's Petrouchka, Sacre du Printemps, and Rossignol. He came (1916) to the U.S., conducted (1917–19) at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, and directed (1918) the Boston Symphony Orchestra, serving (1919–24) as its regular conductor. He was conductor also of the Paris Symphony Orchestra (1930), of the Amsterdam Concertgebouw Orchestra, and of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra (1930 et seq.), of which he served (1935–51) as regular conductor.

Montevarchi (mōn.tā.vär'kē). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Arezzo, situated on the Arno River ab. 24 mi. SE of Florence. Slight damage was suffered by the Church of the Collegiata during World War II. Pop. of commune, 15,695 (1936); of town, 7,306 (1936).

Monteverde (mōn.tā.ber'ᵺhā), Juan Domingo. b. in Tenerife, Canary Islands, c1772; d. in Spain, 1823. Spanish general. From 1811 to the end of 1813 he was the most prominent royalist commander in Venezuela, though without legitimate authority. He received the submission of Francisco Miranda in July, 1812, and in violation of his treaty sent him a prisoner to Spain. His cruelty to the subjugated provinces led to fresh rebellions. He was repeatedly defeated by Simón Bolívar, and at length besieged at Puerto Cabello, Venezuela, where he was deposed by his own followers in December, 1813. He returned to Spain in 1816.

Monteverde (mōn.tā.vār'dā), Jules. b. at Bistagno, Italy, Oct. 8, 1837; d. 1917. Italian sculptor.

Monteverdi (mōn.tā.vär'dē) or Monteverde (-dā), Claudio (Giovanni Antonio). b. at Cremona, Italy, May, 1567; d. at Venice, Nov. 29, 1643. Italian composer, considered the founder of opera. Until 1613 he served the Duke of Mantua as musician and chapel master; in 1613 he went to Venice as choirmaster of St. Mark's. In 1632 he became a priest. Monteverdi is one of the great innovators of musical history; he did not hesitate to violate the conventions of the music of his time, and in so doing he expanded the horizon of the musicians that followed him; he showed the way out of the contrapuntal maze that music had been lost in by the followers of Palestrina. He made the recitative a dramatic moment, accompanying it with an expanded orchestra, but at the same time choosing carefully the instruments playing the accompaniment. He used the string tremolo for the first time as a means of conveying emotion and he introduced the fundamental discord into his compositions. His operas and cantatas became vehicles for portraying character rather than displays of musical technique. He wrote many madrigals, seerval masses, psalms, hymns, and other religious music. Of his operas, only three are extant; the Lamento from Arianna (1608) is all that survives of one of his reputation-making earlier works.

Montevideo (mon.ṭe.vid'ē.ō). City in SW Minnesota, county seat of Chippewa County, on the Minnesota River. 5,459 (1950).

Montevideo (mon''ṭe.vi.dā'ō, -vid'ē.ō; Spanish, mōn.tā.bē.ᵺhā'ō). Department in S Uruguay, on the Atlantic coast. Capital, Montevideo; area, ab. 256 sq. mi.; pop. 551,240 (est. 1947).

Montevideo. City in S Uruguay, capital of Uruguay and of Montevideo department, on the Río de la Plata. It is the only important port and city of Uruguay, exporting hides, wool, meat, and grain. The city is the terminus of various steamship and railroad lines. The chief export industries are meat packing, distilling, and flour milling; manufactures for the domestic market include textiles, clothing, tobacco products, and foodstuffs. It is the center of Uruguayan cultural life, and has a university and a cathedral. Montevideo was colonized by Spanish settlers in 1726, taken by the British in 1807 but recovered the same year, and since 1828 has been the capital of Uruguay. Until 1834, when the walls were removed, it was little more than a fortress, but its recent expansion has been rapid, and it has modern residential quarters with apartment hotels along the ocean front. 784,000 (est. 1949).

Monte Vista (mon'tē vis'ta). City in S Colorado, in Rio Grande County, on the Rio Grande River; shipping point for potatoes and other vegetables. It is the site of an annual rodeo. 3,272 (1950).

Montez (mon'tez, mon.tez'), Lola. [Original name, Marie Dolores Eliza Rosanna Gilbert.] b. at Limerick, Ireland, 1818; d. at Astoria, N.Y., Jan. 17, 1861. Irish dancer and adventuress. She was married to Captain Thomas James of the British army in 1837, but was divorced by him in 1842. Having taken lessons from a Spanish dancing teacher, she began her public career at London in 1843 under the professional name of Lola Montez, billed as a Spanish dancer. Less than laudatory opinions have been recorded concerning her dancing, but her beauty, charm, and spirit were undeniable. She appeared with great success in various European cities, and at Munich so captivated the elderly King Ludwig of Bavaria that presently (1847) she was his recognized mistress. Having been naturalized and made Baronne de Rosenthal and Comtesse de Landsfeld, by her ascendancy over the monarch she became virtual ruler of the kingdom, displaying moreover great ability and sagacity. This eminence, however, was of short duration. Hostility between liberal and conservative students at the university, the former of whom she had patronized, led to a riot in which her life was threatened. She caused the university to be closed, an action which was among the events leading up to the insurrection which forced Ludwig to abdicate on March 21, 1848. Lola was banished; and, returning to England, she was married to George Trafford Heald in July, 1849. She was summoned for bigamy, but fled to Spain; and in 1851, again in the character of a Spanish dancer, she came to the U.S., opening at New York, and everywhere drawing crowded houses. Her second husband having, it is supposed, died in 1853, in that year she married P. P. Hull, a San Franciscan. She toured Australia (1855–56), returned to the U.S., and before long retired from the stage. From 1859 she devoted herself to aiding outcast women, spending her means and laboring among them until, stricken with paralysis, she died in poverty.

Montezuma (mon.tē.zō'mą). City in W central Georgia, in Macon County, ab. 40 mi. SW of Macon; processing and shipping center for a peach-raising and truck-farming region. 2,921 (1950).

Montezuma I. [Also: Moctezuma, or Moteczuma; surnamed Ilhuicamina, meaning "the Angry"; properly Motecuhzoma, meaning "He Who Shoots Arrows to the Sky"; also spelled Montecuma, Motezuma, Mutezcuma.] b. c1390; d. 1469. Aztec war chief or "emperor" of ancient Mexico; son of Huitzilhuitl II, and brother of Itzcoatl, whom he succeeded (formally inaugurated 1440). He had wars with the Mixtecs and Tlascalans, and is said to have carried his arms to the Gulf of Mexico and extended his domain from ocean to ocean. An aqueduct from Chapultepec to Tenochtitlán (Mexico City) was built during his chieftainship.

Montezuma II. [Surnamed Xocoyotzin; for other forms, see Montezuma I.] b. 1477 (or, according to Bernal Díaz, in 1479); d. at Tenochtitlán (Mexico City), June 30, 1520. Aztec war chief or "emperor" of Mexico at the time of the Spanish conquest; son of Axayacatl, and successor to his uncle Ahuizotl in 1503. Besides his almost continuous wars with the Tlascalans and Tarascans, he carried his arms far southward. Many captives were brought back for sacrifice. The tidings of ships and white men on the coast excited his superstitious fears. When Cortés landed he sent him presents, but tried to dissuade him from coming to Tenochtitlán. Cortés insisted, and reached the city with his army in November, 1519. He was well received and given rich presents, but, fearing violence from the natives, seized Montezuma in his own house and confined him in the Spanish quarters as a hostage. The Aztecs at length rose in arms and attacked the quarters. Montezuma, although deposed from office, at the request of Cortés, appeared on the wall and attempted to expostulate with them, but was received with a shower of stones from his own people (in Spanish accounts) and died of his wounds four days later. The Indians maintained, however, that he was strangled by the Spaniards. After the Spanish conquest Montezuma became a legend among the Indians, and is still sometimes mentioned by them as a deity, although they do not pay him worship.

Montezuma Castle National Monument. National monument in C Arizona, in Yavapai County, ab. 35 mi. E of Prescott. It was established in 1906 to preserve a remarkable group of Indian cliff dwellings dating from pre-Columbian times. The national monument territory also includes Montezuma Well, a small, deep lake located ab. 7 mi. NE of the principal area, which also has cliff dwellings built into the 60-ft. rim of the lake. Area, ab. 783 acres.

Montfaucon (mōn.fō'kōn). Village in NE France, in the department of Meuse, ab. 15 mi. NW of Verdun. The old village on the nearby hilltop was totally destroyed in World War I, and its site is now marked by ruins and by the 190-ft. shaft of the U.S. Meuse-Argonne Memorial to those who perished in the great battles of September and October, 1918.

Montfaucon, Bernard de. b. at the Château Soulage, in Languedoc, France, Jan. 18, 1655; d. at Paris, Dec. 21, 1741. French critic and classical scholar. A Benedictine monk, he worked at Paris, Rome, and elsewhere on ancient Greek and Latin manuscripts and gave great impetus to the studies of paleography and archaeology. Among his works are Palaeographia Graeca (1708), L'Antiquité expliquée et représentée en figures (1719–24), Les Monuments de la monarchie française (1729–33), and an edition of Athanasius.

Montfermeil (môn.fer.mey'). Town in N France, in the department of Seine-et-Oise, situated near the Marne River, E of Paris, in the metropolitan area of Paris. 6,196 (1946).

Montferrand (môn.fe.răn). See under Clermont-Ferrand.

Montferrat (mont.fẹ.rat'). [Italian, Monferrato.] Former marquisate, later a duchy, in NW Italy, lying S of the Po River and N of the Ligurian Apennines. Its marquises from the 10th century ruled not only in Italy but for some time in Greece. A branch of the Palaeologi ruled from 1306. The marquisate was made a duchy and united to Mantua in 1536. Its possession was later a matter of dispute between Mantua and Savoy. It passed to Savoy in 1703. Capital, Casale Monferrato.

Montfleury (môn.flẹ.rē), Antoine Jacob. b. at Paris, 1640; d. at Aix, France, 1685. French dramatist. His comedy La Femme juge et partie (1669) was almost as successful as Molière's Tartuffe.

Montford Report (mont'fọrd). See Montagu-Chelmsford Report.

Montfort (môn.fôr), Eugène. b. at Paris, 1877; d. there, 1936. French critic and novelist, author of a history of recent French literature, Vingt-Cinq Ans de littérature française (2 vols., 1925).

Montfort (mont'fọrt; French, môn.fôr), Simon de. [Also: Simon IV de Montfort; full name, Simon de Montfort-l'Amaury; titles: Comte de Montfort, Earl of Leicester.] b. c1160; d. near Toulouse, France, June 25, 1218. French soldier, leader of the war against the Albigenses; father of Simon de Montfort (c1208–65). He joined the fourth Crusade (1202–04) and was one of those who tried in vain to prevent it being turned against Constantinople. In 1208, obedient to the papal legate, he reluctantly took command of the French forces in the campaign against the Albigenses. Resolute in generalship and personally fearless, he quickly subdued all Languedoc, employing, when he found it expedient, treachery as well as the ruthless ferocity since associated with his name. In historical perspective, however, de Montfort's conduct can hardly be made to appear more barbarous than that of many another conqueror of his time. His reputation has suffered from the circumstance that the afflictions of the Albigenses evoke more than ordinary sympathy, involving as they did so many troubadours and knights and ladies of the glamorous Provençal courts and castles. Some of the Albigensian teachings, such as the virtue of avoiding procreation and the desirability of suicide, could not of course be regarded by civil any more than by religious authority as less than a threat to the very fabric of organized society. There was at stake in the wars in Languedoc at that period, moreover, the question whether that province was to remain apart or to be absorbed into France. Both of these factors embittered the tempers of the contending parties. Through his mother, de Montfort inherited the earldom of Leicester in England, but King John arrogated his lands; after briefly restoring them, seized them a second time; and finally relinquished them only in 1215 at the insistence of the Pope, as part of the terms of the peace which he sought with Rome.

Montfort, Simon de. [Title, Earl of Leicester.] b. in Normandy, c1208; killed at Evesham, England, Aug. 4, 1265. English general and statesman; son of Simon de Montfort (c1160–1218). The earldom of Leicester came into the family through his grandmother, Amicia, daughter of Robert of Beaumont, 3rd Earl of Leicester. She, however, sided with Philip II of France against John and lost the earldom. Simon came to England c1230 and became a member of the court of Henry III; he soon had reclaimed the earldom. He early showed a harsh streak by expelling all the Jews from his earldom. In 1238 Montfort married Eleanor, widow of William Marshal, 2nd Earl of Pembroke, and sister of Henry III; baronial opposition to the marriage was pacified by Simon's obtaining personally the permission of Pope Gregory IX. In 1240 he went on a crusade with Richard, Earl of Cornwall, the king's brother and a leader of the barons' party. He returned in 1241 and became one of the king's favorites and a leader of the English party in reform of the church, being allied in this with Robert Grosseteste. In 1248 he was appointed governor of Gascony. His vigorous administration brought complaints from the Gascons, and an examination of Simon's accounts resulted in an open quarrel with the king; he resigned his office Sept. 29, 1252. The ill feeling between the earl and king forced Simon more and more into the popular party; he opposed (1254) the king's demand for a subsidy; he sided with the opposition in the "Mad Parliament" of 1258; he signed (1258) the Provisions of Oxford, which put the kingdom under the control of a small group of barons, he being one of the 15 who would control the administration of the realm. In 1261 the king revoked his assent to the Provisions and Montfort left England, hopeless of finding a solution to the problem of limiting the king's power. He was called back by the barons and was recognized as leader of the "barons' war" in 1263, but made the mistake of agreeing to let Philip II arbitrate the quarrel; Philip, himself an absolute monarch, decided in Henry's favor and thus negated the Provisions. The war was at once resumed by Montfort, and on May 14, 1264, he captured the king, Prince Edward (later Edward I), and the Earl of Cornwall, at Lewes, and became virtually governor of the kingdom. By writs in the king's name (Dec. 14 and 24, 1264) he summoned to a parliament, which met at London Jan. 30, 1265, 120 churchmen, 23 lay barons, and two knights from every shire, and also two citizens from every borough in England; this was the first appearance of the Commons. At this parliament the quarrel between Simon and Gilbert, Earl of Gloucester, began, the barons generally feeling that the new form of government was not the oligarchy they had striven for. His alliance with Llewelyn ab Gruffydd of Wales upset the Welsh March lords especially; Edward was rescued from his captivity and led the royal forces against Montfort. At Evesham (Aug. 4, 1265) the baronial party was defeated and Simon de Montfort killed. He was for many years after his death regarded popularly as a champion of the rights of the people and was considered a saint and a martyr.

Montfort, Simon de. b. near Brindisi, Italy, 1240; d. near Siena, Italy, 1271. Second child of Simon de Montfort (c1208–65), Earl of Leicester. After his father's victory at Lewes, May 14, 1264, he was made constable of Por hester. He reached Evesham after the death of his father, Aug. 4, 1265, and was obliged to surrender to Prince Edward (later Edward I) at Christmas. He was banished, and was still in France in 1268. On March 13, 1271, he assisted in the murder of Henry of Cornwall, who, though he was not present at Evesham, was considered by de Montfort's sons guilty to some extent of their father's death.

Montfort-l'Amaury (môn.fôr.lȧ.mō.rē). Small town in the department of Seine-et-Oise, France, ab. 20 mi. W of Paris, It contains the ruined castle of the counts of Montfort. 1,716 (1946).

Montfort-l'Amaury, Simon de. See Montfort, Simon de (c1160–1218).

Montgelas (môn.zhẹ.lä'), Count Maximilian von. b. at St. Petersburg, May 23, 1860; d. at Munich, Feb. 5, 1938. Bavarian general in World War I and later a pacifist, coeditor of German documents on the origins of World War I (4 vols., 1919), and of numerous publications concerning the League of Nations.

Montgenèvre (môn.zhẹ.nevr), Colle du. See Genèvre, Col de.

Montgeron (môn.zhẹ.rôn). Town in N France, in the department of Seine-et-Oise, situated near the Seine, ab. 10 mi. SE of Paris. It has manufactures of gloves and of fruit confections. The forest of Sénart, a vacation spot popular with Parisians, is in the vicinity. 10,554 (1946).

Montgolfier (mont.gol'fi.ér; French, môn.gol.fyā), Jacques Étienne. b. at Vidalon-lez-Annonay, Ardèche, France, Jan. 7, 1745; d. Aug. 2, 1799. French mechanician. Like his elder brother, Joseph Michel, he studied mathematics, mechanics, and physics. He was for a time an architect, but gave up that profession in order to take charge with his brother of his father's paper mill at Annonay. With his brother he invented the form of air or fire balloon known as the montgolfier, in which the bag is filled with air heated by a fire. A public experiment with a small model of this balloon was made at Annonay in 1782, and another, with a balloon 105 feet in circumference, was made on June 5, 1783, the balloon staying up for ten minutes. The experiment, repeated by Joseph Montgolfier before the court at Versailles, Sept. 19, 1783, was witnessed by Louis XVI, Marie Antoinette, Benjamin Franklin, and others.

Montgolfier, Joseph Michel. b. at Vidalon-lez-Annonay, Ardèche, France, 1740; d. at Balaruc, France, June 26, 1810. French inventor; brother of Jacques Étienne Montgolfier, with whom he was associated in the invention of the hot-air balloon.

Montgomerie (mont.gum'ę.ri), Alexander. b. c1556; d. before 1615. Scottish poet. His chief work is the allegorical poem The Cherry and the Slae (1597). He also wrote The Flyting betwixt Montgomery and Polwart (1621).

Montgomerie, Alexander. [Originally known as Sir Alexander Seton; title, 6th Earl of Eglinton; called "Greysteel."] b. 1588; d. at Eglinton, Scotland, Jan. 7, 1661. Scottish Presbyterian. Originally known as Sir Alexander Seton, he took (1612) the name and arms of Montgomerie after succeeding (through his mother, Mary Montgomerie, a daughter of Hugh Montgomerie, 3rd Earl of Eglinton) to the earldom. He presented a petition against the prayer book and aided in the preparation of the national covenant. He was distinguished for service (1644) at the battle of Marston Moor. Betrayed (1651) to Cromwell, he was held prisoner in Edinburgh Castle, later allowed liberty at Berwick, and included in Cromwell's Act of Grace.

Montgomerie, Archibald William. [Titles: 13th Earl of Eglinton, 1st Earl of Winton.] b. at Palermo, Sicily, Sept. 29, 1812; d. at St. Andrews, Scotland, Oct. 4, 1861. British politician, lord lieutenant of Ireland in 1852.

Montgomerie, Hugh. [Titles: 3rd Baron Montgomerie, 1st Earl of Eglinton.] b. c1460; d. 1545. Scottish regent. After the death of James IV at Flodden (1513) he was nominated one of the guardians of James V. He served as justice general of the northern parts of Scotland (1527), and acted as one of the regents (1536) during the king's trip to France.

Montgomerie, Hugh. [Title, 3rd Earl of Eglinton.] b. c1531; d. June 3, 1585. Scottish noble; great-grandson of Hugh Montgomerie (c1460–1545). He joined Mary, Queen of Scots, in France and returned (1560) with her to Scotland. He was in favor of her Roman Catholic policy but was against her marriage (1567) with the Earl of Bothwell. He fought for the queen at Langside (1568), but gave his allegiance to the regent (1571). He approved (1582) of the raid headed by William, 4th Baron Ruthven, in which James VI was captured.

Montgomerie, Sir John. [Title, 9th Lord of Eaglesham.] d. c1398. Scottish soldier; great-great-grandfather of Hugh Montgomerie (c1460–1545). He accompanied (1388) his brother-in-law, Sir James Douglas, to England, participating there in the battle of Otterburn, where he took prisoner Sir Henry Percy, whom he ransomed.

Montgomery (mont.gum'ę.ri). [Called the "Cradle of the Confederacy."] City in S Alabama, capital of Alabama and of Montgomery County, on the Alabama River; rail center. It has textile, lumber, clothing, meat-packing, fertilizer, and food and cotton processing industries. It became the state capital in 1847, and was the place of organization (Feb. 4, 1861) and the capital (February–May, 1861) of the Confederate States. It is the seat of Huntingdon College and of a state teachers college for Negroes. Pop. of city, 78,084 (1940), 106,525 (1950); of urbanized area, 109,468 (1950).

Montgomery. District of Multan division, West Punjab, Pakistan, ab. 100 mi. SW of Lahore; cotton, wheat, and sugar. Area, ab. 4,204 sq. mi.; pop. 1,329,013 (1941).

Montgomery. Municipal borough, in E Wales, county seat of Montgomeryshire, situated near the river Severn, ab. 7 mi. S of Welshpool, ab. 179 mi. NW of London by rail. 897 (est. 1948).

Montgomery. [Former name, Coal Valley.] City in C West Virginia, in Fayette and Kanawha counties. Coal mining is the principal industry. It was incorporated in 1891 and is the seat of West Virginia Institute of Technology. 3,484 (1950).

Montgomery, Earls of. Titles held by various members of the Herbert family.

Montgomery, Sir Bernard Law. [Title, 1st Viscount Montgomery of Alamein; called the "Hero of El Alamein" and "Monty."] b. at St. Mark's Vicarage, Kennington Oval, London, Nov. 17, 1887—. British soldier; grandson of Frederic William Farrar. He is probably best known for his command (1942–43) of the British Eighth Army in Africa during World War II. His successes against the German and Italian forces under Erwin Rommel (most notably at El Alamein, for which he was knighted) were a decisive factor in turning the tide for the Allies in a crucial area of operations. His tactical methods in Africa, and later on the Continent under Eisenhower, demanded meticulously careful preparation before engaging the enemy and the application of overwhelming force, especially from his artillery (the barrage which preceded his attack at El Alamein was one of the most intense in the history of modern warfare). Educated at Sandhurst, he joined (1908) the Royal Warwickshire regiment as an infantry officer. He served as a captain in World War I and received (1914) the Distinguished Service Order. Promoted (1938) to the rank of major general, he commanded (1939–40) the 3rd division in France and headed (1941) the southeastern command in England. As a lieutenant general, he took command (August, 1942) of the British Eighth Army in Egypt, and led the Eighth Army in its offensive (launched Oct. 23, 1942) at El Alamein. He continued (October–December, 1942) this offensive, forcing Rommel to retreat from Libya and Tripolitania into Tunisia, and outflanked (March, 1943) the enemy forces at the Mareth Line in southern Tunisia. He then led the Eighth Army in the Sicilian and Italian campaign. Called to London to take charge of training British ground forces for the invasion of Europe, he was promoted (1944) to the rank of field marshal. He participated in the European invasion as head of the combined British and U.S. assault forces, and in August, 1944, took command of the 21st army group. This was composed chiefly of British and Canadian elements, although he commanded the U.S. First Army and parts of the Ninth Army in the reduction of German gains during the Battle of the Bulge (December, 1944–January, 1945). He was chief (1946–49) of the imperial general staff after World War II, and commander in chief (1945–46) of the British forces of occupation in Germany. He was a member of the Allied control commission in Germany, and was appointed (1948) permanent military chairman of the commanders in chief forming the Western Union Defense Council. He was shortly thereafter made deputy chief at SHAPE (Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers in Europe).

Montgomery, Fort. American fort on the Hudson River, during the Revolutionary War, ab. 6 mi. S of West Point.

Montgomery (môn.gom.rē), Gabriel de Lorges, Comte de. b. c1530; executed at Paris, May 26, 1574. French commander of the Scots Guards who, by accident, mortally wounded Henry II in a tournament (June 30, 1559). He retired to Normandy and then escaped to England, where he became a Protestant. Returning to France on the death of his father, he took part in the religious wars of the period. He established himself (c1574) on the islands of Jersey and Guernsey, whence he directed an expedition against France, and was finally captured and put to death.

Montgomery (mont.gum'ę.ri), James. b. at Irvine, Ayrshire, Scotland, Nov. 4, 1771; d. April 30, 1854. Scottish poet. In 1792 he entered the office of the Sheffield Register, and in 1795 the paper became his property; the name meanwhile had been changed to the Sheffield Iris. In 1806 his poems The Wanderer of Switzerland and The Ocean won him recognition. The numerous hymns on which his reputation chiefly rests were collected in 1853.

His lectures on poetry before the Royal Institution were published in 1833. His other works are The West Indies (1810), The World before the Flood (1812), Greenland (1819), and Pelican Island (1826).

Montgomery, Jemima. Original name of Tautphoeus, Baroness von.

Montgomery, Leslie Alexander. Original name of Doyle, Lynn.

Montgomery, Lucy Maud. See Macdonald, Lucy Maud.

Montgomery, Richard. b. at Swords, County Dublin, Ireland, Dec. 2, 1738; killed before Quebec, Dec. 31, 1775. American Revolutionary general. He campaigned with the British army in Canada, at Lake Champlain (1759), and elsewhere in America, but left the army (1772), married a daughter of Robert R. Livingston, and settled in New York. He took command, after Philip Schuyler became ill, of an expedition for the invasion of Canada in 1775, during which he captured Fort Chambly and Montreal. After joining his forces with those of Benedict Arnold, he was killed while leading an attack on Quebec.

Montgomery, Robert. b. at Bath, England, 1807; d. at Brighton, England, Dec. 3, 1855. English poet. Among his poems are The Stagecoach (1827), Omnipresence of the Deity (1828), Satan (1830), and The Puffiad (1830). His work was attacked by the critics, notably by T. B. Macaulay in the Edinburgh Review (1830), but his poems, especially Omnipresence of the Deity, continued in great popularity.

Montgomery-Massingberd (-mas'ing.bėrd), Sir Archibald Armar. b. Dec. 6, 1871; d. at Spilsby, England, Oct. 13, 1947. English soldier, chief (1933–36) of the imperial general staff. He was chief of staff of the Fourth Army in France during World War I and deputy chief of general staff in India until 1922. He was appointed lieutenant general (1926) and field marshal (1935).

Montgomeryshire (mont.gum'ę.ri.shir) or Montgomery (mont.gum'ę.ri). Inland county in E Wales. It is bounded on the N by Merionethshire and Denbighshire, on the NE and E by Shropshire, England, on the S by Radnorshire, on the SW by Cardiganshire, and on the W by Merionethshire. The surface is almost entirely mountainous and infertile, with, however, some narrow fertile valleys in the E part. The staple industries are stock raising, dairying, and the weaving of flannels. Slate is the chief mineral product. Formerly lead mining was important at Llandidloes and Llanbrynmair in the W part of the county, but this has declined. County seat, Montgomery; area, ab. 797 sq. mi.; pop. 45,989 (1951).

Montgomery Ward (wôrd). See Ward, Aaron Montgomery.

Montherlant (môn.ter.läṅ), Henry Millon de. b. at Paris, 1896—. French poet, novelist, and dramatist. His best-known works are two novels, Les Bestiaires (1925; Eng. trans., The Bullfighters) and Les Célibataires (1934; Eng. trans., Lament for the Death of an Upper Class, 1935; and also Perish in Their Pride, 1936). A play, Le Maître de Santiago (1948), has established him among the foremost dramatists of the French post-liberation period. Filled with disdain for the bourgeois virtues and preaching a more vigorous way of life, his books have been widely admired for their craftsmanship and the deft manipulation of a Nietzschean irony.

Montholon (môn.to.lôṅ), Charles Tristan, Comte de. b. at Paris, July 21, 1783; d. Aug. 21, 1853. French general; companion of Napoleon at St. Helena, and one of the executors of his will. He published, with Gaspard Gourgaud, Mémoires pour servir à l'histoire de France sous Napoléon, écrits à Sainte-Hélène sous sa dictée (1823). He joined (1840) Louis Napoleon's abortive conspiracy, was arrested, and was imprisoned (1840–47). He was a deputy (1849) under the Second Republic.

Monti (mōn'tē). Italian word for "mountains" (plural of monte): for entries not found immediately below see the distinguishing element of the name.

Monti, Vincenzo. b. at Fusignano, near Ravenna, Italy, Feb. 19, 1754; d. at Milan, Italy, Oct. 13, 1828. Italian poet. His political allegiance followed every change of ruler in Italy; he was successively anti-Revolutionary, pro-Revolutionary, pro-Napoleonic, and pro-Austrian. His Bassvilliana (1793) was an attack on the French Revolution, inspired by the massacre by the Roman populace of the French envoy to Naples, Hugo de Basseville. He was professor of eloquence at Pavia, and was made historiographer to the court under Napoleon, and a member of the Italian Institute. Among his other poems are Fanatismo, Musogonia, Maschernoniana, Il Ritorno d'Astrea, Superstizione, a translation of the Iliad, and others. His tragedies are Aristodemo, Galeotto Manfredi, and Caio Gracco. His complete works were published in six volumes (1839).

Monticelli (môn.tē.se.lē), Adolphe Joseph Thomas. b. at Marseilles, France, Oct. 14, 1824; d. there, May 26, 1886. French painter. He studied in the art school at Marseilles, and at Paris, where he was especially influenced by the impressionist school. In 1870 he returned to Marseilles and remained there the rest of his life. He painted with a palette knife and also directly from the tubes without the assistance of brushes.

Monticello (mon.ti.sel'ō). City in SE Arkansas, county seat of Drew County: manufactures of coarse cotton rugs and cottonseed oil. It is the seat of Arkansas Agricultural and Mechanical College. 4,501 (1950).

Monticello. City in E Illinois, county seat of Piatt County. 2,612 (1950).

Monticello. City in NW Indiana, county seat of White County: chiefly a resort trade center. 3,467 (1950).

Monticello. City in E Iowa, in Jones County, on the Maquoketa River. It was settled in 1836. Pop. 2,888 (1950).

Monticello. Town in S Kentucky, county seat of Wayne County, ab. 85 mi. S of Lexington: oil refinery. 2,934 (1950).

Monticello. Village in SE New York, county seat of Sullivan County: resort center. 4,223 (1950).

Monticello. Mansion and estate, the former residence of Thomas Jefferson, situated in Albemarle County, Va., near Charlottesville.

Montichiari (mōn.tē.kyä'rē). Town and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Lombardy, in the province of Brescia, situated on the Chiese River SE of Brescia. Pop. of commune, 11,650 (1936); of town, 4,131 (1936).

Montignies-sur-Sambre (môn.tē.nyē.sür.säṅbr). [Also, Montigny-sur-Sambre.] Town in S central Belgium, in the province of Hainaut, situated on the Sambre River E of Charleroi: a coal-mining center, with blast furnaces and stone quarries. It has manufactures of ovens, kettles, ironware, and machinery. 23,064 (1947).

Montigny-en-Gohelle (môn.tē.nyē.äṅ.go.el). Town in N France, in the department of Pas-de-Calais, between Lens and Douai. Coal is mined in the vicinity. 6,892 (1946).

Montigny-lès-Metz (môn.tē.nyē.le.mes). Town in E France, in the department of Moselle, situated at the confluence of the Moselle and Seille rivers, S of Metz. It is a suburb of Metz. 13,084 (1946).

Montijo (mōn.tē'zhō). Parish and concelho (commune) in W Portugal, in the province of Estremadura, district of Setúbal, situated on the estuary of the Tagus River, ab. 11 mi. E of Lisbon. Pop. of concelho, 17,883 (1940); of parish, 10,727 (1940).

Montijo (mōn.tē'ʜō). Town in W Spain, in the province of Badajoz, ab. 18 mi. E of Badajoz. The Portuguese defeated the Spaniards here in 1644. 11,133 (1940).

Montilium Adhemari (mon.til'i.um ad.hę.mā'rī). An ancient name of Montélimar.

Montilla (mōn.tē'lyä). Town in S Spain, in the province of Córdoba, ab. 22 mi. S of Córdoba. Famous for its amontillado sherries, it also has woolen, linen, soap, and tile factories. It was the birthplace of Hernández Gonzalo de Córdoba (1453–1515), known as El Gran Capitán. 22,527 (1940).

Mont-Iseran (môn.tēz.räṅ), Col du. [Also: Col d'Iseran (or de l'Iseran).] Mountain pass in the SE Alps, between the upper valley of the Isère River and that of the Arc. Elevation, ab. 9,085 ft.

Montivilliers (môn.tē.vē.lyā). Town in NW France, in the department of Seine-Inférieure, near the English Channel, ab. 6 mi. NE of Le Havre. It is an industrial town known particularly for the manufacture of cloth. It suffered damage in World War II. 7,854 (1946).

Montjoie (môn.zhwä). Name of the hill near Paris where Saint Denis was martyred. Before 1789 it was the name of the king at arms. In ancient tournaments "Montjoie" was the cry of the French heralds, and "Montjoie Saint Denis" the war cry of the French in battle. The kings of England had at one time the war cry "Montjoie Saint George." It was last used by the French at the siege of Montargis in 1426. Shakespeare gives the name Montjoy to the French herald in Henry V.

Montjoie. Former name of Monschau.

Mont Joli (môn zho.lē). Town on the S bank of the St. Lawrence River, Quebec, Canada, on the Gaspé Peninsula, ab. 91 mi. E of Rivière du Loup, at the junction of the shore highway and the highway from New Brunswick. 4,938 (1951).

Mont Laurier (môn lô'ri.ā, lo.ryā). County seat of Labelle County, Quebec, Canada, situated on the Lievre River, ab. 118 mi. N of Ottawa: well known as a resort town. 4,701 (1951).

Montlhéry (môn.lā.rē). Small town in the department of Seine-et-Oise, France, ab. 18 mi. S of Paris. Here on July 16, 1465, the forces of the League of the Public Good defeated Louis XI.

Montluc (môn.lük), Blaise de Lasseran-Massencome, Seigneur de. b. near Condom, in Guienne, France, c1503; d. in the province of Agénois, France, 1577. French marshal. He took part in all the campaigns of Francis I against the emperor Charles V, and also became celebrated for his exploits in the reign of Henry II. Charles IX and Henry III honored him with high positions. In the later years of his life he dictated from memory his account of the wars from 1521 to 1574. His work is of great value to historians, and is furthermore possessed of considerable literary merit. Henry IV paid it a just tribute in calling it "la Bible du soldat." Montluc's Commentaires appeared first in 1592 at Bordeaux, and have been reprinted several times since.

Montluçon (môn.lü.sôn). City in C France, in the department of Allier, on the Cher River ab. 38 mi. SW of Moulins. It is an important industrial town, producing steel, railroad equipment and other iron and steel products, glass and chemical products, rubber tires, and textiles. The town suffered some damage in World War II. 47,074 (1946).

Montmagny (môn.mà.nyē). Town on the S shore of the St. Lawrence River, Quebec, Canada, the capital of Montmagny County. It is on the railroad to the Gaspé Peninsula, ab. 25 mi. E of Quebec city. 5,844 (1951).

Montmartre (môn.màrtr). Hill in N Paris, locality of an old town incorporated since 1860 in the city of Paris as the 18th arrondissement. The hill, which is named either for Saint Denis and his fellow martyrs (Mons martyrum) or for an ancient temple to Mars (Mons martis), is topped by the basilica of Sacré-Cœur, which stands at the highest point in Paris. The section, once noted for its bohemian inhabitants, is now perhaps best known for its cabarets. The famous Montmartre cemetery is on the W flank of the hill. Height, 420 ft.

Montmédy (môn.mā.dē). Town in NE France, in the department of Meuse, on the Chiers River ab. 23 mi. SE of Sedan. It is an old fortress town, unsuccessfully besieged in 1815 and 1870, but severely damaged in World War II. 1,643 (1946).

Montmirail (môn.mē.rày'). Village in N France, in the department of Marne, ab. 55 mi. E of Paris. Here on Feb. 11, 1814, the French under Napoleon defeated the Allies. 2,240 (1946).

Montmorency (môn.mo.răn.sē). [Former name, Enghien.] Town in N France, in the department of Seine-et-Oise, ab. 9 mi. N of the center of Paris. It is known for its cherry blossoms, its forest, and for its association with Jean Jacques Rousseau, who wrote his La Nouvelle Héloïse here. The Church of Saint-Martin dates from the 16th century. The town was called Enghien until the French Revolution. 11,126 (1946).

Montmorency (mont.mō.ren'si). Town on the N bank of the St. Lawrence River, Quebec, Canada, on the main railroad and highway ab. 7 mi. NE of Quebec. The Montmorency Falls on the Montmorency River nearby supply electric power to Quebec. 5,817 (1951).

Montmorency, Anne, Duc de. b. at Chantilly, France, 1493; d. at Paris, March 15, 1567. French soldier. He was a boyhood companion of Francis I, accompanied him in his early campaigns, and served him on diplomatic missions. In 1522, as a result of his fighting in Italy, he was made marshal of France. He was captured (1525) at Pavia and helped negotiate the treaty of Madrid (1526). When the war with the Emperor Charles V was resumed (1536) he fought again and in 1538 was named constable of France. From 1541 to 1547 he was in disgrace for counseling a more peaceful policy, but after the accession of Henry II he became one of the king's most valiant captains, suppressing rebellions and fighting against the Spaniards. He was opposed by the Guises, but with the outbreak of the wars of religion he sided with them. He died as the result of a wound received at the siege of Paris.

Montmorency, Duchesse de. See Diane de France.

Montmorency, François de. See Bouteville, François de Montmorency, Seigneur de.

Montmorency, Henri I, Duc de. b. 1534; d. 1614. French marshal, constable of France; son of Anne de Montmorency. He was for some years active on the Catholic side of the French religious wars, but subsequently took part in efforts to restore the country's internal peace, and even for a time coöperated with the Huguenots, and gave his support to Henry of Navarre (Henry IV of France) as early as 1589. In 1593 Henry named him constable of France.

Montmorency, Henri II, Duc de. d. at Chantilly, France, April 30, 1595; executed at Toulouse, France, Oct. 30, 1632. French marshal; grandson of Anne de Montmorency. He joined the rebellion of Gaston d'Orléans in 1632, was wounded in battle, captured, and executed.

Montmorency, Mathieu, Baron de. b. 1230. Constable of France. Appointed to that office in 1218, after years of valiant service against the English and other enemies of Philip II and Louis VIII, he upheld the queen mother, Blanche of Castile, in her regency during the minority of Louis IX (Saint Louis). In 1226 he took part in the campaign against the Albigenses.

Montmorency-Bouteville (-böt.vēl), François Henri de. See Luxembourg, Duc de.

Montmorency River (mont.mǭ.ren'si). [Also, Montmorenci.] Small river in the province of Quebec, Canada, which joins the St. Lawrence ab. 8 mi. below Quebec. It is noted for the falls, ab. 250 ft. high, near its mouth. Length, ab. 60 mi.

Montmorillon (môn.mo.rē.yôn). Town in W central France, in the department of Vienne, ab. 28 mi. SE of Poitiers. The Church of Notre-Dame dates from the 13th century, and there are other historical monuments. 5,410 (1946).

Montone (mōn.tō'nā), Andrea Braccio da. See Braccio da Montone, Andrea.

Montoro (mōn.tō'rō). [Ancient name, Epora.] Town in S Spain, in the province of Córdoba, on the Guadalquivir River ab. 27 mi. NE of Córdoba: trade in olive oil and timber; 16th-century bridge across the Guadalquivir River. 14,980 (1940).

Montorsoli (mōn.tōr'sō.lē), Giovanni Angelo. b. at Montorsoli, near Florence, c1500; d. at Florence, 1563. Italian sculptor and architect, a pupil of Andrea Feruccì of Fiesole. He restored the left arm of the Apollo Belvedere and the right arm of the Laocoon. He assisted Michelangelo in finishing the statues of Giuliano and Lorenzo de' Medici, and made the statue of San Cosimo in the sacristy of San Lorenzo in Florence. His most famous work is the great fountain of Messina (1547).

Montoursville (mon.tûrz'vil). Borough in C Pennsylvania, in Lycoming County; manufactures of silk textiles and Venetian blinds. Settled in 1807, it occupies the site of a former Indian village. 3,293 (1950).

Montoya (mōn.tō'ya), Antonio Ruiz de. b. at Lima, Peru, c1583; d. there, April 11, 1652. Jesuit missionary and author. His Tesoro (1639), Arte y Vocabulario (1640), and Catecismo (1640) are authoritative on the Guarani language.

Montparnasse (môn.par.nas'). Section of Paris S of the Luxembourg Garden, on the left bank of the Seine, noted for its cafés and as a center of artistic life. It contains a large cemetery and the Gare Montparnasse, S Paris terminal of the Chemin de Fer de l'Ouest.

Montpelier (mont.pēl'yėr). City in SE Idaho, in Bear Lake County. It was named by Brigham Young for the capital of Vermont, his native state. 2,682 (1950).

Montpelier. Village in NW Ohio, in Williams County. 3,867 (1950).

Montpelier. City in N central Vermont, capital of Vermont and county seat of Washington County, on the Winooski River: granite quarrying; life insurance firms. Settled in 1788, it was made state capital in 1805. It was the birthplace of Admiral George Dewey. It is the seat of a junior college. 8,599 (1950).

Montpelier. Estate in N central Virginia, in Orange County ab. 5 mi. W of Orange: the home and burial place of James Madison and his wife, Dolly.

Montpellier (môn.pe.lyā). [Latin, Mons Pessulus.] City in S France, the capital of the department of Hérault, situated near the Mediterranean Sea, between Arles and Beziers. It has a noted university, founded in 1289, which has been renowned since the Middle Ages. There are various libraries and a good art museum (Musée Fabre). The Cathedral of Saint-Pierre was founded by Pope Urban V in 1364. Montpellier has a number of industries including the manufacture of soap, cheeses, chocolates, straw hats, and fertilizer, and is a center for the wine and liquor trade. Montpellier passed from the rule of Aragon and Majorca to that of France in 1349. During the Reformation, the university became a Protestant stronghold. The city was taken by Louis XIII in 1622. 93,102 (1946).

Montpellier, Lord of. A title of James I and James II (of Majorca).

Montpellier-le-Vieux (môn.pe.lyā.lę.vyė). Locality near Millau, S France, in the department of Aveyron, noted for a group of fantastic dolomite rocks.

Montpensier (môn.pän.syā), Duchesse de. [Title of Catherine Marie de Lorraine.] b. 1552; d. c1594. French noblewoman; daughter of Francis of Lorraine, Duke of Guise. She was one of the leaders of the Holy League and opposed Henry IV.

Montpensier, Duchesse de. [Title of Anne Marie Louise d'Orléans; called La Grande Mademoiselle.] b. at Paris, May 29, 1627; d. there, March 5, 1693. Only daughter of Gaston d'Orléans and the Duchesse de Montpensier. She was a cousin of Louis XIV and, as heiress of the Montpensiers, one of the most sought-after ladies of France. Finding herself blocked by Mazarin in her attempts to make a good marriage, she readily joined in the Fronde and was in actual command of fighting forces. Although she took part in the fighting against the royal adherents, she acted as a mediator to end the revolt. She was banished from court until 1657; on her return she fell in love with, and probably married (c1670), the Duc de Lauzun, who was imprisoned until she practically ransomed him from Louis XIV in 1680. Her Mémoires (published 1729) are of importance to the historical picture of the period.

Montpensier, Duc de. [Title of Antoine Marie Philippe Louis d'Orléans.] b. at Paris, July 31, 1824; d. at Sanlúcar de Barrameda, near Cádiz, Spain, Feb. 4, 1890. French prince; fifth son of Louis Philippe. He married the infanta Maria Luisa (sister of Queen Isabella II of Spain) in 1846, became infante in 1859, and was an unsuccessful candidate for the Spanish throne in 1870. In 1871 he was exiled to the Balearic Islands, but soon returned. His daughter Mercedes became the wife of King Alfonso XII of Spain in 1878.

Montreal (mont.rę.ôl'). [French, Montréal (môn.rā.ál); sometimes called the "Island City."] City in the province of Quebec, Canada, on Montreal Island and on the St. Lawrence River. It is the largest city, the chief port, and one of the two chief commercial centers of Canada, situated at the head of ocean navigation. The St. Lawrence is crossed here by the Victoria Jubilee Bridge. Montreal is the chief manufacturing center of Canada, with a great diversity of both heavy and light industries. It is the seat of McGill University, the University of Montreal, and several colleges. The Roman Catholic and the Anglican cathedrals are noteworthy. The region was visited by Jacques Cartier in 1535; a settlement called Ville Marie was made by the French in 1642. Montreal was taken by the British in 1760, by the Americans in 1775, and retaken by the British in 1776. The city is noted for its cosmopolitan atmosphere and both French and English are heard on the streets and in the stores. Its closest rival in the financial, commercial, and industrial life of Canada is the city of Toronto. Pop. of city, 903,007 (1941), 1,021,520 (1951); of metropolitan area, 1,395,400 (1951).

Montreal East. [French, Montréal-Est (môn.rā.ál.est).] Northeastern industrial suburb of Montreal, Quebec, Canada, on the St. Lawrence River: large copper and petroleum refining industries. 4,513 (1951).

Montreal Island. [French, Île de Montréal.] Island in S Quebec, Canada, in the St. Lawrence River at the mouth of the Ottawa River. The city of Montreal is located on the island. Length, ab. 32 mi.; area, ab. 201 sq. mi.; pop. 1,319,190 (1951).

Montreal North. [French, Montréal-Nord (môn.rā.ál.nôr).] Town on Montreal Island, Quebec, Canada: a northern suburb of Montreal. In the decade between the last two Canadian censuses its population more than doubled. 6,152 (1941), 14,081 (1951).

Montreal South. [French, Montréal-Sud (môn.rā.ál.sü).] Town in S Quebec, Canada, on the E bank of the St. Lawrence River opposite Montreal: an eastern suburb of the city, linked with it by highway bridge. 4,214 (1951).

Montreal West. [French, Montréal-Ouest (môn.rā.ál.west).] Industrial suburb SW of Montreal, Quebec, Canada, situated on Montreal Island. 3,721 (1951).

Montréjeau (môn.trā.zhō). Town in S France, in the department of Haute-Garonne, on the Garonne River ab. 27 mi. SE of Tarbes. 3,071 (1946).

Montresor (mon'trę.sôr), James Gabriel. b. at Fort William, Scotland, Nov. 19, 1702; d. at New Gardens, Kent, England, Jan. 6, 1776. English military engineer; father of John Montresor. He served as bombardier (1728) at the siege of Gibraltar, and was commissioned (1731) there as practitioner engineer, serving in various capacities until 1754. As chief engineer (1754) with Major General Braddock's force in America, he preceded the army from Alexandria, Va., over the Allegheny Mountains.

Montresor, John. b. at Gibraltar, April 6, 1736; d. 1799. English military engineer; son of James Gabriel Montresor. During the siege of Quebec, he carried dispatches from the governor to General Jeffrey Amherst. He constructed (1764) a chain of redoubts near Niagara and the lines of defense of Philadelphia. He was appointed (Dec. 18, 1775) chief engineer in America. He was called in England to give evidence before a committee of the House of Commons regarding the conduct of the war.

Montreuil (môn.trėy'). [Full name, Montreuil-sous-Bois (-sö.bwä).] Town in N France, in the department of Seine: an eastern suburb of Paris, near Vincennes. It has diverse manufactures, including furniture, porcelain, chemicals, clothing, and electrical equipment. 69,838 (1946).

Montreuil, Eudes de. See Eudes de Montreuil.

Montreuil-sur-Mer (-sür.mer). Town in N France, in the department of Pas-de-Calais, ab. 20 mi. SE of Boulogne. It is an old fortress town with a citadel begun in the 13th century. 2,728 (1951).

Montreux (môn.trė). Health resort in W Switzerland, in the canton of Vaud, near the E end of the Lake of Geneva, SE of Lausanne. It includes the localities of Clarens, Vernex, Le Trait, Bon-Port, Veytaux, Chillon, and Territet. Its mild climate attracts many visitors and foreign residents. There is a famous castle at Chillon. 15,149 (1941).

Montreux Straits Convention. International agreement signed on July 20, 1936, revising the Straits Convention of 1923. It abolished the International Straits Commission, limited movement of warships through the Straits in peacetime, and left to Turkey's discretion the movement of warships through the Straits in wartime. Certain special concessions were made to Russian ships. The convention was brought about when Turkey protested to the League of Nations concerning the demilitarization and freedom of navigation in the Straits called for by the 1923 convention. A protocol accompanying the Montreux Straits Convention gave Turkey the right to remilitarize the Straits.

Montrond-les-Bains (môn.rôn.lā.bàn). [Former name (until 1937), Meylieu-Montrond.] Small town and spa in the department of Loire, France, on the Loire River ab. 30 mi. SW of Lyons. 1,729 (1946).

Montrose (mon'trōz). Unincorporated suburban community in S California, in Los Angeles County, N of Glendale. Under the new urban definition established for use in the 1950 census it was counted with adjoining urban communities; the last official enumeration was 2,710 (1940).

Montrose. City in W Colorado, county seat of Montrose County, on the Uncompahgre River: trading point for a fruit-growing area. 4,964 (1950).

Montrose (mon.trōz', mont.rōz'). Royal burgh and seaport in E Scotland, in Angus, situated on the North Sea at the mouth of the river South Esk, ab. 483 mi. N of London by rail. The town is a holiday resort and fishing port. It became an important linen-weaving center after 1850. Pop. 11,294 (est. 1948).

Montrose, 1st Duke of. A title of Lindsay, David (c1440–95).

Montrose, Earls and Marquises of. Titles held by various members of the Graham family.

Montrouge (môn.rözh). [Former name, Le Grand-Montrouge; Latin, Mons Rubicus.] Town in N France, in the department of Seine, adjoining Paris on the S. It is part of the metropolitan area of Paris and has various industries. 34,735 (1946).

Mont-Royal (môn.rwà.yàl). French name of Mount Royal.

Monts (môn). French word for "mountains" (plural of mont): for entries not found immediately below see the distinguishing element of the name.

Mont-Saint-Michel and Chartres (môn.saṅ.mē.shel'; shàr'trę). Critical work by Henry Adams, privately printed in 1904 and published in 1913. The author contrasts the civilization of the Middle Ages with that of the 20th century by examining the sources of unity in each culture. The symbols which he selects to exemplify the respective eras are the cathedral and the dynamo.

Montserrado (mont.se.rä'dō), Cape. [Former name, Mesurado.] Headland on the coast of W Africa, in Liberia, W of Monrovia.

Montserrat (mont.sę.rat'; Spanish, mōnt.ser.rät'). [Also, Monserrat.] Jagged mountain ab. 30 mi. NW of Barcelona, Spain, famous for its monastery (founded 880), noted for an image of the Virgin. Elevation, ab. 4,072 ft.

Montserrat Island. Island in the Caribbean Sea, NW of Guadeloupe: a British possession, one of the Leeward Islands colony. It is the largest producer of sea-island cotton in the West Indies; tomatoes and limes are also important. It was discovered and named by Columbus in 1493, settled by the British in 1632, and occupied temporarily by the French in 1664 and in 1782. It was formally awarded to Great Britain by the Treaty of Paris in 1783, and has since been uninterruptedly under British control. Capital, Plymouth; area, ab. 32 sq. mi.; pop. 14,329 (1946).

Monts-Maudits (môn.mō.dē). French name of Maladetta.

Mont-St.-Amand (môn.saṅ.tà.mäṅ). See St. Amandsberg.

Mont-St.-Jean (môn.saṅ.zhäṅ). Village in C Belgium, near Waterloo.

Mont-St.-Michel (môn.saṅ.mē.shel). Village in NW France, in the department of Manche, situated on a small rocky islet in the Bay of St.-Michel, ab. 6 mi. W of Avranches. The summit of the mountain is occupied by the abbey of St.-Michel and is a landmark of the region and one of the most remarkable monuments of France, with huge fortified walls and towers, a medieval church, and a monastery. In the Middle Ages, the place was frequently contested between the English and the French. In the 18th and 19th centuries it was used as a prison until it became the property of the French Commission for Historical Monuments. 231 (1946).

Mont-sur-Marchienne (môn.sur.mar.shyen). Town in S central Belgium, in the province of Hainaut, a southeastern suburb of Charleroi: coal mines and metallurgical industries. 11,063 (1947).

Montt (mōnt), Jorge. b. at Santiago, Chile, 1847; d. 1922. Chilean naval officer and politician, president (1891–96) of Chile; son of Manuel Montt. In January, 1891, he sided with the congress against President José Manuel Balmaceda, was given temporary command of the congressional forces, and was a member of the governing junta. After the fall of Balmaceda, he was elected president, assuming office Nov. 6.

Montt, Manuel. b. at Petorca, Chile, Sept. 5, 1809; d. at Santiago, Chile, Sept. 20, 1880. Chilean statesman, president (1851–61) of Chile; father of Jorge and Pedro Montt. A leader of the conservatives, he was president of the house of deputies, minister of foreign affairs (1840), minister of justice and education (1841–45), and minister of the interior (1845–50). After his first term as president, he was reëlected (1856), serving until September, 1861. During this period the country was very prosperous and advances were made in communications, education, and transportation; but the extreme conservative policy of the government led to revolts of the liberals in 1851 and 1858, and to a bloody civil war in 1859. President Montt resigned his office peacefully to his successor, and was subsequently president of the supreme court until his death.

Montt, Pedro. b. June 29, 1848; d. Aug. 16, 1910. President (1906–10) of Chile; son of Manuel Montt. He was elected to the congress of Chile in 1876, and became a leader of the Liberal Party, at various times holding ministerial offices. In 1891 he was sent as minister to the U.S. On Sept. 18, 1906, he was inaugurated president, and continued in office until his death.

Montucla (môn.tü.klà), Jean Étienne. b. at Lyons, France, Sept. 5, 1725; d. at Versailles, France, Dec. 18, 1799. French mathematician. His chief work was Histoire des mathématiques (1758; continued by Joseph Le Français de Lalande).

Montúfar (mōn.tö'fär), Lorenzo. b. in Guatemala, March 11, 1823; d. 1898. Central American jurist, politician, and author. His principal work is Memorias históricas de Centro-América (1881).

Montville (mont'vil). Town in SE Connecticut, in New London County. 4,766 (1950).

Montyon (môn.tyôn), Baron de. [Title of Antoine Jean Baptiste Robert Auget.] b. at Paris, in December, 1733; d. there, Dec. 29, 1820. French philanthropist. He founded various prizes (including the Montyon prize of virtue) for recognizing literary, scientific, and civic accomplishment.

Monument. Column in London, N of the Thames, near London Bridge. It was erected to commemorate the great fire of 1666, and stands close to the spot where the conflagration started. It is a fluted Roman-Doric column designed by Wren, standing on a square base ornamented with reliefs, and supporting on a pedestal above the capital an urn from which flames issue. The height is 202 ft.

Monument. Original name of Bourne, Mass.

Monvel (môn.vel). See Boutet de Monvel.

Monviso (mōn.vē'zō). See Viso, Monte.

Monypenny (mun'i.pen.i), William Flavelle. b. in Ulster, Ireland, Aug. 7, 1866; d. in the New Forest, Hampshire, England, Nov. 23, 1912. British journalist and author. He was assistant editor of the London Times (1893–99), and in 1899 became editor of the Johannesburg Star. He served in the British army during the Boer War (1899–1900), and on the staff of the military governor of Johannesburg, as director of civil supplies (1900–01). In 1903 he became a director of the Times Publishing Company. The first volume of his Life of Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield appeared in 1910 and the second in 1912; George Earle Buckle completed the last four volumes (1920).

Monza (mōn tsa). [Ancient name, Modicia.] City and commune in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Lombardy, in the province of Milano, ab. 9 mi. NE of Milan. It is an old town, dating from Roman times, and was an important medieval trade center. Monza has developed into an industrial town, with manufactures of machinery, electrical equipment, textiles, carpets, hats, and furniture. Pop. of commune, 65,052 (1936); of city, 55,471 (1936).

Monzie (môn.zē), Anatole de. b. at Bazas, Gironde, France, Nov. 22, 1876; d. at Paris, Jan. 12, 1947. French political leader and lawyer, a member (1914–40) of numerous French cabinets. A leader of the Radical Socialist Party, he was a deputy (1908–20, 1924–40) and a senator (1920–24), and served as undersecretary of state for the merchant navy (1913, 1917), finance minister (1924, 1926), minister of public instruction (1925, 1932–33), justice minister (1925), and minister of public works (1925–26, 1932, 1938–40). He was chief sponsor of the Encyclopédie française permanente. After World War II, he was cleared of accusations of aiding the Vichy regime.

Moodkee (müd.kē). See Mudki.

Moody (mö'di). In John Dryden's play Sir Martin Mar-all, a swashbuckler.

Moody. Guardian of Peggy, the country girl, in David Garrick's adaptation of William Wycherley's The Country Wife.

Moody, Dan. b. at Taylor, Tex., June 1, 1893—. American lawyer and politician, governor (1927–31) of Texas. He served (1925–27) as attorney general of Texas.

Moody, Dwight Lyman (Ryther). b. at East Northfield, Mass., Feb. 5, 1837; d. there, Dec. 22, 1899. American evangelist. He was in the shoe business in Boston and Chicago, teaching also in Sunday school, until 1860. In that year he gave up business entirely to do missionary work in the latter city. He founded (1858) a Sunday school that in 1863 became the Illinois Street Church. In 1870 he met Ira D. Sankey, an evangelist and an excellent singer of hymns, and together they carried their evangelical meetings throughout the U.S. and to England. The Gospel Hymns of Moody and Sankey became famous, overshadowing Moody's sermons, which were simple, direct in language, and non-sectarian, preaching the brotherhood of the Gospel. He founded, at Northfield, a seminary for girls (1879), now the Northfield School, and the Mt. Hermon School for boys (1881), and, at Chicago, the Bible Institute for Home and Foreign Missions (1889, now the Moody Bible Institute). He instituted the annual Northfield conferences for Christian workers (1880) and for students (1887).

Moody, Helen Newington Wills. See Wills, Helen.

Moody, James. b. in New Jersey, 1744; d. April 6, 1809. American loyalist, most notable of the spies employed by the British during the American Revolution. Eventually pensioned (1784) by the British government for his service, he settled (1786) in Nova Scotia. His feats (1779 et seq.) during the Revolution included spying on the troops of Washington, Sullivan, and Gates, and intercepting Revolutionary mail.

Moody, John. b. at Jersey City, N.J., May 2, 1868—. American financial analyst. He was a staff member (1890–1900) of Spencer, Trask and Company, bankers, and founded (1900) Moody's Manual of Railroads and Corporation Securities. He founded (1905) and edited the investor's monthly Moody's Magazine, and founded (1909) the annual publication Moody's Analyses of Investments. Author of The Truth About the Trusts (1904), Art of Wall Street Investing (1906), How to Analyze Railroad Reports (1911), Profitable Investing (1925), Fast by the Road (1942), John Henry Newman: His Life and Times (1945), and other books.

Moody, Paul. b. at Newbury, Mass., May 21, 1779; d. July 8, 1831. American inventor of a mechanism to wind yarn from bobbins (1816), an improved "double-speeder" for roping cotton (1819), a machine to rope and spin cotton (1821), and other machines used in cotton manufacturing.

Moody, William Henry. b. at Newbury, Mass., Dec. 23, 1853; d. at Haverhill, Mass., July 2, 1917. American lawyer, U.S. attorney general (1904–06) under Theodore Roosevelt. He was district attorney for the Massachusetts Eastern District (1890–95), a Republican member of Congress (1895–1902), and U.S. secretary of the navy (1902–04). He was an associate justice (1906–10) of the Supreme Court.

Moody, William Vaughn. b. at Spencer, Ind., July 8, 1869; d. at Colorado Springs, Colo., Oct. 17, 1910. American poet and critic. From 1895 to 1903 he served as instructor in the department of English at the University of Chicago. Among his works are Poems (1901), including the "Ode in Time of Hesitation" (1900); The Fire-Bringer (1904) and The Masque of Judgment (1900), the first and second parts respectively of a dramatic trilogy of which the third part, The Death of Eve (1912), was not completed; The Sabine Woman, a play (produced in 1906, and again in 1909 under the title The Great Divide); and The Faith Healer (1909), a play. With Robert Morss Lovett, he wrote A History of English Literature (1902) and First View of English Literature (1905).

Mook (mōk), Hubertus Johannes van. b. at Semarang, Java, 1894—. Dutch colonial official. He entered the Netherlands Indian civil service in 1918 as an economist, for some years was mainly engaged in food relief and agrarian reforms, and was a contributor of many social and economic studies. He was chief of the bureau of economic affairs (1937–42), chairman of the Netherlands delegation for economic negotiations with Japan (1940–41), and lieutenant governor of the Netherlands East Indies (1942). Minister of colonies in the Netherlands government at London (1942–45), he became acting governor of the Netherlands East Indies and the principal negotiator (1945–48) with representatives of the Indonesian Republic.

Mooker Heath (mō'kėr). [Also, Mook Heath (mōk).] Place in the Netherlands, near the Meuse, S of Nijmegen. Here the Spaniards defeated (1574) the Dutch under Louis of Nassau.

Mookerji (mük'ėr.jē), Sir Asutosh. See Mukharji, Sir Asutosh.

Mooltan (mül.tän'). See Multan.

Moon. Satellite of the Earth, making a complete revolution in 27 days, 7 hours, 43 minutes, 11.5 seconds at a mean distance of 239,100 mi. in an orbit with an eccentricity of 0.0549 and a mean inclination to the ecliptic of 5 degrees and 8 minutes. When full it is about 250,000 times as bright as a first-magnitude star, but 470,000 times fainter than the Sun. Its diameter of 2,162 mi. and mass of 8.1 times 10^{19} tons (0.123 that of the Earth) yield a mean density of 3.33 times that of water. It is by far the largest satellite in proportion to its primary (in mass, 1/81) in the solar system, only four being more massive. The synodic or common month is 29 days, 12 hours, 44 minutes, 2.78 seconds, longer than the period of revolution because of the progress of the Earth in its orbit. The mean apparent diameter of the Moon is 31 minutes 05 seconds, but at times greater, and hence when the new moon comes near a node, a total eclipse of the Sun may occur. The Earth can also eclipse the Moon. There is no atmosphere or moisture on the moon and no life is observed. The many surface features which can be seen with telescopes, or even binoculars, include mountains and craters, or walled plains. Since the period of rotation is the same as that of revolution the same side is always presented to the Earth. When sunlit the surface temperature is about 100 degrees Centigrade, and when in shadow, lower than −100 degrees Centigrade.

Moon (mōn). German name of Muhu.

Moon (mön), Mountains of the. Range of mountains placed by Ptolemy in the interior of Africa, containing the sources of the Nile River. They have not been positively identified with any of the mountains of C Africa, as they were only vaguely known to Ptolemy.

Moon, Parker Thomas. b. at New York, June 5, 1892; d. June 11, 1936. American historian. He was an instructor (1915–17, 1919–21) and assistant professor (1921–25) of history, assistant professor (1925–26), associate professor (1926–31), and professor (1931 et seq.) of international relations at Columbia. He served as managing editor (1921–28) and editor (1928 et seq.) of Political Science Quarterly. Author of Imperialism and World Politics (1926), and coauthor of Modern History (1923) and World History (1932).

Moon and Sixpence, The. Novel by W. Somerset Maugham, published in 1919. Charles Strickland, the central character of the story, is supposedly Paul Gauguin, the French post-impressionist painter.

Moon-Calf. Semiautobiographical novel by Floyd Dell, published in 1920.

Mooney (mö'ni), Edward Francis. b. at Mt. Savage, Md., May 9, 1882—. American Roman Catholic clergyman. Ordained to the priesthood in 1909, he taught in Catholic schools at Cleveland, and held a pastorate at Youngstown, Ohio, before being appointed spiritual director of the North American College at Rome in 1923. In 1926 he was named titular archbishop of Irenopolis and sent to India as apostolic delegate, filling that post until his appointment as apostolic delegate to Japan in 1931. In 1933 he was called back to the U.S. to fill the episcopal see of Rochester, N.Y., and in 1937 became the first archbishop of Detroit. He was elevated to the cardinalate in 1946.

Mooney, James. b. at Richmond, Ind., Feb. 10, 1861; d. Dec. 22, 1921. American ethnologist. As a member (1885–1921) of the Bureau of American Ethnology, he studied principally the Cherokee, Kiowa, Siouan, and Algonquian tribes of the South and West. He was a major contributor to the Handbook of American Indians (2 vols., 1907–10).

Mooney, Thomas J. Zechariah. [Called "Tom" Mooney.] b. at Chicago, 1882; d. at San Francisco, March 6, 1942. American labor leader whose conviction (1917) with Warren K. Billings for exploding a bomb which killed ten marchers and injured 40 others during a San Francisco preparedness parade (July 22, 1916) caused worldwide controversy. Mooney was sentenced to hang and Billings to life imprisonment; both protested their innocence. Mooney's sentence was later commuted (Nov. 29, 1918) to life imprisonment. After many investigations and demonstrations, Mooney was pardoned (Jan. 7, 1939). Billings was released later in the same year.

Moon Hoax. Book by Richard Adams Locke, published in 1859, republishing the evidence pretended to have been adduced by Sir John Herschel to the effect that men and animals existed on the moon. This hoax, first perpetrated in an article printed in the New York Sun in August, 1835, brought a fivefold increase in the paper's circulation.

Moonlight Sonata. Name given to Beethoven's Sonata quasi una fantasia in C sharp minor, one of the two which form his Opus 27, published in 1802.

Moon of the Caribbees (kar'i.bēz), The. One-act play by Eugene O'Neill, produced and published in 1918.

Moonstone, The. Novel by Wilkie Collins, published in 1868.

Moor (mōr). See Mór, Hungary.

Moor (mōr), Edward. b. 1771; d. at London, Feb. 26, 1848. English writer on Hindu mythology. He published Hindoo Pantheon (1810), Hindoo Infanticide (1811), The Gentle Sponge, a proposal for reducing the interest on the national debt (1829), and Suffolk Words and Phrases (1823).

Moor (mōr), Emanuel. b. in Hungary, c1862; d. 1931. Hungarian composer. He lived for a time at New York, and then in England, later making his home in Switzerland. His works include three operas, Die Pompadour (1902), Andreas Hofer (1902), and Hochzeitsglocken (1908), also symphonies, concertos, chamber music, and about 500 songs.

Moor, Karl. Principal character in Schiller's play Die Räuber (The Robbers).

Moorcroft (mör'kroft), William. b. in Lancashire, England, c1765; d. in Afghanistan, Aug. 27, 1825. English veterinary surgeon and traveler in central Asia.

Moore (mör, mōr), Addison Webster. b. at Plainfield, Ind., July 30, 1866; d. at London, Aug. 25, 1930. American philosopher and professor. He adhered to the school of instrumental pragmatism founded by John Dewey at Chicago.

Moore, Albert Joseph. b. at York, England, Sept. 4, 1841; d. at Westminster, London, Sept. 25, 1893. English painter. In 1861 he exhibited The Mother of Sisera and Elijah Running before Ahab's Chariot. In 1864 he exhibited at the Royal Academy a fresco of The Seasons, and in 1865 The Marble Seat.

Moore, Alexander Pollock. b. at Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 10, 1867; d. Feb. 17, 1930. American editor and diplomat; husband (married 1912) of Lillian Russell. He was editor in chief (1904 et seq.) of the Pittsburgh Leader, and acquired (1928) the New York Daily Mirror and the Boston Advertiser. He served as U.S. ambassador to Spain (1923–25) and Peru (1928 et seq.).

Moore, Alfred. b. in North Carolina, May 21, 1755; d. at Belfont, N.C., Oct. 15, 1810. American jurist, associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court (1799–1804); son of Maurice Moore.

Moore, Benjamin. b. at Newtown, Long Island, N.Y., Oct. 5, 1748; d. at New York, Feb. 27, 1816. American Episcopal clergyman and educator; father of Clement Clarke Moore. He served as rector of Trinity Church (1800), and as bishop (1801 et seq.). He was professor of logic and rhetoric at Columbia (1784–86), and president of Columbia (1801–11). He was a Loyalist during the Revolution.

Moore, Clarence Bloomfield. b. at Philadelphia, Jan. 14, 1852; d. 1936. American archaeologist. Over a period of more than two decades he investigated Indian mounds in Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, and South Carolina.

Moore, Clement Clarke. b. at New York, July 15, 1779; d. at Newport, R.I., July 10, 1863. American scholar and poet; son of Benjamin Moore. He gave in 1818 a large gift to the General Theological Seminary at New York, on condition that its buildings should be erected on a part of his property in Chelsea Village (Ninth and Tenth avenues and 20th and 21st streets), where they now stand. He was professor of Biblical learning there, and afterward (1821–50) of Oriental and Greek literature. He published Hebrew and Greek Lexicon (1809), Poems (1844), George Castriot (1852), and others. He is best remembered as the author of the verses beginning "'Twas the night before Christmas" (A Visit from Saint Nicholas).

Moore, Clifford Herschel. b. at Sudbury, Mass., March 11, 1866; d. Aug. 31, 1931. American classical scholar and educator. His writings include Histories of Tacitus (1925) and Ancient Beliefs in the Immortality of the Soul (1931).

Moore, Daniel McFarlan. b. at Northumberland, Pa., Feb. 27, 1869; d. June 15, 1936. American electrical engineer, inventor (1924) and first manufacturer (1925) of gaseous conduction lamps to make facsimile photographs through radio. He improved (1929) television and facsimile lamps, and was granted more than 100 U.S. patents for his inventions in radio, x-ray, and tube lighting.

Moore, Douglas Stuart. b. at Cutchogue, N.Y., Aug. 10, 1893—. American composer and teacher. He was organist and lecturer (1921–25) at the Museum of Art, Cleveland, Ohio, and associate professor of music (1926 et seq.) at Columbia University, where he later became MacDowell professor of music. Among his compositions are the theatrical works The Headless Horseman (1936, with libretto by Stephen Vincent Benét), The Devil and Daniel Webster (an opera produced in 1939), and White Wings (1935). His opera Giants in the Earth won the 1951 Pulitzer prize in music.

Moore, Edward. b. at Abingdon, England, March 22, 1712; d. at South Lambeth, London, March 1, 1757. English dramatist and fabulist. He failed in business as a linen draper at London, and began as a writer with his Fables for the Female Sex in 1744. The Foundling, a comedy, was produced at Drury Lane Theatre, London, on Feb. 13, 1748; Gil Blas, a comedy, in 1751; and The Gamester, in which Garrick appeared (and which he partly wrote), at Drury Lane on Feb. 7, 1753. In 1753 he was made editor of The World, a popular paper, which had a number of famous contributors.

Moore, Edward. b. at Cardiff, Wales, Feb. 28, 1835; d. at Chagford, on Dartmoor, England, Sept. 2, 1916. English educator, authority on Dante. He was principal (1864–1913) of St. Edmund Hall, finally winning a long struggle to save it from being absorbed by larger colleges. Founder (1876) of the Oxford Dante Society, he lectured (1886–1903) on Dante at London University College, and lectured (1895 et seq.) at the Taylorian Institution of Oxford. Author of Dante and his Early Biographers (1890) and Studies in Dante (1896–1916, three series), and editor of the standard Oxford Dante (1894, many editions). His great work, on which his reputation is based, is his Contributions to the Textual Criticism of the "Divina Commedia" (1889).

Moore, Edward Caldwell. b. at West Chester, Pa., Sept. 1, 1857; d. at Cambridge, Mass., March 26, 1943. American clergyman and teacher, brother of Frank Gardner Moore. In 1901 he became Parkman professor of theology at Harvard, where he was named (1915) Plummer professor of christian morals. Author of The New Testament in the Christian Church (1904), History of Christian Thought Since Kant (1912), and others.

Moore, Edward Mott. b. at Rahway, N.J., July 15, 1814; d. at Rochester, N.Y., March 3, 1902. American surgeon and educator. He was the first president of the New York state board of health.

Moore, Eliakim Hastings. b. at Marietta, Ohio, Jan. 26, 1862; d. at Chicago, Dec. 30, 1932. American mathematician, contributor of several score papers on geometry, algebra, group theory, theory of functions, and integral equations, best known for his work on general analysis. He taught at Northwestern (1886–87, 1889–92), Yale (1887–89), and Chicago (1892–1931). He left much unpublished work on general analysis, part of which was printed in 1935.

Moore, Eva. b. at Brighton, England, 1870—. English actress. She played in Duke of Killiecrankie, Sweet Kitty Bellairs, Little Lord Fauntleroy, The Dangerous Age, The Holmeses of Baker Street, Without Motive, Wasn't it Odd, and other stage productions. She also appeared in motion pictures, including Chu Chin Chow, Jew Süss, The Flesh is Weak, and La Vie Parisienne. Author of Exits and Entrances: Eva Moore's Memories (1924).

Moore, Frank Gardner. b. at West Chester, Pa., Sept. 25, 1865—. American professor and Latin scholar; brother of Edward Caldwell Moore. He was professor of classical philology (1910–19) and Latin (1919–37) at Columbia. His works include The Roman's World (1936).

Moore, George. b. at Moore Hall, County Mayo, Ireland, 1852; d. Jan. 21, 1933. British novelist, poet, dramatist, and critic; son of George Henry Moore (1811–70). He published two volumes of verse, Flowers of Passion (1877) and Pagan Poems (1881). As a critic he was one of the first in England to champion the impressionist school of painters and the naturalistic school in literature. He was associated with Edward Martyn and William Butler Yeats in founding the Irish Literary Theatre (out of which grew the Abbey Theatre) at Dublin, and wrote two plays, The Strike at Arlingford (1893) and The Bending of the Bough (1900). His other works include A Modern Lover (1883), A Mummer's Wife (1884), Parnell and his Ireland (1887), Confessions of a Young Man (1888), Mike Fletcher (1889), Vain Fortune (1891), Modern Painting (1893), Esther Waters (1894), Impressions and Opinions (1895), Celibates (1895), Evelyn Innes (1898), Sister Teresa (1901; a continuation of Evelyn Innes), The Untilled Field (1903), The Lake (1905), Hail and Farewell (a trilogy including Ave, 1911; Salve, 1912; and Vale, 1914), The Brook Kerith (1916), Héloise and Abélard (1921), Conversations in Ebury Street (1924), and Aphrodite in Aulis (1931).

Moore, George Edward. b. at London, Nov. 4, 1873—. English philosopher. He was professor (1925–39) of philosophy at Cambridge. He wrote Principia Ethica (1903), Ethics (1912), Philosophical Studies (1922), and The Philosophy of G. E. Moore (1943).

Moore, George Foot. b. at West Chester, Pa., Oct. 15, 1851; d. May 16, 1931. American Orientalist and Biblical scholar, professor of the history of religions at Harvard University from 1902 until his retirement in 1928. He was professor of Hebrew at Andover (Massachusetts) Theological Seminary (1883–1902). His works include a commentary on the Book of Judges (1895), The Literature of the Old Testament (1913), History of Religions (2 vols., 1913–19), numerous scientific papers, and others.

Moore, George Henry. b. in Ireland, 1811; d. in Ireland, April 10, 1870. Irish politician; father of George Moore (1853–1933). Elected member of Parliament for County Mayo (1847), he became a leader of the tenants'-rights movement. He was unseated (1857) but reëlected (1868).

Moore, George Henry. b. at Concord, N.H., April 20, 1823; d. at New York, May 5, 1892. American historical writer; son of Jacob Bailey Moore. After serving as librarian (1849 et seq.) of the New York Historical Society, he became superintendent of the Lenox Library at New York in 1872. Among his works are Notes on the History of Slavery in Massachusetts (1866) and History of the Jurisprudence of New York (1872).

Moore, George Thomas. b. at Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 23, 1871—. American cryptogamic botanist. He was physiologist and algologist of the Bureau of Plant Industry of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (1901–02) and head of the laboratory of plant physiology (1902–05). He is best known for his work in perfecting methods of destroying algae and certain bacteria in water supplies (by means of sulphate of copper), and of cultivating the root-tubercle organisms which, in certain plants, aid the appropriation of nitrogen. From 1909 to 1919 he headed the Woods Hole, Mass., marine biological station.

Moore, Sir Henry. b. at Vere, Jamaica, Feb. 7, 1713; d. at New York, Sept. 11, 1769. English colonial governor of New York (1765–69). Troubled by the disquiet in New York caused by the Stamp Act, a boundary dispute with Massachusetts, Indian negotiations, and the failure of the assembly to pass the quartering bill, he generally followed a policy of conciliation. During a term (1755–62) as lieutenant governor of Jamaica, he suppressed (1760) an uprising of the slaves.

Moore, Herbert Fisher. b. at Penacook, N.H., July 10, 1875—. American mechanical engineer. He served (1904 et seq.) as professor and research professor at the University of Illinois engineering experiment station at Urbana, Ill. He has made studies of fatigue in metal construction materials.

Moore, Hugh Kelsea. b. at Andover, Mass., Jan. 3, 1872; d. at Dunedin, Fla., Dec. 18, 1939. American chemical engineer. His inventions include the unsubmerged diaphragm cell (1897), the stationary furnace for retrieving soda from black liquor (1913–15), a new method for the manufacture of calcium arsenate (1925–27), a new acid-resistant hydraulic cement (1926–27), a new method for the conversion of sodium sulphate into caustic soda (1932–34), and a new metal filter cloth (1934).

Moore, Jacob Bailey. b. at Andover, N.H., Oct. 31, 1797; d. at Bellows Falls, Vt., Sept. 1, 1853. American historian; father of George Henry Moore (1823–92). He wrote especially on the history of New Hampshire.

Moore, James. d. at Charlestown, S.C., 1706. American colonial governor (1700–03) in South Carolina.

Moore, James Hobart. b. at Berkshire, N.Y., June 14, 1852; d. July 8, 1916. American business promoter and lawyer. He was the cofounder with his brother William Henry Moore of the "Moore group" of steel and related industries (capitalized at 187 million dollars) which were later absorbed by the U.S. Steel Corporation. Active also in promotion of the National Biscuit Company, the brothers came to grief in their manipulations of the Rock Island railroad system.

Moore, John. b. at Stirling, Scotland, 1729; d. at Richmond, Surrey, England, Jan. 21, 1802. Scottish physician, novelist, and writer of travels; father of Sir John Moore (1761–1809). His best-known work is the novel Zeluco (1786), which Byron attempted to imitate in poetry in his Childe Harold.

Moore, Sir John. b. at Glasgow, Nov. 13, 1761; d. at La Coruña, Spain, Jan. 16, 1809. British general. He was the eldest surviving son of John Moore (1729–1802), author of Zeluco. In 1776 he became ensign of the 51st Foot, and he served as captain lieutenant in Nova Scotia during the American Revolutionary War. He became member of Parliament for Linlithgow in 1784, and served in Corsica (1793–94), but displeased Horatio Nelson and Gilbert Elliot because of his friendliness with the Corsicans and was ordered home. In November, 1797, he joined Ralph Abercromby in Ireland. He was made major general in 1798. He fought (1801) in Egypt, and then returned (1803) to England to train troops for the expected invasion of England by Napoleon. In July, 1808, he sailed for Portugal as second in command to Sir Henry Burrard, and by September the entire command was left to him. He entered Spain on Nov. 11, 1808, but, abandoned by the Spaniards and threatened by the actual presence of Napoleon, was obliged to retreat 250 miles to La Coruña. While the troops were embarking the French attacked them, and, although the British won a brilliant victory, Moore was killed and buried in the citadel during the night of January 16–17. He received a monument in Saint Paul's Cathedral. The Burial of Sir John Moore, by Rev. Charles Wolfe, is one of the most popular English poems.

Moore, John Bassett. b. at Smyrna, Del., Dec. 3, 1860; d. at New York, Nov. 12, 1947. American educator, jurist, and statesman, professor of international law and diplomacy at Columbia University from 1891 until 1924. He was third assistant secretary of state (1886–91), assistant secretary (April–September, 1898), during the Spanish-American War, and secretary and counsel of the American peace commissioners at Paris. He sat (1912–

28) on the Hague Tribunal and was a judge (1921–28) on the Permanent Court for International Justice. His works include Extradition and Interstate Rendition (1891), History and Digest of International Arbitrations (6 vols., 1898), American Diplomacy (1905), Digest of International Law (8 vols., 1906), and others. He collected and edited the Works of James Buchanan (12 vols., 1908–11).

Moore, Marianne. [Full name, Marianne Craig Moore.] b. at St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 15, 1887—. American poet and editor. She was an assistant (1921–25) at the New York Public Library, and acting editor (1925–29) of The Dial. Author of Poems (1921), Observations (1924), Selected Poems (1935), The Pangolin and Other Verse (1936), What Are Years (1941), Nevertheless (1944), and other books of poetry. Her Collected Poems won the 1952 Pulitzer prize for poetry.

Moore, Maurice. b. in New Hanover County, N.C., 1735; d. 1777. American jurist and Revolutionary patriot. He served on the North Carolina governor's council (1760–61), was associate judge of the province, and was judge (1771) at the Hillsboro trial that sentenced 12 Regulators (members of a group that organized to refuse tax payments) to death for treason (though subsequently he was lenient toward the Regulators and was appointed (1775) to a committee to try to induce them to join the Revolutionary cause). He published (1765) a pamphlet condemning taxation without representation.

Moore, Merrill. b. at Columbia, Tenn., Sept. 11, 1903—. American poet. A neuropsychiatrist by profession (M.D., Vanderbilt Medical School, 1928), he is noted for his prolific sonnet-writing; at the age of 25 he had written more than 4,000 sonnets. He was one of the group of writers who published The Fugitive, a magazine of poetry, from 1922 to 1926. Among his books are The Noise that Time Makes (1929) and Six Sides to a Man (1935).

Moore, Nathaniel Fish. b. at Newtown, Long Island, N.Y., Dec. 25, 1782; d. at Highlands of the Hudson, N.Y., April 27, 1872. American classical scholar; nephew of Benjamin Moore. He was professor (1817 et seq.) at Columbia, and was appointed (1838) librarian of Columbia. He served as president (1842–49) of Columbia.

Moore, Raymond Cecil. b. at Roslyn, Wash., Feb. 20, 1892—. American geologist, known for work in regional and structural geology, physiography, stratigraphy, and invertebrate paleontology.

Moore, Richard Bishop. b. at Cincinnati, Ohio, May 6, 1871; d. Jan. 20, 1931. American chemist, specialist in the study of radium and the inert gases. As physical chemist (1912–23) for the U.S. Bureau of Mines, he surveyed Colorado radium deposits, formulated methods for concentrating the ore, and directed the preparation of the first radium salts produced in the U.S. He advocated the use of helium for balloons and dirigibles, and it was partly at his instigation the Navy Department and Congress acted to conserve the gas.

Moore, Thomas. [Pseudonyms: Thomas Little, Thomas Brown the Younger.] b. at Dublin, May 28, 1779; d. at Bromham, near Devizes, England, Feb. 25, 1852. Irish poet. He entered Trinity College, Dublin, in 1794, where he was intimate with Robert Emmet. In 1799 he entered the Middle Temple, London, and in 1800 published his translation of Anacreon. In 1803 and 1804 he traveled in America. He published his Odes and Epistles in 1806 and his Irish Melodies from 1807 to 1834, receiving from them about 500 pounds a year. His lampoons on the regent and his favorites were extremely successful, and were collected in 1813 in The Twopenny Post Bag. On March 25, 1811, he married Bessie Dyke; an actress, and in the same year his friendship for Byron began. Lalla Rookh, for which Longmans agreed to pay 3,000 pounds without having seen it, was published in 1817, National Airs in 1815, and Sacred Songs in 1816. His prose works, besides the political squibs, are Life of Sheridan (1825), The Epicurean (1827), Life of Byron (1830), History of Ireland, and others, besides a number of collections of humorous short papers like The Fudge Family in Paris, all under the pseudonym Thomas Brown the Younger. Moore's Memoirs, Journals, and Correspondence were published 1853–56 by Earl Russell.

Moore, Tom. b. in England, 1878; d. at Ottawa, Canada, July 6, 1946. Canadian labor leader, president (1917–42) of the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress. He was a member of the governing body of the International Labor Organization, and represented Canada at labor conferences at London, Geneva, Washington, Amsterdam, and Kyoto, Japan.

Moore, Veranus Alva. b. at Hounsfield, N.Y., April 13, 1859; d. Feb. 11, 1931. American bacteriologist, pathologist, and educator. He was appointed (1896) professor of comparative pathology and bacteriology at the veterinary college, Cornell University, where he remained until 1929, serving as dean (1908–29), during which time the school became the outstanding institution of its kind. During World War I he helped organize the veterinary corps of the U.S. Army. His works include Principles of Microbiology (1912), Bovine Tuberculosis and its Control (1913), and History of Veterinary Education and Service from 1896 to 1929 (1929).

Moore, Sir William Harrison. b. at London, April 30, 1867; d. at Melbourne, Australia, July 1, 1935. Australian legal writer and professor of law.

Moore, William Henry. b. at Utica, N.Y., Oct. 25, 1848; d. at New York, Jan. 11, 1923. American speculator and promoter of industrial mergers; brother of James Hobart Moore. He was a promoter (1898) of the National Biscuit Company, and an organizer (1898–1900) of one tin and three steel companies, and in 1901 of the American Can Company. After a failure in promoting (1900 et seq.) the Rock Island railway system, he and his associates were arraigned (1916) for misrepresentation and for financial malpractice.

Moore, Willis Luther. b. at Scranton, Pa., Jan. 18, 1856; d. at Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 18, 1927. American meteorologist. He was chief (1895–1913) of the U.S. Weather Bureau. Author of Moore's Descriptive Meteorology (1901) and The New Air World (1922).

Moore, Zephaniah Swift. b. at Palmer, Mass., Nov. 20, 1770; d. June 30, 1823. American educator and Congregational clergyman. He was president (1815–20) of Williams College, which he proposed moving to a more accessible location in the Connecticut valley, and was first president (1821–23) of Amherst College.

Moorea (mō.ō.rā'a). [Also: Aimeo, Eimeo.] Second largest of the Society Islands, belonging (since 1880) to France, in the Pacific Ocean. It is ab. 12 mi. from Tahiti and is often visited by tourists. Area, ab. 50 sq. mi.; pop. 2,838 (1946).

Moorehead (mōr'hed, mōr'-), Warren King. b. at Siena, Italy, March 10, 1866; d. at Boston, Jan. 5, 1939. American archaeologist. He pursued studies at the Smithsonian Institution, and conducted investigations of Indian earthworks and other remains in Ohio. Author of Primitive Man in Ohio (1892) and The Stone Age in North America (1910).

Moores Creek National Military Park (mōrz, mōrz). Military park in SE North Carolina, in Pender County, ab. 25 mi. NW of Wilmington. It preserves the site of a sharp battle fought on Feb. 27, 1776, in which a force of Tories was defeated. Area, ab. 30 acres.

Moorestown (mōrz'toun, mōrz'-). Unincorporated residential community in SW New Jersey, in Burlington County, in the urbanized area of Philadelphia. 7,460 (1950).

Mooresville (mōrz'vil, mōrz'-). Town in W central North Carolina, in Iredell County; manufactures of cotton textiles. It was founded in 1868. Pop. 7,121 (1950).

Moorfields (mōr'fēldz). District of old London, outside the wall, once used as a place of recreation. It received its name from the moor which lay on the N side of the city. Finsbury Square and adjacent streets now cover it.

Moor Fires. Novel by E. H. Young, published in 1916.

Moorfoot Hills (mōr'fut, mor'-). Range of low mountains in S Scotland, in Midlothian and along the Midlothian-Peeblesshire boundary. The highest summit is Blackhope Scar (2,136 ft.).

Moorgate (mōr'gāt'). Postern gate in the old London city wall, built on the moor side of the city in the time of Henry V (c1415). It was rebuilt in 1472 and was pulled down c1750.

Moorhead (mōr'hed, mor'-). City in W Minnesota, county seat of Clay County, on the Red River opposite Fargo, N.D.; shipping point for potatoes, wheat, poultry, and dairy products. It is the seat of Concordia College and a state teachers college. 14,870 (1950).

Moors (mörz). Dark-skinned people of northern coastal Africa, originally Mauretanians (from which the name derives), now an admixture of Arab and Berber stock. Their religion is Mohammedan. In the 8th century they spread into Spain, and eventually crossed the Pyrenees into France, but were stopped by Charles Martel. They warred constantly with the Christians, and established several centers of culture and learning, especially in the Spanish cities of Córdoba, Seville, and Toledo. They were, however, gradually driven out of Spain, the expulsion culminating in the fall of Granada in 1492. Those who accepted Christianity (called Moriscos) were permitted to remain in Spain, but even they were finally expelled in the early 17th century.

Moorshedabad (mör"shed.ä.bäd'). See Murshidabad.

Moose Factory (mös' fak"tọ.ri). Trading post in NE Ontario, Canada, on an island in the Moose River, ab. 12 mi. above its mouth on James Bay. It is an old trading post of the Hudson's Bay Company. 523 (1951).

Moosehead Lake (mös'hed). Lake in C Maine, the largest in the state. It is the source of Kennebec River. Length, ab. 35 mi.; greatest breadth, ab. 10 mi.; area, ab. 120 sq. mi.

Moose Jaw (mös' jô"). City in S Saskatchewan, Canada, ab. 40 mi. W of Regina, in a rich wheat-farming area: gateway to the ranching area to the S. It has large stockyards, and meat-packing, flour-milling, and petroleum-refining industries. 24,355 (1951).

Moose Lake (mös). Lake in W Manitoba, Canada, NW of Lake Winnipeg and ab. 45 mi. E of The Pas. Elevation, ab. 838 ft.; area, ab. 525 sq. mi.

Moose River. River in NE Ontario, Canada, flowing generally NE into James Bay. Its headstreams are the Mattagami and Missinaibi rivers. Length, ab. 65 mi.; to head of Mattagami, ab. 340 mi.

Moosic (mö'sik). Borough in NE Pennsylvania, in Lackawanna County, in a coal-mining area. 3,965 (1950).

Moosilauke (mö'si.lôk), Mount. Mountain in NW New Hampshire, ab. 31 mi. SW of Mount Washington. Elevation, 4,810 ft.

Moosup (mö'sup). Unincorporated community in E Connecticut, in Windham County, in Plainfield town: manufactures of woolen goods and cotton thread. 2,909 (1950).

Moppo (môp'ō). Japanese name of Mokpo.

Mopsa (mop'sạ). In Sir Philip Sidney's romance Arcadia, a deformed country girl; the daughter of Dametas.

Mopsa. Shepherdess in Shakespeare's The Winter's Tale.

Mopsuestia (mop.sọ.es'chi.ạ). [Later Latin name, Hadriana Mopsuhestia; modern village name, Misis.] In ancient geography, a city of Cilicia, S Asia Minor, on the Pyramus River E of Tarsus. The city was favored by the emperor Hadrian and received special privileges from him; it was renamed in his honor.

Mopsus (mop'sus). In Greek mythology, the name of two seers: 1. A seer of the Lapithae, engaged in the famous battle between the Lapithae and the Centaurs. He joined the Calydonian boar hunt and was one of the heroes of the Argonauts' expedition. 2. A son of Apollo, who won a divining contest against the Greek seer Calchas by divining the number of figs on a tree.

Moquegua (mō.kā'gwä). Department in S Peru, traversed by the main western range of the Andes. Previous to 1879 it included also the provinces of Tacna and Arica (the latter now in Chile). Capital, Moquegua; area, ab. 5,550 sq. mi.; pop. 42,647 (est. 1950).

Moquegua. Town in S Peru, capital of Moquegua department. It has been devastated several times by earthquakes, the last time in 1868. Pop. 3,888 (1940).

Moqui (mō'kē). Name formerly applied to the Hopi Indian tribe.

Mór (mōr). [German, Moor.] Town in NW Hungary, ab. 37 mi. W of Budapest. Here in December, 1848, the Austrians defeated the Hungarians. Pop. ab. 10,000.

Mora (mō'rä). Town in C Spain, in the province of Toledo, ab. 18 mi. SE of Toledo: olive-oil market. 10,441 (1940).

Móra (mō'rô), Ferenc. b. at Kiskúnfélegyháza, Hungary, 1879; d. at Szeged, Hungary, 1934. Hungarian novelist, a representative of regionalism in Hungarian literature. Author of A festő halála (The Death of a Painter, 1921), Ének a búzamezőkről (Song of the Wheat Fields, 1927), and Arany koporsó (Golden Coffin, 1932).

Mora (mō'rä), José María Luis. b. at Chamacuero, Michoacán, Mexico, in October, 1794; d. at Paris, July 14, 1850. Mexican historian.

Mora, Juan. b. at San José, Costa Rica, July 12, 1784; d. there, in September, 1854. Costa Rican statesman, president during two terms (1825–33).

Mora, Juan Rafael. b. at San José, Costa Rica, Feb. 8, 1814; executed at Puntarenas, Costa Rica, Sept. 30, 1860. Costa Rican politician, president (1849–59) of Costa Rica. He was vice-president and acting president in 1848, and president from November, 1849, to Aug. 14, 1859, when he was deposed and banished. Attempting a counter-revolution in 1860, he was captured and shot.

Moradabad (mō.räd.ä.bäd', mō.rad'ạ.bad). [Also, Muradabad.] District of Uttar Pradesh, N Union of India, situated ab. 75 mi. E of Delhi: wheat, rice, barley, sugar cane, oilseeds, and cotton. Capital, Moradabad; area, ab. 2,288 sq. mi.; pop. 1,660,955 (1951).

Moradabad. [Also, Muradabad.] Capital of the district of Moradabad, Uttar Pradesh, Union of India, on the Ramganga River ab. 97 mi. E of Delhi: trading center and growing industrial city, with several cotton mills. 161,854 (1951).

Moraes Barros (mō.rīs' bär'rös), Prudente José de. b. at Itú, Brazil, 1841; d. at Piracicaba, Brazil, Dec. 3, 1902. Brazilian politician and lawyer, first civilian president (1894–98) of Brazil. He was a prominent advocate of republican principles from 1871, was one of the three republicans elected (1885) to the imperial parliament, and after the revolution of 1889 was governor of São Paulo and president of the constituent assembly (1889–90). In 1893 he was president of the national senate, and on Feb. 28, 1894, was elected president of Brazil.

Morais (mō.rīs'), Antônio de. [Full name, Antônio de Morais Silva.] b. at Rio de Janeiro, Aug. 1, 1755; d. at Recife, Brazil, April 11, 1824. Brazilian lexicographer who organized and published in 1789 a Dicionário da Língua Portuguesa (2 vols.) which became famous and is still one of the best Portuguese dictionaries.

Morais (mō.rā'is), Sabato. b. at Leghorn (Livorno), Italy, April 13, 1823; d. at Philadelphia, Nov. 11, 1897. Jewish rabbi, founder and first president (1886–97) of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, at New York.

Morakanabad (mō.ra.kan'ạ.bad). Grand vizier of Vathek in William Beckford's tale Vathek.

Morales (mō.rä'lās), Agustín (or Augustin). b. at La Paz, Bolivia, 1810; assassinated there, Nov. 28, 1872. Bolivian politician and general. He led the revolution which overthrew Mariano Melgarejo, Jan. 15, 1871, was immediately proclaimed president, and held the post until his death.

Morales, Luis de. [Called El Divino, meaning "the Divine."] b. at Badajoz, Spain, c1509; d. there, 1586. Spanish religious painter. He worked on the decoration of the Escorial, in the service of Philip II of Spain.

Morales Bermúdez (ber.mö'ᵺhes), Remijio. b. at Pica, Chile, Sept. 30, 1836; d. at Lima, Peru, March 31, 1894. Peruvian soldier and statesman, president (1890–94) of Peru.

Moral Re-Armament. See under Buchman, Frank Nathan Daniel.

Moramanga (mō.rä.mäng'gä). Town on the island of Madagascar, SE Africa, at the junction of the railway line from Tamatave to Tananarive with a branch line running N to the Lake Alaotra district. Pop. ab. 4,000.

Moran (mọ.ran'), Edward. b. at Bolton, England, Aug. 19, 1829; d. at New York, June 9, 1901. American marine and figure painter; brother of Peter and Thomas Moran. He came to America in 1844.

Moran, Leon. b. at Philadelphia, 1863; d. Aug. 4, 1941. American marine and figure painter; son and pupil of Edward Moran.

Moran, Patrick Francis. b. at Leighlinbridge, Ireland, Sept. 16, 1830; d. at Sydney, Australia, Aug. 16, 1911. Australian Roman Catholic prelate. After a distinguished career as a scholar in the field of Irish Catholic history, he became (1872) bishop of Ossory, Ireland, devoting himself energetically to establishing charitable and educational institutions. He was appointed archbishop of Sydney in 1884 and was created a cardinal in 1885. He was an advocate of Australian federation in early days of the federation movement and an ardent believer in Irish home rule.

Moran, Percy. b. at Philadelphia, 1862; d. March 25, 1935. American genre painter, whose themes were often taken from American history; son and pupil of Edward Moran.

Moran, Peter. b. at Bolton, England, March 4, 1842; d. Nov. 9, 1914. American painter of landscape and animals; brother and pupil of Edward and Thomas Moran.

Moran, Thomas. b. at Bolton, England, Jan. 12, 1837; d. Aug. 25, 1926. American landscape painter; brother and pupil of Edward Moran. He came to America in 1844. He went to Yellowstone Park in 1871, and many of his subjects are from that region and Mexico. Two of his Colorado paintings were purchased for the U.S. Capitol.

Morand (mo.räⁿ), Paul. b. at Paris, 1888—. French diplomat and writer. Author of novels including Tendres Stocks (1921), Ouvert la nuit (1922), and Fermé la nuit (1923); and of travel books like Rien que la terre (1926). His diplomatic career (1912–44) culminated in appointments as Vichy ambassador to Rumania (1943–44) and to Switzerland (1944). He refused to return from Switzerland after the Allied liberation (1944) of France.

Moran of the Lady Letty (mō.ran′; let′i). Romance by Frank Norris, published in 1898.

Moranzoni (mō.rän.tsō′nē), Roberto. b. at Bari, Italy, Oct. 5, 1882—. Italian opera conductor. He served at the Paris Opéra, and at Covent Garden, London, made his American debut with the Boston National Opera Company, and directed (1917 et seq.) at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, making his debut there with a performance of Aïda. He conducted (1925 et seq.) for the Chicago Civic Opera Company.

Morat (mo.rȧ). [German, Murten.] Town in W Switzerland, in the canton of Fribourg, situated on the Lake of Morat. It is a medieval town, near the boundary between the German and French language areas in Switzerland. On June 22, 1476, the Swiss gained a decisive victory here over Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy. 2,405 (1941).

Morat, Lake of. [German, Murtensee.] Lake in Switzerland, surrounded by the cantons of Fribourg and Vaud, ab. 2½ mi. E of the Lake of Neuchâtel, into which it drains. Length, ab. 5½ mi.; area, ab. 9 sq. mi.

Moratalla (mō.rä.tä′lyä). Town in SE Spain, in the province of Murcia, ab. 39 mi. W of Murcia: manufactures soap and textiles; distilleries. 14,536 (1940).

Moratín (mō.rä.tēn′), Leandro Fernández de. [Called the "Spanish Molière."] b. at Madrid, March 10, 1760; d. at Paris, June 21, 1828. Spanish dramatist and poet; son of N. F. de Moratín. His works include the plays El Viejo y la niña (The Old Man and the Young Girl, 1790), La Comedia nueva (1792), El Barón (1803), La Mogigata (The Female Hypocrite, 1804), and El Sí de las niñas (The Girls' Yes, 1806), his greatest success. He also wrote a prose version of Shakespeare's Hamlet (never performed), and translated and altered Molière's École des maris and Le Médecin malgré lui.

Moratín, Nicolás Fernández de. b. at Madrid, July 20, 1737; d. there, May 11, 1780. Spanish poet. He wrote the first Spanish play constructed according to the French model, a comedy, La Petimetra (The Female Fribble), printed 1762. In 1770 he produced on the stage a tragedy, Hormesinda, on the canons of Racine and Corneille. He wrote the epic De las naves de Cortés destruidas (Destruction of Cortés's Ships, 1785), the didactic Diana (1765), and others.

Moratuwa (mō.ra.tō′wą). City on the island of Ceylon, ab. 12 mi. S of Colombo. It is a minor seaport and also exports, through Colombo, coconuts, cacao, and rubber. 50,700 (1946).

Moraunt (mō.rȧnt′), Sir. See Morhault, Sir.

Morava (mô′rä.vä). [German, March; Latin, Marus.] River in Moravia, Czechoslovakia. It joins the Danube ab. 6 mi. W of Bratislava. Length, ab. 240 mi.; navigable for ab. 120 mi. in its lower course.

Morava. [Latin, Margus.] Principal river of Yugoslavia. It is formed by the union of the Western and Southern Morava, and joins the Danube by two mouths ab. 30 mi. SE of Belgrade. Length to headwaters, ab. 300 mi.

Morava-Slezska (-sles′kä). Czech name of Moravia-Silesia.

Moravia (mō.rā′vi.ą). [Czech, Morava (mô′rä.vä); German, Mähren; French, Moravie (mo.rȧ.vē).] Region and historic country in E central Europe, now a part of Czechoslovakia. Moravia is noted for cattle raising, sugar, cereal and grain production, as well as for industries which center upon the coal and iron fields near Moravská Ostrava. Inhabited by Celts in early Roman times, it was occupied from the 1st to the 6th centuries A.D. by Germanic tribes. Their place was taken by the Slavic Moravians in the great migrations between the 5th and 8th centuries; the region became the center of a Moravian empire in the last quarter of the 9th century. In the 9th century German settlers and missionaries from Franconia and Bavaria entered the country and to counteract them Byzantine monks were called in by the native rulers. Christianized by Cyril and Methodius after 863, the country was under native Moravian, then under Hungarian, Polish, and Bohemian rulers and became part of the Holy Roman Empire. From 1029 on it shared the fate of Bohemia. It was an Austrian Kronland (crownland) in the 19th century, separated from Bohemia in 1849, and torn by strife between German and Czech nationalities. It became part of Czechoslovakia in 1918. Its N and S borderlands were incorporated into Germany in 1938, while the C part belonged to the rump republic of Czechoslovakia. In 1939 it became in its totality part of the German protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia. Czechoslovak sovereignty was restored in 1945, and the German population was subsequently expelled.

Moravia (mō.rā′vyä), Alberto. [Original name, Alberto Pincherle.] b. at Rome, 1907—. Italian novelist, journalist, and critic. He won fame in Italy with his first novel, Gli Indifferenti (1929). It was translated into English under the title The Indifferent Ones (1932). Others of his works are Le Ambizioni sbagliate (1935), translated into English as The Wheel of Fortune (1937), Agostino (1945), translated into English as Two Adolescents, and La Romana (1948), a best seller both in Italy and in the U.S., where it was published under the title The Woman of Rome (1949). Author also of Conjugal Love (1951), The Conformist (1951), and The Fancy Dress Party (1952).

Moravians (mō.rā′vi.ąnz). People of Moravia, descendants of the Slavs who in the 6th century settled in what is now the C part of Czechoslovakia. Their Slavic language, an admixture of Czech and Slovak, belongs to the Western group of the Slavic subfamily of Indo-European languages.

Moravians. Members of the Christian denomination which traces its origin to John Huss. Its members were expelled (1627) from Bohemia and Moravia, but a remnant settled (1722) in Herrnhut, Saxony (whence the brethren are sometimes, in Germany, called Herrnhuter). The ministers are bishops (not diocesan), presbyters, and deacons. The worship is liturgical. The members of the denomination believe in the Scriptures as the only rule of faith and practice, and maintain the doctrines of the total depravity of human nature, the love of God the Father, the actual humanity and godhead of Jesus Christ, the atonement, the work of the Holy Spirit, good works as the fruit of the Spirit, the second coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead. The Moravians have been especially noted for their energy in missionary work.

Moravian Snow Mountains. See Altvater Mountains.

Moravia-Silesia (mō.rā′vi.ą.sī.lē′zhą, -shą; si-). [Czech, Morava-Slezska; German, Mähren-Schlesien; French, Moravie-Silésie.] Former territorial unit (until 1948 a province) of Czechoslovakia, bounded on the NW by Bohemia, on the S by Austria, on the SE and E by Slovakia, and on the NE by Poland. Capital, Brno; area, ab. 10,351 sq. mi.; pop. 3,135,180 (1947).

Moravie-Silésie (mo.rȧ.vē.sē.lā.zē′). French name of Moravia-Silesia.

Moravská Ostrava (mô′raf.ska ôs′trä.vä). See under Ostrava.

Moravský Beroun (mô′raf.skē be′rōn). See Beroun.

Morawetz (mor'ą.wets), Victor. b. at Baltimore, April 3, 1859; d. at Charleston, S.C., May 18, 1938. American lawyer and railroad counsel.

Morax (mo.räks), René. b. at Morges, Switzerland, 1873—. Swiss author and dramatist writing in French. Together with Arthur Honegger he produced and staged Le Roi David (1921).

Moray (mur'i) or Morayshire (mur'i.shir). [Former name, Elgin or Elginshire.] Maritime county in N Scotland. It is bounded on the N by Moray Firth and the North Sea, on the E by Banffshire, on the S by Invernessshire, and on the W by Nairnshire. The county is hilly, and mountainous in the S part. The coastline is generally low and sandy. Barley and oats are the principal crops raised, the lowlands in the vicinity of Moray Firth having been an important grain-growing district before the 18th century. Moray raises some beef cattle, and also sheep. The industries of the county, aside from agriculture, include shipbuilding, stone quarrying, and distilling. Elgin is the county seat; area, 476 sq. mi.; pop. 48,211 (1951).

Moray, Earl of. A title of Henry of Lancaster (c1299–1361).

Moray, Earl of. Title held by various members of the Stewart family.

Moray Firth. [Latin, Vara Aestuarium.] Arm of the North Sea, in N Scotland. It is usually defined as extending between Tarbat Ness, in the county of Ross and Cromarty, and the mouth of the river Lossie, at Lossiemouth, in Moray. Length, ab. 30 mi.

Morazán (mō.rä.sän'). Department in NE El Salvador, bordering on Honduras: food crops; gold and silver mining. Capital, San Francisco; area, 909 sq. mi.; pop. 104,976 (est. 1942).

Morazán, Francisco. b. at Tegucigalpa, Honduras, in October, 1792; executed at San José, Costa Rica, Sept. 15, 1842. Honduran statesman and politician, president (1830–39) of the Central American Confederation. Morazán made a vain attempt to keep the union together by force and was supported by El Salvador, but he was finally defeated in Guatemala, on March 19, 1840, and fled to Peru. In April, 1842, he invaded Costa Rica with a view to making it the basis of federal reorganization. He was at first successful, and assumed the executive power of Costa Rica in July, but was deposed by a counterrevolution (Sept. 11), captured, and shot.

Morbihan (môr.bē.äṅ). Department in NW France, bounded by Côtes-du-Nord on the N, Ille-et-Vilaine on the E, Loire-Inférieure and the Bay of Biscay on the S, and Finistère on the W. It is part of the region of Brittany. During the French Revolution it was one of the centers of the insurrection of the west and the focus of violent combats between royalist and revolutionary forces. There are many archaeological and historical monuments in the department. Agriculture produces grain, fruits, and vegetables. There are good pasture lands along the coast and numerous forests. The foremost industry is food canning. There are fisheries and fishing ports. Capital, Vannes; area, 2,738 sq. mi.; pop. 506,884 (1946).

Morcar (môr'kär) or Morkere (môr'ker''ę). [Title, Earl of the Northumbrians.] fl. 1066. English nobleman; brother of Edwin, Earl of the Mercians. He aided in the revolt (1065) against Tostig, Earl of the Northumbrians, and was chosen earl with the consent of Harold, Tostig's brother. He was defeated (1066) near York by the Norse and did not help Harold at Hastings. He submitted to William the Conqueror and was taken to the court in Normandy (1067), but rebelled (1068) although he soon again submitted. Having lost his earldom in the general overthrow of the Saxons by the Norman followers of William, he joined (1071) the rebels in the Isle of Ely, who were led according to tradition by Hereward, and remained there until forced to surrender, when he was imprisoned in Normandy. He was transferred to Winchester and probably died there.

Morcillo Rubio de Auñon (môr.sē'lyō rō'ʙyō dā ou.nyōn'), Diego. d. at Lima, Peru, March 12, 1730. Spanish prelate, acting viceroy (1716, 1720–24) of Peru.

Mordacq (môr.dȧk), Jean Jules Henri. b. at Clermont-Ferrand, France, Jan. 12, 1868; drowned at Paris, April 12, 1943. French army commander, chief military aide of Georges Clemenceau during World War I. He urged (1918) that the war against Germany be continued until complete surrender and total disarmament of the German army had been attained. He commanded (1923) French occupation forces in Germany. His death by drowning in the Seine was reported by the Vichy government as a suicide.

Mordaunt (môr'dąnt), Charles. [Titles: 3rd Earl of Peterborough, 1st Earl of Monmouth (of the 2nd creation).] b. 1658; d. at Lisbon, Portugal, Oct. 25, 1735. English general and admiral; son of John Mordaunt (1627–75). He intrigued in the Netherlands and England against James II, and in the former country was intimately associated with John Locke. In 1689 he was appointed councilor to William III and first lord of the treasury, and was created Earl of Monmouth. Later he incurred the displeasure of the court, eventually losing all his places, and in 1697 was imprisoned for three months in the Tower of London. On the accession of Anne he was again in favor at court. In 1705 he was appointed admiral and commander in chief of the fleet jointly with Sir Cloudesley Shovel, and was largely responsible for the capture of Barcelona on September 28. However, he marched on Valencia and, if the English fleet had not arrived (1706), Barcelona would have been lost. Ordered to bring support to the Archduke Charles (later the emperor Charles VI), who claimed the Spanish throne as Charles III, he could transport only 400 men; and then he went off to Italy to arrange for more troops and made an unauthorized and exorbitant loan. In January, 1708, his conduct in Spain was investigated by the House of Lords, and he was acquitted. In 1710 he was ambassador extraordinary to Vienna, and in 1711 to Frankfort on the Main. He was considered eccentric, and was devoted to the society of literary men, especially Swift, Pope, Arbuthnot, and Gay.

Mordaunt, Elinor. [Maiden name, Evelyn May Clowes.] b. in Nottinghamshire, England, c1877; d. 1942. Anglo-Irish novelist, traveler, and writer of short stories and books for children. She lived and traveled in Mauritius, Australia, the Balkans, Italy, and Morocco, writing accounts of most of these areas. She went (1923) around the world for the London Daily News. Author of the novels The Garden of Contentment (1902), Ship of Solace (1911), The Cost of It (1912), Lu of the Ranges (1913), Simpson (1913), Bellamy (1914), The Island (1914), The Family (1915), The Rose of Youth (1915), Shoe and Stocking Stories (1915), The Processionals (1918; American title, While There's Life), The Little Soul (1921), Laura Crichton (1921), Father and Daughter (1928; American title, Too Much Java), Full Circle (1931; American title, Gin and Bitters), Mrs. Van Kleek (1933), Prelude to Death (1936), Roses in December (1939), Death, It Is (1939), Return to Spring (1940), Hobby House (1940), Judge Not (1940), and Tropic Heat (1941). Sinabada (1937) is her autobiography.

Mordaunt, Sir John. d. 1504. English politician. He was chosen (1487) speaker of the House of Commons. He became (1504) chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, and served for many years as a privy councilor.

Mordaunt, John. [Title, 1st Baron Mordaunt of Turvey.] b. c1490; d. 1562. English courtier; son of Sir John Mordaunt (d. 1504). He was a privy councilor and general surveyor of the king's woods (1526), and took part in the trial (1536) of Anne Boleyn.

Mordaunt, John. [Title, 1st Earl of Peterborough.] d. 1642. English nobleman; father of John Mordaunt (1627–75).

Mordaunt, John. [Titles: 1st Baron Mordaunt of Reigate, Viscount Mordaunt.] b. 1627; d. at Fulham, England, June 5, 1675. English nobleman, conspirator on behalf of Charles II; son of John Mordaunt (d. 1642). He attempted a revolt against Parliament and was forced to flee to Calais. He was sent (1660) by Charles as a messenger to the mayor of London and, at the Restoration, welcomed the king to the city.

Mordaunt, Sir John. b. 1697; d. at Bevis Mount, Southampton, England, Oct. 23, 1780. English general. He commanded (1757) the unsuccessful expedition against Rochefort.

Mordecai (môr'dę.kī, môr.dę.kā'ī). [Also, Mardochai.] In the Bible, according to the book of Esther, a Jew of the tribe of Benjamin, who lived in captivity in the time of Xerxes. He accepted a post at the court in order to be near his cousin and adopted daughter, Esther, who had been elevated to the rank of queen, and with her help frustrated the machinations of Haman against the Jews. In remembrance of this deliverance the feast of Purim is still celebrated by orthodox Jews in the month of Adar (March–April). The resemblance of the names Mordecai and Esther to Marduk and Ishtar has made scholars suspect a Hebrew adaptation of a Babylonian myth in the story.

Mordecai. In George Eliot's novel Daniel Deronda, a Jew who believes himself inspired with a mission to elevate and reunite the Jewish people.

Mordecai (môr'dẹ.kī), Alfred. b. at Warrenton, N.C., Jan. 3, 1804; d. at Philadelphia, Oct. 23, 1887. American soldier and civil engineer. He resigned (1861) from the army because both sides in the Civil War had his sympathies. He was assistant engineer (1863–66) of the Mexico and Pacific Railroad, and treasurer and secretary (1867–87) of canal and coal companies controlled by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

Mordecai, Alfred. b. at Philadelphia, June 30, 1840; d. Jan. 20, 1920. American army officer; son of Alfred Mordecai (1804–87).

Mordkin (môrt'kin), Mikhail. b. c1882; d. 1944. Russian dancer. He appeared for a number of years at Moscow, made his American debut in Coppélia (1909–10), with Anna Pavlova, at the Metropolitan Opera House, and subsequently appeared at other American cities and at London.

Mordovian Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic (môr.dō'vi.ạn). [Also, Mordvinian Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic.] Republic of the U.S.S.R., in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, centered ab. 250 mi. SE of Moscow. The land is mostly flat with fertile soils. The population is mostly rural and is engaged in raising wheat, barley, oats, rye, tobacco, and sugar beets, as well as pigs and cattle. The republic was formed in 1934. Capital, Saransk; area, ab. 9,843 sq. mi.; pop. 1,188,598 (1939), less than half Mordvins.

Mordred (môr'drẹd). See Modred.

Mordvinian Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic (môrd.vin'i.ạn). See Mordovian Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic.

Mordvins (môrd'vinz). Finno-Ugric people of central Russia, largely in the Mordovian Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic. They numbered ab. 1,451,000 in 1939, but are believed to have been reduced to less than 500,000 after World War II. Their language, usually called Mordvin, belongs to the Finno-Permian group of the Finno-Ugric family of languages. Two sharply distinct dialects, Erzya and Moksha, exist. The Mordvins have lived in their present homeland since their first entry into history, in the 4th century A.D. They have never been a national unit; they were under Turkic rule from the 12th century to the 16th, when they came under Russian rule.

More (mōr), Sir Anthony. See Moro, Attoni (or Atonis).

More, Ben. See Ben More.

More, Hannah. b. at Stapleton, Gloucestershire, England, Feb. 2, 1745; d. at Clifton, England, Sept. 7, 1833. English religious writer. She was educated by her father, and in 1757 joined her other sisters in establishing a school at Bristol. In 1762 she published The Search after Happiness, a pastoral drama. In 1773 and 1774 she visited London, and became an intimate of Garrick and his wife; she also met Joshua Reynolds, Edmund Burke, Samuel Johnson, and Mrs. Elizabeth Montagu. Garrick produced two of her dramas, Percy (1777) and Fatal Falsehood (1779). In 1782 she published Sacred Dramas. After the death (Jan. 20, 1779) of Garrick her religious tendencies became stronger. In 1787 she was attracted by William Wilberforce's agitation against the slave trade, and was much interested in establishing schools among the poor as an antidote to the prevailing atheism. She wrote in 1792 Village Politics, by Will Chip, followed by Cheap Repository Tracts (1795–98), one of which was "The Shepherd of Salisbury Plain." Some of them were illustrated by John Bewick. The organization which circulated them developed into the Religious Tract Depository in 1799. Her other works are Thoughts on the Importance of the Manners of the Great to General Society (1788), Strictures on the Modern System of Female Education (1799), Coelebs in Search of a Wife (1809), which, in the form of a novel, depicted the corrupt Regency society, and which was a great success, Practical Piety (1811), and Christian Morals (1813).

More, Henry. b. at Grantham, England, Oct. 12, 1614; d. at Cambridge, England, Sept. 1, 1687. English philosophical writer. His philosophical works (largely mystical and Platonic) were published in 1678. His chief work in verse is The Song of the Soul.

More, Louis Trenchard. b. at St. Louis, Mo., April 9, 1870; d. 1944. American physicist. He became (1900) professor of physics at the University of Nebraska and was named (1916) dean of the graduate school at the University of Cincinnati. He wrote The Limitations of Science, The Dogma of Evolution, and Life of Isaac Newton.

More, Nicholas. b. in England; d. at Philadelphia, 1689. English colonist who became (1684) first chief justice of Pennsylvania. He was speaker (1684) of the assembly, and was appointed (1686) by William Penn to the board of commissioners which was to serve as the provincial executive. Charges including allegations that he convened circuit courts at inconvenient times, summoned juries illegally, and forced a jury to return an unjust verdict resulted (1685) in his suspension from his judicial position and from the assembly.

More, Paul Elmer. b. at St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 12, 1864; d. at Princeton, N.J., March 9, 1937. American critic and writer, advocate with Irving Babbitt of the New Humanism. He was instructor of Sanskrit at Harvard (1894–95) and Bryn Mawr (1895–97), literary editor of the Independent (1901–03) and the New York Evening Post (1903–09), editor (1909–14) of the Nation, and later a lecturer in Greek philosophy and the history of Christian thought at Princeton. His critical essays were collected in the Shelburne Essays (11 vols., 1904–21). He was the author also of Life of Benjamin Franklin (1900), Platonism (1917), The Religion of Plato (1921), Hellenistic Philosophies (1923), The Christ of the New Testament (1924), The Demon of the Absolute (1928), The Catholic Faith (1931), and The Sceptical Approach to Religion (1934). He translated The Judgment of Socrates (1898), Prometheus Bound (1899), and Century of Indian Epigrams (1898).

More, Sir Thomas. [Also, Saint Thomas More.] b. at London, Feb. 6, 1477 or 1478; executed there, July 6, 1535. English statesman and author. He was the son of Sir John More, a London barrister, and Agnes, daughter of Thomas Graunger. He began his studies at Saint Anthony's School on Threadneedle Street, London, under Nicholas Holt, but at about the age of 12 or 13 was placed in the household of John Morton, archbishop of Canterbury (later cardinal) and chancellor, where he continued his education until 1492, when he entered Canterbury Hall (later merged in Christ Church), Oxford. He entered New Inn, London, in 1494, and Lincoln's Inn in 1496. In 1499 he met Erasmus in England, and corresponded with him throughout the rest of his life. For four years he considered becoming a priest, during which time, although a layman, he lectured (at the invitation of William Grocyn) on The City of God at Saint Lawrence Jewry and lived, without vow, with the monks of the Charterhouse. However, finding himself without a vocation for the life of a priest, he married (c1504) Jane, daughter of John Colt, by whom he had four children: Margaret (b. 1505, married William Roper in 1521), Elizabeth (b. 1506, married William Dauncey in 1525), Cecily (b. 1507, married Giles Heron in 1525), and John (b. 1509, married Anne Cresacre in 1529). His home was "the old Barge," Bucklesbury, London. He was first elected to Parliament in 1504, where his opposition to Henry VII's extravagant demands for a dowry for his daughter Margaret, lately married to James IV of Scotland, may have necessitated a protective exile in 1508 he visited the universities of Paris and Louvain. He greeted Henry VIII's coronation in 1509 with exuberant congratulatory Latin. He became under-sheriff of London in 1510. In 1511 his first wife died; in the same year he married Alice Middleton, a widow. In May, 1515, he was sent to Flanders to settle disputes with merchants there, and in August, 1517, to Calais on similar business. Returning in October, he was appointed one of the king's councilors and a judge of the court of requests. In June, 1520, he was with King Henry at the Field of the Cloth of Gold. In 1521 he was knighted and made undertreasurer, in April, 1523, speaker of the House of Commons, in 1524 high steward of Oxford University, and in 1525 high steward of Cambridge University and chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. In 1524 he was buying property at Chelsea, where he moved his home from London. On Oct. 26, 1529, he succeeded Thomas Wolsey as chancellor. He opened the Parliament of Nov. 3, 1529, to which Henry complained of the divided allegiance of his clergy; the clergy completely surrendered to the king as "Head of the Church" on May 15, 1532, and on the next day More resigned the chancellorship. An act of Parliament in March, 1534 (25 Henry VIII, 22), fixed the succession in the issue of Anne Boleyn and demanded oaths of agreement to the act. To this More was willing to swear, but the oath as presented to him contained an illegal rider, introduced by Thomas Audley and Cromwell (made legal by a later statute: 26 Henry VIII, 2) which gave the king theological power over the church. To this More refused to swear, but he made no statement against the oath or those who took it. Nevertheless, he was committed to the Tower of London on April 17, 1534, and, though guilty of no word or deed against the king, on July 1, 1535, was charged with silence and convicted of treason for what the court believed he thought. Five days later he was beheaded on Tower Hill. His feast day is July 6; he was beatified by Pope Leo XIII on Dec. 29, 1886, and canonized by Pope Pius XI on May 19, 1935. His literary reputation is based chiefly on the Latin work Utopia (published 1516 and first translated into English by Ralph Robinson, 1551), but his English prose style (as evidenced by his History of Richard III, a source of Shakespeare's play on the same king) is clear, tough, witty, cadenced, eloquent, and dramatic. Unfortunately his reputation suffers in this respect because much of his writing is concerned with religious controversy, wherein style is not usually looked for, and because many of his pieces have not been reprinted since the collected English Works of 1557. The most complete collection of his Latin works is the Frankfort-Leipzig edition of 1689. More's chief writings were: (in Latin) a translation of four dialogues of Lucian, a commentary on the Psalms, a refutation of Luther's charges against Henry VIII, written under the pseudonym of William Ross, 255 epigrams, and Utopia; (in both English and Latin) the History of Richard III and Treatise on the Passion; (in English) some schoolboy poetry, a Life of John Pico, a commentary on The Four Last Things, several theological debates, a Dialogue of Comfort against Tribulation, and an autobiographical defense of himself. Besides these, More was in communication with all the important humanists of his day. Of his letters, 218 survive.

Morea (mō.rē'a). See Peloponnesus.

Moréas (mo.rā.ȧs), Jean. [Pseudonym of Ioannis Papadiamantopoulos.] b. at Athens, 1856; d. at Paris, 1910. French poet, founder of the antisymbolist "École Romane" group. Author of Les Syrtes (1884), Cantilènes (1886), Les Stances (in six parts, 1899–1901), and others. He began as a disciple of Charles Baudelaire and shared at that time the ordinary tenets of the symbolists. He eventually came out in repeated manifestoes for a poetry written in classic forms and in what he called "the Mediterranean tradition."

More Assynt (ȧ.sint'), Ben. See Ben More Assynt.

Moreau (mō.rō'). River in NW South Dakota, flowing generally E to the Missouri River. Length, ab. 300 mi.

Moreau (mo.rō), Émile. b. at Brienon, France, 1852; d. there, 1922. French writer and playwright, remembered for Mme Sans-Gêne (written with Victorien Sardou, 1893), as well as such plays as Le Vert Galant (1907) and Mme Margot (1910). His collected plays were issued (1912–13) in three volumes.

Moreau, Hégésippe. b. at Paris, April 9, 1810; d. there, Dec. 20, 1838. French poet. His poems were published in the volume Myosotis in 1838. His death in a poorhouse soon after its publication brought the book some success.

Moreau, Jean Victor. b. at Morlaix, France, Aug. 11, 1761; d. at Laun (now Louny), in Bohemia, Sept. 2, 1813. French general. He commanded the right wing of Charles Pichegru's army in the Netherlands in 1795, and superseded Pichegru as commander of the army of the Rhine and the Moselle in 1796. In that year he crossed the Rhine at Kehl (June 24), defeated the archduke Charles at Ettlingen (July 9), and drove the Austrians back to the Danube. The defeat of the army of the Meuse and the Sambre under Jean Baptiste Jourdan compelled him to retreat. He commanded in Italy in 1799, being defeated by the Russians under Aleksandr Suvorov at Cassano (April 7). In 1800 he was appointed to the command of the Army of the Rhine by the first consul, Napoleon; and in the same year gained a decisive victory over the Austrians at Hohenlinden (December 3). Having placed himself at the head of a party of republicans and royalists opposed to Napoleon, he was in 1804 sentenced to two years' imprisonment on the charge of complicity in Cadoudal and Pichegru's conspiracy against the first consul. The sentence was commuted to exile. He lived in the U.S. (near Trenton, N.J.) from 1805 to 1813, when he entered the Russian service. He was mortally wounded at the battle of Dresden (Aug. 27, 1813).

Moreau, Luc Albert. b. at Paris, Dec. 9, 1882—. French painter, engraver, and illustrator. He was strongly influenced by Cézanne, and Segonzac. His first successful showing was at the Salon d'Automne of 1912, although he had exhibited earlier at the Indépendents (1909) and the Salon d'Automne (1908). Among his better-known works are The Musical Clown, The Nymphs of the Seine, Afternoon, Claudia, Soldiers in the Trench, The Friends, Air Raid, Segonzac at Work, The Kiss, The Banjo, and Boxers.

Moreau de Saint-Méry (dę saṅ.mā.rē), Médéric Louis Élie. b. at Fort Royal, Martinique, Jan. 13, 1750; d. at Paris, Jan. 28, 1819. French jurist and author; a distant relative of the empress Josephine. He was judge (1780) of the supreme court of French Santo Domingo and deputy for Martinique at Paris in 1790. He took an active part in the early phase of the French Revolution, but was imprisoned (1792) by the Revolutionary tribunal; he escaped and lived in the U.S. until 1800. From 1800 to 1806 he was councilor of state. He published Lois et constitutions des colonies françaises de l'Amérique sous le vent de 1550 à 1785 (5 vols., 1784–85), and important works on Santo Domingo.

Morecambe (mōr'kąm). Coastal resort and former municipal borough in NW England, now combined with Heysham as Morecambe and Heysham.

Morecambe and Heysham (hā'shąm). Municipal borough, important seaside resort, and small seaport in NW England, in Lancashire, situated on Morecambe Bay, ab. 234 mi. NW of London by rail. It was formed from the former Morecambe municipal borough and Heysham urban district. Heysham, the port, has a small commerce with Belfast and Londonderry in Northern Ireland. Cattle on the hoof are the principal item of commerce. 37,000 (1951).

Morecambe Bay. Inlet of the Irish Sea in NW England, lying between the main part of Lancashire, and Westmorland and the detached NW part of Lancashire. Length, ab. 18 mi.; width at the entrance, ab. 10 mi.

More Dissemblers besides Women. Comedy by Thomas Middleton, licensed as "an old play" in 1623, printed in 1657 with Women beware Women, but probably acted in 1615.

Morehead (mōr'hed). Town in NE Kentucky, county seat of Rowan County, ab. 55 mi. NE of Lexington: seat of a state teachers college. 3,102 (1950).

Morehead City. Town in E North Carolina, in Carteret County, on the Newport River: twin city of Beaufort; seaport and fishing and resort center. It was established in 1857 by John Motley Morehead, governor (1841–45) of the state. 5,144 (1950).

Morehead's Horse Mill. Former name of Central City, Ky.

Morehouse (mōr'hous), Daniel Walter. b. at Mankato, Minn., Feb. 22, 1876; d. Jan. 21, 1941. American astronomer, discoverer (1908) of a comet which now bears his name. He was professor of physics and astronomy (1900 et seq.), dean of men (1919–22), acting president (1922–23), dean of the College of Liberal Arts (1923–30), and president (1923 et seq.) of Duke University.

Morehouse, Ward. b. at Savannah, Ga., Nov. 24, 1898—. American journalist and playwright. He was a staff member of the Atlanta Journal (1916–19) and New York Tribune (1919–26), and a staff member (1926 et seq.) and drama critic (1943 et seq.) of the New York Sun (now the New York World-Telegram and Sun). Author of Gentlemen of the Press (produced in 1928), U.S. 90 (produced in 1941), and other plays. He published the biography George M. Cohan—Prince of the American Theatre (1943), and Matinee Tomorrow—Fifty Years of Our Theatre (1949).

Morel (mo.rel), Jules. A pseudonym used by Auriol, Vincent as a member of the French Resistance in World War II.

Morel, Paul. Hero of D. H. Lawrence's autobiographical novel Sons and Lovers (1913).

More Laptevykh (mô'ryę läp'tyi.vih). Russian name of Laptev Sea.

Morelia (mō.rā'lyä). [Former name, Valladolid.] City in S Mexico, capital of Michoacán state, ab. 125 mi. NW of Mexico City. Founded in 1541, it was renamed in 1828 in honor of the patriot José María Morelos y Pavón. 103,516 (1950).

Morel-Journel (mo.rel.zhör.nel), Henry. b. at Brié, Isère, France, Sept. 25, 1876—. French silk manufacturer and merchant, an executive of numerous industrial and commercial firms.

Morella (mō.rel'a). Story by Edgar Allan Poe, published in 1835 and included in Tales of the Grotesque and Arabesque (1840).

Morella (mō.rā'lyä), Count of. Title of Cabrera, Ramón.

Morellet (mo.re.le), André. b. at Lyons, France, March 7, 1727; d. at Paris, Jan. 12, 1819. French man of letters and philosophical writer. He wrote Mélanges de littérature et de philosophie du XVIIIe siècle (1818).

Morelli (mō.rel'lē), Giovanni. b. at Verona, Italy, Feb. 25, 1816; d. at Milan, Italy, Feb. 28, 1891. Italian art critic. Beginning in 1860, he represented Bergamo in four successive Italian parliaments, and used this opportunity to secure a law, named after him, to regulate the preservation of Italian art. In 1861 he was associated with Cavalcaselle on a commission appointed to register all works of art in public institutions in Umbria and the Marches. In his works he established certain facts which revolutionized Italian art criticism, among them the fact that the old masters frequently dropped into uniform conventional ways of representing details (as hair, ears, fingers, and the like), which are useful in identification.

Morelos (mō.rā'lōs). See also Montemorelos.

Morelos. State in S central Mexico, S of México state. Capital, Cuernavaca; area, 1,917 sq. mi.; pop. 182,711 (1940), 268,863 (1950).

Morelos y Pavón (ē pä.bōn'), José María. b. near Apatzingan, Michoacán, Mexico, Sept. 30, 1765; executed near Mexico City, Dec. 22, 1815. Mexican patriot. He was a priest, and joined (1810) the revolt of Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla, whom he succeeded as leader and with whom he is revered as a martyr of the first Mexican independence movement. He was at first very successful, but after his declaration (Nov. 6, 1813) of independence from Spain, he was repeatedly defeated. He was finally captured, Nov. 5, 1815, taken to Mexico City, declared a heretic by the Inquisition (Nov. 26, 1815), and condemned to penance. Turned over to the secular authorities, he was shot in the back. The city of Morelia was renamed for him.

Morelove (mōr'luv), Lord. Lover of Lady Betty Modish in Colley Cibber's The Careless Husband.

Morena (mō.rā'nä), Sierra. See Sierra Morena.

Morenci (mō.ren'si). Unincorporated community in SE Arizona, in Greenlee County: site of a large open-pit copper mine. It is a company town. 6,541 (1950).

Moreno (mō.rā'nō), Alfredo Baquerizo. See Baquerizo Moreno, Alfredo.

Moreno, Gabriel García. See García Moreno, Gabriel.

Morenou (mō.rā'nō). See Moronu.

More of More-Hall (mōr). In the English satirical ballad The Dragon of Wantley (preserved in Percy's Reliques of Ancient English Poetry), the local hero who kills the dragon with a kick on his hind end.

Møre og Romsdal (mé're ô rôms'däl). Fylke (county) in W Norway, bordering on the Atlantic Ocean, and bounded by the fylker (counties) of Sogn og Fjordane, Opland, and Sør-Trøndelag. Capital, Kristiansund; area, 5,810 sq. mi.; pop. 182,859 (1946).

Moresby (mōrz'bi), Louis. A pseudonym of Beck, Lily Adams.

Moresby Island. See under Queen Charlotte Islands.

Moresnet (mo.rez.ne). [Also, Kelmis.] Strip of land SW of Aachen, formerly between Prussia and Belgium, and ruled conjointly by officials of these two countries; now part of the Belgian province of Liége. Made independent in 1815, it became Belgian after World War I. Area, ab. 2.1 sq. mi.

Moret (mo.re), Alexandre. b. at Aix-les-Bains, France, Sept. 19, 1868; d. at Paris, Feb. 2, 1938. French Egyptologist, professor (1923 et seq.) at the Collège de France. Author of Le Nil et la civilisation égyptienne (The Nile and Egyptian Civilization, 1926) and Histoire de l'Orient (History of the Orient, 1936).

Moreton Bay (mōr'tọn). Inlet of the Pacific, on the coast of Queensland, Australia, near the city of Brisbane. Length, ab. 40 mi.; width, ab. 17 mi.

Moreto y Cavaña (mō.rā'tō ē kā.bā'nyä), Agustín. b. at Madrid, c1618; d. 1669. Spanish dramatist, a friend of Calderón and approaching him in the popularity of his works. He wrote El Lindo Don Diego (The Handsome Don Diego), El Desden con el desden (Disdain with Disdain), and others.

Moret-sur-Loing (mo.re.sür.lwäṅ). [Also, Moret.] Town in the department of Seine-et-Marne, France, ab. 40 mi. SE of Paris. 2,563 (1946).

More Wonders of the Invisible World. Tract by a Boston merchant, Robert Calef, published (1700) at London. It attacked Cotton Mather and the Salem witchcraft trials.

Morey (mō'ri), Samuel. b. at Hebron, Conn., Oct. 23, 1762; d. April 17, 1843. American inventor who experimented with working steamboats as early as 1794. His patents include a steam-operated spit (1793), a rotary steam engine (1795), and an internal-combustion engine (April 1, 1826), one of the first designed in America. After Fulton refused (1797) to adopt his model for a steamboat, Morey claimed that Fulton had stolen his invention.

Morey, William Carey. b. at North Attleboro, Mass., May 23, 1843; d. at Rochester, N.Y., Jan. 21, 1925. American political scientist.

Morey Letter. Letter forged in the name of James A. Garfield, favoring cheap Chinese labor. It was published at New York in October, 1880 (shortly before the presidential election), addressed to a fictitious H. L. Morey.

Morez (mo.rez). Town in E France, in the department of Jura, on the Bienne River ab. 23 mi. NW of Geneva, Switzerland. It produces watches and optical goods, and is a winter sports center. 4,691 (1946).

Morford (môr'fọrd), Henry. b. at New Monmouth, N.J., March 10, 1823; d. Aug. 4, 1881. American journalist and writer of poems, novels, and guidebooks. He established (1852) the New Jersey Standard at Middletown Point, N.J., was on the editorial staff of the New York Atlas, established (1880) and edited the Brooklyn New Monthly Magazine, and maintained (1876–81) a bookstore and travel office at New York. He was best known for his guidebooks, which include Morford's Short-Trip Guide to Europe (1868), Morford's Short-Trip Guide to America (1872), and Paris and Half-Europe in '78 (1879). Among his novels are The Days of Shoddy (1863) and The Coward (1864).

Morgagni (môr.ga'nyē), Giovanni Battista. b. at Forlì, Italy, Feb. 25, 1682; d. at Padua, Italy, Nov. 5, 1771. Italian anatomist, the founder of pathological anatomy. He was professor of anatomy (1772 et seq.) at Padua. His chief work is De sedibus et causis morborum per anatomen indagatis (On the Seat and Causes of Diseases Investigated by Anatomy, 1761). He also wrote Adversaria anatomica (1706–19), and others.

Morgain (môr.gen'). See Morgan le Fay.

Morgan (môr'gan). Welsh surgeon in Tobias Smollett's Roderick Random and Peregrine Pickle.

Morgan, Angela. b. at Washington, D.C.——. American poet, elected (1936) poet laureate of the General Federation of Women's Clubs of America. Her works include The Hour Has Struck (1914), Utterance and Other Poems (1916), Forward, March! (1918), Hail, Man! (1919), Brotherhood of Beauty (1922), and Out of the Mist (1933). Her poem The Unknown Soldier was read over the bier of the Unknown Soldier at the Capitol rotunda, Washington, D.C.

Morgan, Appleton. See Morgan, James Appleton.

Morgan, Arthur Ernest. b. at Cincinnati, Ohio, June 20, 1878—. American civil engineer, educator, and author. He was president (1920–36) of Antioch College, and served as chairman (1933–38) of the Tennessee Valley Authority until dismissed by President F. D. Roosevelt for refusing to support with evidence his charges against other commission members, and for appealing to Congress, over the President's head, for an investigation on grounds which he refused to specify to the President. Author of The Miami Valley and the 1913 Flood (1918), Nowhere Was Somewhere (1946), A Business of My Own (1946), and other books.

Morgan, Augustus De. See De Morgan, Augustus.

Morgan, Charles. b. at what is now Clinton, Conn., April 21, 1795; d. at New York, May 8, 1878. American shipping and railroad promoter. He founded steamship lines from New Orleans to Texas, Mexico, and Central America, including the Texas and New Orleans Mail Line, the Mexican Ocean Mail and Inland Company, and the Southern Mail Steamship Company (established with Arnold Harris). He established the Morgan Line from New York to New Orleans and obtained a monopoly on Gulf of Mexico transportation, especially through the purchase of railroads including the New Orleans, Opelousas and Great Western, and the 505-mile Houston and Texas Central.

Morgan, Charles. [Full name, Charles Langbridge Morgan.] b. in Kent, England, Jan. 22, 1894—. English novelist and critic; husband of Hilda Vaughan. He was drama critic (1921 et seq.) for the London Times. He was awarded the Femina-Vie Heureuse prize (1930) for Portrait in a Mirror (1929; published in America under the title First Love), the Hawthornden prize (1933) for The Fountain (1932), and the James Tait Black Memorial prize (1941) for The Voyage (1940). Author also of The Gun-room (1919), My Name is Legion (1925), Sparkenbroke (1936), The Empty Room (1941), Reflections in a Mirror (1944), The Judge's Story (1947), and others, and the play The Flashing Stream (1938).

Morgan, Charles Hill. b. at Rochester, N.Y., Jan. 8, 1831; d. at Worcester, Mass., Jan. 10, 1911. American mechanical engineer and inventor. His devices include an automatic machine for making bags (invented between 1860 and 1864 with his brother's help), perfection (with the help of Fred H. Daniels) of the power reel (patented 1880), and perfection of the continuous train of horizontal rolls, known as the Morgan Mill (patented with Daniels, 1883). He founded the Morgan Spring Company (1881) at Worcester and the Morgan Construction Company (1891) which supplies equipment to most of the continuous wire-rod rolling-mills in the world today.

Morgan, Conwy Lloyd. b. at London, Feb. 6, 1852; d. at Hastings, England, March 6, 1936. British biologist and psychologist. An early comparative psychologist, he revolted against the anecdotal method in science. He reported his first experiments (with pet animals) in Animal Life and Intelligence (1890–91). He further contributed to the development of the field of comparative psychology with Animal Behaviour (1900) and Introduction to Comparative Psychology (1894). He is remembered for his principle of parsimony, that is repeated as Lloyd Morgan's Canon: "In no case may we interpret an action as the outcome of the exercise of a higher psychical faculty, if it can be interpreted as the outcome of the exercise of one which stands lower in the psychological scale." He was principal of University College, Bristol (1887–1909), and professor of psychology in the University of Bristol (1909 et seq.). Among his other publications are Animal Biology (1887), Habit and Instinct (1896), and The Interpretation of Nature (1905).

Morgan, Daniel. b. in Hunterdon County, N.J., 1736; d. at Winchester, Va., July 6, 1802. American soldier in the Revolutionary War. He was captain of a company of riflemen, served under Benedict Arnold in the expedition against Quebec, and was captured (Dec. 31, 1775) inside that city during the battle. He was freed, and in 1777 joined Horatio Gates and fought at Saratoga against Burgoyne's troops; he was then attached to Washington's forces near Philadelphia. In 1779 he quit the army because of delay by the Continental Congress in promoting him, but in 1780 he rejoined Gates in North Carolina and in October became a brigadier general. He defeated (Jan. 17, 1781) Banastre Tarleton at Cowpens and avoided a trap set by Cornwallis to rejoin the main army in North Carolina. After the war he was in command of the troops dispatched (1794) to put down the Whisky Rebellion in Pennsylvania, and he served in Congress (1797–99) as a Federalist.

Morgan, Edmund Morris, Jr. b. at Mineral Ridge, Ohio, Nov. 11, 1878—. American lawyer and educator. He was a professor at the University of Minnesota (1912–17), Yale (1917–25), and Harvard (1925 et seq.), and acting dean (1936–37, 1942–45) of the Harvard Law School. Author of Introduction to Study of Law (1924), and co-author of Cases on Common Law Pleading (1917) and Cases on Evidence (1934).

Morgan, Edwin Barber. b. at Aurora, N.Y., May 2, 1806; d. there, Oct. 13, 1881. American merchant, philanthropist, and express company executive. He became (1852) first president of Wells, Fargo and Company, founded (1854) the United States Express Company, and was a lifelong director of the American Express Company. He was elected (1852) representative in Congress. As a trustee and later head of the board of Wells College at Aurora, Morgan gave the school more than a quarter of a million dollars.

Morgan, Edwin Dennison. b. at Washington, Mass., Feb. 8, 1811; d. at New York, Feb. 14, 1883. American politician and philanthropist. He was successful in business at New York and built a large fortune. He served as a Whig in the state senate (1850–55) and sponsored the bill to purchase the land for Central Park in New York City. From 1855 to 1858 he was state immigration commissioner. He was an early sponsor of the Republican Party and served (1856–64, 1872–76) as its national chairman. In 1858 he was elected governor of New York, the first Republican to hold that office; during the Civil War he headed the military department of New York and was responsible for recruiting in the state. He was a U.S. senator (1863–69) from New York. Union Theological Seminary and Williams College were among the institutions benefiting from his philanthropies.

Morgan, Edwin Vernon. b. at Aurora, N.Y., Feb. 22, 1865; d. in Brazil, April 16, 1934. American diplomat. He was minister to Cuba (1905–10), to Uruguay and Paraguay (1910–11), and to Portugal (1911–12), and was ambassador to Brazil (1912–33).

Morgan, Fort. Fort at the entrance to Mobile Bay, on the site of the old Fort Bowyer. The Americans here repulsed a combined sea and land attack by the British and their Indian allies on Sept. 15, 1814.

Morgan, Sir Frederick Edgworth. b. Feb. 5, 1894—. English soldier. In World War II he was chief of staff to Dwight Eisenhower, the supreme allied commander, and planned the invasion of the Continent. He served (1945–46) as deputy to General Walter Bedell Smith and was head of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration in Germany. He succeeded (1951) Sir Charles Portal as director of the British atomic energy commission. Author of Overture to Overlord (1950), the story of his work in preparing the European invasion.

Morgan, George. b. at Philadelphia, Feb. 14, 1743; d. March 10, 1810. American merchant, Indian agent, and land speculator. He became (1776) secretary-general and superintendent of the land office for the Indiana Company (with headquarters at Fort Pitt) in territory over which the state of Virginia claimed (and won) jurisdiction in a case carried to the Supreme Court. Known as an advocate of civil government in Illinois, he served during the Revolution as Indian agent for the Continental Congress and deputy commissary general of purchases with the rank of colonel. He founded (1789) the colony of New Madrid, in Spanish Louisiana (now in Missouri). He also engaged in investigations of the Hessian fly, then menacing the eastern wheat crop.

Morgan, George Campbell. b. at Tetbury, Gloucestershire, England, Dec. 9, 1863; d. 1945. English Congregational minister. He was the editor of the Westminster Bible Record and the Westminster Pulpit. He published The Crises of the Christ (1903), The Analyzed Bible (1907), and others.

Morgan, George Washington. b. in Washington County, Pa., Sept. 20, 1820; d. at Fort Monroe, Va., July 26, 1893. American lawyer and army officer, member of the U.S. House of Representatives (1867–68, 1869–73). He was appointed (1861) brigadier general of volunteers in command of the 7th division of Buell's Army of the Ohio, with which he drove the Confederates from Cumberland Gap. He served (1863) under Sherman in command of a division in the Vicksburg campaign and the 13th corps at Fort Hindman, Ark. He resigned (June 8, 1863) because of illness, a disagreement with Sherman, and the policy of using Negro troops. In Congress he opposed harsh reconstruction policies.

Morgan, Harcourt Alexander. [Full name, John Harcourt Alexander Morgan.] b. at Strathroy, Ontario, Aug. 31, 1867; d. Aug. 25, 1950. American entomologist. He was engaged (1889–1905) at Louisiana State University and its agricultural experiment station, and was director (1905–19) of the agricultural experiment station, professor of zoölogy and entomology, and president (1919–33) of the University of Tennessee. He served as a member (1933–38) and chairman (1938–41) of the Tennessee Valley Authority, succeeding Arthur E. Morgan.

Morgan, Sir Henry. b. in Wales, c1635; d. in Jamaica, 1688. English buccaneer, celebrated for his exploits on the Spanish Main. He ran away to sea, went to Barbados and thence to Jamaica, where he joined the buccaneers, and soon became a leader. His ravages extended over the Spanish coasts of the Caribbean Sea. He pillaged parts of Cuba, and took and ransomed Puerto Bello (1668) and Maracaibo (1669). In 1670 he collected 37 vessels and 2,200 men, captured a fort at the mouth of the Chagres River, crossed the isthmus, and took Panama City, after a battle with about 3,000 Spanish soldiers, in January, 1671. The city was sacked and burned, and immense plunder was secured. Here, as elsewhere, the Spaniards were treated with great inhumanity. Morgan was prevented by royal orders from organizing another expedition. He returned to England, where he was knighted by Charles II and made a commissioner of the admiralty. Later he resided in Jamaica, where he was lieutenant governor and commander in chief, and for a time was acting governor.

Morgan (môr.gäñ), Jacques Jean Marie de. b. at Huisseau-sur-Cosson, France, June 3, 1857; d. at Marseilles, France, June 12, 1924. French archaeologist who discovered the column bearing the law of Hammurabi and primitive ceramics at Susa, Persia. He led excavations in Egypt, India, and Persia. Author of Mission scientifique en Perse (Scientific Mission in Persia, 1894–1904), L'Humanité préhistorique (Prehistoric Mankind, 1921), and La Préhistoire orientale (The Prehistory of the East, 1925, 1926).

Morgan (môr'gan), James Appleton. [Called Appleton Morgan.] b. at Portland, Me., Oct. 2, 1845; d. at New York, Aug. 15, 1928. American Shakespearian scholar and lawyer, founder (1885) and president (1885–1925) of the Shakespeare Society of New York. He was the editor of the 22-volume Bankside Shakespeare (1888–92) tracing the post-Shakespearian additions to and alterations in the plays, and author of The Shakespearean Myth (1880), Shakespeare in Fact and Criticism (1884), Shakespeare's Pronunciation as Deduced from the Puns in the Plays (1884), and Digesta Shakespeareana (1887).

Morgan, John. b. at Philadelphia, June 10, 1735; d. there, Oct. 15, 1789. American physician who founded (1765) what was later to become the University of Pennsylvania Medical College, at which he became (May 3, 1765) professor of the theory and practice of physic. He was director general of hospitals and physician in chief of the Continental Army (1775–77). His writings include A Recommendation of Inoculation, According to Baron Dimsdale's Method (1776).

Morgan, John Harcourt Alexander. See Morgan, Harcourt Alexander.

Morgan, John Hunt. b. at Huntsville, Ala., June 1, 1825; killed at Greenville, Tenn., Sept. 4, 1864. American Confederate officer, noted for his raids into Union territory during the Civil War. He served in the Mexican War, returned to his business interests at Lexington, Ky., and in September, 1861, joined the Confederate army as a scout. He became a captain and, beginning in 1862, commenced his noted raids inside Union lines. He was promoted (April 4, 1862) to the rank of colonel, participated in the Shiloh campaign and later made raids in the Tennessee, Kentucky, and Ohio country, taking prisoners and destroying or appropriating supplies. In December, 1862, he became a brigadier general in command of a cavalry division, and was voted the thanks of the Confederate congress for a series of raids carried out in the spring of 1863. In June, 1863, he led a raid into Indiana and Ohio, but was compelled to surrender to Union forces on July 26, 1863, near New Lisbon, Ohio. He escaped (Nov. 26, 1863) from the Ohio State Penitentiary at Columbus, Ohio, and in April, 1864, took command of the Department of Southwest Virginia. He raided Kentucky in June, 1864, and was killed at Greenville, Tenn.

Morgan, John Livingston Rutgers. b. at New Brunswick, N.J., June 27, 1872; d. at New York, April 13, 1935. American physical chemist. He was adjunct professor (1901–05) and professor (1905 et seq.) of physical chemistry at Columbia. Author of The Theory of Solution and Its Results (1897).

Morgan, John Pierpont. b. at Hartford, Conn., April 17, 1837; d. at Rome, March 31, 1913. American financier, art collector, and civic benefactor; son of Junius Spencer Morgan. He attended the University of Göttingen in Germany, and in 1857 he entered the banking house of Duncan, Sherman and Company at New York. Later, under the name of J. Pierpont Morgan and Company, he was New York agent (1860–64) for his father's firm, George Peabody and Company of London, which later became J.S. Morgan and Company. He was a member (1864–71) of the firm of Dabney, Morgan and Company and in 1871, in conjunction with the Drexels of Philadelphia, founded the New York banking house of Drexel, Morgan and Company. His first step toward a leading position in the financial world was made in 1873, when he formed a syndicate which ended Jay Cooke's monopoly in the marketing of treasury loans. After the failure of Cooke's banking house in 1873, the Morgan firm, possessing as it did the great advantage of strong connections abroad, became a leader in government financing and international banking. Beginning in 1879, Morgan entered the field of railroad reorganization, which he carried out on a vast scale after the panic of 1893. It was in 1879 that he carried through a large sale of William H. Vanderbilt's New York Central stock to English investors; in 1885 he successfully made peace between the warring interests of the New York Central and Pennsylvania Railroads. His railroad empire, together with the interests dominated by him and James J. Hill, made him by 1900 a decisive voice in most of the U.S. railroad systems. His control of some and influence over others were virtually undisturbed after a Supreme Court decision compelled the dissolution (1904) of the Northern Securities Company. In 1895 the New York house of Drexel, Morgan and Company became J. P. Morgan and Company. This firm, connected with Drexel and Company of Philadelphia, J. S. Morgan and Company (later Morgan, Grenfell and Company) of London, and Morgan, Harjes and Company of Paris, became one of the world's leading banking firms. Under its aegis were carried out the many consolidations and reorganizations which made Morgan the master of a huge financial and industrial empire. His power came to public notice in 1895, when, at the appeal of President Cleveland, Morgan formed a syndicate to restore the depleted U.S. Treasury gold reserves and thus avert a panic. Morgan's activities in industrial consolidation began with his financing (1898) of the Federal Steel Company, the National Tube Company, and the American Bridge Company; these interests led to the organization (1901) of the U.S. Steel Corporation, at that time the largest body of its kind in the world. The consolidation of U.S. Steel resulted from the merging of interests held by Andrew Carnegie, John D. Rockefeller, John W. Gates, William H. Moore, and others. Morgan also financed (1902) the International Harvester Company and the International Mercantile Marine. His position as the undisputed leader of American finance alleviated the brief panic of 1907; in daily sessions at his office and nightly sessions at his library he raised the bankers of New York to take courageous action to prevent total financial disaster. Later he was strongly attacked because the crisis had enabled him, despite antitrust regulations, to secure control of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company for the U.S. Steel Corporation. Over the years Morgan's dominant position made him the symbol of Wall Street money control, and the target of attacks by critics opposed to the centralization of financial power in the hands of a few men. Public and official opinion finally brought about the investigation (1912) of the so-called money trust by the congressional Pujo committee. The inquiry revealed a vast network of control and influence in which the 11 Morgan partners held 72 directorships in 47 important corporations, including General Electric and American Telephone and Telegraph. Morgan's empire was an outstanding example of the integration and combination carried out by investment bankers in the U.S. He was the foremost financial giant of his time; his efforts were largely constructive, as distinguished from those of the industrial and financial buccaneers who yielded to him. During his lifetime Morgan made large gifts to art museums, cathedrals, churches, and hospitals. He was the most prominent art collector of his time. A great part of his art collection, the total of which was valued at some 50 million dollars at his death, is in the Pierpont Morgan wing at the Metropolitan Museum of Art at New York. Manuscripts, early editions, and other valuable literary materials are deposited at the Morgan Library at New York. See The Life Story of J. Pierpont Morgan, by Carl Hovey (1911), The House of Morgan, by Lewis Corey (1930), Morgan The Magnificent, by John K. Winkler (1930), and The Great Pierpont Morgan, by Frederick Lewis Allen (1949).

Morgan, John Pierpont. b. at Irvington, N.Y., Sept. 7, 1867; d. at Boca Grande, Fla., March 13, 1943. American banker and financier; son of John Pierpont Morgan (1837–1913). He succeeded (1913) his father as head of J. P. Morgan and Company. He was notable for financing the Allies' requirements for credits in the U.S. during World War I, and was widely known as a philanthropist and art patron.

Morgan, John Tyler. b. at Athens, Tenn., June 20, 1824; d. June 11, 1907. American lawyer and statesman, Democratic U.S. senator from Alabama from 1877. He entered the Confederate army in 1861 and rose to the rank of brigadier general, and after the war resumed the practice of law. In 1892 he was appointed one of the arbitrators of the Bering Sea fisheries dispute.

Morgan, Junius Spencer. b. at West Springfield, Mass., April 14, 1813; d. near Éze, on the Riviera, France, April 8, 1890. American banker and financier; father of John Pierpont Morgan (1837–1913). A merchant with A. and M. Ketchum, brokers at New York, he became a partner in Howe, Mather and Company, at Hartford, Conn., J. M. Beebe, Morgan and Company, at Boston, and in 1854 the London firm of George Peabody and Company, which after Peabody's retirement (1864) became J. S. Morgan and Company. As its president (1864–90), he guided the last-named firm in support to the Union during the Civil War and placed (1870) a 50-million-dollar loan for France despite Bismarck's warning. His philanthropies include the gift of a Joshua Reynolds picture to the Metropolitan Museum of Art and donations to Guy's Hospital, London, and to Yale University.

Morgan, Lewis Henry. b. near Aurora, N.Y., Nov. 21, 1818; d. at Rochester, N.Y., Dec. 17, 1881. American ethnologist and archaeologist. A graduate of Union College (1840), he practiced law at Rochester, N.Y., and became interested in the Indians living in the area. In 1847 he became a member of the Seneca and investigated their social organization. His work broke the ground for later study of society; in time, from his studies of the kinship and the economic and political structures of primitive societies, he developed a theory of social evolution from savagery through barbarism to civilization. Morgan's work on cultural development was read by Karl Marx, and Marx's notes on the book were used by Friedrich Engels when he wrote The Origin of the Family, Private Property, and the State (1884). Morgan published League of the Ho-dé-no-sau-nee or Iroquois (1851), Systems of Consanguinity and Affinity of the Human Family (1869), Ancient Society (1877), and others.

Morgan, Morris Hicky. b. at Providence, R.I., Feb. 8, 1859; d. March 16, 1910. American classical scholar. He was instructor (1887–96) in Latin and Greek at Harvard, and professor (1896–1910) of Latin and of classical philology there. His writings include A Bibliography of Persius (1909) and his most important scholarly work, a translation, Vitruvius, the Ten Books on Architecture (1914).

Morgan, Sydney. [Title: Lady Morgan; maiden name, Sydney Owenson.] b. at Dublin, c1783; d. at London, April 14, 1859. Irish novelist; daughter of an Irish actor, and wife (married 1812) of Sir Thomas Charles Morgan. She published a volume of poems and a novel, St. Clair, in 1804. The Wild Irish Girl, a political novel, made her reputation in 1806. Among her other works are O'Donnel (1814), Florence Macarthy (1816), France under the Bourbons (1817), and its companion Italy (1821), both of the latter exciting furious opposition both in England and on the Continent, Life and Times of Salvator Rosa (1823), Woman and Her Master (1840), The Book Without a Name (with Sir T. C. Morgan, 1841), Luxima, the Prophetess (1859), Passages from My Autobiography: an Odd Volume (1859; this contains, among other things, her letters for the years 1818–19), and others.

Morgan, Sir Thomas Charles. b. at London, c1783; d. there, Aug. 28, 1843. English surgeon and author; husband of Sydney Morgan. His works include Sketches of the Philosophy of Life (1818) and Sketches of the Philosophy of Morals (1822).

Morgan, Thomas Hunt. b. at Lexington, Ky., Sept. 25, 1866; d. at Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 4, 1945. American zoölogist. He obtained (1890) the Ph.D. at Johns Hopkins. He served as professor of experimental zoölogy at Columbia (1904–28), and as director of the William G. Kerckhoff Laboratories of Biological Sciences at the California Institute of Technology (1928 et seq.). He performed notable experiments with fruit flies (genus Drosophila) to indicate the mechanism of heredity, demonstrating the transmission of characteristics from generation to generation through the genes, whose place in the composition of the chromosomes he charted. His work in this field won for him the 1933 Nobel prize in physiology and medicine. Among his published works are Regeneration (1901), Heredity and Sex (1913), Mechanism of Mendelian Heredity (1905), The Physical Basis of Heredity (1919), Evolution and Genetics (1925), The Theory of the Gene (1926), Experimental Embryology (1927), and Embryology and Genetics (1933).

Morgan, William. b. c1774; d. c1826. American mechanic of Batavia, N.Y., alleged to have been abducted and killed by Freemasons for revealing secrets of the order. His mysterious disappearance, soon after word that he was writing a book on the secrets of Freemasonry, led to a storm of charges and countercharges.

Morgan, William Frend De. See De Morgan, William Frend.

Morgana (môr.gä'nä), Fata. See Fata Morgana.

Morgan City (môr'gən). [Former name, Brashear City.] City in SE Louisiana, in St. Mary Parish, on the Atchafalaya River; inland port and fishing center; trading center for muskrat furs. 9,759 (1950).

Morganfield (môr'gən.fēld). City in W Kentucky, county seat of Union County; shipping point for tobacco and clover seed. 3,257 (1950).

Morgan le Fay (môr'gən lę fā'). [Also: Morgana (môr.gä'nạ), Morgaine (môr.gen').] In Arthurian romance, the sister of King Arthur. She is a composite and variable character, partaking of the nature of various Old Irish and Brythonic goddesses (especially river goddesses) and mermaids. (The mermaids of modern Breton folklore, for instance, are called Morgans.) She first appeared in Geoffrey of Monmouth's Vita Merlini (12th century). Usually she appears as a lake-dweller, versed in healing magic, and lover of many men; often she is the mistress of Avalon. In the later Arthurian romances, however, she appears as a malign sorceress, tempting lovers to be unfaithful, and plotting the death of Arthur. In the medieval French romance Ogier the Dane, she receives Ogier in the Isle of Avalon when he is over 100 years of age, and restores him to eternal youth. In the Charlemagne romances she is referred to as Fata Morgana (i.e., the Fairy Morgan). As late as the 19th century the famous mirages in the Strait of Messina were attributed to her, and they are named for her, still being called fata morgana.

Morgannwg (môr.gän'ůg), Iolo. See Williams, Edward.

Morganton (môr'gạn.tọn). Town in W North Carolina, county seat of Burke County, in the Catawba River valley. It has manufactures of furniture, cotton textiles, hosiery, and lumber. The state hospital for the insane and school for the deaf are nearby. 8,311 (1950).

Morgantown (môr'gạn.toun). City in N West Virginia, county seat of Monongalia County, on the Monongahela River, in a coal-producing area: manufactures of glass, chemicals, and building materials. It is the seat of West Virginia University. Settled in 1767, it was made county seat in 1783. Pop. 25,525 (1950).

Morgante Maggiore (môr.gän'tā mäd.jō'rā). Serio-burlesque romantic poem by Luigi Pulci (1485), so called after its hero, the giant Morgante. There is also a French romance, of the Carlovingian cycle, entitled Morgant le Géant, which is probably taken from Pulci's poem.

Morgarten (mōr'gär"tẹn). Mountain ridge on the border of the cantons of Schwyz and Zug, Switzerland, ab. 17 mi. NE of Lucerne. Here on Nov. 15, 1315, the Swiss confederates of the Forest Cantons of Uri, Schwyz, and Unterwalden (ab. 1,400) defeated the Austrians (ab. 15,000), creating a panic by rushing down on them from the heights. Elevation, ab. 4,085 ft.

Morgenroth (môr'gẹn.rōt), Julius. b. at Bamberg, Germany, Oct. 19, 1871; d. at Berlin, Dec. 20, 1924. German bacteriologist. He pioneered with Paul Ehrlich in chemotherapy, demonstrated with Ehrlich (1899) new facts about immune serum, largely based on the presence of a dissolving substance found in normal serum, which they called "complement," and a heat resisting "immune body," produced by reaction to injected material. He introduced (1911) optochin, the outstanding example of a therapeutic agent effective against bacteria, the bactericide rivanol, and trypaflavin.

Morgenstern (môr'gẹn.shtern), Christian. b. at Hamburg, Germany, Sept. 29, 1805; d. at Munich, Feb. 26, 1867. German landscape painter.

Morgenstern, Christian. b. at Munich, 1871; d. at Merano, Italy, 1914. German poet; grandson of Christian Morgenstern (1805–67). He is widely known for what he called his grotesque poems (In Phantas Schoss, 1895; Horatius travestitus, 1897; Galgenlieder, 1905; Palmström, 1910; Gingganz, 1911; Palma Kunkel, 1916). These whimsical works about the things we think we know, but actually do not, are considered by many critics to be the best of their kind in German literature. But Morgenstern, who faced death from tuberculosis from his 22nd year on, also wrote much serious and mystic poetry (Ich und die Welt, 1898; Einkehr, 1910; Wir fanden einen Pfad, 1914; Mensch Wanderer, 1927). He also translated into German Henrik Ibsen's poems and verse dramas.

Morgenstern, Henrik. Original name of Marczali, Henrik.

Morgenstern (môr'gẹn.stẻrn), Julian. b. at St. Francisville, Ill., March 18, 1881—. American rabbi and educator. He was professor of Bible and Semitic languages (1907 et seq.) at Hebrew Union College and president (1922–47) of the college. Author of The Doctrine of Sin in the Babylonian Religion (1905), Amos Studies (vol. I, 1941), The Ark, the Ephod, and the Tent of Meeting (1945), and other works.

Morgenstern (môr'gẹn.shtern), Lina. b. at Breslau, Nov. 25, 1830; d. at Berlin, Dec. 19, 1909. German feminist leader and social worker who established the first kindergarten (1859) and kindergarten teachers' training school (1863). She organized the first mass feedings (at Berlin and Breslau) during the war and cholera epidemic of 1866. In 1873 she founded the first organization of housewives, for which she edited (1874–1904) a paper.

Morgenstierne (môr'gẹn.styer.nẹ), Wilhelm Munthe. b. at Oslo, Norway, Nov. 4, 1887—. Norwegian diplomat, minister (1934–42) and ambassador (1942 et seq.) to the U.S.

Morgenthau (môr'gẹn.thô), Henry. b. at Mannheim, Germany, April 26, 1856; d. at New York, Nov. 25, 1946. American lawyer, businessman, and diplomat. He practiced law (1879 et seq.) at New York, where he was also active in the real estate business, and served (1913–16) as U.S. ambassador to Turkey, handling Allied diplomatic interests there during the early years of World War I. He was vice chairman (1919–21) of the Near East Relief, and was named (1923) chairman of the League of Nations commission for handling the Greek refugee problem. Author of Ambassador Morgenthau's Story (1918), All in a Lifetime (1922), and I Was Sent to Athens (1929).

Morgenthau, Henry, Jr. b. at New York, May 11, 1891—. American public official, U.S. secretary of the treasury (January, 1934–July, 1945) under F. D. Roosevelt. He was publisher (1922–33) of the American Agriculturist, and served as New York State conservation commissioner and as chairman of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt's New York State Agricultural Advisory Commission. He was chairman (March–May, 1933) of the Federal Farm Board, was governor (May–November, 1933) of the Farm Credit Administration, was acting secretary and undersecretary of the treasury from November, 1933, to January, 1934, and thereafter served as secretary of the treasury until July, 1945. He is the author of Germany Is Our Problem (1945), which sets forth the noted and controversial Morgenthau Plan for the postwar treatment of German economy after World War II.

Morgenthau Plan. Plan originally drafted (August, 1944) by Henry Morgenthau, Jr., at that time U.S. secretary of the treasury, proposing exceptionally severe treatment for defeated Germany. Morgenthau recommended the cession of eastern Prussia to the U.S.S.R. and Poland (the latter was to receive the major part of Silesia). France was to take the Saar and the territories between the Moselle and Rhine rivers. The rest of Germany was to be divided into three parts: western Germany, including the Ruhr district and the North Sea ports, was to be internationalized, and the remainder of Germany was to be split into northern and southern German states. All heavy German industries were to be destroyed, in order to make a revival of German military might forever impossible. Germany was to be "repastoralized," i.e., to have an economy dependent on agriculture and light industries. German industrial assets were to be used as reparations to the countries which had suffered through German invasion. Though the plan was strongly opposed by Secretaries H. L. Stimson and Cordell Hull, Morgenthau convinced F. D. Roosevelt and Winston Churchill of the plan's merit during the Quebec Conference (September, 1944) and obtained their signatures to a document accepting it. Only thereafter did Hull and Stimson prevail on President Roosevelt to withdraw his support of the policies proposed by Morgenthau.

Morges (môrzh). Town in W Switzerland, in the canton of Vaud, on the N bank of the Lake of Geneva. 5,689 (1941).

Morghen (môr'gen), Raffaello Sanzio. b. June 19, 1758; d. at Florence, April 8, 1833. Italian engraver. He was a pupil of his father and of his uncle. His first important plate, Masks of the Carnival, was made in 1778. He continued his education under Volpato at Rome. In 1781 he engraved Raphael's Poetry and Theology, in 1787 Guido Reni's Aurora, and later Leonardo's Last Supper and Raphael's Transfiguration. He became professor of engraving in the Academy of Arts at Florence in 1793.

Morgiana (môr.gi.ä'nạ). In the story of "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves" in The Arabian Nights' Entertainments, a slave of Ali Baba. She aids in the concealment of the murder of Cassim (Ali Baba's brother who was killed in the cave) and discovers the robbers, who are brought by their captain, concealed in oil jars, to Ali Baba's house. She kills them by pouring boiling oil into the jars. She recognizes their captain when, as Cogia Houssain, he dines with Ali Baba, and stabs him as she dances the "dagger dance." Ali Baba shows his gratitude by marrying her to his nephew.

Morhange (mo.raṅzh'), Charles Henri Valentin. Original full name of Alkan.

Morhault (môr hôlt'), Sir. (Also: Sir Marhaus, Sir Moraunt, Sir Morholt.) In Arthurian romance, the brother of Isolde, a tribute gatherer. He was killed by Tristam, before the latter met Isolde.

Morhof (môr hôf'), Daniel Georg. b. at Wismar, Germany, Feb. 6, 1639; d. at Lübeck, Germany, June 30, 1691. German scholar, appointed professor of oratory and poetry at Kiel in 1665, professor also of history in 1673, and librarian in 1680. He wrote a work on universal literature entitled Polyhistor (1688; best edition, 1747), and others.

Moria (mō'ri.ą). Character in Ben Jonson's Cynthia's Revels.

Moriah (mǭ.rī'ą). In Biblical geography, a hill in Jerusalem, the site of Solomon's temple. Tradition has often identified this, but on insufficient grounds, with the hill of Isaac's sacrifice in the "land of Moriah" (Gen. xxii).

Morice (mo.rēs), Charles. b. at St.-Étienne, France, May 15, 1861; d. at Menton, France, 1919. French poet and critic. Author of Le Rêve de vivre (1900), L'Amour et la Mort (1913), and of many volumes of literary criticism.

Móricz (mō'rēts), Zsigmond. b. at Tiszacsécs, Hungary, June 30, 1879—. Hungarian novelist, considered by many the greatest prose writer in modern Hungarian literature. The first fiction writer to treat realistically the peasant life of Hungary, he has dealt in his later period also with international problems.

Morier (mō'ri.ėr, mor'i.ā), David Richard. b. at Smyrna, Turkey, Jan. 8, 1784; d. at London, July 13, 1877. English diplomat; son of Isaac Morier and brother of James Justinian Morier. He served in diplomatic posts (1804 et seq.) in SE Europe, Egypt, and Constantinople, was a member of Lord Aberdeen's missions to Vienna, and aided in the treaties (1813–15) for the "settlement of Europe." Author of Photo, the Suliote, a Tale of Modern Greece (1857).

Morier, Isaac. b. at Smyrna, Turkey, Aug. 12, 1750; d. at Constantinople, 1817. English consul at Constantinople; father of David Richard Morier and James Justinian Morier. Appointed (1804) consul general of the Levant Company at Constantinople, at the dissolution (1806) of the company he became British consul.

Morier, James Justinian. b. 1780; d. at Brighton, England, March 19, 1849. English novelist, diplomat, and writer of travel books; son of Isaac Morier and brother of David Richard Morier. In 1812 he published A Journey through Persia, Armenia, and Asia Minor to Constantinople 1808–9. From 1810 to 1814 he was secretary of embassy at the court of Persia. He published his Second Journey in 1818; also a romance, The Adventures of Hajji Baba of Ispahan (1824), The Adventures of Hajji Baba of Ispahan in England (1828), and Zohrab the Hostage (1832).

Morier, Sir Robert Burnett David. b. at Paris, March 31, 1826; d. at Montreux, Switzerland, Nov. 16, 1893. English diplomat; son of David Richard Morier. He held diplomatic posts (1853–76) at various German courts, where he became an expert on the Schleswig-Holstein question and gained the enmity of Bismarck through his interference in local politics. He served as minister at Lisbon (1876–81) and at Madrid (1881–84), and as ambassador at St. Petersburg (1884–93), where he prevented (1885) war between England and Russia after a Russian attack in Afghanistan.

Mörike (mė'ri.kę), Eduard. b. at Ludwigsburg, Württemberg, Germany, Sept. 8, 1804; d. at Stuttgart, Württemberg, June 4, 1875. German poet of the Swabian school, considered to have been one of the most natural and unspoiled of all German lyricists. As a pastor he occupied various pulpits in the Swabian countryside, then became in 1851 a teacher of literature at Stuttgart. Many of his poems (1838, 1848) have been set to music, notably by Hugo Wolf. He also wrote an unfinished novel, Maler Nolten (1832), and a story, Mozart auf der Reise nach Prag (1856).

Morillo (mō.rē'lyō), Pablo. [Title, Conde de Cartagena.] b. in Zamora, Spain, 1777; d. July 27, 1838. Spanish general. As field marshal he commanded 10,600 men sent early in 1815 to reduce the revolted provinces of Venezuela and New Granada. At first he swept all opposition before him, occupied Caracas in May, 1815; took Cartagena, after a siege of four months, on Dec. 6, and on May 26, 1816, entered Bogotá, where he executed 125 prominent citizens. In 1817 he met with many reverses in Venezuela, and in 1819 was outwitted by Simón Bolívar, who during his absence won the battle of Boyacá (August 7) and recovered Bogotá. In 1820 he signed a truce with Bolívar, and was recalled at his own request. He published (1826) an account (Memoirs) of his American campaigns.

Morini (mor'i.nī). Ancient Gallic tribe, mentioned by Julius Caesar as occupying the coast of what is now Belgium and N France between Boulogne and Zeebrugge. They were one of the most rebellious of the peoples whom Caesar encountered.

Morini (mō.rē'nē), Erika. b. at Vienna, Jan. 5, 1906—. Austrian concert violinist.

Morínigo (mō.rē'nē.gō), Higinio. b. 1907—. Paraguayan soldier, politician, and president (1940–48) of Paraguay. He served in the Chaco War, was named chief of staff, minister of war and marine (1940), and minister of interior, and became president on the death of José Félix Estigarribia. He was succeeded, after the elections of 1948, by his minister of finance, Natalicio Gonzalez, who continued the dictatorial methods of Morínigo.

Morioka (mō.rē.ō.kä). Inland city in N Honshu, Japan, on the Kitakami River: metalworking and silk industries; horse fair. It is an important agricultural trade center. 117,578 (1950).

Moriscos (mǭ.ris'kōz). In Spanish history, those Moors who accepted Christianity after their conquest by the Spaniards. They were expelled from Spain in 1609.

Morison (mor'i sọn), James Augustus Cotter. b. at London, 1832; d. Feb. 26, 1888. English author. He was a positivist in philosophy. He was a contributor to the Saturday Review, and published Life and Times of Saint Bernard (1863), The Service of Man: an Essay towards the Religion of the Future (1887), and others.

Morison, Robert. b. at Aberdeen, Scotland, 1620; d. Nov. 10, 1683. Scottish botanist. He served the king in the English Civil War, and took his doctor's degree at Angers in 1648. In 1650 he became superintendent of the garden founded at Blois by Gaston, Duc d' Orléans. After the Restoration he was made botanist royal, court physician, and professor of botany at Oxford. He published Plantarum Historia Universalis Oxoniensis (1680).

Morison, Samuel Eliot. b. at Boston, July 9, 1887—. American historian. A member (1915 et seq.) of the Harvard faculty, he was Harmsworth professor of American history (1922–25) at Oxford. He was attached (1918–19) to the Russian division of the American commission to negotiate peace at Paris. He was appointed (1942) historian of U.S. naval operations in World War II. Author of Life of Harrison Gray Otis (1913), Oxford History of the United States (1927), Builders of the Bay Colony (1930), Puritan Pronaos (1936), Second Voyage of Columbus (1939), History of U.S. Naval Operations in World War II (1947 et seq.), and other works. He was awarded the Jusserand medal and the Loubat prize for his Tercentennial History of Harvard University (5 vols., 1930–36), and was awarded the Pulitzer prize for Admiral of the Ocean Sea (1942), a biography of Columbus. He was coauthor with Henry Steele Commager of The Growth of the American Republic (1930).

Morituri Salutamus (mor.i.tū'rī sal.ụ.tā'mus, mô.ri.tö'rē sä.lö.tä'mus). Poem by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, published in The Masque of Pandora, and Other Poems (1875).

Moritz (mō'rits). German form of Maurice.

Moritz, Karl Philipp. b. at Hameln, Germany, Sept. 15, 1756; d. at Dresden, Germany, June 27, 1793. German prose writer, chiefly remembered for his autobiographical novel Anton Reiser (1785–90). His life was varied: he began as a hat-maker's apprentice, tried acting for a while, managed to get an education, and became a teacher, at one time at Johann Basedow's Philanthropin at Dessau, eventually as professor at Berlin. He traveled in England and wrote Reisen eines Deutschen in England (1783), which was translated into English and became a favorite there. He wrote a similar book (Reisen eines Deutschen in Italien, 1792–93) about his sojourn in Italy, where he was associated with Goethe. Anton Reiser is one of the important books of the period; its influence on Goethe's Wilhelm Meister is generally recognized. Moritz dedicated his Versuch einer deutschen Prosodie (1786) to Frederick the Great.

Morkere (môr'ker''ę). See Morcar or Morkere.

Morlacchi (môr.läk'kē), Francesco. b. at Perugia, Italy, June 14, 1784; d. at Innsbruck, Austria, Oct. 28, 1841. Italian composer and conductor (1810 et seq.) of the Italian Opera at Dresden. His work consists mainly of operas, such as Le Danaïde (1810), Laodicea (1817), La Morte d'Abel (1821), Il Colombo (1828), and Il Rinnegato (1832), and includes also religious works, organ compositions, and songs.

Morlaix (môr.le). Town in NW France, in the department of Finistère, situated at the head of an estuary ab. 7 mi. from the English Channel, NE of Brest. It has a port which exports butter and imports coal and wood, and is dominated by a monumental stone viaduct which carries the railroad from Paris to Brest. The Church of Saint-Melaine dates from the 15th century; there are other old churches and houses. The town also has flour mills and dairies. 15,121 (1946).

Morland (môr'land), Catherine. Principal character in Jane Austen's novel Northanger Abbey.

Morland, George. b. at London, June 26, 1763; d. there, Oct. 27, 1804. English painter, son of a painter and picture dealer. In 1786 he married a sister of James Ward the animal painter. He painted moralities in the manner of Hogarth, also genre and animals, and was noted equally for the brilliancy of his work and the extreme recklessness of his life. His picture Inside of a Stable is in the National Gallery.

Morland, Henry. In George Colman the younger's Heir-at-Law, the missing and finally reappearing heir to the title and estates of Lord Duberly.

Morleena Kenwigs (môr.lē'na ken'wigz). See Kenwigs, Morleena.

Morley (môr'li). Municipal borough and manufacturing town in C England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, ab. 5 mi. SW of Leeds, ab. 183 mi. N of London by rail. It has manufactures of heavy woolens and worsteds, glass, leather, and miners' safety lamps. Coal mining and stone quarrying are also carried on. 39,783 (1951).

Morley, 11th Baron. A title of Parker, William.

Morley, Christopher. [Full name, Christopher Darlington Morley.] b. at Haverford, Pa., May 5, 1890—. American journalist and writer; brother of Felix Morley. He was a Rhodes scholar (1910–13) at Oxford, and an editorial staff member of Doubleday, Page and Company (1913–17), the Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger (1918–20), and the New York Evening Post (1920–24). He was a contributing editor (1924–40) of the Saturday Review of Literature. Author of Parnassus on Wheels (1917), Shandygaff (1918), The Haunted Book Shop (1919), Kathleen (1920), Tales from a Rolltop Desk (1921), Where the Blue Begins (1922), Thunder on the Left (1925), Off the Deep End (1928), Human Being (1932), Mandarin in Manhattan (1933), The Trojan Horse (1937), Kitty Foyle (1939), Thorofare (1942), Spirit Level (1946), The Old Mandarin (1947), The Man Who Made Friends with Himself (1949), and other books. He was the editor of the revised edition (1937, 1948) of Bartlett's Familiar Quotations.

Morley, Edward Williams. b. at Newark, N.J., Jan. 29, 1838; d. Feb. 24, 1923. American chemist and educator, professor of chemistry (1869–1906) at Western Reserve University. He published papers upon chemical and physical topics, especially upon the atomic weight of oxygen.

Morley, Felix. [Full name, Felix Muskett Morley.] b. at Haverford, Pa., Jan. 6, 1894—. American editor, educator, and author; brother of Christopher Morley. He was a Rhodes scholar (1919–21) at Oxford, and a staff member (1922–29) of the Baltimore Sun and editor (1933–40) of the Washington Post. He was president (1940–45) of Haverford College. He is the publisher of Human Events, an analysis of public affairs. Author of Unemployment Relief in Great Britain (1924), Our Far Eastern Assignment (1926), and The Society of Nations (1932).

Morley, Frank. b. at Woodbridge, Suffolk, England, Sept. 9, 1860; d. Oct. 17, 1937. American mathematician; father of Christopher Morley and Felix Morley. Author of Introduction to the Theory of Analytic Functions (1898) and Inversive Geometry (1933).

Morley, Henry. b. at London, Sept. 15, 1822; d. May 14, 1894. English author. He was educated at the Moravian school at Neuwied, Germany, and at King's College, London. He practiced medicine from 1844 to 1848. He wrote for Household Words and the Examiner from 1850 to 1864, and was editor of the latter during part of that time, was professor of English language and literature from 1865 to 1889 at University College, London, held the same position at Queen's College, London, from 1878, and became principal of University Hall in 1882. He wrote A Defence of Ignorance (1851), lives of Palissy (1852), Cardan (1854), and Cornelius Agrippa (1856), Memoirs of Bartholomew Fair (1857), English Writers before Chaucer (1864–67), First Sketch of English Literature (1873), and Library of English Literature. He edited Boswell's Life of Johnson in 1886. He began English Writers in 1887; ten volumes had been issued at his death. In 1864–67 a preliminary book with the same title was published, which was afterward merged in the larger work.

Morley, John. [Title, 1st Viscount Morley of Blackburn.] b. at Blackburn, Lancashire, England, Dec. 24, 1838; d. at London, Sept. 23, 1923. English statesman, journalist, editor, critic, and biographer. He was educated at Cheltenham College and at Lincoln College, Oxford. He served on the staff of the Saturday Review, and was editor (1867–82) of the Fortnightly Review. A liberal in politics and religion, he turned the conservative Pall Mall Gazette into a radical organ under his editorship (1880–83). He was a member of Parliament (1883–1908). He was a supporter of Gladstone's Irish and general policy, was chief secretary for Ireland in 1886, was reappointed in 1892, was secretary of state for India (December, 1905–1910), and lord president of the council (1910). He was editor of the English Men of Letters series, writing for it Edmund Burke (1867). Author of Critical Miscellanies (1871, 1877, 1886, 1908) and Studies in Literature (1891), criticism; Voltaire (1872), Rousseau (1873), Diderot (1878), Richard Cobden (1881), Walpole (1889), Cromwell (1900), and William Ewart Gladstone (3 vols., 1903), biography; On Compromise (1874), a philosophical essay; and Recollections (1917).

Morley, Margaret Warner. b. at Montrose, Iowa, Feb. 17, 1858; d. at Washington, D.C., Dec. 12, 1923. American educator, entomologist, and author of children's books on nature and sex. She studied biology at Armour Institute, Chicago, and at the Woods Hole, Mass., marine biological laboratories, and taught at Oswego and Milwaukee, Wis., state normal schools, the high school at Leavenworth, Kan., and Armour Institute. Her works include A Song of Life (1891), Seed Babies (1896), and The Apple-Tree Sprite (1915).

Morley, Samuel. b. at Hackney, London, Oct. 15, 1809; d. in England, Sept. 5, 1886. English manufacturer and politician. With a fortune gained in hosiery manufacture, he took an active interest in dissenting religious movements and temperance activities. He became owner of the London Daily News and reduced its price to a penny. He served (1868–85) in Parliament, where he supported W. E. Gladstone and worked to safeguard the interests of dissenters. Although early opposed to state-supported education, he later favored it and served (1870–76) on the London school board.

Morley, Sylvanus Griswold. b. at Chester, Pa., June 7, 1883; d. at Santa Fe, N.M., Sept. 2, 1948. American archaeologist. Associated (1915 et seq.) with the Carnegie Institute of Washington, he headed Carnegie expeditions to Central America and was director (1924–40) of its Chichén Itzá project. He was a specialist in Maya hieroglyphic writing and Central American archaeology. Author of An Introduction to the Study of Maya Hieroglyphs (1915), The Inscriptions at Copán (1920), Guide Book to the Ruins of Quiriguá (1935), The Inscriptions of Peten (1937), and other works.

Morley, Thomas. b. in England, c1557; d. at London, c1603. English musician. He was a pupil of the musician William Byrd. He wrote six books of canzonets or madrigals (1593–1600) and A Plaine and Easie Introduction to Practicall Musicke (1597), and edited The Triumphs of Oriana (1601), a collection of madrigals in honor of Queen Elizabeth and other books of canzonets, madrigals, and similar compositions. He composed the music to Shakespeare's It Was a Lover and His Lass and O Mistress Mine, although possibly the music was written first and Shakespeare wrote the words to Morley's tunes.

Morley-Minto Reforms (-min'tō). [Also known as the Indian Councils Act of 1909.] Plan for administrative reform of the government of India which provided for creation of separate electorates for the various communities of India, increased Indian participation in the legislative council of the governor general and in the councils of the various provinces, and introduced the elective process in filling vacant seats. Proposed jointly by the viceroy, Gilbert John Elliot-Murray-Kynynmond, 4th Earl of Minto, and the secretary of state for India, John, Viscount Morley, this plan was enacted as the Indian Councils Act of 1909.

Mormon (môr'mon), Book of. One of the authoritative writings of the Church of Latter-Day Saints, by which group it is considered to be the record of certain ancient peoples in America, abridged by the prophet Mormon, written on golden plates, and discovered by Joseph Smith in (W New York), and translated by him. By anti-Mormons it is generally regarded as taken from a romance written c1811 by Solomon Spaulding, whose manuscript was used by Smith and Sidney Rigdon.

Mormons. See under Latter-Day Saints.

"Mormon State." Occasional nickname of Utah.

Mormon Temple. See Temple, Mormon.

Mormon War. Name applied to the disturbances (1844–46) resulting from the antagonism prevailing between the followers of Joseph Smith at Nauvoo, Ill., and their opponents in the adjacent region. One mob action caused the death (June 27, 1844) of Smith, and his brother Hyrum. The state militia was called out on at least two occasions to preserve order, and the difficulties came to an end with the mass migration of Smith's adherents to the West, an exodus that was completed in December, 1846, from Nauvoo.

Mormugão (môr.mö.gouñ'). [Also: Marmagão, Mormugoa (môr.mo.gō'ą).] Port of the Portuguese colony of Goa, on the W coast of the peninsula of India, ab. 275 mi. S of Bombay. The port lies on an estuary and is protected by breakwaters. Mormugão is the chief port for the colony and for nearby parts of India. Its chief exports are manganese, peanuts, cotton, coconuts, coffee, and teakwood. Pop. ab. 10,000.

Mornay (môr.nā), Philippe de. [Title, Seigneur du Plessis-Marly; known as Duplessis-Mornay.] b. at the Château Buhy, in Normandy, France, Nov. 5, 1549; d. at La Forêt-sur-Sèvre, France, Nov. 11, 1623. French diplomat, politician, and Huguenot leader. His Mémoires were published in 1624.

Mörne (mêr'ne), Arvid. b. at Kuopio, Finland, 1876; d. at Helsinki, Finland, 1946. Finnish poet and prose writer in Swedish. Mörne is perhaps the most classically majestic of the modern Finnish poets. His work reflects his love of Finland, his faith in Western culture as against that of Russia. Among his numerous works were Rytm och rim (Rhythm and Rhyme, 1899), Döda år (Dead Years, 1910), Sommarnatten (The Summer Night, 1916), Höstlig dikt (Autumnal Poetry, 1919), Vandringen och vägen (The Wandering and the Road, 1924), Hjärtat och svärdet (The Heart and the Sword, 1935), Sånger i världsskymning (Songs in the World Twilight, 1941), and Sfinxen och pyramiden (The Sphinx and the Pyramid, 1944).

Mornet (môr.ne), André. [Full name, Constant Victor André Mornet.] b. at La Chatre, Indre, France, Jan. 5, 1870—. French jurist, prosecution attorney in the treason trial (1945) of Philippe Pétain. He also prosecuted the spy Mata Hari, and Bolo Pacha, a German agent, during World War I.

Mornington (môr'ning.ton), 2nd Earl of. A title of Wellesley, Richard Colley.

Morny (môr.nē), Charles Auguste Louis Joseph. Duc de. b. at Paris, Oct. 23, 1811; d. there, March 10, 1865. French politician; illegitimate son of Auguste Charles Joseph, Comte de Flahaut de la Billarderie, and Queen Hortense (Beauharnais); half-brother of Napoleon III. He was a leading conspirator in the coup d'état of December, 1851, that made Louis Napoleon dictator of France, and became minister of the interior (1851–52), president of the Corps Législatif (1854–65), and ambassador to Russia (1856–57).

Moro (mō'rō). Former province of the Philippine Islands, in the Sulu Archipelago and S and W Mindanao: now divided into Sulu, Davao, Cotabato, and parts of Zamboanga and Lanao provinces.

Moro, Attoni (or Antonis). [Called Sir Anthony More.] b. at Utrecht, Netherlands, c1512; d. at Antwerp, Belgium, c1578. Dutch portrait painter.

Moro, Ernst. b. at Laibach, Austria (now Ljubljana, Yugoslavia), Dec. 8, 1874—. Austrian pediatrician. He described (1908) a skin reaction obtained by means of application of tuberculin which has since served as a useful diagnostic test. He isolated Lactobacillus acidophilus (1900).

Moro, Il. See Sforza, Lodovico (or Ludovic).

Morocco (mō.rok'ō). [Also: Marocco; Arabic: El Maghreb el Aqsa or Moghreb el Aksa, meaning "Farthest West"; French, Maroc; Spanish, Marruecos.] Sultanate in NW Africa, bounded by the Mediterranean Sea on the N, Algeria on the E, the Atlantic Ocean on the NW and W, and the Aïn-Sefra territory of Algeria and the Sahara on the S. It is traversed from W to E by the Atlas Mountains. The inhabitants are chiefly Arabs, Berbers, Europeans, and Jews. The religion is largely Mohammedanism. Morocco corresponds to the ancient Mauretania Tingitana. It was conquered by the Arabs c700, was under the Almoravides in the 11th and 12th centuries and under the Almohades in the 12th and 13th, flourished in the 16th century and part of the 17th, and was defeated in war with France in 1844, and in war with Spain (1859–60). The Riffian tribes of the N came into conflict with Spain in 1893, and again in 1909 and 1911. A French protectorate was established in Morocco in 1912 by agreement between France and Germany, and a Franco-Spanish territorial agreement was signed in November, 1912. In principle the government is an absolute monarchy in which the sultan exercises supreme religious and civil authority. However, the country is divided into two zones, French and Spanish, each having a different system of administration, and the international area of Tangier. Capitals: Rabat, Fez, Marrakech, and Meknès; area, ab. 172,104 sq. mi.; pop. ab. ten million.

Morocco. Name sometimes incorrectly applied to Marrakech.

Morocco, French. French zone of Morocco, N Africa, bounded on the N by Spanish Morocco (although the boundary has not been fully demarcated), on the E and SE by Algeria, and on the SW and W by the Spanish Sahara and the Atlantic Ocean. It came into being in 1912 after a French agreement with the sultan at Fez and with the Spanish. Under the French constitution French Morocco is an associate state within the French Union, to which it can send delegates if it so desires. The sultan is the nominal ruler, but real authority is exercised by France through its resident general, who serves as minister of foreign affairs to the sultan. French Morocco is divided into three principal zones: the populous region of plains and low hills and tablelands lying between the Atlas Mountains and the Atlantic coast, and extending S to Mogador; the C mountain region of the Atlas consisting of three principal ranges, the Middle Atlas, High Atlas, and Anti-Atlas; and the Sahara desert region SE of the Atlas. The agriculture of the lowland region is similar to that of the Mediterranean lands; the chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, maize, and millet. There are also extensive orchards producing olives, figs, almonds, dates, oranges, and lemons. Since so much of the country is mountainous, cultivated land occupies only about 12 percent of the total area. The raising of livestock is of great importance, and the foothills and mountains of the Atlas are extensively grazed by sheep and goats; there is also considerable cattle raising, and the donkey is the chief pack animal. The mountain slopes have extensive forests of cedars, evergreen oaks, cork-oak, and pine; about nine percent of French Morocco is forested. The highest peaks of the Atlas (Toubkal, 13,665 ft.) are covered with permanent snow and ice, and have an Alpine character. The climate of the country varies with altitude and location; along the Atlantic coast there are warm summers and mild winters; in the interior basins, hot summers and rather cold winters with occasional snow in winter; in the higher mountains, cool summers and cold winters, and in the Sahara, very hot summers and mild winters. Winters are humid, and summers are dry. The chief mineral product is phosphate, of which over three million tons were exported in 1948 through Casablanca and Safi; there are also important manganese mines, and coal and iron ore are produced in modest quantity. Modern industries have begun to develop at Casablanca and a few other coastal ports, but the typical industries of the Moroccan towns are handicrafts. The country has an extensive rail network, extending S to Marrakech, N to Tangier, and E into Algeria, and about 6,000 mi. of paved roads. The Moslem population of Morocco consists of two distinct groups: Arab and Berber. The former are found in the cities and towns, and in the Saharan region; the sedentary rural population is almost entirely Berber. Capital, Rabat; area, 161,042 sq. mi.; pop. 8,617,387 (1947) including Moslem Berbers and Arabs, 8,088,551; Jews, 203,839; French, 231,136; Algerian Moslems, 32,916; Spanish, 28,055; others, 32,890.

Morocco, Southern Protectorate of. See Southern Protectorate of Morocco.

Morocco, Spanish. [Official name, Moroccan Protectorate; Spanish, Protectorado de Marruecos.] Spanish zone of Morocco, occupying the NW corner of Africa, with the exception of the portion occupied by the Tangier international zone, and the cities of Ceuta and Melilla, geographically situated in Spanish Morocco, and certain small islands, which are administratively parts of Spain, and are not included in the protectorate. The sultan of Morocco is represented in this zone by a khalifa, and the administration is controlled by a Spanish high commissioner (residing at Tetuán), assisted by six delegates. Spain acquired (1912) her rights in Morocco at the same time as France. The Spanish zone is traversed by the railroad from Tangier to French Morocco. The major portion of Spanish Morocco is occupied by the mountain mass of the Rif, which rises abruptly from the Mediterranean Sea. There is very little lowland area for farming; the chief areas are the narrow coastal plain bordering the Atlantic S of Tangier, and a narrow strip of plain E of Melilla. The mountains are principally utilized for the grazing of sheep and goats; livestock raising and fishing are two major occupations. The iron ore mined in the E part of the zone is exported through the port of Melilla. Lead, antimony, and manganese ore are exported in small quantities. Officially part of Spanish Morocco, although not generally thought of as part of it, are two areas: the territory of Ifni, a coastal enclave surrounded by the S part of French Morocco; and the Southern Protectorate of Morocco (the Spanish protectorate of the southern zone of Morocco, as opposed to the Spanish protectorate of the northern zone), which includes the area between Cape Juby and the S boundary of French Morocco, an area generally shown on maps as part of Río de Oro. This area, mostly desert and of little use, is administered from Tetuán. Ifni was ceded outright to Spain by Morocco in 1860, but Spain did not actually raise her flag until 1934. Capital, Tetuán; total area of Spanish Morocco, 18,372 sq. mi.; pop. 1,142,009 (1945).

Moro-Giafferi (mo.rō.zhyä.fe.rē), Vincent de. b. at Paris, June 6, 1878—. French lawyer and political leader, best known for his role as defense counsel in French political and criminal trials. He was a member (1934) of the Reichstag trial inquiry group at London. He served as a deputy (1919–28, 1946 et seq.).

Morogoro (mō.rō.gō'rō). Town in E Africa, in Tanganyika territory, ab. 130 mi. W of Dar es Salaam, with which it is connected by rail. It is one of the chief centers of native cotton culture; mica is mined in the vicinity. In 1916 it was the last town in E Africa held by the Germans and was for a while the site of the provisional government.

Moro Gulf (mō'rō). Embayment of the Celebes Sea on the S coast of Mindanao island, Philippine Islands. Its two deepest indentations into the island are known as Illana Bay and Sibuguey Bay.

Moroleón (mō''rō.lā.ōn'). City in C Mexico, in Guanajuato state. 10,418 (1940).

Morón (mō.rōn'). City in N Cuba, in Camagüey province: railway junction, and shipping point for sugar and tobacco. 13,954 (1943).

Morona (mō.rō'nä). River in E central Ecuador and N Peru, flowing S from the E Andes to join the Marañon River. Length, ab. 250 mi.

Morón de la Frontera (mō.rōn' dā lā frōn.tā'rä). [Also, Morón.] Town in S Spain, in the province of Sevilla, ab. 35 mi. SE of Seville. It has hematite mines, marble quarries, and a trade in olive oil. There is a Gothic church, and a Moorish castle. 26,586 (1940).

Morone (mō.rō'nā), Giovanni di. b. at Milan, Italy, 1509; d. at Rome, Dec. 1, 1580. Italian cardinal and diplomat.

Moroni (mō.rō'nē) or Morone (mō.rō'nā), Giambattista. b. at Albino, near Bergamo, Italy, c1525; d. c1578. Italian portrait painter, considered one of the best of the Renaissance and said to have been an influence on Titian and Van Dyck. His Portrait of Bartolomeo Bongo is in the Metropolitan Museum at New York.

Moronu (mō.rō'nō). [Also, Morenou.] One of the Sudanic-speaking Anyi peoples of W Africa, inhabiting a region in SE Ivory Coast.

Moro Pass (mō'rō). Mountain pass leading from Macugnaga, in N Italy, N over the Valais Alps, to Saas-Fée, in Switzerland. Elevation, 9,390 ft.

Moros (mō'rōz). Moslem group (including the Lanao, Magindanao, and Sulu) of Mindanao and the Sulu Archipelago in the Philippine Islands and Borneo, who number nearly 700,000 (1939). They were converted to Islam toward the end of the 15th century, and were once greatly feared throughout Indonesia as pirates. They are largely of Malay stock, and do not comprise a separate linguistic group.

Morose (mō.rōs'). In Ben Jonson's comedy Epicœne, or The Silent Woman, a melancholy recluse who can bear no sound except that of his own voice.

Morosini (mō.rō.sē'nē), Andrea. b. at Venice, Feb. 13, 1558; d. June 29, 1618. Venetian historian. He studied belles-lettres at Padua, and held various public offices at Venice, eventually obtaining a seat in the Council of Ten. He was appointed historiographer of the republic in 1598. He wrote Historia Veneta ab anno 1521 ad annum 1615 (1623) and others.

Morosini, Francesco. b. 1618; d. at Nauplia, Greece, Jan. 6, 1694. Venetian general. He surrendered Candia, Crete, to the Turks in 1669, but was distinguished later for his victories over them, especially for his conquest of the Morea (Peloponnesus). He was elected (1688) doge of Venice.

Morotai (mō.rō.tī'). Island in E Indonesia, in the province of Moluccas, N of Halmahera: tropical woods, resins; fisheries. In World War II the island was occupied by the Japanese, who established an airfield; it was occupied by U.S. forces in September, 1944.

Morpeth (môr'pėth). Municipal borough and market town in NE England, in Northumberland, ab. 14 mi. N of Newcastle, ab. 285 mi. N of London by rail. It has an iron industry and coal mining. Morpeth was an important fortress town in the period of English-Scottish border disputes. 10,797 (1951).

Morpeth, Viscount. Title of Howard, Charles (1674–1738), and of Howard, George William Frederick (1802–64).

Morpheus (môr'fē.us). In Greek mythology, one of the sons of Hypnos, or Sleep. Morpheus was the bringer of dreams. He is more prominent in literary allusion than in mythology itself, and hence, by extension, is very commonly referred to as the god of sleep.

Morphy (môr'fi), Paul Charles. b. at New Orleans, La., June 22, 1837; d. there, July 10, 1884. American chess master, whose brilliant play made him an almost legendary figure during his lifetime and established a reputation that makes many still consider him the greatest player who ever lived. He won the first American Masters tournament at New York in 1857, and during the next few years he decisively defeated in set match play every European master of note who would meet him. He retired from chess after offering odds to any player in the world, and finding none willing to accept the challenge. He became insane in his later years.

Morra (môr'ra), Alberto di. Original name of Pope Gregory VIII.

Morrice (mor'is), Gil (or Childe). Title and hero of a popular Scottish ballad, which exists in seven versions. Morrice is killed by his mother's husband, Lord Barnard (or John Steward in one version), who is not his father. The ballad is preserved also in Percy's Reliques of Ancient English Poetry.

Morrigan (môr'i.ạn). [Also, Morrigu (môr'i.ū).] In Old Irish mythology, one of three war goddesses (with Neman and Macha). Sometimes Badb (Old Irish war goddess) is interchangeable with Morrigan; sometimes Badb is identified with Morrigan; sometimes Morrigan is a collective name for all three. Their functions were practically identical. Heads of warriors killed in battle were dedicated to one or the other of the three. They all appeared on the battlefields in the form of ravens, and from this probably came the belief that they ate the flesh of those killed in battle. In the legends, Morrigan admired and loved Cuchulain, worked against him when he spurned her, but was devoted enough to warn him against the battle in which he met death.

Morrill (mor'il), Anson Peaslee. b. at Belgrade, Me., June 10, 1803; d. at Augusta, Me., July 4, 1887. American politician, elected (1855) governor of Maine. He was a U.S. congressman (1861–63), and served as a delegate (1856) to the first Republican national convention.

Morrill, Justin Smith. b. at Strafford, Vt., April 14, 1810; d. at Washington, D.C., Dec. 28, 1898. American politician. He was a member of Congress from Vermont (1855–67), and occupied a seat in the U.S. Senate (1867–98). He is now chiefly remembered for his connection with the Morrill Act (1862).

Morrill, Lot Myrick. b. at Belgrade, Me., May 3, 1812; d. at Augusta, Me., Jan. 10, 1883. American politician, U.S. secretary of the treasury (1876–77) under Grant. He was governor of Maine (1858–60) and U.S. senator from Maine (1861–76).

Morrill Act. Act passed by the U.S. Congress (July 2, 1862) granting public land for the support of industrial and agricultural education. Its sponsor, Representative Justin S. Morrill of Vermont, was strongly influenced by Jonathan Baldwin Turner of Illinois, who may be accounted the actual father of the act. Under the terms of this measure 30,000 acres of land were to be apportioned to each state for each representative or senator to which it was entitled in Congress. In this manner approximately 13 million acres of the public domain have been given to the various states for the establishment of mechanical and agricultural colleges. The act gave a tremendous impetus to the movement for establishing state universities.

Morrilton (mor'il.tọn). City in C Arkansas, county seat of Conway County: cotton-processing, textile, and meat-packing industries. 5,483 (1950).

Morris (mor'is). City in NE Illinois, county seat of Grundy County, ab. 54 mi. SW of Chicago: manufactures of paper, food products, leather, and vending machines. 6,926 (1950).

Morris. City in SW Minnesota, county seat of Stevens County. 3,811 (1950).

Morris, Charles. [Called the "Statesman of the American Navy."] b. at Woodstock, Conn., July 26, 1784; d. Jan. 27, 1856. American naval officer, wounded while serving on the Constitution in its victory (Aug. 19, 1812) over the Guerrière. He was appointed (1823) a member of the board of navy commissioners with John Rodgers and Isaac Chauncey, and served as commandant (1827–32) of the Boston navy yard. He helped in the burning (1803) of the frigate Philadelphia in Tripoli harbor after the ship had been captured; he was first aboard in the boarding party. He gained his epithet by his administrative ability.

Morris, Charles. b. at Chester, Pa., Oct. 1, 1833; d. Sept. 6, 1922. American writer and editor. Author of New Century History of the United States (1900), The World's Famous Orators (1903), Heroes of Discovery in America (1919), and Heroes of the Navy in America (1919). He edited Winston's Encyclopedia.

Morris, Clara. b. at Toronto, Canada, March 17, 1848; d. at New Canaan, Conn., Nov. 20, 1925. American actress. She was particularly successful in emotional characters, and in depicting death scenes. Among her best parts were Camille, Mercy Merrick in The New Magdalen, Renée, and Cora in L'Article 47.

Morris, Dinah. Principal female character in George Eliot's Adam Bede. She is a factory girl and Wesleyan preacher, with a spiritual clear-sighted nature, and delicate sensitiveness to the condition and wants of others. She is said to be in some particulars a sketch from an aunt of the author, Elizabeth Evans.

Morris, Edita. b. at Örebro, Sweden, March 5, 1903—. American novelist and short-story writer. Author of Birth of an Old Lady (1938), My Darling from the Lions (1943), Three Who Loved (1945), and Charade (1948).

Morris, Edward Joy. b. at Philadelphia, July 16, 1815; d. there, Dec. 31, 1881. American author, politician, and diplomat. He helped to organize the Republican Party, and was a U.S. congressman (1843–45, 1857–61).

Morris, George Pope. b. at Philadelphia, Oct. 10, 1802; d. at New York, July 6, 1864. American journalist and poet. With Samuel Woodworth he established the New York Mirror in 1824, with N. P. Willis the New Mirror in 1843, and shortly afterward the Evening Mirror. In 1845 he founded the National Press. Its name was changed in a few months to The Home Journal, which he edited with Willis till shortly before his death. He wrote Briarcliff (1825), The Deserted Bride and Other Poems (1838), and The Little Frenchman and His Water Lots, with Other Sketches of the Times (1839), and edited American Melodies and, with N. P. Willis, The Prose and Poetry of America (1845). Among his best-known poems are Woodman, Spare that Tree and My Mother's Bible.

Morris, Gouverneur. b. at Morrisania, N.Y., Jan. 31, 1752; d. there, Nov. 6, 1816. American statesman and diplomat; half brother of Lewis Morris (1726–98) and of Richard Morris (1730–1810). He was graduated (1768) from King's College (later Columbia), studied law privately, and was admitted to the bar at the age of 19. He was a conservative during the years that preceded the outbreak of the Revolution. For a time he was under suspicion as a Loyalist, but in May, 1775, appeared in the New York provincial congress, where he played the role of a moderate. A member of the New York constitutional convention (1776), he helped draft the state constitution. He was a member (1778–79) of the Continental Congress, serving on several of the most important committees and drafting vital documents. In 1779 he moved to Philadelphia, where he served (1781–85) as assistant superintendent of finance under Robert Morris. He was a member of the Federal Convention (1787), in which he took a prominent part, and went (c1789) to Paris as a commercial agent. In 1792 he was appointed U.S. minister to France, remaining at that post until his recall in 1794. Before returning to the U.S., he spent four years in traveling through Great Britain and the Continent. The diary which Morris kept while in Revolutionary France comprises a voluminous and important record of the events of those years. A Federalist, he was elected (April, 1800) to fill a vacancy in the U.S. Senate, but was defeated for reëlection in 1802. He was active in behalf of the Erie Canal project and served as chairman of the canal commission. Conservative to the core, he was a vigorous opponent of the Republican administrations under Jefferson and Madison, and toward the end of his days took refuge in cynicism and disillusionment. See The Life of Gouverneur Morris, with Selections from his Correspondence, by Jared Sparks (3 vols., 1832), The Diary and Letters of Gouverneur Morris, edited by Anne Carey Morris (2 vols., 1888), and Gouverneur Morris, by Theodore Roosevelt (1888).

Morris, Gouverneur. b. at New York, Feb. 7, 1876—. American writer and banker; great-grandson of Gouverneur Morris (1752–1816). His books include Tom Beauling (1901), Aladdin O'Brien (1902), The Pagan's Progress (1904), Ellen and Mr. Man (1904), Putting on the Screws (1909), When My Ship Comes In (1915), We Three (1916), The Wild Goose (1919), and Tiger Island (1934).

Morris, Ira Nelson. b. at Chicago, March 8, 1875; d. there, Jan. 15, 1942. American diplomat; son of Nelson Morris. He was U.S. minister (1914–23) to Sweden. Author of With the Trade Winds (1897) and From an American Legation (1926).

Morris, Lewis. b. on Manhattan Island, N.Y., Oct. 15, 1671; d. at Trenton, N.J., May 21, 1746. American statesman, first governor (1738–46) of New Jersey. He was appointed (1692) to the bench of the superior court of New Jersey, and was active in effecting the separation of that colony from New York. He served (1715–33) as chief justice of both New York and New Jersey, and was governor of the colony from 1738 until his death.

Morris, Lewis. b. at Morrisania, N.Y., April 8, 1726; d. Jan. 22, 1798. American Revolutionary patriot, signer of the Declaration of Independence; half brother of Gouverneur Morris (1752–1816). The inheritor of his father's manor at Morrisania, N of Manhattan, he served (1769) in the provincial assembly, where he was an opponent of British imperial policy. He was a member of the New York provincial convention (1775) and went to the Continental Congress in May, 1775. While in that body he was active in military and Indian affairs. In June, 1776, he became brigadier general in command of the Westchester County militia and thus was not present at Philadelphia when the Declaration of Independence was adopted; he was present, however, at the New York provincial congress which endorsed (July 9, 1776) the measure and later in 1776 signed the Declaration. He took part in the New York campaign in the fall of 1776, served (May, 1777–February, 1778) as a county judge in Westchester, and on various occasions between 1777 and 1790 was a member of the upper house of the state legislature. At the end of the war he retired as a major general of militia and became (1784) a member of the first Board of Regents of the University of New York. In 1788 he was present at the Poughkeepsie Convention as a supporter of the ratification of federal Constitution.

Morris, Sir Lewis. b. at Carmarthen, Wales, Jan. 23, 1833; d. at Penrhyn, Wales, Nov. 12, 1907. Welsh poet and essayist. He was called to the bar in 1861, and practiced law until 1880. He was one of the founders (1893) of the University of Wales. Author of Songs of Two Worlds (3 series, 1871, 1874, 1875), The Epic of Hades (1877), Gwen (1879), The Ode of Life (1880), Songs Unsung (1883), Gycia (1886), Songs of Britain (1887), A Vision of Saints (1890), and a volume of essays, The New Rambler (1905). Morris's poetry was ridiculed by the Saturday Review and severely criticized by the Athenaeum.

Morris, Lewis Richard. b. at Scarsdale, N.Y., Nov. 2, 1760; d. at Springfield, Vt., Dec. 29, 1825. American congressman (1797–1803) who, by absenting himself from the House of Representatives on the 36th ballot during the Jefferson-Burr contest (1800) for the presidency, turned the election for Jefferson; son of Richard Morris (1730–1810). He was first U.S. marshal (1791–1801) in the Vermont district, represented (1795 et seq.) Federalist Springfield in the state assembly, and was major general (1795–1817) of the militia.

Morris, Mary Philipse. b. July 3, 1730; d. July 18, 1825. Wife of the New York Loyalist Roger Morris. A reigning beauty of colonial New York, she was, according to legend, sought in marriage by George Washington while he was a young officer At her marriage in January, 1758, her father, Frederic Philipse, supplied her with a dowry of 51,000 acres in Dutchess County with 156 tenants. This property was later, through claims sold by her children to John Jacob Astor, a basis for the so-called Putnam County Land Case.

Morris, May. b. at Upton, England, March 25, 1863; d. at Lechdale, England, Oct. 16, 1938. English embroidery designer and editor; daughter of William Morris. She edited and wrote introductions to her father's collected works (24 vols.). She lectured on embroidery, jewelry, costume, and pattern designing in the U.S. and England, was a designer for the firm of Morris and Company, and was chairman and founder of the Women's Guild of Arts.

Morris, Nelson. b. at Hechingen, Germany, Jan. 21, 1838; d. at Chicago, Aug. 27, 1907. American cattle trader and meat packer. Instrumental in supplying livestock to the Union forces during the Civil War, he pioneered in transporting dressed beef from Chicago to the Atlantic seaboard. He headed the Morris and Company plant, one of the first opened at the Union Stock Yards, Chicago, and at one time was the world's most extensive cattle feeder. He established the Nelson Morris Institute of Pathological Research.

Morris, Richard. b. Aug. 15, 1730; d. at Scarsdale, N.Y., April 11, 1810. American jurist; half brother of Gouverneur Morris (1752–1816). He was appointed (1779) to succeed John Jay as chief justice of the New York supreme court, where he served until his retirement (1790). He advocated ratification of the proposed federal Constitution.

Morris, Richard. b. at London, Sept. 8, 1833; d. there, May 12, 1894. English philologist. He published The Etymology of Local Names (1857), Specimens of Early English (1867), Historical Outlines of English Accidence (1872), English Grammar (1874), and edited some of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales with notes, and also several texts for the Early English Text Society.

Morris, Robert. b. at or near Liverpool, England, Jan. 31, 1734; d. at Philadelphia, May 8, 1806. American patriot, signer of the Declaration of Independence, a chief financier of the American Revolution. In 1754 he became a member of the Philadelphia commercial and shipping firm of Willing, Morris and Company, subsequently establishing himself as a wealthy member of the community. He signed (1765) the nonimportation agreement and was active in the resistance to enforcement of the Stamp Act. In 1775 he aligned himself with the American cause and was made (June 30, 1775) a member of the Pennsylvania council of safety. During Benjamin Franklin's absence he presided over that body, whose operations benefited by his commercial knowledge. He went (November, 1775) to the Continental Congress, where he became a member of the secret committee for procuring munitions, the committee for providing naval armament, and the committee of secret correspondence. He handled banking business for Congress and took part in supplying the army. Although he voted against the Declaration of Independence on the ground that it was premature, he signed it in August, 1776. After Congress fled from Philadelphia in December, 1776, Morris stayed in the city to carry out the work of procuring supplies and borrowing money. While it is true that he took commissions on his transactions, it is equally true that he took considerable risks; and it is questionable whether Washington's army would have been an effective force in the absence of Morris's aid. In March, 1778, he signed the Articles of Confederation on behalf of Pennsylvania. He served (August–November, 1778) as chairman of the Congressional committee on finance. On Nov. 6, 1778, he took his seat in the Pennsylvania assembly and in the following year was cleared of charges of fraudulent transactions launched against him by Thomas Paine and others. He served again (November, 1780–June, 1781) in the Pennsylvania assembly and in February, 1781, in the midst of a financial crisis, became superintendent of finance. Ranging wide in his efforts to bolster the credit of the American cause, he investigated, pared, and reorganized expenditures, and indulged in many expedients to secure loans and revenues. Failing to raise the needed income, he submitted his resignation (Jan. 24, 1783) but remained in office until September, 1784. He was elected (October, 1785) to the Pennsylvania general assembly and was reëlected in 1786, when he was a delegate to the Annapolis convention. As a proponent of a strong central government, he took part in the Federal Convention (1787) and was one of Pennsylvania's first two U.S. senators, serving from 1789 to 1795. During this time disastrous land speculations served to place him in straitened circumstances. In February, 1798, his fortune having vanished, he was arrested at Philadelphia and taken to the debtors' prison, where he remained for three and a half years. He was released under the federal bankruptcy law and died in obscurity, a broken man. See The Financier and Finances of the American Revolution, by W. G. Sumner (2 vols., 1891), and Robert Morris, Patriot and Financier, by E. P. Oberholtzer (1903).

Morris, Robert. b. at New Brunswick, N.J., c1745; d. there, June 2, 1815. American jurist; natural son of Robert Hunter Morris. He was chief justice (1777–79) of the newly created supreme court of New Jersey. He was appointed (1789) by President Washington as U.S. district judge for New Jersey, where he remained for 25 years.

Morris, Robert Clark. b. at Bridgeport, Conn., Nov. 19, 1869; d. at New York, Oct. 13, 1938. American expert on international law. He was a representative of the U.S. before the U.S. and Venezuelan claims commission (1903) and the mixed claims commission (1922–23). Author of International Arbitration and Procedure (1911), The Pursuit of Happiness (1930), and The Spirit of Liberty (1931), a pamphlet.

Morris, Robert Hunter. b. at Morrisania, N.Y., c1700; d. near Shrewsbury, N.J., Jan. 27, 1764 American politician and jurist; son of Lewis Morris (1671–1746). He served (1738) as a member of the governor's council the year that his father became New Jersey's governor. He was appointed (1738) by Governor Morris as chief justice of New Jersey, a position which he was to hold "during good behavior in same." He became governor (1754–56) of Pennsylvania, a post offered him by John and Thomas Penn.

Morris, Robert Tuttle. b. at Seymour, Conn., May 14, 1857; d. at Stamford, Conn., Jan. 9, 1945. American surgeon and writer, noted for development of operative techniques. An appendectomy specialist, he discovered the "Morris point," which is used in diagnosing chronic appendicitis. His works include Lectures on Appendicitis, A Surgeon's Philosophy, and The Way Out of War.

Morris, Roger. b. in England, Jan. 28, 1727; d. there, Sept. 13, 1794. British soldier and Loyalist in the American Revolution; husband of Mary Philipse Morris. His property confiscated, he left (1783) America permanently, having refused to take sides during the Revolution.

Morris, Roland Sletor. b. at Olympia, Wash., March 11, 1874; d. at Philadelphia, Nov. 23, 1945. American lawyer and diplomat, who served (1917–21) as U.S. ambassador to Japan. He engaged (1918, 1919) in a special mission to Omsk, Siberia, for President Woodrow Wilson. He was appointed (1924) professor of international law at the University of Pennsylvania.

Morris, William. b. at Walthamstow, England, 1834; d. at London, Oct. 3, 1896. English painter, decorator, designer, manufacturer, printer, poet, and socialist leader. While a student at Oxford he helped establish the Oxford and Cambridge Magazine, to which he contributed poems, stories, and essays. At Oxford, too, he began a lifelong friendship with Edward Burne-Jones. Influenced by the writings of John Ruskin and by enthusiasm for the great cathedrals of the Middle Ages, Morris entered an architect's office, but presently turned to painting, studied with Dante Gabriel Rossetti, and in 1857 set up a studio at London with Burne-Jones. Convinced of the ugliness of most furniture and draperies then being manufactured, the two young men set about making all the needed furnishings themselves, designing and building the furniture, designing and dyeing and weaving the textiles. Thus began one of the most significant revolutions in taste of modern times. All his life William Morris was distressed by what he considered to be ugliness, and he might be said to have declared war upon it with the establishment in 1861, with the assistance of Burne-Jones, Rossetti, Ford Madox Brown, and Philip Webb, of the manufacturing and decorating firm at first known as Morris, Marshall, Faulkner and Company, and later as Morris and Company. He revived an interest, almost moribund in England, in textiles and in stained glass; his influence penetrated innumerable homes in that country, in the U.S., and elsewhere, with the furniture, the ceramics, and the wallpapers he designed. Though his glance was backward to the beauties created by medieval craftsmen rather than forward to the functionalism which came to dominate 20th-century design, he prepared the way for the latter by making unprofitable the cheap, meretricious design which had followed the industrialization of the arts and crafts. His principles were propagated by the Arts and Crafts Society (which he founded) and derived support from the Pre-Raphaelite school of painting, in which his friends Rossetti and Burne-Jones were to the fore. In 1890 he took within the scope of his immense energies a revival of the typographical art, founding the Kelmscott Press at Hammersmith, for which he designed type faces, ornamental initials, and borders. Some of the books bearing the Kelmscott imprint were Morris's own writings (he was one of the most prolific writers in 19th-century England. The Arthurian tales and other medieval legends inspired much of his early writing, such as The Defense of Guinevere, and Other Poems (1858); he drew on classical sources for The Life and Death of Jason (1867) and The Earthly Paradise (1868–71); and as the outcome of two trips to Iceland he made translations of the Norse sagas and wrote the epic poem Sigurd the Volsung (1876). It has been pointed out by William Butler Yeats that the protagonists in Morris's poems and romances, whether they be knights and heroes and ladies, or peasants, or workers, are typically healthy, handsome, physically strong, serene men and women, who find the earth and heavens friendly, enjoy life to the full, and come to its end without resentment. In the men and women around him Morris found few who corresponded to his ideal, but rather observed multitudes who were warped physically and mentally, mean, joyless and hopeless. These things, he believed, resulted from unsound social conditions, and the same revulsion against ugliness which caused him to undertake the reform of design in the crafts and manufactures led him to affiliate with the socialist movement in the hope of reforming the design of society. In 1883 he joined the Socialist Democratic Federation; in 1885 he was among those who withdrew from that organization to form the Socialist League; upon the rise in this group of tendencies he disapproved of, he became a member of the Hammersmith Socialist Society. This "great-hearted poet," as Edwin Markham has called him, put all the power of his art into many a poem and song for the workers, and into such prose works, arguing allegorically or directly for Socialism, as The Dream of John Ball (1888), News from Nowhere (1891), and Socialism: Its Growth and Outcome (1893). Among his other books are poetic translations of the Odyssey and the Aeneid; Love is Enough (a morality play, 1873), Three Northern Love Songs (1875), The House of the Wolfings (1889), The Roots of the Mountains (1890), The Story of the Glittering Plain (1890), The Wood Beyond the World (1894), Child Christopher (1895), The Well at the World's End (1896), The Water of the Wondrous Isles (1897), and The Story of the Sundering Flood (1898).

Morris, William Richard. [Title, 1st Viscount Nuffield.] b. Oct. 10, 1877—. English automobile manufacturer and philanthropist.

Morris, Wright. b. at Central City, Neb., Jan. 6, 1910—. American novelist. Author of My Uncle Dudley (1942), The Man Who Was There (1945), The Inhabitants (1946), The Home Place (1948), and Man and Boy (1951).

Morris Island. Sand island at the S entrance of Charleston Harbor, S.C.: the site of Fort Wagner and other fortifications important during the Civil War.

Morris Jesup (jes'up), Cape. Extreme N tip of Greenland, the northernmost known point of land, in lat. 83°39′ N., only 440 mi. S of the North Pole.

Morrison (mor'i.sǫn). City in NW Illinois, county seat of Whiteside County: flour and feed processing center. 3,531 (1950).

Morrison, Arthur. b. near London, Nov. 1, 1863; d. 1945. English journalist and novelist. A civil service clerk at London, he began writing for the National Observer in 1890, contributing to it the work by which he is best known, Tales of Mean Streets (published in book form, 1894). Author of A Child of the Jago (1896), To London Town (1899), Cunning Murrell (1900), and The Hole in the Wall (1902), novels; That Brute Simmons (1904), The Dumb Cake (1907), and A Stroke of Business (1907), plays; Divers Vanities (1905), Green Ginger (1909), and Fiddle o' Dreams (1933), short-story collections; The Painters of Japan (2 vols., 1911), a critical history of Japanese art; Martin Hewitt, Investigator (1894), Chronicles of Martin Hewitt (1895), Adventures of Martin Hewitt (1896), The Dorrington Deed-Box (1897), The Red Triangle (1903), and The Green Eye of Goona (1904), a detective-story series.

Morrison, George Ernest. [Called "Chinese" Morrison.] b. at Geelong, Victoria, Australia, Feb. 4, 1862; d. at Sidmouth, England, May 30, 1920. Australian journalist. His first newspaper assignment came in 1883 when the Melbourne Age sent him to New Guinea; he was speared by natives and nearly died there. Subsequently he went to Scotland to study medicine, traveled (1887) in the U.S., the West Indies, and Spain, and served as a medical officer in Spain, Morocco (1889–90), and Australia (1890–93). He went to China in 1893 and traveled overland from Shanghai to Rangoon (1894). He was appointed Far Eastern correspondent of the London Times in 1895 and thereafter until 1912 covered all major developments in that area. In August, 1912, he became political adviser to the Chinese republic, to which his final service was given at Versailles in 1919. His only published book was An Australian in China (1895).

Morrison, Henry Clay. b. in Montgomery County, Tenn., May 30, 1842; d. Dec. 20, 1921. American clergyman in the Methodist Episcopal Church of the South.

Morrison, Herbert Stanley. b. at London, Jan. 3, 1888—. English politician and labor leader, a member (1923–24, 1929–31, 1935 et seq.) of Parliament, where he was leader (1945–51) of the House of Commons and lord president of the council. He served as chairman (1928–29) of the National Labour Party, and as secretary (1915–47) of the London Labour Party. He was minister of transport (1929–31), of supply (1940), and of home security (1940–45), as well as home secretary (1940–45), serving as a member (1942–45) of the war cabinet during World War II. He became foreign secretary (1951) when Ernest Bevin resigned. His position as leader in London local politics is reflected in his being an alderman (1931–45) and the leader (1939–40) of the London County Council.

Morrison, Mount. Mountain in Antarctica, in Victoria Land, in ab. 76°54′ S., 161°38′ E. Elevation, ab. 5,930 ft.

Morrison, Mount. [Chinese, Hsin Kao Shan; Japanese, Niitaka-yama.] Highest peak of Formosa. Elevation, ab. 12,950 ft.

Morrison, Robert. b. at Morpeth, Northumberland, England, Jan. 5, 1782; d. at Canton, China, Aug. 1, 1834. English missionary. In 1807 he was sent by the London Missionary Society to Canton. In 1815 he published a Chinese grammar and New Testament, in 1818 he founded the Anglo-Chinese College at Malacca, and in 1823 his Chinese dictionary was published by the East India Company.

Morrison, Theodore Nevin. b. at Ottawa, Ill., Feb. 18, 1850; d. Dec. 27, 1929. American Protestant Episcopal clergyman.

Morrison, William Ralls. b. near Waterloo, Ill., c1824; d. Sept. 29, 1909. American politician, member (1863–65, 1873–87) of the U.S. House of Representatives. He was appointed (1887) by President Cleveland a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, of which he was chairman (1892–97).

Morrison, William Shepherd. b. at Torinturk, Argyllshire, Scotland, Aug. 10, 1893—. British politician, member (1929 et seq.) of Parliament. He was financial secretary (1935–36) to the treasury, minister of agriculture and fisheries (1936–39), of food (1939–40), and of town and country planning (1943–45). He was chancellor (1939–40) of the duchy of Lancaster, and postmaster general (1940–43), and in 1951 was elected Speaker of the House of Commons.

Morris Plains (mor′is). Residential borough in N New Jersey, in Morris County, near Morristown: coffee-packing plant. 2,707 (1950).

Morristown (mor′is.toun). Town in N New Jersey, county seat of Morris County, on the Whippany River, ab. 26 mi. NW of New York: residential community; manufactures include clothing and rubber goods. It was the headquarters of the Continental Army under Washington in the winters of 1776–77 and 1779–80. Pop. 17,124 (1950).

Morristown. City in E Tennessee, county seat of Hamblen County, in a dairy and poultry-raising area: marketing center for burley tobacco; manufactures of barrels, canned vegetables, cotton and silk textiles, hosiery, furniture, and leather. Settled in 1783, it is the seat of Morristown Normal and Industrial College. 13,019 (1950).

Morristown. Former name of Asheville, N.C.

Morrisville (mor′is.vil). [Former name, Falls of the Delaware.] Borough in SE Pennsylvania, in Bucks County, on the Delaware River: residential and industrial community. Manufactures include molded rubber products and clay products. It was renamed for Robert Morris (1734–1806). 6,787 (1950).

Morro Castle (mor′ō, mō′rō; Spanish, môr′rō). Fort at the entrance of the harbor of Havana, Cuba, celebrated in the history of the island. The dungeons beneath it were once used for political prisoners.

Morrow (mor′ō), Dwight Whitney. b. at Huntington, W.Va., Jan. 11, 1873; d. at Englewood, N.J., Oct. 5, 1931 American lawyer, banker, and diplomat; father of Anne Morrow Lindbergh. He joined (1914) the banking house of J.P. Morgan and Company, serving with that firm until 1927. During World War I he was director of the National War Savings Committee in New Jersey and adviser to the Allied Maritime Transport Council. In 1925 he served as chairman of the president's aircraft board and in 1927 was appointed ambassador to Mexico by President Coolidge. His efforts did much to win Mexican good will at a critical and troubled time in Mexican-U.S. relations. He was a delegate to the London Naval Conference (1930) and in the same year was elected Republican U.S. senator from New Jersey. In 1911 Morrow helped draft the workmen's compensation law for New Jersey; he afterward served as chairman of the New Jersey prison inquiry commission and as the first president (1918–20) of the state board of control.

Morrow, Honoré. [Maiden name, McCue; known as Honoré Willsie Morrow.] b. at Ottumwa, Iowa, 1880; d. at New Haven, Conn., April 12, 1940. American novelist. She was editor (1914–19) of The Delineator. Her books include Heart of the Desert (1913), Still Jim (1915), Lydia of the Pines (1916), We Must March (1925), With Malice Toward None (1928), Mary Todd Lincoln (1928), The Last Full Measure (1930), Tiger! Tiger! (1930), Argonaut (1933), Yonder Sails the Mayflower (1934), Let the King Beware (1935), and Demon Daughter (1939).

Morrow, Jay Johnson. b. at Fairview, W.Va., Feb. 20, 1870; d. April 16, 1937. American army engineering officer. He was chief engineer for the 1st army and deputy chief engineer (1918) of the American Expeditionary Forces. He was engineer of maintenance (1919–21) of the Panama Canal, governor (1921–24) of the Canal Zone, and chairman (1925–29) of the special commission for arbitration of the Tacna-Arica dispute between Peru and Chile.

Morrow, Prince Albert. b. at Mount Vernon, Ky., Dec. 19, 1846; d. March 17, 1913. American dermatologist and reformer. Advocating the dissemination of information about the nature of social disease and sex hygiene, his publications include Venereal Memoranda (1885) and Social Diseases and Marriage (1904).

Morrow, William W. b. near Milton, Ind., July 15, 1843; d. at San Francisco, July 24, 1929. American jurist, judge of the ninth U.S. judicial circuit from 1897. He served as special counsel for the U.S. before the French and American claims commissions (1881–83) and the Alabama claims commission (1882–85), was a member of the House of Representatives (1885–91), and was U.S. judge of the Northern California district (1891–97). He was one of the incorporators of the American National Red Cross Society.

Mors (môrs). Interior island in NW Denmark, in the amt (county) of Thisted, in the Lim Fjord. Chief town, Nykøbing; area, ab. 140 sq. mi.; pop. 26,988 (1945).

Mörs (mėrs). See Moers.

Morsain (môr.saṅ), Antoine. Pseudonym of Lenéru, Marie.

Morse (môrs), Anson Daniel. b. at Cambridge, Vt., Aug. 13, 1846; d. March 13, 1916. American political scientist; brother of Harmon Northrop Morse. He served (1877–1907) as professor of political economy, Otis professor of history and political science, and professor of history at Amherst College.

Morse, Charles Henry. b. at Bradford, Mass., Jan. 5, 1853; d. at Boston, June 4, 1927. American teacher of music and organist. He was first director of music (1875–84) at Wellesley, established (1885) and headed (1885–91) the Northwestern Conservatory at Minneapolis, and was first professor of music (1901–18) at Dartmouth.

Morse, Edward Sylvester. b. at Portland, Me., June 18, 1838; d. Dec. 20, 1925. American zoologist. His early work attracted the attention of Louis Agassiz, who induced him to study at the Lawrence Scientific School, Harvard, where he was assistant till 1862. With others he established the American Naturalist at Salem c1866, and founded the Peabody Academy of Sciences there. He was professor of comparative anatomy and zoology at Bowdoin (1871–74), visited Japan in 1877, and became professor of zoology in the Imperial University of Tokyo. Among his works are First Book in Zoology (1875), Japanese Homes (1885), and numerous scientific and popular papers.

Morse, Harmon Northrop. b. at Cambridge, Vt., Oct. 15, 1848; d. at Chebeague, Md., Sept. 8, 1920. American chemist, professor of analytical and inorganic chemistry at the Johns Hopkins University from 1908; brother of Anson Daniel Morse. He was associate professor there (1876–91), and professor of analytical chemistry (1891–1908).

Morse, Jedidiah. b. at Woodstock, Conn., Aug. 23, 1761; d. at New Haven, Conn., June 9, 1826. American geographer and Congregational minister, author of a series of geographies and gazetteers.

Morse, John Torrey, Jr. b. at Boston, Jan. 9, 1840; d. at Needham, Mass., March 27, 1937. American biographer and lawyer. Author of Treatise on the Law Relating to Banks and Banking (1870) and Famous Trials (1874). His biographies include books on Alexander Hamilton (2 vols., 1876), Oliver Wendell Holmes (2 vols., 1896), Henry Lee (1906), and, in the American Statesmen Series edited by him, Abraham Lincoln, John Quincy Adams, Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, and Benjamin Franklin.

Morse, Samuel Finley Breese. b. at Charlestown, Mass., April 27, 1791; d. at New York, April 2, 1872. American artist and inventor of the electric telegraph and the Morse code; son of Jedidiah Morse. He graduated from Yale in 1810, studied art under Washington Allston and Benjamin West in England, and, after having tried with indifferent success to establish himself as a portrait painter in various American cities, opened a studio at New York in 1823. He was the first president (1826–42) of the National Academy of Design at New York. Morse's paintings, for many years ignored in the light of his other achievements, have been reappraised in recent years, and many critics now hold his work in the highest esteem. He went to Europe in 1829 to travel and study, and on his return (1832) became professor of painting and sculpture at the University of the City of New York (now New York University). In the period that followed he became entangled with the Native Americans, an anti-foreign, anti-Roman Catholic movement; in 1836 he ran for mayor of New York on that party's ticket but he was badly defeated. In 1837 he gave up painting and turned to invention, for which he had displayed some aptitude previously. He had become interested in the problem of using electricity to send messages over a distance, and in 1832 had sketched out the essentials of a system to accomplish that purpose, the system to include a transmitter, a magnetic receiver, and a code of clicks and pauses. Through the aid of Leonard D. Gale he was made cognizant of the work being done in the field of electricity and magnetism by such men as Joseph Henry, who became a friend of his and with whom he later quarreled, in the days when his invention was under fire for patent infringement; with the financial aid of Alfred Vail he was able to proceed far enough so that he could by 1837 file a caveat with the Patent Office at Washington. The English and French governments proved to be uninterested in his invention and the period that followed was extremely difficult for Morse financially. In 1843, the U.S. Congress voted him 30,000 dollars to build a telegraph line from Washington, D.C., to Baltimore. Ezra Cornell set up the line and, on May 24, 1844, using his improved code and redesigned apparatus, Morse sent from the Capitol to Baltimore the message "What hath God wrought!" Congress did not act to buy the invention and Morse was forced into private business, to which his temperament was not suited. Amos Kendall, formerly postmaster general of the U.S. under Jackson, agreed to handle the financial aspect of the invention and, despite constant legal action, in which Morse was upheld by the courts, he finally became easy financially. He was honored by governments all over Europe, even with cash honorariums, and spent his final years much in the public eye, though he was defeated in his attempt (1854) to obtain a congressional seat. He was one of the first group selected (1900) as members of the American Hall of Fame.

Morse, Sidney Edwards. b. at Charlestown, Mass., Feb. 7, 1794; d. at New York, Dec. 23, 1871. American journalist, geographer, and inventor; son of Jedidiah Morse. He founded the New York Observer in 1823.

Morse, Wayne Lyman. b. at Madison, Wis., Oct. 20, 1900—. American legislator and educator. He taught at Wisconsin (1924), Minnesota (1924–28), and Columbia (1928–29), and subsequently was assistant professor of law (1929–30) at Oregon. From 1931 to 1944 he was professor of law and dean at Oregon. He served (1936–39) as a special assistant to the U.S. attorney general, and from 1938 to 1942 acted as arbitrator in maritime disputes on the Pacific Coast for the U.S. Department of Labor. He was an alternate public member on the National Defense Mediation Board and the National War Labor Board. In 1945 he was elected as a Republican to the U.S. Senate, but he often voted with the Democrats and in 1952 broke with the Republican Party during the presidential campaign and announced that he was an independent. He made a notable filibuster in the Senate in 1947 when he spoke for ten hours against the Taft-Hartley labor bill.

Mortagne (môr.tány'). [Full name, Mortagne-au-Perche (-ō.persh).] Town in W France, in the department of Orne, ab. 23 mi. NE of Alençon: horse markets. The Church of Notre-Dame (1494–1536) is in the flamboyant Gothic style. 3,802 (1946).

Mortal Antipathy, A. Novel by Oliver Wendell Holmes, published in 1885.

Mortara (môr.tä'rä). Town and commune in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Lombardy, in the province of Pavia, ab. 26 mi. SW of Milan. Here on March 21, 1849, the Austrians defeated the Sardinians. Pop. of commune, 11,544 (1936); of town, 8,913 (1936).

Mortara, Edgar. b. 1852; d. at Liége, Belgium, 1940. Italian Augustinian monk, central figure in the noted "Mortara Case." The son of a Jewish family at Bologna, Italy, he was supposedly abducted (1858) by papal guards after it became known that a Roman Catholic maid-servant employed by the Mortara family had had him secretly baptized. After he was placed in a monastery by papal authorities, his parents made unsuccessful efforts to regain custody of their child. The case became a cause célèbre; several governments entered their protests against the violation of religious freedom and the sanctity of the family, while Jewish communities throughout the world petitioned for the child's release. Mortara was reared as a ward of Pope Pius IX, who refused to surrender the child on the ground that baptism had made him a Christian. In 1870, when Rome was occupied, Mortara chose to remain in the Roman Catholic faith; he adopted the name of Pius and became a leading member of the Augustine order. He preached before the Vatican Council and at Catholic churches at New York, and was a missionary to German cities.

Mort de Pompée (môr dẹ pôṅ.pā), La. [Eng. trans., "The Death of Pompey."] Tragedy by Pierre Corneille, produced in 1642.

Mort de quelqu'un (môr dẹ kel.kėṅ). Short novel (1911; Eng. trans., The Death of a Nobody, 1914) by Jules Romains, in which the death of an unknown welds and revives the collective life of a neighborhood.

Morte d'Arthur (môrt där'thėr). Compilation of prose romances on the life and death of King Arthur and the knights of the Round Table, compiled (c1470) in prison by Sir Thomas Malory, and printed by William Caxton in 1485. It was originally entitled The Book of King Arthur and His Knights of the Round Table. There is a metrical English romance with the title Morte Arthure, said to have been written at the end of the 14th century by Huchowne (Hutchin), a Scotch ballad writer.

Morte d'Arthur. Idyl by Alfred Tennyson, included later in the Idylls of the King under the title The Passing of Arthur.

Morteratsch (môr'tẹ.räch). Glacier in E Switzerland, descending from the E flank of Piz Bernina down a long valley. Length, ab. 7 mi.

Mort-Homme (môr.tom), Le. See Le Mort-Homme.

Mortier (môr.tyā), Alfred. b. 1865; d. 1937. French editor and playwright. Author of Marius vaincu (1909), Sylla (1914), and others.

Mortier, Édouard Adolphe Casimir Joseph. [Title, Duc de Trévise.] b. at Cateau-Cambrésis, France, Feb. 13, 1768; killed at Paris, July 28, 1835. French marshal. He distinguished himself throughout the Napoleonic wars, especially at Friedland in 1807, in Spain, and in the campaigns of 1813–14. He was premier (1834–35), and was mortally wounded by Giuseppe Maria Fieschi's infernal machine in the attempt on Louis Philippe's life.

Mortimer (môr'ti.mėr), Edmund de. [Title, 3rd Earl of March.] b. 1351; d. at Cork, Ireland, 1381. English nobleman. Soon after succeeding his father in the earldom, he married (1368) Philippa, daughter of Lionel of Antwerp, Duke of Clarence, third son of King Edward III. When Lionel died (1368), he thus inherited the claim to the throne after the line of Edward the Black Prince and his son, the future Richard II. This inheritance, through his wife, was the basis of the Yorkist claim to the throne prosecuted by them in the Wars of the Roses; the Lancastrian claim, through John of Gaunt, was by direct male succession. From 1369 to 1377 he was marshal of England. He was the leader of the opposition to John of Gaunt and the court party in the "Good Parliament" (1376). After the coronation (1377) of Richard II, he was appointed (1379) lieutenant of Ireland. His daughter Elizabeth was the wife of Henry Percy (Harry Hotspur); his son Roger succeeded to the earldom.

Mortimer, Favell Lee. [Maiden name, Bevan.] b. at London, 1802; d. Aug. 22, 1878. English author of religious and educational works for young people. Author of The Peep of Day (1836), and Precept upon Precept (1867), religious works, and of Near Home, or the Countries of Europe Described (1849) and Far Off, or Asia and Australia Described (1852–54). She also wrote Reading without Tears (1857) and Latin without Tears (1877).

Mortimer, Roger de. [Title, 6th Baron of Wigmore.] b. c1231; d. 1282. English soldier. To the estate he inherited (1246) from his father, he added those of his wife, Maude de Breuse (Matilda de Braose), in the western counties. He was, in the struggle of Henry III and the barons, loyal to the crown, although he sided for a short period (1258–61) with Simon de Montfort and the barons. He fought (1262–63) against Llewelyn ab Gryffud, and after the defeat of the royalists at Lewes (1263) fled to Wales. He was exiled to Ireland but did not leave England. Instead he helped Prince Edward (later Edward I) to escape from de Montfort (1265) and was in command of the rear guard at Evesham (1265), where his men cut off de Montfort's head as a prize of war. He was guardian of Edward's children (1270–71) and a guardian of the realm (1272). Under Edward he continued his fight with Llewelyn.

Mortimer, Roger de. [Titles, 8th Baron of Wigmore, 1st Earl of March.] b. 1287; d. at London, Nov. 29, 1330. English nobleman. He married Joan de Genville, heiress of large estates in Ireland, and became lieutenant of Ireland (1316) and justiciar of Ireland (1319). He defeated the attempts of the Lacys, who were kinsmen of his wife, to seize her lands in Ireland during the period when England was occupied with a war against Edward Bruce of Scotland. A call for help from his uncle brought him into conflict in Wales with the Despensers, who were usurping the Mortimer lands in the west of England. However, the Despensers were the favorites of the king, Edward II, and the king came to their aid in force. At Shrewsbury in 1322 Mortimer was defeated, and he was subsequently imprisoned in the Tower of London. He escaped (1324) to France, where he joined the disaffected group gathered about Edward's self-exiled queen, Isabella, and her young son (later Edward III), who were scheming actively to break the hold of the Despensers on King Edward. Mortimer became the queen's lover and her principal adviser. In 1326 they landed at Orwell with an army of mercenaries and pursued the king to Wales. The Despensers were captured, tried by courts on which Mortimer sat as a judge, and executed, and Mortimer took over their titles and their lands. Also executed by Mortimer's orders was Richard Fitzalan, 1st Earl of Arundel, whose possessions Mortimer likewise took. Edward II was forced to abdicate in favor of his son; Parliament acquiesced, and shortly the former king was murdered, undoubtedly on Mortimer's order. Mortimer now was the most powerful man in England, and his arrogance in not masking that fact by permitting the young king, or at least Mortimer's coregent, the queen, to rule, even if only in form, won for him many enemies. He became justiciar of Wales (1327), Earl of March (1328), and obtained jurisdiction elsewhere in the realm. When the king's uncle, Edmund of Woodstock, Earl of Kent, ventured to resist him, Mortimer involved him in an intrigue, had it exposed, and caused Kent's execution. Henry, Duke of Lancaster, too, who conspired to overthrow Mortimer, was forced to submit, but continued to work for Mortimer's downfall. The failure of the expedition against the Scots and the disadvantageous peace that followed gave an opportunity to the disaffected party and, supported by Lancaster, Edward III suddenly caused Mortimer's arrest (1330) and imprisonment. He was accused before Parliament of causing a breach between Edward II and Isabella, of procuring Edward's death, of usurping royal prerogatives, and of causing the execution of the Earl of Kent. No trial was necessary; he was found guilty and hanged, drawn, and quartered at Tyburn Hill, London, like a common criminal.

Mortimer, Roger de. [Title, 2nd Earl of March.] b. c1329; d. at Rouvray, France, 1360. English nobleman. Under Edward III he gradually regained the estates taken from his family as the result of his grandfather's (the 1st Earl's) attempt to usurp the throne and his murder of Edward II. By 1354 he had obtained a reversion of all the inheritance and annulment of the attainder.

Mortimer, Roger de. [Title, 4th Earl of March and Ulster.] b. 1374; d. at Kells, Ireland, 1398. English nobleman; son of Edmund de Mortimer, 3rd Earl of March, whom he succeeded in 1381. In 1385 he was declared heir presumptive to the throne by Richard II. He married (1388) the king's niece Eleanor Holland, daughter of his guardian, Thomas Holland, 2nd Earl of Kent. He was made (1397) lieutenant of Ireland, but was recalled by Richard because of his growing popularity and because of malicious talk among the courtiers who disliked him. He returned to England but soon left again for Ireland, where he was killed in battle. His daughter Anne married Richard, Earl of Cambridge, son of Edmund Langley, Duke of York, and a grandson of King Edward III; their son was Richard, Duke of York, who was the father of King Edward IV.

Mortimer, Sir Edward. Character in George Colman the younger's The Iron Chest.

Mortimer his Fall. Tragedy (1640) by Ben Jonson.

Mortimer's Cross. Place in Herefordshire, England, ab. 15 mi. NW of Hereford. Here Edward, Earl of March (later Edward IV), defeated (Feb. 2, 1461) the Lancastrians in the Wars of the Roses.

Mortlake (môrt'lāk). Parish in Barnes municipal borough, Surrey, England, on the S bank of the Thames above London; finish of the university boat race from Putney. 23,879 (1931).

Morton (môr'tọn). Village in C Illinois, in Tazewell County, ab. 10 mi. SE of Peoria. 3,693 (1950).

Morton, Earls of. Titles held by various members of the Douglas family.

Morton, Earl of. A title of Maxwell, John (1553–93).

Morton, David. b. at Elkton, Ky., Feb. 21, 1886—. American journalist, professor of English, and poet. He joined (1909) the Louisville Evening Post as a reporter and later became a staff member of the Associated Press, the Louisville Courier-Journal, and the Louisville Herald. A teacher of English since 1915, he has been professor (1926 et seq.) at Amherst. Author of Ships in Harbour (1921), Harvest (1924), Nocturnes and Autumnals (1928), A Man of Earth (1930), Earth's Processional (1932), Spell against Time (1936), This Is for You (1943), Poems: 1920-1945 (1945), and other books.

Morton, George. b. probably near Scrooby, England, 1585; d. in June, 1624. English colonist in America, father of Nathaniel Morton. An affluent member (c1612 et seq.) of the pilgrim colony at Leiden, he was agent (1619) for the Pilgrims in negotiation with London merchants, and an organizer of the voyage of the Anne and the Little James (1623), at which time he and his family went to the new settlement at Plymouth. He published the only contemporary account of the Mayflower voyage and the first months of the new colony, entitling it A Relation or Iournall of the beginning and proceedings of the English Plantation setled at Plimoth in New England . . . (1622).

Morton, Guy Mainwaring. [Pseudonym, Peter Traill; original surname, Dunstan.] b. at London, Sept. 9, 1896—. English novelist and dramatist. With his stepfather, he collaborated on the plays Fallen Angels (1924), After the Theatre (1924), By Right of Conquest (1925), Salvage (1926), The Stranger in the House (1928), and Because of Irene (1929). He was sole author of the play Tread Softly (1936), and of the novels Woman to Woman (1924), The Divine Spark (1926), The White Hen (1927), Great Dust (1932), The Angel (1934), Not Proven (1938), Under the Plane Trees (1947), and The Portly Peregrine (1948).

Morton, Henry. b. at New York, Dec. 11, 1836; d. May 9, 1902. American scientist, first president (1870–1902) of Stevens Institute of Technology, where he organized the first curriculum in mechanical engineering in America. He was professor (1863) of chemistry at the Philadelphia Dental College, and editor (1867–71) of the Journal of the Franklin Institute. He had a department of chemistry created (1869) for him at the University of Pennsylvania. At Stevens he developed plastic materials for filling teeth. He wrote on the conservation of energy, fluorescence, and dynamo-electric machines.

Morton, James St. Clair. b. at Philadelphia, Sept. 24, 1829; killed in action June 17, 1864. American soldier in the Civil War and engineer; son of Samuel George Morton. Appointed (1862) brigadier general of U.S. volunteers, he participated during the Richmond campaign in the battles of North Anna (May 24, 1864) and Petersburg, Va. (June 17, 1864), in the latter of which he was killed while leading the attack.

Morton, John. b. at Milborne St. Andrew, Dorsetshire, England, c1420; d. Oct. 12, 1500. English cardinal. He was educated at Balliol College, Oxford, and practiced in the Court of Arches. He was master of the rolls and bishop of Ely in the reign of Edward IV, was imprisoned by Richard III, and was made archbishop of Canterbury and chancellor by Henry VII. Sir Thomas More began his career as a page in Morton's house.

Morton, John. b. at Ridley, Pa., c1724; d. in April, 1777. American patriot, signer of the Declaration of Independence. A surveyor and farmer, he was elected (1756) a member of the provincial congress of Pennsylvania, in which he served for ten successive years. In April, 1774, he became an associate judge of the supreme court of Pennsylvania. He was a delegate (1765) to the Stamp Act Congress and was a member (1774–77) of the Continental Congress. His vote in July, 1776, was instrumental in placing Pennsylvania in the ranks of independence by a majority of one.

Morton, John Madison. b. at Pangbourne, Berkshire, England, Jan. 3, 1811; d. Dec. 19, 1891. English playwright; son of Thomas Morton (1764–1838). He wrote the very popular Box and Cox (1847), and about 100 other farces.

Morton, Joy. b. at Detroit, Mich., Sept. 27, 1855; d. May 9, 1934. American salt merchant, senior member (1885 et seq.) of Joy Morton and Company and board chairman of the Morton Salt Company. He established the Morton Arboretum at Lisle, Ill., for horticultural and agricultural research.

Morton, Julius Sterling. b. at Adams, N.Y., April 22, 1832; d. at Lake Forest, Ill., April 27, 1902. American cabinet officer, U.S. secretary of agriculture (1893–97) under Cleveland. He was secretary and acting governor of Nebraska in 1858. He instituted Arbor Day in Nebraska in 1872. In politics he was a Democrat, affiliated later with the gold-standard wing of the party.

Morton, Levi Parsons. b. at Shoreham, Vt., May 16, 1824; d. May 16, 1920. American banker and Republican politician, Vice-President of the United States (1889–93). He was U.S. minister to France (1881–85) and governor of New York (1895–96). He established (1899) the Morton Trust Company.

Morton, Nathaniel. b. 1613; d. at Plymouth, Mass., June 29, 1685. American historian, compiler of New England's Memorial (1669); son of George Morton.

Morton, Oliver Perry. [Original name, Oliver Hazard Perry Throck Morton.] b. at Salisbury, Wayne County, Ind., Aug. 4, 1823; d. at Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 1, 1877. American politician. A Democrat, he aligned himself (1854) with the People's Party (later the Republican Party) in Indiana. He became governor of Indiana in 1861, and during the Civil War established a notable record as a war governor, placing Indiana among the leading states responding with volunteer troops. He dealt effectively with defeatist and disloyal elements, and raised money by his own efforts when he failed to secure the coöperation of the Democratic legislature. In 1864 he was reëlected governor, with a Republican legislature to support him. In the following year he suffered from a paralytic stroke as a result of his wartime labors, but did not retire from politics. An outspoken opponent of the Democrats, he was elected (1867) to the U.S. Senate, in which he served until his death. Initially a supporter of Johnson's Reconstruction policies, he later joined the Radical Republican wing in Congress.

Morton, Paul. b. at Detroit, Mich., May 22, 1857; d. at New York, Jan. 19, 1911. American railroad man, administrator, and financier, U.S. secretary of the navy (1904–05) under Theodore Roosevelt; son of Julius Sterling Morton. He was connected (1872–90) with the Burlington railway system, and was third vice-president (1896–98) and second vice-president (1898–1904) of the Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe Railroad. He was chairman of the board of directors and later president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society (1905–11).

Morton, Samuel George. b. at Philadelphia, Jan. 26, 1799; d. there, May 15, 1851. American physician and naturalist who specialized in anthropology, having assembled a large collection of human skulls.

Morton, Sarah Wentworth. [Maiden name, Apthorp; pseudonym, Philenia.] b. at Boston, 1759; d. at Braintree, Mass., May 14, 1846. American poet, hailed by her contemporaries as the "American Mrs. Montague." Her poems appeared in the Boston Columbian Centinel and the New York Magazine and Tablet. She also published My Mind and Its Thoughts (1823). She has been suggested as the author of the earliest American novel, The Power of Sympathy, because of an allusion in the book to her family.

Morton, Thomas. b. at York, England, March 20, 1564; d. at Easton, Northamptonshire, England, Sept. 22, 1659. English clergyman, bishop of Durham (1632).

Morton, Thomas. fl. 1622–47. American colonial figure. His first trip to New England was probably made in 1622. After making another voyage, he settled in a community which came to be called Merry Mount (at the present site of Quincy, Mass.) and established a gay mode of life that incurred the wrath of the Plymouth Pilgrims, who in 1627 cut down the maypole he had put up. A fur trader, he also sold guns to the Indians. In 1628 he was seized by Captain Miles Standish and sent to England as a lawbreaker. Returning (c1630) to New England, he discovered that his cronies of Merry Mount had disbanded. In 1630 he was again sent to England, and confined in Exeter jail, but he was soon set free and in 1637 published his New English Canaan. In 1643 he appeared at Plymouth; ordered to leave, he went to Maine and Rhode Island, later returning to Massachusetts, where he was imprisoned at Boston. While he appears in many historical accounts as the victim of religious intolerance Morton was very probably a depraved character who would have suffered punishment in any society.

Morton, Thomas. b. in Durham, England, 1764; d. at London, March 28, 1838. English dramatist. He wrote Speed the Plough (1798), introducing the invisible Mrs. Grundy, The Blind Girl (1801), Town and Country (1807), School for Grown Children (1827), and others.

Morton, William James. b. at Boston, July 3, 1845; d. at Miami, Fla., March 26, 1920. American neurologist and physician; son of William Thomas Green Morton. He was among the first physicians in America to use the x-ray in the treatment of skin disorders and cancerous growths. In the field of electrotherapeutics, he sought to perfect a method for forcing metallic remedies into the body by other than hypodermic means. Convicted (1913) of having used the mail to defraud in connection with Canadian mining properties, he served a prison sentence, but was pardoned (1913) by President Wilson.

Morton, William Thomas Green. b. at Charlton, Mass., Aug. 9, 1819; d. at New York, July 15, 1868. American dentist. He first administered sulphuric ether as an anesthetic to a patient of his own in 1846, obtained a patent for its use under the name of "letheon" in the same year, and on Oct. 16, 1846, administered ether to a patient in the Massachusetts General Hospital at Boston,

Dr. John C. Warren painlessly removing a vascular tumor from the man's neck. Several claimants opposed his right of discovery, notably Dr. Charles Thomas Jackson and Dr. Horace Wells. The French Academy of Sciences investigated the matter in 1852, and decreed one of the Montyon prizes of 2,500 francs to Dr. Jackson for the discovery of etherization, and a similar award to Dr. Morton for the application of the discovery to surgical operations.

Morton Grove. Village in NE Illinois, in Cook County: a northern suburb of Chicago. 3,926 (1950).

Mortsel (môr.sel). Town in N Belgium, in the province of Antwerp: a southeastern suburb of Antwerp. 16,445 (1947).

Mortuum (môr'ţū.um), Mare. A Latin name of the Dead Sea.

Moru (mō'rö). Sudanic-speaking peoples of S Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, in NE Africa, occupying a region W of Mongalla. They are divided by the river into two groups and speak mutually unintelligible languages belonging to different subdivisions of the Sudanic group. On the E bank the language is related to Madi; on the W, to Bongo. Their population in 1932 was estimated at ab. 25,000 (by L. F. Nalder, A Tribal Survey of Mongalla Province, 1937). They are divided into a number of subgroups ruled by hereditary chiefs, whose offices may have developed under European rule. The Moru have exogamous patrilineal clans. They practice hoe agriculture and hunting.

Morungen (mō'rủng.ẹn), Heinrich von. See Heinrich von Morungen.

Morvan (môr.vän'). [Also, Le Morvan.] Region in the departments of Yonne and Nièvre, France. It is traversed by a chain of mountains from Avallon to Luzy (ab. 55 mi.). Highest point, ab. 2,976 ft.

Morven (môr'vẹn). [Also, Morvern (môr'vėrn).] Peninsula in C Scotland, in Argyllshire, lying between Loch Sunart on the N, Loch Linnhe on the SE, and the Sound of Mull on the SW. Length, ab. 25 mi.; greatest width, ab. 14 mi.

Morven. Mythical kingdom referred to in the poems of Ossian, as being ruled by Fingal.

Morwitz (môr'wits), Edward. b. at Danzig, June 11, 1815; d. at Philadelphia, Dec. 13, 1893. German-American journalist and physician. Emigrating (1850) to the U.S. because of his democratic sympathies, he bought (1853) a controlling interest in the Philadelphia Demokrat, in which he proposed consolidation of the city. At one time 300 German and English newspapers were printed by the Newspaper Union, which he organized and by which the "patent-inside" was adopted (a system providing set layouts for inside pages while leaving the rest of the paper for local copy). He established Die Vereinigte Staaten Zeitung (1855), a political weekly, Die Neue Welt (1856), a Sunday literary, and the Jewish Record (1875).

Mosa (mō'sạ). Latin name of the Meuse.

Mosaic. Novel by G. B. Stern, published in 1930. It is the concluding panel in her trilogy of Jewish life, The Rakonitz Chronicles (1932).

Mosbach (mōs'bäċh). Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Württemberg-Baden, American Zone, formerly in the free state of Baden, situated at the slopes of the Odenwald ab. 21 mi. E of Heidelberg: saline springs; lumber, tobacco, and metal industries. It is an old town, with a 15th-century church and a 16th-century Rathaus (town hall). 8,384 (1946).

Mosby (mōz'bi), John Singleton. b. at Edgemont, Va., Dec. 6, 1833; d. at Washington, D.C., May 30, 1916. American Confederate ranger. He attended the University of Virginia, was admitted to the bar (1855) at Bristol, Va., and in 1861 enlisted in the Confederate cavalry. He took part in First Bull Run, became adjutant of his regiment in February, 1862, and later, as an officer attached to General J. E. B. Stuart's staff, participated in the Peninsular Campaign, at Second Bull Run, and at Antietam. He began (Jan. 2, 1863) independent operations as a ranger in Virginia, establishing his force of nine men under the partisan ranger law. The Union forces regarded Mosby's rangers as robbers. Mosby's operations were so successful that he was commissioned a lieutenant one month after taking up partisan activity. His first outstanding achievement was his raid (March 9, 1863) on Fairfax Court House, where he captured General E. H. Stoughton and 100 others. He was made a captain and later promoted to the rank of major. His forces steadily grew, but Mosby declined to give them regular status. On June 10, 1863, his force was designated Company A, 43rd Battalion Partisan Rangers. In that month Mosby extended his activity to Maryland and performed the scouting for the Gettysburg campaign. In Virginia he had the support of the people in the countryside, which became known as "Mosby's Confederacy." Although always pursued and hunted by the Union forces, he was never seized while a ranger. He was promoted (February, 1864) to the rank of lieutenant colonel, and later in the same year made his famous "greenback raid" and a raid on Point of Rocks, Md., which netted him considerable booty. In November, 1864, he hanged seven Union prisoners in reprisal for the hanging of seven of his own men who had been seized as outlaws. He was promoted (December, 1864) to colonel and was badly wounded in the same month. His last action took place on April 10, 1865; by this time his rangers constituted eight companies of well-equipped men. He disbanded his men in April, 1865, and surrendered personally in June, 1865. After returning to civilian life, he practiced law at Warrenton, Va., and joined the Republican Party. He served (1878–85) as consul at Hong Kong, became a land agent in Colorado, and was an assistant attorney (1904–10) for the U.S. department of justice. He wrote Mosby's War Experiences, and Stuart's Cavalry Campaigns (1887) and Stuart's Cavalry in the Gettysburg Campaign (1908).

Mosca (mos'kạ). In Ben Jonson's play Volpone, or the Fox, a parasite, in the sense of the classic drama. His pliancy and presence of mind render him invaluable to his master, Volpone, upon whom he finally turns.

Moscheles (mosh'ẹ.lẹs), Felix Stone. b. at London, 1833; d. at Tunbridge Wells, England, Dec. 25, 1917. English portrait and genre painter; son of Ignaz Moscheles. Among his principal paintings are Portrait of Hodgson Pratt (National Portrait Gallery), Basket-Making in Granada, and Spanish Boy.

Moscheles, Ignaz. b. at Prague, May 30, 1794; d. at Leipzig, Germany, March 10, 1870. German pianist, composer for the piano, and teacher. His works include 24 études, Hommage à Händel, Concerto in G Minor, Concerto pathétique, Sonate mélancolique, Characteristische Studien, and others.

Moscherosch (mosh'ẹ.rosh), Johann Michael. [Also, Mosenrosh.] b. at Wilstadt, Baden, Germany, March 5, 1601; d. at Worms, Germany, April 4, 1669. German author. He wrote an allegorico-satirical work, Philander von Sittewald (1643), and others.

Moschoi (mos'koi). See Meshech.

Moschus (mos'kus). fl. in the 2nd century B.C. Greek bucolic poet of Syracuse. The Lament for Bion is traditionally, but doubtfully, ascribed to him; in a like manner he is called the pupil of Bion but this too is dubious. His work, which includes a poem on Europa, is usually printed with that of Bion and Theocritus.

Mościcki (môsh.chēts'kē), Ignacy. b. 1867; d. 1948. Polish statesman, president of Poland (1926–39). Famous as professor of physics and chemistry at Fribourg, Switzerland, he discovered (1906) a nitrogen fixation process and devised a new type of electric condenser. He became (1912) professor of chemistry at Lvov and founded a society devoted to the scientific and industrial aspects of oil and gas which was later organized as an institute of chemical research. After Marshal Pilsudski's military coup (1926), he was elected president of Poland; he was reelected in 1933. After the invasion of Poland by Germany, he fled to Switzerland.

Moscoso (mōs.kō'sō), Luis de. [Also, Luis Muscoço de Alvarado.] b. at Badajoz, Spain, c1505; d. c1560. Spanish soldier. He followed his kinsman Pedro de Alvarado to Guatemala (1530) and Peru (1534); subsequently he united with Hernando de Soto in his expedition to Florida (1539), and, after the death of that leader near the Mississippi River (May 21, 1542), succeeded him in command as de Soto had specified. In July, 1543, he descended the Mississippi, arriving safely at Mexico with 311 other survivors, in boats they had built themselves.

He was well received by the viceroy Antonio de Mendoza, and in 1551 accompanied him to Peru.

Moscow (mos'kō). City in W Idaho, county seat of Latah County: processing and shipping point for agricultural products, especially peas and wheat. It is the seat of the University of Idaho. 10,593 (1950).

Moscow (mos'kou, -kō). [Russian, Moskva.] Oblast (region) in the U.S.S.R., in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, centered around and including the city of Moscow. The surface of the area is generally flat with some low hills in the W. This is the most important industrial region in all of the U.S.S.R., with textile and machine-tool centers. About one fifth of all the manufactured goods of the country are produced here. Agriculture in the area is mostly devoted to dairying and market gardening, but there is some wheat, barley, and flax grown. Peat is dug in the E part of the oblast, in the vicinity of Shiatura, and is used for fuel and for electric power generation; phosphate deposits SE of Moscow are the basis for the chemical and fertilizer industries of Voskresensk. The whole oblast is well served by railroads and highways. Capital, Moscow; area, 19,146 sq. mi. (1939), ab. 18,700 sq. mi. (1951); pop. 8,918,389 (1939).

Moscow. [Russian, Moskva; called "Holy Mother of the Russians."] Capital of the U.S.S.R., and of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic and Moscow oblast (region), headquarters of the Communist Party, and the largest city in the U.S.S.R. It is the focus of 11 rail lines, and the chief center of the old industrial heart of the U.S.S.R., producing (with its suburbs) ab. 15 percent of the total industrial production of the U.S.S.R. Consumer goods were once the principal manufactures, but heavy industry has become important in recent years. The chief manufactures are machinery, automobiles, electrical equipment, aircraft, instruments, ball bearings, machine tools, textiles, clothing, prepared foodstuffs, confectionery, leather goods, drugs, books, and shoes. Large thermal-electric stations burn nearby lignite or peat and supply both electricity and steam for heat. The construction of the Moscow Canal (formerly called the Moscow-Volga Canal) and the creation of an artificial port and turning basin have opened up Moscow as an inland river port, with facilities for handling heavy goods. Few cities in the world and no others in the Soviet Union have the glamour that surrounds Moscow. On its streets may be seen diverse peoples: picturesque Cossacks from the Lower Volga, tribesmen from the Uzbek Soviet Socialist Republic, colorful visitors from the Caucasus, and nomads from the Arctic. According to an old saying, "There is nothing above Moscow except the Kremlin and nothing above the Kremlin except Heaven." Urban rebuilding has eliminated many historic buildings and churches but nothing can destroy the history of centuries. The university, founded in 1755, has a large library, and the Lenin library has about six million volumes. The city was founded about the middle of the 12th century. The principality of Moscow was united with that of Vladimir, and Moscow became the capital of the grand principality of Moscow and seat of the metropolitan in the first part of the 14th century. It was taken and burned by Lithuanians and Tartars in the 14th century, nearly destroyed by fire in 1547, and burned by the khan in 1571. The capital was removed to St. Petersburg (now Leningrad) by Peter the Great, but has now been returned to Moscow. The city was burned by its inhabitants during its occupation by the French in September, 1812. In 1941 the city was a major goal of the advancing German armies; they were stopped in the SW and W outer suburbs of the city, and the nearest approach to the city itself was made by a group of German tanks which reached Khimki, ab. 11 mi. NW of the city center. Although bombed by German planes, the city suffered relatively minor damage. 4,137,018 (1939).

Moscow, Grand Principality of. [Also, Grand Principality of Muscovy.] Grand principality which grew up around Moscow, and developed into the Russian Empire. It was founded (c1295) by Daniel, son of Alexander Nevski, and was united with the grand principality of Vladimir (or Suzdal) in 1319. Ivan I, ruler of Vladimir and Moscow, made the city of Moscow the seat of government. His successor Simeon took the title of "grand prince of all the Russias." The work of consolidation was greatly advanced under Ivan III, who annexed Perm (1472), Novgorod (1478), Iver (1482), Vyatka (1489), and others. He freed Moscow from tribute to the Mongols, and by conquests from Lithuania carried the western border to the Desna and then to the Soya.

Moscow Art Theatre. One of the foremost theaters of the modern world, founded (June 21, 1897) by Constantin Stanislavsky and Vladimir Nemirovitch Dantchenko. The first production was Tolstoy's Tsar Fyodor (Oct. 14, 1898), staged in a former beer garden known as the Hermitage. Also given the first season was Anton Chekov's The Sea Gull, previously a failure, and this successful revival marked the beginning of a close relationship between that playwright and the theater, which later produced The Three Sisters (1901) and The Cherry Orchard (1904). In 1902 Maxim Gorki's The Lower Depths was given and a second famous playwright was added to the Moscow Art Theatre. Stanislavsky supervised the stage productions and Dantchenko took charge of literary matters. Playwrights in the repertoire included Gerhart Hauptmann, Ivan Turgenyev, Feodor Dostoyevsky, Leonid Andreyev, Alexey Tolstoy, and Maurice Maeterlinck. The Art Theatre had a famous acting company, which included Meierhold, Olga Knipper (who married Chekov), Kachalov, Moskvin, Tarasova, Bulgakov, and Ouspenskaya. For this group Stanislavsky developed an approach to acting in which he insisted upon the complete submersion of the actor's individuality in his role. The theater after 1905 went through a period of symbolism and mysticism and, by the time of the Russian Revolution, it was considered somewhat old-fashioned. But it weathered all political changes in Russia, and its various subsidiary groups gave it new life. These offshoots included the First Studio, founded by Richard Boleslavsky in 1912 (later the Second Moscow Art Theatre); the Second Studio (1915), under Michael Chekov; the Third Studio (1920), with Vakhtangov as its leader; the Fourth Studio (1922), which became the Realistic Theatre under Okhlopkov; the Opera Studio (1919), where Stanislavsky produced conventional opera; and the Musical Studio (1920), where Dantchenko created a synthesis between the acting and singing stage in remarkable musical productions such as Carmencita and the Soldier (a version of Bizet's Carmen) and Lysistrata. The theater toured Europe in 1906, 1922, and 1927, and the U.S. in 1923 and 1924.

Moscow Basin. [Russian, Podmoskovnyy Basseyn.] Brown-coal (lignite) basin lying in an arc S, SW, W, and NW of Moscow, U.S.S.R., ab. 60 mi. S of the city at the nearest point. The chief mining centers are in the neighborhood of Tula, Stalinogorsk, and near Ostashkov. The Moscow Basin is second only to the Donets Basin as a fuel center of the European U.S.S.R., and supplies lignite for thermal power stations and for chemical production. Approximately 7.5 million metric tons were mined in 1938.

Moscow Canal. [Former name, Moscow-Volga Canal (-vol'gą).] Canal in the U.S.S.R., in the Kalinin and Moscow regions of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, extending from the Volga River at Ivankovo generally S to the Moskva at Moscow. The canal was opened in 1937 and, with port improvements in the Moskva at Moscow, has opened up the city to river and canal traffic. Length, ab. 80 mi.

Moscow Conference of 1943. First World War II conference between the U.S., Great Britain, and the U.S.S.R. It took place at Moscow from Oct. 19 to 30, 1943. Four declarations were signed and issued by U.S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull, British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden, and Russian Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov. They affirmed the intention of the three powers to act in concert in the surrender, disarmament, and military government of the European Axis states. Toward this end the conference established an Advisory Council on Italian Affairs and the European Advisory Commission. Another declaration dealt with the future restoration of the independence of Austria. Agreement was also reached on the establishment of a general international organization to maintain peace and security. By invitation of the three governments, China also signed this declaration on security and international organization.

Moscow Conference of 1945. Meeting (Dec. 16–26, 1945) of the Council of Foreign Ministers, which had been established by the U.S.S.R., Great Britain, and the U.S. at the Berlin Conference of 1945. It was chiefly important for setting procedures for the drafting of peace treaties with Italy, Rumania, Bulgaria, Hungary, and Finland. It also decided to call a peace conference (subsequently held at Paris in the latter part of 1946) of the Big Five and 16 other powers who had waged war against the Axis, to make recommendations on the treaties. Agreement was also announced on a desire for a provisional government in Korea at the earliest possible time.

Moscow Conference of 1947. Meeting (March 10–April 24, 1947) of the foreign ministers of the U.S.S.R., the U.S., Great Britain, and France, concerned primarily with the status of Germany. The conference was unable to reach common solutions for the major issues presented: enforcement of demilitarization, standards of democratization, giving force to the economic and reparation provisions of the Potsdam agreement, and ways of setting in motion a World War II peace treaty for Germany. The slim agreements reached encouraged the British and U.S. governments to speed the merger of their zones in Germany.

Moscow Dramatic Theatre. See Korsch Theatre.

Mosè in Egitto (mō.zē' ēn ā.jēt'tō). [Eng. trans., "Moses in Egypt."] Opera in four acts by Rossini, with a libretto by A. L. Tottola, produced at Naples in 1818, and at Paris in 1822. It was again produced at Paris in 1827, somewhat modified, as Moïse, and called an "oratorio" on the bills. In 1822 it was produced at London as Pietro l'Eremita; and in 1833 as an oratorio, entitled The Israelites in Egypt: or, the Passage of the Red Sea, with additions from Israel in Egypt.

Mosel (mō'zęl). German name of Moselle.

Moseley (mōz'li), Edward Augustus. b. at Newburyport, Mass., March 23, 1846; d. at Washington, D.C., April 18, 1911. American lawyer, secretary of the Interstate Commerce Commission (1887 et seq.), in which capacity he was instrumental in securing legislation requiring trains to be equipped with the automatic coupler, the air brake, the block signal, and other safety devices.

Moseley, Henry. b. at Newcastle-under-Lyme, Staffordshire, England, July 9, 1801; d. at Olveston, Gloucestershire, England, Jan. 20, 1872. English scientific writer. He wrote Lectures on Astronomy (1839), Mechanical Principles of Engineering and Architecture (1843), and others.

Moseley, Henry Nottidge. b. at Wandsworth, London, 1844; d. at Clevedon, Somersetshire, England, Nov. 10, 1891. English naturalist; son of Henry Moseley. He was one of the naturalists on the Challenger expedition (1872–76), and became Linacre professor of anatomy at Oxford in 1881.

Moselle (mō.zel'; French, mo.zel). Department in NE France, bounded by Luxembourg, the Saar, and Germany on the N, and the departments of Bas-Rhin on the E, and Meurthe-et-Moselle on the S and W. It was part of the province of Lorraine. It was ceded to Germany in 1871 and incorporated into Alsace-Lorraine but was returned to France in 1918. It was again incorporated into Germany during World War II; returned to France after the conclusion of the war. The present borders differ somewhat from the borders as they existed prior to 1871. The department is of industrial importance because it is in the Lorraine iron-ore region. There are iron-ore, coal, and salt mines, iron and steel works, and machinery and instrument industries. The watchmaking industry is concentrated in Sarrebourg. The ceramics, glass, and brewery industries are also of importance. Agricultural products include grains, sugar beets, fruits, and wine. The population is in part German-speaking, but its political allegiance is French. Capital, Metz; area, 2,405 sq. mi.; pop. 622,145 (1946).

Moselle River. [German, Mosel; Latin, Mosella (mō.zel'a).] River in NE France and W Germany. It rises in the Vosges Mountains, and flows N and NE to join the Rhine at Koblenz. Among its tributaries are the Meurthe and the Saar. The valley is noted for its wines. Length, ab. 320 mi.; navigable to Frouard (214 mi.).

Moselly (mo.ze.lē), Émile. [Pseudonym of Émile Chénin.] b. at Paris, 1870; d. at L'Orient, France, 1918. French novelist and miscellaneous writer. Author of Jean des brebis (1904), Terres lorraines (1907), and others. His tendencies were conservative, Roman Catholic, and regionalist.

Mosen (mō'zęn), Julius. b. at Marieney, Saxony, Germany, July 8, 1803; d. in Oldenburg, Germany, Oct. 10, 1867. Germann poet, dramatist, and novelist. Among his works are the poems Lied vom Ritter Wahn (1831), Andreas Hofer (1836), Ahasver (1838), and the dramas Cola Rienzi, Die Bräute von Florence, and Bernhard von Weimar (1855).

Mosenrosh (mō'zęn.rosh), Johann Michael. See Moscherosch, Johann Michael.

Mosenthal (mō'zęn.thôl; German, mō'zęn.täl), Joseph. b. at Kassel, Germany, Nov. 30, 1834; d. at New York, Jan. 6, 1896. American conductor, violinist, and composer. A member (1855–68) of the New York Mason-Thomas Quintet, and organist (1860–87) at Calvary Church, he led (1867 et seq.) the Mendelssohn Glee Club. He was the composer of religious and secular songs as well as part songs for male choirs.

Mosenthal, Salomon Hermann von. b. at Kassel, Germany, Jan. 14, 1821; d. at Vienna, Feb. 17, 1877. German dramatist. Among his plays are Deborah (1850; the original of Leah, the Forsaken), Der Sonnenwendhof (1856), Düweke (1860), Pietra (1865), and others.

Moser (mō'zėr), Gustav von. b. at Spandau, Germany, May 11, 1825; d. at Görlitz, Germany, Oct. 22, 1903. German author of about 100 light plays and farces, which were popular in his time but are now mostly forgotten. They included Der Veilchenfresser (1876) and Der Bibliothekar (1878).

Moser, Hans Joachim. b. at Berlin, May 25, 1889—. German concert bass and musicologist. Among his publications are Geschichte der Deutschen Musik (1920), Musiklexikon (1933), and Lehrbuch der Musikgeschichte (1936).

Moser, Johann Jakob. b. at Stuttgart, Germany, Jan. 18, 1701; d. there, Sept. 30, 1785. German jurist and publicist. Author of Deutsches Staatsrecht (1737–54) and others.

Möser (mė'zėr), Justus. b. at Osnabrück, Germany, Dec. 14, 1720; d. there, Jan. 8, 1794. German historian, critic, and miscellaneous author. He wrote a history of Osnabrück (1768), Patriotische Phantasien (1775–86), and others.

Moses (mō'zęs). In Old Testament history, the lawgiver of the Israelites and organizer of the Israelite nation. After his birth his mother kept him concealed three months to evade the command of the king of Egypt that all male Hebrew children be drowned in the Nile. He was then exposed in a box among the rushes on the banks of the Nile, and was found by an Egyptian princess who adopted and reared him. After he had grown up, he one day struck an Egyptian whom he saw cruelly beating a Hebrew slave. Fearing punishment, he fled from Egypt into the desert, and halted at an oasis inhabited by the Kenites. Here he married Zipporah, the daughter of Reuel, the priest of Midian, and tended the flocks of his father-in-law. It was here that the prophetic spirit came upon him in the vision of the angel in the bush that burned and was not consumed, and he decided to return to Egypt for the purpose of delivering his brethren from slavery. On his return his brother Aaron joined in his plans. His first efforts in behalf of the Israelites only resulted in the infliction of more severe burdens and greater cruelty. Presently, however, a series of most disastrous and terrifying afflictions, usually known as the ten plagues, visited Egypt, and the king finally concluded, after his first-born son died in the last of the punishments, that these had been brought upon the land by the unknown God whose name Moses had invoked. He accordingly ordered the Israelites to leave at once, and they began their departure on the 15th of Nisan (March–April), an event which is known as the Exodus and which is celebrated yearly in the Passover. Moses was the leader of the Israelites during their 40 years' journeyings in the wilderness. He utilized this period for perfecting a civil organization and for the preparation of a code of laws of a high ethical, religious, sanitary, and political character, and climaxed by the Ten Commandments, given to him by God in an interview atop Mount Sinai. Moses was not, however, permitted to enter the land of Canaan; he viewed the goal of the long journey from the top of Mount Nebo just before his death. Jewish tradition ascribes to him the authorship of the Pentateuch with the exception of the verses describing his death. This tradition has been generally accepted by the Christian and Mohammedan world. Some modern Biblical critics have denied the Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch. With few exceptions, however, they consider Moses as a historical character and as the organizer of the Hebrew nation. Some scholars believe Moses to have been an Egyptian prince (his name is equivalent to the word found in the names of such kings as Ahmose and Thutmose) who led the nomadic Hebrews into Palestine and taught them the worship of one God in a manner similar to the later reforms of Ikhnaton within Egypt.

Moses. Statue by Michelangelo, in San Pietro in Vincoli, Rome. The figure is gigantic and imposing. The right hand upholds the Tables of the Law and clutches the long beard; the left arm, pressed close to the body, marks the effort with which the outbreak of righteous wrath against the idolatrous is restrained.

Moses. Oratorio by A. B. Marx (both words and music), performed at Breslau in 1841.

Moses. Jewish moneylender in Richard Brinsley Sheridan's The School for Scandal.

Moses, Anna Mary Robertson. [Called "Grandma Moses."] b. at Greenwich, Washington County, N.Y., Sept. 7, 1860—. American painter. Even as a child she liked to make gay pictures, using the juice of various berries for colors, but her life was mostly taken up with the labors and chores of farm life, both before and after her marriage in 1887. After her husband's death she continued to farm with the aid of one of her sons until in 1938, at the age of 78, the work became too hard for her, whereupon she took to embroidering pictures in worsted. Then, it has been said, arthritis made her an artist: it became painful to use a needle, so she took to painting, first copying Currier and Ives prints and pictures on postcards, but presently venturing on original composition. In 1939 a New York art collector saw some of her work at Hoosick Falls, bought several of her pictures, and arranged for some of them to be shown in an exhibition of "Contemporary Unknown Painters" at the Museum of Modern Art at New York, in the fall of that year. In 1940 she had two one-man shows, and in the next 12 years there were more than 50 more such shows, and she was included in scores of exhibitions. For their spirit and liveliness some of her compositions have been compared with the genre pictures of Pieter Brueghel; and in a perhaps more apt comparison it is pointed out that her design often has the instinctive, magical rightness that characterizes Hindu and Persian art.

Moses, Bernard. b. at Burlington, Conn., Aug. 27, 1846; d. March 4, 1930. American political scientist, an authority on the history of the colonial era in Spanish America (at the beginning of the 20th century he was perhaps the only professor devoting his full time to the study of Hispanic-American history in the U.S.). His works include The Establishment of Spanish Rule in America (1898) and Spain Overseas (1929).

Moses, George Higgins. b. at Lubec, Me., Feb. 9, 1869; d. Dec. 20, 1944. American diplomat, minister to Greece and Montenegro (1909–12). As senator (1918–33) from New Hampshire he was acting president (1925–33) of the Senate.

Moses, Robert. b. at New Haven, Conn., Dec. 18, 1888—. American government administrator. He was graduated (1909) from Yale, studied at Oxford, and received the Ph.D. at Columbia in 1914. He served (1924 et seq.) as chairman of the New York State Council of Parks, was a member (1924–27) of the state Fine Arts Commission, and was secretary of state of New York (1927–28). He was a member (1934–36) of the Triborough Bridge and City Tunnel Authority. In 1934 he was Republican candidate for governor of New York, and in the same year was appointed New York City park commissioner. He has carried out wide improvements in the municipal and suburban park and highway systems.

Moses Lake. Town in E central Washington, in Grant County, ab. 65 mi. NE of Yakima. Nearby is a U.S. Air Force base. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses the town's population grew from 326 (1940) to 2,679 (1950).

Moses of Chorene (kō.rē′nē). fl. in the 5th century. Armenian scholar, the reputed author of a History of Armenia (probably written in the 7th century).

Mosessohn (mō′zez.zōn), David Nehemiah. b. at Ekaterinoslav (now Dnepropetrovsk), Russia, Jan. 1, 1883; d. Dec. 16, 1930. American lawyer and editor; brother of Moses Dayyan Mosessohn and son of Nehemiah Mosessohn. He organized (1918) the Associated Dress Industries of America through which, as executive director, he improved the organization and business methods of the dress industry and encouraged arbitration of disputes. He was a publisher (1903 et seq.) and editor (1926 et seq.) of the Jewish Tribune.

Mosessohn, Moses Dayyan. b. Aug. 17, 1884; d. Aug. 1, 1940. American lawyer and labor leader; brother of David Nehemiah Mosessohn and son of Nehemiah Mosessohn. Executive director (1918–23) of the United Waist League of America and general counsel (1923–33) of the United Women's Wear League, he succeeded his brother to the executive directorship (1930–33) of the Associated Dress Industries of America. A publisher (1903–31) of the Jewish Tribune, he was author of Guide to American Citizenship and The Employer and the New Labor Movement.

Mosessohn, Nehemiah. b. in the Crimea, Russia, April 15, 1853; d. Dec. 10, 1926. American rabbi and editor. He preached (until 1902) at synagogues at Philadelphia, Pa., Dallas, Tex., and Portland, Ore. He was the founder (1902) and first editor of the Jewish Tribune (of which his sons were publishers) at Portland (1902–18) and New York (1918 et seq.).

Mosetene (mō.sə̄.tā′nę). Group of South American Indians of the eastern slopes of the Bolivian Andes. They were first mentioned by Spanish missionaries c1588, when they numbered several thousand. Their language, Mosetene, is classified as an isolated language.

Moshaisk (mo.zhīsk′). See Mozhaisk.

Mosheim (mos′hīm), Johann Lorenz von. b. at Lübeck, Germany, Oct. 9, 1694; d. at Göttingen, Germany, Sept. 9, 1755. German Protestant ecclesiastical historian, theologian, and pulpit orator. He became professor of theology at Helmstädt in 1723, abbot at Marienthal and Michaelstein in 1726, and professor at Göttingen in 1747. His chief work is Institutiones historiae ecclesiasticae (1726; new ed., 1755). He also wrote De rebus Christianorum ante Constantinum commentarii (1753) and others.

Mosher (mō′zhėr), Eliza Maria. b. in Cayuga County, N.Y., Oct. 2, 1846; d. Oct. 16, 1928. American physician and educator. She was appointed (1883) resident physician and professor of physiology and hygiene at Vassar College, where she started a physical examination program for students, and was first dean of women and first professor of hygiene, sanitation, and household economics (1896–1902) at the University of Michigan, where she organized the physical education department.

Mosher, Thomas Bird. b. at Biddeford, Me., Sept. 11, 1852; d. at Portland, Me., Aug. 31, 1923. American publisher who specialized in presenting little-known masterpieces in beautiful, small, and inexpensive format. The first (1891) of these "Mosher books" was George Meredith's Modern Love and Other Poems. He published the first issue of the 24-page monthly reprint of poetry and prose from obscure sources in January, 1895, entitling it The Bibelot.

Moshesh (mō.shāsh′). fl. in the early part of the 19th century. King of the Suto people of Basutoland in S Africa. He welded (c1820) the Suto into a united kingdom, his skill as a political leader exceeding even that of his Zulu contemporary, King Chaka.

Moshi (mō′shē). See also Mossi.

Moshi. Town in E Africa, in NE Tanganyika territory, situated on the slopes of Mount Kilimanjaro. It is linked by rail with the ports of Tanga and Mombasa. It is the marketing center of a coffee-growing district and an area having extensive European settlement.

Moshi-Dagomba (dą.gom′bą). See Mole-Dagbane.

Mosiro (mō.sē′rō). [Also, Elmosiro.] Subgroup of the Dorobo, a Nilo-Hamitic-speaking people of E Africa. They inhabit a hill region in NE Tanganyika. Their population is estimated at ab. 1,000 (by R. A. J. Maguire, "Il-Torobo," in the Journal of the African Society, vol. 27, 1928).

Moskenström (môs'kẹn.strĕm). See Maelstrom.

Moskhi (môs'chē). See Georgians.

Moskito (mọs.kē'tō). See Mosquito.

Moskowa (mos.ko.vä), Prince de la. A title of Ney, Michel.

Moskowitz (mos'kọ.wits), Belle Lindner Israels. b. at New York, Oct. 5, 1877; d. Jan. 2, 1933. American social worker. She was director (1900–03) of amusements and exhibitions for the Educational Alliance, on the staff (1908–10) of The Survey, manager (1914–16) of the labor department of the Dress and Waist Manufacturers Association, and was a public relations counselor (1917 et seq.). She was secretary of the Educational Council of the Port of New York Authority (1921 et seq.), of the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense (1916–17), of the Governor's Labor Board (1920–21), and of the New York State Reconstruction Commission (1919–21).

Moskva (mos.kvä'). River in the U.S.S.R., which traverses the Moscow oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic. It joins the Oka near Kolomna. Length, ab. 312 mi.; navigable to Moscow.

Moskva. Russian name of Moscow.

Moskva, Battle of the. See under Borodino.

Moskvin (mos.kvēn'), Ivan. b. 1874; d. 1945. Russian actor. The ablest high comedian of the Russian stage, Moskvin was a founding member of the Moscow Art Theatre company. One of his most famous roles was that of Luka in Maxim Gorki's The Lower Depths.

Moslem League (moz'lẹm, mos'-). Political organization of Indian Moslems established in 1906. It gained importance after 1940 when it adopted the proposal for the creation of Pakistan, a separate state for Indian Moslems, and its president, Mohammed Ali Jinnah, insisted on the right to represent the entire Moslem community in negotiations for the transfer of sovereignty to India. The league was founded by highly placed Moslems who feared Hindu political domination; it remained without popular support until 1936 because many Moslems were drawn into the noncoöperation and civil disobedience movements under the aegis of the National Congress.

Moslems. Followers of Mohammed; the orthodox Mohammedans.

Mosley (mōz'li), Sir Oswald Ernald. b. at London, Nov. 16, 1896—. English politician, leader of the blackshirted British Union of Fascists. He started (1918) his political career as a Conservative member of Parliament, but changed political affiliations, serving as an Independent member and later (1926–31) as a Labour member of Parliament. He announced (March 2, 1931) formation of a "New Party," which later became the British Union of Fascists. His open support of Nazi and Fascist doctrines led to prison confinement (May, 1940–Nov. 20, 1943) in England during World War II.

Moso (mō'sō). Non-Chinese tribe in Yunnan province, China, mentioned in the annals of the T'ang dynasty (618–906 A.D.). They are regarded by some as identical with the Na-khi.

Mosonmagyaróvár (mō'shōn.mô'dyôr.ō'vär). [German names: Wieselburg (for Moson) and Ungarisch-Altenburg (for Magyaróvár).] Town, formerly two neighboring towns, in NW Hungary, situated near the junction of the Lajta (Leitha) River and an arm of the Danube River, in the vicinity of the Austrian border. 16,861 (1948).

Mosque of Suleiman (sö.lā.män'). See Suleiman, Mosque of.

Mosquera (mōs.kā'rä), Tomás Cipriano. b. at Popayán, Colombia, Sept. 20, 1798; d. Oct. 7, 1878. Colombian general and politician, president (1845–49) of New Granada and dictator (1861) and president (1863–64, 1866–67) of Colombia. He held high civil and military offices under Simón Bolívar and his successors, and was president of New Granada during a prosperous term. He headed the federalist-democratic revolt of 1859–61, assumed the supreme power in July, 1861, and called a constituent assembly which created the United States of Colombia and made him dictator. Continued civil wars forced him to resign his power into the hands of a new assembly, which limited the presidential term to two years and forbade reëlection. Under this constitution he was president (1863–64), and was again elected in 1866. He assumed dictatorial powers, and was deposed by a revolution in May, 1867, and banished for three years. Subsequently he was governor of Cauca department and a member of the congress. He published in 1853 a biography of Bolívar and a work on the geography of New Granada.

Mosquitia (mọs.kē'ti.ạ; Spanish, mōs.kē'tyä). See Mosquito Coast.

Mosquito (mọs.kē'tō). [Also: Miskito, Misquito, Moskito.] Indian tribe occupying the N part of the E coast of Nicaragua at the time of the Spanish conquest. Since the 17th century they have become mixed, both physically and culturally, with Negro groups. During the 18th century the tribe was allied with English buccaneers based in the area, and the tribal territory was expanded to cover the whole of the E Nicaraguan coast. At present they number ab. 15,000 and are divided among several subtribes.

Mosquitoan (mọs.kē'tō.ạn). [Also: Miskito, Misquitoan.] Language of the Mosquito Indians, long regarded as of Chibchan affinities. Recent reclassification of South American Indian languages, however, proposes Misumalpan as a new hybrid term to embrace this and other languages of Nicaragua and S Honduras. It is comprised of some five dialects, which are used by the subtribes into which the Mosquito are divided.

Mosquito Coast. [Also: Mosquitia, Miskito Coast; Spanish, Costa de Mosquitos.] Region in E Nicaragua, bordering on the Caribbean Sea. It is a low, swampy coastal plain, with a hot and very humid climate; most of the region is a jungle. It is included in the department of Zelaya. The English settled here c1660, and their rights were recognized by Spain in 1670. Great Britain recognized the Mosquito king and established a protectorate over the country; but endless quarrels with Spain resulted in the cession of the British rights in exchange for Belize (now British Honduras), to which the colonists were transferred (1786). The Spaniards were driven out by the natives; later Great Britain resumed a nominal protectorate, which led to quarrels with Nicaragua (1840–48). By the Bulwer-Clayton Treaty, signed at Washington April 19, 1850, and by a subsequent treaty with Honduras, Great Britain resigned all claim to the Mosquito Coast.

Moss (môs). City in SE Norway, the capital of the fylke (county) of Østfold, situated on the E shore of Oslo Fjord, S of Oslo. It is a port with shipyards, and lumber, pulp and paper, soap, clothing, and metal industries. The agreement leading to the union between Sweden and Norway was signed here in 1814. Pop. 17,415 (1946).

Moss, Frank. b. at Cold Spring, N.Y., March 16, 1860; d. June 5, 1920. American lawyer, counsel (1887 et seq.) for the Society for the Prevention of Crime during its campaign in New York City against Tammany, and a member of the Lexow committee which investigated corruption in the New York municipal government. He was appointed (1897) president of the New York City board of police commissioners after the resignation of Theodore Roosevelt. As first assistant district attorney (1909–14), he conducted the successful prosecution of the four Rosenthal murderers. His writings include The American Metropolis (3 vols., 1897), a picture of New York, and America's Mission to Serve Humanity (1919).

Moss, John Calvin. b. at Bentleyville, Pa., Jan. 5, 1838; d. April 8, 1892. American photoengraver who commercially inaugurated the process in America, becoming world-famous in the field. After selling (1881) an unsuccessful company, he founded the Moss Engraving Company at New York where, with a pen-and-ink imitation of the wood-engraving process, he developed photoengraving.

Moss, Lemuel. b. in Owen County, Ky., Dec. 27, 1829; d. at New York, July 12, 1904. American Baptist clergyman, president of the University of Chicago (1874–75) and Indiana University (1875–84).

Mossadegh (mō'sa.dek'), Mohammed. b. at Tehran, 1880—. Iranian statesman. He held several cabinet posts in the years 1920–22, but retired (1927–44) from active politics. The leader of the National Front in the Iranian Parliament, he became premier on April 29, 1951, at the height of agitation caused by his party over the question of nationalization of the Iranian oil industry. He came into serious conflict with England over confiscation of Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. property and, though he expressed willingness to hold conversations on the matter, and did so with several Western statesmen, he refused to permit arbitration of the dispute by the International Court of Justice. The crisis caused his resignation (July 16, 1952) but on July 22 he returned as premier, no one else having been able to form a stable government. In Aug., 1953, he attempted to force the shah from the throne, but was himself ousted from power.

Mossâmedes (mō.sam'ē.dēz; Portuguese, mō.su'mē.dēsh). Port in SW Angola, in SW Africa, at the mouth of the Bero River. From the port a railroad runs inland over 150 mi. It has steamship connections with the other ports of Angola, with Capetown, and with Portugual. 4,926 (1940).

Mossel Bay (môs'ĕl). Seaport in S Africa, on the S coast of Cape of Good Hope province, Union of South Africa, situated on the W side of Mossel Bay (an arm of the Indian Ocean). It is connected with Capetown by rail (318 mi.) as well as by sea (246 mi.). 8,078 (1946), including 3,582 Europeans.

Mosses from an Old Manse. Collection of stories by Nathaniel Hawthorne, published in 1846, after having appeared separately elsewhere.

Mossi (mô'sē). [Also, Moshi.] Sudanic-speaking people of W Africa, inhabiting NE Ivory Coast and SE French Sudan. Their language is known as Mole, or More. Their population is estimated at ab. 1,500,000 (by Y. Urvoy, Petit Atlas ethno-demographique du Soudan, 1942). They are divided into two independent kingdoms, dating back to the 11th and 12th centuries. Like the Banmana and Malinke in the W, the Mossi in the center of the W Sudan have resisted Mohammedanism; only about six percent have become Mohammedans.

Mösskirch (mes'kirĉh). See Messkirch.

Mossley (môs'li). Municipal borough and manufacturing town in NW England, in Lancashire, situated on the river Tame ab. 9 mi. NE of Manchester, ab. 188 mi. NW of London by rail. It has a woolen-textile industry specializing in the manufacture of felts, flannels, and blankets. 10,415 (1951).

Mosso (môs'sō), Angelo. b. at Turin, Italy, May 31, 1846; d. there, Nov. 23, 1910. Italian physiologist, professor (1879 et seq.) at the University of Turin, especially noted for his investigations in psychophysiology. He published The Dawn of Mediterranean Civilization (1910) and others.

Mossop (mos'ŏp), Henry. b. 1729; d. at Chelsea, London, Dec. 27, 1774. Irish actor. He first appeared in England, Sept. 26, 1751, as Richard III, being received with great enthusiasm. In 1759 he appeared in England for the last time, and returned to Dublin as a star. He played under the management of Spranger Barry for the season, but the next year he undertook the management of a rival theater, which ended in the financial ruin of both. Mossop died in great poverty.

Mossoró (mō.sō.rô'). City in NE Brazil, in the state of Rio Grande do Norte. 20,576 (1950).

Moss Point (môs). City in SE Mississippi, in Jackson County, on Mississippi Sound: manufactures of paper, lumber, and fish products. 3,782 (1950).

Mossy Creek (môs'i). Former name of Jefferson City, Tenn.

Most (môst). [German: Brüx, Brix.] City in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Ústi, in N Bohemia, situated on the Biela River between Teplice and Chomutov, ab. 45 mi. NW of Prague. The city is the center of the NW Bohemian lignite-mining district and is surrounded by a number of mining villages which had attracted prior to 1945 a considerable Czech-speaking working population to what had been until then a predominantly German-speaking district. Since 1945 the Czech character of the region has been assured by the expulsion of the German minority. There are a number of industries, producing metalware, enamelware, glass, china, sugar, liquor, and beer. Pop., including suburbs, 35,330 (1947).

Most (mōst; German, most), Johann Joseph. b. at Augsburg, Germany, Feb. 5, 1846; d. at Cincinnati, Ohio, March 17, 1906. German anarchist. He edited (1868-78) socialist papers at Chemnitz, Berlin, and Vienna, and at various times was imprisoned in Austria, Germany, and America, and was expelled from Austria and Germany. He was twice elected to the Reichstag. He established (1878) Die Freiheit at London. Expelled (1880) from the German Socialist Party, he emigrated (1882) to New York. He wrote while in America a pamphlet on the "science" of revolutionary warfare. After the assassination of President McKinley, he wrote an editorial stating that the killing of a ruler could not be considered a crime; he spent (1902) two months in jail as a result. He was known as an advocate of "propaganda by deed."

Mostaganem (môs.tä.gä.nem'). Seaport in NW Africa, in Oran department, Algeria, on an arm of the Mediterranean Sea, ab. 43 mi. NE of Oran. It is an industrial and commercial center and serves as the port for the surrounding agricultural area. 50,403 (1948).

Mostar (môs'tär). City in W Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Bosnia-Hercegovina, formerly in the banovina (province) of Primorska, situated in the valley of the Neredva River, SW of Sarajevo. About half of the population is Mohammedan. There are three bridges in the town; one, a single-arch bridge, is ascribed to the Roman emperor Trajan. Until 1919 it was the capital of the Austro-Hungarian province of Hercegovina. 23,239 (1948).

Mosul (mō'sul, mō.sōl'). Liwa (province) in N Iraq, in the Tigris River valley N of Baghdad. Wheat is grown here for home consumption by dry-farming methods. Capital, Mosul; area, 19,490 sq. mi.; pop. 601,589 (1947).

Mosul. City in N Iraq, capital of the liwa (province) of Mosul, situated on the right bank of the Tigris River opposite the site of ancient Nineveh: third largest city of Iraq, the metropolis of the northern oil fields, served by five major highways and the Baghdad Railway. It was once famous for the manufacture of the cotton fabrics called muslin or mousseline, the names of which are derived from that of the city. Pop. ab. 260,000.

Moszkowski (môsh.kôf'skē), Moritz. b. at Breslau, Aug. 23, 1854; d. at Paris, in March, 1925. Polish pianist and composer, chiefly of piano music. His opera Boabdil was produced in 1892.

Motagua (mō.tä'gwä). [Also, in upper course, Rio Grande.] Longest river of Guatemala. It flows NE into the Gulf of Honduras. Length, ab. 340 mi.

Motala (mō'tä.lä). City in S Sweden, in the län (county) of Östergötland, situated on the NE shore of Lake Vättern and the Göta Canal, SW of Stockholm. Here is the chief radio-transmitting station of the Swedish broadcasting service; manufactures include electric railroad equipment, electrical machinery, and woolen textiles. 24,723 (1950).

Motanebbi (mō.tą.neb'i). [Also, Motenebbi.] b. at Al Kufa, in what is now Iraq, c915; killed by robbers, near Shiraz, in what is now Iran, 965. Arab poet.

Mota Padilla (mō'tä pä.ŦHē'yä), Matias de la. b. at Guadalajara, Mexico, Oct. 6, 1688; d. in July, 1766. Mexican historian. His Historia de la conquista de la Nueva Galicia, printed in Mexico (1870–71), is a work of great value.

Motecuhzoma (mō''tā.kō.sō'mä) or Moteczuma (mō.tā.sō'mä). See Montezuma I.

Motenebbi (mō.te.neb'i). See Motanebbi.

Motezuma (mō.tā.sō'mä). See Montezuma I.

Moth (môth). Page in Shakespeare's Love's Labour's Lost.

Moth. Fairy in Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream.

Moth. In William Cartwright's play The Ordinary, a shallow-brained antiquary, whose conversation is mostly disjointed scraps from Chaucer.

Mothe-Fénelon (mot.fān.lôṅ), Marquis de La. See Fénelon.

Mother, The. Novel by Naomi Royde-Smith, published in 1931.

Mother and Other Poems, The. Volume of poetry by Edith Sitwell, published in 1915.

"Mother Ann" (an). See Lee or Lees, Ann.

Mother Bunch (bunch). See Bunch, Mother.

Mother Carey's Chickens (kār'iz). Story for children by Kate Douglas Wiggin, published in 1911. It was adapted for the stage (in collaboration with Rachel Crothers) and produced in 1917.

Mother Goose. Name famous in children's literature through various familiar rhymes. It is said that there was a Mrs. Goose, mother-in-law of Thomas Fleet, an early Boston publisher, and that he issued the collection under this title to avenge himself for her persistent and unmelodious chanting of these ditties to his infant son. An apocryphal early edition is said to have borne the title "Songs for the Nursery; or Mother Goose's Melodies for Children: printed by T. Fleet at his printing house, Pudding Lane, 1719. Price, two coppers." This story, however, has been discredited in that no copy of such a book has ever been found. Moreover, the concept of a story-telling Mother Goose probably came to America from France, via English nursery lore. Charles Perrault published Contes de ma mère l'oye in 1697; but the name was quoted by the satirist Régnier more than a century before. Queen Goosefoot (Reine Pédance), or Bertha with the great foot (who was the mother of Charlemagne), has been suggested as the original of Mother Goose, but there is no substantiation for the idea. The Contes de ma mère l'oye, by Charles Perrault, were published under the name of his ten-year-old son, Perrault d'Armancourt. They consist of ten stories, seven of which may be derived from the Pentamerone, a 17th-century Italian collection, or from Straparola's Facetious Nights (1550).

Mother Holle (hol'ę). See Holda.

Mother Hubbard (hub'ȧrd). Heroine of an English nursery rhyme, who went to the cupboard to get a bone for her dog and found the cupboard bare. She then made numerous expeditions out to the shops of the neighborhood on errands for the dog, and on each return found him doing something more and more fantastic, through 14 verses. These were first published in 1805 under the title The Comic Adventures of Old Mother Hubbard and her Dog, and had instantaneous popularity. Sarah Catherine Martin (1768–1826) was the author. It was immediately pirated by some 26 chapbooks. Old Mother Hubbard herself, however, was a folk character known as early as the 16th century.

Mother Hubberd's Tale (hub'ėrdz). Poem by Edmund Spenser, published in 1591 in a volume known as Complaints, but written much earlier. It is an intentional imitation of Chaucer's manner. It was also entitled Prosopopoia.

Mother Lode. Zone of gold-bearing quartz veins in the W Sierra Nevadas, California, extending through Nevada, Placer, Eldorado, Amador, Calaveras, Tuolumne, and Mariposa counties, so called because it was the source of the gold found in stream beds below the occurrence of the lode.

"Mother of Cities." A name given to the ancient city of Balkh, in C Asia.

"Mother of Diets." A name given to the city of Worms, Germany.

"Mother of Presidents." A nickname of Virginia.

"Mother of Russian Cities" (rush'ȧn). A name given to the city of Kiev.

"Mother of the Confederacy." Epithet of Law, Sallie Chapman.

Mother Sawyer (sô'yėr). See Sawyer, Mother.

Mother's Day. American national observance in honor of motherhood. The holiday, suggested by Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia, was set (1914) by an act of Congress for annual celebration on the second Sunday in May. It is also observed in England and Germany.

Mother Shipton (ship'tǫn). Comedy by T. T. (Thomas Thompson). Although undated, it probably appeared before 1668. A ballad was written by George Colman the elder in 1771 with this title.

Mother Shipton's Prophecies. Various pretended prophecies published in England in the 15th, 17th, and 18th centuries. Charles Hindley wrote some of them. Many of them are attributed to T. Evan Preece, a prophetess of South Wales.

Motherwell (muᴛʜ'ėr.węl, -wel), William. b. at Glasgow, Oct. 13, 1797; d. there, Nov. 1, 1835. Scottish poet and antiquary. He wrote Minstrelsy Ancient and Modern (1827) and Poems Narrative and Lyrical (1832). "Jeanie Morrison" appears in the latter.

Motherwell and Wishaw (wish'ô). Police burgh and industrial center in S Scotland, in Lanarkshire, situated near South Calder Water, ab. 12 mi. SE of Glasgow, ab. 388 mi. N of London by rail. It was formed by the amalgamation of the former burghs of Motherwell and Wishaw, in 1920. The burgh is situated on the Lanarkshire coal field, and has an iron and steel industry, now using mostly imported ores. 68,137 (1951).

Motien Pass (mō'ti.en). Mountain pass in S Manchuria, SE of Mukden. It was of strategic importance in the Russo-Japanese War (1904–05), and a number of bloody engagements were fought in its vicinity.

Motier (mo.tyā), Marie Joseph Paul Yves Roch Gilbert du. See Lafayette or La Fayette, Marquis de.

Motier de Lafayette (dę lȧ.fȧ.yet), Gilbert. See Lafayette, Gilbert Motier de.

Motilones (mō.tē.lō'nās). Group of South American Indians of NW Venezuela in the Lake Maracaibo region, of Cariban linguistic stock. Their language with its numerous dialects is now classified as belonging to the Maracaibo-Magdalene group of the northwestern division of the Cariban family of languages. Earlier scholars, however, have seen Arawakan affinities in the speech of some groups of Motilones.

Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, Academy of. See Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Motley (mot'li), John Lothrop. b. at Dorchester (now part of Boston), Mass., April 15, 1814; d. in Dorsetshire, England, May 29, 1877. American historian and diplomat. He graduated from Harvard in 1831, and, after completing his general education at Göttingen and Berlin and spending some time in travel, returned to America in 1834, took up the study of law, and was admitted to the bar. He eventually devoted himself to the study of history, and lived mostly abroad, residing in England after 1868. He was U.S. minister to Austria (1861–67) and to Great Britain (1869–70). His chief works are The Rise of the Dutch Republic (3 vols., 1856), The History of the United Netherlands (4 vols., 1860–68), and The Life and Death of John of Barneveld (1874).

Motolinia (mō.tō.lē'nyä), Toribio de. [Reputed original surname, Paredes; called Toribio de Benavente.] b. at Benavente, Zamora, Spain, c1500; d. in Mexico, Aug. 9, 1568. Spanish Franciscan missionary and author. He adopted the name of Motolinia from an Indian word meaning "poor." He went with the first Franciscans to Mexico (1524), and was one of the most successful missionaries. Most of his numerous writings are lost; the most important remaining is the Historia de los Indios de la Nueva España.

Moton (mō'tǫn), Robert Russa. b. in Amelia County, Va., Aug. 26, 1867; d. at Capahoosic, Va., May 31, 1940. American Negro educator. He graduated (1890) from and was on the faculty (1890–1916) of Hampton Institute at Hampton, Va. He was the successor (1915–35) to Booker T. Washington as principal of Tuskeegee Institute. He was awarded (1932) the Spingarn medal. Author of Racial Good Will (1916), What the Negro Thinks (1929), and his autobiography, Finding a Way Out (1920).

Motono (mō.tō.nō), Viscount Ichiro. b. in Saga, Japan, 1862; d. at Paris, Oct. 18, 1918. Japanese diplomat. He was a member (1907) of the Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague, and served as minister to Belgium (1898–1901), ambassador to France (1901–06), and ambassador to Russia (1906–07).

Motril (mō.trēl'). Town in S Spain, in the province of Granada, situated near the Mediterranean Sea, ab. 31 mi. S of Granada. The climate is mild; sugar cane and sugar beets, cotton, figs, and almonds are grown in the vicinity. There are sugar refineries and small cotton mills. Lead and zinc are mined nearby. 20,495 (1940).

Mott (mot), Frank Luther. b. in Keokuk County, Iowa, April 4, 1886—. American journalist, educator, and author. He was professor of journalism and director of the school of journalism (1927–42) at the State University of Iowa, and professor and dean of the school of journalism (1942–51) at the University of Missouri. Author of Six Prophets Out of the Middle West (1917), The Man with the Good Face (1921), Records of Reading (1926), A History of American Magazines (3 vols., 1930–38; awarded Pulitzer prize in American history, 1939), American Journalism . . . 1690–1940 (1941), Jefferson and the Press (1943), and Golden Multitudes (1947).

Mott, James. b. at North Hempstead, Long Island, N.Y., June 20, 1788; d. at Brooklyn, N.Y., Jan. 26, 1868. American abolitionist who, with his wife, Lucretia Coffin Mott, was present at the Philadelphia convention which founded (1833) the American Anti-Slavery Society. After the passage of the fugitive-slave law (1850), the Mott home at Philadelphia was opened as a refuge for escaped slaves. He was a Philadelphia commission merchant (1822–52), dealing first in cotton and then in wool. He was a delegate (1840) to the world antislavery convention at London. He assisted in founding Swarthmore College (1864).

Mott, John Raleigh. b. at Livingston Manor, N.Y., May 25, 1865—. American religious worker. He has been chairman of the executive committee of the Student Volunteer Movement since 1888, general secretary (1895–1920) and chairman (1920–28) of the World's Student Christian Federation, and foreign secretary of the international committee of the Young Men's Christian Association since 1898. He served as general secretary (1915–31) and head (1926 et seq.) of the World's Committee of the Y.M.C.A., and he led (1921 et seq.) the International Missionary Council. He was one of the two recipients (1946) of the Nobel peace prize.

Mott, Mrs. Lucretia Coffin. b. at Nantucket, Mass., Jan. 3, 1793; d. near Philadelphia, Nov. 11, 1880. American social reformer, and preacher in the Society of Friends; wife of James Mott. She was active in behalf of abolition, woman suffrage, and universal peace. She joined with Elizabeth Cady Stanton in calling the 1848 convention at Seneca Falls, N.Y., to discuss the "condition and rights of women."

Mott, Valentine. b. at Glen Cove, Long Island, N.Y., Aug. 20, 1785; d. at New York, April 26, 1865. American surgeon, known especially for his successes in ligating the large arteries, in amputations, and in lithotomies. He translated Velpeau's Operative Surgery, and wrote Travels (1842), Mott's Cliniques (1860), and others.

Mott, Valentine. b. at New York, Nov. 17, 1852; d. June 19, 1918. American surgeon; a descendant of Valentine Mott (1785–1865). He studied with Pasteur and brought to America the first inoculated rabbit allowed to leave the Paris laboratory.

Motta (mōt'tä), Giuseppe. b. at Airolo, Switzerland, Dec. 29, 1871; d. at Bern, Switzerland, Jan. 23, 1940. Swiss lawyer and statesman. He was elected (Dec. 14, 1911) to the Federal Council, in which he served until his death, and was president (1915, 1920, 1927, 1932, 1937) of the Swiss Confederation. As foreign minister, (1920 et seq.) he was sympathetic to the League of Nations, although a firm advocate of absolute Swiss neutrality. He was honorary president (1920) of the first League of Nations assembly and its president in 1924.

Motta (mô'tą), José Vianna da. b. at Lisbon, Portugal, April 22, 1868—. Portuguese pianist and composer. He was director (1917 et seq.) of the Lisbon Conservatory, and conductor (1917 et seq.) of the Lisbon Symphony Orchestra. Among his compositions is the symphony An das Vaterland. He also composed a cantata, chamber music, piano selections, and songs.

Mottarone (mōt.tä.rō'nā), Monte. See Motterone, Monte.

Motte (mot), Antoine Houdar de La. See La Motte, Antoine Houdar de.

Motte-Ango (mot.äṅ.gō), Robert Pellevé de le. See Flers, Robert Pellevé de le Motte-Ango, Marquis de.

Motte-Fouqué (mot'fō.kā'), Baron Friedrich Heinrich Karl de la. See Fouqué, Baron Friedrich Heinrich Karl de la Motte-.

Motte-Guyon (mot.gwē.yôṅ), Jeanne Marie Bouvier de la. Full name of Guyon, Madame.

Motterone (mōt.tä.rō'nā) or Mottarone (mōt.tä.rō'nā), Monte. Mountain in N Italy, W of Stresa on Lago Maggiore, famous for its view. Elevation, ab. 4,890 ft.

Motteux (mo.tė), Pierre Antoine. [Also, Peter Anthony Motteux.] b. at Rouen, France, Feb. 25, 1663; murdered at London, Feb. 18, 1718. English translator and playwright. He was a French Huguenot merchant, at London after 1685, having gone to England on the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. One of hisdramas, called Novelty, gives a distinct play in each act. He is better known as the translator, with Thomas Urquhart, of Rabelais's works; and he also, with others, translated Don Quixote.

Motteville (mot.vēl), Madame Langlois de. [Maiden name, Françoise Bertaut.] b. c1621; d. 1689. French author. She was the friend and confidante of Anne of Austria, queen of Louis XIII of France, and a noted "précieuse." Her Mémoires pour servir á l'histoire d'Anne d'Autriche were not printed till 1723.

Mottistone (mot'i.stọn), 1st Baron. See Seely, John Edward Bernard.

Mottl (mot'l), Felix. b. near Vienna, Aug. 24, 1856; d. at Munich, July 2, 1911. Austrian orchestral conductor and composer. He succeeded (1880) Felix Dessoff as court conductor at Karlsruhe, frequently conducted at Bayreuth, and had a high reputation as a Wagnerian interpreter. In 1904 he was made a director of the Berlin Royal Academy of Music, and he was later (1907) director of the Royal Opera House, Munich. He composed the operas Agnes Bernauer, Ramin, Fürst und Sänger, and others. His editions of Berlioz, Wagner, and other composers are of the first rank.

Mottley (mot'li), John. b. at London, 1692; d. there, Oct. 3, 1750. English writer. Author of Joe Miller's Jests, or The Wit's Vade Mecum (1739), the most famous of all English jestbooks, and of five dramas, History of Peter the Great (1739), and The Lives of Dramatic Authors (1747).

Mottola (môt'tō.lä). Town and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Taranto, NW of Taranto. Pop. of Commune, 11,739 (1936); of town, 9,551 (1936).

Mottram (mot'rạm), R. H. [Full name, Ralph Hale Mottram.] b. at Norwich, England, Oct. 30, 1883—. English writer. His publications include Poems Old and New (1930), The Headless Hound (1931), Early Morning (1935), Journey to the Western Front (1936), Old England (1937), The World Turns Slowly Round (1942), Visit of the Princess (1946), Buxton the Liberator (1946), and The Gentleman of Leisure (1947).

Motyca (mō'ti.kạ). Ancient name of Modica.

Mouchoir (mö.shwär), Le. Romance by James Fenimore Cooper, published in 1843. It was reissued as The Autobiography of a Pocket-Handkerchief.

Mouchy (mö.shē), Duc de. Title of Noailles, Philippe de.

Moudon (mö.dôṅ). [Latin, Minodunum.] Town in W Switzerland, in the canton of Vaud. It was once the capital of the Pays de Vaud. 2,338 (1941).

Moukden (mö͡o'dẹn). See Mukden.

Mouldy (möl'di). Recruit in part II of Shakespeare's King Henry IV.

Moule (moul), Henry. b. at Melksham, Wiltshire, England, Jan. 27, 1801; d. at Fordington, Dorsetshire, England, Feb. 3, 1880. English Anglican clergyman, inventor of the dry-earth system of sewage disposal, which was extensively applied in England and in India.

Moulié (mö.lyā), Charles. See Sandre, Thierry.

Moulins (mö.laṅ). Town in C France, capital of the department of Allier, on the Allier River. It was the capital of the old privince of Bourbonnais. The cathedral, which dates from the 15th and 16th centuries, has remarkable stained-glass windows. The town has manufactures of hosiery, tools, and woolen goods. 23,254 (1946).

Moulmein (möl.mān', mōl-). [Also, Maulmain.] Seaport in S Burma, situated at the mouth of the Salween River, ab. 100 mi. E of Rangoon. It is the third largest city in Burma, and an important port, noted for its exports of teakwood and rice. It has a shipbuilding industry. 65,506 (1931).

Moulouya (mö.lö'yạ). [Spanish, Muluya.] River in NW Africa, in French Morocco, which flows into the Mediterranean Sea W of the Algerian border. It rises in the Atlas Mountains and forms the E boundary of Spanish Morocco. Length, ab. 325 mi.

Moult (mōlt), Thomas. b. at Mellor Hall, Derbyshire, England, Sept. 23, 1895—. English critic, novelist, poet, and anthologist. He was music critic on the Manchester Guardian, art and drama critic on the Athenaeum and the English Review, and a sports writer on English and Australian periodicals. He was editor of the annual Best Poems (1923–39) and of Modern Writers and Playwrights (1929) in the Critical Biographies series. Author of the novels Snow over Eldon (1920), The Comely Lass (1923), and Saturday Night (1931); of the books of poetry Down Here the Hawthorn (1921), Brown Earth (1922), and Dear

England (1941); of the critical studies Barrie (1928) and W. H. Davies (1934); and also of Bat and Ball, a New Book of Cricket (1935) and How We Write Our Poems (1940).

Moulton (mōl'tŏn), Ellen Louise Chandler. See Moulton, Louise Chandler.

Moulton, Forest Ray. b. April 29, 1872; d. Dec. 7, 1952. American astronomer; brother of Harold Glenn Moulton. He originated (1900 et seq.), with Thomas C. Chamberlin, the planetesimal (spiral-nebula) hypothesis of the origin of the solar system, as opposed to the nebular hypothesis of P. S. de Laplace. Author of Celestial Mechanics (1902), Descriptive Astronomy (1911), Periodic Orbits (1920), Differential Equations (1929), Astronomy (1931), Consider the Heavens (1935), and other works. He was coeditor with J. J. Schifferes of The Autobiography of Science (1945).

Moulton, Harold Glenn. b. at Le Roy, Mich., Nov. 7, 1883—. American economist and author; brother of Forest Ray Moulton. He was a teacher (1909–22) at the University of Chicago, and director (1922 et seq.) of the Institute of Economics at Washington, until it became part (1927) of the Brookings Institute, of which he was president (1927 et seq.). Author of Principles of Money and Banking (1916), Financial Organization of Society (1921), The American Transportation Problem (1933), Income and Economic Progress (1935), Fundamental Economic Issues in National Defense (1941), The New Philosophy of Public Debt (1943), and other works.

Moulton, Louise Chandler. [Maiden name, Ellen Louise Chandler.] b. at Pomfret, Conn., April 10, 1835; d. at Boston, Aug. 10, 1908. American novelist and poet. Among her works are This, That, and The Other (1854), June Clifford (1855), Bed-time Stories (1873), Some Women's Hearts (1874), Swallow Flights, and Other Poems (1878), Random Rambles (1881), Firelight Stories (1883), Ourselves and our Neighbors (1887), Miss Eyre from Boston, and Other Stories (1889), In the Garden of Dreams (1889), Stories Told at Twilight (1890), In Childhood's Country (1896), At the Wind's Will (1899), and Poems and Sonnets (1909).

Moulton, Richard Green. b. at Preston, England, May 5, 1849; d. at Tunbridge Wells, England, Aug. 15, 1924. English author, critic, and educator, professor in the University of Chicago from 1892 until his retirement in 1919. He was engaged (1874–92) as a lecturer in university extension work in England and America. Among his works are Shakespeare as a Dramatic Artist (1885), Ancient Classical Drama (1890), The Literary Study of the Bible (1896), A Short Introduction to the Literature of the Bible (1901), The Moral System of Shakespeare (1903), and World Literature (1911). He edited The Modern Reader's Bible (1895–98), an edition that treats the Bible as literature and indicates, by the usual typographic devices, the poetry, drama, and other literary forms in the Old and New Testaments.

Moultrie (mōl'tri). City in S Georgia, county seat of Colquitt County: meat packing; shipping point for watermelons and cotton. 11,639 (1950).

Moultrie (möl'tri, mōl'-), Fort. Fort on Sullivan's Island, in the main entrance to Charleston harbor, erected during the War of 1812. In the Civil War it was abandoned by the Union garrison under Major Robert Anderson on Dec. 26, 1860, and was seized by the Confederates, who served a battery from it during the bombardment of Fort Sumter.

Moultrie (mōl'tri), John. b. at London, Dec. 30, 1799; d. at Rugby, England, Dec. 26, 1874. English poet. He was rector of Rugby from 1828, at the time when Thomas Arnold, who became his friend, was headmaster at the school there. He published My Brother's Grave (1837), The Dream of Life (1843), and Sermons (1853).

Moultrie (möl'tri), William. b. in South Carolina, in November or December, 1730; d. at Charleston, S. C., Sept. 27, 1805. American Revolutionary general. He repulsed an attack on Sullivan's Island (where Fort Moultrie now stands) in 1776, defended Charleston in 1779, and was governor of South Carolina (1785–87, 1794–96).

Moundbuilders. Popular collective term referring to the North American Indians who built the numerous mounds and earthworks found throughout the Mississippi, Ohio, and tributary river valleys. They were ancestral (in some cases immediately) to the Indian populations found by the first European explorers and settlers. They had a fairly advanced culture; they knew agriculture, metalworking, weaving, and pottery-making. The mound at Hopewell, Ohio, is one of the most famous.

Mound City Group National Monument. National monument in S Ohio, ab. 4 mi. NW of Chillicothe, established in 1923 to preserve a group of prehistoric Indian mounds. Area, ab. 57 acres.

Moundsville (moundz'vil). [Former name, Elizabethtown.] City in N West Virginia, county seat of Marshall County, on the Ohio River ab. 13 mi. S of Wheeling: manufactures of glass, zinc, and enamel products; shipping center for coal. It was platted in 1798, and named for the Grave Creek Mound, a prehistoric mound which stands within the city limits. 14,772 (1950).

Mounet-Sully (mō.ne.sü.lē), Jean. [Original name, Jean Sully Mounet.] b. at Bergerac, France, Feb. 27, 1841; d. at Paris, March 1, 1916. French tragedian, famous for such roles as Hamlet, Othello, Oedipus, Orestes, and Nero in English and neo-classic French drama. He joined the Comédie Française in 1872. Playing classic roles with fire as well as dignity, Mounet-Sully became a mainstay of the French theater before the advent of naturalistic acting.

Mounier (mö.nyā), Jean Joseph. b. at Grenoble, France, 1758; d. at Paris, Jan. 28, 1806. French politician and political writer. He was a member of the Constituent Assembly in 1789. He proposed the famous Tennis Court Oath, which bound the members of the assembly not to adjourn until a constitution had been adopted. He became president of the assembly, but after failing to get a moderate constitution adopted, and seeing that the mob spirit would sway the French Revolution into excesses, he resigned (1789) and emigrated (1790). He returned (1805) to become councilor of state under Napoleon.

Mountagu (mon'tą.gū), Edward. See Montagu or Mountagu, Edward.

Mountague (mon'tą.gū), Richard. See Montagu or Mountague, Richard.

Mountain. Name given to the extreme Revolutionary party in the legislatures of the first French Revolution. The name was derived from the fact that they occupied the higher part of the hall. The Mountain was not especially a cohesive group but obtained some unity from its opposition to the philosophical approach to the revolution of the Girondists. Eventually the Mountain gained control of the Jacobin Club, and it was the moving spirit of the Reign of Terror. Among the most important members of the group were Robespierre and Danton. The name was temporarily revived in the legislatures following the revolution of 1848.

Mountain (moun'tąn), Jacob. b. at Thwaite Hall, Norfolk, England, Dec. 30, 1749; d. at Quebec, Canada, June 16, 1825. English Anglican clergyman and friend of William Pitt, through whom he was appointed (1793) the first Anglican bishop of Quebec. At the time of his arrival in Canada, there were only nine Anglican clergymen; this number was increased to 61 at his death.

Mountain-Altai Autonomous Oblast (-āl.tī'). [Russian, Gorno-Altai; former name, Oirot Autonomous Oblast.] Autonomous oblast (region) of the Altai Territory, Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, U.S.S.R., situated in the Altai mountains of SW Siberia, ab. 250 mi. SE of Novosibirsk. It is a scenic region of high, snow-capped mountains and deep, forested valleys; the economy is chiefly devoted to dairy farming, livestock raising, and lumbering. Mercury is produced at Kosh-Agach. The oblast is traversed by a road leading from the railhead at Biisk SE into the Mongolian People's Republic. Capital, Gorno-Altaisk; area, ab. 35,900 sq. mi.; pop. 161,431 (1939).

Mountain Ash (ash). Urban district and coal-mining town in S Wales, in Glamorganshire, ab. 159 mi. W of London by rail 31,528 (1951).

Mountain-Badakhshan Autonomous Oblast (-bą.dach.shan'). [Russian, Gorno-Badakhshan.] Autonomous oblast region of the Tadzhik Soviet Socialist Republic, U.S.S.R., in C Asia, occupying the entire SE and E part of the republic, and bordering on Afghanistan on the S and Sinkiang on the E. Most of the area is in the high mountain region of the Pamirs, where there is grazing in summer pastures: sheep, yaks, goats, and cattle are raised. In the W part of the oblast is the deep valley of the Panj (Pyandzh) where wheat is grown, and there are winter pastures. The region is traversed by a single main road which leads from Osh to Khorog. Capital, Khorog; area, ab. 25,800 sq. mi. (1941); pop. 41,769 (1941).

Mountain Brook. Town in N central Alabama, in Jefferson County: a southern suburb of Birmingham. 8,359 (1950).

Mountaineering in the Sierra Nevada (si.er'ą nę.vad'ą). Records and sketches of adventures in the California mountains by Clarence King, published in 1872.

Mountaineers, The. Comedy taken from Don Quixote by George Colman the younger, produced on Aug. 3, 1793, and printed in 1795.

Mountain Grove. City in S Missouri, in Wright County, ab. 60 mi. E of Springfield, in a farming and lumbering region. 3,106 (1950).

Mountain Interval. Collection of poems by Robert Frost, published in 1916.

Mountain-Karabakh (kä.rä.bäch'). See Nagorno-Karabakh.

Mountain Lakes. Residential borough in N New Jersey, in Morris County, near Morristown and Dover, located on several artificial lakes. 2,806 (1950).

Mountain Province. Interior province in N Luzon, Philippine Islands. It is bounded on the N and NE by Cagayan, on the E by Isabela, and Nueva Vizcaya, on the S by Pangasinan, and on the W by La Union, Ilocos Sur, Abra, and Ilocos Norte. It is mostly mountainous country and is traversed by several ranges. Several of the tributaries of the Cagayan River have their sources in these highlands. The Igorots and the Ifugao are the principal native groups. The chief city is Baguio. Capital, Bontoc; area, ab. 5,458 sq. mi.; pop. 278,120 (1948).

Mountains of California (kal.i.fôrn'yą), The. Descriptive volume by John Muir, published in 1894 and issued in a revised edition in 1911. It recounts regional geological history, enumerates the varieties of flora and fauna, and includes characteristic appreciations of natural beauty. The text was illustrated by the author.

Mountains of the Moon. See Moon, Mountains of the.

"Mountain State." Occasional nickname of Montana.

Mountain View. City in W California, in Santa Clara County, S of San Francisco. It is a residential community and a processing and shipping center for fruit. 6,563 (1950).

Mountain View. Unincorporated community in SW Idaho, in Ada County, near Boise. 3,084 (1950).

Mount Airy (ār'i). Town in NW North Carolina, in Surry County: granite-quarrying center; manufactures of textiles and furniture. 7,192 (1950).

Mountany (moun'tä.nē), Baron. A title of Browne, Count Maximilian Ulysses von.

Mount Athos (ath'os, ā'thos). See Agion Oros; see also Athos, Mount.

Mountbatten (mount.bat'ęn). Family of peers, descended from the German house of Battenberg. The title of Battenberg died out (c1314), but was later (1851) revived when Alexander (1823–88), Prince of Hesse and of the Rhine, son of Louis II, Grand Duke of Hesse-Darmstadt, gave the title of Princess Battenberg to his wife, Julia Teresa (1825–95), Countess von Haucke, daughter of a Polish nobleman. The family title of Battenberg was relinquished (1917) by the English branch of the family in favor of the title of Mountbatten.

Mountbatten, Alexander. [Former name, Prince Alexander Albert of Battenberg; titles, Marquis of Carisbrooke and Earl of Berkhampsted.] b. Nov. 23, 1886—. English business executive; grandson of Queen Victoria through her fifth daughter, Princess Beatrice, his mother. He relinquished (1917) the title of Prince Alexander Albert of Battenberg. He is a director of several large industrial and business companies.

Mountbatten, David Michael. [Title, 3rd Marquis of Milford Haven.] b. May 12, 1919—. English peer.

Mountbatten, Lord Louis. [Titles: 1st Earl Mountbatten of Burma and Baron Romsey of Romsey; known until 1917 as Prince Louis Francis Albert Victor Nicholas of Battenberg.] b. at Windsor, England, June 25, 1900—. British naval and military leader who served (1943–46) as supreme Allied commander in SE Asia. He entered (1913) the British navy. He was recalled (1941) from command of the aircraft carrier Illustrious to head (1942) British combined operations, with troops under his command popularly known as Commandos. Promoted to the rank of acting admiral and awarded the permanent rank of rear admiral, he was also given the honorary ranks of lieutenant general and air marshal. He directed the strategy of the successful Madagascar invasion (May, 1942). He accepted (September, 1945) the formal surrender of the Japanese southern armies at Singapore. He served (March–August, 1947) as the last British viceroy of India, and was the first governor general (1947–48) of the new Indian dominion.

Mount Carmel (kär'męl). City in SE Illinois, county seat of Wabash County: marketing center for farm products. 8,732 (1950).

Mount Carmel. Borough in E central Pennsylvania, in Northumberland County: coal mining. 14,222 (1950).

Mount Clemens (klem'ęnz). City in SE Michigan, county seat of Macomb County, ab. 21 mi. NE of Detroit: resort center; has manufactures of auto parts, trailers, sugar, power boats, dinnerware, farm implements, and tools. 17,027 (1950).

Mount Desert (dez'ėrt, dę.zėrt'). Island in the Atlantic Ocean, belonging to Hancock County, Maine, ab. 30 mi. E of Belfast, ab. 1 mi. from the mainland. It is celebrated for its picturesque scenery and as a summer resort. It was temporarily settled by the French in the beginning of the 17th century. Forest fires did extensive damage on the island and to Bar Harbor, its most noted resort, in 1947. Length, ab. 14 mi.; highest point, ab. 1,500 ft.

Mount Dora (dō'rą). Town in N central Florida, in Lake County, ab. 25 mi. NW of Orlando: citrus-fruit shipping center; lake yachting resort. 3,028 (1950).

Mountebank, The. Novel by William John Locke, published in 1921, dealing with the theme of dual personality.

Mount Ephraim (ē'frą.im). Borough in W New Jersey, in Camden County, ab. 5 mi. S of Camden. 4,449 (1950).

Mountfort (mount'fort), William. b. in Staffordshire, England; d. at London, Dec. 10, 1692. English actor and dramatic writer. He was deemed excellent at playing well-bred fops and wrote several popular comedies. He was killed at the door of the actress Mrs. Anne Bracegirdle by an adventurer, Captain Richard Hill, apparently with the complicity of Charles, 4th Baron Mohun, who, as Mountfort was aware, had designs on the lady. Lord Mohun was tried by his peers and was acquitted.

Mount Healthy (hel'thi). [Former name, Mount Pleasant.] Village in SW Ohio, in Hamilton County: a northern suburb of Cincinnati. It was established in 1817. Pop. 5,533 (1950).

Mount Hermon (hėr'mọn). A former name of Tottenville.

Mount Holly (hol'i). Unincorporated community in S central New Jersey, county seat of Burlington County: manufactures of knitted and leather goods. 8,206 (1950).

Mount Hope. City in S central West Virginia, in Fayette County, ab. 40 mi. SE of Charleston, in a soft-coal mining region. 2,588 (1950).

Mount Joy (joi). Borough in SE Pennsylvania, in Lancaster County: manufactures of shoes, textiles, chocolate, and iron products. 3,006 (1950).

Mountjoy (mount.joi'), Barons. Titles held by various members of the Blount family.

Mount Kisco (kis'kō). Village in SE New York, in Westchester County: residential community. 5,907 (1950).

Mount Lebanon (leb'ą.nọn). Suburban township in SW Pennsylvania, in Allegheny County, just SW of Pittsburgh. 26,604 (1950).

Mount McKinley National Park (mą.kin'li). National park in S central Alaska, surrounding Mount McKinley, and including several glaciers and a scenic area inhabited by wildlife. There are ab. 91 mi. of road within the park, but access to it is only by rail or by air. Area, ab. 3,030 sq. mi.

Mount Morris (mor'is). Village in N Illinois, in Ogle County, ab. 85 mi. W of Chicago, in a farming region. 2,709 (1950).

Mount Morris. City in E central Lower Michigan, in Genesee County, ab. 8 mi. N of Flint. 2,890 (1950).

Mount Morris. Village in W New York, in Livingston County. 3,450 (1950).

Mount of Olives. English title of Beethoven's oratorio Christus am Ölberg, produced in England in 1814. The title was changed to Engedi and the principal character to David in 1842, owing to the strong feeling against the appearance of Christ as a personage in an oratorio.

Mount Olive (ol'iv). Town in E central North Carolina, in Wayne County: agricultural marketing center. 3,732 (1950).

Mount Oliver (ol'i.vėr). Borough in SW Pennsylvania, in Allegheny County, a suburb of Pittsburgh. 6,646 (1950).

Mount Palomar Observatory (pal'ō.mär). See under Palomar, Mount.

Mount Penn (pen). Borough in SE Pennsylvania, in Berks County: residential suburb of Reading; manufactures of hosiery. It was platted in 1884. Pop. 3,635 (1950).

Mount Pleasant (plez'ạnt). City in SE Iowa, county seat of Henry County, ab. 26 mi. NW of Burlington. It is the seat of Iowa Wesleyan College. 5,843 (1950).

Mount Pleasant. City in C Lower Michigan, county seat of Isabella County, on the Chippewa River, in a petroleum area: oil-refining, sugar-refining, and auto-parts industries. It is the seat of a teachers college. 11,393 (1950).

Mount Pleasant. [Formerly called "Helltown."] Borough in SW Pennsylvania, in Westmoreland County: manufactures of glassware, cigars, cement products, and metal products. 5,883 (1950).

Mount Pleasant. Town in C Tennessee, in Maury County, in a phosphate-mining area: manufactures of fertilizer. 2,931 (1950).

Mount Pleasant. City in E Texas, county seat of Titus County, NE of Dallas: lumber, cotton-processing, and pottery industries. 6,342 (1950).

Mount Pleasant. Former name of Harlan, Ky.

Mount Pleasant. Former name of Mount Healthy, Ohio.

Mount Prospect. Village in NE Illinois, in Cook County: a northwestern suburb of Chicago. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population more than doubled. 1,720 (1940), 4,009 (1950).

Mount Rainier (rā'nėr). Town in C Maryland, in Prince Georges County: a northeastern residential suburb of Washington, D.C. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population more than doubled. 4,830 (1940), 10,989 (1950).

Mount Rainier National Park (rā.nir', rā'nir). National Park in W central Washington, surrounding Mount Rainier, established in 1899. There is a group of glaciers on the upper slopes of the volcanic peak; below this are alpine meadows, and on the lower slopes, coniferous forests. The park is a popular recreational area. Area, ab. 377 sq. mi.

Mount Royal (roi'ạl). [French, Mont-Royal.] Town in S Quebec, Canada, on Montreal Island: a western residential suburb of Montreal. 4,888 (1941), 11,352 (1951).

Mount Rushmore National Memorial (rush'mōr). National memorial in W South Dakota, in the Black Hills, established in 1929. On the granite face of the mountain four gigantic stone heads have been created, of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln, and Theodore Roosevelt; these are the work of the sculptor Gutzon Borglum, and each measures over 60 ft. in height. Area, ab. 1,220 acres.

Mount Sterling (stėr'ling). [Former names: Little Mountain Town, Mount Stirling.] City in E Kentucky, county seat of Montgomery County. Platted in 1793, it was captured by Confederate troops in 1863. Pop. 5,294 (1950).

Mount Union (ūn'yon). Borough in S central Pennsylvania, in Huntingdon County, on the Juniata River, in a quarrying, lumbering, and agricultural region: processing plants for coal and creosote; manufactures of bricks and clothing. It was platted in 1849. Pop. 4,690 (1950).

Mount Vernon (vėr'non). City in S Illinois, county seat of Jefferson County: manufactures of railroad cars, stoves, shoes, and clothing. 15,600 (1950).

Mount Vernon. City in SW Indiana, county seat of Posey County, on the Ohio River ab. 19 mi. W of Evansville: manufactures of threshing machines, stoves, and corn and food products. 6,150 (1950).

Mount Vernon. City in SE New York, in Westchester County, adjoining New York City on the N: residential suburb, part of the urban area of New York. It has various light industries, the products of which include chemicals, electrical equipment, food products, and metal products. 71,899 (1950).

Mount Vernon. City in C Ohio, county seat of Knox County, ab. 41 mi. NE of Columbus: manufactures of steam and Diesel engines, glassware, bridge spans, and machinery. It was platted in 1805. Pop. 12,185 (1950).

Mount Vernon. City in NW Washington, county seat of Skagit County, on the Skagit River: processing and shipping center for peas, condensed milk, eggs, and poultry. 5,230 (1950).

Mount Vernon. Estate in Fairfax County, Va., the residence and place of burial of George Washington. It is situated on the Potomac, ab. 14 mi. S of Washington, D.C., with which it is connected by a modern highway. In 1859 it was purchased by the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association.

Mount Vernon. A former name of Winton, Pa.

Moura (mō'rạ). Town and concelho (commune) in S Portugal, in the district of Beja, situated on a tributary of the Ardila River, near its junction with the Guadiana River, NE of Beja: livestock markets. The town has a number of old churches and monasteries. Pop. of concelho, 30,500 (1940); of town, 7,977 (1940).

Moura, Francisco Rolim de. b. at Pernambuco (now Recife), Brazil, 1580; d. at Lisbon, Portugal, 1657. Portuguese administrator, governor general (1624–26) of Brazil.

Moure (mō'rẹ), Manuel Magallanes. See Magallanes Moure, Manuel.

Mourne Mountains (mōrn). Range of mountains in SE Northern Ireland, in County Down, extending NE from Carlingford Lough to Dundrum Bay. Its highest point is Slieve Donard (2,796 ft.). Length, ab. 14 mi.

Mourning Becomes Electra (ē.lek'tra). Dramatic trilogy by Eugene O'Neill, produced and published in 1931. It is based on the Greek Electra theme and involves the emotional entanglements of the Mannon family in New England after the close of the Civil War. The three parts are entitled Homecoming, The Hunted, and The Haunted.

Mourning Bride, The. Tragedy by William Congreve, produced in 1697.

Mourning Garment. [Original title, Greene's Mourning Garment.] Novel by Robert Greene, registered in 1590. It is a paraphrase of the parable of the prodigal son.

Mourt's Relation (mōrts). Historical work published in 1622 and variously attributed to George Morton, Edward Winslow, and William Bradford, relating to the settlement of Plymouth Colony, in Massachusetts. Its full proper title is A Relation or Journall of the Beginning and Proceedings of the English Plantation Settled at Plimoth in New England. It was signed "G. Mourt."

Mourzouk (mör'zök). See Murzuk.

Mouscron (mös.krôn). [Flemish, Moeskroen.] Town in W Belgium, in the province of West Flanders, situated near the French border, S of Courtrai: woolen and cotton textile industries, furniture manufactures, and agricultural markets. 36,354 (1947).

Mouse River (mous). See Souris River.

Mouse Tower. Any tower associated with the mouse-miser legend, in which some wealthy and heartless nobleman or bishop has been devoured alive by mice after refusing to feed the poor of his own neighborhood in time of famine. There are mouse towers in Germany and Austria, Switzerland, Poland, and Scandinavia. The most famous, probably, is the tower in the Rhine near Bingen, Germany, where Bishop Hatto was eaten alive.

Mouskès (mös.kes), Philippe. b. at Ghent, Belgium, c1215; d. at Tournai, Belgium, 1283. Flemish prelate and historian. His chronicles extend from the siege of Troy to 1243.

Mousqueton (mös.ke.tôṅ). Vain, boastful lackey of Porthos in The Three Musketeers, by Alexandre Dumas père.

Moussorgsky (mö.sôrg'ski), Modest Petrovich. See Mussorgsky or Moussorgsky, Modest Petrovich.

Moussy (mö.sē), Jean Antoine Victor Martin de. See Martin de Moussy, Jean Antoine Victor.

Mousterian (mös.tir'i.an). [Also, Middle Paleolithic.] Prehistoric culture of the middle of the Paleolithic Period, placed at ab. 40,000-70,000 years ago. It is named for the typical caves, rock shelters, and remains found at Le Moustier in the Dordogne region, S France. Mousterian Man is classified in one of the four subgroups of Neanderthal Man. His culture precedes the Aurignacian. His artifacts are typically flaked stone, and he had smaller, more finely shaped hand-axes than his predecessors of the lower Paleolithic. Ashes of considerable depth have been found in the caves of the Mousterian period, indicating not merely that Mousterian Man had fire, but that the fire was the center of a social group. He buried his dead, perhaps decorated his dead, and perhaps had some concept of a life after death. This is postulated from a skeleton found in burial position, covered with red-ocher dust, along with the thighbone of a horse and a stone implement. These can be interpreted, in terms of almost universal primitive thinking, as meat and weapon for an afterworld.

Moutet (mö.te), Marius. b. at Nîmes, France, April 18, 1876—. French political leader and lawyer, best known for his leading part in the creation (1946) of the French Union. He was minister of colonies (1936–38, 1946–47). A deputy (1914–40, 1944 et seq.), he is a member of the directing committee of the French Socialist Party and a vice-president of the League of Rights of Man, and is active in numerous societies for cultural relations between France and other countries.

Mouthiers (mö.tyā). See Moutiers.

Mouth of Black River. A former name of Lorain, Ohio.

Moutier (mö.tyā). [German, Münster.] Town in NW Switzerland, in the canton of Bern, situated on the Birs River (a tributary of the Rhine). 5,165 (1941).

Moutiers (mö.tyā). [Full name, Moutiers-en-Tarentaise (-äṅ.tar.äṅ.tez); also, formerly, Mouthiers.] Small town in SE France, in the department of Savoie, ab. 32 mi. E of Chambéry. It was the capital of Tarentaise, and has a 15th-century cathedral. 3,105 (1946).

Mouton (mö.ton'), Alexander. b. in the Attakapas district, in S Louisiana, Nov. 19, 1804; d. Feb. 12, 1885. American lawyer and politician. He served as U.S. senator (1837–42) from Louisiana and as governor (1843–46). As president (1861) of the Louisiana secession convention, he voted for secession.

Mouton (mö.tôṅ), Georges. See Lobau, Comte de.

Mouvement de la Libération Nationale (möv.mäṅ dę lā lē.bā.rā.syôṅ nā.syo.nal). [Eng. trans., "Movement of National Liberation."] French Resistance movement during World War II, formed (1941–43) by groups fighting the Vichy regime and the German occupation. After the formation of the Fourth Republic, its members divided support between various Leftist political groups, a majority supporting the Socialists and a minority backing collaboration with Communists.

Mouvement Républicain Populaire (möv.mäṅ rā.püb-lē.kaṅ po.pü.ler). [Eng. trans., "Popular Republican Movement"; called MRP.] French political party, formed (Nov. 26, 1944) at Paris as the organized representative of Catholic political interests under the Fourth Republic. It drew its strength from two earlier Catholic political parties, the Parti Démocrate Populaire ("Popular Democratic Party"), and the Jeune République led by Marc Sangnier, as well as from a Resistance movement, the Mouvement Républicain de Libération. Its program included support of private enterprise along with social reforms, and assistance to Catholic educational institutions. It won 166 seats in the National Assembly in the 1946 election. Its leaders included Georges Bidault, P. H. Teitgen, Robert Schuman, Paul Coste-Floret, Robert Lecourt, Jean Letourneau, and Marc Sangnier.

Movers (mō'fėrs), Franz Karl. b. at Coesfeld, Germany, July 17, 1806; d. at Breslau, Sept. 28, 1856. German Orientalist.

Movimas (mọ̄.vē'mąz). Group of South American Indians, formerly dwelling in the region of the Mamoré River. Very few, if any, survive today. The language, called Movima, comprises one small family by itself. No relationships have been established, but possible relationship with Mojo (an Arawak language) has been suggested.

Movshovitz (mof.shô'vits), Israel. Original name of Davidson, Israel.

Mowatt (mou'at), Anna Cora Ogden. [Also, Mrs. Ritchie.] b. at Bordeaux, France, March 5, 1819; d. at Henley-on-Thames, England, July 21, 1870. American actress, novelist, dramatist, and poet. She went on the stage at New York in 1845. She played many of her roles opposite E. L. Davenport. She left the stage before her marriage to W. F. Ritchie. She published her autobiography in 1854. Among her plays are Gulzara (1840), Fashion (1845), and Armand (1847). She also wrote novels, magazine articles, cookbooks, and other popular material.

Mowbray (mō'brā), H. Siddons. b. at Alexandria, Egypt, Aug. 5, 1858; d. Jan. 13, 1928. American figure painter. He studied at Paris with Léon Bonnat, and executed murals for several private residences as well as for public buildings.

Mowbray, John. [Titles: 2nd Duke of Norfolk, 4th Earl of Nottingham.] b. 1389; d. on the isle of Axholme, Lincolnshire, England, Oct. 19, 1432. English nobleman; son of Thomas Mowbray.

Mowbray, Robert de. [Title, Earl of Northumberland.] d. c1125. English soldier. He killed (1093) Malcolm of Scotland at Alnwick, joined in conspiracy to make Count Stephen of Aumâle king, and was confined in Windsor as a prisoner and deprived of his earldom and possessions.

Mowbray, Thomas. [Titles: Earl of Nottingham, 12th Baron Mowbray, 1st Duke of Norfolk.] d. at Venice, 1399. He was created Earl of Nottingham in 1383, earl marshal in 1384, and was one of the lord appellants of 1387, but afterward joined the king. He was created Duke of Norfolk in 1397. Having been accused of treason by Henry Bolingbroke, Earl of Hereford (afterward Henry IV), in 1398, he challenged the latter to single combat, and the lists were set at Coventry in presence of Richard II, who banished both disputants on the eve of the contest, Norfolk for life and Hereford for ten years. Shakespeare introduces him in his Richard II.

Mowcher (mou'chėr), Miss. In Charles Dickens's David Copperfield, a merry talkative dwarf, a hairdresser.

Mowee (mou'ē). See Maui.

Mower (mou'ėr), Joseph Anthony. b. at Woodstock, Vt., Aug. 22, 1827; d. at New Orleans, La., Jan. 6, 1870. American soldier in the Civil War who, after joining Sherman in the Atlanta campaign (November, 1864), commanded a division in the march to the sea.

Mowinckel (mō'ving"kęl), Johan Ludwig. b. at Bergen, Norway, Oct. 22, 1870; d. at New York, Sept. 30, 1943. Norwegian statesman and shipping magnate, three times premier (1924–26, 1928–31, 1933–35). Elected (1906) to the Storting (parliament) as a Venstre (Left, or Liberal) Party member, he served (1916–18, 1927) as president of the Storting, held the posts of minister of trade and foreign affairs (1921–23), and was also foreign minister during his premierships. He served (1925–36) on the Storting Nobel Prize Committee, was a member (1930–31, 1933) of the League of Nations Council, represented (1940–43) the Venstre Party in the Nygaardsvold coalition government during World War II, and was on special missions to Sweden (1940–42) and to the U.S. (1942–43).

Mowrer (mou'rėr), Edgar Ansel. b. at Bloomington, Ill., March 8, 1892—. American journalist and author; brother of Paul Scott Mowrer. He was a war correspondent (1914–15) in Europe for the Chicago Daily News and later chief of its Berlin and Paris bureaus. He was deputy director until 1943 of the Office of Facts and Figures, Office of War Information. Author of Immortal Italy (1922), The Future of Politics (1930), The Dragon Awakes (1938), and other books. He received the Pulitzer prize in journalism for Germany Puts the Clock Back (1932).

Mowrer, Paul Scott. b. at Bloomington, Ill., July 14, 1887—. American journalist, editor, and author; brother of Edgar Ansel Mowrer. Associated (1905 et seq.) with the Chicago Daily News, he served as Paris correspondent (1910 et seq.), war correspondent in the Balkans (1912–13) and France (1914–18), and representative at the Versailles peace conference (1918–19) and limitation-of-armaments conferences (1921–38). He received a Pulitzer prize (1928) for the best foreign-correspondence service. He was editor (1935–44) of the Chicago Daily News, and European editor (1945 et seq.) of the New York Post. Author of Balkanized Europe—A Study in Political Analysis and Reconstruction (1921), Our Foreign Affairs—A Study in National Interest and the New Diplomacy (1924), The Foreign Relations of the United States (1927), Poems Between Wars (1941), The House of Europe (1945), and other books.

Moxon (mok′sŏn), Edward. b. at Wakefield, Yorkshire, England, in December, 1801; d. at Putney Heath, London, June 3, 1858. English publisher and poet, remembered as the friend and publisher of great poets. He began (1830) his publishing career with Charles Lamb's Album Verses, and brought out works by Tennyson, Browning, Wordsworth, Southey, W. S. Landor, Coventry Patmore, the Disraelis, R. Monckton Milnes, Sheridan Knowles, and others. With all these writers Moxon was on terms of friendship, as well as with John Forster, Harriet Martineau, and Mary Lamb. His own works include The Prospect and other Poems (1826), dedicated to Samuel Rogers, Christmas (1829), dedicated to Lamb, and Sonnets (1835), dedicated to Wordsworth. He married (1833) Lamb's adopted daughter, Emma Isola.

Moxos (mok′sōz). See Mojos.

Moya (mō′yä), Pedro de. b. in Granada, Spain, 1610; d. there, 1666. Spanish painter. He was a soldier in the army of Flanders, where he was so charmed with the works of Van Dyck that he went to London in 1641 to study under him.

Moyamba (mō.yam′bą). Town in the British protectorate of Sierra Leone, W Africa, ab. 40 mi. E of Freetown on the main railroad line leading to the interior. Pop. ab. 2,500.

Moyano (mō.yä′nō), Sebastián. Original name of Benalcázar, Sebastián de.

Moya y Contreras (mō′yä ē kōn.trā′räs), Pedro de. b. in the diocese of Córdoba, Spain, c1520; d. at Madrid, in December, 1591. Spanish prelate and administrator. In 1571 he established the Inquisition in New Spain, and in December, 1574, was consecrated archbishop of Mexico. He was acting viceroy from Sept. 25, 1584, to Oct. 17, 1585.

Moyen-Congo (mwä.yaṅ kôn.gō). French name of Middle Congo.

Moyen de Parvenir (mwä.yaṅ dę pȧrv.nēr). [Eng. trans., "How to Succeed."] Work by François Béroalde de Verville, published in 1610. Using the device of gathering guests at a banquet, the author brings in many celebrated persons of the day and of antiquity, and makes them talk in the strangest possible fashion. The license of language and anecdote which Rabelais had permitted himself is equaled and exceeded, but many of the tales are told with consummate art, and in the midst of the ribaldry and buffoonery remarks of no small shrewdness are constantly dropped as if by accident.

Moyeuvre-Grande (mwä.yė.vrę.gräṅd). [German, Gross-Moyeuvre.] Town in E France, in the department of Moselle. It has iron mines, and a steel industry. 10,163 (1946).

Moyne (moin), 1st Baron. Title of Guinness, Walter Edward.

Moyne (mwàn), Le. See Le Moyne.

Moyne, Pierre le. See Iberville, Pierre le Moyne, Sieur d'.

Moynihan (moi′ni.han), Berkeley George Andrew. [Title, 1st Baron Moynihan of Leeds.] b. in Malta, 1865; d. Sept. 7, 1936. English surgeon. He was known as an authority on abdominal ailments and cancer.

Moyobamba (mō.yō.bäm′bä). City in N Peru, capital of San Martín department. 7,497 (1940).

Moytura (moi.tō′rą). [Irish, Mag Tured.] Plain in ancient Ireland, the scene of two famous mythological battles. The first was the great battle in which the Tuatha De Danann (the divine race of Ireland) invaded Ireland and wrested it from the Firbolgs (the former pre-Celtic invaders). This battle took place on the west coast of Connacht, in what is now County Mayo. The second battle of Moytura was seven years later, between the Tuatha De Danann and the Fomorians (a gigantic people), whom they also overcame. This took place a little farther north, in County Sligo. The very earliest chronicle reports only one battle, in which the Tuatha De Danann overthrew the Firbolgs and Fomorians together.

Mozambique (mō.zăm.bēk, mō′zą̈m.bēk). [Portuguese, Moçambique; also, Portuguese East Africa.] Portuguese colony in SE Africa, bounded on the N by Tanganyika territory, on the W by Nyasaland protectorate, Northern Rhodesia, Southern Rhodesia, and Transvaal, Union of South Africa, and on the S and E by the Indian Ocean and Mozambique Channel. The area was formerly governed by the Mozambique Company, whose last holdings were taken over by the Mozambique government in 1942. The colony is divided into four provinces: Sul do Save, Manica and Sofala, Zambezia, and Niassa. The administration is in the hands of a governor general assisted by a government council of elected members and business leaders, and an executive council. Each province is administered by a governor. The chief export products of the colony are sugar, maize, cotton, copra, and sisal. The colony has two important ports, Beira and Lourenço Marques, each connected by rail lines with centers in the Union of South Africa, Rhodesia, and Nyasaland, which provide the shortest routes to the sea for these centers, chief among them Johannesburg in the Witwatersrand gold fields. The commerce of these inland regions supplies most of the revenue for the Portuguese colony. A railway also connects the port of Mozambique with the interior. Capital, Lourenço Marques; area, 297,731 sq. mi.; pop. 5,732,767 (1950).

Mozambique. [Portuguese, Moçambique.] Town in SE Africa, in the Portuguese colony of Mozambique, situated on an island off the coast, ab. 300 mi. S of the border of Tanganyika. Until 1907 it was the capital of Mozambique. Seaport town, it exports lumber, peanuts, and oil seeds. A railroad line runs from Lumbo on the mainland, opposite Mozambique, to the interior. 9,155 (1940).

Mozambique Channel. Sea passage of the Indian Ocean, separating Madagascar from the mainland of SE Africa. Width, ab. 250 to 600 mi.

Mozarabs (mō.zar′ąbz). [Also, Mozarabians (mō.zą-rā′bi.ąnz).] Those Christians in Spain who lived among and measurably assimilated themselves to the Moslems, but continued in the exercise of their own religion.

Mozart (mō′tsärt). Biography by Sacheverell Sitwell, published in 1932.

Mozart, Constanze Weber. b. 1763; d. 1842. Austrian singer; wife of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart.

Mozart, Franz Xaver Wolfgang. [Later called Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart.] b. at Vienna, July 26, 1791; d. at Karlsbad (now Karlovy Vary), in Bohemia, July 29, 1844. German conductor and composer; son of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. He was a music master (1808–14) at Lemberg (now Lvov).

Mozart, Johann Georg Leopold. b. at Augsburg, Germany, Nov. 14, 1719; d. at Salzburg, Austria, May 28, 1787. German violinist and musical writer; father of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. He wrote sacred music, including 12 oratorios, symphonies, concertos, and organ and piano music. He wrote a violin method popular into the 19th century.

Mozart, Karl Thomas. b. at Vienna, Sept. 21, 1784; d. at Milan, Italy, Oct. 31, 1858. Austrian government official and amateur pianist; son of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart.

Mozart, Maria Anna. [Called Nannerl Mozart.] b. at Salzburg, Austria, July 30, 1751; d. there, Oct. 29, 1829. Austrian pianist; daughter of Johann Georg Leopold Mozart and sister of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. As a child prodigy, she toured jointly until 1768 with her brother. She taught music at Salzburg.

Mozart, Wolfgang Amadeus. [Baptismal name, Johannes Chrysostomus Wolfgangus Theophilus Mozart, Amadeus being a translation into Latin of the Greek Theophilus.] b. at Salzburg, Austria, Jan. 27, 1756; d. at Vienna, Dec. 5, 1791. Austrian composer; son of Johann Georg Leopold Mozart. He showed a precocious knowledge of music when only three years old, and first appeared in public in a performance at the University of Salzburg, in 1761, when between five and six years of age. In 1762 his father took him with his older sister on a concert tour to Munich, Vienna, and other places, and in the next year to Paris, where they, especially Wolfgang, excited great enthusiasm. At London in the next year they were equally successful, and remained in England until August, 1765. Mozart during this time composed a number of symphonies, sonatas, and arias; the children also played at their lodgings for such as chose to test their genius in private. They finally returned to Salzburg in November, 1766, and in 1768 were received at court at Vienna, where Mozart was urged by the emperor Joseph II to compose an opera and conduct it. He took the story of La Finta semplice, and his opera (though opposed through the envy of other musicians) was finally performed (1769) at Salzburg. He succeeded in producing his Singspiel (operetta) Bastien und Bastienne in a private theater at Vienna, and he also composed and conducted the music at the ceremonies of the consecration of the new church at Waisenhaus. From 1769 to 1773 Mozart traveled with his father in Italy, winning fresh laurels as an opera composer. In the period 1777–78 he went to Mannheim and Paris with his mother, where he found that the admiration accorded to a precocious child was not so easily obtained by a mature musician. Some months after the death of his mother he returned to Salzburg, and in 1781 his strained relations with the archbishop reached the point of a definite break. After that time Mozart lived at Vienna as a "free artist" and not until 1790 did he become imperial court composer. He reaped usually but little pecuniary benefit from his compositions, and his health began to fail. His productivity was tremendous. Between 1784 and 1786 he wrote 12 piano concertos which belong to his most powerful works (all in all he wrote 23 piano concertos); in 1788 he produced his three greatest symphonies and in his last year The Magic Flute. At the same time he received the famous commission from a mysterious stranger (afterwards known to be the steward of Count Walsegg) to write a requiem mass to be finished within a few months. His enfeebled health and various circumstances connected with the commission produced a serious effect on his already troubled brain, and he imagined it to be a summons from the other world. He began the mass, however, and said that it was for his own funeral. As he was already dying, he was not able to supervise the rehearsal of the finished part. He died of malignant typhus fever. There were no ceremonies at his grave, and even his friends followed him no farther than the city gates, owing to a violent storm. He was buried in the common ground of St. Marx, and the exact position of his grave is not known. Many years afterward a monument was erected to him by the city of Vienna. He left over 600 compositions, which include more than 50 symphonies, more than 50 concertos, sonatas, chamber music of every kind, a number of masses and other music for the church (mostly composed in his Salzburg period), the Requiem, and others. Among his operas are Mitridate (1770), La Finta giardiniera (1775), Zaide (unfinished, 1779), Idomeneo (1781), Die Entführung aus dem Serail (The Abduction from the Seraglio, 1782), Le Nozze di Figaro (The Marriage of Figaro, 1786), Don Giovanni (1787), Così fan tutte (1790), La Clemenza di Tito (1791), Die Zauberflöte (The Magic Flute, 1791), and others. Very little (only about 18 opus numbers) of his music was published in his lifetime.

Mozdok (moz.dôk'). City in the U.S.S.R., in the North Ossetian Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, ab. 145 mi. N of Tiflis (Tbilisi), situated on the Terek River: food-processing industries. Large oil fields are to the S. 14,056 (1936).

Mozee (mō'zē), Phoebe Anne Oakley. Original name of Oakley, Annie.

Mozhaisk (mo.zhīsk'). [Also: Mojaisk, Moshaisk.] Town in the U.S.S.R., in the Moscow oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, situated on the Moskva River ab. 63 mi. W of Moscow. In World War II it fell to the Germans in October, 1941, and was retaken by Russian forces in January, 1942. Pop. 10,800 (1936).

Mozier (mō'zhėr), Joseph. b. at Burlington, Vt., Aug. 22, 1812; d. in Switzerland, in October, 1870. American sculptor.

Mozley (mōz'li), James Bowling. b. at Gainsborough, Lincolnshire, England, Sept. 15, 1813; d. at Shoreham, Sussex, England, Jan. 4, 1878. English divine and theologian. He became vicar of Old Shoreham (1856), canon of Worcester, and regius professor of divinity (1871) at Oxford. He took part in the Oxford movement and was a supporter of G. C. Gorham in the controversy over baptismal regeneration. He wrote On the Augustinian Doctrine of Predestination (1855), The Primitive Doctrine of Baptismal Regeneration (1856), On Miracles (1865), and others.

Mozuffernugger (mǭ.zuf'ėr.nug.ėr). See Muzaffarnagar.

Mozufferpore (mǭ.zuf'ėr.pōr). See Muzaffarpur.

Mpanda (ẹm.pän'dą). Mining town in E Africa, in SW Tanganyika territory, ab. 60 mi. S of the Central Railway and ab. 100 mi. E of Lake Tanganyika. Extensive lead deposits were found in the area, and in the late 1940's a railway line from the main line was built to serve the newly opened mines.

Mpangu (ẹm.päng'gö). [Also, Pangu.] One of six former provinces of the African kingdom of Kongo.

Mpangwe (ẹm.päng'gwā). See Pangwe.

Mpemba (ẹm.pām'bä). [Also, Pemba.] Formerly the capital province of the African kingdom of Kongo, centering about San Salvador in Angola.

Mpondo (ẹm.pōn'dō). [Also: Amapondo, Pondo.] Bantu-speaking people of the S Nguni group of S Africa, inhabiting E Cape of Good Hope province in the Union of South Africa. Their population is estimated at 260,000 (by M. Hunter, Reaction to Conquest, 1936). They are ruled by a paramount chief whose superiority is recognized by all district chiefs. They have exogamous patrilineal clans. They practice cattle herding, with the cattle complex. They also carry on agriculture using plows, which have replaced wooden digging sticks and wooden and iron hoes. Their principal food is maize.

Mpondomise (ẹm.pōn.dō.mē'sā). [Also, Amampondomise.] Bantu-speaking people of the S Nguni group of S Africa, inhabiting E Cape of Good Hope province in the Union of South Africa, and resembling the Xhosa in culture.

Mpongwe (ẹm.pōng'gwā). [Also: Bayuga, Pongoue.] Bantu-speaking people of C Africa, inhabiting small coastal areas near Port Gentil and Libreville at the mouths of the Ogowe and Gabon rivers in the W part of the province of Gabon in French Equatorial Africa. They are not to be confused with the larger and expanding Pangwe in the interior.

MRA. Abbreviation for Moral Re-Armament; see under Buchman, Frank Nathan Daniel.

Mr. Britling Sees It Through (brit'ling). Novel by H. G. Wells, published in 1916.

Mr. Crewe's Career (krōz). Novel by Winston Churchill, published in 1908.

Mr. Faust (foust). Dramatic poem by Arthur Davison Ficke, published in 1913.

Mr. Fortune's Maggot (fôr'ţūnz). Philosophical novel by Sylvia Townsend Warner, published in 1927.

Mr. F.'s Aunt. Character in Charles Dickens's Little Dorrit. She is characterized by "extreme severity and grim taciturnity; sometimes by a propensity to offer remarks . . . totally uncalled for by anything said by anybody, and traceable to no association of ideas."

Mr. Gilhooley (gil.hö'li). Novel by Liam O'Flaherty, published in 1926.

Mr. H. Play by Charles Lamb. This farce (in two acts) was performed at Drury Lane Theatre, London, in December, 1806, but did not survive the first night of its appearance. In America, however, it was performed with some success. The point of the play is the anxiety of the hero to conceal his name (Hogsflesh) and the way in which all his devices to this end are frustrated by his unhappy destiny.

Mr. Higginbotham's Catastrophe (hig'in.both.ąmz). Story by Nathaniel Hawthorne, originally published (1834) in The Token and later included in Twice-Told Tales (1837).

Mr. Hodge and Mr. Hazard (hoj; haz'ąrd). Novel by Elinor Wylie, published in 1928.

Mrichchhakatika (mėrch.cha.kä'ti.kä). [Eng. trans., "The Little Clay Cart."] Sanskrit drama, a work of remarkable power, comparable to the best modern comedies in plot, incident, character delineation, and felicity of diction, and extraordinary in its minute directions to the actors and its various scenic artifices. It has been supposed to have been written in the 1st or 2nd century, but some authorities have placed it in the 5th or 6th. Its authorship is ascribed in flattery to a King Shudraka, who is praised in the prologue. Richard Pischel, after assigning it earlier to Bhasa, believed its real author to have been Dandin. The hero is Charudatta, a virtuous Brahman, reduced to poverty by his generosity; the heroine, Vasantasena, a beautiful and wealthy courtesan, who loves him and repulses the king's brother-in-law, Samsthanaka. Vasantasena is purified and ennobled by her affection, and at last weds Charudatta. "The little clay cart" or "toy cart," from which the name comes, is a plaything of the little son of Charudatta. Visiting Charudatta at his house, Vasantasena finds his child crying because his toy cart is of clay while the cart of a neighbor's child is of gold. Vasantasena fills the boys' cart with her jewels, and tells him to have a gold cart made from these.

Mr. Incoul's Misadventure (in.kölz'). Novel by Edgar Saltus, published in 1887.

Mr. Isaacs (ī'zaks). Novel by Francis Marion Crawford, published in 1882.

Mr. Midshipman Easy (ē'zi). Sea story by Frederick Marryat, published in 1836.

MRP. See Mouvement Républicain Populaire.

Mr. Pitt (pit). Play (1924) by Zona Gale, based upon her novel Birth (1918).

Mrs. Craddock (krad'ok). Novel by W. Somerset Maugham, published in 1902.

Mrs. Dalloway (dal'ō.wā). Psychological novel (1925) by Virginia Woolf, written in the "stream of consciousness" technique. The novel is practically plotless, all the interest being centered in the characters, in what they think about life, themselves, and each other. London is the setting, and the time is a single day in June, 1923. Two kinds of time are illustrated in the novel: time as the word is ordinarily used to mean passing hours, and time in which the thoughts, events, and feelings of one's past life go through one's mind.

Mrs. Grundy (grun'di). See Grundy, Mrs.

Mrs. Lancelot—A Comedy in Assumptions (lan'se.lot, -lot). Novel by Maurice Hewlett, published in 1912.

Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine (leks; ā'l'shīn), The Casting Away of. See Casting Away of Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine, The.

Mrs. Lirriper's Legacy (lir'i.pėr). Story by Charles Dickens, a sequel to Mrs. Lirriper's Lodgings. It was published in December, 1864.

Mrs. Lirriper's Lodgings. Christmas tale by Charles Dickens, published in December, 1863. Mrs. Lirriper herself is the narrator of the story, which contains much colorful comment concerning the tribulations of keeping a boarding house in 19th-century London.

Mrs. Malaprop (mal'a.prop). See Malaprop, Mrs.

Mrs. O'Leary's Cow (ō.lir'iz). Animal to whom tradition has ascribed responsibility for beginning the great Chicago fire of 1871. According to the popular account (which has no foundation in fact) the cow knocked to the ground a lamp left near her by a certain Mrs. O'Leary, her mistress. Mrs. O'Leary stoutly repudiated the tale.

Mrs. Siddons (sid'onz). Four-act play (1931) about the great English actress Sarah Siddons, by Naomi Royde-Smith.

Mrs. Warren's Profession (wôr'enz). Play by George Bernard Shaw, included in his Plays: Pleasant and Unpleasant (1898). A prostitute, Mrs. Warren plies her trade in order to keep her daughter in comfortable circumstances. The play deals with the revelation of character on the part of both when Mrs. Warren's daughter discovers the nature of her mother's profession.

Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch (wigz). Novel by Alice Hegan Rice, published in 1901 under her maiden name, Alice Caldwell Hegan. Mrs. Nancy Wiggs is a Kentucky widow and the mother of two sons, Jim and Billy, and three daughters, Asia, Australia, and Europena. In her efforts to maintain the family Mrs. Wiggs is assisted by Lucy Olcott and Robert Redding. Mrs. Wiggs's benefactors, formerly engaged to each other, are reconciled through their philanthropic interest in the Wiggses. The vicissitudes of life, including the death of Jim, are met with optimism and courage.

Mr. Tasker's Gods (tas'kėrz). Novel by Theodore Francis Powys, published in 1925.

Mr. Waddington of Wyck (wod'ing.ton; wik). Novel by May Sinclair, published in 1921.

Mr. Weston's Good Wine (wes'ton). Novel by Theodore Francis Powys, published in 1927.

MS. Found in a Bottle. Story by Edgar Allan Poe, originally published in 1833 and included in Tales of the Grotesque and Arabesque (1840).

Msta (em.stä'). River in NW U.S.S.R., flowing from a small lake near Vyshni Volochek, in Kalinin oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, N, NW, and SW to Lake Ilmen. Length, ab. 275 mi.; to headwaters above lake, ab. 330 mi.

Mswati (em.swä'tē). fl. in the 19th century. King of the Swazi people of S Africa. During his reign (1838–68) the first direct contact of the Swazi with Europeans occurred, and the first concessions, which eventually led to the subjugation of the Swazi, were signed.

Mtesa (em.tā'sä). d. 1885. King of the Ganda tribe, E Africa, made famous by the visits at his court of J. H. Speke, J. A. Grant, Emin Pasha, and H. M. Stanley. He treated with the Khedive of Egypt and the Sultan of Zanzibar as an equal. He wavered between paganism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity until his death.

Mtsensk (em.tsensk'). Town in the U.S.S.R., in the Orel oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, ab. 40 mi. NE of Orel: food-processing industries. An old town, dating from 1147, it belonged to Lithuania from 1320 to 1504. Pop. 7,500 (1933).

Mtskheta (em.tske'ta). [Also, Mtskhet (em.tsket').] Small town in SW U.S.S.R., in the Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic, situated at the confluence of the Kura and Aragva rivers ab. 13 mi. NW of Tiflis: the ancient capital of Georgia (until c500 A.D.). Its historic cathedral was built in the 15th century to replace the 5th-century cathedral destroyed by the Mongols. Nearby is the Zemo-Avtchal hydroelectric station (27,000 kw.) which supplies power to Tiflis and surrounding areas.

Muallaqat (mö.äl.lä.kät'). See Moallakat.

Muang-Thai (mö'äng.tī'). Siamese name of Thailand.

Muata-Yamvo (mwä'tä.yäm'vō). Title of the king of the Lunda nation in C Africa. Once the greatest potentate of Africa, his powers were greatly reduced by civil wars and the raids of the Makioko.

Muawiyah (mö.ä'wi.ya). [Also, Moawiyah.] fl. 7th century. Governor of Syria, and, after his victory over Ali, caliph from 661 to 680 A.D. He founded the dynasty of the Ommiads, which held the caliphate for 89 years (661–750) with Damascus as capital.

Mucedorus (mū.sē.dō'rus). Play, perhaps by George Peele, Robert Greene, or Thomas Lodge, printed anonymously in 1598. It has erroneously been assigned to Shakespeare by some.

Much (much). Miller's son, one of Robin Hood's band.

Much (möch), Hans. b. at Zechlin, Germany, March 24, 1880; d. at Hamburg, Germany, Nov. 28, 1932. German physician and writer. He discovered (1907) the gram-positive granulas in tuberculous specimens, described a reaction of the serum of a dementia praecox patient upon cobra venom, and published many studies in the field of the history of art, philosophy, and literature. Author of Immunität (1909), Immunität und Immunitätsreaktionen (1909), Pathologische Biologie (1911), Die Heimkehr des Vollendeten (1920), Tuberculosis of Children, its Diagnosis and Treatment (1921), Spezifische und unspezifische Reiztherapie (1922), Norddeutsche Backsteingothik (1923), Rings um Jerusalem (1925), Hippokrates der Grosse (1926), Körper, Seele, Geist (1931), and Umstellungstherapie (1931).

Mucha (mö'hä), Alphonse Marie. b. at Ivancice, Czechoslovakia, July 24, 1860; d. 1939. Czech decorative painter, illustrator, and theatrical designer, who first became successful doing posters to advertise Sarah Bernhardt in her various roles. He studied at the School of Fine Arts at Prague and Munich, and later at Vienna and Paris.

Much Ado About Nothing. Comedy by Shakespeare, produced c1598. It was first printed in 1600. The story of Hero is taken with some variations from one of Matteo Bandello's tales, which probably was borrowed from the story of Geneura and Ariodantes in the Orlando Furioso of Ariosto. The subplot, apparently invented by Shakespeare, concerns the love of Benedick and Beatrice.

Much Wenlock (much wen'lok). See Wenlock, England.

Muck (mŭk), Karl. b. at Darmstadt, Germany, Oct. 22, 1859; d. 1940. German conductor. He made his debut as a pianist at the Gewandhaus in 1880. He first conducted at Zurich (1880–81), then at Salzburg (1881–82), Brno (1882–84), Graz (1884–86), and Prague (1886–92). In 1892 he became one of the conductors of the Berlin Opera, but he resigned in 1906 to come to America to direct the concerts of the Boston Symphony Society. He remained at Boston until 1908, then again returned to the Berlin Opera, but later again conducted the Boston Symphony (1912–17). He also conducted at Bayreuth and at Covent Garden, London, and was conductor (1922–33) of the Hamburg Philharmonic Orchestra.

Mücke (mük'ę), Heinrich Karl Anton. b. at Breslau, April 9, 1806; d. at Düsseldorf, Germany, Jan. 17, 1891. German historical painter, a pupil of the Berlin and Düsseldorf academies, and professor at the latter from 1844.

Muckermann (mŭk'ėr.män), Hermann. b. 1877—. German eugenicist. He was director (1927–33) of the department of eugenics in the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute at Berlin.

Mucklewrath (muk'l.râth), Habakkuk. In Sir Walter Scott's novel Old Mortality, a fanatical leader of the Covenanters.

Muck-rake, Man with the. Character in the second part of The Pilgrim's Progress, shown by the Interpreter to Christiana and her company. John Bunyan describes him as follows: "a man that could look no way but downwards, with a muck-rake in his hand. There stood also one over his head with a celestial crown in his hand, and proffered him that crown for his muck-rake; but the man did neither look up nor regard, but raked to himself the straws, the small sticks, and dust of the floor." The explanation given is that he is a man of the world who prefers things carnal to things celestial.

Muckrakers. Epithet applied by Theodore Roosevelt to the young reformers and publicists of the early 1900's who exposed in books, magazines, and pamphlets the corruption they found in American politics, finance, and industry. Several of the most popular muckraking works were Ida Tarbell's History of Standard Oil (1904), Lincoln Steffens's The Shame of the Cities (1904), and Thomas W. Lawson's Frenzied Finance (1905–06). Magazines were a principal outlet for the literature of exposure, notably McClure's, Collier's, Everybody's, and Cosmopolitan. Roosevelt compared the reformers to the Man with the Muck-rake in John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress who concentrated so intently on raking the filth from the floor that he was unable to see the celestial crown before him.

Muckross (muk'ros). Tract between two of the lakes of Killarney, in County Kerry, SW Irish Republic, notable for its abbey, a Franciscan foundation of the 15th century.

Mudaliar (mö.dä'lē.är), Sir A. Ramaswami. b. 1887—. Indian statesman and diplomat. President (1947) of the economic and social council of the United Nations, he was a member of the British war cabinet and Pacific war council during World War II. He was a member (1930) of the council of state, a delegate to the Round Table Conference, a member (1939–43) of the viceroy's executive cabinet, and diwan (chief minister) of Mysore (1947 et seq.).

Mudanya (mö.dä'nyä). [Also, Mudania.] Town in NW Turkey, in the il (province or vilayet) of Bursa, on the Sea of Marmara, ab. 50 mi. S of Istanbul: the port city for Bursa; exports tobacco, fruits and vegetables, wool, and cotton. Pop. ab. 5,000.

Muddock (mud'ŏk), Joyce Emerson Preston. [Pseudonym, Dick Donovan.] b. at Southampton, England, May 23, 1843; d. Jan. 23, 1934. English novelist, journalist, and traveler in Australia, China, Japan, Java, the South Sea Islands, Canada, Russia, and Europe. Swiss correspondent for the London Daily News and special correspondent for the Hour, he also contributed to the Strand Magazine, Chambers' Journal, Daily Mail, and other papers and periodicals. He edited and published Muddock's Guide to Switzerland and Guide to Davos Platz. Author of Maid Marian and Robin Hood (1892), The "V.C." for Valor (1895), Basile the Jester (1897), Jim the Penman (1901), Sweet "Doll" of Haddon Hall (1920), and others. Under his pseudonym he wrote more than 50 volumes, among which are Tracked and Taken (1890), Records of Vincent Trill of the Detective Service (1899), The Man from Manchester (1900), Stories from the Note-Book of a Detective (1900), and Pages from an Adventurous Life (1907).

Muddy River. Former name of Brookline, Mass.

Mudfog Association (mud'fog). [Full name, Full Report of the First and Second Meeting of the Mudfog Association for the Advancement of Every Thing.] Series of satirical pieces by Charles Dickens which appeared (1837–38) in Bentley's Miscellany. They were aimed at the British Association for the Advancement of Science.

Mudge (muj), Enoch. b. at Lynn, Mass., June 28, 1776; d. April 2, 1850. American Methodist clergyman, the first New England native to enter the ministry of his denomination.

Mudge, Isadore Gilbert. b. at Brooklyn, N.Y., March 14, 1875—. American librarian and bibliographer. She was reference librarian (1911–41) at Columbia University. Author of Bibliography (1915), Guide to Reference Books (5th ed., 1929), and other books. Her collaborations include Thackeray Dictionary (1910) and George Eliot Dictionary (1924), both with M.E. Sears.

Mudie (mū'di), Charles Edward. b. at Chelsea, London, Oct. 18, 1818; d. at Hampstead, London, Oct. 28, 1890. English bookseller. In 1842 he founded Mudie's Lending Library, which became the largest circulating library in London. He wrote Stray Leaves (1872).

Mudjekeewis (muj.ę.kē'wis). Ruler of the winds and father of Hiawatha in The Song of Hiawatha (1855), narrative poem by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

Mudki (mud'kē). [Also, Moodkee.] Place in Punjab, Union of India, ab. 67 mi. SE of Lahore, Pakistan. Here in December, 1845, the British under Sir Hugh Gough defeated the Sikhs.

Mudo (mö'ᴛʜō), El. Epithet of Navarrete or Navarete, Juan Fernández.

Mudrarakshasa (mö.drą.räk'shą.są). [Eng. trans., "Rakshasa and the Signet Ring."] Sanskrit political drama, in seven acts, by Vishakhadatta, ascribed variously to the 7th, 8th, 11th, or 12th century.

Mueller (mül'ėr), Otto. b. at Libau, in Silesia, Oct. 16, 1874; d. at Breslau, Sept. 24, 1930. German expressionist painter and lithographer. He was strongly influenced by Gauguin and primitive sculpture, and was originally an impressionist. In 1919 he became a professor at the Breslau Academy, where he taught for several years. Among his works are Girls Bathing, Bathing Women in Landscape, and Gypsy Girl.

Mueller, Paul Herman. b. 1899—. Swiss chemist. In 1939 he discovered that dichloro-diphenyl-trichloroethane has remarkable insecticidal properties. Under the designation DDT, this was extensively used to combat insect-borne diseases during World War II, and since then has been widely employed in peacetime pest control. It was in recognition of this discovery that Mueller received the Nobel prize for physiology and medicine in 1948.

Muerto (mwer'tō), El. See El Muerto.

Muette de Portici (mü.et dę pôr.tē.sē), La. [Eng. trans., "The Mute Girl of Portici."] Opera in four acts by Daniel François Auber, with a libretto by A. E. Scribe and Casimir Delavigne. It was produced at Paris in 1828, and in England as Masaniello in English in 1829 and as La Muta di Portici in Italian in 1851.

Mug (mug), Matthew. Character in Samuel Foote's The Mayor of Garratt.

Muganda (mö.gän'dą). See Ganda.

Mügeln (mü'gęln), Heinrich von. See Heinrich von Mügeln.

Mügge (müg'ę), Theodor. b. at Berlin, Nov. 8, 1806; d. there, Feb. 18, 1861. German novelist and writer of travels. He was one of the founders (1848) of Nationalzeitung, whose feuilleton he edited for a while. Among his works are Die Schweiz (Switzerland, 1847), and the novel Toussaint (1840).

Muggendorf (mûg'ẹn.dôrf). Village in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Bavaria, American Zone, in the Regierungsbezirk (government district) of Middle and Upper Franconia, situated ab. 25 mi. NE of Nuremberg. Stalactite grottos are in the vicinity. 903 (1946).

Muggia (möd'jä). [Ancient name, Castrum Muglae.] Town and commune in the Free Territory of Trieste, situated on the S shore of the Gulf of Trieste, ab. 4 mi. SW of Trieste; shipyards and fisheries. It was ceded to Italy in 1919, and incorporated into the Free Territory of Trieste in 1947. Pop. of commune, 12,028 (1936); of town, 3,028 (1936).

Muggleton (mug'l.tọn), Lodowicke. b. 1609; d. 1697 or 1698. English fanatic, founder, conjointly with John Reeve, of the Muggletonians. His doctrines were published in The Divine Looking-Glass (1656).

Muggletonians (mug.l.tō'ni.ạnz). Sect founded (c1651) in England by Lodowicke Muggleton and John Reeve. The members of the sect believed in the prophetic inspiration of its founders, as being the two witnesses mentioned in Rev. xi. 3–6, and held that there is no real distinction between the persons of the Trinity, that God has a human body, and that Elijah was His representative in heaven when He descended to die on the cross. The sect died out c1868.

Mughals (mö.gälz'), Empire of the. See Moguls, Empire of the.

Mughouse Club (mug'hous). Club which met at Longacre in London in the early part of the 18th century. Its name came from the fact that each member drank his ale out of his own mug. After this a number of mughouses were established by the partisans of the Hanover succession, in order that the Protestants might rally in them against the Jacobites. It was at one of these, in Salisbury Court, Fleet Street, that the most serious of the "Mughouse riots" took place (July 23, 1716). The mob attacked the Hanoverians assembled there, the fighting continued all night, and the ringleader of the mob was killed.

Muğla (mö.lä'). Il (province or vilayet) in SW Turkey, W of Antalya, bordering on the Aegean Sea. It is mostly a rich coastal plain where fine crops of wheat, cotton, tobacco, and fruits are raised. Capital, Muğla; area, ab. 4,925 sq. mi.; pop. 240,704 (1950).

Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U.S. 623 (1887) (mug'lėr; kan'zạs). U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding a Kansas prohibition law. It affirmed the principle of judicial noninterference with legislative discretion except in instances of unreasonable exercise of state power.

Mugnone (mö.nyō'nā), Leopoldo. b. at Naples, Italy, Sept. 29, 1858—. Italian conductor, who was one of the first to employ interpretive directing in Italy. He conducted the first performance of Pietro Mascagni's Cavalleria Rusticana (1890) at Rome and that of Giuseppe Verdi's Falstaff (1893) at Milan. He was codirector with Toscanini of the special performances honoring Verdi at La Scala, Milan. Among his compositions are the operas Vita Brettona (1905) and Il Biricchino (1892).

Mugodzhar Hills (mö.go.jär'). Group of hills in the U.S.S.R., at the SE end of the Ural mountain system. They run S from the base of the Urals, NW of the Aral Sea. Coal deposits have been discovered. Length, ab. 125 mi.; peak elevation, ab. 2,152 ft.

Mugwumps (mug'wumps). Epithet applied originally by Charles A. Dana of the New York Sun, who derived it from John Eliot's Indian Bible, where "mugwump" (spelled "mugquomp") is given as the term for "great captain." Dana used it in derisive characterization of the independent Republicans under Carl Schurz and George William Curtis who refused to endorse James G. Blaine, the regular Republican candidate in 1884, and instead threw their active support to Grover Cleveland. It is held by some that their defection was one of the principal causes of Blaine's defeat, although the speech by the Reverend S. G. Burchard in support of Blaine, in which he used "rum, Romanism, and rebellion" to characterize the Democrats, and which lost New York state as a result, is usually considered to have been the campaign's turning-point.

Muhammad (mō.hăm'ạd). See Mohammed.

Muhammad, Ras. See Ras Muhammad.

Muhammadiyah (mö.hä.mạ.dē'yạ). Modern Moslem religious and social movement which, like Cao-Daism, seeks to reconcile Eastern and Western concepts. It originated before World War II among the westernized minority of Moslems in Java and Sumatra on the basis of ideas previously introduced from Western Asia and, especially, from Egypt. In part its tendency is toward modernization of creed, forms of worship, and higher education; in part it is an attempt to give religious sanction to Indonesia's emancipation from Western domination. It is thus largely a cultural movement fitting in with political nationalism. It employs Western methods of youth organization and of adult education and, in the midst of revolutionary political changes that affect social relations, endeavors to preserve respect for the essential and timeless teachings of the Koran. Although compromising to some extent with traditional notions and practices, it attempts to steer a middle course between the materialist teaching of communism and the fatalistic orthodoxy of the Indonesian masses.

Muhammerah (mö.häm.me.rä'). Former name of Khorramshahr.

Muharram (mö.här'räm). [Also, Moharram.] First month of the Mohammedan year, and the religious festival held during that month. The ceremonies among the Shiite Moslems have special reference to the death of Hasan, grandson of Mohammed, who is looked upon by the Shiites as a martyr. With the Sunnites the ceremonies have reference to the day of creation.

Muharraq (mö.här'rąk). [Also: Moharraq, Moharek.] Small island off E Arabia, in the Persian Gulf, belonging to the Bahrein group, off the NE corner of the main island. It is connected to the main island by a causeway ab. 1½ mi. long. Pearl fishing is very important here. There is a landing field used by the British Overseas Airways on its route to India. Area, ab. 6 sq. mi.

Muharraq. Town in Bahrein sultanate, the chief town of the island of Muharraq and headquarters of its pearl-fishing industry. 18,000 (est. 1948).

Mühlbach (mül'bäch). German name of Sebeş.

Mühlbach, Luise. Pseudonym of Mundt, Klara.

Mühlberg (mül'berk). Small town in E Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony, Russian Zone, situated on the Elbe River, ab. 35 mi. NW of Dresden. Here on April 24, 1547, the Imperialists under Charles V defeated John Frederick I, elector of Saxony.

Mühldorf (mül'dôrf). Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Bavaria, American Zone, in the Regierungsbezirk (government district) of Upper Bavaria, situated on the Inn River, ab. 44 mi. NE of Munich; agricultural trade; lumber, chemical, and metal industries. A huge subterranean airplane factory was operated here during World War II. Mühldorf is an old town, with churches of the 14th, 15th, and 18th centuries. Here on Sept. 28, 1322, the emperor Louis IV (Louis the Bavarian) defeated Frederick III of Germany (Frederick of Austria); the battle is also called the battle of Ampfing. 10,427 (1950).

Muhleman (möl'mạn), Maurice Louis. b. near Alton, Ill., Nov. 27, 1852; d. June 12, 1913. American monetary authority.

Muhlenberg (mū'lẹn.bėrg), Frederick Augustus. b. at Lancaster, Pa., Aug. 25, 1818; d. at Reading, Pa., March 21, 1901. American Lutheran clergyman and educator; grandson of Gotthilf Henry Ernest Muhlenberg. He taught (1840–50) at Franklin College, Lancaster, Pa., where his grandfather had been the first president, was the first educator to hold (1850–67) the Franklin professorship of ancient languages in Pennsylvania College, and was the first president (1867–76) of Muhlenberg College at Allentown. After his resignation from Muhlenberg he was professor of Greek language and literature at the University of Pennsylvania for the next 12 years. He was also president (1891–93) of Thiel College, Greenville, Pa., which he reorganized.

Muhlenberg, Frederick Augustus Conrad. b. at New Providence (now Trappe), Pa., Jan. 1, 1750; d. June 4, 1801. American politician and Lutheran clergyman; son of Heinrich Melchior Muhlenberg. During a ministerial career which ended in 1779 he went (1775) to Christ Church, New York, as pastor. He was a member (1779– 80) of the Continental Congress, at first elected to fill Edward Biddle's unexpired term. He was speaker (1780–83) of the General Assembly, president (1783–84) of the Council of Censors, and presided (1787) over the convention ratifying the federal Constitution. He was elected the next year as a Federalist from the Philadelphia district to the first Congress, where he became speaker. He served in the second, third, and fourth Congresses. Two years before his death he threw his support to the Republicans.

Muhlenberg, Gotthilf Henry Ernest. b. at New Providence (now Trappe), Pa., Nov. 17, 1753; d. May 23, 1815. American Lutheran clergyman and botanist; son of Henry Melchior Muhlenberg. He was pastor (1780–1815) of Holy Trinity Church at Lancaster, Pa. He served as first president (1787) of Franklin College. By 1791 he had listed more than 1,100 plants growing within three miles of Lancaster. He published many of his scientific findings.

Muhlenberg, Heinrich Melchior. b. at Einbeck, Germany, Sept. 6, 1711; d. at New Providence (now Trappe), Pa., Oct. 7, 1787. American clergyman, known as the chief founder of the Lutheran Church in the U.S. He came to the U.S. in 1742 and acted as pastor to the Lutheran churches near Philadelphia, at the same time overseeing the churches in the area from Maryland to New York. He organized (1748) the first Lutheran synod in America.

Muhlenberg, Henry Augustus Philip. b. at Lancaster, Pa., May 13, 1782; d. at Reading, Pa., Aug. 11, 1844. American clergyman and Democratic politician; son of G. H. E. Muhlenberg. He was U.S. minister to Austria (1838–40).

Muhlenberg, John Peter Gabriel. b. at New Providence (now Trappe), Pa., Oct. 1, 1746; d. near Philadelphia, Oct. 1, 1807. American Revolutionary general and politician; son of Heinrich Melchior Muhlenberg. He was a Lutheran pastor in Virginia when the Revolutionary War broke out. He became (1775) colonel of a regiment he raised, and fought at Stony Point and in other battles of the war, becoming (1783) brevet major general. He was a representative in Congress (1789–91, 1793–95, 1799–1801) and a senator (1801).

Muhlenberg, William Augustus. b. at Philadelphia, Sept. 16, 1796; d. at New York, April 8, 1877. American Episcopalian clergyman, hymn writer, and hymnologist; grandson of Frederick Augustus Conrad Mühlenberg. He was founder (1859) of St. Luke's Hospital at New York. Author of The Muhlenberg Memorial (1853) and Evangelical Catholic Papers (1875).

Mühlhausen (mül'hou.zẹn). [Also, Mühlhausen in Thüringen (in tü'ring.ẹn).] City in C Germany, in the Land (state) of Thuringia, Russian Zone, formerly in the province of Saxony, Prussia, situated on the Unstrut River, ab. 21 mi. NW of Gotha. It has textile, leather, lumber, tobacco and machinery industries. It is an old town, with remains of medieval walls, a Romanesque church of the 13th century, a Gothic church of the 14th century, and a Rathaus (town hall) in the Renaissance style. It became a free imperial city in 1251, passed to Prussia in 1802, to the kingdom of Westphalia 1802–14, and was returned to Prussia in 1815. A concentration camp was maintained here during World War II. 48,013 (1946).

Mühlhausen. A German name of Mulhouse.

Mühlheim (mül'hīm). [Also: Mühlheim in Hessen (in hes'ẹn), Mühlheim am Main (äm mīn').] Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of Hessen, American Zone, formerly in the province of Hesse-Nassau, Prussia, situated on the Main River ab. 6 mi. E of Frankfort on the Main: important leather manufactures; also metal, jewelry, and textile industries. 13,235 (1950).

Mühlviertel (mül'fēr''tẹl). Region in NW Austria, in the province of Upper Austria, N of the Danube River. In its S part, along the Danube, it is fertile but elsewhere it is a poor region, densely wooded and merging into the Bohemian Forest. There are no major towns. The Austrian poet Adalbert Stifter was born here. After World War II it was the westernmost section of the Russian zone of occupation in Austria.

Muhu (mö'hö). [Also: Muhumaa (mö'hö.mä); Russian, Mukhu; German, Mohn, Moon.] Island in the Baltic Sea, belonging to Estonia, situated NE of Saare. Area, ab. 80 sq. mi.

Muichdhui (muk.dö'i), Ben. See Ben Macdhui.

Muigheo (mwē'ō). Irish name of County Mayo.

Muineachán (mö'i.nạ.ċhôn). Irish name of County Monaghan.

Muiopotmos, or the Fate of the Butterfly (mö''i.ọ̄.pot'-mos). Poem by Edmund Spenser, in ottava rima, published in 1591 in the volume known as Complaints.

Muir (mūr), Edwin. b. at Orkney, Scotland, May 15, 1887—. British novelist, poet, and critic. Author of The Marionette (1927), The Three Brothers (1931), Poor Tom (1932), and translations, with Willa Muir, of the works of Franz Kafka and Hermann Broch. His verse includes First Poems, Chorus of the Newly Dead, Journeys and Places, and The Voyage. Among his critical works are Latitudes (1924), Transition (1926), and The Structure of the Novel (1928).

Muir, John. b. at Glasgow, Feb. 5, 1810; d. at Edinburgh, March 7, 1882. Scottish Sanskrit scholar; brother of Sir William Muir. From 1829 to 1853 he held various civil and judicial positions in India. In 1862 he founded the chair of Sanskrit at Edinburgh University. His Original Sanskrit Texts appeared in five volumes (1858–70). He published a volume of metrical translations from Sanskrit writers.

Muir, John. b. at Dunbar, Scotland, April 21, 1838; d. at Los Angeles, Calif., Dec. 24, 1914. American naturalist and writer. For a number of years he made his headquarters in the Yosemite region, demonstrating his theory of its glacial formation, and making a comprehensive study of the geological and botanical features of the Sierra Nevada. In 1879 he went to Alaska and explored the region north of Fort Wrangel, discovering Glacier Bay and the glacier bearing his name, and in 1881 accompanied one of the expeditions to the Arctic in search of the lost Jeannette. He published The Mountains of California (1894), Our National Parks (1901), and My First Summer in the Sierra (1911).

Muir, Ramsay. b. 1872; d. at Pinner, Middlesex, England, May 4, 1941. English historian and leader of the Liberal Party. He was professor of modern history, University of Manchester (1913–21), Liberal member of Parliament (1923–24), and president of the National Liberal Federation (1933–36). Author of History of Liverpool (1906), Atlas of Modern History (1911), Making of British India (1915), Nationalism and Internationalism (1916), National Self-Government (1918), History of the British Commonwealth (2 vols., 1920–22), Liberalism and Industry (1920), How Britain is Governed (1930), The Record of the National Government (1936), and others.

Muir, Sir William. b. at Glasgow, April 27, 1819; d. July 11, 1905. Scottish Arabic scholar; brother of John Muir (1810–82). He entered the Bengal civil service in 1837. He was lieutenant governor of the Northwest Provinces (1868–74), financial minister to the Indian government (1874–76), and principal of the University of Edinburgh (1885–1902). He wrote Life of Mahomet (4 vols., 1858–61), Annals of the Early Caliphate (1883), and others.

Muir Glacier. Large glacier in SE Alaska, in the area of Glacier Bay National Monument. It was discovered by and named for John Muir (1838–1914).

Muir Woods National Monument. National monument in W California, on the S slopes of Mount Tamalpais, ab. 2 mi. from the coast, ab. 12 mi. NW of downtown San Francisco. It was established in 1908 to preserve a beautiful stand of redwood trees, and was named in honor of the naturalist John Muir (1838–1914). Area, ab. 0.8 sq. mi.

Muisca (mwēs'kä). Term sometimes applied to the South American Indian linguistic stock known usually as Chibchan.

Muizhel (mö'i.zhẹl), Viktor Vasilyevich. b. 1880; d. 1924. Russian playwright and realistic novelist, who wrote chiefly about peasant life.

Mukachevo (mö'kä.che.vô). [Czech, Mukačevo; Hungarian, Munkács.] City in SW U.S.S.R., in the Transcarpathian oblast (region) of the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, situated ab. 21 mi. SE of Uzhgorod: lumber, woodworking, and food industries. It is an important trade center, and is linked by rail with Stryn, N of the Carpathians. Formerly in Austria-Hungary, the city passed to Czechoslovakia in 1919, to Hungary in 1938, and to the U.S.S.R. in 1945. Pop. 31,602 (1941).

Mukalla (mö.kal'ą, -käl'-). [Also: Maculla, Makallah.] Seaport in Hadhramaut, S Arabia, situated ab. 300 mi. E of Aden: capital of a sultanate and chief port of Hadhramaut, in the E Aden Protectorate. The chief exports are animal products.

Mukatta (mö.kät'tą), Nahr el. Arabic name of the Kishon.

Mukden (mök'dęn). [Also: Moukden; Chinese: Shenyang, formerly Fengtien; old Manchu name, Shengking or Shingking.] City in NE China, the capital of the Northeast Administrative Area (Manchuria), situated on a tributary of the Liao River. It is a major rail and road junction and the largest city in Manchuria, with modern blast furnaces, and textile, chemical, food-processing, paper, aircraft, and machinery industries. It has an important arsenal. It is the seat of two universities, and has an important airport. Mukden dates at least from the Middle Ages as a town; it was the capital of the Manchus from 1625 until 1644, when the Ch'ing dynasty was established and the capital was moved to Peiping (Peking). The Russian army under General A. N. Kuropatkin was defeated here by the Japanese under Marshal Iwao Oyama, Feb. 19–March 10, 1905. Part of the Japanese state of Manchukuo from 1932, it was returned in 1945 to China, and fell in November, 1948, to the Chinese Communist forces after a long siege. Area of municipality, ab. 1,217 sq. mi.; pop. 1,551,317 (1950).

Mukden Incident. Incident which was used by the Japanese to justify their invasion of Manchuria on Sept. 18, 1931. It involved the demolition of a section of the Japanese-owned South Manchurian Railway. The Japanese accused Chinese "bandits" of having planned and executed the blast and immediately proceeded with a well-organized invasion of Manchuria, which in 1932 was established as the Japanese puppet state of Manchukuo.

Mukharji (mö'kąr.jē), Sir Asutosh. [Also, Mookerji.] b. at Calcutta, India, 1864; d. 1925. Indian jurist, educator, and mathematician. A champion of university reform (1903), he served as justice of the Calcutta high court. He was noted for his contributions to mathematics, his activity as vice-chancellor of Calcutta University, and his services to the Asiatic Society of Bengal, of which he was president (1907). Author of Law of Perpetuities and Conic Sections.

Mukhmas (můch.mas'). See Michmash.

Mukhtar Pasha (möch.tär' pä.shä'), Ahmed. b. at Brusa, Turkey, in September, 1832; d. 1919. Turkish general. He was appointed governor general of Bosnia in 1875, and commander in chief in Armenia in 1877.

Mukhu (mö'нö). Russian name of Muhu.

Muku (mö'kö). See Timote.

Mula (mö'lä). Town in E Spain, in the province of Murcia, ab. 19 mi. W of Murcia: ruined medieval castle; warm sulfur springs. 14,312 (1940).

Mulberries, The. Club, founded in 1824, in which members regularly contributed a paper, or poem, or conceit bearing upon Shakespeare. Later the club was called the Shakespeare Club. Charles Dickens and W. C. Macready were among its members.

Mulberry (mul'ber''i). Unincorporated community in N California, in Butte County, in the Sacramento River valley. 2,545 (1950).

Mulberry Garden. Place of refreshment at London, much frequented by persons of quality in the 17th century. Sir Charles Sedley produced a comedy with this title in 1668, partly taken from Molière's École des maris.

Mulcahy (mul.kā'hi), Richard James. b. at Waterford, Ireland, May 10, 1886 –. Irish politician. He served (1903–16) in the civil service, was a lieutenant (1916) in the Easter rebellion, and served as chief of staff (1918–21) of the Irish Volunteers. He was a member (1921–37, 1938–43) of the Dail Eireann, Sinn Fein member (1918–22) of Parliament, and Free State assistant minister (1919–21) and minister (1921–22) of defense. He was commander in chief (1922–23) of the national forces, the successor to Michael Collins. He served as minister (1927–32) for local government and public health.

Mulcaster (mul'kas''tėr), Richard. b. at Carlisle, England; d. April 15, 1611. English philologist. He was made master of Merchant Taylors' School in 1561, and of Saint Paul's School in 1596, and taught Edmund Spenser. He wrote Positions . . . necessarie for the Training up of Children (1581), The First Part of the Elementarie . . . of the Right Writing of our English Tung (1582), and others.

Mulciber (mul'si.bėr). In Roman mythology, an epithet of Vulcan, meaning "the Melter."

Mulde (můl'dę). River in E central Germany, rising in two main headstreams on the N slopes of the Erzgebirge, and flowing generally N to the Elbe ab. 3 mi. N of Dessau. Total length (including the Zwickauer Mulde), ab. 157 mi.; length to headstreams, ab. 77 mi.

Mulder (mul'dėr), Gerardus Johannes. b. at Utrecht, Netherlands, Dec. 27, 1802; d. there, in April, 1880. Dutch physician and chemist, professor of chemistry at Utrecht (1840–68), especially noted for his researches on proteins.

Mule sans Frein (mül säṅ fraṅ), La. [Eng. trans., "The Mule Without a Bridle."] French romance of the 13th century which has by some been attributed to Payans Maizières, and by others to Chrétien de Troyes.

Mulets (mü.le), Grands- and Petits-. Points on the slope of Mont Blanc.

Muley-Hacén (mö.lā'ä.thān'). See Mulhacén.

Mulford (mul'fȯrd), Clarence Edward. b. at Streator, Ill., Feb. 3, 1883—. American author of Western novels, creator of the fictional cowboy character Hopalong Cassidy. Many of his short stories and novels, including Hopalong Cassidy (1910), Bar-20 (1907), Trail Dust (1934), and Bar-20 Three (1921), were adapted for the films.

Mulford, Elisha. b. at Montrose, Pa., Nov. 19, 1833; d. at Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 9, 1885. American Episcopal clergyman and philosophical writer.

Mulgrave (mul'grāv), 2nd Baron. Title of Phipps, Constantine John.

Mulgrave, 2nd Earl of. A title of Phipps, Sir Constantine Henry.

Mulgrave, 3rd Earl of. A title of Sheffield, John.

Mulgrave Islands. Former name of Mili Atoll.

Mulhacén (mö.lä.thān'). [Also, Muley-Hacén.] Highest peak of the Sierra Nevada, S Spain, ab. 25 mi. SE of Granada. Elevation, ab. 11,420 ft.

Mülheim am Rhein (mül'hīm äm rīn). [Also, Mülheim.] Former town in W Germany, in the Rhine Province, Prussia, situated on the E bank of the Rhine River just N of the center of Cologne. It is now an industrial NE section of Cologne.

Mülheim an der Ruhr (än dėr rör). [Also, Mülheim.] City in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, situated on the Ruhr River ab. 8 mi. above its junction with the Rhine. It is one of the large industrial centers of the Ruhr region, with a harbor on the Rhine-Ruhr Canal, shipping coal, foodstuffs, iron and steel products, lumber, stone, and other bulk materials. There are important iron and steel mills, large electrical equipment plants, and tobacco, leather, chemical, and foodstuff industries. The town is modern; it was incorporated in 1808. In World War II it was frequently bombed (1943–45), and was severely damaged. 132,370 (1946), 149,589 (1950).

Mulholland (mul'hol''ąnd), John. b. at Chicago, Ill., 1898—. American magician, vice-president of the Society of American Magicians and editor of its official magazine, Sphinx. His books include Magic in the Making (1925), Quicker than the Eye (1932), Story of Magic (1935), and Beware Familiar Spirits (1938).

Mulholland, William. b. at Belfast, Ireland, Sept. 11, 1855; d. July 22, 1935. American hydraulic engineer. Superintendent and chief engineer (1886 et seq.) of water works at Los Angeles, he was in charge of the construction of a 250-mile aqueduct from the Sierra Nevada to Los Angeles.

Mulhouse (mu.loz). [German, Mülhausen, Mühlhausen.] City in E France, in the department of Haut-Rhin, situated on the Ill River and on the Rhine-Rhone Canal, in the Rhine valley, near the German and Swiss borders, ab. 61 mi. S of Strasbourg. It is the chief manufacturing center in Alsace, and is its textile capital. The cotton-textile industry is most important but there are also woolen and silk manufactures; printed fabrics are a specialty. The town also has dyeing establishments, and hosiery, knitwear, artificial-flower, leather, metal, and chemical industries. The only architecturally remarkable building is the Hôtel de Ville (town hall), which dates from 1552. The city of Mulhouse became part of France in 1798. It was German from 1871 to 1918. In World War II part of the city was severely damaged. 87,655 (1946).

Mull (mul). Island of the Inner Hebrides, in W Scotland, in Argyllshire. It is separated from the mainland of Argyllshire by the Sound of Mull and the Firth of Lorne. The coastline is rugged and much indented by many small lochs, especially on the W and S coasts. Inland the surface is mountainous, reaching an elevation of 3,169 ft. in Ben More. Red granite is quarried on the peninsula in the SW known as the Ross of Mull. Wild goats are found on the island. Tobermory is the chief town. Area, ab. 345 sq. mi.; pop. 2,903 (1931).

Mull, Ross of. Peninsula in W Scotland, in Argyllshire, the SW extremity of Mull island. Length, ab. 18 mi.; width, ab. 5 mi.

Mull, Sound of. Sea passage in W Scotland, in Argyllshire. It separates Mull island from Morven peninsula. Length, ab. 22 mi.; width, ab. 2 to 3 mi.

Mullany (mu.lā'ni), James Robert Madison. b. in New York, Oct. 26, 1818; d. at Bryn Mawr, Pa., Sept. 17, 1887. American naval officer.

Mullany, Patrick Francis. Original name of Azarias, Brother.

Mullbuie (mul.bū'i). See Black Isle.

Müllenhoff (mül'ẹn.hof), Karl Victor. b. at Marne, Schleswig-Holstein, Germany, Sept. 8, 1818; d. at Berlin, Feb. 19, 1884. German philologist, professor at Berlin from 1858. He published various works on Germanic philology and antiquities.

Mullens (mul'ẹnz). City in S West Virginia, in Wyoming County: trading center for a coal-mining area. 3,470 (1950).

Mullens, Priscilla. See Priscilla Mullens.

Müller (mül'ẽr), Adam Heinrich. [Surname after 1827, Müller von Nitersdorf.] b. at Berlin, 1779; d. at Vienna, 1829. German political economist, an admirer of Edmund Burke, and friend of Novalis, Gentz, Fichte, Schelling, and Schleiermacher. His first publication was the fragmentary Lehre vom Gegensatz (1804). In 1807 he went to Dresden, where he lectured on aesthetics (Von der Idee der Schönheit, 1809; Über deutsche Wissenschaft und Literatur, 1810). At this time he made friends with Heinrich von Kleist, with whom he founded the journal Phöbus. Together with Arnim the two men organized (1811) the Christlichdeutsche Tischgesellschaft. Elemente der Staatskunst, generally considered to be Müller's major work, was published in 1809. In 1813 he accepted a call to Vienna and began his career as an Austrian diplomat under Metternich. The best primary source on Müller is his correspondence (1800–29) with Friedrich von Gentz, published by his daughter, Marie von Pilat, in 1857.

Müller, Carl Christian. b. in Saxe-Meiningen, Germany, July 3, 1831; d. at New York, June 4, 1914. American composer, teacher, and conductor. He was a member and conductor of the Barnum's Museum orchestra at New York, and professor of harmony (1879–95) at the New York College of Music. Composer of organ sonatas, a string quartet, and piano, violin, and vocal works.

Müller (mü.ler), Charles Louis. [Called Müller de Paris (dẹ pä.rē).] b. at Paris, Dec. 22, 1815; d. there Jan. 10, 1892. French historical painter. Among his works are Roll Call of the Last Victims of the Reign of Terror, Marie Antoinette at the Trianon, Charlotte Corday in Prison, and Galileo before Cardinal Barberini.

Müller (mül'ẽr), David Heinrich von. b. at Buczacz, in Galicia, 1846; d. at Vienna, 1912. Austrian Orientalist. One of the leading Semitic scholars of his day, he led (1898, 1899) the archaeological expedition of the Vienna Academy of Sciences to southern Arabia and the island of Socotra. Author of Die Burgen und Schlösser Südarabiens (2 vols., 1879–81), Palmyrenische Grabinschriften (1886), and Die Mehri- und Socotrisprache (1902–07).

Müller, Dominik. [Pseudonym of P. Schmitz.] b. at Basel, Switzerland, 1871—. Swiss author writing in German, for many years editor of a satirical weekly, Samstag. Dexterous stabs at the foibles of modern society, mostly in the form of dialect poems, have made him a very original figure in Swiss literature. He wrote an autobiographical novel, Felix Grollimunds russisches Abenteuer (1930).

Müller, Eduard. b. at Dresden, Germany, Nov. 12, 1848; d. at Bern, Switzerland, Nov. 9, 1919. Swiss statesman. Leader of the democratic movement at Bern, he was a member (1895–1919) of the Federal Council and president (1899, 1907, 1913) of the Swiss Confederation. He made revisions (1907) in the Swiss military structure.

Müller, Baron Sir Ferdinand Jakob Heinrich von. b. at Rostock, Germany, June 30, 1825; d. at Melbourne, Australia, Oct. 10, 1896. Australian botanist and explorer. He emigrated to Australia in 1847 for his health. In 1852 he was appointed government botanist for the colony of Victoria, and began exploring-collecting journeys in Victoria, across Queensland and into the Northern Territory (1855) and inland from Sharks' Bay, West Australia (1877). In the course of these trips he made enormous additions to Australian botanical knowledge. He is responsible for the introduction of the eucalyptus (blue gum) tree into various other parts of the world. He directed (1857–73) the botanical gardens at Melbourne. He was the author of voluminous technical works. He is commemorated by place names in Australia, New Zealand, Antarctica, and South America.

Müller, Friedrich. [Called Müller the Painter; German, Maler Müller.] b. at Kreuznach, Germany, Jan. 13, 1749; d. at Rome, April 23, 1825. German poet, painter, and engraver.

Müller, Friedrich. b. at Jemnik, in Bohemia, March 5, 1834; d. at Vienna, May 25, 1898. German comparative philologist and ethnologist, professor at Vienna from 1866.

Müller, Friedrich Max. See Max Müller, Friedrich.

Müller, George. b. near Halberstadt, Germany, Sept. 27, 1805; d. at Bristol, England, March 10, 1898. English evangelical preacher and philanthropist. He studied divinity at Halle, and went to London in 1829. In 1836 he established the Orphan House of Bristol, to be supported by unsolicited contributions. He abolished pew rents and refused a salary, insisting that prayer could supply physical as well as spiritual needs. In 1856 it contained 297 children, and had received 84,441 pounds as the result, according to Müller, of prayer alone. In 1875 it contained 2,000 children. He wrote A Narrative of Some of the Lord's Dealings with George Müller (1837).

Müller, Georg Elias. b. 1850; d. 1934. German experimental psychologist. He established himself as an experimentalist and methodologist in general, and as a psychophysicist in particular. He published rules for forming nonsense syllables, and restated, amplified, and refined the psychophysical methods as first laid down by G. T. Fechner. He took his degree under Litze at Göttingen in 1873, and with the exception of the year 1880–81, when he was at Czernowitz (Chernovtsy), remained there until his retirement in 1921. In 1881 he was said to have a laboratory "second only to Wundt's." Most of his work was published in papers by himself or with his students, principally in the fields of learning and the psychophysics of vision. His books in psychophysics, which are now classics, are Grundlegung der Psychophysik (1878) and Gesichtspunkte und Tatsachen der psychophysischen Methodik (1904). He also published Abriss der Psychologie (1924).

Müller, Günther. b. 1890—. German historian of literature. He wrote Geschichte des deutschen Liedes vom Barock bis zur Gegenwart (1925), Deutsche Dichtung von der Renaissance bis zum Ausgang des Barock (1928), Deutsches Dichten und Denken (1934), and Kleine Goethe-Biographie (1949).

Müller, Hans. [Also, Hans Müller-Einigen.] b. at Brünn, Austria (now Brno, Czechoslovakia), Oct. 25, 1882—. Austrian playwright. He has also written some successful poetry and novels, but his chief claim to popular fame is his libretto for the musical hit Im weissen Rössl (The White Horse Inn, 1930).

Müller, Hermann. b. at Mannheim, Germany, May 18, 1876; d. at Berlin, March 20, 1931. German statesman. He began his career as a Social Democratic editor, serving also on the party's executive board (1906 et seq.). He served as a Reichstag member (1916 et seq.), and was among the six members of Friedrich Ebert's first cabinet (1918). He was a member of the Weimar constitutional assembly, became foreign minister (1919), and was a cosigner of the Versailles treaty. He was made chancellor after the Kapp Putsch in 1920, but resigned in June of that year. He held a post in the economics department of the League of Nations (1927 et seq.). He formed a coalition cabinet in 1928, but resigned in 1930 when the coalition split because of growing economic difficulties.

Muller mul'ėr), Hermann Joseph. b. at New York, Dec. 21, 1890—. American geneticist. He was professor of zoölogy (1925–36) at the University of Texas, a staff member (1933–37) of the Institute of Genetics at Moscow, research associate (1937–40) at the Institute of Animal Genetics, Edinburgh, Scotland, and professor of zoölogy (1945 et seq.) at the University of Indiana. He did notable work on the artificial transmutation of the gene by x-rays and the production of chromosome changes, for which he was awarded (1946) the Nobel prize in physiology and medicine. Coauthor of Genetics, Medicine and Man (1947) and other works.

Müller (mül'ėr), Johann. Original name of Regiomontanus.

Müller, Johannes Peter. b. at Koblenz, Germany, July 14, 1801; d. at Berlin, April 27 or 28, 1858. German physiologist and comparative anatomist, professor at Bonn (1826–33), and at Berlin (1833 et seq.). He was one of the founders of modern physiology, and exerted also a powerful influence upon other departments of science. His chief work is Handbuch der Physiologie des Menschen.

Müller, Johannes von. b. at Schaffhausen, Switzerland, Jan. 3, 1752; d. at Kassel, Germany, May 29, 1809. Swiss historian. He held various offices in the service of Mainz, Austria, and Prussia, and at the time of his death was director general of education in the kingdom of Westphalia. His chief works are Geschichte der Schweizer (History of the Swiss, 4 vols., 1780–1805), and 24 Bücher allgemeiner Geschichte (24 Books of Universal History, 1811).

Müller, Johann Friedrich Wilhelm. b. at Stuttgart, Germany, Dec. 11, 1782; d. near Dresden, Germany, May 3, 1816. German engraver; son of Johann Gotthard von Müller. His chief work is the Sistine Madonna (after Raphael).

Müller, Johann Gotthard von. b. at Bernhausen, near Stuttgart, Germany, May 4, 1747; d. at Stuttgart, March 14, 1830. German engraver.

Müller, Johann Gottwerth. [Called Müller von Itzehoe.] b. at Hamburg, Germany, May 17, 1743; d. there, June 22, 1828. German writer who imitated Tobias Smollett and Laurence Sterne with the novels Siegfried von Lindenberg (1779; expanded to 4 vols., 1781–82) and Komische Romane aus den Papieren des braunen Mannes (8 vols., 1784–91). He was a bookdealer (1773–83) at Itzehoe, Schleswig (hence the tag to his name) and like his bookdealer friend and fellow rationalist Christoph Friedrich Nicolai, he was an avowed opponent of the Sturm und Drang movement in German literature.

Müller, Johann Heinrich Jakob. b. at Kassel, Germany, April 30, 1809; d. at Freiburg im Breisgau, Germany, Oct. 3, 1875. German physicist.

Müller, Julius. b. at Brieg (now Brzeg), in Silesia, April 10, 1801; d. Sept. 27, 1878. German Protestant theologian; brother of Karl Otfried Müller. His chief work is Die christliche Lehre von der Sünde (1839).

Müller, Karl. b. at Langenburg, Germany, Sept. 3, 1852; d. at Tübingen, Germany, Feb. 10, 1940. German Protestant theologian and religious historian.

Müller, Karl Alexander von. b. at Munich, Germany, Dec. 20, 1882—. German historian. He served (1917 et seq.) as professor at the University of Munich. Author of Zwölf Historikerprofile (Twelve Profiles of Historians, 1935) and others, and editor of Denkwürdigkeiten der Reichskanzlerzeit des Fürsten Ludwig zu Hohenlohe-Schillingsfürst (1931).

Müller, Karl Otfried. b. at Brieg (now Brzeg), in Silesia, Aug. 28, 1797; d. at Athens, Aug. 1, 1840. German Hellenist and archaeologist, professor of archaeology (1819 et seq.) at Göttingen; brother of Julius Müller. Among his works are Geschichte hellenischer Stämme und Städte (1820–24), Prolegomena zu einer wissenschaftlichen Mythologie (1825), Etrusker (1828), Handbuch der Archäologie der Kunst (1830), Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur (Eng. trans., History of the Literature of Ancient Greece, 1840), maps of ancient Greece, and others.

Müller, Karl von. b. at Hanover, Germany, June 26, 1863; d. at Blankenburg, Germany, March 11, 1923. German sailor, commander in World War I of the German raider Emden, which sank 15 Allied ships between Aug. 28 and Nov. 9, 1914, when it was destroyed by an Australian cruiser, the Sydney.

Müller, Ludwig. b. at Gütersloh, Germany, June 23, 1883—. German Protestant prelate. He was educated at the universities of Halle and Bonn, served as chaplain in the German navy from 1914 to 1926, and was an army chaplain from 1926 to 1933. He became (Aug. 4, 1933) bishop of Prussia, and was named (Sept. 27, 1933) Reichsbishop of the German Evangelical Church. He was a member of the National Socialist Party and a founder of the German Christian Movement. Author of Was ist positives Christentum?

Muller (mul'ėr), Maud. See Maud Muller.

Müller (mül'ėr), Otto. b. at Schotten, Hesse, Germany, June 1, 1816; d. at Stuttgart, Germany, Aug. 7, 1894. German novelist. His works include Bürger (1845) and Charlotte Ackermann (1854), among others.

Müller, Otto Frederik. b. 1730; d. 1784. Danish naturalist.

Müller, Peder Erasmus. b. at Copenhagen, May 29, 1776; d. Sept. 4, 1834. Danish theologian and archaeologist, appointed bishop of Zealand in 1830. He wrote Library of the Sagas (1816–18) and other works.

Müller, Sophus Otto. b. at Copenhagen, May 24, 1846; d. there, Feb. 24, 1934. Danish prehistorian and archaeologist. He served (1892 et seq.) as director of the national museum at Copenhagen. Author of Nordische Altertumskunde (Northern Archaeology, 1897–98) and Urgeschichte Europas (Primeval History of Europe, 1905).

Müller, Therese. Original name of Malten, Therese.

Müller, Wenzel. b. in Moravia, Sept. 26, 1767; d. at Baden, Austria, Aug. 3, 1835. German conductor and composer. He served as conductor at the Prague opera (1808–13) and at Vienna (1813 et seq.). His works include over 200 operettas, such as Das Sonnenfest der Braminen (1790), Kaspar der Fagottist (1791), and Die Schwestern von Prag (1794), and symphonies, suites, and masses.

Müller, Wilhelm. b. at Dessau, Germany, Oct. 7, 1794; d. there, Oct. 1, 1827. German lyric poet; father of Friedrich Max Müller. He fought in the War of Liberation (1813–14), traveled in Italy (1817–18), then returned to Dessau, where he became teacher of the classical languages at the Gymnasium (advanced secondary school), and librarian of the ducal library. His Lieder der Griechen (1821–24) were written during the Greek struggles for independence. Gedichte aus den hinterlassenen Papieren eines reisenden Waldhornisten dates from 1821–27, and Lyrische Spaziergänge from 1827. Some of his lyrics, especially those set to music by Franz Schubert (Müllerlieder, including the cycles Die schöne Müllerin and Winterreise) enjoy great popularity. His Vermischte Schriften were published at Leipzig in 1830 in five volumes. A new edition of his poems, with an introduction by his son Friedrich Max Müller, appeared at Leipzig in 1868.

Müller (mül'ėr; Anglicized, mil'ėr), Wilhelm Max. b. at Gliessenberg, Germany, May 15, 1862; drowned at Wildwood, N.J., July 12, 1919. American Orientalist. He served (1890 et seq.) as professor of ancient languages and Bible exegesis at the theological seminary of the Reformed Episcopal Church at Philadelphia. Author of Asien und Europa nach altägyptischen Denkmälern (Asia and Europe According to Ancient Egyptian Monuments, 1893), Egyptological Researches (1906–10), and Egyptian Mythology (1918).

Müller (mül'ėr), Wolfgang. [Called Müller von Königswinter.] b. at Königswinter, Germany, March 15, 1816; d. at Neuenahr, Germany, June 29, 1873. German lyric and epic poet. He wrote the idyl Marioram (1852). His poems appeared in Junge Lieder (1841), Balladen und Romanzen (1842), Gedichte (1847), and Oden der Gegenwart (1848). He was a delegate to the Frankfort Parliament in 1848.

Müller-Guttenbrunn (-gůt'ėn brůn), Adam. [Pseudonym, Ignotus; original surname, Müller.] b. at Guttenbrunn, Hungary, Oct. 22, 1852; d. at Vienna, Jan. 5, 1923. Austrian novelist and playwright. He was an editor of the Viennese Deutsche Zeitung (1873–88), and director of the Raimund Theater (1892–96) and Kaiser Jubiläum Theater (1898–1903), both at Vienna. His books include Götzendämmerung, ein Kulturbild aus dem heutigen Ungarn (1908), Die Glocken der Heimat (1910), Der grosse Schwabenzug (1913), Von Eugenius bis Josephus (1917), Meister Jakob und seine Kinder (1918), and Lenau, das Dichterherz der Zeit (1921).

Müller-Lyer (-lē'ėr), Franz. b. at Baden-Baden, Germany, Feb. 5, 1857; d. at Munich, Oct. 29, 1916. German sociologist and philosopher, remembered for his influence on the German monist school of philosophy. Author of Phasen der Kultur (1908), Der Sinn des Lebens und die Wissenschaft (1910), Formen der Ehe (1911), Phasen der Liebe (1913), and Soziologie der Leiden (1914).

Muller-Ury (mul'ėr.ū'ri), Adolfo. b. at Airolo, Switzerland, March 28, 1864; d. at New York, July 6, 1947. Swiss-American portrait painter. He painted portraits of four popes and many cardinals at Rome, and also did religious paintings while he was there. At New York, he painted President McKinley, General Grant, President Wilson, Senator Hanna, J. Pierpont Morgan, Cardinal Spellman, and James J. Hill, among others.

Müller von Itzehoe (mül'ėr fon it'sę.hō). See Müller, Johann Gottwerth.

Müller von Königswinter (fon kė'niks.vin.tėr). See Müller, Wolfgang.

Muller v. Oregon, 208 U.S. 412 (1908) (mul'ėr; or'ę.gon). Unanimous U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding the constitutionality of an Oregon law of 1903 fixing maximum work hours for women in certain types of industrial establishments. The court ruled that the statute was a reasonable exercise of state police power and did not violate the liberty of free contract guaranteed in the Fourteenth Amendment. The case is notable for its introduction of the "Brandeis brief," an exhaustive documentary review of statistical evidence submitted by Louis D. Brandeis, who appeared as counsel for the state of Oregon. Brandeis was appointed to the U.S. Supreme Court in 1916.

Müllheim (mül'hīm). Town in SW Germany, in the Land (state) of Baden, French Zone, formerly in the free state of Baden, situated on the S slopes of the Black Forest near the Swiss border, ab. 16 mi. SW of Freiburg im Breisgau. It is a resort, and has wine markets, and lumber, cigar, and machinery industries. 4,246 (1946).

Mulligan Letters (mul'i.gąn). Letters written (1864–76) by James G. Blaine, then speaker of the House of Representatives, to Warren Fisher, Jr., a Boston businessman, giving alleged evidence of Blaine's participation in a bond fraud. In 1876 James Mulligan, an employee of Fisher, took possession of the letters, which were subsequently obtained by Blaine, who read portions of them on the floor of Congress to vindicate himself from charges of fraud. In 1884, however, the Democrats managed to print the damaging letters in their entirety, thereby contributing in large part to Blaine's defeat in the presidential election held that year. Blaine's opponents asserted that the letters confirmed charges of corruption brought against him in connection with certain railroads (the Union Pacific and the Little Rock and Fort Smith).

Mullingar (mul.in.gär'). Market town in C Irish Republic, the county seat of County Westmeath, situated on the Royal Canal, ab. 46 mi. W of Dublin. 5,645 (1951).

Mullins (mul'inz). Town in E South Carolina, in Marion County: trading and shipping center for tobacco and cotton. 4,916 (1950).

Müllner (mül'nėr), Amadeus Gottfried Adolf. b. at Langendorf, near Weissenfels, Germany, Oct. 18, 1774; d. at Weissenfels, June 11, 1829. German dramatist. Among his plays are Der neunundzwanzigste Februar (1812) and Die Schuld (1816), two well-known "fate tragedies."

Mull of Galloway (mul; gal'ǫ.wā). See Galloway, Mull of.

Mull of Kintyre (kin.tīr'). See Kintyre, Mull of.

Mulock (mū'lok), Dinah Maria. See Craik, Dinah Maria.

Mulock, Sir William. b. at Bond Head, Ontario, Canada, 1844; d. in October, 1944. Canadian jurist. He was vice-chancellor (1881–1900) and chancellor (1924–44) of the University of Toronto. He served as a Liberal member (1882–1901) of the Canadian Parliament. He was postmaster general (1896–1905) and minister of labor (1900–05), chief justice (1905–23) of the exechequer division of the supreme court of Ontario, and chief justice (1923–36) of Ontario. He introduced empire penny postage, organized the department of labor as its first minister, and was responsible for the construction of the Canada-Australia imperial cable.

Mulready (mul.red'i, mul'red''i), William. b. at Ennis, County Clare, Ireland, April 1, 1786; d. at London, July 7, 1863. Irish landscape and figure painter. He was made royal academician in 1816. He painted The Carpenter's Shop (1809), The Barber's Shop (1811), Interior of an English Cottage (1828), Choosing the Wedding Gown (1846), and others. In 1840 he furnished the ornamental design for the outside of Rowland Hill's postal envelope, known as the Mulready envelope (it was actually a folded half-sheet of letter paper).

Mulroy Bay (mul.roi', mul'roi). Inlet of the Atlantic Ocean, in N Irish Republic, in County Donegal. Length, ab. 13 mi.

Multan (möl.tän'). [Also, Mooltan.] Division in the province of Punjab, Pakistan, on the Chenab River ab. 100 mi. NE of its junction with the Indus River: wool, cotton, and forest products. Area, ab. 21,841 sq. mi.; pop. 6,365,817 (1941).

Multan. [Also, Mooltan.] District in the province of Punjab, Pakistan, in the division of Multan. Capital, Multan; area, ab. 5,653 sq. mi.; pop. 1,484,333 (1941).

Multan. [Also, Mooltan.] Capital of the district of Multan, Punjab, Pakistan, situated near the Chenab River, ab. 100 mi. NE of its junction with the Indus River: road and rail junction, with an extensive trade, and cotton mills. Multan is an ancient city and was at various times part of Arab, Afghan, and Mogul domains. It was stormed by the Sikhs in 1818, and by the British in 1849. Pop. 190,122 (1951).

Multatuli (mul.tä.tö'lē). Pseudonym of Dekker, Eduard Douwes.

Muluya (mö.lö'yą). See Moulouya.

Mulvian Bridge (mul'vi.ąn). See Milvian Bridge.

Mulvius (mul'vi.us), Pons. See Milvian Bridge.

Mum (möm). See Bamum.

Mumford (mum'fọrd), Ethel. [Maiden name, Watts.] b. at New York, c1878; d. May 2, 1940. American writer. Author of Dupes (1901), Out of the Ashes (1913), and The Pageant of the Seven Seas (1925). Her plays included The Young Idea and Good Night Nurse, her scenarios Sick-a-bed and Easy Money.

Mumford, James Gregory. b. at Rochester, N.Y., Dec. 2, 1863; d. Oct. 18, 1914. American surgeon and author.

Mumford, Lewis. b. at Flushing, Long Island, N.Y., Oct. 19, 1895—. American writer. His major interest is in city and regional planning as a societal activity. Author of The Story of Utopias (1922), Sticks and Stones (1924), The Golden Day (1926), Herman Melville (1929), American Taste (1929), The Brown Decades (1931), Technics and Civilization (1934), The Culture of Cities (1938), Men Must Act (1939), Faith for Living (1940), Values for Survival (1946), Green Memories: The Story of Geddes (1947), and other books. He contributed to Civilization in the United States, by 30 Americans (1922), Whither Mankind (1928), and other symposiums, and was one of the editors of the American Caravan series.

Mumha (mö'vą). Irish name of Munster.

Mummius (mum'i.us), Lucius. [Surnamed Achaicus.] fl. in the middle of the 2nd century B.C. Roman consul in 146 B.C. He defeated the Achaean League and captured Corinth, completing the Roman conquest of Greece (146 B.C.). Mummius is noted for the barbarity with which he treated Corinth; all its inhabitants were killed, its art treasures were sent to Rome, and the city was burned to the ground.

Mun (mėn), Albert, Comte de. [Full name, Adrien Albert Marie, Comte de Mun.] b. at Lumigny, Seine-et-Marne, France, Feb. 22, 1841; d. at Bordeaux, France, Oct. 6, 1914. French Roman Catholic and royalist political leader, who combined rightist political activity with support of efforts to improve the condition of the lower classes. He was an advocate of "Social Catholicism," proposed adoption of a modernized corporative system, and urged legislation for the protection of labor. He was a royalist until the encyclical of 1892, and afterward supported the Boulanger movement.

Mun (mun), Thomas. b. 1571; d. 1641. English writer on economics, remembered chiefly as author of England's Treasure by Foreign Trade, which is regarded as a representative writing of the English mercantilists. He was engaged in the Mediterranean trade and served as a director (1615–41) of the East India Company. The company was embarrassed (1628) by the encroachment of the Dutch upon their trade and sought to invoke the protection of the House of Commons. In this effort, Mun was responsible for The Petition and Remonstrance of the Governor and Company of Merchants of London trading to the East Indies. Many of the arguments used here were quoted almost verbatim in a later book, in which he defended the East Indies trade by showing that it was beneficial to the "balance of trade" as a whole.

Muncaczy (mön'kä.chē), Mihály. See Munkácsy or Muncaczy, Mihály.

Munch (mungk), Andreas. b. at Christiania (now Oslo), Norway, Oct. 19, 1811; d. June 30, 1884. Norwegian poet and dramatist; cousin of Peder Andreas Munch. His first book was the collection of poems Ephemerer (Ephemera), which appeared in 1837. This was followed in the succeeding year by a long poem, Sangerinden (The Singer), and by his first drama, the prize-winning Kong Sverres Ungdom (King Sverre's Youth). In 1846 he gave up the editorship of the political journal Constitutionelle, which he had in the meantime assumed, to travel for a period of about a year in France, Italy, and Germany. After his return he published Digte gamle og nye (Poems Old and New) and the prose Billeder fra Nord og Syd (Pictures from North and South), both in 1848, followed by Nye Digte (New Poems) in 1850. The death of his wife in this last year gave rise to the collection of poems published in 1852 with the title Sorg og Trost (Grief and Consolation). He now turned his attention again to the drama, and wrote, between the years 1854 and 1856, Solomon de Caus, the historical drama En Aften paa Giske (An Evening at Giske), and the tragedy Lord William Russel. Subsequent works are Samlede Digte (Collected Poems, 1858), Nyere Digte (Recent Poems, 1861), the cycle Jesu Billeder (Pictures of Jesus, 1865), and Eftersommer (Autumn, 1867). He was the author also of other poems and dramas, besides translations from Sir Walter Scott and a version of Tennyson's Enoch Arden.

Münch (münsh), Charles. b. in Alsace, 1891—. American conductor. He studied at the Strasbourg Conservatory, where he also taught and gained his first experience as a conductor. For a time he conducted at Leipzig in Germany, and later held the baton over several French orchestras, including that of the Paris Conservatory. In 1947 he came to the U.S., to serve as guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Society through three seasons. In 1949 he succeeded Serge Koussevitzky as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Munch (mungk), Edvard. b. Dec. 12, 1863; d. in Norway, Jan. 24, 1944. Norwegian genre, landscape, and portrait painter and designer, a forerunner of German expressionism. He studied at Oslo, then went to Paris, Italy, and Germany. He was influenced by the impressionists and postimpressionists, especially Gauguin and Van Gogh. A list of his better-known works includes Puberty, Spring, The Sick Child, Ashes, The Cry, Death in the Room, Jealousy, Portrait of A. Strindberg, Summer Night, Life, and murals for the University of Oslo.

Münch (münch), Ernst Hermann Joseph von. b. at Rheinfelden, Switzerland, Oct. 25, 1798; d. there, June 9, 1841. Swiss historian.

Munch (mungk), Peder Andreas. b. at Christiania (now Oslo), Norway, Dec. 15, 1810; d. at Rome, May 25, 1863. Norwegian historian, philologist, and antiquary; cousin of Andreas Munch. He was one of the leaders in the Norwegian literary renascence and a student of the older Norse literature. He held that Icelandic literature was closely allied to Old Norse writing rather than being another aspect of Scandinavian literature in general. His chief work is Det Norske Folks Historie (History of the Norwegian People, 8 vols., 1852–63).

Munchausen (mun.chô'zen, mun'chou"zen; German, münch'hou.zen), Baron Karl Friedrich Hieronymus von. [German, Münchhausen.] b. at Bodenwerder, Hanover, Germany, May 11, 1720; d. there, Feb. 22, 1797. German cavalry officer, to whom many famous tall tales are attributed. Little is known of his life except that he served in the Russian army against the Turks, and that in his later days, living in retirement, he regaled his circle of friends with imaginatively elaborated narratives of his alleged adventures. One member of this circle, Rudolph Erich Raspe, was compelled to flee Germany, and took refuge in England, where, in the course of making a living by his pen, he put together a small book in English which was published in 1785 under the title Baron Munchausen's Narrative of his Marvellous Travels and Campaigns in Russia. A second edition appeared in 1786, a third within that same year, and thereafter numerous further editions. In 1786, also, the German poet Gottfried August Bürger published a German translation of the book, and it was for a time supposed that he was the author. Presently the process began by which, from edition to edition, stories from remote antiquity, medieval and Renaissance tales, and yarns suggested by events of the day were added to the Munchausen canon, so that the very name Munchausen came to symbolize the preposterous but amusing story, the grandiose and engaging lie.

Münch-Bellinghausen (münch'bel'ing.hou.zen), Baron Eligius Franz Joseph von. [Pseudonym, Friedrich Halm.] b. at Kraków, in what is now Poland, April 2, 1806; d. at Vienna, May 21, 1871. Austrian dramatist. His chief works are Griseldis (1834), Der Sohn der Wildnis (The Son of the Wilderness, 1843; played in English as Ingomar the Barbarian), Der Fechter von Ravenna (The Fencer of Ravenna, 1854), and Wildfeuer (1864).

München (mün'chen). German name of Munich.

München-Gladbach (-glät'bäch). City in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, ab. 15 mi. W of Düsseldorf. It was after 1929 temporarily united with the neighboring city of Rheydt, with which it forms a continuous urban area. It is the center of the Rhineland textile industry, and has cotton and woolen spinning and weaving mills and lace, cloth, and clothing industries. There are also metal, electrical equipment, machinery, and leather manufactures. There is an art museum, a natural history museum, and a theater. München-Gladbach was for decades the seat of the Volksverein für das Katholische Deutschland, the leading educational organization of German Catholics. The Minster, or Abbey Church of Saint Vitus, begun in 972, was completely destroyed in World War II; the museum buildings were destroyed or damaged, but the collections are intact. Heavy fighting occurred near here in the spring of 1945; the city was entered by Allied troops on March 2, 1945. Pop. 110,444 (1946), 124,879 (1950).

Münchengrätz (mün'chen.grets). German name of Mnichovo Hradiště.

Münchhausen (münch'hou.zen), Börries von. b. at Hildesheim, Germany, March 20, 1874—. German poet, best known for his ballads. Close to half a million copies of his books have been sold. His best-known titles are Juda (1900), Balladen (1900), Das Herz im Harnisch (1911), Das Balladenbuch (1924), and Das Liederbuch (1928). Baron Munchausen of tall-story fame was a member of the same family.

Münchhausen, Baron Karl Friedrich Hieronymus von. See Munchausen, Baron Karl Friedrich Hieronymus von.

Muncie (mun'si). City in E Indiana, county seat of Delaware County, ab. 51 mi. NE of Indianapolis: manufactures of glass, fruit jars, batteries, auto parts, machinery, metal products, and electrical equipment. It is the subject of Robert S. and Helen M. Lynd's sociological studies, Middletown (1929) and Middletown in Transition (1937). It is the seat of a state teachers college. 58,479 (1950).

Muncker (mung'kėr), Franz. b. 1855; d. 1926. German historian of literature. He published Forschungen zur neueren Literaturgeschichte (1896 et seq.), Klopstock, Geschichte seines Lebens und seiner Schriften (1888), and Richard Wagner (1891). He prepared a critical edition of Lessing's Sämtliche Werke in 22 volumes (1886 et seq.), which is, however, technically considered a revision (third issue) of Lachmann's edition of 1838.

Muncy (mun'si). Borough in N central Pennsylvania, in Lycoming County, on the west branch of the Susquehanna River: manufactures of machinery and textiles. It was platted in 1797. Pop. 2,756 (1950).

Munda (mun'da). In ancient geography, a town in S Spain, of undetermined location. It is noted for the victory gained (45 B.C.) there by Julius Caesar over the sons of Pompey.

Munda (mun'da). Family of languages spoken by about four million people in India, mainly primitive tribesmen of the Madhya Pradesh, Bihar, and Orissa. These languages may be related to the Mon-Khmer and other stocks to the east of India, but the relationship has not been definitely established. Some of the languages included in the Munda family are Birhor, Bhumij, Ho, Mundari, Santali, and Kurku.

Mundaka Upanishad (mön'da.ka ö.pan'i.shad). One of the Upanishads added to the Atharva-Veda. It contains three short chapters called Mundakas, which are said by native exegetes to take their name from Sanskrit munda, "shorn," because one who comprehends their doctrine is shorn or liberated from all error. It distinguishes between the higher science, or the esoteric wisdom of the Upanishad, and the lower, or the knowledge of the Vedas. It has been translated by Friedrich Max Müller (Sacred Books of the East, XV, 27).

Munday (mun'dā), Anthony. [Also, Monday.] b. at London, 1553; d. there, in August, 1633. Elizabethan writer. He was apprenticed to John Allde, stationer, in 1576. He was made poet laureate of the City of London, and was the author of pastoral poems, journalistic tracts and pamphlets, and translations, the latter including Amadis de Gaule. He compiled The Mirror of Mutabilitie, the principal part of the Mirror of Magistrates, selected out of the Sacred Scripture, in 1597. His English Romayne Life (1582) is an account of his experiences among Roman Catholic refugees in France and Italy. In 1586 he published Sweet Sobs and Amorous Complaints of Shepherds and Nymphs, and in 1618 an enlarged edition of Stow's Survey of London. Munday was early connected with the Elizabethan stage, perhaps even before his apprenticeship. He wrote at least 18 plays in collaboration with other dramatists working for Philip Henslowe; only four are extant, however, two on the Robin Hood theme (The Downfall of Robert Earl of Huntingdon, afterwards called Robin Hood of merry Sherwood, 1599, and The Death of Robert Earl of Huntingdon, 1601), one on the subject of Sir John Oldcastle occasionally attributed to Shakespeare but probably by Munday, Michael Drayton, and others (First Part of the History of the Life of Sir John Oldcastle, 1599), and John a Kent and John a Cumber (1595). Munday was a rival of Thomas Middleton and Ben Jonson, the latter caricaturing him as Antonio Balladino in The Case is Altered. He wrote pageants for London from 1605 to 1616, and probably as early as 1592.

Mundé (mun.dā'), Paul Fortunatus. b. at Dresden, Germany, Sept. 7, 1846; d. at New York, Feb. 7, 1902. American gynecologist. He was editor (1874–92) of the American Journal of Obstetrics and served as professor of gynecology at the New York Polyclinic.

Mundelein (mun'de.līn). Village in NE Illinois, in Lake County, ab. 35 mi. NW of downtown Chicago. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population more than doubled. 1,328 (1940), 3,189 (1950).

Mundelein, George William. b. at New York, July 2, 1872; d. at Mundelein, Ill., Oct. 2, 1939. American Roman Catholic clergyman, elevated (March 24, 1924) to the cardinalate. He was chancellor (1897–1909) of the diocese and auxiliary bishop (1909–15) of Brooklyn, N.Y. He served as archbishop (1915 et seq.) of Chicago.

Mundella (mun.del'a), Anthony John. b. at Leicester, England, 1825; d. at London, July 21, 1897. English politician. He was president of the board of trade in 1886, and again in 1892.

Münden (mün'den). [Also, Hannoversch-Münden.] Town in NW Germany, in the Land (state) of Lower Saxony, British Zone, formerly in the province of Hanover, Prussia, situated at the junction of the Fulda and Werra rivers, ab. 10 mi. NE of Kassel: a river port, with lumber mills, and furniture, paper, tobacco, and rubber industries. There are churches and houses of the 15th, 16th, and 17th centuries. There is a medieval castle, built in the 11th century and subsequently altered, formerly the residence of the dukes of Brunswick-Lüneburg. Münden suffered no damage during World War II. 21,114 (1950).

Munden (mun'den), Joseph Shepherd. b. at London, 1758; d. there, Feb. 6, 1832. English actor. He joined a company of strolling players, making his first appearance at London in 1790. His success was complete. Charles Lamb celebrated him, in the Essays of Elia, as the king of broad comedy. He left the stage May 31, 1824.

Mundequetes (mön.dā.kā'tās). See Teke.

Mundlah (mund'lä). See Mandla.

Mundt (münt), Klara. [Pseudonym, Luise Mühlbach; maiden name, Müller.] b. at Neubrandenburg, Germany, Jan. 2, 1814; d. at Berlin, Sept. 26, 1873. German novelist; wife (1839 et seq.) of Theodor Mundt. She wrote Friedrich der Grosse und sein Hof (Frederick the Great and his Court, 1853), and some 250 other romances on Prussian, Austrian, and French history.

Mundt, Theodor. b. at Potsdam, Germany, Sept. 19, 1808; d. at Berlin, May 30, 1861. German novelist and critic, one of the literary group known as Junges Deutschland (Young Germany). He became professor of literature and history at Breslau in 1848, and professor and librarian at the University of Berlin in 1850. Besides works of fiction, he wrote Kunst der deutschen Prosa (1837), Geschichte der Litteratur der Gegenwart (1842), and others. His most famous work, Madonna (1835), a novel on women's emancipation, was banned.

Mundurucus (mön''dö.rö.kös'). Tribe of South American Indians of Brazil, occupying a region S of the Amazon on the lower Tapajoz river, and ranging westward to the Madeira. Their language, called Mundurucu, is classified as forming a group of languages and dialects in the Tapajoz division of the South Amazon branch of the Tupí subfamily in the widespread Tupí-Guaraní family of South American Indian languages.

Mundy (mun'di), Talbot Chetwynd. b. at London, April 23, 1879; d. at Bradenton Beach, Fla., Aug. 5, 1940. American writer of adventure stories. He traveled widely, working his way from place to place by ship, living in India, Australia, and Africa, and arriving (1911) in America. Author of Rung Ho! (1914), Winds of the World (1915), King—of the Khyber Rifles (1916), Om (1923), The Nine Unknown (1924), Queen Cleopatra (1929), Jimgrim (1931), Tros of Samothrace (1934), The Purple Pirate (1935), The Thunder Dragon Gate (1936), East and West (1937), and Old Ugly-face (1939).

Munford (mun'ford), Robert. b. at "Whitehall," Prince George County, Va.; d. 1784. American Revolutionary soldier, legislator, and playwright; father of William Munford. During the American Revolution, from which he emerged as a major, he performed valuable service as a recruiter of troops. Author of A Collection of Plays and Poems (1798), which includes such plays as The Candidates and The Patriots. The latter was originally published in 1776.

Munford, William. b. in Mecklenburg County, Va., Aug. 15, 1775; d. June 21, 1825. American classical scholar, poet, court reporter, and legislator; son of Robert Munford. Together with William W. Hening, he was reporter (1808–11) of the Virginia supreme court of appeals and from 1811 until 1821 carried on this work independently. A classicist of some note, he translated the Iliad into blank verse, was the author of Poems and Compositions in Prose on Several Occasions (1798), and wrote Almoran and Hamlet, a tragedy in five acts.

Mungir (mung.gir'). See Monghyr.

Mungo (mung'gō), Saint. See Saint Kentigern.

Munhall (mun'hôl). Borough in SW Pennsylvania, in Allegheny County, on the Monongahela River just SE of Pittsburgh: manufactures steel. It was the site of the first open-hearth furnace in the U.S. 16,437 (1950).

Muni (mū'ni), Paul. [Original surname, Weisenfreund.] b. at Lemberg (Lvov), then part of Austria, Sept. 22, 1895—. American actor. He was a member of a stock company (1918–25) in the Yiddish Art Theatre, New York, played in motion pictures (1928–30), and alternated (1932–35) between stage and motion pictures, before contracting (1935 et seq.) to Warner Brothers Pictures. He starred in such films as Scarface, I am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang, The Good Earth, The Life of Émile Zola, The Woman I Love, We Are Not Alone, and Angel on My Shoulder. He received a Motion Picture Academy Award (1936) for his performance in The Life of Louis Pasteur.

Munich (mū'nik). [German, München.] City in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Bavaria, American Zone, the capital of Bavaria and of the Regierungsbezirk (government district) of Upper Bavaria, situated on a plain N of the Alps on both banks of the Isar River. It is an important traffic center, the German gateway to Italy as well as to the Danube countries. It has many hotels, restaurants, beer gardens, and other tourist facilities, and has a considerable trade in art objects and antiques. Munich has become increasingly a focal point for the German book trade, and is the seat of numerous publishing houses. There are a number of banking and insurance institutions. Among Munich's industrial establishments are breweries, foodstuff industries, machine and metal industries (including large locomotive and railroad equipment plants), railroad repair shops, and factories producing optical, electrical, musical, and precision instruments, photographic materials, furniture, clothing, paper goods, ceramics, and chemicals. The population decreased in the period 1939–46 by 10.5 percent. 751,967 (1946), 831,937 (1950).

Culture and Architecture. Munich is the seat of government agencies, of the Roman Catholic archbishopric of Munich-Freising, of the Lutheran Landeskirchenrat of Bavaria and a Lutheran bishopric, and of numerous cultural and educational institutions. The university, moved here from Landshut in 1826, was prior to World War II the second largest German university, famous for its medical, chemical, geographical, juridical, and historical research. Munich has important libraries, particularly the Bavarian state library, with more than two million volumes, incunabula, and manuscripts, the second largest library in Germany; other libraries include the specialized libraries of technical literature in the German Museum and of alpine literature in the Library of the Alpenverein. Munich is second only to Berlin as a German museum-town: the Alte Pinakothek contains paintings by old German, Dutch, Flemish, Italian, and Spanish masters; the Neue Pinakothek and the Schack Gallery paintings of the Munich schools of the 18th and 19th centuries; the Neue Staatsgallerie paintings of the 20th century; the Glyptothek sculpture; the Deutsches Museum a unique and comprehensive presentation of the scientific and technical development of civilization; the National Museum, an equally unique exhibition of arts and crafts in historical sequence. Before World War II Munich was an architecturally distinguished city, with many parks and public monuments, particularly of the 18th, 19th, and 20th centuries. Medieval monuments were rare; the most important one of them is the Dom (cathedral), also called the Frauenkirche (Church of Our Lady), a huge structure, still standing, though damaged, erected in the brick-Gothic style in the 15th century, with Renaissance cupolas of the 16th century; others, such as the Kreuzkirche, the Church of Saint Peter, and the Old Rathaus (town hall), were severely damaged or destroyed in World War II. A list of buildings severely damaged or totally destroyed includes the former Wittelsbach residence, with wings in the Gothic, Renaissance, rococo, and classical styles and valuable interior decorations and collections; the Festsaalbau and the Königsbau; the National Theater; the rococo residence theater by Cuvilliés; the baroque Church of the Theatines, erected (1663–75) by an Italian architect; the churches of Saint Anna and of Saint Johann Nepomuk, outstanding examples of the Bavarian rococo; the 19th-century Basilica of Saint Boniface; the buildings along the Ludwig and Brienner streets, erected for King Louis I in the first half of the 19th century in the Italian Renaissance and neoclassical styles, including the Victory and Propyläen gates; the New Rathaus, a neo-Gothic building of the 20th century; and a number of palaces of the Bavarian aristocracy, including the archiepiscopal palace, chiefly of the 18th and 19th centuries. Saint Michael's Church (1583–88), one of the most important works of the early baroque in Germany, the large 20th-century complex of the German Museum, and Nymphenburg Castle (18th century) were only slightly damaged.

History. Munich was founded by Henry the Lion in 1158 as a station on the salt road between Salzburg and Augsburg; it became a Wittelsbach residence in 1255, and was the residence of Emperor Louis IV (Louis the Bavarian) (1314–47). The development of Munich as a center of the arts started under Duke Albert V (1550–79) and under Prince-Elector Maximilian I in the 17th century; the nucleus of the great Munich collections was assembled at that time. Gustavus Adolphus occupied Munich, which he considered the capital of the Roman Catholic counterreformation in Germany, in 1632, and the Austrians occupied it in the War of the Spanish Succession in the beginning of the 18th century, but building activity continued throughout these periods. In the Napoleonic epoch Munich became the capital of the new kingdom of Bavaria, which included territories in Swabia, Franconia, and the Rhenish Palatinate. Under King Louis I (1825–48), it became a European art center; numerous monuments were erected, leading architects, artists, and scientists invited, and the Romantic Movement fostered. The development was continued under King Maximilian II and intensified in the reign of King Louis II, who was the equally ardent sponsor of Richard Wagner's music and of the German Unity movement. In the last quarter of the 19th and the first quarter of the 20th century Munich became a leader in the theatrical and musical development of Germany (the composer Richard Strauss was born here). On Nov. 8–9, 1918, Kurt Eisner here established the democratic republic which was superseded from April 7–May 2, 1919, by a communist republic; the government was brought back by Bavarian, Prussian, and Württemberg army units and volunteers organized in Freikorps; nationalistic as well as states' rights feeling assumed major proportions and culminated in the Hitler Putsch of Nov. 8–9, 1923. Munich was the headquarters of the early Nazi movement, and the site of the Munich Conference (Sept. 29, 1938) between Hitler, Mussolini, Chamberlain, and Daladier, leading to the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia. The city was subjected to numerous air raids during World War II, causing widespread damage; the Allied troops entered on April 30, 1945. After the war, many Slavic and Jewish D.P.'s were temporarily settled in camps in the neighborhood of Munich. Munich is the seat of the American High Commissioner for Bavaria.

Munich (mū'nik), University of. Educational institution founded at Ingolstadt in 1472, and removed to Landshut in 1802 and to Munich in 1826. It has faculties of law, theology, medicine, political science, philosophy, natural sciences, and veterinary science, and a library of some 650,000 volumes.

Munich Conference. Four-power meeting (Sept. 29–30, 1938) between Hitler (Germany), Chamberlain (Great Britain), Daladier (France), and Mussolini (Italy), which momentarily averted the threat of a European war by capitulation to German demands on Czechoslovakia. Accompanied by an Anglo-German declaration renouncing war as a means of settling their differences, the agreement accepted Hitler's military occupation of the Sudeten area of Czechoslovakia, with a provision that the final line should be drawn by a commission with membership from the four conferring states and Czechoslovakia. Some provisions for population, raw material, and foodstuff removals from occupied areas were included. The commission permitted the Germans to take almost all the territory which Germany had demanded, and Hitler and Mussolini avoided an international guarantee for Czechoslovakia on the grounds that the minority questions in Teschen and Ruthenia had not yet been resolved. The conference marked the high-water mark of the so-called Period of Appeasement. The U.S.S.R. was excluded from participation in the diplomatic settlement.

Munising (mū'ni.sing). City in the N part of the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, on Lake Superior, county seat of Alger County: manufactures of paper and wood products. 4,339 (1950).

Munk (mungk), Kaj. [Original name, Kaj Harald Leininger Peterson, changed 1916.] b. at Maribo, Denmark, Jan. 13, 1898; d. near Silkeborg, Denmark, Jan. 4, 1944. Danish dramatist and clergyman, noted for his plays of violent action, reflecting a desire to portray the spirit of his times, as in Ordet (The Word, 1932), Han sidder ved Smeltediglen (He Sits by the Melting Pot, 1938), and Niels Ebbesen (1943). Though he had been inclined to admire strong personalities in his earlier years, he turned against Nazism later, and became a symbol of resistance when he was murdered by a Nazi gang in 1944.

Munk, Salomon. b. at Glogau (Głogów), in Silesia, May 14, 1805; d. Feb. 6, 1867. French Orientalist, appointed (though blind) professor of Oriental languages at the Collège de France in 1865. He translated from Maimonides the More Nebuchim under the title Le Guide des égarés (1856–66), and published Palestine (1845).

Munkács (mön'käch). Hungarian name of Mukachevo.

Munkácsy or Muncaczy (mön'kä.chē), Mihály. [Original name, Michael Lieb.] b. at Munkács (Mukachevo), then part of Hungary, Feb. 20, 1844; d. at Endenich, near Bonn, Germany, May 1, 1900. Hungarian historical and genre painter. He went to Paris in 1872, and a few years later began to paint Parisian scenes. Here he took the medal of honor in 1878, and later won medals at Vienna, Munich, Berlin, and elsewhere. He was ennobled by the Austrian government. He was elected to the Munich Academy in 1881, and visited New York in 1886. Among his works are Milton dictating "Paradise Lost" to his Daughters (1878), Christ before Pilate (1881), Christ on Calvary (1884), and Last Moments of Mozart (1885).

Munn (mun), Charles Clark. b. at Southington, Conn., May 11, 1848; d. July 8, 1917. American writer, author of Uncle Terry—a Story of the Maine Coast (1900), Rockhaven (1902), Boyhood Days on the Farm (1907), Myrtle Baldwin (1908), The Castle Builders (1910), The Heart of Uncle Terry (1915), and Camp Castaway (1916).

Munn, Orson Desaix. b. at Monson, Hampden County, Mass., June 11, 1824; d. at New York, Feb. 28, 1907. American publisher and editor, noted for his long connection (1846–1907) with the Scientific American. In 1846 he joined in the formation of the Munn Company at New York, which took over the publication of the Scientific American, established (1845) by Rufus Porter. Among the outgrowths of this periodical was a patent department for advising inventors and securing patents for them.

Münnich (mün'ich), Count Burkhard Christoph von. b. in Oldenburg, Germany, in May, 1683; d. at St. Petersburg, Oct. 27, 1767. Russian general and politician, distinguished as a commander against the Turks. He was prime minister (1740–41).

Munnings (mun'ingz), Sir Alfred J. b. at Mendham, England, Oct. 8, 1878—. English painter, president of the Royal Academy. He began to exhibit at the Royal Academy in 1898; in 1925 he became a member. His principal works include Derby Day (Birmingham), Gypsy Life (Aberdeen), and The Gravel Pit.

Muñoz (mö.nyōth'), Aegidius (or Gil Sánchez). Original name of the antipope Clement VIII.

Muñoz, Fernando. [Title, Duke of Rianzares.] b. at Tarancón, Spain, 1810; d. near Le Havre, France, 1873. Spanish soldier who married Queen Maria Christina of Spain secretly in 1833, and openly in 1844.

Muñoz, Juan Bautista. b. near Valencia, Spain, 1745; d. at Madrid, 1799. Spanish historian.

Muñoz-Marín (mö.nyōs'mä.rēn'), Luis. b. at San Juan, Puerto Rico, Feb. 18, 1898—. Puerto Rican editor and politician. He edited (1918–19) La Revista de las Indias, a journal striving for Pan-American unity, which is a goal towards which he has constantly worked. He was editor (1926–28, 1932 et seq.) of La Democracia (now Diario de Puerto Rico), a daily newspaper. He served (1932 et seq.) in the Puerto Rican senate, which he presided over (1940 et seq.). In 1949 he became the first elected governor of Puerto Rico.

Munro (mun.rō'), Charles Kirkpatrick. [Original name, Charles Walden Kirkpatrick MacMullan.] b. at Pertrude, County Antrim, Ireland, Feb. 17, 1889—. British playwright and essayist. His plays include Wanderers (1915), At Mrs. Beam's (1922), The Rumour (1923), Storm (1924), Mr. Eno (1928), Veronica (1930), Bluestone Quarry (1931), and Coronation Time at Mrs. Beam's (1937). He is author also of the essay collections The True Woman (1931) and Watching a Play (1933).

Munro, Dana Carleton. b. at Briston, R.I., June 7, 1866; d. at New York, Jan. 13, 1933. American historian. He became instructor (1893) and then assistant professor of medieval history at the University of Pennsylvania, and served (1902–15) as professor of European history at the University of Wisconsin. He was professor of medieval history (1915–33) at Princeton University. He was one of the editors of Translations and Reprints from the Original Sources of European History (1895–99), edited A Guide to the Study of Medieval History (1931), by L. J. Paetow, and wrote The Middle Ages (1902 and later editions).

Munro, Dana Gardner. b. at Providence, R.I., July 18, 1892—. American diplomat and historian; son of Dana Carleton Munro. He served (1921–25) in the Latin-American division, U.S. Department of State, and was chief (1929–30) of the division of Latin-American affairs, U.S. Department of State, U.S. minister (1930–32) to Haiti, and professor (1932 et seq.) of Latin-American history and affairs at Princeton.

Munro, Sir Hector. b. 1726; d. Dec. 27, 1805. English military commander in India.

Munro, Hector Hugh. [Pseudonym, Saki.] b. at Akyab, Burma, Dec. 18, 1870; killed in France, Nov. 13, 1916. British humorist and satirist. His only serious work, and the only one published under his own name, was The Rise of the Russian Empire (1900). He wrote whimsical political articles for the Westminster Gazette which were collected and published as The Westminster Alice (1902). His initial collection of short stories, which also appeared in the same journal, was published as Reginald (1904). He served (1902–08) as the Morning Post correspondent in Russia, Paris, and the Balkans. At the outbreak of World War I he enlisted in the 22nd Royal Fusiliers and was killed in action at Beaumont-Hamel. Author of novels and collections of short stories including Reginald in Russia (1910), The Chronicles of Clovis (1911), The Unbearable Bassington (1912), When William Came (1913), Beasts and Super-Beasts (1914), The Toys of Peace and Other Papers (1919), and The Square Egg and Other Sketches (1924). His writing, which at times touches fantasy, is often bitterly sarcastic although it never loses its urbanity.

Munro, Henry. See Monro or Monroe or Munro, Henry.

Munro, Hugh Andrew Johnstone. b. at Elgin, Scotland, Oct. 19, 1819; d. at Rome, March 30, 1885. Scottish classical scholar. He edited Lucretius (1864) and Horace (1869), and wrote Greek and Latin verse.

Munro, Robert. See also Monro or Munro, Robert.

Munro, Wilfred Harold. b. at Bristol, R.I., Aug. 20, 1849; d. Aug. 9, 1934. American historian. He was associate professor (1891–99) and professor (1899–1911) of European history at Brown University. Author of Tales of an Old Seaport (1917), Among the Mormons in the Days of Brigham Young (1927), and other works, especially on the history of Rhode Island.

Munro, William Bennett. b. at Almonte, Ontario, Canada, Jan. 5, 1875—. Canadian political scientist. He was a member of the faculty (1904–30) at Harvard University. Author of Canada and British North America (1905), The Government of European Cities (1909), Municipal Government and Administration (2 vols., 1923), Personality in Politics (1924), The Governments of Europe (1925), The Invisible Government (1928), and American Influence on Canadian Government (1929).

Munroe (mun.rō'), Charles Edward. b. at Cambridge, Mass., May 24, 1849; d. at Forest Glen, Md., Dec. 7, 1938. American chemist, explosives expert, and inventor of a smokeless powder. He was professor (1892–1918) of chemistry, dean (1892–98) of the Corcoran Scientific School, and dean (1893–1918) of graduate studies at George Washington University. He served as chief chemist (1919–33) on explosives for the U.S. Bureau of Mines.

Munsell (mun.sel'), Joel. b. at Northfield, Mass., April 14, 1808; d. at Albany, N.Y., Jan. 15, 1880. American printer and antiquary. He settled (1827) at Albany, where he subsequently became a publisher of periodicals and newspapers. Some of his outstanding compilations as an antiquary include Outline of the History of Printing (1839), Annals of Albany (10 vols., 1850–59) and Collections on the History of Albany (4 vols., 1865–71).

Munsey (mun'si), Frank Andrew. b. at Mercer, Me., Aug. 21, 1854; d. at New York, Dec. 22, 1925. American newspaper and magazine publisher. With little formal schooling, he left his position as the manager of the Western Union Telegraph office at Augusta, Me., to go (1882) to New York, where he established himself as a one-man publishing concern. His first magazine was the Golden Argosy (1882). While his first ten years in business were not profitable, his firm (the Munsey Publishing House) earned more than 8,250,000 dollars in net profits between 1894 and 1907. Among other magazines he published were the Quaker, the Scrap Book, the Puritan, Peterson's Magazine, Godey's Magazine, the All-Story Magazine, and the Railroad Man's Magazine. Munsey followed a policy of combining magazines to step up circulation for his best-sellers, and later transferred this method to the newspaper field, where his mergers or purchases were responsible for the disappearance of such dailies as the Globe, the Express, the Mail, and the Press (all of New York), the Philadelphia Times, and the Baltimore Star, in addition to many others. The papers owned by him at his death were the New York Sun and the New York Evening Telegram. Of his magazines, the most successful was Munsey's (1889–1929). Munsey also held other property interests, and left an estate of almost 20 million dollars. His chief claim to remembrance is as a consolidator and combiner of newspapers. His "killing" of dailies reflected a growing trend in U.S. newspaper publishing, and earned for him the once-common journalists' expression, "Let Munsey kill it."

Munshi (mön'shē). See Tiv.

Munson (mun'sọn), Gorham B. b. at Amityville, N.Y., May 26, 1896—. American editor and critic. He was founder and editor (1922 et seq.) of the "little review" Secession, became (1927) a member of the faculty of the New School for Social Research (New York), and was editor (1933–39) of New Democracy. He is the author of Waldo Frank: A Study (1923), Robert Frost (1927), Destinations (1928), Style and Form in American Prose (1929), The Dilemma of the Liberated (1930), and Twelve Decisive Battles of the Mind (1941).

Munson, James Eugene. b. at Paris, N.Y., May 12, 1835; d. 1906. American stenographer, inventor of the "Munson System" of shorthand. He invented also a process and machines for the automatic justification and setting of type and a telegraphically operated typewriter.

Munson, Walter David. b. at Cheshire, Conn., Feb. 18, 1843; d. April 24, 1908. American shipowner, organizer of the Munson line. After serving in the Civil War, he established (1873) a regular freight service between Havana and New York which, with the subsequent addition of passenger vessels, became (1899) the Munson Steamship Line, of which he was president and a director, and which served ports throughout the Caribbean area. At his death the line operated 60 steamships.

Munster (mün.ster). [German, Münster (mün'stėr).] Town in E France, in the department of Haut-Rhin, situated on the Fecht River ab. 46 mi. SW of Strasbourg. It has cotton-spinning, cotton-weaving, and cheese-making industries, and is a center for excursions into the Vosges Mountains. It suffered damage in World War I. 5,064 (1946).

Münster (mün'stėr). Former bishopric of Westphalia, Germany, and principality of the Holy Roman Empire. It was created in the Middle Ages. The archbishops of Cologne became bishops of Münster in 1719. The bishopric was secularized in 1803, and the territories divided between Prussia and various minor states. They were divided between Prussia and Hanover by the Vienna Congress in 1814–15.

Münster. [Also, Münster in Westfalen (in vest-fä'lẹn).] City in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly the capital of the province of Westphalia, Prussia, ab. 78 mi. NE of Cologne. It has a harbor on the Dortmund-Ems Canal, and is the marketing center of a fertile agricultural district. It has brewing, distilling, flour-milling, sugar-refining, tobacco, furniture, machinery, and textile industries. Münster is the seat of a university, founded in 1773, closed in 1818, and reopened in 1902. Most of the university buildings and books were destroyed in World War II. Münster was once a beautiful city, with important public monuments and private buildings of the medieval as well as of the baroque period. All these buildings were either completely destroyed or severely damaged. The city became a member of the Hanseatic League in the 13th century and many struggles between town and bishopric, between guilds and patricians, ensued. Peace negotiations to end the Thirty Years' War were carried on here between 1645 and 1648; the peace of Münster was signed on May 16, 1648. The city and territory passed to Prussia in 1803 and were returned to Prussia in 1815. The very heavy bombing of March 25, 1945, destroyed almost the entire old part of the city, and Allied troops marched in on April 3, 1945. The population decreased in the period 1939–46 by 38.8 percent. 86,366 (1946), 118,496 (1950).

Munster (mun'stėr). Town in NW Indiana, in Lake County, near Hammond and the Illinois line. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population more than doubled. 1,751 (1940), 4,753 (1950).

Munster. [Irish, Mumha.] Southernmost of the four great historic provincial divisions of Ireland, now included wholly within the Irish Republic. It is bounded on the N by Connacht province, on the NE by Leinster province, on the SE by St. George's Channel, and on the S and W by the Atlantic Ocean. Munster comprises six counties: Clare, Cork, Kerry, Limerick, Tipperary, and Waterford. It was an early medieval kingdom, divided into the kingdoms of Desmond (southern Munster) and Thomond (northern Munster). The Munster kings lasted until the 12th century; the kings of Desmond and Thomond existed into the 16th century. Its ancient capital was Cashel. Area, ab. 9,317 sq. mi.; pop. 898,861 (1951).

Münster (mün'stėr). German name of Moutier, Switzerland.

Münster, Georg Herbert, Count zu und Prince zu Derneburg. b. at London, Dec. 23, 1820; d. at Hanover, Germany, March 28, 1902. German diplomat. He was ambassador at Paris during the period of the Dreyfus affair, but seems to have been completely ignorant of the part his military attaché (in collaboration with Marie Charles Ferdinand Walsin Esterhazy) played in it.

Münster, Sebastian. b. at Ingelheim, Germany, 1489; d. at Basel, Switzerland, May 23, 1552. German geographer, Orientalist, and mathematician, professor of Hebrew at Basel. He published, among other works, Cosmographia universalis (1544), the first description in detail of the world written in German, in which over 100 scholars collaborated.

Münster am Stein (äm shtīn). [Also, Bad Münster am Stein.] Village in W Germany, in the Land (state) of Rhineland-Palatinate, French Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, situated on the Nahe River ab. 32 mi. SW of Mainz: health resort, with radioactive saline springs. There is a medieval castle. 1,484 (1946).

Münsterberg (mün'stėr.berk). German name of Ziębice.

Münsterberg, Hugo. b. at Danzig, June 1, 1863; d. at Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 16, 1916. German psychologist. He became (1892) professor at Harvard University. The laboratory for experimental psychology at Harvard was built under his direction. Among his publications are Psychology and Life (1899), Grundzüge der Psychologie (1900), American Traits (1902), The Americans (1904), Eternal Life (1905), Principles of Art Education (1905), Science and Idealism (1906), On the Witness Stand (1908), Psychotherapy (1909), The Eternal Values (1909), and Arbeit und Ermüdung (1917).

Münstertal (mün'stėr.täl). [Romansh, Val Müstair.] Valley in SE Switzerland, in the extreme E part of the canton of Graubünden, S of the Lower Engadine. Length, ab. 11 mi.

Muntafiq (mün'tä.fik). Liwa (province) in S Iraq, a flat semidesert area irrigated by waters from the Euphrates River. Wheat, tobacco, sheep, goats, figs, dates, and other fruits are the main crops. Capital, Nasiriya; area, 5,463 sq. mi.; pop. 369,806 (1947).

Muntenia (mun.tē'ni.a; Rumanian, mön.tā'nyä). [Also, Greater Walachia.] Province in S Rumania, bounded by Bulgaria on the S and by the provinces of Oltenia on the W, Dobruja on the E, and Moldavia on the N. Area, ab. 20,762 sq. mi.; pop. 4,991,289 (1948).

Münter (mün'ter), Balthasar. b. at Lübeck, Germany, March 24, 1735; d. at Copenhagen, Oct. 5, 1793. German hymn writer and pulpit orator.

Münter, Friedrich Christian Karl Heinrich. b. at Gotha, Germany, Oct. 14, 1761; d. at Copenhagen, April 9, 1830. German-Danish ecclesiastical historian and archaeologist.

Munthe (mün'tę), Axel (Martin Fredrik). b. at Oskarshamn, Sweden, Oct. 31, 1857; d. in the Royal Castle at Stockholm, Feb. 11, 1949. Swedish writer and physician. He established private practice at Paris (1881) and Rome (1890), and became physician in ordinary of the queen of Sweden. He is best known for his The Story of San Michele (1929). Author also of Från Napoli (1885), Små skisser (1888), Vagaries (1898), Bref och skisser (1909), Red Cross and Iron Cross (1916), and En gammal bok om människor och djur (1931).

Munthe, Gerhard Peter Frants Wilhelm. b. July 19, 1849; d. Jan. 15, 1929. Norwegian landscape painter, decorator, and illustrator. Among his works are The Fjord of Naagevandet, Summer Day, Norwegian Landscape, and Hay Harvest at Vik.

Münzer (mün'tsėr), Thomas. b. at Stolberg in the Harz, Germany, c1490; executed at Mühlhausen, Saxony, Germany, May 30, 1525. German religious enthusiast. He studied at Halle, possibly also at Wittenberg, and in 1520 became, on the recommendation of Martin Luther, an evangelical preacher at Zwickau, where, in connection with Nicholas Storch and others, he organized the Anabaptist movement. He was expelled in 1521, and, after a visit to Bohemia and various German cities, became a preacher at Allstedt in 1523. Expelled in 1524 through the influence of Luther, of whom he was now a determined opponent, he became in the following year a preacher in the free city of Mühlhausen in Thuringia. He made himself master of the city, deposed the city council, and introduced a democratic communistic government. The peasant insurrection which broke out in Swabia and Franconia (1525) having reached Thuringia, he placed himself at the head of a band of 8,000 Anabaptists and insurgent peasants, and inaugurated a war of extermination against the nobility and the clergy. He was defeated by Philip, Landgrave of Hesse, and George, Duke of Saxony, at Frankenhausen on May 15, 1525, was captured while fleeing, and was tried and executed.

Munzinger (mün'tsing.ėr), Werner. b. at Olten, Switzerland, April 21, 1832; d. in Ethiopia, Nov. 16, 1875. Swiss explorer and linguist in Africa. He lived (1852–53) in Egypt, carried on mercantile affairs there, conducted (1854–55) a trading expedition to the Red Sea, lived (1855–56) among the Bogos, and published (1859) Sitten und Recht der Bogos. He was with Theodor von Heuglin's expedition in 1861, and arrived (1862) at Khartoum. As chief, in Heuglin's place, he explored Kordofan, and returned to Europe. He published Ostafrikanische Studien (1864), Die deutsche Expedition in Ostafrika (1865), and Vocabulaire de la langue Tigré (1865). He became (1865) British consul at Massawa and an assistant of Robert C. Napier during the Anglo-Abyssinian War (1868). He was French consul in 1868, Egyptian governor in 1870, and governor general of Eastern Sudan in 1872. He was fatally wounded in an expedition against Ethiopia, and died in the Aussa region.

Mu'o'ng or Müông or Muong (mö.ong'). People of Indochina living in Tonkin and N Annam in mountain villages on the W border of the coastal district occupied by the Vietnamese (Annamese), to whom they are racially and linguistically akin. They number ab. 163,000.

Muotathal (mō'ō.tä.täl''). Town in C Switzerland, in Schwyz canton. 2,349 (1941).

Muphrid (mū'frid). Third-magnitude star η Boötis, in the right leg of the giant.

Mur (mör). [Slovenian and Croatian, Mura (mö'rä).] River rising in C Austria, in Salzburg province, and flowing E and SE through Styria and N Yugoslavia, bordering on Hungary in its lower course. It joins the Drava NE of Zagreb. Length, ab. 275 mi.

Murad I (mö.räd', mū'rad). [Also, Amurath.] b. 1319; killed June 15, 1389. Sultan of Turkey (1359–89); son of Orkhan. He completed the organization of the Janizaries, begun by his father, and was the first of the Ottoman sultans who made conquests in Europe. In 1361 he occupied Adrianople, which he made the capital of his European dominions. He took Sofia in 1382, and defeated the princes of Serbia and Bosnia in the battle of Kosovo, 1389. He was killed after the engagement by a wounded Serbian who, it is said, stood up from among the dead, and plunged a dagger into his breast as he surveyed the field of battle.

Murad II. [Also, Amurath.] b. c1403; d. 1451. Sultan of Turkey (1421–51); son of Mohammed I. He unsuccessfully besieged (1423) Constantinople, carried on war against the Hungarians under Hunyady and the Albanians under Scanderbeg, defeated the Hungarians at Varna in 1444 and Kosova in 1448, and subdued the Morea (Peloponnesus) in 1446.

Murad III. [Also, Amurath.] b. 1546; d. 1595. Sultan of Turkey (1574–95); son of Selim II. He continued the war against Austria with varying success, and took Luristan, Georgia, Shirvan, Tabriz, and part of Azerbaijan from Persia in 1590.

Murad IV. [Also, Amurath.] b. c1611; d. 1640. Sultan of Turkey (1623–40). He captured (1638) Baghdad from the Persians.

Murad V. [Also, Amurath.] b. Sept. 21, 1840; d. Aug. 29, 1904. Sultan of Turkey. At the time that he succeeded Sultan Abdul Aziz upon the deposition (May 30, 1876) of the latter, he was a state prisoner. Supported by the liberals, he drew the disfavor of conservative elements, was deposed (Aug. 31, 1876) on the ground that he was insane; and was confined until his death.

Muradabad (mö.räd.ä.bäd'). See Moradabad.

Muralt (mö'rält), Alexander Ludwig von. b. at Zurich, Switzerland, Aug. 19, 1903—. Swiss physiologist. He is known for his studies on the chemistry and physiology of muscles and nerves, and the effects on physiology of altitudes (performed at the Hochalpine Forschungsstation Jungfraujoch).

Muralto (mū.ral'tō), Onuphrio. Fictitious canon of Saint Nicholas at Otranto, from whom Horace Walpole, as William Marshall, professed to translate The Castle of Otranto.

Murano (mö.rä'nō). Island and town in the lagoon of Venice, Italy, ab. 1 mile NE of Venice, and included in the commune of Venice. It has been famous since the 14th century for its glass manufactures, and is noted for its cathedral and Museo Civico (with Venetian glass products). Buildings of interest to tourists were undamaged in World War II. Pop. of town, 6,368 (1936).

Muras (mö'räz). South American Indian tribe, formerly very numerous, inhabiting the Madeira River valley, in Brazil. They became famous in the history of the region for their long and bitter resistance to colonial settlement. The language forms an independent stock.

Murat (mü.rà), Joachim. b. at Bastide, Lot, France, March 25, 1771; executed at Pizzo, Calabria, Italy, Oct. 13, 1815. French marshal, and king of Naples, famous as a cavalry commander; brother-in-law of Napoleon I. He studied theology at Toulouse, entered the army as a volunteer, and served with distinction in Italy (1796–97) and in Egypt (1798–99), becoming a general of division. He aided the coup d'état of November, 1799, that made Napoleon first consul, married Carolina Bonaparte on Jan. 20, 1800, and was made governor of Paris and marshal in 1804 and prince and high admiral in 1805. He commanded the cavalry at Marengo in 1800, at Austerlitz in 1805, at Jena in 1806, and at Eylau and Friedland in 1807. In 1806 he was made Grand Duke of Berg and Cleve. He commanded in Spain in 1808, and became king of Naples as Joachim I Napoleon in 1808. He commanded the French cavalry in 1812, and was leagued with Austria in 1814. He went over to Napoleon in March, 1815, was defeated by the Austrians at Tolentino (May 2–3, 1815), escaped to Corsica, and was captured in making a landing in Calabria in October, 1815.

Murat, Prince Napoléon Lucien Charles. b. at Milan, Italy, May 16, 1803; d. at Paris, April 10, 1878. French politician; son of Joachim Murat. He lived in the U.S. until 1848, returned to France, and, after the coup d'état by Napoleon III, was recognized as a prince of the royal blood.

Muratore (mü.rà.tôr), Lina. [Maiden name, Cavalieri.] b. 1874; d. in air raid on Florence, 1944. Italian operatic soprano; wife (married 1913) of Lucien Muratore. She sang in Europe and the U.S., appearing (1907–08) with the Metropolitan Opera Company and later with the Chicago Opera Company.

Muratore, Lucien. b. at Marseilles, France, 1878—. French tenor; husband (married 1913) of Lina Muratore. He made his operatic debut (1902) in the first performance of Reynaldo Hahn's La Carmélite. He was a member (1907–08) of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York, and joined (1913) the Chicago Grand Opera Company.

Muratori (mö.rä.tō'rē), Ludovico (or Lodovico) Antonio. b. near Vignola, near Modena, Italy, Oct. 21, 1672; d. at Modena, Jan. 23, 1750. Italian antiquary, director of the Ambrosian College and Library at Milan, and later librarian to the Duke of Modena. His chief works are Rerum Italicarum scriptores (1723–51), Antiquitates Italicae medii aevi (1738–42), and Annali d'Italia (1744–49). He discovered and published (1740) the so-called Muratorian Fragment or Canon, a list drawn up c190 A.D. of New Testament books the unknown author considered canonical; it is the earliest extant list of the kind.

Muratorian Fragment or Canon (mū.ra.tō'ri.ạn). Summary of the canonical books of the New Testament, in popular and illiterate language, probably dating from the period of Marcus Aurelius or soon afterward. It was first published by L. A. Muratori in 1740.

Muraviev (mö.rä.vyôf'), Nikolai. b. 1793; d. Nov. 4, 1866. Russian general. He served with distinction against the Polish insurrectionists in 1831, and captured Kars in 1855 during the Crimean War.

Muraviev, Nikolai. [Title, Count Muraviev-Amursky.] b. at St. Petersburg, 1803 or c1810; d. at Paris, Nov. 19, 1881. Russian general. He was appointed lieutenant governor of Eastern Siberia in 1848, and took possession of the Amur territory, which was ceded by China in 1858. As a reward for this service he was created a count and promoted to general of infantry.

Murchison (mėr'chi.sọn), Sir Roderick Impey. b. at Tarradale, Ross-shire, Scotland, Feb. 19, 1792; d. Oct. 22, 1871. Scottish geologist. In 1808 he went to Galicia with Arthur Wellesley (who was afterward Duke of Wellington), and was with Sir John Moore in the retreat to La Coruña. After eight years' service he left the army and traveled in Europe. He took up the study of geology at the suggestion of Sir Humphrey Davy, and in 1825 read his first paper before the Geological Society. He was associated with Charles Lyell and later with Adam Sedgwick in Auvergne and the Alps. His especial work was the establishment of the Silurian system in 1831 (The Silurian System, 1838), and later the Devonian. In 1845 he published Russia and the Ural Mountains, the result of a survey (1840–44) there. In 1855 he was appointed director general of the Geological Survey, and director of the Royal School of Mines and Geological Museum.

Murchison Goldfield. Gold-mining region in W Australia, ab. 270 mi. E of the coast, and ab. 400 mi. NE of Perth. It is second in importance in the state of Western Australia, being surpassed only by the Kalgoorlie fields.

Murcia (mėr'shạ, mör'-; Spanish, mör'thyä). Former Moorish kingdom in S Spain, comprising area now in the provinces of Murcia and Albacete. It was conquered by Castile in the period 1243–69.

Murcia. Province in SE Spain, bounded by Albacete on the NE and N, by Alicante on the E, by the Mediterranean Sea on the E and S, and by Almería and Granada on the W. The surface is generally hilly or mountainous. Sheep are raised; citrus fruit, grapes, and sugar cane are grown. There are iron, manganese, sulfur, zinc, and lead mines. Capital, Murcia; area, ab. 4,369 sq. mi.; pop. 756,076 (1950).

Murcia. [Arabic, Medinat Mursya.] City and commune in SE Spain, capital of the province of Murcia, situated on the Segura River ab. 47 mi. SW of Alicante in the center of a fertile plain: silk, woolen, cotton, leather and leather goods, flour, and hat manufactures. Mulberries and oranges are cultivated in the surrounding irrigated huerta (gardens). It has been an episcopal see since 1291. The cathedral, dating from 1388–1467, is in the late Gothic style, but with a Renaissance dome; a Corinthian façade was erected in the 18th century. A Phoenician and Roman town in ancient times, it came later under Visigothic and Arabic rule; after the caliphate of Córdoba fell Murcia came to Almería, Toledo, and Sevilla in that order. Taken by the Almohades in 1172, in 1269 it passed definitely to Castile. Pop. of commune, 193,731 (1940), 218,375 (1950); of city, 60,113 (1940).

Murder in the Cathedral. Drama in verse by T. S. Eliot, produced and published in 1935. The plot involves the decision of Saint Thomas à Becket to obey the dictates of God even though this must entail his loss of temporal power and his eventual death. Choral effects are employed to create atmosphere and give emotional tone to the scenes.

Murders in the Rue Morgue (rü môrg), The. Story by Edgar Allan Poe, published in 1841 and included in the Prose Tales of Edgar A. Poe (1843).

Murdock (mėr'dok), Victor. b. at Burlingame, Kan., March 18, 1871; d. at Wichita, Kan., July 8, 1945. American editor and legislator. As a congressman (1903–14) from Kansas, he was a leader in the fight (1910–11) to restrict the powers of the speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives. He was a member (1917–24) of the Federal Trade Commission.

Murdock, William. b. at Auchinleck, Ayrshire, Scotland, Aug. 21, 1754; d. at Birmingham, England, Nov. 15, 1839. Scottish inventor. He entered the works of Boulton and Watt, Birmingham, in 1777, and in 1802–03 made the first practical use of illuminating gas in lighting the factory. He also invented (c1784) the oscillating steam engine.

Murdstone (mėrd'stōn, -stọn), Edward. In Charles Dickens's David Copperfield, a black-haired, violent-tempered, vindictive, cruel man; David Copperfield's stepfather.

Mure (mūr), Sir William. b. at Rowallan, Ayrshire, Scotland, 1594; d. 1657. Scottish poet. A member of the Scottish parliament (1643), he joined the fight against the English; he was wounded (1644) at Marston Moor. He wrote the True Crucifix for True Catholics (1629), a version of the Psalms (1639), and others.

Mure, William. b. near Caldwell, Ayrshire, Scotland, July 9, 1799; d. at London, April 1, 1860. Scottish historian of Greek literature. He was member of Parliament (1846–55). His Critical History of the Language and Literature of Ancient Greece (5 vols., 1850–57) was unfinished at the time of his death.

Muree (mu.rē'). See Murree.

Murel (mu.rel'), John A. See Murrell, John A.

Murena (mū.rē'nạ), Lucius Licinius. fl. 83–82 B.C. Roman commander against Mithridates VI of Pontus in 83–82 B.C.

Murena, Lucius Licinius. fl. 65–62 B.C. Roman statesman; son of Lucius Licinius Murena (fl. 83–82 B.C.). He was elected consul in 62 B.C. Having been accused of bribery by an unsuccessful rival, he was defended by Cicero (Pro Murena) and acquitted.

Mureş (mö'resh). [Also: Muresh; Hungarian, Maros; German, Mieresch; Latin, Marisus.] River in C and W Rumania and SE Hungary, which joins the Tisza near Szeged. Length, ab. 545 mi.

Muret (mü.re). Town in the department of Haute-Garonne, France, on the Garonne River ab. 11 mi. SW of Toulouse. Here in 1213 Simon de Montfort defeated the Albigenses and Aragonese. 4,368 (1946).

Muret, Marc Antoine. [Latinized, Muretus (mū.rē'tus).] b. at Muret, France, April 12, 1526; d. at Rome, June 4, 1585. French humanist. He taught the classics at Poitiers, Bordeaux, Paris, and Toulouse, went to Italy, where he resided at Venice, Padua, and Rome, and after his return (1563) to Rome from a visit to France in the train of the legate Cardinal Ippolito d'Este, taught civil law there until 1584.

Murfree (mėr'frē), Mary Noailles. [Pseudonym, Charles Egbert Craddock.] b. near Murfreesboro, Tenn., Jan. 24, 1850; d. at Murfreesboro, July 31, 1922. American novelist. She contributed to the Atlantic Monthly before 1880, and wrote In the Tennessee Mountains (1884), Where the Battle was Fought (1884), The Prophet of the Great Smoky Mountains (1885), In the Clouds (1887), The Story of Keedon Bluffs (1888), The Despot of Broomsedge Cove (1889), His Vanished Star (1894), The Juggler (1897), The Young Mountaineers (1897), The Story of Old Fort Loudon (1899), A Spectre of Power (1908), The Frontiersman (1904), The Storm Centre (1905), The Amulet (1906), The Windfall (1907), and The Raid of the Guerilla and Other Stories (1912).

Murfreesboro (mėr'frēz.bur.ō). [Former spelling, Murfreesborough; former name, Cannonsburg.] City in C Tennessee, county seat of Rutherford County, ab. 32 mi. SE of Nashville, in a cattle-raising area: shipping center for cotton. It has lumber, rayon textile, hosiery, and dairy-product industries, and is the seat of Middle Tennessee State College. It was the state capital from 1819 to 1825. It was named for an officer in the Revolutionary War. A victory was gained near here by Union forces (43,400) under W. S. Rosecrans over the Confederates (37,712) under Braxton Bragg. Heavy fighting occurred on Dec. 31, 1862; on Jan. 1, 1863, little was done, but the battle was resumed on Jan. 2; the following day a heavy rain fell, and on the night of Jan. 3–4 Bragg retreated. The engagement is known also as the Battle of Stone's River. Pop. 13,052 (1950).

Murgab (mör.gäb'). See Murghab.

Murger (mür.zher), Henri. b. at Paris, March 24, 1822; d. there, Jan. 28, 1861. French writer. He was at first a notary's clerk, and afterward secretary to Count Tolstoi. He is best known for his sketches of Bohemian life in Paris (Scènes de la vie de Bohème, 1848); a stage adaptation of this, La Vie de Bohème (1849, with Théodore Barrière), was the basis of Giacomo Puccini's opera La Bohème.

Murghab (mör.gäb'). [Also, Murgab.] River in NW Afghanistan and S Turkmen Soviet Socialist Republic of the U.S.S.R. It waters the oasis of Mary (Merv) and terminates in the desert of Kara Kum. Length, ab. 530 mi.

Murieta or Murietta (mū.ri.et'a), Joaquín. See Murrieta, Joaquín.

Murillo (mū.ril'ō; Spanish, mö.rē'lyō), Bartolomé Esteban. b. at Seville, Spain (baptized Jan. 1, 1618); d. there, April 3, 1682. Spanish painter, chiefly of religious subjects. In 1643 he moved to Madrid, where he came under the influence of Velásquez, then at the zenith of his fame. He returned to Seville in 1645, where he spent several years (1661–74) in painting a series of 11 pictures which at once brought him into notice. Among these are Moses Striking the Rock, Abraham and the Angels, The Miracle of the Loaves and Fishes, Saint Peter Released from Prison, and Saint Elizabeth. A favorite subject with Murillo was the Virgin of the Conception; the most famous example of this is in the Louvre. In 1660 he established the public academy at Seville. On the death of Philip IV, his successor, Charles II, made Murillo court painter, though he was not willing to live at Madrid. He continued to work at Seville until his death, which occurred in consequence of a fall from a scaffold while painting in the Church of the Capuchins. There is a list of 481 of his pictures.

Murillo Toro (mö.rē'yō tō'rō), Manuel. b. at Chaparral, Colombia, 1815; d. at Bogotá, Colombia, in December, 1880. Colombian statesman, twice president (1864–66, 1872–74) of Colombia.

Muris (mū'ris), Johannes (or Julianus) de. [Called de Francia.] fl. 14th century. Music theorist, probably a Frenchman, mainly noted for the treatise Speculum musice (c1321). Other works, including Summa musice and Musica speculativa, have been attributed to him.

Müritz (mü'rits), Lake. [German, Müritz See, Müritzsee (mü'rits.zā).] Lake in NE Germany, in the Land (state) of Mecklenburg, Russian Zone, formerly in Mecklenburg-Schwerin, ab. 60 mi. NW of Berlin. Area, ab. 45 sq. mi.

Murlin (mėr'lin), John Raymond. b. in Auglaize County, Ohio, April 30, 1874—. American physiologist. He was professor of physiology and director of the department of vital economics at the University of Rochester from 1919 until 1945. In 1928 he was the principal mover in the founding of the American Institute of Nutrition, and thereafter until 1939 editor of The Journal of Nutrition. His work (1903 et seq.) on extracts of pancreas and pancreatic diabetes foreshadowed the later antidiabetic achievements of Banting and Best, but were interrupted by his service (1917–19) during World War I as head of the nutrition division of the Sanitary Corps of the U.S. army. He was elected (1932) to membership in the American Philosophical Society.

Murmansk (mör'mansk). Oblast (region) in NW U.S.S.R., in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, centered ab. 600 mi. N of Leningrad, between the White and the Barents seas, and bordering on Finland and Norway. The region is covered with rocky hills and is too far north to be a good agricultural area. Reindeer are raised on the tundra of the N and C parts; in the SW are coniferous forests, which supply sawmills. Forest and mineral products are the main exports; important deposits of nickel, nepheline, apatite, and mica have been developed. The nickel deposits are in the NW part of the oblast, in the Pechenga area, ceded by Russia to Finland in 1920, and retroceded to the U.S.S.R. in 1944. Capital, Murmansk; area, ab. 53,600 sq. mi. (1939), ab. 53,700 sq. mi. (1951); pop. 291,188 (1939).

Murmansk. City and seaport in NW U.S.S.R., capital of the Murmansk oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic: an ice-free ocean port linked by rail with Leningrad and Moscow. It has fish-canning, shipbuilding, lumbering, and woodworking industries. In 1917–19 Murmansk was the center of the Allied military expeditions attempting to substitute an anti-Bolshevik government in Russia; the last Allied troops were withdrawn in October, 1919. During World War II this port was one of the major ports for Lend-Lease supplies entering the U.S.S.R. from the U.S. 117,054 (1939).

Murnaghan (mėr'na.han), Francis D. b. at Omagh, Ireland, Aug. 4, 1893—. American mathematician. He was a faculty member (1918 et seq.) and professor of applied mathematics (1928 et seq.) at Johns Hopkins. Author of Vector Analysis and the Theory of Relativity (1922), Theory of Group Representations (1938), Analytic Geometry (1946), Differential and Integral Calculus (1947), and other works; and coauthor with Joseph S. Ames of Theoretical Mechanics (1929).

Murner (mür'nėr), Thomas. b. at Oberehnheim, near Strasbourg, Dec. 24, 1475; d. there, 1537. German satirist and opponent of the Reformation. He studied at the Franciscan school at Strasbourg, was then a wandering scholar in France, Germany, and Poland, and afterward studied theology at Paris and law at Freiburg im Breisgau, where he lived in 1499. He was subsequently custodian of the Franciscan monastery at Strasbourg. In 1505 he was crowned poet by the emperor Maximilian I, and later was made (c1509) doctor of theology at Verona. His satirical work Narrenbeschwörung (Exorcism of Fools) was published at Strasbourg in 1512, in which year also appeared his Schelmenzunft (Rogues' Gild), consisting of sermons originally delivered at Frankfort on the Main. The satire, in rhymed couplets, Von dem grossen Lutherischen Narren, wie ihn Doktor Murner beschworen hat (On the Great Lutheran Fool: how Doctor Murner has Exorcised Him), published at Strasbourg in 1522, is a virulent attack upon the Reformation.

Muro Lucano (mō'rō lö.kä'nō). Town and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Basilicata, in the province of Potenza, ab. 18 mi. NW of Potenza. The Duomo (cathedral) and Church of Santa Maria di Capitignano were undamaged in World War II. Pop. of commune, 9,275 (1936); of town, 8,516 (1936).

Murom (mö'rom). City in U.S.S.R., on the Oka River ab. 175 mi. E of Moscow: locomotive, machine-tool, linen-textile, plywood, and meat-packing industries. It is an old town, dating from the 9th century, and was sacked and plundered at various times by both Bulgars and Tartars. In 1393 the town passed to Moscow, and in 1552 it was the chief base for the campaign of Ivan IV against Kazan and the Tartars. It has a 16th-century cathedral. 40,000 (1937).

Muroran (mö.rō.rän). City in SW Hokkaido, Japan, ab. 60 mi. S of Sapporo, on the Pacific coast. There are deposits of coal and iron in the area, which, supplemented by imported iron ore, form the basis for the city's iron and steel industry. 110,443 (1950).

Muros (mö'rōs). Town in NW Spain, in the province of La Coruña, situated on an inlet of the Atlantic Ocean, ab. 49 mi. SW of La Coruña: seaport; fisheries, flour mills, and textile mills. 10,475 (1940).

Muro y Salazar (mö'rō ē sä.lä.thär'), Salvador de. [Title, Marquis of Someruelos.] b. at Madrid, 1754; d. there, Dec. 14, 1813. Spanish general and administrator in Cuba.

Murphy (mėr'fi), Arthur. b. near Elphin, County Roscommon, Ireland, Dec. 27, 1727; d. at London, June 18, 1805. Irish dramatist. In the period 1752–74 he published the Gray's Inn Journal at London. He appeared as actor and dramatist, and was called to the bar in 1762. He wrote The Upholsterer (1757), All in the Wrong (1761), Know Your Own Mind (1778), Three Weeks after Marriage, and translations of Sallust and Tacitus (1793).

Murphy, Charles Francis. b. at New York, June 20, 1858; d. April 25, 1924. American political boss, leader (1902–24) of Tammany Hall. Raised on the East Side of New York, where he later operated a saloon, he aligned himself with Tammany Hall, the Democratic political machine in New York City. A popular figure in his neighborhood, he was elected (1892) leader of the 18th assembly district and was subsequently appointed dock commissioner. In 1902, by action of the Tammany executive committee, Murphy was chosen to fill the position of absolute leadership vacated by Richard Croker in 1901. Murphy's rule of the Tammany organization, lasting until his death, was the longest held by any of the Tammany bosses. His influence extended to both municipal and state politics. He was responsible for the election of Mayors George B. McClellan (1903, 1905), William J. Gaynor (1909), and John F. Hylan (1917), and of Governors John A. Dix (1910) and William Sulzer (1912). The latter was impeached and removed at Murphy's behest.

Murphy, Edgar Gardner. [Pseudonym, Kelvin McKready.] b. at Fort Smith, Ark., Aug. 31, 1869; d. June 23, 1913. American Protestant Episcopal clergyman and author. Author of Words for the Church (1897), The Larger Life (1897), Problems of the Present South (1904), and The Basis of Ascendancy (1909). His A Beginner's Star Book (1912) was published under the pseudonym Kelvin McKready.

Murphy, Frank. b. at Harbor Beach, Mich., April 13, 1890; d. at Detroit, Mich., July 19, 1949. American politician and jurist, associate justice (1940–49) of the U.S. Supreme Court. He was chief assistant U.S. attorney (1919–20) of the eastern district of Michigan, was a law instructor (1922–27) at the University of Detroit, and served (1923–30) as a judge in the Recorder's Court, Detroit. He was Democratic mayor (1930–33) of Detroit, resigning that post in May, 1933, to become governor general of the Philippine Islands. He was U.S. high commissioner (1935–36) to the Philippines and in 1936 was elected governor of Michigan. His administration was troubled by the "sit-down" strikes that swept the automobile factories of Michigan in 1937. He became (1939) U.S. attorney general and was named to the U.S. Supreme Court in January, 1940.

Murphy, Franklin. b. at Jersey City, N.J., Jan. 3, 1846; d. at Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 24, 1920. American varnish manufacturer, politician, and one-time Republican governor (1902–05) of New Jersey. He introduced his state's first laws dealing with child labor, primary elections, workshop ventilation, and tenements.

Murphy, John Benjamin. b. near Appleton, Wis., Dec. 21, 1857; d. at Mackinac Island, Mich., Aug. 11, 1916. American surgeon, pioneer in the study and treatment of peritonitis. He was chief (1895–1916) of the surgical staff of Mercy Hospital, was professor of clinical surgery (1892–1901) at the College of Physicians and Surgeons (Chicago), and also taught at Northwestern University Medical School, where he was professor of surgery (1901–05, 1908–16). He was the inventor of the Murphy button (1892), a device for linking the severed intestinal ends, which enabled important advances in gastrointestinal surgery. He developed the artificial pneumothorax (lung collapse) by injection of nitrogen, used in treating pulmonary tuberculosis.

Murphy, John Francis. b. at Oswego, N.Y., 1853; d. Jan. 30, 1921. American landscape painter. He was a member of the National Academy of Design and of the American Water-Color Society.

Murphy, Lambert. b. at Springfield, Mass., April 15, 1885—. American operatic tenor. He was a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York, making his debut (1911) as the sailor in Tristan und Isolde. He resigned in order to teach and appear in concerts.

Murphy, Michael Charles. b. at Westboro, Mass., Feb. 28, 1861; d. at Philadelphia, June 4, 1913. American athletic coach. While still in his twenties, he founded an athletic training camp at Westboro. He was athletic trainer (c1887 et seq.) at Yale and subsequently at the Detroit Athletic Club. He served (1892–96) as coach of the track team and football trainer at Yale, where he also held these posts from 1900 to 1905, but except for the latter period served (1896 et seq.) at the University of Pennsylvania. He was coach (1908, 1912) of the American Olympic teams.

Murphy, Robert Daniel. b. at Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 28, 1894—. American diplomat. After holding (1921–39) several consular posts, he became chargé d'affaires (1940) at Vichy. He was special representative (1941 et seq.) in North Africa, was appointed member of the Allied advisory council (1943), and served as U.S. political adviser for Germany (1945–49). He was appointed U.S. ambassador to Belgium (1949) and later to Japan (1952).

Murphy, Walter Patten. b. at Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 20, 1873; d. at Los Angeles, Calif., Dec. 16, 1942. American manufacturer and philanthropist, donor (1939) of 6,735,000 dollars to establish an institute of technology at Northwestern University. He succeeded (1919) his father as president of Standard Railway Equipment Manufacturing Company.

Murphy, William Parry. b. at Stoughton, Wis., Feb. 6, 1892—. American physician, notable for research on diabetes and diseases of the blood (especially pernicious anemia). He was codiscoverer with George R. Minot of the liver treatment for pernicious anemia, and shared the Nobel prize in medicine and physiology (1934) with Minot and George H. Whipple.

Murphysboro (mėr'fiz.bur.ō). City in S Illinois, county seat of Jackson County, ab. 54 mi. NW of Cairo. It was extensively rebuilt after suffering heavy damage during a tornado in 1925. Pop. 9,241 (1950).

Murray (mur'i). City in SW Kentucky, county seat of Calloway County. It is the seat of Murray State College. 6,035 (1950).

Murray. City in N Utah, in Salt Lake County, just S of Salt Lake City: trading center for farm products; lead smelter. 9,006 (1950).

Murray, Alexander. b. at Chestertown, Md., July 12, 1754 or 1755; d. at Philadelphia, Oct. 6, 1821. American naval officer. He served in the Revolutionary War and against Tripoli.

Murray, Alexander. b. at Dunkitterick, Kirkcudbrightshire, Scotland, Oct. 22, 1775; d. at Edinburgh, April 15, 1813. Scottish philologist. He attended school for a short time in 1788 and, afterward by his own efforts, mastered the English language, the classics, the European languages, Hebrew and other Oriental tongues, and Abyssinian. In 1812 he was chosen professor of Oriental languages at Edinburgh. In 1823 he published History of the European Languages.

Murray, Alexander Stuart. b. at Arbirbolt, Scotland, Jan. 8, 1841; d. at London, March 5, 1904. Scottish archaeologist and author. He was with the British Museum as assistant keeper (1867–86) and keeper (1886–1904) in its department of Greek and Roman antiquities. Author of A Manual of Mythology (1873, and numerous editions in England and America), History of Greek Sculpture (1880–83), Handbook of Archaeology (1892), Greek Bronzes (1898), Excavations in Cyprus (1900), and The Sculptures of the Parthenon (1903).

Murray, Charles. b. in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, 1864; d. there, May 2, 1941. Scottish poet, engineer, and public official. He spent the greater part of his life in South Africa, where he was secretary of public works (1910–24) for the Union, and director of defense (1917). He retired in 1924 and returned to Scotland.

Murray, David. [Titles: 7th Viscount Stormont, 2nd Earl of Mansfield.] b. Oct. 9, 1727; d. Sept. 1, 1796. British nobleman. He succeeded his father as 7th Viscount Stormont in the peerage of Scotland in 1748, and his uncle as 2nd Earl of Mansfield in 1793.

Murray, Sir David. b. at Glasgow, Jan. 29, 1849; d. at London, Nov. 14, 1933. Scottish landscape and marine painter, one of the founders of the Glasgow Arts Club in 1867. In 1905 he became a member of the Royal Academy; in 1917 he was chosen president of the Royal Institute.

His paintings are found in museums at Bradford, Bristol, Glasgow, Leeds, Liverpool, London, Manchester, Nottingham, Sydney, and Victoria.

Murray, David Christie. b. at West Bromwich, Staffordshire, England, April 13, 1847; d. at London, Aug. 1, 1907. English novelist, journalist, and essayist. He was correspondent for the Times and the Scotsman, covering the Russo-Turkish War (1877–78). He became interested in the case of Captain Alfred Dreyfus, and defended him in lectures and press articles. Author of A Life's Atonement (1879), Joseph's Coat (1881), Val Strange (1882), By the Gate of the Sea (1883), Rainbow Gold (1885), and Aunt Rachel (1886), novels of Staffordshire life; and of A Novelist's Notebook (1887), The Making of a Novelist (1894), My Contemporaries in Fiction (1897), and Recollections and Guesses at Truth (1908), autobiography, criticism, and essays.

Murray, George Dominic. b. at Boston, July 6, 1889—. American naval officer. He was in command of the Langley (1938–39) and the Enterprise (1941–42). He served as commandant (1942–43) of the naval air-training center at Pensacola, Fla., and as commander (1944–45) of the Pacific fleet air force.

Murray, Gilbert. [Full name, George Gilbert Aimé Murray.] b. at Sydney, Australia, Jan. 2, 1866—. British classical scholar, widely known for his annotated editions of the Greek tragedies; younger brother of Sir John Hubert Plunkett Murray. He was educated at London and at St. John's College, Oxford, and was professor of Greek at Glasgow University (1889–99) and regius professor of Greek at Oxford (1908 et seq.). He headed (1923–38) the League of Nations Union. He published History of Ancient Greek Literature (1897), two plays, Carlyon Sahib (1899) and Andromache (1900), The Rise of the Greek Epic (1907), Four Stages of Greek Religion (1913), and other works, including translations. Among his later works are The Classical Tradition in Poetry (1927) and Aeschylus, Creator of Tragedy (1940).

Murray, Grenville. [Full name, Eustace Clare Grenville Murray.] b. 1824; d. at Passy, France, Dec. 20, 1881. English journalist and author; natural son of Richard Grenville, 2nd Duke of Buckingham. In 1851 he was attaché at Vienna, in 1852 at Constantinople, and in 1855 consul general at Odessa. His journalistic endeavors were pioneering efforts in society gossip. In 1869 he was publicly horsewhipped by an English nobleman and soon afterward left England. He wrote The Roving Englishman (1854–55), History of the French Press (1874), and the novels The Member for Paris (1871) and Young Brown (1874).

Murray, Sir Hubert. [Full name, Sir John Hubert Plunkett Murray.] b. at Sydney, Australia, Dec. 29, 1861; d. at Samarai, Papua, Feb. 27, 1940. Australian public servant who won international fame for his skill in dealing with native colonial peoples; elder brother of Gilbert Murray. In 1904 he was appointed chief judicial officer of Papua, which became a colony of the Commonwealth of Australia in 1906 by transfer from the United Kingdom. He became acting administrator (1907), lieutenant governor (i.e., senior official in Papua), and chief judicial officer (1908 until his death). He published Papua (1912) and Papua of Today (1925).

Murray, James. b. 1719; d. near Battle, Sussex, England, June 18, 1794. English general and colonial administrator. He commanded (1758) a brigade at Louisburg, was chosen (1759) one of James Wolfe's three brigadiers in the expedition against Quebec, and commanded (Sept. 13, 1759) the left wing in the battle on the Plains of Abraham, where Wolfe fell. He was left with 4,000 troops to defend Quebec against the French. He was appointed governor of Quebec (Oct. 27, 1760) and later served (1763–66) as governor of Canada. He succeeded (1774) Sir George Howard as governor of Minorca, and surrendered (1782) to the besieging Spaniards and French under Louis de Berton de Crillon, Duc de Mahon, laying down his arms at George Town.

Murray, Sir James Augustus Henry. b. at Denholm, Roxburghshire, Scotland, Feb. 7, 1837; d. at Oxford, England, July 26, 1915. Scottish lexicographer and philologist, editor of the New English Dictionary. He was educated at the University of London (B.A., 1873), was assistant master (1854–57) at the Hawick Grammar School, master (1857–62) at Hawick Academy, and master (1870–85) at Mill Hill School, London. He lived (1885 et seq.) at Oxford, where he engaged in the work by which he is remembered, and for which he was knighted in 1908. He edited some old Scottish texts (1871–75), contributed to the Athenaeum, wrote on "The English Language" for the Encyclopædia Britannica (1878), and was the author of Dialect of the Southern Counties of Scotland (1873). His chief work was the Philological Society's A New English Dictionary on Historical Principles (popularly known as the Oxford English Dictionary), to the editorship of which he was appointed in 1879. He planned the work and was responsible for the volumes A-D, H-K, O, P, and T. The first volume of the dictionary was published in 1884, and the final one appeared in 1935, the editorship being shared with Murray by Henry Bradley (1890 et seq.) and William Craigie (1901 et seq.).

Murray, John. [Title, Earl of Dunmore.] b. 1737; d. at Ramsgate, England, Oct. 11, 1808. English colonial governor. He was appointed governor of the colony of New York in 1770, and of Virginia in 1771. He prorogued the House of Assembly at Williamsburg, Va., in 1772, convened it in March, 1773, but immediately dissolved it because of its recommendation of concerted action on the part of the colonies against the mother country, and again dissolved it in 1774 upon its action after the passing of the Boston Port Act. In the autumn of 1774 he commanded a division of Virginia troops in the war against the Ohio Indians, called Lord Dunmore's War. In 1775 he removed part of the powder stores at Williamsburg to the warship Magdalen, thereby provoking armed resistance by the colonists under the leadership of Patrick Henry; but peace was restored temporarily by his payment for the powder. Later in the same year, during a riot in the House of Assembly, he transferred the seat of government to the man-of-war Fowey, an act which the burgesses declared to be an abdication. Thereupon he equipped a flotilla, made an unsuccessful attack upon Hampton, reduced Norfolk to ashes, and was finally defeated at Gwynn's Island in Chesapeake Bay, July 8, 1776. He then disbanded his troops and returned to England. He sat in the House of Lords until 1787, and was governor of the Bahamas (1787–96).

Murray, John. [Called the "Father of American Universalism."] b. at Alton, England, Dec. 10, 1741; d. at Boston, Sept. 3, 1815. American Universalist clergyman.

Murray, John. [Original surname, MacMurray.] b. at Edinburgh, 1745; d. Nov. 6, 1793. English publisher, of Scottish birth. He obtained a commission in the Royal Marines in 1762, and in 1768 bought the bookselling business of William Sandby at London. He published the English Review, D'Israeli's Curiosities of Literature, and other works.

Murray, John. b. c1778; d. July 22, 1820. Scottish chemist and physician.

Murray, John. b. Nov. 27, 1778; d. June 27, 1843. English publisher; son of John Murray (1745–93). He started the Quarterly Review (Feb. 1, 1809) in opposition to the Edinburgh Review, an undertaking in which he had the coöperation of Canning, Scott, Heber, Ellis, and Barrow. He published the works of Byron, Crabbe, Moore, Campbell, Irving, and others.

Murray, John. b. at London, April 16, 1808; d. there, April 2, 1892. English publisher; son of John Murray (1778–1843) and grandson of John Murray (1745–93). Educated at Charterhouse and at Edinburgh University, he entered the family business in 1830, becoming its head in 1843. He was the author of travel handbooks on Holland, Belgium, the Rhine, France, South Germany, and Switzerland, and also wrote Scepticism in Geology (1877). He published works of George Borrow, Grote's History of Greece, Smith's classical dictionaries, Darwin's Origin of Species, Layard's Nineveh and Its Remains, works by Lyell, Lockhart, Henry Hallam, Dean Milman, Dean Stanley, and John Lothrop Motley, Livingstone's Travels, Maine's Ancient Law, and Elwin's Pope.

Murray, Sir John. b. at Coburg, Ontario, Canada, March 3, 1841; d. near Kirkliston, Scotland, March 16, 1914. British zoölogist, one of the naturalists of the Challenger expedition (1872–76). He became (1882) editor of the reports of the scientific results of this expedition, later published a summary of its results, and (with others) wrote a narrative of the cruise. He also published Reports on a Bathymetrical Survey of the Fresh-water Lochs of Scotland (6 vols., 1910).

Murray, Sir John. b. at London, June 12, 1884—. English publisher and editor. He entered (1906) the publishing firm founded by his great-grandfather John Murray (1745–93) and became (1928) its senior partner. He was editor (1928 et seq.) of the Quarterly Review.

Murray, John Gardner. b. at Lonaconing, Md., Aug. 31, 1857; d. at Atlantic City, N.J., Oct. 3, 1929. American Protestant Episcopal bishop, first elected presiding bishop (1925 et seq.) of that church. He became (1909) bishop coadjutor of Maryland and in 1911 was named bishop of Maryland.

Murray, Sir John Hubert Plunkett. See Murray, Sir Hubert.

Murray, Lindley. b. at Swatara, Pa., June 7, 1745; d. in England, Jan. 16, 1826. American man of letters. He was admitted to the bar in 1765, afterward accumulated a fortune in commercial pursuits, and in 1784 settled in England, where he devoted himself to literature. His chief works are The Power of Religion on the Mind (1787) and English Grammar (1795).

Murray, Philip. b. at Blantyre, Scotland, May 25, 1886; d. Nov. 9, 1952. American labor leader. He worked in the mines in Scotland as a child, came (1902) to the U.S., and was naturalized in 1911. Vice-president (1920 et seq.) of the United Mine Workers of America, he succeeded John L. Lewis (November, 1940) as president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Murray, Sinclair. Pseudonym of Sullivan, Alan.

Murray, Walter Charles. b. at Studholm, Kings County, New Brunswick, Canada, 1866; d. March 23, 1945. Canadian philosopher and educator, president (1908–37) of the University of Saskatchewan.

Murray, William. [Title, 1st Earl of Mansfield; called the "Founder of English Commercial Law."] b. at Scone, Scotland, March 2, 1705; d. at London, March 20, 1793. British jurist and statesman. He was solicitor general (1742–54) and attorney general (1754–56), and became famous as chief justice of the King's Bench (1756–88). After 1756 he was a prominent member of the cabinet.

Murray, William Vans. b. at Cambridge, Md., Feb. 9, 1760; d. there, Dec. 11, 1803. American diplomat. A Federalist, he served (1791–97) in Congress, and was American minister (1797–1801) to the Netherlands. In 1800 he was one of the U.S. commissioners who negotiated a convention with the French government.

Murray Deep. Deepest part of the Pacific Ocean between Hawaii and the North American coast, located ab. 600 mi. N by NE of Oahu. Depth, ab. 21,240 ft.

Murray Glacier. [Also, Sir John Murray Glacier.] Glacier in Antarctica, in N Victoria Land, in ab. 71°36′ S., 170°00′ E. It has a face on Colbeck Bay but flows mainly W of Duke of York Island to merge with the Dugdale Glacier. Width, ab. 2.5 mi.

Murray Hill. Section of New York City, in C Manhattan, beginning at about 34th Street and extending N to about 40th Street, and bounded by the Avenue of the Americas (Sixth Avenue) on the W and Third Avenue on the E, but excluding Fifth Avenue. The section was a wealthy residential district during the 19th century.

Murray River. [Also, Goolwa.] Principal river of Australia. It rises in the Australian Alps, forms part of the boundary between Victoria and New South Wales, traverses Lake Alexandrina in South Australia, and falls into Encounter Bay, in SE South Australia. Its chief tributaries are the Darling and combined Lachlan and Murrumbidgee. Length, over 1,000 mi.; navigable to Albury, New South Wales.

Murree (mur.rē′). [Also: Marri, Muree.] Health resort in Rawalpindi district, Punjab province, Pakistan, at the base of the mountains of Kashmir, NE of Rawalpindi.

Murrell (mu.rel′), John A. [Also: Murel, Murrel.] b. in Tennessee, c1804; d. at Pikesville, Tenn., sometime after 1844. American desperado. Beginning as a gambler and horse thief, he became a highway robber and Negro-stealer in the South, operating at the head of an organization which extended throughout the South. He was captured (1834), served a ten-year term in the Tennessee penitentiary, and died several years after his release in 1844. The chief contemporary source for the details of his career is the narrative of Virgil A. Stewart, who captured Murrell.

Mürren (mür′ẹn). Summer resort in C Switzerland, in the canton of Bern, in the Bernese Oberland, overlooking the Lauterbrunnen valley, S of Interlaken. It has a splendid view of the Jungfrau. Elevation, ab. 5,400 ft.

Murrhone (mör.rō′nā), Pietro di. Original name of Pope Celestine V.

Murri (mör′rē), Augusto. b. at Fermo, Italy, Sept. 8, 1841; d. at Bologna, Italy, Nov. 11, 1932. Italian clinician. He was one of the first to describe cold hemoglobinuria. He established a law of the physico-pathologic compensation in the heart (Murri's law).

Murri, Romolo. b. at Monte San Pietrangeli, Italy, Aug. 27, 1870; d. at Rome, March 12, 1944. Italian politician. As head of the "Democrazia catolica" he founded (1905) the Lega Democratica Nazionale but was excommunicated (1909). In the latter year he also entered parliament.

Murrieta (mör.ryā′tä; Anglicized, mū.ri.et′ạ), Joaquín. [Also: Murieta, Murietta; original surname possibly Carrillo.] b. in Sonora, Mexico, c1832; d. near Tulare Lake, Calif., July 25, 1853. Desperado in California during the gold rush. He came (c1849) to California and, after suffering alleged hardships at the hands of Americans, became the leader of a band of desperadoes who carried out a number of robberies and murders. He was killed by mounted rangers under Captain Harry S. Love, deputy sheriff of Los Angeles County.

Murrumbidgee (mur.um.bij′ẹ̄). Tributary of the Murray River, in S New South Wales, Australia. It is used extensively for irrigation purposes.

Murry (mur′i), John Middleton. b. at London, Aug. 6, 1889—. English editor and critic; husband of Katherine Mansfield. He was on the staff (1912–14) of the Westminster Gazette, and was editor of the Athenaeum (1919–21), the Adelphi (1923–30), and Peace News (1940 et seq.). His books include Still Life (1916), Fyodor Dostoevsky (1917), Poems (1919), The Evolution of an Intellectual (1920), The Things We Are (1922), Pencillings (1923), The Voyage (1924), Things to Come (1928), God (1929), Son of Woman (1931), The Necessity of Communism (1932), The Life of Katherine Mansfield (1933; with Ruth E. Mantz), the autobiographical Between Two Worlds (1934), Shakespeare (1936), The Necessity of Pacifism (1937), Christocracy (1942), Adam and Eve (1944), and The Free Society (1947).

Mursa (mėr′sạ). Latin name of Osijek, Yugoslavia.

Murshidabad (mör″shid.ä.bäd′). [Also, Moorshedabad.] District of West Bengal, Union of India, ab. 110 mi. N of Calcutta: rice, wheat, sugar, and oil seeds. Capital, Murshidabad; area, 2,063 sq. mi.; pop. 1,715,759 (1951).

Murshidabad. [Also, Moorshedabad.] Capital of the district of Murshidabad, West Bengal, Union of India, on the Ghagirathi River ab. 112 mi. N of Calcutta: market city for the district. It was the capital of Bengal in the 18th century. 11,498 (1941).

Murten (mür′tẹn). German name of Morat, Switzerland.

Murtensee (mür′tẹn.zā). German name of Morat, Lake of.

Murviedro (mör.byā′ᴛʜrō). Former name of Sagunto, Spain.

Murzuk (mör′zök). [Also: Arabic, Murzuq; French, Mourzouk; Italian, Murzuch.] Town in N Africa, in SW Libya, in an oasis; one of the chief towns of the Fezzan. It is connected by road with Tripoli, and by caravan trails with various points in Libya, Algeria, and French Equatorial Africa. Pop. ab. 2,500.

Mürzzuschlag (mürts′tsö″shläk). Town in SE Austria, in Styria province. It is a center for summer and winter sports and a station on the railroad line from Vienna to Graz. 11,202 (1951).

Muş (mösh). [Also, Mush.] Il (province or vilayet) in E Turkey, bordering on the W shore of Lake Van. It is a dry mountainous area crossed by a fertile river valley where excellent crops of cotton, wheat, tobacco, and opium are raised. Sheep and goat herding is extensive and exports of woolen goods large. Capital, Muş; area, 6,247 sq. mi.; pop. 107,306 (1950).

Muş. [Also, Mush.] Town in E Turkey, capital of the il (province or vilayet) of Muş, in the highlands of Anatolia ab. 45 mi. W of Lake Van. Pop. ab. 7,000.

Mus (mūs), Publius Decius. See Decius Mus, Publius.

Musa (mö'sạ). [Full name, Musa ibn-Nusayr.] b. at Mecca, Arabia, c660; d. c718. Saracen viceroy of Egypt. He conquered N Africa, and also parts of Spain, with the aid of Tarik (711–713), thereby beginning the Moorish occupation of the Iberian peninsula.

Musa, Gebel. See under Sinai and Sinai Peninsula.

Musa, Jebel. See under Abyla.

Musa Dağ (mö'sä däg). [Also, Musa Dagh.] Mountain in S Turkey, in the il (province or vilayet) of Hatay, ab. 15 mi. W of Antioch. Elevation, ab. 4,450 ft.

Musaeus (mū.zē'us). Legendary Greek poet of Attica, associated with Orpheus (as a pupil or, in some accounts, as a son). To him were attributed various poems connected with the mysteries of Demeter at Eleusis, over which he was said to have presided.

Musaeus. [Surnamed Grammaticus.] fl. c5th century A.D. Greek grammarian, author of a celebrated poem on Hero and Leander. Of this poem 340 verses have been preserved. It was imitated by Marlowe.

Musagetes (mū.sạ.jē'tēz). An epithet of Apollo as patron of the Muses.

Musala (mö.sä.lä'). See Stalin Peak, Bulgaria.

Musäus (mö.zä'us), Johann Karl August. b. at Jena, Germany, March 29, 1735; d. at Weimar, Germany, Oct. 28, 1787. German author. His chief work is Volksmärchen der Deutschen (1782–86). His novel in the form of letters, Grandison der Zweite (1760–62), was a satire on Samuel Richardson's popular Sir Charles Grandison.

Musca (mus'kạ). Name given to the constellation which is also called Apis, the Bee. It is situated S of the Southern Cross, and E of the Chameleon, and contains one star of the third and three of the fourth magnitude. The name was also formerly given to a constellation situated N of Aries.

Muscat (mus'kat). [Also: Maskat, Masqat, Muskat, Musqat.] City in SE Arabian peninsula, the capital and largest city of the sultanate of Muscat and Oman, located on the Gulf of Oman. It has a poor harbor but exports dates, dried fish, salt, and wool. It was taken by the Portuguese under Affonso de Albuquerque c1508, and was recovered from them in the middle of the 17th century. 4,200 (est. 1948).

Muscat and Oman (ō'man, ō.män'). [Often called Oman.] Sultanate under British protection, bordering on the SE coast of Arabia. It extends from Kalba, on the Gulf of Oman, ab. 1,000 mi. to Ras Darbat Ali, a peninsula on the Arabian Sea coast, marking the boundary between Oman and Aden. Also part of the sultanate are small territories at the entrance to the Persian Gulf and at Gwatar, across the Gulf of Oman near the Iran-Pakistan border. The area is mountainous (highest point ab. 10,000 ft.) with a coastal strip of flat desert plains. The population is mostly engaged in subsistence agriculture, but dates are exported and there is some fishing and pearl diving. Capital, Muscat; area, ab. 82,000 sq. mi.; pop. 550,000 (est. 1948).

Muscatine (mus'kạ.tēn). [Former name, Bloomington.] City in SE Iowa, county seat of Muscatine County, on the Mississippi River ab. 26 mi. SW of Davenport: manufactures of pearl buttons, steel split pulleys, machinery, sashes, doors, and other lumber products, and foodstuffs. It was laid out in 1836. Pop. 19,041 (1950).

Muscle Shoals (mus'l shōlz). Town on the Tennessee River, in N Alabama, where the federal government constructed and operated a dam and nitrate plan during 1917–19. Its operations were terminated after World War I, but agitation for the further development of hydroelectric projects led to the establishment of the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) in 1933.

Musco (mös'kō), Angelo. b. at Catania, Sicily, Dec. 18, 1872—. Sicilian actor and pantomimist. In 1914 he organized a company under his own name, and subsequently appeared in Pirandello plays and in motion pictures.

Muscoço de Alvarado (mös.kō'sō dā äl.bä.rä'ᵺō), Luis. See Moscoso, Luis de.

Muscovy (mus'kō.vi). Name often formerly used for Russia. Specifically it applied to the Grand Principality of Muscovy (or Moscow), about which the Russian state was built.

Muselier (mü.zẹ.lyā), Émile Henry. b. at Marseilles, France, April 17, 1882—. French naval officer, commander (1940–43) of Free French naval forces during World War II. The first high naval officer to join General de Gaulle at London, he commanded the expedition (December, 1941) against St. Pierre and Miquelon. He opposed (1946) the formation of a political movement supporting de Gaulle.

Muses (mū'zẹz). In Greek mythology, the nine daughters of Zeus and Mnemosyne, who according to the earliest writers were goddesses of memory, then inspiring goddesses of song, and later, divinities presiding over poetry, the sciences, and the arts, while at the same time having as their especial province springs and streams. Originally, they were three; later nine: Clio, the Muse of lyre playing, or of history; Euterpe, of tragedy, lyric poetry, and the double flute; Thalia, of pastoral life and comedy; Melpomene of lyre-playing and tragedy; Terpsichore, of choral dance and song; Erato, of erotic poetry, pantomime, and the lyre; Polymnia or Polyhymnia, of the inspired and stately hymn and religious dance; Urania, of astronomy and celestial poetry; and Calliope, the chief of the Muses, of heroic or epic poetry. The Muses were intimately associated in legend and in art with Apollo, who, as the chief guardian and leader of their company, was called Musagetes.

Muses' Looking-Glass, The. Play by Thomas Randolph, originally acted (1630) under the title of The Entertainment. It was printed in 1638.

Museum (mụ.zē'um). Hill almost directly south of the Acropolis at Athens, the furthest east of the group of hills on the southwestern side of the city; named from the existence on it of an old shrine of the Muses. On its summit stands a conspicuous monument, ornamented with niches, Corinthian columns, statues, and a relief-frieze, to Philopappus, the last king of Commagene, who became an Athenian citizen after his dethronement by Vespasian. The slopes of the hill, particularly on its southern extension, abound with curious rock-cuttings, for the most part vestiges of prehistoric Athens. These include house foundations, stairs, meeting places with seats, and the so-called prison of Socrates and tomb of Cimon. Between this hill and the Pnyx passed the road to the Piraeus between the Long Walls. The rock is deeply cut by the ruts of chariot wheels and an artificial water channel.

Museum. Institution of learning in ancient Alexandria, founded by King Ptolemy I.

Museum of Fine Arts. Institution at Boston, incorporated in 1870 for the purpose of maintaining art collections and of providing instruction in the arts of design. In 1909 the collections were removed from the building in Copley Square to a new one in Back Bay.

Museum of Modern Art. Museum at New York, established 1929 for the exhibition and study of modern paintings, drawings, prints, sculpture, photographs, motion pictures, industrial design, and materials relating to the theater and the dance. The term "modern" in relation to the museum's activities is elastic, but emphasis is on work dating from the last decade of the 19th century and later. With the purpose of illustrating growth and contrasts, works of earlier periods have often been shown in conjunction with modern works. For some years the museum's exhibitions were held in rented gallery-space, but in 1939 a building was erected on West 53rd Street, with an extensive open area, running to West 54th Street. The museum also houses a valuable art library and a film library, and has an auditorium used for retrospective showings of motion pictures. It sponsors circulating exhibitions of paintings in other cities, and in addition to its Art Calendar and its Bulletin, it publishes illustrated catalogues, monographs, and books, and sells reproductions of famous works in its permanent collection.

Musgrave (mus'grāv), William Everett. b. at Farmington, Tenn., Sept. 12, 1869; d. March 9, 1927. American physician.

Mush (mösh). See Muş.

Mushanov (mö.shä'nůf), Nikola. b. at Dryanovo (Drenovo), Turkey (in territory later part of Bulgaria), 1872; reported dead 1951. Bulgarian prime minister (1931–34). As an opponent of authoritarianism, he was imprisoned by both Nationalists (1923) and Communists (1944).

Musial (mū'sąl), Stan. [Called "Stan the Man."] b. at Chester, Pa., Oct. 8, 1917—. American baseball player. An outfielder and first baseman (1941 et seq.) for the St. Louis Cardinals, Musial won the National League batting championship in 1943, 1946, 1948, 1950, and 1951. He was perhaps the most feared batter in the league despite his peculiar crouched batting position.

Musica Antiqua (mū'si.kạ an.tē'kwạ). Collection (1812) of old songs compiled by John Stafford Smith, and containing English and Norman pieces.

Musick (mū'zik), Edwin C. b. at St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 13, 1893; d. near Pago Pago, Samoa, Jan. 11, 1938. American aviator who was awarded (1935) the Harmon trophy for the outstanding individual accomplishment in aviation. He was active (1921–38) in commercial aviation. He commanded (April, 1935) the first trial flight of the China Clipper, and made (December, 1935) the first regular California-Manila commercial flight. Before his death in an airplane crash, he had completed 25 years of flying without accident.

Musidora (mū.si.dō'rạ). Coy sweetheart of Damon in James Thomson's The Seasons. His delicacy on the occasion of seeing her bathing won her affections. She is the subject of a painting by Thomas Gainsborough, in the National Gallery, London.

Musikalisches Opfer (mö.zi.kä'li.shęs op'fĕr). [Eng. trans., "Musical Offering."] Set of compositions (published 1747) by Johann Sebastian Bach, all based on a theme suggested by Frederick the Great and consisting of two ricercari, eight canons, and a fuga canonica.

Musil (mö'sil, mö'zil), Alois. b. at Rychtářov, in Moravia, June 30, 1868—. Austrian Orientalist and explorer of Biblical countries. He served as professor (1902 et seq.) at the universities of Olomouc (Olmütz), Vienna, and Prague, and traveled through the Negeb, Moab, and Edom, and also North Africa and southern Mesopotamia. Author of The Middle Euphrates (1927), The Manners and Customs of the Rwala Bedouins (1928), and In the Arabian Desert (1930).

Musil, Robert. b. at Klagenfurt, Austria, Nov. 6, 1880; d. at Geneva Switzerland, April 15, 1942. Austrian novelist. His outstanding work is the three-volume novel Der Mann ohne Eigenschaften (1930–33; third volume fragmentary).

Musin (mü.zaṅ), Ovide. b. near Liége, Belgium, Sept. 22, 1854; d. 1929. Belgian violinist. He made his debut in France. Later he visited the Netherlands, and in 1877 went to London, afterward making a tour of the world. In 1898 he succeeded César Thomson as professor of the violin at the Liége Conservatory.

Muskat (mus'kat). See Muscat.

Muskegon (mus.kē'gọn). City in W Lower Michigan, county seat of Muskegon County, on Lake Michigan: manufactures of office furniture and equipment, airplane engines, radios and phonographs, knitted goods, leather goods, and paper products; formerly an important lumbering center. There is an oil-refining industry supplied by nearby oil fields. Pop. of city, 48,429 (1950); of urbanized area, 85,245 (1950).

Muskegon Heights. City in W Lower Michigan, in Muskegon County, adjoining Muskegon on the S. It has manufactures of refrigerators and machinery. 18,828 (1950).

Muski (mös'kē). See Meshech.

Muskingum (mus.king'gum). River in Ohio, formed by the union of the Tuscarawas and Walhonding at Coshocton, and joining the Ohio at Marietta. Length, ab. 110 mi.; including the Tuscarawas, ab. 240 mi.

Muskogean (mus.kō'gē.ạn). One of the major North American Indian language families, embracing languages and dialects spoken by tribes which once occupied what are now the states of Mississippi and Alabama, as well as W Tennessee and portions of Georgia and Florida. It includes Muskogee, Hitchiti, Koasati, Choctaw, and Natchez. Some students lump Natchez and Muskogean together, making a Natchez-Muskogean stock.

Muskogee (mus.kō'gē). City in E Oklahoma, county seat of Muskogee County, near the confluence of the Verdigris, Grand, and Arkansas rivers, in a petroleum-producing area: manufactures of petroleum products, machinery, steel framework, bricks, and truck bodies. It is also a shipping point for cotton, cottonseed oil, and livestock. It is the seat of a junior college. It was founded (1872) on the site of a former fur-trading post, Three Forks, and was established (1874) as a federal Indian agency. 37,289 (1950).

Muskogee. North American Indian language spoken by the Creek and Seminole Indians, and belonging to the Muskogean linguistic stock.

Muskoka Lakes (mus.kō'kạ). Group of lakes in S Ontario, Canada, ab. 100 mi. N of Toronto, E of Georgian Bay. The principal lakes are Muskoka, Rosseau, and Joseph, and there are dozens of smaller lakes, and numerous islands in the lakes. The region is a popular summer resort.

Muso (mö'sō). See Muzo.

Musonius (mū.sō'ni.us), Gaius (or Caius) Rufus. fl. in the 1st century A.D. Roman Stoic philosopher.

Musos (mö'sōz). See Muzos.

Muspellsheim (můs'pels.hām). [Also: Muspel, Muspelheim; Old Norse, Muspellsheimr.] In the Old Norse cosmogony, the realm of fire and warmth in the south. At Ragnarök the Surt (Old Norse Surtr), the ruler of Muspellsheim, comes with his flaming sword leading his forces against the gods, and destroys the world with fire.

Muspilli (mös.pil'lē). Fragmentary Old High German poem on the end of the world, of unknown authorship, written in alliterative verse. It exists in a single manuscript, from about the year 900, in the Bavarian dialect.

Muspratt (mus'prat), James Sheridan. b. at Dublin, March 8, 1821; d. at West Derby, Lancashire, England, April 3, 1871. British chemist. He founded (1848) the Liverpool College of Chemistry, and became professor there. His works include Outlines of Qualitative Analysis (1849), Dictionary of Chemistry (1854), and others.

Musqat (mus'kat). See Muscat.

Mussafia (mös.sä'fyä), Adolf. b. at Spalato, Austria (now Split, Yugoslavia), Feb. 15, 1835; d. at Florence, Italy, June 7, 1905. Austrian Romance scholar, one of the founders of Romance philology. He served as professor (1860 et seq.) at Vienna. Author of a very often reëdited Italienische Sprachlehre (Italian Grammar, 1860).

Musschenbroek (mus'ẹn.brök), Pieter van. b. at Leiden, Netherlands, March 14, 1692; d. there, Sept. 19, 1761. Dutch natural philosopher and mathematician. He was professor of natural philosophy and mathematics at Utrecht (1723–39) and professor of mathematics at Leiden (1739–61). He invented (c1731) the pyrometer, and discovered (1746) the Leyden jar, which is named for his discovery although E. G. von Kleist of Pomerania had discovered it the year before.

Mussel Aa (mus'ẹl ä). See under Aa, Groningen, Netherlands.

Musselburgh (mus'ẹl.bur.ọ). Parliamentary burgh in S Scotland, in Midlothian, situated on the Firth of Forth at the mouth of the river Esk, ab. 7 mi. E of Edinburgh, ab. 399 mi. N of London by rail. Fisherrow Harbor, within the burgh limits, is a fishing port. Musselburgh is a notable golfing resort, and has a race course. The battle of Pinkie (1547) was fought near here and Carberry Hill, where Mary, Queen of Scots surrendered (1567) to the Scottish lords, is nearby. 18,359 (est. 1948).

Musselshell (mus'ẹl.shel). River in C Montana, a tributary of the Missouri. Length, ab. 300 mi.

Mussert (mus'ẽrt), Anton. b. at Werkendam, Netherlands, May 11, 1894; executed as a war criminal at The Hague, Netherlands, May 7, 1946. Dutch engineer and politician. He founded (1932) the National Socialist movement in the Netherlands, was proclaimed (1942, by Hitler) "Leader of the Netherlands People," and was executed for treason after World War II.

Musset (mü.se), Alfred de. [Full name, Louis Charles Alfred de Musset.] b. at Paris, Nov. 11, 1810; d. there, May 1, 1857. French poet, playwright, and short-story writer. He graduated with high honors from the Collège Henri IV at Paris, and had just completed his 20th year when he published his first volume of poetry, Contes d'Espagne et d'Italie (1829). Two more collections of poems established his fame, Poésies diverses (1831) and Le Spectacle dans un fauteuil (1832). In 1833 he went to Italy with George Sand; but, after an extended trip, fell out with her at Venice, and returned to France alone. His morbid state of mind finds expression in the Confession d'un enfant du siècle (1836). During these years (1833–37) De Musset contributed a number of short plays to the Revue des Deux Mondes; they have appeared since then as Comédies et proverbes (1840). Short stories from the same magazine (1837–39) were also reprinted in book form (1840). In the same year (1840) appeared the first edition of the Poésies nouvelles. One of his last publications was a volume of Contes (1854). He was received in the French Academy in 1852. His complete works were published in 1860.

Musset, Paul Edmé de. b. at Paris, Nov. 7, 1804; d. there, May 17, 1880. French novelist and littérateur; brother of Alfred de Musset. He wrote Lui et elle (1859) and a biography of his brother.

Mussolini (mös.sō.lē'nē; Anglicized, mō.sō.lē'ni, mus.ō-), Benito. [Called Il Duce, meaning "The Leader."] b. at Dovia di Predappio, Italy, July 29, 1883; d. near Dongo, Italy, April 28, 1945. Italian political leader and journalist, organizer of the first of several 20th-century European totalitarian states, his movement, Fascism, giving the name to the totalitarianism of the right. After studying in Switzerland, which he was forced to leave because of his Socialist activities, he taught (1907–08) elementary school in Italy. With Cesare Battisti he worked on the newspaper Il Popolo, and became (1910) secretary of the Socialist Party in the province of Forlì. With the expulsion of Leonida Bissolati and Bonomi he became leader of the group, and for his activities on its behalf he was arrested several times. After editing (1912–14) the socialist daily Avanti!, he founded (Nov. 14, 1914) the daily Il Popolo d'Italia, in which he urged Italian intervention in World War I on the side of the Allies. This journal continued throughout his rule to be the official mouthpiece for his views. He interrupted his editorship to serve (May 24, 1915–Feb. 23, 1917) in the army until a wound returned him to private life. He had by this time long since severed his connection with Marxist socialism, and begun to espouse a controlled economy along syndicalist lines at home and expansion of Italian territory abroad. Both of these aims had a great appeal to many people in Italy in the years immediately following World War I: the Russian Revolution had terrified the leaders of the Italian financial and industrial community, and Mussolini's program seemed to many of them to be an effective means of countering any similar development in their own country; so far as territorial expansion was concerned, vast numbers of Italians felt that their country had not only failed to receive its just reward as a victorious power, but that this had come about because the Italian leaders had not been sufficiently aggressive. In its initial phase, however, Mussolini's strategy was aimed chiefly against the Communists, and it was ostensibly toward this end that he founded (March 23, 1919) the first Fascio di Combattimento, the nucleus of the Fascist Party. These groups being imitated by his followers all over Italy, he organized (1921) the official Fascist Party, at the same time being elected deputy. The party expanded very rapidly, and he organized the famous March on Rome (Oct. 28, 1922) to compel the king to accept its dominance. This coup successfully overthrew the Facta government and, on request of the king, Mussolini assumed (Oct. 31, 1922) the office of prime minister with his own cabinet; he himself held the posts of minister of state and foreign minister, and later served (1935–36) also as minister of the colonies. With the help of a cabinet completely subservient to him Mussolini molded the Italian government to his ideal; the fiat against all opposition policies (1926), the alteration (1928) of the electoral laws so that his own group had the ultimate choice of appointment, and the creation (1930) of the "corporazioni" as a political unit brought Italy completely under his control. One of his most notable accomplishments in these years was the signing (Feb. 11, 1929) of the Lateran Treaty with the Pope, which insured that there would not be opposition by the Vatican to his plans. His early denunciation (1930) of the Treaty of Versailles won him the enmity of France; the sanctions imposed on him by the League of Nations for his military conquest (1935–36) of Ethiopia caused him to withdraw Italy from the League; at the same time he established friendly relations with Hitler Germany. After sending "volunteers" and equipment to Francisco Franco's aid in the Spanish Civil War, he further established (1937) the corporate state and abolished (1938) the chamber of deputies, all the while strengthening the Berlin-Rome Axis by acceptance of Hitler's racial views. As first marshal of the empire (1938) and supreme commander (June 10, 1940, et seq.) of the armed forces, he entered World War II on the side of Germany. After being defeated in Africa and Sicily and experiencing the Allied invasion of Italy, his countrymen deposed him (July 25, 1943) and imprisoned him. He was rescued (September, 1943) by the Germans, who held him in safekeeping in Austria. He attempted a return as head of the Socialist Italian Republic, a short-lived German-supported government, but was forced to flee again. While attempting to leave the country disguised as a drunken German soldier, he was shot (April 20, 1945) by partisans and his body returned to Milan, where it was exhibited to the crowds.

Mussomeli (mös.sō.mā'lē). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Caltanisetta, NW of Caltanisetta: an agricultural commune. It has a palace and a castle. Pop. of commune, 14,014 (1936); of town, 13,861 (1936).

Mussorgsky or Moussorgsky (mö.sôrg'ski), Modest Petrovich. b. in the government of Pskov, Russia, March 28, 1835; d. at St. Petersburg, March 28, 1881. Russian composer. He entered the army, but resigned in 1857 and became a pupil of Mili Balakirev. His greatest work, the opera Boris Godunov, based on Alexander Pushkin's play, produced in 1874, was later revised by Nikolai Rimsky-Korsakov, and has often been given in the latter's version. He left another opera and fragments of three more, also a number of songs (in which he is at his best), piano compositions, and orchestral works. Much of his music was edited after his death by Rimsky-Korsakov, who completed his unfinished Khovanshchina. Among his other well-known compositions are Night on Bald Mountain (or Saint John's Night on the Bare Mountain) and Pictures at an Exhibition (orchestrated by Ravel, originally for piano).

Mussulmans (mus'ul.mąnz). Name formerly used for Mohammedans, or Moslems.

Mustafa I (mös'tä.fä). [Also, Mustapha.] b. c1591; d. 1639. Turkish sultan (1617–18 and 1622–23); brother of Ahmed I, whom he succeeded. He was deposed, but after the death of Osman II, his nephew, who had taken his place, he again reigned until deposed for Murad IV, another nephew.

Mustafa II. [Also, Mustapha.] b. 1664; d. Dec. 31, 1703. Turkish sultan (1695–1703); son of Mohammed IV. He was defeated (1697) in person by the Imperialists under Prince Eugene at Zenta, and signed (1699) the peace of Karlowitz by which he gave up Hungary, Transylvania, Croatia, and other lands to Austria, the Morea (Peloponnesus) to Venice, and Podolia to Poland. He was deposed shortly before his death.

Mustafa III. [Also, Mustapha.] b. 1717; d. Jan. 21, 1774. Turkish sultan (1757–74); son of Ahmed III. He waged war unsuccessfully (1768–74) with Russia.

Mustafa IV. [Also, Mustapha.] b. c1779; killed Nov. 15, 1808. Turkish sultan (1807–08); son of Abdul-Hamid I. His cousin, Selim III, had attempted to reform the government to eliminate corruption and was overthrown by the Janizaries, who put Mustafa on the throne. When an attempt was made to rescue Selim, the rebels killed him; Constantinople fell, however, to the rescuing army and Mustafa was in turn murdered.

Mustafa, Kara. See Kara Mustafa.

Mustafa Kemal (ke.mäl'). See Kemal Atatürk.

Mustagh Pass (mös.tä'). See Muztagh Pass.

Mustagh Range. Former name of the Karakoram Range.

Müstair (müsh.ter'), Val. Romansh name of Münstertal.

Mustapha ben Abdallah (mös'tä.fä ben äb.däl'lą). See Haji Khalfa.

Mustapha Kemal (ke.mäl'). See Kemal Atatürk.

Mustardseed (mus'tȧrd.sēd). Fairy in Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream.

Mustel (müs.tel), Charles Victor. b. at Le Havre, France, June 13, 1815; d. at Paris, 1890. French maker of musical instruments. He originated the "Mustel Organ," the "double expression" which regulates tone volume by use of knee pedals, the "harpe éolienne," a form of celesta, and the Métaphone, which softens harmonium tones.

Mustèr (mös.ter'). Romansh name of Disentis.

Musy (mü.zē), Jean Marie. b. at Albeuve, Switzerland, Jan. 10, 1876; d. at Fribourg, Switzerland, April 19, 1952. Swiss statesman. He was a member (1919–34) of the federal council and president (1925, 1930) of the Swiss Confederation.

Mut (möt). In Egyptian mythology, "the mother," the Theban consort of Amen, the other member of the triad being their son Khuns, the moon god. She was goddess of the ocean, and as mother goddess was worshiped especially at Thebes.

Muta (mö'tą). Locality in Syria where the Mohammedans fought (c629) their first battle against the Christians.

Mutadid (mö'tä.did), Abbad al-. See Abbad II.

Mutamid (mö'tä.mid), Abbad al-. See Abbad III.

Mutanabbi (mö.tä.näb'bē), al-. b. 915 A.D.; d. at Al Kufa, in what is now Iraq, 965 A.D. Arab poet. His Divan (collection of poems) has been translated into German.

Mutankiang (mö'dän'jyäng'). City in NE China, in the province of Sungkiang, Manchuria, ab. 160 mi. NE of Kirin: a rail and road junction; the major trading center of NE Manchuria. It has flour-milling, soybean-processing, lumber, and paper industries. Area of municipality, ab. 140 sq. mi.; pop. 200,319 (1946).

Mutano (mö.tä'nō). [Native name, Unkumbi; former name, Humbe.] Fort and county capital on the Cunene River in Angola, SW Africa. Several wars were fought here between the Portuguese, the Boers, and the natives.

Muta Nzige (mö'tän zē'gā). Native name of Edward, Lake.

Mutation. Sonnet by William Cullen Bryant, published in 1824 and included in his Poems (1832).

Mutations of the Phoenix. Volume of poetry by Herbert Read, published in 1923.

Muteczuma (mö.tā.sö'mä). See Montezuma I.

Muth (möt), Karl. b. at Worms, Germany, Jan. 31, 1867—. German historian of literature who played a major part in the revival of Roman Catholic participation and interest in German cultural research and contemporary endeavor. His pamphlets, Steht die katholische Belletristik auf der Höhe der Zeit? (1898) and especially Die literarischen Aufgaben der deutschen Katholiken (1899), were programmatic manifestoes. He founded and edited the Munich Roman Catholic monthly Hochland (1903 et seq.). Author of Die Wiedergeburt der Dichtung aus dem religiösen Erlebnis (1909) and Religion, Kunst und Poesie (1914).

Muths (möts), Johann Christoph Friedrich Guts. See Guts Muths, Johann Christoph Friedrich.

Mutina (mū'ti.nȧ). Ancient name of Modena, Italy.

Mutinensian War (mū.ti.nen'shȧn). Name given to the military operations in and near Mutina (now Modena), Italy, 44–43 B.C. Decimus Junius Brutus was blockaded at Mutina by Mark Antony in 44, and was relieved by Hirtius, Pansa, and Octavius, who defeated Antony.

Mutiny at the Nore (nōr). See Nore, Mutiny at the.

Mutis (mö'tēs), José Celestino. b. at Cádiz, Spain, April 6, 1732; d. at Bogotá, New Granada (Colombia), Sept. 12, 1808. Spanish botanist. From 1760 he resided in New Granada, where, under government auspices, he traveled extensively.

Mutsu Bay (mö.tsö). [Also: Aomori Bay; Japanese, Mutsu Wan (wän).] Large bay in extreme N Honshu, Japan. Length, ab. 25 mi.; width, ab. 5–10 mi.

Mutsuhito (mö.tsö.hē.tō). [Reign style, Meiji.] b. Nov. 3, 1852; d. at Tokyo, July 30, 1912. Emperor of Japan (1867–1912), the leading figure in the modernization of Japan during the latter part of the 19th century. As emperor he abolished the centuries-old system of shogunate government and restored absolute power to the emperor himself, this being known as the Restoration of 1868. Shortly after the Restoration a series of reforms, such as the abolition of torture, the establishment of a judicial code, the building of railways, the introduction of the Western calendar, and the teaching of English in schools, were instituted. During his reign wars with China and with Russia were successfully fought, in 1894–95 and 1904–05, respectively.

Muttra (mu'trą). [Official name, Mathura.] District in Uttar Pradesh, Union of India, NW of Agra: rice, sugar, and wheat. Capital, Muttra; area, ab. 1,447 sq. mi.; pop. 912,264 (1951).

Muttra. [Official name, Mathura; ancient Greek, Modoura.] Capital of the district of Muttra, Uttar Pradesh, Union of India, on the Jumna River ab. 30 mi. NW of Agra: important religious center. Nearby is the traditional birthplace of Krishna, and Muttra is one of the seven sacred Hindu cities of India. It is an ancient Hindu city, mentioned by Ptolemy, and was plundered and devastated by Mohammedans in 1017, 1500, and 1668. It passed to the British in 1803. Pop. 105,773 (1951).

Mutual Aid, a Factor of Evolution. Work (1902) by Prince Peter Kropotkin (1842–1921). It contests Darwin's law of mutual struggle, positing "mutual aid" as the corrective complementary concept. Kropotkin's conclusions were based on extensive geographical and anthropological investigations in Siberia during the late 19th century.

Mutunus (mū.tō'nus). Ancient Italian god, personifying the sexual function of marriage. Later, in Roman mythology, he became identified with Priapus.

Muysca (mwēs'ką). Term sometimes applied to the South American Indian linguistic stock known usually as Chibchan.

Muzaffar-ed-Din (mö.zäf'fąr.ed.dēn'). b. at Tehran, Persia, March 25, 1853; d. Jan. 8, 1907. Shah (1896–1907) of Persia; son of Shah Nasr-ed-Din. He succeeded to the throne (June 8, 1896) with Russian and British aid and subsequently granted both powers concessions. Under popular pressure he instituted the liberal constitution of 1906. He was succeeded (1907) by his son, Mohammed Ali.

Muzaffargarh (mö.zuf'ąr.gär). District of Multan division, Punjab, Pakistan, N of Multan: forest products, indigo, and cotton. Area, ab. 5,605 sq. mi.; pop. 712,849 (1941).

Muzaffarnagar (mö.zuf'ąr.nug.ąr). [Also, Mozuffernugger.] District of Uttar Pradesh, Union of India, NW of Delhi: rice, cotton, wheat, sugar, and barley. Capital, Muzaffarnagar; area, ab. 1,621 sq. mi.; pop. 1,221,768 (1951).

Muzaffarnagar. [Also, Mozuffernugger.] Capital of the district of Muzaffarnagar, Uttar Pradesh, Union of India, ab. 65 mi. NE of Delhi. It is a trade center. 46,758 (1941).

Muzaffarpur (mö.zuf'ąr.pör). [Also, Mozufferpore.] District of Bihar, Union of India, NE of Patna: rice, wheat, sugar, tobacco, and oilseeds. Capital, Muzaffarpur; area, ab. 3,025 sq. mi.; pop. 3,520,739 (1951).

Muzaffarpur. [Also, Mozufferpore.] Capital of the district of Muzaffarpur, Bihar, Union of India, on the Little Gandak River ab. 37 mi. NE of Patna: trade and food-processing center, formerly the center of the indigo industry. 54,009 (1941).

Muziano (mö.tsyä'nō), Girolamo. b. near Brescia, Italy, 1528; d. c1590. Italian painter of historical pieces and landscapes, and worker in mosaics.

Muzo (mö'sō). [Also, Muso.] Village in C Colombia, in Boyacá department, on the Carare River, N of Bogotá. Its emerald mines were long the richest in the world, and are still worked. During the colonial period Muzo was a wealthy town. Pop. under 500 (1938).

Muzos (mö'sōz). [Also: Colimas, Musos.] South American Indian tribe which inhabited the highland valleys E of the Magdalena River and NW of Bogotá in Colombia. They warred first with the Chibcha and later with the Spanish until virtually decimated. They had the reputation of being cannibals. Their language was Paniquita, a subdialect now placed in the Barbacoa group of the Western division of the Chibchan linguistic stock.

Muztagh Pass (mös.tą'). [Also, Mustagh Pass.] Mountain pass in N Kashmir, near Mount Godwin-Austen in the western Himalayas. It connects the upper Indus and Yarkand valleys. Elevation, 19,030 ft.

Muzzey (muz'ĭ), David Saville. b. at Lexington, Mass., Oct. 9, 1870—. American historian. He was professor of American history (1920–40) at Columbia, and a leader of the Society for Ethical Culture. Author of Rise of the New Testament (1900), Spiritual Heroes (1902), An American History (1911), History of the American People (1927), James G. Blaine, a Political Idol of Other Days (1934), and other books.

Mvae (ẹm.vā'ā). See Mwai.

Mvele (ẹm.vā'lā). See Mwele.

Mwai (mwī). [Also: Mvae, Mwei.] Subgroup of the Bantu-speaking Pangwe of C Africa, inhabiting S Cameroun and the N part of the province of Gabon in French Equatorial Africa.

Mwanza (mwän'zą). Inland lake port in E Africa, in Tanganyika territory, on the S shore of Lake Victoria, ab. 418 mi. from Kisumu and ab. 238 mi. from Tabora, with which it is connected by rail. It exports considerable quantities of cotton grown in the area immediately S of the town.

Mwei (mwā). See Mwai.

Mwele (mwā'lā). [Also, Mvele.] Subgroup of the Pangwe, a Bantu-speaking people of C Africa, inhabiting an area in SW Cameroun, NE of Yaoundé. Their population is estimated at ab. 37,000 (by I. Dugast, Inventaire Ethnique du Sud-Cameroun, 1949).

Mwera (mwā'rā). [Also: Wambuera, Wamwera.] Bantu-speaking people of E Africa, inhabiting a region in SE Tanganyika. They have exogamous matrilineal clans and age grades based on circumcision. They practice hoe agriculture, and their principal foods are maize and millet.

Mweru (mwā'rö), Lake. [Also: Meru, Moero, Moëru.] Lake in C Africa, on the border between SE Belgian Congo and N Northern Rhodesia. It is drained by the Luvua River. Elevation, ab. 3,025 ft.; length, ab. 70 mi.; area, ab. 1,680 sq. mi.

My Ántonia (ăn'tô.nyä, an.tọ.nē'ą). Novel by Willa Cather, published in 1918.

My Brother Jonathan (jon'ą.thąn). Novel by Francis Brett Young, published in 1928.

Mycale (mik'ą.lē). In ancient geography, a mountain in Lydia, Asia Minor, N of Miletus. Near it, in September, 479 B.C., on the same day as the battle of Plataea, the Greeks under Leotychides and Xantippus defeated the Persian naval forces.

Mycenae (mī.sē'nē). In ancient geography, a city in Argolis, Greece, ab. 14 mi. SW of Corinth. It was a very ancient settlement, dating from perhaps the 20th century B.C., and was conspicuous in Greek mythology. Excavation of the site has supplied some of the oldest materials for the study of Greek architecture and art. It consisted of an acropolis, occupying the apex of a hill, and the lower town, whose confused ruins are spread over its slopes. The acropolis is triangular, and is surrounded by a massive wall of huge stones, partly shaped. It is entered by the Gate of the Lions. This gate is at the end of a walled passage. The opening is ab. 10 ft. wide and high, tapering toward the top, with monolithic jambs and a huge lintel. Above the lintel a large triangular opening is formed by corbeling, and the great slab, 2 ft. thick, which fills this, bears the remarkable relief of two facing rampant lions separated by a column. Close inside of this gate, in a double circle of upright stones 80 ft. in diameter, were found the tombs containing golden ornaments and masks, inlaid sword-blades, and other objects whose discovery astonished the scientific world. Modern excavations have disclosed on the acropolis a prehistoric palace resembling that at Tiryns. The most important monuments of the lower town are the great "beehive" tombs, commonly called treasuries. Of these the so-called treasury of Atreus is a typical example. The interior is a circle ab. 50 ft. in diameter and the same in height, covered with a pseudo-dome formed by corbeling in the horizontal courses of the wall. The original excavations were made by Heinrich Schliemann in 1876–77, and much later work was done on the site by the Archaeological Society of Athens. The discoveries at Mycenae threw a flood of light upon the earliest Greek art, particularly in the department of pottery. They were the first important finds of their class, which has since been recognized in a large proportion of Greek settlements of sufficient age, and is everywhere distinguished as Mycenaean. Mycenaean ornament includes geometric decoration, foliage, marine and animal forms, and the human figure. It may be dated back to the 12th century B.C., and follows in time the art of the "Homeric city" at Hissarlik (Troy), which is without painted decoration, and that of Thera. Mycenaean art was practiced and developed through several centuries, and existed contemporaneously with the succeeding dipylon style of decoration, which began c1000 B.C. The chief objects found at Mycenae are in a museum at Athens. Mycenae was destroyed c1100 B.C. by the Dorians, and never recovered its former importance, being supplanted by Argos. In Roman times its ruins were visited as a historic site.

Mycerinus (mis.ẹ.rī'nus). Latin name of Menkure.

Myddleton (mid'l.tọn), Sir Hugh. [Also: Myddelton, Middleton.] b. c1555; d. Dec. 10, 1631. English goldsmith, capitalist, and projector of the "New River" water supply of London. He was commissioned to build a canal to bring water into London from New River at Ware, Hampshire. The canal, dug with financial aid from James I after Myddleton had used up his money, was opened in 1613. It was not a financial success until after Myddleton died.

My Double: and How He Undid Me. Tale by Edward Everett Hale, collected in his If, Yes, and Perhaps (1868). It originally appeared (1859) in the Atlantic Monthly.

Myer (mī'ẽr), Albert James. b. at Newburg, N.Y., Sept. 20, 1829; d. at Buffalo, N.Y., Aug. 24, 1880. American meteorologist. He organized the signal corps and became chief signal officer in the U.S. army in 1860, and founded and was in charge of the Weather Bureau in 1870. He published Manual of Signals (1868).

Myers (mī'ẽrz), Abraham Charles. b. at Georgetown, S.C., in May, 1811; d. at Washington, D.C., June 20, 1889. American soldier, first Confederate quartermaster general (1861–63).

Myers, Charles Samuel. b. 1873; d. 1946. British psychologist, largely responsible for the development of industrial psychology in Great Britain. He taught experimental psychology at Cambridge (1901 et seq.), later published a Textbook of Experimental Psychology (1909; 2nd ed., 1911), and in 1913 formally established the psychology laboratory at Cambridge. In 1921, with H. J. Welch, he helped found the National Institute of Industrial Psychology, and a year later became its director. In 1908, with H. A. Wilson, he published a significant paper indicating that sounds could be localized on the basis of the phase difference at the two ears.

Myers, Frederic William Henry. b. at Keswick, Cumberland, England, Feb. 6, 1843; d. at Rome, Jan. 17, 1901. English man of letters and philosophical writer. He studied at Trinity College, Cambridge, taking his degree in 1864, and became a fellow of Trinity in 1865. When the Society for Psychical Research was established in 1882 he was one of its founders, and he remained until his death one of the most important of the workers in this field. With Frank Podmore and Edmund Gurney he published, in 1886, Phantasms of the Living. Science and a Future Life appeared in 1893 and Human Personality and its Survival of Bodily Death in 1901. He also published poems of considerable merit (collected 1870 and 1882). He wrote Essays, Classical and Modern (1883), and Wordsworth (1881), a volume in the English Men of Letters series.

Myers, Jerome. b. at Petersburg, Va., March 20, 1867; d. 1940. American painter and engraver, particularly of New York City scenes; one of the originators, with Walt Kuhn, Elmer McRae, and Henry F. Taylor, of the Armory Show of 1913. He studied at Cooper Union and the Art Students League, New York, and became a member (1929) of the National Academy of Design. His Night Mission is in the Metropolitan Museum; The End of the Street is in the Art Institute of Chicago. He is represented also in the National Gallery at Washington, D.C., Whitney Museum of American Art at New York, and others.

Myers, Ned. See Ned Myers.

Myers, Philip Van Ness. b. at Tribes Hill, N.Y., Aug. 10, 1846; d. at Cincinnati, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1937. American historian. He was president (1879–90) of Farmers' College in Ohio, and professor of history and political economy (1890–1900) and dean of the academic faculty (1895–97) at the University of Cincinnati. Author of the textbooks Ancient History (1882), Medieval and Modern History (1889), General History (1889), History of Rome (1890), History of Greece (1897), The Modern Age (1903), and History as Past Ethics (1913).

Myerstown (mī'ėrz.toun). Borough in SE Pennsylvania, in Lebanon County: manufactures of textiles, cigars, pretzels, and iron products. It was laid out in 1768. Pop. 3,050 (1950).

Myers v. United States, 272 U.S. 52 (1926). U.S. Supreme Court decision involving the presidential removal power. The majority opinion delivered by Chief Justice William H. Taft declared unconstitutional the federal act of 1876 prohibiting the presidential removal of first-class postmasters and held that the removal power of the president could not be limited or controlled by Congress except as specifically provided for in the Constitution. The implications of the decision relating to the presidential removal of members of quasi-judicial or quasi-legislative federal bodies was clarified in Humphrey's Executor v. United States (1935).

My Heart and My Flesh. Novel by Elizabeth Madox Roberts, published in 1927.

My Heart's in the Highlands. Play (1939) by William Saroyan.

Myitkyina (myit'chi.nä, myit.chē.nä'). City in N Burma, on the Irrawaddy River, ab. 340 mi. N of Mandalay by rail: a station on the Ledo Road. The airport just outside the city was the scene of bloody fighting between the Japanese and the Allies during World War II; it was captured by the Allied forces in August, 1944. The city is an important trading center and is the northern terminus of the railroad from Rangoon (729 mi.). 7,328 (1931).

Myjava (mē'yä.vä). [Hungarian, Miava.] Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Bratislava, in W Slovakia, situated in the Carpathian foothills ab. 46 mi. NE of Bratislava. 9,662 (1947).

Mykerinos (mik.ẹ.rī'nos). Greek name of Menkure.

Mykonos (mik'ō.nos, mī'kō.nos; Greek, mē'kô.nôs). [Also, Mikonos.] Island in the Aegean Sea, in SE Greece, in the nomos (department) of Cyclades. Area, ab. 33 sq. mi.

My Lady Mary (mār'ī). One of three historical tales in The Ladies! (1922), by Lily Adams Beck under the pseudonym E. Barrington

My Lady of Orange (or'ąnj). Historical novel by Henry Christopher Bailey, published in 1901.

My Lady Pokahontas: A True Relation of Virginia (pō.kạ.hon'tąs; vėr.jin'yạ). Romance by John Esten Cooke, published in 1885.

Mylae (mī'lē). Ancient name of Milazzo, Italy.

Mylasa (mī.lā'sạ). [Also: Mylassa (-las'ạ); modern town name, Milâs.] In ancient geography, an inland town in SW Asia Minor, in Caria. It was the capital of the later Carian kingdom.

Mylitta (mī.lit'ạ). In Babylonian mythology, a fertility and birth goddess, identified by Herodotus with the Greek Aphrodite, and by other writers with Ishtar. Her cult demanded that every woman serve in her temple as a sacred prostitute, until released by a fee from a stranger. The money for the service was given in the name of the goddess.

Mylius-Erichsen (mē'lę.ûs.er'ik.sęn), Ludwig. b. at Viborg, Jutland, Denmark, 1872; d. in Greenland, Nov. 25, 1907. Danish arctic explorer. In 1902–04 he took part in an expedition to W Greenland for the purpose of studying the manners, language, and traditions of the natives. In June, 1906, he set out from Copenhagen in charge of an expedition to E Greenland, intending to outline the NE coast and complete the mapping of Greenland. In this he was successful, but perished from the hardships of the return journey southward.

My Lost Youth. Poem by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, published in 1855 and included in The Courtship of Miles Standish (1858).

Mymensingh (mī'mẹn.sing). [Also: Maimansinh, Mymensing.] District in Dacca division, East Bengal, Pakistan, ab. 125 mi. NE of Calcutta. The area is important for its jute, rice, and tobacco products. Area, ab. 6,156 sq. mi.; pop. 6,023,758 (1941).

My Mortal Enemy. Novel by Willa Cather, published in 1926.

My Name is Legion. Novel by Charles Morgan, published in 1925.

My Novel, or Varieties of English Life. Novel by Edward Bulwer-Lytton, published in 1853.

Mynpuri (mīn'pö.rē). See Mainpuri.

Mynyddislwyn (mu.niтн'is'lö.un). Urban district in SW England, in Monmouthshire, ab. 12 mi. N of Cardiff, Wales. The chief town is Pontllanfraith, which has extensive coal mines, ironworks, and stone quarries. Nearly all the land in the vicinity is in pasture. Mynyddislwyn has the church of Saint Tewdwr, rebuilt in 1820, in the Early English style. Pop. of urban district, 14,418 (1951); of Pontllanfraith, 4,596 (1931).

Myonnesus (mī.ọ̄.nē'sus). In ancient geography, a promontory on the coast of Ionia, W Asia Minor, ab. 27 mi. NW of Ephesus. Near it the Romans gained (190 B.C.) a naval victory over the Syrians under Antiochus III.

Myra (mī'rạ). In ancient geography, a city in Lycia, SW Asia Minor, situated near the S coast in lat. 36°17′ N., long. 30°3′ E. An ancient theater here is among the finest in Asia Minor. Saint Nicholas was bishop of Myra in the 4th century.

Myrdal (mür'däl), Gunnar. [Full name, Karl Gunnar Myrdal.] b. at Gustaf, Dalecarlia, Sweden, Dec. 12, 1898—. Swedish economist and government official. A Social Democrat, he is known as an advocate of economic planning and has served (1947 et seq.) as executive secretary of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe. He is also noted for his sociological study, An American Dilemma: The Negro Problem and Modern Democracy (2 vols., 1944), a classic in its field. He was graduated (1927) from the University of Stockholm and was a Rockefeller fellow (1929–30) in the U.S., and became (1931) associate professor at the University of Stockholm, where he was appointed (1933) Lars Hierta professor of political economy. He has served (1935–38, 1943 et seq.) as a senator; has been a member of several government commissions, including those on population (1935–38) and social housing (1935–43), and became (1943) director of the Swedish Bank. Author of Crisis in the Population Question (with his wife, Alva M. Myrdal, 1934), Monetary Equilibrium (1939), Population: A Problem for Democracy (1940), and others.

Myrddhin (mir'тнin). Welsh form of Merlin.

Myres (mīrz), John Linton. b. at Preston, Lancashire, England, July 3, 1869 —. English archaeologist. He was Wykeham professor of ancient history at Oxford from 1910. In 1893 he traveled in Greece, Asia Minor, and Crete, and in 1894 took part in excavations in Cyprus, and assisted in preparing a catalogue (published 1899) of the collections of antiquities in the Cyprus Museum at Nicosia. He also published a History of Rome (1902) and various papers on archaeological subjects.

Myrina (mi.rī'nạ). Very extensive Greek necropolis, near Izmir (Smyrna), Asia Minor, discovered c1870, and systematically excavated by the French School at Athens between 1880 and 1882, known for terra-cotta figurines.

Myrina. Ancient name of Kastron.

Myrmidon (mėr'mi.don, -don). In Greek mythology, a son of Zeus, reputed ancestor of the Myrmidons.

Myrmidons. In Greek legend, a warlike tribe of Phthiotis, Thessaly. They were led by Achilles in the Trojan War. According to one account, they were transformed from a horde of ants by Zeus, and performed their warlike duties as relentlessly as ants.

Myron (mī'ron). fl. between c500 and 400 B.C. Greek sculptor, a native of Eleutherae in Boeotia; a pupil of Ageladas of Argos. Polycletus and Phidias were his fellow pupils. Like the sculptors of the Doric or Argive school, his main interest was centered in the athlete. He considered the subject, however, more from the standpoint of action than of proportion, and represents the attitudes of the active rather than the beauty of the passive athlete. In this he was considered supreme throughout antiquity. His most representative work was probably the Discobolus described by Quintilian and Lucian. Of this statue the most perfect replica is at Rome; another is in the Vatican, and another in the British Museum. His group of Athena and Marsyas is represented by the Marsyas of the Lateran. Myron's bronze cow on the Pnyx at Athens was one of the favorites of the Greek and Roman world.

Myrrha (mir'ə). In Greek mythology, the mother of Adonis. She was transformed into a myrrh tree by the gods, to protect her from her father; and Adonis was born from the trunk of the tree.

Myrsilus (mėr.sī'lus). See Candaules.

Myrtilus (mėr'ti.lus). In Greek legend, the charioteer of Oenomaus, king of Elis, thrown by Pelops into the Aegean Sea (whence the name Myrtoan for that part of the Aegean). While drowning he cursed the home of Pelops, a curse which brought many woes upon the descendants of his enemy. He was placed among the constellations as Auriga (the Charioteer).

Myrtle Beach. Town in E South Carolina, in Horry County, on the Atlantic coast ab. 90 mi. NE of Charleston: seaside resort. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population more than doubled. 1,597 (1940), 3,345 (1950).

Myrtoan Sea (mėr.tō'ən). [Latin, Mare Myrtoum (mėr.tō'um).] In ancient geography, that part of the Aegean Sea S of Argolis, Attica, and Euboea.

Mys (mis). Russian word for "cape" or "promontory": for geographical entries of this kind, see the distinguishing element of the name.

Mysia (mish'i.ə). In ancient geography, a district in NW Asia Minor. It was bounded by the Propontis on the N, Bithynia on the NE, Phrygia on the E, Lydia on the S, the Aegean Sea on the W, and the Hellespont on the NW. The region is traversed by mountain ranges. There were many Greek cities on the coasts. It belonged successively to Lydia, Persia, Macedon, Syria, Pergamum, and Rome. The Mysians were probably allied to the Lydians. They assisted the Khita (Hittites) against Rameses II.

Myslbeck (mis'l.bek), Josef Vaclav. b. at Prague, June 20, 1848; d. there, June 2, 1922. Czech sculptor. He is known chiefly for his realistic rendering of subjects from Czech folklore and history.

Mysliveček or Mysliweczek (mis'li.ve.chek), Josef. [Called in Italy: Il (Divino) Boëmo and Venatorini.] b. at Prague, March 9, 1737; d. at Rome, Feb. 4, 1781. Bohemian (Czech) composer, notably of the operas Il Bellerofonte (1764) and Olimpiade (1778). He was the composer also of some 28 other operas and four oratorios as well as symphonies, sonatas, concertos, and chamber music.

Mysłowice (mis.lô.vē'tse). [German, Myslowitz (mis'lō-vits).] Industrial town in SW Poland, in the województwo (province) of Katowice, formerly in SE Germany, situated ab. 6 mi. E of Katowice: coal mines, railroad repair shops, zinc rolling mills, and metal industries. Prior to World War I, it was a German border town, immediately on the frontier of Russian Poland and Austrian Galicia; it passed to Poland after the plebiscite of 1920. A concentration camp was established here by the Germans during World War II. 23,786 (1946).

Mysol (mē'sôl) or Mysool (-sō.ôl). See Misol.

Mysore (mī.sōr'). [Also, Maisur.] State of the Union of India, bordered on the NE, E, S, and W by Madras, on the SW by Coorg, and on the N by Bombay. It is situated entirely in the Deccan plateau, and has considerable tracts of hill country, reaching a peak elevation of over 6,300 ft. Mineral wealth is great, and gold, iron ore, manganese, and chromium are mined. The chief crops are millet, fruits, nuts, tea, coffee, and rice. There is some livestock raising and lumbering. Mysore became an important state in the 17th century; under Hyder Ali and Tipu Sahib it was a formidable opponent of the British in the last part of the 18th century. Ceded in part to the British in 1792, and 1799, it was taken under British management in 1831. It is governed by a maharajah, a council, and a legislative assembly. Capitals, Mysore and Bangalore; area, 29,489 sq. mi.; pop. 9,074,972 (1951).

Mysore. [Also, sometimes, Maisur.] City in S Union of India, a capital (with Bangalore) of the state of Mysore, ab. 250 mi. SW of Madras. It has textile mills, and a blast furnace producing pig iron. The city is famous for its manufacture of sandalwood oil, silk, and carvings from ivory and sandalwood. It is the seat of a university, and the residence of the maharajah. Elevation, ab. 2,500 ft.; pop. 244,323 (1951).

Mystère de la charité de Jeanne d'Arc (mēs.ter dẹ là shä.rē.tä dẹ zhän därk), La. Long dramatic poem (1910) by Charles Péguy, on the life and passion of the French national heroine.

Mysteries of Udolpho (ū.dol'fō), The. Gothic romance by Ann Radcliffe, published in 1794.

Mysterious Stranger, The. Story by Samuel Langhorne Clemens (Mark Twain), written in 1898 and published posthumously in 1916.

Mystery of Edwin Drood (ed'win drōd'), The. Unfinished novel by Charles Dickens, the first number of which was issued in April, 1870. It was to have been completed in 12 monthly parts, but only about six were written when he died. Many books have since been written in an effort to solve its mystery. An edition valuable to students of the subject was edited (1941) by Vincent Starrett.

Mystery of Marie Roget (mą.rē' rō.zhā'), The. Detective story by Edgar Allan Poe, published in 1842–43 and included in his Tales (1845). It is a sequel to The Murders in the Rue Morgue. The story was suggested by the murder of Mary Cecilia Rogers at New York.

Mystic (mis'tik). River in SE Connecticut, in New London County, flowing S to an estuary on Long Island Sound. Length, ab. 5 mi.; including estuary, ab. 10 mi.

Mystic. River in E Massachusetts, flowing generally SE into Boston Harbor at Boston. The lower course is a navigable estuary which includes a part of the port area of Boston. Length, ab. 7 mi.

Mystic Lamb. See Adoration of the Lamb.

My Study Windows. Critical essays by James Russell Lowell, published in 1874.

My Sword for Lafayette (lă.fą.et'). Historical novel by Sir Max Pemberton, published in 1906.

Mythen (mē'tẹn). Two peaks in the canton of Schwyz, Switzerland, ab. 20 mi. E of Lucerne. Elevation of the Great Mythe, ab. 6,243 ft.; of the Little Mythe, ab. 5,988 ft.

Mytilene (mit.i.lē'nē) or Mytilini (mē.tē.lē'nē). See also Lesbos.

Mytilene. [Also: Mitylene, Mytilini; former name, Kastro.] Town in E Greece, the capital of the nomos (department) of Lesbos, situated on the E coast of the island of Lesbos: trade in fruit, olives, and olive oil. In ancient times it was the chief city of Lesbos and an important maritime power of the Aeolian Greeks. It revolted from Athens in 428 B.C., and was subjected in 427. Pop. 28,679 (1940).

Mytishchi (mi.tēsh.chē'). [Also, Mitishchi.] Suburban city in the U.S.S.R., in the Moscow oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, ab. 12 mi. NE of downtown Moscow: manufactures of railway cars, machine tools, and textiles. 60,111 (1939).

Myus (mī'us). In ancient geography, an Ionian city in Caria, SW Asia Minor, situated on the Maeander River ab. 11 mi. NE of Miletus.

Mzab (ẹm.zäb'). Region in C Ghardaïa territory, Algeria, noted for its seven towns, each surrounded by an oasis, inhabited by the Mozabites, a puritanical sect driven from N Algeria by the Fatimites in the 10th century. At first the Mozabites settled in the oasis region of Ouargla, but, seeking a more remote and inaccessible region, they migrated in the 11th century to the high desert plateau of the Mzab, where they established five towns, and developed oases based principally on irrigation from deep wells, a laborious process. In the 17th century two new oases were established (Berryan and Guerrara). Mzab came under French protection in 1853, and was annexed to Algeria in 1882. The chief oasis is Ghardaïa. Total pop. of the seven towns, 30,000 (1946).

N

Naab (näp). See Nab.

NAACP. Abbreviation of National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Naaldwijk (nält'wīk). Commune and town in W Netherlands, in the province of South Holland, situated near the mouth of the Maas (Meuse) River, ab. 9 mi SW of The Hague: a center of market gardening. Pop. of commune, 13,411 (1939).

Naaman (nā'ạ.mạn). In the Old Testament, a Syrian captain who was miraculously cured of leprosy upon bathing in the Jordan at the command of the prophet Elisha. 2 Kings, v.

Naarden-Bussum (när'dẹn.bus'um). See Bussum.

Naas (nās). [Irish, Nás na Ríogh.] Urban district in E Irish Republic, in County Kildare, situated on a branch of the Grand Canal, ab. 20 mi. SW of Dublin. It was formerly the residence of the kings of Leinster. 3,732 (1951).

Naassenes (nā'ạ.sēnz). See Ophites.

Nab (näp). [Also, Naab.] River in S Germany, in Bavaria, which joins the Danube ab. 4 mi. W of Regensburg. Length, ab. 102 mi.

Nabal (nā'bạl). In the Old Testament, a wealthy sheep owner and opponent of David. His wife Abigail soothed David's anger by sending presents when Nabal refused David's demand for tribute. After Nabal's death Abigail became David's wife. 1 Sam. xxv. 2–42.

Nabataeans or Nabateans (nab.ạ.tē'ạnz). Arab people whose power once extended N to Damascus and Coele-Syria. The capital of their kingdom was Petra, situated on the trade route from S Arabia to Syria. This in part accounts for the spectacular rise of the kingdom, and its flourishing civilization in the first two centuries B.C. and the first of our era. The Nabataeans became wealthy from the duties which they imposed on goods sent through their country, and they guarded the trade routes with frontier posts, watchtowers, and fortresses. In 105 A.D. Trajan finally put an end to Nabataean autonomy, and their kingdom became a Roman province called Arabia Petraea. They have been identified by some scholars with the people mentioned in the Old Testament under the name of Nebaioth (Isa. lx.7). The Nabataeans were the descendants of the old population of Chaldea and Babylon; their national language was Aramaic.

Nabha (nä'bạ). [Also, Narba.] Former state in the Punjab, now incorporated into the Patiala and East Punjab States Union, Union of India, situated ab. 100 mi. SE of Lahore, Pakistan: rice, cotton, wheat, and sugar. Area, ab. 947 sq. mi.; pop. 340,444 (1941).

Nabha. Town in Patiala and East Punjab States Union, in the Union of India, former capital of the state of Nabha, ab. 37 mi. W of Ambala. Pop. ab. 13,000.

Nabi (nä.bē'). fl. 17th century. Turkish poet who brought a new style of gazel (lyric) writing, marked by a moralizing tendency, from Persia to Turkey.

Nabis (nā'bis). Killed 192 B.C. Tyrant of Sparta from 207 to 192 B.C. He was conquered by the Romans under Flamininus in 195 B.C.

Nablus (nä.blös'). [Also: Nabulus; ancient name, Shechem; Latin, Neapolis.] City in C Palestine, ab. 30 mi. N of Jerusalem. It is the marketing center of an agricultural district producing olives and wheat; considerable flocks of sheep and goats are grazed in the vicinity. In ancient times the capital of Samaria, the ethnic pattern of the region still includes a small number of Samaritans, but the bulk of the population is Arab. The original city was rebuilt by the Romans (who renamed it Neapolis, from which the present name is derived); it was the scene of several encounters in the Crusades. It remained in the hands of the Arab Legion when hostilities between the forces of Israel and the various states of the Arab League came to a halt in January, 1949, and was annexed by the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan in 1950. Pop. ab. 24,000 (1946).

Nabob (nā'bob), The. Play by Samuel Foote, produced in 1772.

Nabokov (nä.bô'kọf), Vladimir Vladimirovich. [Pseudonym (on work in Russian), V. Sirin.] b. at St. Petersburg, April 22, 1899—. Russian-American author and entomologist. An émigré after the Russian Revolution, he eventually settled in the U.S. His Russian writings are signed with the pen name V. Sirin. They include poems, stories, plays, and novels. Two of the latter have been published in English as Despair (1936) and (at New York) Laughter in the Dark (1938). The last-named book appeared in London in 1935 under the title Camera Obscura. His English works are published under his own name. They consist of autobiographical stories, a critical study of Gogol, and two novels, The Real Life of Sebastian Knight (1941) and Bend Sinister (1947). He has translated Alice in Wonderland into Russian (1923) and some Russian poems into English. He has also contributed numerous papers on Lepidoptera to entomological journals. He has been (1948 et seq.) professor of Russian literature at Cornell University.

Nabonassar (nab.ọ̄.nas'ạr). [Babylonian, Nabu-nasir.] d. c733 B.C. King of Babylonia, 747–c733 B.C.

Nabonassar, Era of. Era sometimes used in ancient chronology, reckoned from the accession (747 B.C.) of Nabonassar. It originated with the Babylonian chroniclers, but was later used to some extent also by the Greeks.

Nabonidus (nab.ọ̄.nī'dus). [Babylonian, Nabu-na'id.] d. c538 B.C. Last king of Babylonia (556–c538 B.C.); father of Belshazzar. He seems to have belonged to the priestly class, and was zealous in the repairing of sanctuaries, but neglected the gods Merodach (or Marduk) and Nabu (or Nebo), on account of which he estranged from himself the priesthood; this to some extent facilitated the easy conquest of the Babylonian Empire by Cyrus of Persia in 538. According to Eusebius, Nabonidus after the fall of Babylon fortified himself in Borsippa, and when this was taken by Cyrus, the conqueror generously gave him a region in Carmania as his residence. But from a cylinder (cuneiform record) of Cyrus it seems that Nabonidus was treacherously delivered into the hands of Gobryas, the general of Cyrus, and died in a mysterious manner. It appears, from inscriptions of his which have been recovered, that he had a strong historical interest, and several historical statements of great importance for the chronology of the Babylonian Empire are recorded by him.

Nabopolassar (nab''ọ̄.pọ̄.las'ạr). [Babylonian, Nabu-bal-uçar.] fl. c625–604 B.C. Founder of the new Babylonian Empire. He ruled, it seems, first over Babylonia as viceroy of Assyria. He then entered into an alliance with the Median king Cyaxares, who gave his daughter in marriage to Nabopolassar's son Nebuchadnezzar, and by their united efforts the destruction of the Assyrian Empire was brought about in 606 B.C.

Naboth (nā'both). In the Old Testament, an inhabitant of Jezreel who was put to death by stoning when he refused to part with his vineyard to King Ahab, who coveted it. The family of Ahab was thereupon placed under a curse by Elijah and his dynasty fell from power, from which event the tale of "Naboth's Vineyard" is often evoked in connection with a piece of property which a superior desires and takes away from one not in a position to prevent the wrong. 1 Kings, xxi.

Nabu (nä.bö'). See Nebo.

Nabua (nä'bwä). Town in the Philippine Islands, in Camarines Sur province, SE Luzon. 4,595 (1948).

Nabucco (nạ.bok.kō). [Full title, Nabucodonosor.] Opera in three acts, by Verdi, with a libretto by Solera, first performed at La Scala, Milan, on March 9, 1842.

Nabuco (nạ.bö'kö), Joaquim. [Full name, Joaquim Aurélio Barreto Nabuco de Araújo.] b. at Recife, Brazil, Aug. 19, 1849; d. at Washington, D.C., Jan. 7, 1910. Brazilian diplomat, historian, lecturer, journalist, and political writer, one of the leading advocates of the abolition of slavery in Brazil. He was ambassador of his country to England and the U.S., where he gave lectures at several universities and colleges. His most noted works are a biography of his father, entitled Um estadista do Império: Nabuco de Araújo (3 vols., 1897–99), and his autobiography, Minha formação (1900).

Nabulus (nä.bō.lōs'). See Nablus.

Naçera (nä.thā'rä), Pedro de Castañeda de. See Castañeda de Naçera, Pedro de.

Nachbaur (näch'bour), Franz. b. near Friedrichshafen, Germany, March 25, 1835; d. at Munich, March 21, 1902. German Wagnerian tenor (1866–90) with the Munich opera. He originated the parts of Walther in Die Meistersinger (1868) and Froh in Das Rheingold (1869).

Nachen (nä'kẹn). Ship of 200 tons burden, commanded by Edwarde Brawnde, which sailed from Dartmouth, England, on March 8, 1615, to make "further tryall" of the New England coast. Brawnde also went to Cape Cod to search for pearls.

Nachiketas (nä.chi.kā'tạs). [Also, Nachiketa (-tạ).] In Hindu mythology, in the Taittiriya Brahmana and the Katha Upanishad, the son of a sage, who, desirous of attaining blessedness, performed great sacrifices. The son told him that he had not given all, for he, the son, was left, and said, "To whom shall I be given?" When he repeated the question the father angrily replied, "To death," and so the son went to the abode of Yama, lord of the dead, who was constrained to offer him three boons. Nachiketas prayed to see his father again and be reconciled. This boon granted, he sought a knowledge of the sacrificial fire that ensures immortality, and then asked Yama to solve the doubt in regard to the existence of a man that is departed, whereupon Yama instructed him as to the duties, nature, and destiny of the soul.

Nachitoch (nak.i.tosh' or nach.i.toch'). [Also, Nachitoches (nach.i.toch'ẹz).] Tribe of North American Indians belonging to the old Caddo Indian Confederacy and speaking a language of the Caddoan linguistic stock. Their affiliations in the confederacy were religious rather than tribal or political.

Nachmani (näch.mä'nē). See Abaye.

Náchod (nä'hôt). Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Hradec Králové, in NE Bohemia, situated near the Polish (Silesian) border, ab. 78 mi. NE of Prague. There are textile and machinery industries, a castle, and a museum. It was here, on June 27, 1866, that the Prussians under von Steinmetz defeated the Austrians in one of the battles of the Austro-Prussian War. 13,953 (1947).

Nachtigal (näch'tē.gäl), Gustav. b. at Eichstedt, Germany, Feb. 23, 1834; d. off Cape Palmas, Liberia, April 20, 1885. German explorer in Africa. Seeking a warm climate because of a disease of the lungs, he visited Algeria and Tunisia in 1863, where he became physician to the bey. In 1868 he was entrusted with the delivery of presents from the Prussian king to the sultan of Bornu. Successively he explored Fezzan and the Tibesti range (1870), Kuka, Kanem, Borkou, and again Kuka (1872), Baguirmi and Wadai (1873), and Darfur (1874), and in 1875 returned through Egypt to Germany. Sahara und Sudan appeared in 1879–81. Until 1882 he was president of the Gesellschaft für Erdkunde and of the Afrikanische Gesellschaft; then he went as consul to Tunis, and in 1884 as German imperial commissioner to West Africa, where he annexed Togoland, Angra Pequena, and Kamerun as German colonies, which they remained until World War I. He died on board ship, and was buried at Cape Palmas, Liberia.

Nacka (näk'kä). Town in E Sweden: an eastern suburb of Stockholm. 14,483 (1949).

Nacogdoches (nak.ọ.dō'chẹz). City in E Texas, county seat of Nacogdoches County: lumber, cotton-processing, clothing, and metalworking industries. It is the seat of a state teachers college. The settlement was established (1716) as the Mission Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe. 12,327 (1950).

Nacoleia (nak.ọ.lē'ạ). [Also, Nacolia.] In ancient geography, a place in N Phrygia, Asia Minor. Here the emperor Valens defeated (366 A.D.) Procopius.

Nacozari (nä.kō.sä'rē). [Also: Nacosari, Nacozari de García (dā gär.sē'ä).] Town in NW Mexico, in Sonora, linked by rail with Douglas, Ariz.: copper mining. 4,502 (1940).

Nadaaku (nä.dä'ạ.kō). [Also, Anadarko.] Tribe of North American Indians belonging to the old Caddo Indian Confederacy and speaking a language of the Caddoan linguistic stock. Their affiliations in the confederacy were religious rather than tribal or political.

Nadab (nā'dab). In the Old Testament, king of Israel for two years in the latter part of the 10th century B.C.; son of Jeroboam I. He was assassinated by Baasha. 1 Kings, xiv-xv.

Nadab. In the Old Testament, the eldest son of Aaron and brother of Abihu, with whom he was slain for using "strange" or common fire in making an offering to God. Lev. x.

Nadai (nä'dī), A. L. b. at Budapest, Hungary, April 3, 1883—. American mechanical engineer, known for his studies of plasticity, advanced mechanics, and the strength of materials. He was graduated from the Federal Swiss Polytechnic Institute at Zurich (M.E., 1906) and the Technical University of Berlin (Dr. Engr., 1911), served in the Austrian army during World War I, served (1926–29) as associate professor of mechanics at the University of Göttingen, and joined (1929) the staff of the Westinghouse Research Laboratories at Pittsburgh.

Nadaillac (nä.dä.yàk), Jean François Albert du Pouget, Marquis de. b. at Paris, July 16, 1818; d. at the Château de Rougemont, Loir-et-Cher, France, Oct. 2, 1904. French archaeologist. He was prefect of the department of Basses-Pyrénées (1871–76) and of Indre-et-Loire (1876–77). He published L'Ancienneté de l'homme (1868), Le Premier Homme et les temps préhistoriques (1880), L'Amérique préhistorique (1882), Nouvelles découvertes préhistoriques aux États-Unis (1883), De la période glaciaire (1884), Les Anciennes Populations de la Colombie (1885), Découvertes dans la grotte de Spy (1886), Mœurs et monuments des peuples préhistoriques (1888), and Unité de l'espèce humaine (1899).

Nadal (nạ.dôl'), Ehrman Syme. b. in Greenbrier County, W.Va., Feb. 13, 1843; d. at Princeton, N.J., July 26, 1922. American author. He was graduated (1864) from Yale, and was a schoolteacher until 1867, when he entered the government service. He served (1870–71, 1877–83) as a secretary with the U.S. legation at London, and from 1871 to 1877 contributed to the Nation and the New York Evening Post; lecturer (1892–93) in English composition at Columbia. Author of Impressions of London Social Life (1875), Essays at Home and Elsewhere (1882), Notes of a Professional Exile (1895), and A Virginian Village (1917).

Nadar (nä.dàr). [Pseudonym of Félix Tournachon.] b. at Paris, April 5, 1820; d. there, March 20, 1910. French writer, caricaturist, and balloonist. Founder of La Revue Comique, and author of two Salons (1853, 1857) similar to those of Baudelaire, of numerous comic tales, and of books on ballooning, such as A Terre et en l'air (1864) and Les Ballons de 1870 (1871), and others. As the head of a group of balloonists who ascended to make observations of the German forces during the siege of Paris in the Franco-Prussian War (1870–71) he was one of the first men to engage in flight for military purposes.

Nadaud (nä.dō), Gustave. b. Feb. 20, 1820; d. April 28, 1893. French songwriter, musician, and singer. His songs (ironical, equivocal, and political) have been collected and published a number of times. He also wrote operettas such as Le Docteur Vieux-temps and Porte et fenêtre, and Une idylle.

Nadbam (näb'däm). [Also, Namnam.] Sudanic-speaking people of W Africa, inhabiting the NE part of the Northern Territories of the Gold Coast. Their language is related to that of the Mossi. They practice hoe agriculture, and their principal food is millet. They are non-Mohammedan.

Nadelman (nä'dẹl.mạn), Elie. [Also, Nadelmann.] b. at Warsaw, Poland, Oct. 6, 1885; d. at New York, Dec. 28, 1946. American sculptor and decorator. He came permanently to the U.S. in 1917 and became (1927) a U.S. citizen. A classical rationalist, he has been called the "poet of the plastic curve" from the flowing smoothness of the contours in his sculptures, particularly his nude figures. Educated at Warsaw and Munich, he went (1905) to Paris, where for 12 years he was associated with Picasso, Leo and Gertrude Stein, and others. At the Allied Sculptures Exhibition (Ritz-Carlton, New York, 1917), his colored statuettes created much excitement. A founder of the Museum of Folk Arts (New York), he exhibited at

New York and Paris, and his works are in many important collections both in the U.S. and Europe. He did the sculptural relief on the façade of the Fuller Building, New York, and a figure for the Bank of Manhattan. Other works include La Mystérieuse, Marble Head, Head of a Woman, Woman Seated, Dancing Figure, Terra Cotta Bas-Relief, Polished White Marble Duck, Tango, Acrobat, Host, Orchestra Conductor, and the book Vers la beauté plastique. During his later career he conceived of sculpture as adaptable to mass production.

Naden (nā'dən), Constance Caroline Woodhill. b. at Edgbaston, Birmingham, England, Jan. 24, 1858; d. at London, Dec. 23, 1889. English poet, author of Songs and Sonnets of Springtime (1881) and A Modern Apostle and other Poems (1887). With Robert Lewins, she was the cofounder of a philosophical system known as hyloidealism, which sought to reconcile metaphysics and science.

Nadeshda (nə.desh'də). Opera in four acts, by A. Goring Thomas, with a libretto by Julian Sturgis, first performed at London on April 16, 1885.

Nadezhdinsk (nä.dyezh'dyinsk). Former name of Serov, U.S.S.R.

Nadia (nu'di.ə). [Also: Nadiya (nu'di.yə), Nuddea.] District of West Bengal, Union of India, ab. 70 mi. NE of Calcutta: rice and jute. The district was formerly larger, but its E part was incorporated into Pakistan in 1947. Area, ab. 1,500 sq. mi.; pop. 1,144,924 (1951).

Nadintu-Bel (nä.dēn'tö.bel'). fl. 6th century B.C. Leader of the Babylonian revolt against Darius I of Persia in 521 B.C. He called himself Nebuchadrezzar and claimed to be the son of Nabonidus, the last king of Babylonia.

Nadir Shah (nā'dir shä). [Also, Tahmasp Kuli Khan.] b. c1688; assassinated June 19 or 20, 1747. Shah of Persia (1736–47). Born a Turk, he was first a robber chieftain, and later Persian commander against the Afghans. He was crowned shah in 1736, captured Kandahar and Kabul in 1738, invaded India and sacked Delhi in 1739, and subjugated Bukhara. During his invasion of India, according to some sources, he captured the Koh-i-noor diamond. He was at war with the Turks from 1743 to 1746.

Nadir Shah, Mohammed. b. at Dehra Dun, India, April 9, 1883; d. Nov. 8, 1933. King of Afghanistan (1929–33). By a proclamation of Nov. 27, 1932, his policy included: (1) government in accordance with Islamic law, (2) prohibition of the sale and consumption of alcoholic liquors, (3) the promotion of friendly relations with foreign powers (he had entered in July, 1931, into a treaty with the U.S.S.R.), (4) the extension of educational facilities, including public schools and a military academy (with provision for the use of modern weapons), (5) the construction of highways and the installation of telegraph and telephone facilities, (6) attention to finance, including the collection of taxes in arrears, and (7) constitutional procedure inclusive of a council of state, a prime minister, and a cabinet. His reign was cut short, however, by his assassination on Nov. 8, 1933.

Nădlac (nud'läk). [Hungarian, Nagylak.] Town in NW Rumania, in the province of Crişana and Maramureş, situated on the Mureş River near the Hungarian border, ab. 28 mi. W of Arad, in a wheat-growing district. Pop. ab. 12,000.

Nadler (näd'lėr), Josef. b. at Neudörfl, in Bohemia, May 23, 1884—. German historian of literature, professor at the University of Königsberg. He has advanced the theory that the literary history of a nation is motivated by type of folk, country, and landscape, while individual achievements are to be regarded as manifestations and symptoms or symbols. Some scholars consider that this geopolitical approach to literary history has revealed a hitherto unsuspected order in the historical mass of literary phenomena, and that its search for missing links has brought to light and presented for reappraisal large numbers of forgotten or neglected literary documents. His Literaturgeschichte der deutschen Stamme und Landschaften in four volumes began to appear in 1912. A second edition, enriched by a vast number of illustrations (facsimiles, portraits, photographs) came out in 1923. One aspect of it was developed in greater detail in his book Die Berliner Romantik (1921). Other specialized works by Nadler include Der geistige Aufbau der deutschen Schweiz (1924) and Das Schrifttum der Sudetendeutschen (1924).

Nadolny (nä.dol'nē), Rudolf. b. at Gross Stürlack, Germany, July 12, 1873; d. at Düsseldorf, Germany, May 18, 1953. German diplomat. He became (1914) an official in the foreign office, was ambassador to Sweden (1920), to Turkey (1924), and to Russia (1933), retired in 1934, and was again active in German politics after 1945. Author of Verkehr nach Russland (1912), Germanisierung oder Slavisierung? (1928), and Völkerrecht und deutscher Friede (1949).

Naeff (näf), Top. b. 1878—. Dutch novelist. She has given bitter and ironic descriptions of bourgeois life in such books as Voor de Poort (1912), Letje (1926), and Een huis in de rij (A House in the Row, 1935). Sharp, discriminating essays on dramatic art are contained in Dramatische Studiën (3 vols., 1917–22). She has also written some plays. English translations of some of her work may be found in Harvest of the Lowlands, by Jan Greshoff.

Naegele (nā'gę.lę), Charles Frederick. b. at Knoxville, Tenn., May 8, 1857; d. 1944. American portrait painter. His Mother Love is in the National Gallery, Washington, D.C. He also painted portraits which are in the Georgia and Alabama state capitols, a portrait group in the New York Historical Society, and others.

Naegelen (nā.ge.len), Marcel Edmond. b. at Belfort, France, Jan. 17, 1892—. French political leader and educator, governor general (1948 et seq.) in Tunisia. A leader of the French Socialist Party, he was active in the Resistance movement during World War II. He was a deputy (1945 et seq.) and minister of national education (1945–48).

Naegeli (nā'gę.lē). See also Nägeli.

Naegeli, Otto. b. at Ermatingen, Thurgau, Switzerland, July 9, 1873; d. at Zurich, Switzerland, March 11, 1938. Swiss clinician. A pupil of H. Sahli, he became (1900) privatdocent of internal medicine; director of the medical polyclinic at Tübingen (1912–18) and at Zurich (1918–21); full professor (1921–37) at the University of Zurich, and director of its medical clinic. He made important studies in the diseases of the blood, pernicious anemia, leukemia, and traumatic neurosis. He described (1907) a law according to which the presence of eosinophils must incite caution in the diagnosis of typhoid fever, and described a method for the determination of acidity of the urine (1900) and a maneuver (called Naegeli's maneuver) for the relief of bleeding from the nose. Author of Blutkrankheiten und Blutdiagnostik (1907), Die hämatologische Technik (1910), Leukämie und Pseudoleukämie (1913), Allgemeine Konstitutionslehre (1927), and Differentialdiagnose in der inneren Medizin (1937).

Næstved (nest'veth). Town in Denmark, on the S coast of the island of Zealand, in the amt (county) of Præstø, ab. 45 mi. SW of Copenhagen. It has a harbor, and ceramic, paper, and lumber industries. 15,104 (1945).

Naevius (nē'vi.us), Cnaeus (or Gnaeus). b. c270 B.C.; d. at Utica, in Africa, c200 B.C. Roman dramatic and epic poet. He wrote comedies, tragedies, and an epic on the first Punic War. (Fragments have been edited by Klussmann, Vahlen, and Ribbeck.)

Nafa (nä.fä). See Naha.

Nafara (nä.fä'rä). [Also: Nafana (nä.fä'nä), Nafarha (nä.fä'rä).] Subgroup of the Senufo, a Sudanic-speaking people of W Africa. They inhabit the N part of the Ivory Coast.

Näfels (nā'fęls). Town in C Switzerland, in the canton of Glarus, situated on the Linth River. Near it, on April 9, 1388, the forces of Glarus defeated a superior force of Austrians. The population is chiefly Roman Catholic, although the population of the canton of Glarus as a whole is predominantly Protestant. 3,140 (1941).

Nafplion (naf'plē.ôn'). See Nauplia.

Naga (nä'gə). Group of tribes inhabiting part of NW Burma and the hills of Assam in easternmost India, between the Brahmaputra and upper Chindwin rivers. Their language, called Naga, belongs to the Tibeto-Burman group of the Sino-Tibetan family of languages. They are Mongoloid in physical type and live by shifting cultivation and hunting. Until recently there was constant warfare among the Naga tribes, with some head hunting. They were estimated in 1931 to number ab. 350,000, of which more than three fourths were in Assam.

Naga (nä'gä). Town in C Philippine Islands, in Cebu province, near the E coast of Cebu island. 3,579 (1948).

Naga. [Former name, Nueva Caceres.] City in the Philippine Islands, the capital of Camarines Sur province, SE Luzon. Pop. (including surrounding farming communities), 56,238 (1948); of urban center, 8,136 (1948).

Naga Hills (nä'gə). Region in Assam, Union of India, and in NW Burma, formerly (under British rule) two districts, one in Assam, and one in Burma, ab. 450 mi. NE of Calcutta: tea, rubber, and valuable forest products. Area of Assam district, ab. 4,289 sq. mi.; pop. 189,641 (1941).

Nagano (nä.gä.nō). [Ancient name, Zenkoji.] City in C Honshu, Japan, ab. 100 mi. NW of Tokyo. It is a marketing and manufacturing center for the Japanese silk industry. It has been important among Japanese cities since the latter half of the 7th century A.D., when a prominent Buddhist monastery was established there, and the temple was built from which the city's ancient name derived. 101,426 (1950).

Nagano, Osami. b. at Kochi, Japan, in June, 1880; d. Jan. 5, 1947. Japanese admiral, remembered chiefly for planning and supervising the Japanese attack at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941. He was a supreme war councilor (1935), navy minister (1936), commander in chief of the Japanese combined and first fleets (1937), and a delegate to the London Naval Conference (from which he withdrew the Japanese delegation in protest against the proposed 5:5:3 ratio. He rejected President F. D. Roosevelt's proposal of 20 percent naval reduction. His reputation in Japan, gained through the Pearl Harbor attack, was quickly destroyed by later reverses in World War II at the hands of the U.S. forces, and eventually he was ousted (February, 1944). Indicted as a war criminal, he declared his own responsibility for the Pearl Harbor attack, and died during trial.

Nagaoka (nä.gä.ō.kä). City in NW Honshu, Japan, ab. 227 mi. NW of Tokyo. It is notable as one of the chief Japanese centers for the production and refining of oil; it also has machinery, textile, and chemical industries, and is a marketing and distribution center for the agricultural products of the vicinity. During the 8th century it was for a few years the capital of Japan. 66,818 (1950).

Nagara (nạ.kôn'). See places in Thailand beginning with Nakhon (which means "town").

Nagasaki (nä.gä.sä'kē). Seaport in SW Japan, situated on the W coast of the island of Kyushu. It is an important commercial city, and before World War II exported a variety of articles including coal, raw silk, rice, tea, camphor, and tobacco. Near it is the island of Desima (or De-shima), a seat (c1640–1859) of Dutch traders. Nagasaki was opened to foreign trade by all nations in 1859. A single great manufacturing combination of the Mitsubishi shipbuilding and dock yards, with its associated steel works, electrical equipment plant, engine works, and arms plant, has given the city its chief industry. This city was the target of the second atom bomb dropped (Aug. 9, 1945) in World War II, which caused a total of ab. 70,000 casualties. Pop. 252,630 (1940), 142,748 (est. 1945), 241,805 (1950).

Nagaur (nạ.gôr'). [Also: Nagore, Nagur.] Town in NW Union of India, in Rajasthan, ab. 75 mi. NE of the city of Jodhpur: a small trading center. 14,714 (1941).

Nagel (nā'gel), Charles. b. in Colorado County, Tex., Aug. 9, 1849; d. at St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 5, 1940. American lawyer and politician. He was a member of the Missouri legislature (1881–83), a member of the faculty of the St. Louis Law School (1885–1909), president of the St. Louis city council (1893–97), and U.S. secretary of commerce and labor (1909–13) under President W. H. Taft.

Nägeli or Naegeli (nā'gẹ.lē), Karl Wilhelm von. b. at Kilchberg, Switzerland, March 27, 1817; d. at Munich, Germany, May 10, 1891. Swiss botanist, professor at Munich from 1858. He is best known for his studies in the physiology and development of plants.

Naggleton (nag'l.tọn), Mr. and Mrs. Characters appearing (1864–65) in Punch, who are always quarreling over trifles.

Nagina (nu'gi.nạ). [Also, Nuginah.] Town in N Union of India, in Bijnaur district, Uttar Pradesh, ab. 94 mi. NE of Delhi: trading center. 26,077 (1941).

Naglee (nag'lē), Henry Morris. b. at Philadelphia, Jan. 15, 1815; d. at San Francisco, March 5, 1886. American general of Union forces in the Civil War. He took part in the Peninsular Campaign in 1862, and commanded the 7th army corps and the district of Virginia in 1863. He was mustered out of service in 1864. He afterward cultivated a vineyard at San José, Calif. The Naglee brandy was named for him.

Naglfar (nä'gl.fär). In Old Norse mythology, the ship which will bring the giants to the battle at Ragnarök (the end of the world), or the ship which will bring Loki and his following from Hel. Naglfar was made from the nail-parings of the dead.

Nagold (nä'golt). Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Württemberg-Hohenzollern, French Zone, formerly in the Black Forest Kreis (district), Württemberg, ab. 26 mi. SW of Stuttgart: lumber, textile, leather, and metal industries. Ruins of the Castle Hohennagold may still be seen on heights above the town. 5,264 (1946).

Nagor (nạ.kôn'). See places in Thailand beginning with Nakhon (which means "town").

Nagore (nạ.gōr'). See also Nagaur.

Nagore. [Also, Nagur.] Town in Tanjore district, Madras, SE Union of India, situated on the E coast ab. 50 mi. E of Tanjore: the eastern terminus of a branch of the South Indian Railroad. It adjoins the port of Negapatam, within the city limits of which it is included.

Nagorno-Karabakh (nä.gôr'no.kä.rä.bäch'). [English, Mountain-Karabakh.] Oblast (region) in the SW Azerbaijan Soviet Socialist Republic, in the U.S.S.R., in the Transcaucasus. The oblast was formed in 1923; its population is almost entirely Armenian. The great forest areas on the slopes of its mountains have made lumbering an important local industry. Cotton, grapes, fruit, tobacco, and corn are raised in the valleys, in which dairying and herding are also important. The region has long been known for its horses. Capital, Stepanakert; area, ab. 1,700 sq. mi.; pop. 180,063 (est. 1941).

Nagot (nä'gôt). See Yoruba.

Nagoya (nä.gō.yä). City in Japan, on the island of Honshu, the capital of Aichi prefecture, on Ise Bay ab. 165 mi. SW of Tokyo. The city is the center of the third ranking industrial area of Japan. It specializes in small industries, with textiles leading the list; machinery and tools rank next, followed by chemicals. It has long been famous for its pottery and cloisonné. Nagoya is a rail center, but is to some extent handicapped commercially by the fact that it does not have a good deep-water harbor. The city was devastated by World War II bombing raids which drove over half of its people to other localities. 1,328,084 (1940), 597,941 (1945), 1,030,635 (1950).

Nagpur (näg'pör). [Also, Nagpore (näg'pōr).] Division of the Central Provinces, India, ab. 450 mi. NE of Bombay: manganese, coal, and iron. Chief crops are cotton, linseed, millet, oranges, rice, and wheat. Area, ab. 23,521 sq. mi.; pop. 3,924,985 (1941).

Nagpur. [Also, Nagpore.] District of Madhya Pradesh, Union of India. Capital, Nagpur; area, ab. 3,836 sq. mi.; pop. 1,234,556 (1941).

Nagpur. [Also, Nagpore.] City in C Union of India, capital of Madhya Pradesh and of Nagpur district, ab. 450 mi. NE of Bombay. It is one of the most important rail centers in India, with lines to all major cities, and large railroad shops. There are many cotton spinning and weaving factories, ginning and pressing mills, and various other industries. The region is famous for its loose-skinned "Sangtara" oranges. 449,099 (1951).

Nag's Head Tavern. Old London tavern on the corner of Friday Street, not far from the Mermaid and the Mitre, where the consecration of the first Protestant bishop in 1559 was alleged by contemporary opponents of the Anglican Church to have taken place: hence derisively called "the Nag's Head Consecration." The ceremony really took place at the Church of Saint Mary-le-Bow.

Naguib (nä'gēb), Mohammed. b. 1901—. Egyptian army officer and political leader. He played a chief role in the coup d'état (July 23, 1952) by which Farouk I was deposed from the throne of Egypt. In September, 1952, he became premier and by November had received absolute powers. The constitution was abolished, judicial review of the new government's laws was suspended, and by early 1953 Naguib was able to decree a three-year period in which he and his military council would rule absolutely.

Nagur (nạ.gör′). See Nagaur, and also Nagore.

Nagy (nôdy′), Ferenc. b. at Bisse, Baranya, Hungary, Oct. 8, 1903—. Hungarian statesman. Until he was 28 years of age he worked on a farm and on a small country newspaper. In 1930 he was a cofounder of the Independent Smallholders Party, acting as secretary. In 1939 he was elected to the legislature and during World War II worked in the underground resistance movement against the Nazis. In 1945 he became president of the Smallholders, minister of reconstruction, and president of the national assembly. The following year he became premier of the Hungarian republic, but in 1947 when the Communists gained control of the government he fled to the U.S., where he publicized the methods of the Communists. He became (1951) president of the Central Eastern European Committee, made up of democratic exiles from Communist-controlled countries. Author of The Struggle Behind the Iron Curtain (1948).

Nagy Abony (nôdy′ ô′bōny′). See Abony.

Nagybánya (nôdy″bä′nyô). Hungarian name of Baia-Mare.

Nagybánya, Nicolaus Horthy von. See Horthy von Nagybánya, Nicolaus.

Nagybecskerek (nôdy″bech′ke.rek). Hungarian name of Zrenjanin.

Nagyenyed (nôdy″e′nyed). Hungarian name of Aiud.

Nagy-Győr (nôdy″dyėr′). See Győr.

Nagykanizsa (nôdy″kô′nē.zhô). [Also: Kanizsa; German, Kanischa.] City in SW Hungary, SW of Lake Balaton, near the Mura River, a tributary of the Drava River. It is an agricultural trade center (grain and cattle) and has factories producing knitwear, woodenware, brushes, malt, flour, pastry, and agricultural machinery. 28,084 (1948).

Nagykároly (nôdy″kä′rōy′). Hungarian name of Carei.

Nagykikinda (nôdy″kē′kēn.dô). Hungarian name o Velika Kikinda.

Nagykőrös (nôdy″kė′rėsh). City in C Hungary, ab. 4 mi. SE of Budapest: fruit canneries, flour mills, and distilleries. 29,403 (1948).

Nagylak (nôdy″lôk). Hungarian name of Nădlac.

Nagymihály (nôdy″mē′hī). Hungarian name of Michalovce.

Nagyszalonta (nôdy″sô′lōn.tô). Hungarian name of Salonta.

Nagyszeben (nôdy″se′ben). Hungarian name of Sibiu.

Nagyszentmiklós (nôdy″sent.mē′klōsh). Hungarian name of Sânnicolaul-Mare.

Nagyszombat (nôdy″sōm′bôt). Hungarian name of Trnava.

Nagyvárad (nôdy″vä′rôd). Hungarian name of Oradea Mare, Rumania.

Naha (nä.hä) or Nawa (nä.wä). [Also, Nafa.] City and major seaport in the Ryukyu Islands, in the S part of the island of Okinawa. It was an important manufacturing and commercial center under the Japanese, and was the site of Japanese naval and air bases during World War II. It was invaded by U.S. forces in April, 1945, and almost totally destroyed. Since August, 1945, it has been the site of a U.S. military headquarters and supply base. 65,765 (1945).

Nahane (nạ.hä′nē). [Also, Nahani.] Group of 13 tribes of North American Indians of British Columbia and the Yukon. The group falls into three divisions: Kaska, Tahltan, and Taku. The languages of all three divisions, called respectively Kaska, Tahltan, and Taku, are classified in the Northern group of the Athapascan family of North American Indian languages.

Nahant (nạ.hant′). Town in NE Massachusetts, in Essex County, on Massachusetts Bay ab. 8 mi. NE of downtown Boston: summer resort, part of the urbanized area of Boston. 2,679 (1950).

Nahas Pasha (nạ.has′ päsh′a), Mustapha el. b. at Cairo, Egypt, June 15, 1876—. Egyptian politician. He became a member of the Wafd, a nationalist political movement, and in 1918 was appointed its secretary-general. He was in exile (1921-23) as a result of his political activity, returned to Egypt, was elected to parliament, and served (1924) as minister of communications. In 1927 he became chairman of the Wafd and presiding officer in the chamber of deputies. After 1928 he served a number of times as prime minister and held other cabinet posts. He resigned (1952) as premier and as president of the Wafd.

Nahe (nä′ę). [Latin, Nava.] River in W Germany which joins the Rhine near Bingen. Length, ab. 80 mi.

Nahmani (näch.mä′nē). See Abaye.

Nahr (när). Arabic word for "river": see under the distinguishing element of the name.

Nahua (nä′wä). [Also, Nahuatleca (nä.wät.lā′kä).] Collective name for a number of Indian tribes and city-states which used dialects of the Nahuatl language and inhabited large areas of Mexico at the time of the Spanish conquest. Popularly the Nahua are equated with the Aztec, but actually the Aztec (who happened to be in political ascendancy at the time of the Spanish conquest) were only one of a number of Nahua peoples. Other Nahua groups included the Toltec, and the inhabitants of Texcoco and Tlacopán. All shared the same basic culture, of which the most notable elements were the construction of ceremonial centers, stone architecture, settled agricultural practices, elaborate manufactures in pottery, gold, and stone, and complex religions which were strongly oriented toward military exploits and the taking of captives for human sacrifice. Most of the Nahua shared a common legendary history and mythology, which depict them as being barbarian invaders from the north; this is supported by the fact that the Nahuatl language is a member of the Uto-Aztecan stock, which is also widely distributed in the W part of North America. At present a large part of the rural population of C Mexico is of Nahua descent, and has been estimated to number as a group perhaps two million people.

Nahuatl (nä.wät′l). [Also: Nahua, Nahuatlan (nä.wät′lạn).] Language of the Nahua Indians. It is one of several languages comprising the Uto-Aztecan language stock. Just as the Nahua tribes as a whole have been popularly equated with the Aztec group which happened to have political dominance at the time of the Spanish conquest, so also is the language sometimes called Aztec.

Nahuel Huapí (nä.wel′ wä.pē′). Lake in SW Argentina, near Chile, the source of the Limay River: resort and tourist center. The surrounding area has been made an Argentine national park (area, ab. 3,030 sq. mi.). Elevation, ab. 2,480 ft.; area, ab. 210 sq. mi.; greatest known depth, ab. 1,440 ft.

Nahum (nā′um, -hum). In the Old Testament, the seventh in order of the minor Hebrew prophets. The language of his brief prophecy is vivid and forcible. His subject is the downfall of Nineveh. He prophesied between c664 and c607 B.C.

Naiads (nā′adz, nī′-). In Greek and Roman mythology, female spirits presiding over springs, rivers, streams, and fountains. The Naiads were represented as beautiful nymphs with their heads crowned with flowers, light-hearted, musical, and beneficent. Their beneficence extends to the life-giving properties of water.

Naidu (nī′dō), Sarojini. b. at Hyderabad, India, 1879; d. 1949. Hindu poet and reformer, lecturer on social, religious, and educational topics, and first woman governor of an Indian province (United Provinces, 1947-49). President of the Indian National Congress in 1925, she was on numerous occasions a member of the Congress Working Committee. Her works in English include books of verse entitled The Golden Threshold (1905), The Bird of Time (1912), and The Broken Wing (1916).

Naikai (nī.kī). Seto. Japanese name of the Inland Sea.

Nailor (nā′lor). John. One of Robin Hood's band, sometimes identified with Little John.

Nain (nā′in). [Also, Nein.] In the New Testament, a town in Galilee, Palestine, ab. 59 mi. NE of Jerusalem. It was the scene of one of Christ's miracles, the raising of a widow's son from the dead (Luke, vii. 11).

Nain (nīn). Town and highway junction in C Iran. It produces rugs and earthenware. Pop. ab. 6,000.

Nain de Tillemont (nan de tēy′.môñ), Sébastien le. See Tillemont, Sébastien le Nain de.

Nairn (nārn). Royal burgh and seaport in N Scotland, the county seat of Nairnshire, situated on Moray Firth ab. 15 mi. NE of Inverness, ab. 569 mi. N of London by rail: a popular summer resort; fisheries. 4,861 (est. 1948).

Nairne (nārn), Carolina. [Title: Baroness Nairne; maiden name, Oliphant; sometimes called the "Flower of Strathearn."] b. at the house of Gask, Perthshire, Scotland, Aug. 16, 1766; d. there, Oct. 26, 1845. Scottish poet; daughter of Lawrence Oliphant, a leading Jacobite. In June, 1806, she married William Murray Nairne, who became 5th Lord Nairne. As "Mrs. Bogan of Bogan," she contributed lyrics to the Scottish Minstrel (1821–24). After her death her poems were published as Lays from Strathearn. Among her songs are The Land o' the Leal, The Laird of Cockpen, Wha'll be king but Charlie?, Bonnie Charlie's noo awa', Charlie is my Darling, and Caller Herrin'.

Nairnshire (nārn'shir) or Nairn (nārn). Maritime county in N Scotland, bounded on the N by Moray Firth, on the E by Moray, and on the S and W by Inverness-shire. Inland, the surface is generally hilly and wooded. Its chief industries are sheep and cattle raising, agriculture, and fishing. The lowlands in the vicinity of the Moray Firth were an important grain-growing district before the 18th century. Granite occurs abundantly and is extensively quarried. County seat, Nairn; area, 163 sq. mi.; pop. 8,719 (1951).

Nairobi (nī.rō'bi). City in E Africa, the capital and administrative center (since 1907) of Kenya colony and Kenya protectorate, situated in the highlands ab. 330 mi. NW of Mombasa. It is connected by rail with the coast and with Uganda. The town has some fine buildings; it has railway shops and is the seat of several schools. Elevation, ab. 5,500 ft.; pop. ab. 110,000.

Naishadhacarita (nī"shą.dä.chä'ri.tä). [Eng. trans., "The Adventures of the Nishadan."] Sanskrit epic, written in the 12th century A.D. by Shri Harsha, and dealing with Nala, king of Nishadha.

Naisi (nā'shē). See Naoise.

Naismith (nā'smith), James. b. at Almonte, Ontario, Canada, Nov. 6, 1861; d. Nov. 28, 1939. American athlete and teacher of physical education who is generally considered to have invented (1891) the game of basketball. Naismith did not have any idea when he devised the game that it would ever assume any great importance, but he lived to see it become one of the national games of the United States. He was director of physical education at McGill University (1887–90), Y.M.C.A. College (1890–95) at Springfield, Mass., the Y.M.C.A. (1895–98) at Denver, Colo., and the University of Kansas (1898 et seq.).

Naissus or Naïssus (nā.is'us). Latin name of Niš.

Naivasha (nī.vä'shą). See also Aiposha.

Naivasha, Lake. Lake in E Africa, in Kenya, in the Great Rift Valley. It is known for the wild birds and hippopotamuses which frequent it, and also for the fact that it appears to have no outlet. Length, ab. 12 mi.; width, ab. 9 mi.; area, ab. 60 sq. mi.; greatest depth, ab. 60 ft.; elevation, ab. 6,200 ft.

Najac (nà.zhàk). Village in S France, in the department of Aveyron, ab. 35 mi. NE of Montauban. It has a noted castle, now in ruins. 996 (1946).

Najaf (nä'jäf), An. See An Najaf.

Najd (näjd). See Nejd.

Nájera (nä'нā.rā). Town in N Spain, in Logroño province, on the Najerilla River (a tributary of the Ebro) ab. 18 mi. SW of Logroño. It was near this town, on April 3, 1367, that Edward the Black Prince (of England) and Pedro the Cruel (of Spain) defeated Henry of Trastamara (who was later to be Henry II of Castile) and Du Guesclin. Pop. ab. 3,000.

Nájera, Francisco Castillo. See Castillo Nájera, Francisco.

Nájera, Manuel Gutiérrez. See Gutiérrez Nájera, Manuel.

Najin (nä.jēn'). [Japanese, Rashin.] City in NE Korea, on the E coast: terminus of a railroad from C Manchuria. It is one of the Japanese-developed ports of N Korea, built to serve C Manchuria. There are large exports of lumber from Najin. It underwent bombing in World War II, and in the Korean War. At the end of World War II it was occupied by Russian forces. Pop. ab. 35,000.

Naka Iwo (nä.kä ē.wō). See Iwo Jima.

Nakansi (nä.kän'sē). [Also: Gorensi, Gorne, Nakanse, Nankana.] Sudanic-speaking people of W Africa, inhabiting the N part of the Northern Territories of the Gold Coast. Their language is related to that of the Mossi. Their population was last authoritatively estimated at ab. 20,000 (by M. Delafosse, Haut-Sénégal-Niger, 1912). They practice hoe agriculture, and their principal food is millet. They are non-Mohammedan.

Naked Warriors. Volume of poetry by Herbert Read, published in 1919.

Nakel (nä'kęl). German name of Nakło.

Na-khi (nä'kē'). Non-Chinese people located mainly in the region of Li-chiang, in Yunnan province, China. They are descendants of the Ch'iang of NE Tibet, later migrating south. They are regarded by some as identical with the Moso. Their ceremonial ritual is recorded in pictographic symbols. See The Ancient Na-khi Kingdom of Southwest China by Joseph Rock (2 vols., 1947).

Nakhichevan (nä"ċhē.che.vän'). [Also: Nakhitchevan; ancient name, Naxuana.] City in S U.S.S.R., capital of the Nakhichevan Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic, in the Azerbaijan Soviet Socialist Republic, near the border of Iran: a rail and road junction; food-processing industries. An ancient Armenian city, it has been taken by invading forces or tribes in many wars for more than 2,000 years. 11,700 (est. 1933).

Nakhichevan Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic. [Also, Nakhitchevan.] Autonomous republic of the U.S.S.R., in Azerbaijan Soviet Socialist Republic, in Transcaucasia. On its S border it touches Iran, across the Aras River. It produces cotton, tobacco, wheat, rice, and wine grapes, and has considerable flocks of sheep and some cattle. The population is composed primarily of Azerbaijani Turks, with a considerable minority of Armenians. Capital, Nakhichevan; area, ab. 2,280 sq. mi.; pop. 138,500 (1941).

Nakhon Ratchasima (nạ.kôn' rä.chä.sē'mä) (or Ratchsima) (räch.sē'mä). [Also: Nakhon Rajasima (rä.jä-), Khorat, Korat.] Province of Thailand (Siam), NE of the city of Bangkok. Rubber and rice are produced here. Chief town, Nakhon Ratchashima; area, 7,861 sq. mi.; pop. 599,165 (1937).

Nakhon Ratchasima (or Ratchsima). [Also: Nakhon Rajasima, Khorat, Korat.] Town in Thailand (Siam), the chief town of the province of Nakhon Ratchasima, ab. 125 mi. NE of Bangkok: a trading center; copper mines. Pop. ab. 12,000–25,000.

Nakhon Wat (or Vat) (nạ.kôn' wät, vät). See Angkor Wat.

Nakkar (nak'ạr) or Nekkar (nek'ạr). Usual name of the third-magnitude star β Boötis, in the head of the figure.

Naklérov (nä'klā.rôf). [German, Nollendorf.] Village in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Ústi, in N Bohemia, situated in the Krušné Hory between Teplice and Podmokly, ab. 50 mi. N of Prague. Here on Aug. 30, 1813, toward the end of the Napoleonic wars, the French under Vandamme were defeated by the Prussians under von Kleist. 54 (1947).

Nakło (nä'klô). [German, Nakel.] Town in N Poland, in the województwo (province) of Bydgoszcz, situated on the Noteć (Netze) River and the Bydgoszcz Canal, ab. 60 mi. NE of Poznań: sawmills, sugar refinery, and agricultural industries. It became part of Prussia in 1793, and of Poland in 1919. Pop. 9,649 (1946).

Nakskov (näk'skou). [Also, formerly, Naskov.] Town in Denmark, on the W coast of the island of Lolland, in the amt (county) of Maribo, situated on the Great Belt, ab. 80 mi. SW of Copenhagen. It has a harbor, shipyard, sugar refinery, and textile manufactures, and a considerable trade in dairy products. The Church of Saint Nicholas dates from the 15th century. 15,506 (1945).

Nakuru (nä.kö'rö). District and town in E Africa, in the highlands of S central Kenya, British East Africa, on the Kenya-Uganda Railway ab. 452 mi. NW of Mombasa. It is in the heart of a rich dairy farming area. Considerable quantities of wheat are grown in the surrounding district; maize, sisal, wheat, coffee, and pyrethrum are also important crops. It is the capital of the Rift Valley province. Total pop. (of district), 14,054 (1948); European pop. (of district), 829 (1948); elevation, ab. 6,070 ft.

ARCHBISHOP MITTY HIGH SCHOOL DISCARD
5000 MITTY AVENUE

